DIG INTO THEM.

The Niagara Falls Park commission, of which Robert Jaffray of The Globe was a member, agreed on the eve of the election in January, 1906, to increase the franchise of the Pellati-Cox power syndicate (Ontario Electrical Development Company) by 125,000 horsepower.

Thereupon The Globe (President Robert Jaffray) came out urging Mr. Whitney to "prompt consideration of its suggestion that the grant be made, but on better terms," and tried to rush Mr. Whitney.

Yesterday we reprinted its ingenious argument of that date. Is it not rather a reflection on Commissioner Jaffray that President Jaffray should urge on the Whitney government to close up "an agreement," "the concessions" of which President Jaffray in the same article declared were "too distant and intangible."

And Mr. Cox, the chief concessioner, was Mr. Jaffray's co-owner of The Globe.

If Mr. Whitney is wise he will investigate to the bottom the transaction by which the various power franchises at the Falls were made.

EDISON'S DREAM.

Most of us are little fellows seeing no farther than our own noses. When we think it is of something that intimately concerns ourselves. We know in a vague sort of way that there are other persons on earth, but they don't bear our name, so we aren't particularly interested. We accept the telegraph, the telephone, the trolley, the auto as a matter of course, but do not see in them indications of still greater inventions to add to the joys of the race.

It takes a Thomas A. Edison, saying: "We are groping on the verge of another great epoch in the world's history," to bring us out of ourselves to take serious note of what are only little fellows after all. Edison continues: "It would not surprise me any morning to wake up and learn that someone, or some group, of the three hundred thousand scientific men who are investigating all over the earth, has seized the secret of electricity by direct process, and begun another practical revolution of human affairs. One day it will be announced to the world that electric power can be produced directly from coal. When that discovery is made the steam engine and boiler will be driven out of use. It will then be possible to have air-ships. I expect to see air-ships flying before my death. Such a discovery will make it possible to drive ships across the sea by electricity at a rate of forty or fifty miles an hour—three days across the Atlantic from shore to shore."

Edison is 59, but his brain works to share in "the unspeakable wonders that science is about to reveal to man." Contemplating an immortal like Edison, we begin to get a concrete idea of our own insignificance, and an understanding that the mind makes the man. As a benefactor to the race, Edison is worthy of all emulation, tho his dreams may come true much later than he thinks.

ALCOHOLIC RESEARCH IN BRITAIN.

Interest in the use of alcohol as a great producer has now spread to Great Britain, where it is proposed to establish a Society for Alcoholic Research, with special reference to the influence likely to be exerted on agriculture and the motor industry. A summary of the situation recently issued in immense importance of the successful solution of the difficulties attending the use of alcohol as a motive power. It states that the present British government appears to be fully alive to this, and that public interest throughout the United Kingdom is rapidly increasing, and suggests that steps should be immediately taken to call a conference of land-owners, representatives of the agricultural industry, motor industry, distilling industry, chemical industry, of the board of agriculture, and other government departments more immediately concerned.

The objects designed to be attained by the society are the encouragement of research and experiment by offering prizes with a view to the discovery of an alcoholic fuel capable of being used with the present form of engine, also with a view to the invention of an engine and carburetor capable of being used with alcohol, as at present in use; promoting public trials and tests in connection with the subject, and arranging for the necessary prominence to be given to the subject at all agricultural, chemical, distilling and motor exhibitions throughout the kingdom; initiating an active plan of campaign throughout the kingdom by means of an itinerant lecturer and other means; the establishment of a bureau relative to the subject, and the formation of a library dealing with the question.

Such a society, it is urged, would probably place Britain in the front place in this matter. Mr. F. Forester, who is strongly promoting the society, says his point is, that if the subject is not ripe every effort should be made to hasten the solution of this question, rather than to shelve the consideration of it, as was recently done by the council of the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders. There is reason for the warning, and it is evident that in Canada also the advent of alcohol as a cheap motive power will not be altogether welcomed. But neither country can afford to lag behind and allow itself to be handicapped by the greater readiness of other countries to adapt themselves to new discoveries. Alcohol is found more universally than almost any other chemical constituent, and its excellence as a cheap and efficient fuel is too patent to be ignored.

A GREAT CANADIAN.

They are friends of Canada who have published the sermon of the late Archbishop O'Brien, delivered on the occasion of the funeral of Sir John Thompson, prime minister of Canada, Jan. 3, 1896. It is sent out from Halifax, N.S., in neat pamphlet form, and includes the eulogy of Sir Lewis Morris and the sympathetic speeches made by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. Mr. Foster in the house of commons.

