School Children Saved From Forest Fire

Despatch from Bay City, Michigan: Among the thrilling experiences of the week of the Fresno fire county fires was that of Miss Grace Barber, a school teacher, nineteen years old, whose school in Krakaw township was in session when the flames swept down upon the building. A terrified farmer gave the alarm just as the rear of the school house caught fire.

The young teacher marshalled her pupils in a double row, the largest at the head, and ordered them to remain in close order and not to break the line. She then directed the leaders to head for a ploughed field nearby, and the column started on a run. Miss Barber bringing up the rear to prevent straggling. Business embers fell thick, but the teacher persisted in keeping the children crowded close together, and every ember was extinguished the instant it fell upon any child's clothing.

The fire burned steadily for some time as the blaze in the tops of the trees ate its way down. During the night two bears made their appearance. A fox came skulking in, as did also a wild cat, rabbits, partridges and other game; but the animals kept well away from the children.

Miss Barber kept her charge in the field all Thursday night, and in the morning sent them home in groups, piloting the smaller ones herself.

BABY FLIES ON A WINDOW SCREEN.

Boston, Oct. 28.—Noel, the 2-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Chouinard, of 9 Libby court, Lynn, took his first aeroplane ride yesterday, descending three stories on a window screen and escaping without injury. While Mrs. Chouinard was hanging clothes in the yard, little Noel leaned against the screen in the window three stories above and watched his mother. The screen gave way and with Noel as a passenger started on its descent. Noel stuck to the screen through most of the trip, but an encounter with a clothes-line some ten feet from the ground jarred him from his position. He escaped with a few slight scratches.

TO SHUT OUT UNDESIRABLES.

Since January 1, 1908, the Immigration Department has deported 1,011 immigrants as undesirable citizens. During the same period 1,266 persons were refused entry from the United States. These returns show that close supervision is being exercised over Canadian immigration, at the present time to shut out such as are liable to become a charge on the public.

FALSE REPORT WHICH CAUSED DISTRESS IN YARMOUTH.

A report, which caused a great deal of distress and consternation but which fortunately turned out to be untrue, was in circulation in Yarmouth recently. The report in question was to the effect that the steamer Yarmouth had foundered and that 23 lives had been lost. Naturally enough the public concluded that the wrecked steamer was the D. A. R. boat Yarmouth, which is at present plying between St. John and Digby, and it is regrettable that certain persons in Yarmouth conceived it to be to their advantage to disseminate that impression. Inquiry, however, established the fact that the steamer in question had safely arrived at Digby Friday at the usual hour. The origin of the story lies in the fact that a steamer of the same name, engaged in carrying freight in the North Sea, is thought to have foundered with the loss of 23 lives.—Times.

MUST DRINK PLETTY OF GOOD PURE WATER.

"The people here do not drink enough water to keep healthy," exclaimed a well-known authority. "The numerous cases of kidney and bladder diseases and rheumatism are mainly due to the fact that the drinking of water, nature's greatest medicine, has been neglected.

"Stop loading your system with medicines and cure-alls, but get on the water wagon. If you are really sick, why, of course, take the proper medicine—plain, common vegetable treatment, which will not shatter the nerves or ruin the stomach.

"To cure rheumatism you must make the kidneys do their work; they are the filters of the blood. They must be made to strain out of the blood the waste matter and acids that cause rheumatism, and, most of all, you must keep these acids from forming in the stomach. This is the cause of stomach trouble and poor digestion.

Northern Acadia Contrasted With Southern Acadia

A Visitor to Our Province Gives Interesting Information About Ourselves and Our Resources.

Acadia Parish, in Southwest Louisiana a premier in rice cultivation in America, preserves in its name and in the characteristics of many of its inhabitants the memory of the refuge found in that quarter by the French Acadians exiled in 1755 from their ancient homes in this province by conquering, land-robbing English. Fifty-two hours on railroad trains will bring a Louisiana Acadian from Crowley, in the heart of what poetic justice should call the Land of Duso to Boston, and another twelve or fourteen hours on a steamer will land him at the southwesternmost port of the Land of Evangeline. To be up to time he will have to set his watch two or three hours ahead of the New Orleans hour, but a journey of 70 or 80 miles by train following generally the direction of the western coast of the Bay of Fundy will place him in the heart of a region full of suggestions of life two or three centuries older than that of the rice mills, irrigating canals and oil wells 2,500 miles to the southwest.

Among the 500,000 population he will discover, save along the "French Shore," comparatively few names or traits reminding him of his ancestors, who founded Port Royal three years before English colonies landed on Jamestown Island, Virginia. For of the 400,000 persons in Nova Scotia counted at the census, 162,000 were of English descent, 143,000 of Scotch, 56,000 of Irish, 33,000 of German and only 45,000 of French descent. He will be struck by the frequency of negroes of various shades, especially in Yarmouth and Halifax, tracing back to the English possessions of the southeastern coast of the United States, and also, it is said, to the operations of the "under-ground railway" of anti-slavery days.

He will be impressed with the faith in fresh paint manifested in the private homes generally, emphasized in the lack of it here and there between Yarmouth and Digby, by the substantial and distinctively English style of the stone warehouses and public buildings in the larger cities, and by the profusion, variety and almost riotous luxuriance at this season of garden and wild flowers, rivaling the "blossom time" in June. Many homes, even the least pretentious, are set behind well kept hedges of thorn, which lends itself admirably to decorative effects, and August finds buttercups and daisies, along with the golden rod, in the fields, and in the gardens red rambler roses, giant asters, sweet peas, nasturtiums, phlox, geraniums, verbenas, sweet alyssum, heliotrope and begonias. Dominant upon the uplands are several varieties of the conifers growing wild which in the States are highly prized as ornamental lawn trees.

The Louisiana Acadian will feel at home, though, amid the Southern cypress plantations of one of the largest college buildings in the province. Luscious raspberries and fresh shad served at the table might lead a dweller in the basin of the Chesapeake to imagine that in some way or other he has been projected into next May, along with setting his watch ahead of Baltimore time. When, too, he sees a yoke of oxen drawing a modern mow through a field of hay or slowly hauling a loaded buckboard to the wharf, he may well suspect that he is in Southern Maryland, save that the buckboard load is sun-dried codfish.

The visitor will be hospitably received on every hand in all of the ancient Acadia, which includes New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, and Prince Edward Island, now known as the maritime provinces of Canada. It is not for the grass-grown dale, acundiscovered by conventional tourists a hotel at St. John, N. B., could not accommodate two travelers suddenly arrived from the south. The manager of the hotel, who is also the proprietor of an attractive family boarding house, invited the two to that place, but finding that in his absence all the rooms in the boarding-house had been taken, sheltered them in a pleasant room in his own home. At Digby the overflow from one of the best hotels was sent to nearby "cottages," really private houses, so neat, so clean and so cozy that one felt inclined to remove his shoes before going upstairs, for fear of marring the carpet with a speck of dust. At Halifax one may take a car in front of his hotel, spend three-quarters of an hour in a ride giving him an opportunity to view almost every point of interest in the city and be brought back to the starting point for a nickel. Of course, this ride will not give him opportunity to inspect the great citadel overlooking the city and commanding a magnificent view of the harbor and its arms; it will not permit him to have the hour or two that he ought to spend in the Public Gardens, with their probably un-remembered collection of floral and ferns, nor will it carry him to Point Pleasant Park, a great stretch of natural forest lapped by the ocean and containing one of the Martello towers, like that at St. John, N. B., dating back to the days of the Napoleonic wars. But it will give him a chance to enjoy the accommodating courtesy of the trolley-line employees and make him wish that Boston could take some lessons in that particular.

At Bridgetown, 50 or 60 miles up from the point where the Annapolis Basin enters the Bay of Fundy, between bold headlands opposite Digby, he may see a newly launched two-masted schooner, apparently a fishing boat on a mud bank in the midst of diked meadows. The Bay of Fundy tide, that wonderful tide which rises and falls in some places from 40 to 60 feet, is out, and its effects are noticeable far inland. Six hours later every thing now stranded on the water beds of the western side of this province will be afloat, and the now naked piles of the docks and wharves will hardly be visible. Wolfville, Wolford and Turro, on inlets of the Minas Basin are among the chief points of advantage for observing the great tidal movement. If you want to bathe in comfort in a temperature of 65 degrees, wait till the tide is in and so to Evangeline beach, a short distance from the first-named place, or you might try Chester, on the South Shore, where the tides are comfortably normal, if you would sail.

