MILITARY PARADE AT QUEBEC TODAY

Twenty Two Thousand Men
Took Part

Bluejackets Joined With the Militia in the Display — Comment on Yesterday's Reception.

QUEBEC, July 22.—Today was gala
day of the Tercentenary, and witnessed a series of important and imposing functions from early morning onwards. Twelve thousand troops and ten thousand sailors paraded on the Plains of Abraham at five o'clock and rehearsed the review orders and march past which will take place tomorrow (Friday). The military forces then marched from the Plains and proceeded through the main thoroughfares of the city with bands playing and colors flying.
The parade was witnessed by at least sixty thousand people.

Prior to the commencement of the ceremonial at Champlain's statue there was the arrival of the "Don De Dieu" with Champlain and his crew on board. As the little ship came full speed, sailed bravely up the river, she was greeted with round after round of cheering. Champlain landed and proceeded with his crew to "L'Anabition," the model of the first fort constructed by Champlain, proceeding then to join the historic procession.

After the conclusion of the speeches,
the historic procession filed past His Royal Highness, Grouped according to the routine of the pageant scenes, it was a stirring and brilliant spectacle. The 6th French Canadian Battalion, from Montreal, had the place of honor nearest Champlain's statue.
"Vice-President Fairbanks, speaking today, said that he was delighted with his reception. The ceremonial covering the arrival of the Prince is declared to be magnificent and the general spectacular display most brilliant. He said that the cordiality of his welcome far exceeded his expectations.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier is reported to have declared yesterday's ceremony at the reception of the Prince "the most delightful we have ever had in Canada."

The name of the soldier who was drowned in the St. Charles River at Savary's Camp, yesterday, was
St. John. He was a private in the 9th Regiment of Winnipeg, and was only 22 years old. A comrade was told that he failed to leave his body, which was however, recovered later.

GIRL AND WAD OF MONEY DISAPPEAR TOGETHER

Chatham Citizen Mourns Loss of an Adopted Daughter and $140
in Cash.

CHATHAM, N. B., July 22.—Florence
McGrath, a sixteen year old girl, disappeared last night from Oscar Druet's house on Duke street, taking with her $140 in cash and a large bundle of clothing. She was not missed until morning when Mrs. Druet sent to call her. Getting no response he went into her room and found a note on her bed telling them that she had gone away and not to look for her. The police were informed river boats were searched and a shanty boat was found about four miles from Chatham. She has relatives in town but her parents are dead. Mr. Druet believes that influence was brought upon her by outside parties and the police have knowledge of accomplices to her midnight escape. Florence is a dark complexion girl rather stout but possessing good looks.

The wedding of Fred M. Tweedie, eldest son of Governor Tweedie, and Mrs. Frances A. Ritchie daughter of George Watt, took place yesterday afternoon on the lawn of S. T. Hubbaley's home. Only relatives were at the ceremony which was a quite assuredly conducted by Rev. George Wood.
Mr. and Mrs. Tweedie went north on the Ocean Limited.

SPINNERS SAY SLIDING SCALE IS A FAILURE

FALL RIVER, Mass., July 22.—The Spinners' Union of this city, at a meeting last night, voted to withdraw from the sliding scale agreement between the Textile Council and the Manufacturers' Association, regarding the wages of the operatives. The following resolution was passed:
Resolved, That the sliding scale agreement with the Manufacturers' Association has proven to be a failure,
as far as the workers are concerned,
and that the Spinners' Association gives the necessary three months' notice to withdraw.

HONOLULU, July 22.—The United States Atlantic battleship fleet, which left here last night and started for Auckland, New Zealand, its next stopping place on the trip back to the Atlantic. The fleet was scheduled to sail some delay and it was 6.15 as it appeared from shore, before the flagship began moving. It is thought the delay was due to the waiting for the hospital ship Relief, which left the harbor
at 6 p. m.