As the sermon says, "A life such as that of Premier Thompson is to adorn the annals of a nation and to be an example and an instruction to future generations." By reading biographies we find inspiration for our own lives and guiding principles that will aid us in right living. Especially is this true for Canadians in the life of Sir John Thompson, who overcame tremendous obstacles to rise to the highest honor in the gift of his fellow-countrymen.

No better picture of the great man and the hope of all Britishers in the hour of his death can be penned than these lines by Sir Lewis Morris:

Dead at the crest, the crown, And blossom of his fortunes, this strong son Of our great realm sank down Beneath the load of Honors newly won.

May this career sublime, This honored ending of an honored life, Bear witness in the morning and after, In hearts drawn near, deep peace, averted strife!

The elegy from which these lines are taken, the speeches of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Hon. Mr. Foster, and above all, the exhorting sermon of Archbishop O'Brien, form a finished commentary on the career of a great Canadian, which should be read by every Canadian.

CHILD PROTECTION UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

The legislature of New York in 1890 enacted a section of the criminal code, providing that "no minor under 18 years of age, and no female shall be permitted or suffered to work in any factory before 6 o'clock in the morning and after 9 o'clock at night, or more than 10 hours in any one day, except to make a shorter workday on the last day of the week, or more than 80 hours in any one week, that will make up an average of 10 hours per day for the whole number of days so worked."

No one could imagine a more moderate exercise of the police power supposed to be inherent in every government. On moral, social and sanitary grounds, it is quite defensible. It probably passed without opposition, and it is doubtful if a single member of the legislature could have been found to advocate its repeal.

But the great corporations have another string to their bow in the United States. David L. Williams of the Williams Publishing Company, having been convicted under the act, took an appeal, and the reviewing court by a unanimous vote declared the law to be unconstitutional and void. The attorney-general had insisted that the right to limit the hours of labor of women and children in factories was clear, "because of the effect of such employment on them, because of their greater physical weakness, and the necessary and consequent effect upon the well-being of society," but the court discovered that the act "denied to women the equal protection of the laws," and that it de-

THE USURY OF LUXURY

AMAZING TRAIL OF HER MATE

P. H. McDonald Says Slayer Spends $150 a Day in Tips to Tombs Attendants.

Pittsburg, Aug. 6.—Paul H. McDonald, who occupied a cell in the Tombs on the same tier as Harry Thaw, says luxury such as few prisoners ever dreamed of is accorded to the slayer of Stanford White. A costly Smyrna rug covers the cell floor. Pictures and photographs adorn the walls. A heavy curtain hides him from the gaze of the curious visitors. Thaw spends $150 a day to be comfortable, McDonald says.

"It's wonderful the way he spends his money," said McDonald. "Once I saw him give an attendant the change from a hundred dollar bill after the cost of his breakfast had been deducted. He has his cheque book in the cell with him, and as soon as any body needs money Thaw will send out and have a cheque certified.

"One cheque I saw certified was for $5000. Several other fellows big burly have been certified and sent out by Harry. Usually his mother carries his cheques for him and Harry distributes the money in the same careless fashion he showed when at liberty.

"One of the keepers received a woman staidly valued at $1000 for his attention to Harry. I told you the pockets of others are bulging with tips Thaw has scattered. But none of the prisoners has come in for any bounty. They are opposed to Thaw's profanity and by a sort of tacit agreement they keep away from him.

"Clothes he has dozens and dozens pairs of shoes, three or four suits and a change of silk underwear and of pink pajamas daily. He has a manicuring set and various other toilet accessories denied to other prisoners.

Cell Door Locked. The slayers of war are tending and have practically all the barriers except the Tombs walls. His cell is locked, and when it is it is because Thaw does not care to be disturbed. The attendants run to answer his every call.

"Almost immediately after Harry Thaw's departure every day Evelyn Nesbit Thaw arrives, and after a cushioned chair has been placed for her at the cell door and the keeper has retired the couple's conversation begins.

"A queer conversation it is. In the main Thaw censures his wife for sins, either of omission or commission. Sometimes his language is shockingly vituperative. At other times he is all tenderness, and Mrs. Thaw goes with- in his cell, the curtain is drawn and the cares of the world are forgotten.