The visitor will note a difference between his Acadia of Louisiana, and his ancestors' Acadia, Acadia, La., is a part of the 23,000 square miles, or about one-half of the total area of the state, formed during the centuries by the dropping of sediment brought down from the rest of the country by the Mississippi river on its way to the Gulf and gradually rising above the ordinary level of the river. The prairie land thus born has, during the past twenty years, been made to blossom as the rose by pumping water and distributing it by means of hundreds of miles of canals. The meadows or reclaimed marsh lands of Nova Scotia, embracing about 500,000 acres, were not created of material washed down from the uplands and hills, which nowhere rise to a height greater than 1,200 feet above the tide, but are of tidal origin, and would still be submerged daily were it not for the grass-grown dale, ac-

Flying Machine for Pastime

(Presbyterian Witness.)
Professor Simon Newcombe, of Washington, contributes to the problem of aerial navigation a sensible essay for which there is need. He shows that it is already demonstrated that men can ascend in balloons and that balloons can be guided in their course. There are limitations to the possibility of carrying weight in balloons as well as flyers. A flyer cannot be navigated in a fox. The liability to accident from wind and weather would be very great. The airship if made to carry freight economically would require vessels of immense tonnage. Freight would be extremely costly so that air carriage could not compete with water. The solid ground and the waters of the ocean are now the material on which we must base our travel; the airship and balloon must of necessity be based on thin air. How could either a balloon or an airship be managed in a storm? The ground affords a much better base than the air ever can. Resting on the ground we know where we are. In the air we are at the mercy of the winds. The glamor, the charm, that invests the idea of flying through the air is largely fanciful.

Professor Newcombe regards it as probable that the air ship will have the honor of reaching the North Pole, and this itself will be a most interesting achievement. He has no faith in balloons or airships as of use in war whether for defense or for attack. The vessel would be large and prove an easy mark for the rifle. One shot, well-aimed, would account for any balloon however well fortified. A German invasion of Great Britain by means of balloons or aeroplanes, he ridicules as altogether absurd and preposterous.

There is no doubt a passion, widely extended, for perfecting available machines for ascension and for flight. To rise above the clouds, to rush along over sea and land with the swiftness of a bird, will always be of interest. But not much serious work of any kind can be accomplished by aeroplanes or balloons.

The Path to Prosperity

Order and system are as essentially vital to the farmer in an isolated locality as to the great corporation in the thickly populated city.

System is the basis of any successful business. Without it, business can be likened to an army without commanders. The effort, the force and the power are all there; but instead of being concentrated they are dissipated, and the results that might otherwise have been accomplished, are lost.

"What is worth doing, is worth doing well." Work slovenly done is only half done. Here is a man whose mowing machine breaks down at a busy hour in the height of haying. A two-inch bolt is needed to repair the damage. He goes to the tool house. Here, old harrow teeth, iron hoops, nuts, carriage-bolts, washers, spikes, screws and a hundred other things, lie in bewildering confusion. Fully a half hour is spent before a bolt of the right size is found. Time lost at this season of the year means money lost.

Here is another man who is orderly and systematic. His cow-sheds are kept clean, his stables are free from all unsanitary conditions; his fences are kept in repair, his milk cans, churn and separator are sweet and wholesome.

By keeping his different tools and implements in separate racks or boxes, he is able to place his hand instantly on any one he desires. He had a record of every event of the slightest importance on the farm. He knows exactly when a certain calf was born, what she sold for, and when. He can tell to a cent what his stock feed cost for a year. These, with many other valuable notes, he has down in black and white. If his memory fails him, his record will not.

In a word, order and system mean better and larger crops; longer service from machinery and tools; healthy cattle and poultry, and more work accomplished in less time. These, in turn, have one significance.—Time saved and money saved.

Case of Hutchinson vs. Bent Settled

The case of Hutchinson vs. Bent, which has been before the courts for some time and which was appealed by Mr. O. S. Miller, one of the defendants, before the Supreme Court of Canada, has been settled, the court dismissing the appeal of Mr. Miller. This long drawn out case, in which much interest has been taken, was brought for the foreclosure of a mortgage on the property of the late Samuel Bent, which realized $700 more than enough to satisfy the mortgage. The $700 was paid into Court. Oliver S. Miller, one of the defendants, took a mortgage from Andrew Bent, the executor and residuary legatee under the will of Samuel Bent, and sold and bought in Andrew's interest in the property. Under this he claimed to be entitled to the $700, notwithstanding that the debts due by the Estate had not been paid. He made application to a Judge of the Supreme Court and obtained an order for the payment to him of the $700. From this order Mary Ann Bent, the widow of the deceased, appealed to the full bench of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, which set aside the order obtained by Mr. Miller and ordered him to repay the $700. From this order Mr. Miller appealed to the Supreme Court of Canada. This Court, a few days since, dismissed Mr. Miller's appeal and he has now to repay the $700, and the costs of all the Courts. Fierce Storm in West Stalls Traffic

One of the worst snow storms that has ever occurred in the West ranged last week and completely demolished the services of both the Canadian Pacific Railway and Canadian Northern Railway trains. The storm started Thursday night and continued with unabated vigor for forty-eight hours. Ten inches of snow fell, and, accompanied by a terrific gale, the snow was blown into the railway cuts, completely filling them up and in many stretches the snow was over ten feet deep.

The Canadian Pacific Railroad rushed snowploughs to the scene, but very little progress could be made until the snow ceased to fall. As soon as a clearance was made the blizzard filled it up again, and the work went for nothing.

The Atlantic Express from Vancouver and Western Points was stalled, also the Imperial Limited from Vancouver. The westbound train was held up also, and none of them could proceed. In the meantime the railway company took care of the passengers and saw that they were well looked after until able to proceed.

NATIONAL WOMEN'S COUNCIL CRITICIZE NEWSPAPER FEATURES.

Ottawa, Oct. 29.—At the National Council of Women today Mrs. Waycott, Montreal, convener of the objectionable printed matter committee, prefaced her remarks by stating that more care should be taken in the selection of books for the homes and insinuating pictures should be excluded, was the substance of her report.

The abolition of Saturday supplements, which educated children in deceit, mischief and disrespect to the aged and poor, was recommended. Misleading advertisements and personal letters addressed to girls and others often contain items of information that are far from being of a moral character and should not be allowed to be circulated and will receive the attention of the council. Library books often require the careful supervision of parents and guardians.

MRS. JENKINS'S HOUSECLEANING

BY LILLIAN MARGARET HOUTS.
(From the Boston Youth's Companion.)

"Of all things!" ejaculated Mrs. Jenkins, as she rocked vehemently back and forth in her splint-bottomed sewing-chair, pulling her needle and thread with little jerks through the carpet rags she was joining.

"Here 'tis the ninth of May, and this house not cleaned yet. There's not one single thing done, and I haven't failed before in twenty odd years to have it all spick and span by the first of the month."

Her pretty daughter, Mary Ellen, bustled back and forth between the kitchen and the pantry, busily engaged in getting supper. The loose sleeves of her calico dress were rolled high, showing the dimpled whiteness of her arms. Her dark apron was plentifully besprinkled with flour, and there was a generous dab on the tip of her nose.

"Oh, never mind, ma," she said cheerily, as she knelt before the open door to inspect the biscuits. "We're glad enough to have you up and about again; so nobody minds whether the house is cleaned or not."

"My mother brought us up to clean house all right," went on Mrs. Jenkins. "We always took down the stoves and packed away the flannels the first of May, rain or shine, and then we knew what we were about."

"And now," she went on, "your pa's took a sudden notion that he must go down East visitin', and nothing will do but I must go with him, cleaning or no cleaning. And here's your sister Elvira coming home from her school in two weeks. A nice welcome it'll be for her, with the house all full of dust and dirt!"

"It'll do you a lot of good, ma, to get away. You know the doctor said you needed a change more than anything else. You'll get well lots faster than if you stayed at home and worked. And the house isn't so very dirty, either. I'm sure I've worked hard enough to keep it clean," she added, under her breath.

"Much them doctors know!" retorted her mother. "But you may be sure of one thing, Mary Ellen, and that is that I'd never let your pa go off on a trip without me, absent-minded as he is. He'd be sure to get run over by the street-cars, or get lost, or something. If nothing else he'd wear his hat hind side before, or forget to put on a clean collar every day."

"Supper ready, Mary Ellen?" called out the cheerful voice of Mr. Jenkins, as he drove into the yard. "Well, ma, it's fixed, and we'll start bright and early in the morning. I've bought our tickets, and all you've got to do is to finish packing your trunk, and Mary Ellen can fix up a few doughnuts and some fried chicken for our lunch."

"Of all foolish things, John, this here's the foolishest, pickin' up and goin' down East in May, and Old Speckle about to come off of a settin' of fifteen of the best Plymouth Rock hens I could get! I just know Mary Ellen'll forget to feed 'em. And not one inch of this house cleaned!" And Mrs. Jenkins's voice broke as if she were on the verge of tears.

Mrs. Jenkins had suffered from a tedious attack of gripe during the winter, and not even the mild days of early spring had restored her to her former strength and ambition. Her family hardly recognized in the weak, querulous semi-invalid the active bustling housekeeper they knew so well.