BOSTON POLICE SHOOT TWO AND CAPTURE ANOTHER OF THE MURDERERS

One Nabbed in South Station---Exciting Chase Over Graves Which Ended in the Death of Another of the Gang---The Third, Wounded, Has Not Yet Been Located.

BOSTON, July 22.—After three deadly battles between three desperadoes and the police and citizens, one of the bandits was killed, one was wounded and today, while a second believed to be wounded, is being searched for in the cemetery in which the fight occurred. A third was taken last evening in the South Station. All three were members of the band that has been terrorizing the Jamaica Plains district.

The band left behind it over its trail of a mile and a half three dead and eleven wounded and was composed of the most desperate characters that have appeared in the streets of Boston for several years. All are believed to be foreigners.

The number of dead and injured during the two days of terrorization by the bandits follows:
Dead—Unknown bandit; Frank J.
Drake, 22 Byron St.; Herbert Knox,
watchman, Forest Hill Cemetery.

Wounded—Patrick Doren, condition
serious; Thomas Moore, conductor; Patrolman McMahon, Mrs. Della Fallon, D. N. Fleming, Patrolman Inglis, Mrs.
Edna J. Carr, Patrick McGlynn, John
Nolan, Patrolman Thompson, Thomas Winterston.

Drake and Dora were shot in the saloon on Tuesday night while the others received their wounds last night
or this morning.

The desperado captured at the South Station last night was about to take a train for New York. His name is believed to be Giuseppe Devolco, and he is charged with murder, having been identified by four men, as one of the three who "shot up" the saloon
Tuesday night.

Still another man was taken into custody whom the officers thought might be another member of the gang. He was believed to be Hugh McDougall, a former elevated road employee.

The desperado's career of terror
began Tuesday night by the "shooting up" of the saloon of Winterston and McMahon on Washington street, Jamaica Plain. Shortly before the closing hour three men apparently Italians, made their appearance at the door and shouted, "All hands up!" When the shooting was over, it was found that Frank J. Drake had been killed. Patrick Doren had received a bullet in the abdomen and Thomas Winterston had been shot at the base of the skull and the left arm.

The police made a careful search all night long without result. Early yesterday morning two of the men made their appearance at a house on Bourne street and at the point of a revolver demanded that they be given food.

Later they were seen in Calvary cemtery, but eluded the efforts of the officers. Throughout the rest of the day
there was no report of any one having seen the desperadoes, but at 7 o'clock last night they were discovered perched on the roof of a building.

When the desperadoes found that they were so closely pursued they drew their revolvers and with a yell began firing on all sides. The first person hit was Mrs.
Della Fallon, who was walking down South street. Officer Inglis then received a bullet in the leg. The men passed through Cunningham Field, Lee street, and on to New Keros street, down which they ran directly into Washington street.

On Washington street, where the electric cars are passing, the desperadoes were seen passing almost incessantly and hundreds of people were standing about the corner and the two men yelled at the top of their voices and fired shot after shot from their automatic revolvers. They commanded everybody to hold up their hands and even ordered the motorman of an approaching car to stop. The motorman dropped behind the body
board and the conductor, Thomas Moore, when stepping off the car to see what was the trouble received a bullet in the leg. Five others were also shot.

The men then reloaded their revolvers and walked on to Forest Hills cemetery.

Herbert E. Knox, the watchman, who was seen on the lookout for the men, believed he saw one answering their description and after securing a revolver started to look for him. He found him unexpectedly and before he was able to use his weapon, was shot down with a bullet through the body.

The desperado then fled to the Emerson Hospital nearby, where he died three hours later.

From this time on until daybreak little effort was made by the officers to seek out the desperadoes as the cemetery was so carefully guarded that it was believed impossible for the men to get outside and orders were given to all patrolmen to advance toward the centre of the cemetery at four o'clock.

Scarcely a quarter of an hour after the forces began the advance, the figure of a wild, unkempt man sprang up in front of the officers at the south side of the cemetery and started off on the run. The man was barefooted, a broken derby covering his head, a torn and ragged coat on his back and in one hand he carried a heavy revolver, while from the other dangled a reel of cartridges.