Slater Does Little Talking. "Then comes Mrs. William Thaw, mother of the prisoner, accompanied by her son, George, and a young woman, Carnegie, whose faces tell of sleepless nights. Exit Mrs. Thaw, the younger, with downcast eyes and trembling lips, and the talk of the afternoon is between the seniors Mrs. Thaw and her son, Mrs. Carnegie refraining from either of suggestions. Mrs. Thaw, with tears in her eyes, and after a while to take advantage of the insanity plea and assures him a life of ease in Massachusetts.

"The mere suggestion of that place, however, brings words of scorn and anger from the young millionaire, who, with tears in his eyes, and after a while, nothing shall be done in that line.

"To hell with it all!" he shouts. "I'd rather be dead than worried to death by people trying to make me believe I'm crazy."

"That usually ends the interview for the morning and the mother and daughter are left to their own devices. "That he will be acquitted Thaw has not the slightest doubt. If contrary opinions are expressed, he flies into a rage, and declares that if the verdict of the law, and a jury will free me."

Uses Terrible Language. "I tell you I'd rather be dead than have him turn his batteries of profanity against me. It is terrible to think of and a thousand times worse to hear."

"After the morning's visit, Evelyn Nesbit Thaw does not return, and his afternoon is devoted to consultation with his counsel. At 6 o'clock all prisoners are supposed to be locked up, but not so in Thaw's case. The door of his cell remains open, and he has the evening paper. Soon afterward comes his evening meal, consisting in the main of soup, meat of some sort, a delicious salad and ice, coffee and cheese.

"This is all served daintily on beautiful china and shining silver. The service is equal to that of any restaurant he is used to frequent."

Dr. A. H. Garratt Home. Dr. Alton H. Garratt and wife of 53 College-street returned yesterday from a two months' sojourn in England, Belgium, France and Switzerland. They had delightful weather for their holiday.

"One thing I noticed," observed the doctor, speaking with The World, "was the large number of Americans at all the continental resorts. There are more of them this year than I have ever seen before, and they are doing more to spread the English language than the English themselves. The Yankees are spending so much money that the tradesmen simply have to learn to speak English."

COWLE NOT TO BLAME

U. S. Inspectors' Finding in the Case of Sunken Erin.

Detroit, Aug. 6.—The United States inspectors of steam vessels find that no blame attaches to the steamer John B. Cowle, which sank the Canadian steamer Erin, with a loss of five lives, in the St. Clair River last spring.

The light fog and the fact that another steamer crowded up alongside the Erin forced the Cowle to the choice of a collision with one of the two upbound boats, and that it was believed to be a case of self-preservation was considered a vindication of the Cowle's crew.

The surviving members of the crew of the Erin denounced the officers of the Cowle very strongly at the time, claiming that the big boat went on at full speed, leaving the Erin helpless, but none of the Canadian boat's crew appeared at the investigation to testify.

Novelist Tells Story of Second-Hand Restaurant Bird. "I was dining last night at one of our best restaurants," writes Novelist Frank Richardson in The Fall Mail Gazette, "and on analyzing my quail, I found that it was only a scenario, that the skeleton existed, but the bulk of the bird had been made up with potted meat. My neighbor's quail, I noticed, lacked a leg. Now, what happens is this: During a long dinner, the chances are that one only cuts of the breast of the bird. The rest remains intact. The quail is then carefully collected, taken to the kitchen and reconstructed."

"Most of the best hotels and restaurants are run in connection with cheap resorts, and to them the quail reincarnated is sent. It may then, provided it has not been too seriously damaged by the diner, be sent on to the fifth, fourth, and even fifth restaurants."

Neither in London nor in Paris is it prudent, we imagine, to enquire too closely into the vicissitudes of fortune undergone by any dismembered bird or beast on a table, even tho the restaurant be one which is beyond suspicion of its food coming from Chicago. Curries, minces, salamis, fricassees, and viands in aspic are rarely made of fresh meat, and the wooden, varnished table of the meat in them is among the least of their disadvantages. They are quite out of fashion, it may be added (with the exception of the aspic) in most first-class restaurants.

Mr. Richardson's quail might, however, be a perfectly honest bird. To pick it up, from a quail, pound it up, replace it on the skeleton, and serve the bird in aspic is a common, if foolish, sort of cookery, utterly ruining the two or three delicious morsels of which a quail consists. Chickens are sometimes served in this fashion, and in the familiar "canton rouennaise" certain parts of the duck are pounded up into a sauce for the rest.

One likes, however, to be well acquainted with the restaurant where these dishes are presented. At a cheap table d'hote dinner in Soho or the Palais Royal they are best left alone.