This journey of her husband, which seemed to her so useless and foolish, had really been planned at the suggestion of the family physician, who thought that a change of scene and freedom from the cares of home might restore the vigor which his remedies were powerless to awaken. So Mr. Jenkins had entrusted the care of the spring work to his faithful assistant, Jonas, and had drawn upon the snug sum laid away in the village bank for a "rainy day."

"I'll make up my blue lawn this week," Mary Ellen soliloquized, as she worked about the kitchen, after her father and mother had gone. "It's all out and fitted, and it isn't really much of a job. And then next week—I believe—" She dropped into a chair, laughing to herself.

"Yes, I'll do it. I'll clean house! Ma would faint, I know, if she thought I was trying to do it alone, for she doesn't trust me any more than a baby, if I am eighteen years old. But I know I can do it just as well as she can. And then it'll be all fresh when she comes home, and she needn't work herself sick again. I'll do it! I'll do it!" And Mary Ellen, her cheeks rosier than ever with excitement, went at her work with renewed vigor.

The days flew swiftly by. To the vigorous young arms the household duties seemed light, and the care of the barnyard and poultry—including Old Speckle, who came off punctually with fourteen little black balls of down—did not weigh heavily on her mind. Every afternoon she hitched up the patient family horse, Old Gray, and jogged down the road to visit some of her girl friends, taking her sewing with her; and in the evening, after the chores had been done and the milk put away, she went by the pasture road to the new farmhouse, where lived the Meek's family, to spend the night.

Saturday afternoon she and Marcia Meeks completed the blue lawn, to the sewing on of the last button and the pulling out of the last bastings thread. Mary Ellen felt justly proud of her handiwork, as she slipped it on to see if everything was all right, and smiled back at the rosy reflection of herself which she saw in the old mirror in her little room.

"Now that job's done," she said to Marcia, as they went down the stairs each with an arm round the other's waist; "and Monday morning I'm going to begin cleaning house. Mother was so worried because it wasn't done before she went away, and Elvira will be home week after next, and I'd like to surprise them both."

Almost before daylight Mary Ellen began her task. Woodwork and windows were washed, the rag carpet which covered the sitting-room floor and the "boughten" one in the parlor were taken up and beaten. In fact every inch of the little farmhouse from cellar to garret was thoroughly cleaned.

On Thursday, as she was hanging fresh curtains in the chambers up stairs, Jonas drove into the yard and called loudly: "Mary Ellen! Mary Ellen! Here's two letters for you!"

One was from mother. They were having a good time among relatives and old friends, but she was homesick and could hardly wait until the time set to come back, for she did want to get the housecleaning done before summer set in. Mary Ellen smiled as she read.

"Don't let Jonas forget to water the calves, and be sure to feed Old Speckle's chickens every three hours," was the closing sentence. The other letter was from her cousin Roxie, over at Pine Grove. It ran thus: "Dear Mary Ellen: Can't you come over and stay a few days with us? We—that is, the young folks—are going to a party over at Alum Cliffs Saturday, and then there'll be a supper in our barn after we get back. Make Jonas keep house while you're gone, but don't say no. I haven't time for another word; I have forty things to do. But don't fail to come. Your loving cousin, ROXY."

A party and a supper! The temptation was too much. But Marcia would come over and see that everything was all right, and there was no knowing when she would get a chance to run away again for a "little trip. And she had been shut in so closely all winter, too. The blue lawn would be just the thing to wear. So the next day she had Jonas drive her over to town to take the train for Pine Grove, twelve miles away.

"Don't forget the chickens, Jonas," she cried, as the train was about to pull out. "Ma'd never forgive us if anything happened to them. I'll be home Tuesday or Wednesday at the latest."

There was great excitement in the little village of Brownville, where Elvira Jenkins taught school. Some one had set fire to the schoolhouse. An early passer-by had observed smoke pouring from the windows one morning, and before he could bring help, the neat little white building was in flames. Only a part of the books and furniture could be saved.

Poor Elvira sat down and cried bitterly when she heard of the disaster. For had not the work of the last three months been consumed in the conflagration—the prize essays to be read on the last day of school; the drawings so carefully constructed by each class; the kindergarten work; the little ones, an innovation in the neighborhood, but her special pride? And now they could never be replaced for it was only a week before school would be out. It was a great blow to the little schoolmistress.

"Cheer up, Miss Elvira!" said Deacon Spire, one of the "committee." "We all know you ain't to blame. We'll have the closing exercises, anyway. Mr. Matthews has offered the town hall and Squire Jackson says every boy that wrote a composition shall have a jack-knife, and every girl a new doll to compensate for not gettin' to read 'em the last day of school."

So Elvira dried her tears, and she and the older scholars set to work at once to make the exercises as successful as possible under the circumstances. It was decided, as the time was so short until the end of the term, not to try to hold any more sessions, but simply to have the closing exercises in the town hall on Thursday evening, two days later.

All passed off well. The speakers declaimed with fire and expression. The songs rang out joyously; and the kindergarten covered themselves and their teacher with glory. Elvira was proud and happy, and all the parents were pleased.

The next morning saw her on her way homeward. "I'll just give Mary Ellen a little surprise," she said to herself, as the train rolled along. "There's nobody else at home, and I can get some one from town to take me out. There's no use of troubling Jonas to come after me, anyway, when pa's gone and he's so busy."

She had no trouble in finding a neighbor driving toward the Jenkins place, and as she stopped at the gate, she realized afresh the meaning of "Home, Sweet Home." How pleasant to come back! How fresh and green and pretty everything looked! The dear old flowers! Surely they never grew so large or fragrant anywhere else.

Mary Ellen must be keeping all the dust out while her mother was gone, for the windows were down and the shades drawn. She ran round to the back door, but it was locked, and the only sign of life in the yard was Old Speckle clucking discontentedly in her coop, while the little Plymouth Rocks ran here and there after bugs and flies.

Away on the other side of the field back of the barnyard she could see Jonas plowing. She ran along beside the fence, her foot slipping now and then into the fragrant newly-turped earth.

"Jonas! Jonas!" she cried. "What is Mary Ellen?" "Well, of all things, Elvira, when did ye come home?" exclaimed Jonas as he leaned on his plow handle and mopped his face with his big blue handkerchief. "Nobody's lookin' for ye home yet this week to come."

"I know, Jonas, but the schoolhouse burned down. Somebody set it on fire. So I thought I'd give you a little surprise."

"The schoolhouse burned down! Well, I swan! Mary Ellen? She's come to your cousin Roxie's, over to Pine Grove, and she won't be back till next week. There's some big doin's amongst the young folks over to some town evenin' party, or some such commotion—and she'll be yesterday, hard as she could go. You'd better stay over to Mis' Meek's till she gets back."

"All right, Jonas, but first I'll go up to the house and see how everything looks. I suppose the key's under the step."

Elvira entered by the kitchen door and went over the little dwelling where her childhood had been spent. Everything was just as usual. The old eight-day clock, with the picture of a shepherdess and sheep painted on its face, ticked on in the same dignified way that it had ever since she could remember. Her father's paper lay on the mantelpiece in the sitting-room, where he always put it, the one piece of untidiness in which he persisted.

The only sound was a bee buzzing against the window, impatiently trying to get out. Elvira lifted the sash and released him.

How well everything looked, she thought. Her mother was always such a good house-keeper. And how worried she was because she had had to go away without having done her spring house-cleaning. Mary Ellen wrote that it almost kept her awake at night. Things looked so clean, but her mother would never rest until they went through all the motions, anyway. Would it not be fun if she could clean house? Mary Ellen was too young, of course, but she could do it, she knew, so that her mother would be satisfied.

"I'll just get 'Phrasy and 'Pheny Hines to come over and help me, and then we'll get it done in a jiffy, and I can go over to Cousin Roxie's, too."

Elvira was a person of action, and she had no sooner made up her mind than she proceeded to carry out her plans. She went to the barn, and in a few minutes hitched up Old Gray.

NATURE A VERY SKILFUL PHYSICIAN

Put Up Her Medicines in Most Tempting Form.

Have you ever tasted anything more delicious than the fresh, ripe, luscious fruits? These are Nature's medicines. A regular diet without fruit is positively dangerous for the system soon gets clogged with waste matter and the blood poisoned. Fruit juices stir up bowels, kidneys and skin, making them work vigorously to throw off the dead tissue and indigestible food which, if retained, soon poisons the blood and causes indigestion, headaches, rheumatism, neuralgia and a host of other distressing troubles. But there is a quicker way to stimulate the organs to do their work properly. Take one or two "Fruit-a-lives" tablets every night, besides eating some fresh fruit every day. "Fruit-a-lives" combine the medicinal properties—many times intensified of oranges, apples, prunes and figs, with the best tonics and internal disinfectants added. Their action on bowels, liver, kidneys and skin is natural and more effective. Sold by all dealers—25c for trial box—50c. Fruit-a-lives Limited, Ottawa.