For more than a mile across the cemtery, the man raced over graves and shrubbery, through puddles and over mounds, an ever increasing mob of police following slowly but steady-ly in his wake. All at once he disappeared in a ravine somewhat deeper than the others, not 200 yards from the main entrance to the cemetery. But one bit of shrubbery marked the lower level of the ravine, and into this the man sprang. In a second the sides of the ravine were lined many deep with the bluecoats, who poured shot after shot into the bushes. Then inspectors carefully approached the bush, and pulling the leaves found the victim of a hundred officers' bullets dead on the ground.

Almost at the same time another commotion was created on the opposite side of the main gate, within the cemetery, and a man who had refused to throw up his hands had been seized, disarmed and hurriedly rushed to the main gate in charge of an escort of officers. Both the dead man and the captive were taken to the Jamaica Plains station.

Some doubt arising, however, as to the identity of the captured man, the hundred officers remaining were again marched into the cemetery to continue the search, tracing large splashes of blood in the cemetery in the hope of locating the third bandit.

KERR IS WINNER IN 200 METRE RACE

United States Men Got Second
and Third

Fine Weather and Low Prices Draw Big Crowds to the Olympic Sports
—Other Events Today.

LONDON, July 22.—As the Olympic games draw toward a close interest in them increases and fine weather, although late in arriving, is now smiling
upon the great international contests for athletic supremacy, and with the assistance of cheaper seats, is bringing out crowds of spectators to the stadium.

Yesterday was the meeting what Derby Day is to Epsom Racing Week,
the final of the 100 metres sprint in the eyes of the general public being considered the most important event of the meeting. Those who follow athletics, however, are just as keenly interested in the finals of the two races which are to be run off today. The first of these is the 200 metres flat, in which Kerr, of Canada, runs against Cartmell and Cloughen, United States, and Cawkins, United Kingdom. The Americans have feared Kerr more than the Englishmen. After two grilling runs yesterday, he may be slightly tired. The other final on which the eyes of the experts are turned is the 400 metres flat race in which Carpenter, Taylor and Robbins, United States, meet Haswell, a Lieutenant in the British Army and described as the greatest quarter miler the United Kingdom has had in recent years. English sporting writers intimate at the probable establishment of a new record for the distance.

The standing high jump, with which the programme opened this morning,
it expected to last the greater part of the day. The semi-final of the high diving contest and the semi-final of the 100 metres swim are on the programme for today and also the fourteen bouts of the 110 metres hurdle.

The Gracoe-Roman wrestling, light weights to 147 pounds and the catch-as-catch-can matches between heavy weights up to 161 pounds, going on the mats at either end of the arena, kept the adherents to that form of sport entranced all day long. The only American entered in these events was Lee J. Talbot, and he was defeated in the first bout at catch-as-catch-can by O'Kelly, United Kingdom. The tribute the Americans at the stadium paid to Walker yesterday, when the young South African won the 100 metres, appears to have appealed strongly to English sportsmanship, and is likely to do much to dispel the soreness caused by the American protests earlier in the games which was much discussed.

Most of the morning papers describe the demonstration in complimentary terms. The Standard says: "The Americans took a leading part in the ovation given Walker. They showered congratulations upon him and the young men who were massed in the grandstand carrying the flag of their country, went out of their way to praise
their conqueror."

The first section of the standing high jump at the stadium this morning, Tascliaras, Greece, won with a jump
of 5 feet 1 inch. Adams, United States, was second, with 4 feet 10 inches, Dupont, Belgium, third, 4 feet 8 inches.

In this event the best eight in all sections come together in the final.
In the second section of the standing high jump, Ray S. Evers, N. Y. A. C., cleared 5 feet 1 inch and J. A. Biller, Brooklyn Central Y. M. C. A., four feet 11 inches.

The final in the 200 metre was won by Kerr Canada. Cloughen Irish American A. C. was second, and C. J.
Cartmell, University of Penna., was third. The time was 22 2-5 seconds.