TO AVOID CAPTURE.

The Lost Art to Be Taught to English Seamen. Lord Ellenborough has given notice of his intention to raise a curious point in the house of lords: "Will he take care not to weaken the naval element in the committee appointed to investigate the question of national indemnity in time of war by changing the naval member of it during the enquiry, as was done in the case of the royal commission on the supply of food and raw material in war time."

How little our merchant ships appear at our season by a short mercantile war course for the teaching of captives and owners of merchant ships the art of avoiding capture in time of war, so as to lessen the amount of the indemnities and losses that may become payable either by the government or by underwriters and others whenever

UNION TEAMSTERS MEET

Convention in Chicago Likely to be Strong. Chicago, Aug. 6.—Union teamsters from many cities in the United States and Canada gathered here today for the annual convention of the Brotherhood of Teamsters.

The political disturbances within the organization are expected to provide stormy meetings, and before the convention was called to order today there was a division of opinion as to whether the internal disputes should be fought out in the open meeting or behind closed doors. Cornelius P. Shea, the president, who seeks re-election, and Albert Young, aspirant for the office of president, both favor open meetings.

When the convention was called to order, addresses of welcome were made by Mayor Dunne, J. D. Pierce, organizer of the American Federation of Labor, representing Samuel Gompers and others.

ONCE A MILLIONAIRE

Edgar Brown Dies Penniless After Old Friends Refuse Help. Sault Ste. Marie Ont., Aug. 6.—Edgar Brown of this place, who died in a hospital at the Michigan Sea today, was once a millionaire, but was "trimmed" by the steel crowd and died penniless.

Brown located the famous Mesaba and Vermilion ranges and developed them until they were worth $13,000,000. He became entangled financially and was frozen out by John D. Rockefeller. In his last hours local physicians learned the story and notified a millionaire member of the steel group, whom Brown once nursed thru an almost fatal illness years ago. The millionaire wrote back that he had made large investments and was sorry he could not help his old friend. Local friends contributed enough for the funeral expenses.

BIGGEST BASS OF SEASON

Toronto Men Land Giant Bass in Georgian Bay Waters.

Arthur M. Cowie of the Dominion Bank and William V. Clark of the Temple & Pattison Co. shipped to Toronto yesterday from Honey Harbor one of the largest black bass ever caught in Georgian Bay. The fish weighed exactly 6 pounds 9 ounces. It was caught on a hook and line and fought desperately before the sportsmen were able to play it into position to land the monster into the boat. The fish will be photographed to-day and the photo put on exhibition in a prominent display window downtown.

Fishing at Honey Harbor at present is of the sort that Grover Cleveland years ago particularly enjoyed. Bass are hard and quite plentiful, but often the fishermen are disappointed when they draw their lines and discover that a pike, instead of a bass, is on the hook.
Nevertheless no grander fishing in the northern lakes was ever experienced than this season.

W. G. Fitzgerald, city claims agent, is also in camp at Honey Harbor, and reports catches almost equaling that mentioned above.

EXCEPTIONAL CAR SERVICE

Heavy Traffic Civic Holiday Well Handled By Street Railway.

No one had reason to complain of poor street car service Civic Holiday.
All day long the cars were worked to their capacity, but good judgment was exercised by the company, both in num-traffic was particularly heavy on King-street and the belt line. Traffic to the baseball grounds was also very heavy, but well taken care of.

During the exceptionally lush hours the corner of King and Yonge-streets seemed to be literally interlaced with cars. Pedestrians had to move unusually lively at this point, and the scene served to give an idea of what the normal traffic at these corners will be when the population of Toronto reaches a few hundred thousand more.

A Father's Protest.
Editor World: I wish to refute an article in your morning edition of Aug.

Pain and Agony
of Itching Piles.

If you are so unfortunate as to suffer from piles or hemorrhoids, this letter has for you a message of great value, for it tells of how quickly relief is obtained by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Thomas J. Waddell, Beaverton, Ont., writes: "For years I suffered indescribable pain and agony from itching piles, and tried many remedies, with little or no relief, and many times with increased pain. A friend advised the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and I can truthfully say it is superior to anything I ever used, bringing quick relief, without pain or offensive odor, and I can heartily recommend it as the best remedy on earth for itching piles. I write this letter with the object of helping other sufferers who have not been so fortunate as to meet with Dr. Chase's Ointment."