Fate

"Something happened in front of my house very recently that set me to thinking," said a New York man of business the other day.

"I rent and occupy a home on Eighth street. The front yard is enclosed by an iron fence with an iron gate which had been broken and not yet repaired. Going home to lunch one day I was surprised to find a workman engaged in repairing the gate. As I had not notified the owner I was somewhat surprised at his uninvited zeal in making unsolicited repairs. I asked the workman who sent him to do the work and he replied: "Mr. Brown, who owns the house."

"But," said I, "he doesn't own it. It is owned by Mr. Smith, and I rent it of him."

"Oh, no," said he, "Mr. Brown owns the house. He owns a lot of houses and I do all his iron work. Here is a postal he sent me telling me to go and repair a broken iron gate at No. — Eighth street. There can't be any mistake."

"I examined the card carefully. The number of the house was the same as mine and at first glance the street appeared to be Eighth street, but upon closer scrutiny I saw that it was Fifth street. I explained the matter to the workman, but as he had half completed the job I told him to go ahead and finish it and I would pay him. He did and went away. In the course of the work he had been obliged to take up some of the bricks in the walk and when he related them there was half a brick left over and not needed. This he had tossed into the street. That evening two boys came racing down the street on bicycles. They were moving at a rapid rate. Simultaneously the clergyman of a nearby church started to cross the street. When he was half way across and in front of my house he saw the boys bearing down upon him like a whirlwind. He did what any person of good judgment and strong nerve would do. He stopped and waited for them to pass.

"As they approached they divided, one going a little to the right and the other a little to the left. Just as they were directly opposite him the bicycle of one of the boys struck the piece of brick the workman had tossed into the street and the boy was thrown upon the clergyman with such force as to knock the latter down. His skull was fractured and he was dead before he could be removed to his home. As I have said, the affair set me to thinking. Here was a man brought to an untimely death because some other man whom he never saw and of whom he had never heard in writing the figure '5' made it look like the figure '8'. And I wondered if there might not be somewhere in the world some unknown one who held my fate in his hands and who even then with a stroke of his pen might not be signing my death warrant. It made me feel real creepy for several days."—New York Sun.

whom she found carelessly sunning himself in the yard.

"Phemy and Phras Hines—christened by their parents Euphemia and Euphrasia—were twin sisters of uncertain age, who supported themselves by doing various kinds of work in the neighborhood. Luckily for Elvira's plans, they were not busy that day, and readily consented to go home with her and help clean houses. Jonas had taken it for granted that Elvira had come to the neighbor's, as he had suggested, so they were not troubled by his presence.

"I must say, Elvira, that your ma is a pretty good housekeeper, if she has been sick all winter," said Phemy, as she proceeded with their work. "Or Mary Ellen, rather, for she's had most of the chore of things lately. 'Pears like this place doesn't need very much cleaning." But they went over it all painstakingly and conscientiously, being women who did with their might what their hands found to do, and by the middle of the next afternoon they pronounced their task completed. Elvira was not disposed to linger over it, and was soon on her way to Pine Grove.

Jonas, who had come to town Saturday afternoon on some business of his own, was rather surprised as he stood in front of the railroad station meditatively drawing a long straw to see Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins alight from the west-bound train.

"For peaceable and law-abiding citizens, the Jenkinises is doin' considerable kickin' over the traces lately," observed Jonas to himself. "First here comes Elvira, racin' horse afore her folks expects her, and now her ma and ma descends onto us unlooked for."

"Howdy, Mis' Jenkins!" he said, as he sauntered up to them. "Ain't ve a little ahead of time, pullin' in this evening? The girls wa'n't lookin' for ye for the next week or ten days."

"'Coudn't keep her any longer!" sighed Mrs. Jenkins. "We were havin' a fine time among all the old folks, but nothing would do but she must go home and look after things. We've brought along Rosy, Brother 'Bijah's girl, though, to make us a little visit and kind of help along," he said, with a wave of his hand toward a stout, shily-looking girl who stood in the back-ground.

"Guess ye won't find anybody at home," ventured Jonas, after they were all seated in the wagon and driving toward home. "Mary Ellen she went over to Pine Grove last Thursday, and the next day here come Elvira, Schoelhouse over to Dr. Wainville bargued down; and she lit off over there, too. Guess they'll be back the first of the week."

"There!" ejaculated Mrs. Jenkins. "I just knew something would happen. The girls' never stay at home and tend to things if I went off. I suppose the place is all covered with dirt, and the chickens half starved, and— and—" and Mrs. Jenkins stopped, appalled at the picture her own imagination had drawn of the probable disorder into which things had fallen, as the result of her having deserted her post of duty.

"There, there, ma, I guess everything'll be all right," said Mr. Jenkins, consolingly. But his wife would not be comforted until they found, as they drove into the yard, that at least Old Speckle and her brood had escaped the general destruction. The cleanliness and quiet which reigned within the house served still further to mollify her.

"Well," she admitted at last, after she had been in every room and could see nothing with which to find fault. "It isn't so very bad, after all. But I'll never rest till the house is cleaned from top to bottom. I'm feelin' better now, and Rosy'll help me, and we'll set to work Monday mornin' and have it all done before the girls get home."

The remonstrances of her husband had no effect upon her, and finally, concluding that it would do her less harm to be busy than to sit still and fret, he let her have her way.

Tuesday evening a merry party of young people stopped at Mr. Jenkins's front gate about dusk, and the two girls ran up the walk. "For the land sakes, Elvira, I do believe ma's come home!" exclaimed Mary Ellen.

"I did not know you were comin' home!" called the mother, as she just then caught sight of them. "And I've got the house all cleaned at last!"

Expert Opinion at the Tuberculosis Congress

Among the group of scientists at the international congress in Washington, who presented papers on the subject of immunity from tuberculosis, was Dr. Ishigami, director of the Ishigami Institute, at Osaka, Japan. He declared that his experiments had demonstrated and that the principle was established. There was no longer any doubt in his mind, and his discovery was ready for application. He declared that by the use of a serum tuberculosis patients can be completely cured in from three to six months. It also provided immunization against tuberculosis. He said:

After continuous investigations for more than ten years I have succeeded in getting rid of the disease of comparatively great efficacy and free from any detrimental reaction.

1. The one is a chemical preparation from tubercle bacilli and is applicable to insipient and feverish patients.

2. The other is an immunization serum and is applicable chiefly to patients in an advanced stage of the disease.

Tuberculo toxinin, the first, is a preparation made by chemically dissolving the tubercle bacilli and transforming the toxic property, thus getting rid of the reaction which is the common detriment of all the other preparations from tubercle bacilli.

From my own experience and the reports of other practitioners who tried the preparation the following conclusions may be drawn:

1. By injecting the preparation in a gradually increasing dose to feverish tuberculosis patients almost every one of them increases in body weight and vital capacity and becomes conscious of the alleviation of the symptom.

2. The bacilli in the sputum are gradually broken up and acridities finally disappear, although in some rare cases a small amount of expectoration containing bacilli is found for a long time.

3. The quantity of opsonin in the patient's blood is found to gradually increase by the injection treatment.

4. The insipient and feverish tuberculosis patients can be, almost without exception, completely cured within from three to six months by the injection of this preparation.

5. In patients in more or less advanced stages, if the nutrition is in good order, similar results can be obtained. In feverish patients a satisfactory result is often obtained by means of the injection used side by side with antipyretics, in more serious cases, a certain degree of improvement is obtained.

6. Those patients who were once cured or alleviated by this treatment suffer only very seldom from the relapse.

7. Out of the total of 772 tuberculosis patients, each of whom has received more than 15 injections of tuberculo-toxinin in my clinic within the last few years, there were 274 who were completely cured and 258 who were partially cured. These last two figures added together made 532, being 68.91 per cent. of the total number of patients. Those who discontinued the treatment on various reasons numbered 107. Those who died numbered 29 and the remnant numbered 104.

The average number of injections per patient among these completely cured was 65. On the problem of serum therapy of tuberculosis, the results of previous investigators, which are undoubtedly very rich, have not yet reached the stage to permit the general application on the patients. I have also succeeded in removing the characteristic reaction of animal serum upon tuberculosis patients.

Satisfactory immunity to tuberculosis has only been obtained experimentally by the use of living bacilli. Any successful method of producing freedom from tuberculosis must be sought through the use of the living germ.

The idea was first carried out by mice and anthrax germs. Encouraged by results, guinea pigs, animals very easily rendered victims of tuberculosis, were inoculated with the germ of tuberculosis. About 40 guinea pigs have received inoculations, beginning with one live tubercle bacillus and increasing up to thousands; so far none, as proved by post-mortem examinations, have become victims of tuberculosis.—New York Sun.