The third heat of the 110 metre hurdle was won by Cloughen, United Kingdom. Time, 16 2-5 seconds.
Fourth heat, Killy United Kingdom,
won easily. Fifth heat, W. M. Raine, Harvard University, won, time 15 4-5 seconds. Sixth heat, Walter, United Kingdom, won. Time, 17 2-5 seconds.
Seventh heat, Knydet, United Kingdom, won easily.

FIGHT CALLED OFF

SALT LAKE CITY, N. J., July 22.—
The Gans and Nelson fight scheduled for Labor Day at Ely, Nev., was called off by the promoter, who says that he was unable to make satisfactory
arrangements with the railroads.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, July 22.—
Percy Lawrence broke the world's two mile lap amateur record at Salt Lake bicycle track last night. He rode it in 3:34.5. Giles made the previous record of 3:51.

CURRAGH, July 22.—Richard Cro-ker's filly, Queen of Peace, yesterday
won the Irish Oaks at the Curragh meeting, beating the favorite, A. P.
Ladies American Girl.

STUTTGART, East Prussia, July 22.—The German car in the New York to Paris motor race crossed the frontier at 4:22 last evening. The American car, which left Moscow at 3 o'clock yesterday morning, is about 500 miles behind the Germans. The latter made 420 miles yesterday.

The immense Western crops are ripening fast, and thousands of laborers will be required on the spot in a few days. Over two thousand miles of travel for only $12.00. Think of it. Watch the papers for further announcements.

The Board of Health authorities are not yet through with their prosecutions against persons who will not conform to the rules of the board. Although many persons, who have neglected to clean their premises have been fined, others will appear before the magistrate shortly to give their reasons for not doing so. Four milk vendors, who have neglected to give the daily cleaning to their cans, will also be heard with the others. This is only the first list of vendors and more prosecutions will follow at intervals.
The maximum penalty of Board of Health convictions is $40.

Captain John E. Porter informed a reporter for The Sun last evening that several persons in the North End were procuring goods of different material from merchants by giving his name. Mr. Porter said that no person had any authority to use his name and secure goods on credit. He desires that the merchants will take notice and try to apprehend the guilty parties. The captain had to pay a bill from a prominent North End tailor, also one from a shoe store. The way the game was worked is an old one. A person at the telephone, claiming to be Capt. Porter, asks that certain goods be sent to a messenger, whom he would send. This trick has been worked time and again. Captain Porter cannot see, however, why any person would desire to do such a mean thing on him.

A telephone message last evening from Beaver Harbor stated that Captain N. W. Ogilvie of the schooner Helen M. of Parroboro, saw a dead body at Beaver Harbor Lake yesterday morning. He reported the matter to Captain Charles Traynor of the schooner Helen, who with Emory and Bert Paul set out to find the body. After searching for some time they came across it floating out of Beaver Harbor Lake. Examination revealed that the body was that of a man, supposedly a sailor. He was between 35 and 40 years of age, and weighed about 160 pounds. His height was 5 feet 9 inches.
The body was somewhat decomposed. The man wore black shoes with elastic sides. He had on a black cap and a black leather belt around the body. A coroner's inquest will be conducted this morning by C. B. Alexander, M. D.

The religious given by Sydney Buckley and D. Arnold Fox of St. John in St. Paul's church school room Tuesday evening was a great success, and was generously attended. Entertainments such as this might often be given at Rothery and well patronized if there was a suitable hall in the place. It seems strange that a place like Rothery, with so little a permanent population, to say nothing of the hundreds who make it their home in summer, should be without a place where a public speaker can address an audience of decent size. This was the topic of discussion among a number of gentlemen yesterday morning upon the Sussex train, and it would not be surprising if, as a result of Tuesday night's entertainment, some move is made to obtain the views of the residents respecting the erection of a public hall, suited to the needs of the place.