Dr. Chase's Ointment is the only positive and guaranteed cure for every form of piles. It usually brings relief after the first few applications, and with regular use makes a thorough cure of this torturing and obstinate ailment. 50 cents a box, at all dealers, or

6. about my son, Fred Boddy, being arrested on Saturday night, Aug. 4, '06.
This is an error of the officer on the beat where this affair happened, of whom my name and person was taken by a boy was feeding his horses at 6:15 o'clock and was not home till 7:06, which was 55 minutes after the affair happened. Now, Mr. Editor, this is the second time my son has been arrested this year for affairs of which he has not been a party. I think the officer must have eyesight, when my boy went with Rogers' father and mother to the station to get bail, and they did not know him, but when he went with Rogers' lunch a little later he was arrested. Hoping you will insert this answer to your article in your holiday edition of World. James M. Boddy, 28 Arnold-avenue, city.

E. W. Thomson, Old Savaria, Editor World: "I am the author of the stirring lines in Reply to Kipling" by a Canadian, appearing in to-day's Sunday World? You certainly achieved a "scoop" to secure this poem.
There is a lift and swing to it which disarms criticism, tho' doubtless, the author could readily put more finish on it, but just as it stands, certainly, is a trenchant reply to Kipling's verses.
It ought to be published in England."

Balm Beach.
The annual sports and games of the Balm Beach Club, land and aquatic, held on the grounds and lakefront, were thoroughly enjoyable. The attendance was a record one, and the sports of whatever nature were entered into with a zeal which ended the keenest competition. The private residences were lavishly decorated with bunting, while the Sach's and other large and wide homes presented a strikingly handsome appearance. The land sports were held on Beach-avenue and furnished two hours of good racket play. The officers for the day were: W. B. Orr, president; T. F. Hodgson, first vice-president; C. G. Ross, secretary; George Gale, treasurer. The starters were W. G. Lyon and W. R. Dr-ward, while D. Lauder and D. Edwards officiated as time-keepers. Tom Hodson, James Wallace and Dr. Carwell acted as judges.

The results in the land sports were:

NO VALETS FOR PREMIERS.
Neither Campbell-Bannerman Nor Baifour Uses One.

The valet is a disappearing type in England and wealthy men, except professional and theatrical, do not even doing without the services of a body-servant.

The present Liberal cabinet includes few men who employ valets, altho' one or two may be classed as "exquisites" and have a couple of men to attend to their personal appearance. In the present cabinet, however, which has now a great Liberal majority and a strong labor party, the proportion of members who have valets is naturally very low.

Premier Campbell-Bannerman does not employ a valet, and Arthur J.
Balfour, the late premier, also dispenses with the services of a person servant. His footman looks after his wardrobe, and when that functionary is absent, Mr. Balfour calls in the invaluable Jane, a retainer, who has been in the household for many years, to lay out his dress suit.

The decline of the "gentleman's gentleman" is a corollary of the decline of the French chef in aristocratic households, and a symptom of the economy that has become compulsory as a result of the South African war.

HECKLING FOOLGANS.
Comedy of an English Election Campaign.

The foolgans are providing all the fun of the public election. They took the form of the open-air "Pank" yesterday, from which the Liberals straggled to a meeting.

When the Liberal speakers arrived they found Pankhurst & Co. haranguing a great crowd, and were amused by their speeches that they refused to speak.
The Liberals started an opposition meeting in the public hall, and consequently the last had to be content with a very thin audience.

Some of the questions put to the foolgans are provocative of much mirth. Pankhurst was asked: "If ladies are returned to the house, will they support the abolition of the law enabling women to

Don't take a substitute. CARELESS PEOPLE. Editor World: It seems to me that there is a serious omission in the way we train up our young people, an omission not of recent date, however, for many of our older people who ought to know better offend just as flagrantly and unblushingly throwing their refuse onto the streets, instead of quietly retaining possession until a waste basket, or some receptacle more suitable than the street was found. We see men, who clothed in the garb of gentlemen, and who would be highly offended if it were hinted that they did not deserve the designation; we see them deliberately throw away on to a freshly-cleaned street the emptied cigar case, sometimes even the banana skin, or orange peel, and think no harm of it. We board a railway carriage or excursion steamer and find that the previous occupant has left the seat and environment like a hog-pen strewn with peanut shells, waste paper, bread crumbs and debris of various kinds. We go to our various parks both in the city and on the island, and we view all around the mute evidence that a savage orgie has been held. If you did not sprinkle cake, pa-