For Nut and Celery Salad.—Put one cup of shelled walnuts in a saucepan, add two slices of onion and one-half teaspoon salt, cover with boiling water and boil till tender, about half an hour, then throw into ice water to blanch; then dry on a towel; rub off the thin skin; cut into slices two cups of celery; mix all together with cream dressing; sour apples can be used in place of nuts. For the dressing take one-half cup of vinegar, one teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of mustard, one teaspoonful of sugar, two eggs, beaten light; beat dressing while cooking till light and fluffy; put away to cool; when cool add one cup of whipped cream.

WHAT WOULD YOU DO? In case of a burn or scald what would you do to relieve the pain? Such injuries are liable to occur in any family and everyone should be prepared for them. Chamberlain's Salve applied on a soft cloth will relieve the pain almost instantly, and unless the injury is a very severe one, will cause the parts to heal without leaving a scar. For sale by W. A. DOCTORS SAID "CUT OFF!"

"The only thing I can do now is to take the finger completely off. So said one of the leading doctors of Toronto to Mr. W. C. Edwards, P.D.C.R.A.O.F., P.G.M.I.O.O.F., the well-known Friendly Society leader, of Peter Street, Toronto. Almost a year before, Mr. Edwards' arm was badly and blood poison doctor had been treating him, but no good had resulted, and this was the final decision. A fifty-cent box of Zam-Buk saved Mr. Edwards from life-long mutilation which $500 would not have compensated him for. He says: "The blood poison from the finger spread up my hand and arm and caused me terrible agony. After months' treatment the doctor said there was no cure, and amputation would have to take place if I intended to save the arm. My hand, at that time, was all swollen up and discolored, and I had to carry it in a sling. I left that doctor and consulted another.

After a few weeks' treatment he also told me that operation would be necessary, and the finger would have to be opened so that the bone could be scraped. I went away to consider when I would have the operation performed, and met a friend who advised me to try Zam-Buk. That night I bathed the wound and put on some Zam-Buk. I got a little sleep for the first time for many nights. In the morning the wound began to bleed instead of the foul discharging as in the past. This was a healthy sign so I went on with the Zam-Buk. Well, to cut a long story short, in a few days I put away the sling and in a few weeks the finger was healed completely. To-day that finger is as sound as a bell and I owe it to Zam-Buk."

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1908.

How little we realize our indebtedness to our friends the birds and how little pains is taken to teach our boys the need of protection for these tiny allies in orchard and garden industry. Instead of giving your boy an air rifle and letting him indulge his propensity for destruction in cutting off the happy and useful lives of our little songsters, how much better to teach him the importance of protecting the birds and interesting him in their habits. Until systematic instruction is given in the schools on this subject, little attention will be paid to protecting our little helpers, but we trust the day will speedily come when this need will be realized.

The Toronto Globe says—Wanderers from the north invading the city seem to appreciate our need of help in saving the shade trees from a host of enemies. The season has been favorable for the development of aphids and the larger leaf-eating insects, and the passing migrants with feverish industry are taking up the work of clearing them off and preventing further damage. A warbler or vireo perpetually on the move, going over a tree leaf after leaf and twig after twig, picking insects and eggs from their lodgments, and making the day a continuous feast, must play an important part in helping to restore the balance between the trees and their enemies. Many of these travellers take an industrious rest in the city, perhaps innocently inhaling vapors and gases, or perhaps finding its trees beset by more enemies and more in need of the work of protection.

There seems no feud between these unrecognized helpers and the sparrows that ignore our needs in seeking food. The awkward birds acclimated from Britain, France and Russia have perch that is not assuringly solid, generally pay little attention to the nimble climbers that run about over the slender branches or swing like acrobats from the long, bending twigs. A hermit thrush may perch in a shade tree, staring about with a look of alarm, but the sparrows take no more notice of a song-sparrow, now silent, may display his streaked breast from an invaded city maple, and the birds of the street ignore not only his relationship but his existence. But the vireos are such energetic invaders that their restless presence forces itself on the attention of the most timid and indifferent of birds. The sparrow is a great imitator in his own awkward way, and he not only crawls along the rough bark after the manner of the nuthatches, but flies out to take insects on the wing in imitation of the swift, alert fly-catchers. Under the influence of the invading vireos he seems to try, in a stiff, awkward way, to move along the small branches in search of insects, though in this he cannot approach the transient visitor.

Two blue-headed vireos and one warbling vireo have undertaken the clearing of a small silver birch in a yard in the heart of the city. Compared with their untiring energy, the sparrows fluttering about seem as hazy in every conceivable position, but sometimes pause, flitting on the air, after the manner of humming-birds or kinglets, to pick food from otherwise inaccessible places. Three days of incessant energy have not finished the work. When disturbed, alarmed, or impelled by some influence known only to the bird world they fly away to some adjacent chestnut tree, but soon return with an evident determination to complete their task. The over-named blue-headed vireo is the more handsome bird, his olive green coat being relieved by a pair of winz bars, and his big round eye made more conspicuous by a surrounding ring of white. He is now as great a traveller as his way from Hudson's Bay to the tropics, or may have hunk his pensile nest in a slender fork on a suburban tree. These birds of the woods seem to appreciate the saving spirit that takes form in the preservation of trees throughout the area of city smoke, and do their part to avert the threatened destruction.

their vocations, and thereby to increase their efficiency. These schools had more than 1,300 students last winter. The session of the maritime board of trade was happily coincident with the programme for the laying in Halifax of the cornerstone of what is said to be the first purely technical college in the maritime provinces, if not in the whole Dominion of Canada.

The keenness toward industry of the provincials is indicated in the resolution adopted by the board favoring the utilization of wood pulp at the localities of its production. It was asserted that pulp is being taken away to the States and stored, and that if it were finished in Canada instead of being exported in a raw state it would mean $5,000,000 or $6,000,000 more spent in Canada. On the other hand—here is a thought for opponents of the policy for the United States of free raw materials for industry—it was urged that, without any export duty, capitalists of the United States would be erecting their pulp mills in Canada.

These are haphazard conclusions, the result mostly of casual chats with habitants met on the railroad train, in hotel offices or in strolls about the towns. Inquiries made by strangers are not merely met halfway; they usually induce voluntary statements clearly made, to the point and reliable. They may hardly give a full idea of a region, having within its boundaries for a newcomer more agreeable surprises to the square inch than any like-sized territory on this continent. Suffice it may be to say: If you wish to revel in a winelike atmosphere, if you would bathe twenty-four hours in the day in sea ozone without getting damp—unless it happens to be a rainy day or you are in contact with a Bay of Fundy fog—if you are interested in memorials of the dramatic struggle between France and Great Britain for possession of Canada, if you would escape hay fever, if you would fish or hunt, if you would enjoy an unending panorama of sea, of rugged headlands, of meandering streams, of clear lakes, of peaceful vales and fertile meadows, come to Nova Scotia, not failing to take in on the way New Brunswick with its hills and dales and rivers and its reversing falls at St. John.

POWERS ARE PLEASED WITH BULGARIA'S ACTION.
London, Oct. 28.—A despatch to the Times from Sofia states that Great Britain, France and Russia have presented an identical note approving Bulgaria's recognition that compensation is due to Turkey's exiles in Bulgaria to follow Turkey's example and give assurance of abstention from mobilization, pending the proposed international congress. The representatives of Germany and Italy at Sofia also have expressed to Foreign Minister Toprikoff, their governments' approval of this identical note.

IMPROPER TALK IN PULPIT
COSTS FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS
Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 28.—The Georgia Court of Appeals today affirmed the verdict of guilty against the Rev. W. H. Holcombe, of Cartersville, Ga., who was convicted of using improper language in the pulpit when there were women in the congregation, and sentenced him to pay a fine of $500 and costs.

Holcombe is an evangelist and the son-in-law of the late Rev. Sam. P. Jones. Holcombe used the language for which he was indicted in the Cartersville Tabernacle while a great revival was in progress. In affirming the conviction the Court of Appeals says: "It was not the ribaldry of some low-grade comedian in a second-class theatre; it was the indecent jest of a minister of the Gospel, made in a house devoted to the services of God, in the presence of some 3,000 worshippers, aimed at a female member of the congregation whose excess of adipose happened to excite his attention."

SMALL-POX IN NEW BRUNSWICK.
There is a serious outbreak of small pox at Edmundston, N. B., fifty cases being reported last week. Plus Marchand, M. P., the Liberal candidate in Victoria, Madawask, was said to have contracted the disease, but this is untrue. It was first thought to be chicken-pox, and not much attention was paid to it. A rigid quarantine has been established and every precaution is now taken to check its progress. No deaths are reported, the disease is of a mild type, and is prevalent chiefly among the school children. The schools have been closed and all public gatherings prohibited. Later advices state that there are now over sixty cases, and that Grand Falls has four cases.

Obituary.

JAMES E. RUMSEY.
It is with feelings of deep regret that we announce the death of Mr. James E. Rumsey, of Clarence, at his home, on Saturday, October 17th, aged 65 years.