RELIGIOUS FANATICS NOW UNDER ARREST

WINNIPEG, Man., July 22.—It is reported here today that Inspector Jung of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police has arrested James Sharpe and his band of religious fanatics. The Adamites, or dreamers, passed into Saskatchewan at noon today, entering the province some miles north of this point. At 11 o'clock the band reached the boundary and as soon as they left

THIS FAMILY FEUD ENDS IN BLOODSHED

Lively Fight Between the Donalds and Moores at New Jerusalem

MOORES VICTORIOUS

A lively combat took place a few days ago at New Jerusalem, Queens Co., between the Moores and the Donalds. The fight grew out of a dispute over the ownership of a farm formerly owned by David C. Moore.

While Amos Moore and his two sons, Charles and Walter, were cutting the hay on the place, they noticed approaching across the field, a warlike band composed of William, John and Charles Donald and Hasen Crozier. Though the sight was somewhat awe-inspiring, the Moores held their ground. The new comers ordered the Moores to leave the property immediately and save bloodshed.

The Moores were not disposed to yield and the battle started. Amos Moore, who is about 70 years old, hung his scythe on the fence and sending an appeal to Crozier to face him, knocked him down. The Donalds armed themselves with clubs and started to do things up in earnest. Walter Moore, a young lad of about 16 years old, seized William Donald and hurled him to the earth. While he was down, Charles Donald struck him a severe blow on the head. Charlie Moore, who had up to this point taken no part, now took a hand. The fight lasted for some time, the Donalds in the end being victorious. Bare-headed they followed the Moores. Under a flag of truce the Donalds were allowed to return and the fight ended. The Donalds have not been seen in the neighborhood of the farm since they evidently believe that discretion "is the better part of valor."

LODGE CELEBRATES 64TH ANNIVERSARY

Members of True Blue Lodge, L.O.A., and Their Friends Enjoy Evening

The True Blue Lodge, Number 11, L. O. A., celebrated their sixty-fourth anniversary last evening in their hall, Guilford street, West End. A large number were present considering the state of the weather. Worshipful Master J. King presided. Deputy Master J. B. M. Baxter, and District Master E. S. Hennigar. True Blue Lodge, No. 11, was organized May 21, 1844, with the following officers: W. H. Neudham, Worshipful Master; Jos. Coram, Deputy Master; J. M. Master, B. W. Seely, Treasurer; John Coram, Asst. Treasurer; J. Duke, Secretary; W. Wheaton, Chaplain; J. Coram, J. Tyler.

For a number of years they met in the old hall at the corner of King and York streets. In 1884, when they went to the old Temperance Hall on Market Place, which is still standing, they were told that the old hall was a hall that any order might well be proud of.

After the opening remarks by the chairman, speeches were delivered by Ald. Baxter, Ald. Kelley and Mr. Hennigar. There were violin and vocal solos by Charles Smith and Thomas Smith respectively, both of which were enjoyed.

The Worshipful Master in a few well chosen remarks gave a short history of the lodge and the principles which it stood for. He stated that financially and numerically the lodge was strong. Large numbers were being added every evening. He also spoke of the sick benefit and insurance department in connection with the lodge and stated that True Blue and one hundred and forty-one were the only two lodges in the city which had these benefits. One-hundred and one was organized on July 22, 1888. On the conclusion of the programme refreshments were served.

The officers for this year are: Renwick J. Anderson, W. M.; William Snod, D. M.; Geo. Kirkpatrick, Treas.; I. McLeod, F. S.; E. McLeod, Chaplain; C. Sweet, D. of C.; T. Ferguson, Lecturer; J. Howard and D. Thomas, Tyler.

Manitoba Provincial Constable Ross of Verdun desired the band and communicated the information to Chief Elliott. Inspector Jung, who was waiting them on the other side of the line, arrested them immediately they reached the Saskatchewan territory. No report of violence has been received.

FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

A start was made last evening at a meeting of representatives of the Inter-Society and St. John Baseball Leagues towards arranging the series of games for the city championship between the St. Peter's and Marshalls.