Mr. Rumsey was born at Arlington in 1843, son of the late Benjamin Rumsey, of that place, and was one of a family of thirteen. He leaves one brother, Wallace, of Parisville, two sisters of New York, and one of Boston.

Mr. Rumsey spent his early life on the sea. At 22 years of age he came to Clarence and married Josephine Banks, daughter of the late Samuel Banks, and was one of the successful farmers on the old homestead of his wife's ancestors.

He was a very industrious citizen, and valued his quiet home life far more than seeking popularity or making a show in the world. He united with the Baptist Church of Clarence under the pastorate of the Rev. R. B. Kinley, and ever maintained a quiet but consistent Christian life. A small Bible, handed his pastor after his death, by his son, showed most clearly by its well-worn pages his love for the word of God. Very touching reference was made to this by his pastor, the Rev. H. H. Saunders, at the funeral service held at the house on Monday, October 19th, and his remains were interred in the cemetery at Lawrenceton.

He leaves his widow, one son, Amos P. Rumsey, and one daughter, Effie Rumsey, at home to mourn the loss of a kind husband and father.

MR. BURTON NELLY, SENR.
At his home, Nictaux Woods, Oct. 19th, Mr. Burton Nelly passed away. He had reached the age of 77 years and, although he had been failing for several months, did not give up work until three weeks before his death. Mr. Nelly was one of our prosperous farmers, having spent some years of his earlier life in Australia, where he was very successful. He leaves to mourn the loss of a kind and loving father, three daughters—Mrs. William Eaton, of Halifax; Mrs. John Schaffner, of South Williamston, and Mrs. O. A. Rogers, of Middleton—and two sons—Charles, of Oakland, Cal., and Percy, who lives on the homestead. He was a member of the Baptist church, and the funeral services were conducted by Rev. C. H. Haverstock. Mr. Burton Nelly, of Bridgetown, is a nephew of the deceased.

THE COST OF ADVERTISING.
The unawake merchant often wonders how some rival "can afford to spend so much money for advertising." He is sure that he could not do it would bankrupt him in short order to "plunge" into publicity on the scale that the other fellow does. "The other fellow" is not so worrying about the "cost" of his advertising for the simple reason that he doesn't have to pay it. The competitor who cannot "afford" to advertise really, in effect, pays the bills of the man who can "afford" it.

He pays them in the loss of business caused by his failure to advertise. The business he ought to have—his "share" of the trade in his line—goes, in large part, to the competitor who seeks it, who can afford to advertise for it. The profits on the trade drawn away from the timid advertiser by the aggressive one pays the latter's advertising bills—and leaves a comfortable surplus.

This is a fact which progressive merchants are proving all the time—so it ought to have some personal significance to the over-cautious, business men who are waiting to get rich before "risking" adequate advertising campaigns.

RULES FOR HEALTH AND STRENGTH SEEKERS.
Sometimes recognized health experts express their views in terms easy to remember, and well worth remembering. This seems to be the case with a set of rules which the New York Board of Health recently issued for the guidance of consumptives—but evidently of value to everybody. These are the rules:
Never sleep in a close room.
When in-doors remain in the sunniest and best ventilated room—one, if possible, which has no carpet.
Have at least one window open in your bedroom.
Have a room to yourself when possible, and at any rate have your own bed.
Go to bed early and sleep at least eight hours.
Avoid draughts, dampness, dust and smoke.
Keep your feet warm and dry.
Don't wear a chest protector.
If you have to work take every chance to rest that you can.

Reformation Instead of Punishment

A new way of dealing with persons who offend against the rights of property, whether out of viciousness or revenge, or mere rankish wantonness, has been provided by law in the states of New York and Massachusetts. It has been found productive of much better results than the old system of punishment by fines and imprisonment. It is called the Elmira Reformatory Method. It abolishes corporal punishment, striped uniforms, the lock-step and the shaving of heads in prison, substituting therefor a system of probation and restitution under the control of a State Probation Commission. Both adults and children are amenable to it. This system is founded on the principle that human nature is usually susceptible to sympathetic and constructive influences, provided the approach is made at the right time and in the proper manner. It is based on the fact that an interested, sensible friend can do more to reform a neglected boy or weak man than can bars and lashes. The New York law permits a judge to appoint probation officers, as either salaried or volunteer officials, to look after persons who need correction, but who, on account of youth or other mitigating circumstances, are entitled to clemency, and ought to be spared the stigma of imprisonment. Persons released by a court on probation are ordered to go to school, or keep at work, according to their individual circumstances, and to keep in close touch with their probation officer. But if while under the supervision they again do wrong and show that further efforts on behalf of the probation officer will be futile, they may be returned to court for more severe sentence. Instances of the working of the probation system occurred recently. A man in Buffalo who smashed a window was released under supervision of a probation officer on the condition that he would through official pay the owner of the window its full value in weekly instalments. He went to work and paid as ordered. Another case was that of four young men who set fire to a barn, causing damage to the extent of one thousand dollars. Each of the sons—Charles, of Oakland, Cal., and Percy, who lives on the homestead. He was a member of the Baptist church, and the funeral services were conducted by Rev. C. H. Haverstock. Mr. Burton Nelly, of Bridgetown, is a nephew of the deceased.

LUNENBURG MAN
LOSES HIS LIFE.
A sad drowning accident took place Friday afternoon at the mouth of the La Have river, which resulted in the loss of one life. Solomon Conrod, of Dayspring, and a fourteen-year-old boy went down the river in a small sail-boat for sea-weed. They stayed aboard for the La Have islands too long, disregarding the big storm which was coming. After leaving the islands the sheet gave way and the boat ran on the cliffs. Both got in a dory they had in tow, but this was overturned and smashed. Conrod sank at once, but the boy clung to the dory. He drifted past Mosher's Island and was rescued with great difficulty by Simon Mosher and others. Conrod's body was not recovered. He leaves a widow and three children. He was a highly respected farmer of Dayspring and his death is widely regretted.

POSTAL CARD DEALERS.
PUNISHED
Several of the charges against Toronto stationers and booksellers of selling obscene post cards and literature came up for hearing in the police court on Friday, and resulted in three of the men being sent to jail without the option of a fine. Allen G. Robertson, in whose premises over 7,000 cards of a grossly immoral nature were found, and who is said to have acted as a wholesale agent, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to sixty days in jail. A similar sentence was meted out to P. V. Brown, who pleaded guilty to a charge of selling Albert Prusse pleaded not guilty but a number of the cards purchased from his store were produced. Col. Denison, remarking that they were not so bad as some, sentenced him not so had as some, sentenced him to 30 days in jail. The charges against A. R. Wickett, Henry Golden-thal and A. L. Merrill were all dismissed with warnings.

A New Use For Straw—It is stated that in future the boxes containing butter shipped from Queensland to Great Britain are to be made of straw and that a company with a capital of $250,000 has been formed to work the business. At present 3,000,000 boxes are used in Australia, costing annually $1,000,000. The new box will, it is estimated save the Queensland dairy industry about $200,000 a year. In the new box a mixture of kaolin and straw is used. It weighs about 10 lb. and is damp-proof and odorless.

Three women in Louisville, Ky., tried to chloroform a cat the other day, but the cat put up a fight and spilled the chloroform. All the women were put to sleep, and it took a physician several hours to bring them to. The cat is still alive.

Our Tupperville correspondent says:—The arrival by train from Middleton on Saturday of the remains of Mrs. J. H. Ingalls was a great shock to our community. Mrs. Ingalls, who has been in ill-health for some time, at the time of her death was visiting her daughter, Mrs. Marshall. She will be greatly missed as a neighbor and friend. The funeral took place from her home, Rev. George Johnson conducting the services.

The rain of Friday last removed a grave menace to the health and well-being of the country. Dried up springs and stagnant wells were causing great inconvenience, not to say suffering, in some districts. Cattle were suffering for their usual supply of water and the milk supply was in consequence affected. There was also considerable uneasiness in some sections regarding bush fires, all of which perils the timely rain averted.

It consists of a single span of 120 feet and will be a great convenience to people entering Kingsport by the lower road.—Kentville Chronicle.

The Graves Factory is having a number of new tanks built to store their cider and vinegar. The capacity of the new tanks will be about 60,000 gallons. In addition to former storage space, this will give a total capacity of 200,000 gallons. Work on the building is not quite completed, but gangs of workmen in two shifts, night and day, have been grinding immense quantities of apples, which are still continuing to arrive in carload lots, until at the present time their tanks are full and they are obliged to wait for the completion of the new tanks before resuming manufacture.

The Clarence mail-driver denies that he made the statement to our messenger that he could not carry the Monitors on account of "having political matter to carry" and on inquiry we find that this was an error on our part, but the fact remains that he refused to carry the bundles of Monitors although our messenger waited in the post-office a quarter of an hour to hand them to him. Consequently the papers were delayed in the office twenty-four hours. This is a decided contrast to the attitude of the Hampton, Centrelia, and South Mail drivers, who have not infrequently called at our office for their bundles when they failed to reach the post office at the time of their leaving, thus conferring an appreciated favor upon us and the people whom they serve.

A peculiar accident happened to Mr. Troop Messenger recently, the effects of which necessitated a surgical operation. In making a change of undergarments Mr. Messenger put on a garment that had in it a needle and thread which had been used in repairing it. He did not discover it until the needle had penetrated the flesh of his thigh, taking with it quite a length of thread. He called the services of Dr. Armstrong to relieve him but the needle had traveled so far that Dr. Armstrong advised him to go to Halifax and have it located by the aid of the X-Ray. Accordingly Mr. Messenger went to Halifax on Tuesday last, the needle was located and presumably has been removed by this time. Pressing upon the sciatic nerve, it caused Mr. Messenger considerable pain and discomfort.

Mrs. Gilbert V. Gibson will be at home to her friends on the afternoons of November 11th and 12th, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Currell, Centrelia.

Mr. Reynolds, of Ayer, Mass., who spent a month in town assisting the M. W. Graves Company in establishing their new cider plant, returned home last week, accompanied by Mrs. Reynolds.

Rev. Alexander Cameron and wife, of New Glasgow, are the guests of Mrs. John Cameron and Miss Cameron. The reverend gentleman is a brother of the late Rev. John Cameron and has just returned with his wife from a year's sojourn in Scotland.

Mr. B. M. Williams, who has been confined to his house with illness from liver complaint for several weeks, had an acute attack on Saturday, concerning which alarming reports were circulated. It proved, however, nothing serious, and we are glad to report that Mr. Williams is regaining strength.

Y. M. C. A. Will Re-open

Contrary to the expectation of our townspeople, the Y. M. C. A. will re-open in Bridgetown this fall. The Hall formerly occupied by the Association having been leased by the Royal Theatre by the year, there was apparently no other suitable hall obtainable. Through the interest and efforts of Mr. Harry J. Crowe and Dr. Armstrong, however, the lessee, Mr. MacDonald, of Halifax, was induced to release the hall, but as a means to this end Mr. Crowe bought from Mr. MacDonald the moving picture machine, which was the money-making factor of the Royal Theatre. Mr. Crowe will place this machine at the disposal of the Y. M. C. A. and it is expected that in addition to the regular work of the Y. M. C. A., exhibitions will be given on certain afternoons and evenings open to the general public and the proceeds to be used towards rental and other expenses.

Mr. W. A. Hills has been re-elected as secretary and will immediately begin the work of re-organizing the classes. It is expected also that Mr. Ritchie, superintendent of the boys' work for the International Y. M. C. A., who is now making a tour of the Province, will be in Bridgetown next month and will assist Mr. Hills in the work of organization. We have no doubt that this announcement will be received with pleasure by our young men and boys and with satisfaction by the general public who realize the great advantage it is to any town, and has been to our town in particular, to have a well conducted Y. M. C. A. Our citizens must again acknowledge their indebtedness to Mr. Crowe, who has been for some years the prime mover in keeping alive the organization in Bridgetown.

AN ARMY WOMAN CURED.

Mrs. T. A. Leadley, of Amherst, N. S., writes me as follows: "Seven months ago I suffered intense pain from a large swelling on my leg. The Dr. was called in. He pronounced it a chronic abscess which must be operated upon at once so that the pus might be drained off. I objected to operations, so began to poultice with Reed's Earth Cure. The second application greatly relieved the pain and in two days was able to get up. In five days I was out. The abscess entirely disappeared. The Dr. said it probably would break out somewhere else but has never yet. I have found R. E. C. excellent for rheumatism and neuralgia. I believe it to be all you claim it to be."

SENATE OF LILLIPUT.

The Way Dr. Johnson Outwitted the House of Commons.

Parliamentary battles were long a great stronghold of resistance to the press. Reporters were strictly barred from them, and reports of their proceedings were sternly punished. It was among the triumphs for the right and for common sense which Franklin achieved that he caused the chamber of the provincial assembly of Pennsylvania to be thrown open to publicity. Nevertheless no reports were allowed of either the Continental congress or the constitutional convention.

Dr. Johnson's violation of the cherished privacy of the British house of commons is a classic story. He reported its debates without entering its sacred precincts, and in order to escape the severe penalties of the law he reported them without mentioning the body or any of its members by name. Setting up an imaginary "Senate of Lilliput" and giving fictitious names to the leading members of parliament, he edited for years the readers of the journal which then boasted the "largest circulation" in England.

Receiving a few scatty notes of what was going on at Westminster, he elaborated them into a brilliant spread. He was, indeed, the illustrious founder of the immortal craft of rewriting. His discerning readers came to know not only that the senate of Lilliput was the house of commons, but that "Diefcu" stood for France and "Mildendo" for London; that "Spruce" meant pounds; that "Nardel" was the Duke of Newcastle, and so on. What his notes lacked his imagination readily supplied.

Never was the eloquence of parliament more brilliant than in Johnson's reports of the debates, in which, he admitted, he took care that the Whig dogs got the worst of it, although Pitt himself must have felt mollified when he read the wonderful outburst attributed to him by Johnson on "the atrocious crime of being a young man." It is the best remembered of all Pitt's speeches, and it was written by Johnson "in a garret in Exeter street."

A SMART ENGLISHMAN.

The Story He Told of His Experience in "the States."

A tall, practical Englishman went over to "the States" the other day from London. He took lodgings at an inn in a small village, which shall be nameless. He had dinner, and among those who sat at the table with him was the waiting maid, whom he designated as "servant," but he received an indignant correction from the landlord.

"We call our servants, sir, 'helps.' They are not oppressed; they are not Russian serfs."

"All right," said the Britisher; "I shall remember."

And he did, for in the morning he awoke the whole house by calling out at the top of his voice, which was like the tearing of a strong rag:

"Help, help! Water, water!"

In an instant every person equal to the task rushed into his room with a pail of water.

"I am much obliged to you, I am sure," he said, "but I don't want so much water, you know. I only want enough to shave with."

"Shave with?" said the landlord.

"What did you mean by calling: 'Help! Water?' We thought the house was afire."

"You told me to call the servant 'helps.' I did not think I would cry 'Water!' when I meant fire?"

The explanation, it would seem, was satisfactory, and he can call the servants "servants" as much as he likes at that place now.—London Answers.

Not Very Flattering.

When the artist had finished his scenic sketch of the stretch of woods skirting the suburban road, he looked up and beheld a serious faced Irishman whom he had previously noticed digging in a trench by the roadside gazing queerly at his canvas.

"Well," said the artist familiarly, "do you suppose you could make a picture like that?"

The Irishman mopped his forehead a moment and, with a deep sigh, answered: "Sure, a man 'd do anything if he's driv to it!"—Argonaut.

Some Good Anagrams.

Astronomers, no more stars; catalogues, got as a ciew; elegant, neat leg; impatient, Tim is a pet; matrimony, into my arms; melodrama, made moral; midshipman, mind his map; old England, golden land; parishioner, I hire parsons; parliament, partial men; penitentiary, nay, I repeat it; Reesbyrian, best in prayer; revolution, to love ruin; sweetheart, there we sat; telegraphs, great help.

A Neat Selection.

"That's a nice umbrella you have there."
"Ain't it? Reflects credit on my taste, doesn't it?"
"It certainly does. Where did you get it?"
"Picked it out of a bunch of seven that were standing in the boarding house hall this morning."

Contradictory.

"Is your husband voracious in his appetite, madam?"
"I can't say as he is, doctor. He'll eat anything and everything as long as there's anything to eat."

Usually the Way.

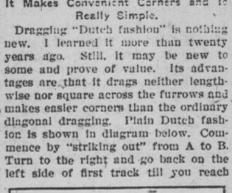

"A man likes to hear hisse'f talk so well," said Uncle Eben, "dat me' conversation looks jes' like two people impatiently waitin' deir turns to say sumpin'."

DUTCH DRAGGING.

It Makes Convenient Corners and is Really Simple.

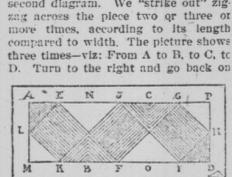

Dragging "Dutch fashion" is nothing new. I learned it more than twenty years ago. Still, it may be new to some and prove of value. Its advantages are, that it drags neither lengthwise nor square across the furrows and makes easier corners than the ordinary diagonal dragging. Plain Dutch fashion is shown in diagram below. Commence by "striking out" from A to B. Turn to the right and go back on the left side of first track till you reach edge of field near A. Drive across the first track and back on the opposite side to the other end. Cross over and back on opposite side again.