D. B. Donald and H. K. Clawson looked after the interests of the Marshalls, while Captain Frank Dever and Manager E. J. Mahoney represented the North End. G. S. DeForest was unanimously chosen as chairman and will preside at a meeting to take place on Monday evening.

It was decided to open the series of games on Saturday afternoon, August 10.

The double umpire system was also discussed and it is altogether probable that Umpires McDermott and McAllister will operate the system at the championship games.

The representatives spent some time in talking over the grounds on which the games will be played. This part, however, will not be decided until Monday's meeting.

An agreement as to the disbursement of the gate receipts was drawn up and approved by both representatives. Each team will present a line-up of twelve men who have played in the respective teams.

A committee consisting of D. B. Donald and E. J. Mahoney was appointed to arrange the matter of advertising the games.

The championship series will consist of five games. The winners of the series will be the undisputed champions of the city and will also own the handsome trophy presented by R. D. Isaacs for competition.

The game in the Inter-Society League last evening was postponed on account of wet grounds. This evening another game will be played and matches will be run off every evening during the week.

At seven o'clock last evening fire broke out in the top floor of the building owned by D. R. Jack, at 15 Charlotte street. The fire was caused by a gas lamp which had been left burning. The building is occupied on the ground floor by the American Clothing House and on the second floor by Leonard has rooms on the second floor. Shortly after the fire was discovered the department arrived in the building. It was discovered later, however, in the dark room on the top floor and also in the storeroom on the second floor.

How the fire originated is a mystery, but it is thought to have been of incendiary origin, owing to there being two rooms widely separated from one another, where fire was found.

THIS WOMAN SAYS SHE WAS SAVED FROM AN OPERATION BY LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND.
Mrs. Frank Kusky, Lindsay, Ontario, writes to Mrs. Pinkham: "When I wrote to you some time ago, I was a very sick woman suffering from female troubles. I had inflammation of the feminine organs and could not stand or walk any distance. At last I was confined to my bed and the doctor said I would have to go through an operation, but this I refused to do. A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After using three bottles of it, I feel like a new woman. I most heartily recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all women who suffer with female troubles."

The former won by 31 in a constituency that is Conservative by easily one thousand majority. Today Buell, it further alleges that the deputy returning officer on election day opened a ballot box to ascertain how the voters had voted. The case promises to be sensational, as prominent Conservatives are implicated.

Replying to an item in one of Tuesday evening's papers which stated that residents of Lancaster Heights were getting no water and that the water pipe running to Partridge Island leaked and caused the shortage, a citizen says that if any person would go down under the trestle on Union street, W. E., which the cars run over they would see that the shortage is caused by the pipes that supply the dredge. The waste there averages about 1,000 gallons daily.

C. P. R. MAY HAVE STRIKE

MONTREAL, July 22.—It is stated in railway circles that a general strike of the employees of the mechanical department of the C. P. The great majority of the men would be well satisfied with the ruling of the board, they declared, though a few sore heads might still be anxious for trouble. It was rumored in financial circles here yesterday that the Dominion Steel and Coal Company had closed down two of their blast furnaces in Sydney, but no confirmation of the report was obtainable. 22-7-11

WHOLESALE SLAUGHTER BY BOSTON DESPERADOES

BOSTON, July 22.—While the police were chasing two men who are believed to have been members of the gang which robbed a saloon in Jamaica Plain and killed one man and wounded two others last night, a woman was shot and killed and four policemen badly wounded. One of them died later. The woman was standing in a doorway near St. Thomas' church at the corner of Keyes and Centre streets when the fugitives, pursued by the police, came running down the street firing wildly. The robbers escaped.

Three more persons became the victims of the desperadoes' bullets in the neighborhood of Franklin Park. Herbert E. Knox, 42 years old, of 478 Canterbury street, Roslindale, night watchman of the Forest Hills cemetery, was shot in the abdomen; Edward McMahon, 31 years old, a patrolman of Station 3, living at 15 Pearl street, Dorchester, also received a bullet in the abdomen; and Patrolman Thompson of Station 13, was shot in the head. The three men were taken to Emerson Hospital, and it is feared that they will not recover.