Continue crossing over at each end inside your last track and outside the last track along the sides. When half done the piece will look like first diagram, and the next trip would be from C to D, E to F, G to H. When done the piece will have been dragged twice diagonally in opposite directions. This works well on pieces that are nearly square or not more than twice as long as wide. Of late we have found that it is economy in plowing, cultivating, etc., to make out lands as long as possible. On these Dutch dragging did not work as well, as it was too near lengthwise the furrows, so we hit upon what we call "crazy Dutch," shown in second diagram. We "strike out" zigzag across the piece two or three or more times, according to its length compared to width. The picture shows three times—viz: From A to B, to C, to D. Turn to the right and go back on left to first track to C and drive across it. Go to right side to B, then up left side to A. Cross over and back on left side to B. Drive straight across the first two tracks, turn to the left and go on right side to C, where you will cross the two tracks again, and go on left side to D. Always go straight ahead till you get to the edge of the field before you make a turn.

When half done it will look like the picture, and the next trip would be from E to F, G to H, I, J, K, L, E. When done the last trip will be from M to N, O, P. This looks complicated, but it isn't half as hard to do it as it is to tell about it. At least it seems that way to me just now. In striking out we never measure a piece, but guess at the angles. However, the truer you get it struck out the better it works out in finishing, concludes "Uncle Reuben" in writing the foregoing to the Rural New Yorker.

Oat By-products.

There is a class of by-products from the cereal mills of Iowa that merit greater attention on the part of our feeders. In this class are the oat feeds, hous, middlings, shorts, and possibly the bran, too, may be used. These feeds are well up in protein and have appreciable percentages of fat, which render them particularly desirable as hog feeds, and possibly their use may with profit be extended to horses. This is especially true of the four, middlings and shorts. The bran, however, has too high a content of crude fiber to give it a very great value as a flesh producer or to render it palatable to the feeding animal. These are comparatively new feeds, and their practical worth has not been definitely established, but from their chemical composition it seems evident that experimentation with practical feeding tests will fully demonstrate their making well with similar wheat products, if not outclassing them.—Louis G. Michael.

Wood Ashes as Fertilizer.

Wood ashes are obtainable wherever wood is burned in large quantities. The potash contained in them is water soluble and easily leaches out. Wood ashes are excellent as fertilizer, and none should be allowed to go to waste. Do not apply at base of plants, but spread broadcast about bushes or trees.

Alfalfa Seedling.

Ohio authorities state that alfalfa may be seeded at any time after spring frosts are over until the middle of August, provided the seed bed is in proper condition. It was found that upland clay and sandy first and second bottom lands have produced the heaviest maximum and average yields.

The Cigarette Habit

There are many pitfalls and snares which beset the pathway of the young man starting out in life, among them being the gambling table and sinking habit. These two go hand in hand no matter how bright his prospects either of which is enough to ruin him may be. But there is another evil which to our minds, by its continuous growth, threatens the health, happiness and manhood of the young and rising generation as much, if not more than the other two combined. This is the "cigarette habit."

This growing evil in the past has not received the attention it should have by those interested in moral reform. While the cause of temperance has many good and faithful workers who seemingly have devoted all their energies towards better legislation to help in stamping out this terrible curse to mankind, the latter subject has been left to a large extent in the background until it now has a hold upon the young which it will take much time and attention to control. What is a more heartrending sight to one who in part understands its evil effects, than to see a young lad, not yet in his teens, puffing away at a cigarette which is not only fastening the fangs of this degrading habit upon him but is ruining his health and manhood and sooner or later will dwarf his intellect and lead to moral imbecility. True, we have laws which govern the sale of tobacco in any form to those under 18 years of age, but of what use are these or any other laws unless they are enforced.

The penalties for violations are severe and would not need many regulations before they would be respected, and this to a large extent would make it impossible for the young boys to indulge in the habit providing of course those of a legal age would have manhood enough not to purchase them. Now it seems to us that the one thing most needed in this or any other community where the laws along these lines are being continually violated is more moral backbone on the part of all right-thinking citizens, and with that a determination that irrespective of creed or party the laws shall be enforced. What do you think about it?

GOOD COUGH MEDICINE FOR CHILDREN AND GROWN FOLKS TOO.

"We could hardly do without Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says Mrs. Flora Despain, of Bloyd, Ky. "I found it to be so good for the croup and have used it for years. I can heartily recommend it for coughs, colds and croup in children and grown folks, too." The above shows the implicit confidence that many mothers place in Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, a confidence based on many years' experience in the use of it. No one need hesitate to use this remedy for it contains no chloroform, opium or other narcotics and may be given to a child as confidently as to an adult. For sale by W. A. WARREN, BRIDGETOWN; A. E. Cornstalks for Wood Pulp

(Brooklyn "Easlt.")

The investigating young chemists of the Agricultural Department think they have made a discovery which if it comes up to their expectations will allay the anxiety which Lord Northcliffe recently expressed lest newspapers should have to be made much smaller in the future for lack of wood-pulp to print them on.

These young men have succeeded in making five grades of paper from the bulky and heretofore almost useless cornstalk, and they say that the white grade, made from the outer covering of the stalk, seems to offer a very satisfactory substitute for the wood pulp paper in general use. If further experiments confirm the hopes of these officials, their discovery will be welcomed eagerly, not merely by the publishers of newspapers, but by the public. The destruction of forests has gone so far in this country that the President called his conservation congress to devise means to put an end to it. The chief agency in the destruction is the pulp mill, because that utilizes soft wood and immature timber which might escape the ravages of the lumber men.

If another source of paper can be found the checking of forest destruction will be made very much easier. Also the turning of cornstalks into pulp would utilize a product which now goes to waste. Great quantities of stalks are burned in the corn belt yearly solely for the sake of getting rid of them. If the farmers could market their corn as at present and then sell their stalks profitably to the pulp mills, a considerable stimulus would be given to the growth of corn in the South and West. The checking of forest destruction would, however, be a more far reaching benefit than the added prosperity of the farmers, desirable as that may be.

AN OPEN LETTER

From W. J. Gage, Esq., Toronto

A Problem of National Importance

Dear Friend—
A bright young lawyer at the Muskoka Sanatorium for Consumptives some weeks ago, speaking of the burden placed upon him by having consumption, said:

"One has to lead a life of concealment. If I go away from this place people are afraid of me."
This is the sad lot of those who suffer from this dread disease.

On behalf of the thousands who are sick and will not be received by other hospitals, I make this appeal for the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives.

Nearly 10,000 people from every part of Canada aided in this good work last year, sending us $23,000.

The Trustees have faith that a still larger number will help. The Physician's offices, throat rooms, etc., up to the present have occupied rooms in the hospital that rightly belong to patients.

To make better provision for the work, and furnish more accommodation, a new administration building is now under way. A cottage for the Physician and his young wife had also to be built.

To provide for this outlay, and to care for patients for the coming year, we must secure at least $50,000.

The Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives never refused a patient because of his or her inability to pay. It cares for those whom other hospitals refuse. It cares for those whom other people are afraid of.

Will you have the luxury of giving?
Faithfully yours,
Toronto, 1907.

The Aroostook Farming System

(Maine Farmer.) Much is heard in all parts of New England and increasingly in other sections of the country of potato farming in northern Maine.

Strangers in Aroostook County are at first surprised and soon become considerably astonished at this universally followed system of exact and painstaking work given to all farming operations.

As we drove through these towns during the first days of September by far the larger number of farmers already had blocks of from twenty to forty acres carefully plowed for next season's crops.

Here, then, is the secret of farming without the aid of stock husbandry. The physical condition of the soil is secured and kept by means of the short rotation in conjunction with the splendid tillage constantly provided.

The point we would emphasize is not that farming without stock is to be preferred, but rather that stock is no longer essential to highly successful farming if the soil is studied as to its needs and characteristics and is then handled according to the best present knowledge and the plants are provided not alone with available plant food but with the requisite physical soil conditions which are even more essential than fertility.

A KINDLY MISFORTUNE. A young man who works in a Denver bank indorsed a cheque for $100 for a friend about two months ago.

SOMETHING WARM FOR CABBY. (London Chronicle.) As one of the lady suffragettes thrust her fare into the cab driver's hand she saw that he was wet and apparently a bit after the half hour of pouring rain.

A VIVID IMAGINATION. The following is a sample from a composition upon a shipwreck, written by a school boy whose prose should rank for realism with Byron's poem on the same subject.

How I would blanch if I heard my ship get a mortal wound in the side and hear the water roaring in and hissing onto the hot boilers while the steam came soaking up, smelling like your pants was being dried out in front of a hot stove."

Repeat it:—"Shiloh's Cure will always cure my coughs and colds."

YOU cannot buy flour as fine, white, pure and nutritious as Royal Household under any other name.

There is no other flour in Canada upon which half so much money is spent to insure perfect purity—just think for a moment what that means to the health of your household—how very important it is that your flour, above all things, should be absolutely pure.

Royal Household Flour

is the best—most wholesome—most carefully milled flour to be had in this country. The Ogilvie name and trademark are on every barrel and sack—a guarantee from the maker to the consumer. Tell your grocer you must have Royal Household.