As soon as the fugitives entered Franklin Park, a cordon of police heavily armed with rifles and revolvers was thrown about the park and thousands of citizens gathered there. According to a small boy who saw the two men re-loading their weapons in a sand pit near the park early in the evening, each man carried three revolvers.

Herbert E. Knox, the night watchman of the Forest Hills Cemetery, who was shot in the abdomen by one of the desperadoes, died at the Emerson Hospital late tonight.

The condition of Patrolman McMahon and Mrs. Fallon, two other victims, was very critical shortly before midnight and it was feared that they could not live through the night.

Driven from their hiding place by hunger or fear they would be surrounded by the police who were searching the neighborhood, the two men appeared on Charles street in Jamaica Plain at about dusk, coming from the direction of Cunningham Field. Some citizens who had been assisting in the hunt for the robbers saw the men and tried to intercept them, whereupon the two started to run and, with a revolver in each hand, fled along Charles, South, Lee and Keyes streets, firing madly and indiscriminately. Mrs. Fallon was the first mark of the murderous weapons. Officer Ingalls was shot next, and then Messrs. Moore, Flynn, McGinn, Nolan, Fleming and Officer Fox received bullets in succession. John H. Wrightman of 54 Keyes street was also shot at, but the bullet did not hit him, although it passed through his trousers leg.

Michael Flynn stopped to pick up a stone as he saw the fugitives coming toward him, and instantly one of the men fired at him. One bullet grazed his ear and the side of his head and others knocked his hat off. Conductor Moore stepped from a street on Washington street to go to his house just as the highwaymen appeared there, and he immediately became a mark for a bullet. He was wounded in the leg.

From Keyes street the robbers crossed Forest Hill street and entered Franklin Park. At that point Police Officer Cox tried to intercept them but was also shot down. By this time darkness had fallen and the men were lost to view in an unfrequented part of the park. Their course through the crowded Jamaica Plain district was fully two miles in length, and though they left a trail of wounded scattered along their path they were themselves apparently unharmed by the bullets from the police revolvers.

The police surrounded Forest Hills cemetery after learning that the fugitives had escaped from Franklin Park. Late tonight 20 officers under the direction of Superintendent Pierce were strung around the cemetery, while a hundred more, aided by calcium searchlights, furnished by the fire department, explored the inside of the cemetery. The officers were confident that they had the men surrounded there and that their capture would soon be effected.

WOMAN ARRESTED FOR TEARING DOWN FLAG

G.A.R. Post Accuses Her and Husband of Desecrating U. S. Emblem

WEST CHESTER, Pa., July 22.—At the instance of the members of McCall Post, G. A. R., of this place, a warrant was issued this afternoon on Mrs. Mary Hayes and her husband, C. R. J. Hayes, charging them with tearing down United States flags on the morning of July 5 at the residence of Gilbert E. Stubbie, who lives next door to the defendants and in a house owned by Dr. Thos. Warrant was served by Constable James E. McParlane, commander of the post taking cognizance of the alleged desecration. A hearing will be held next Wednesday. Mrs. Hayes, it is said, asserts she took down the flags in the presence of the Stubbies, because they were presenting an unsightly appearance on Sunday morning, July 5.

Mrs. and Mr. Hayes are owners of several houses here and are engaged in the business of paper hanging. They have been married about twelve years, and both have at the home the greater part of their lives. They are members of Episcopal church of the Holy Trinity. Mrs. Hayes was a school teacher before her marriage.

RAG-TIME SALVATION NOT LASTING, HE SAYS

Vanderbilt University Teacher
Condemns Present-Day Church Hymns

CHAUTAUQUA, N. Y., July 22.—C. C. Washburn, director of music at Vanderbilt University, in an address here today on "The Relation of the Church to Music as an Art," held up church music to the most severe criticism, and condemned "two-by-four tunes" as poor church props, "which ought to be relegated to the attic."

Traveling evangelists who sell their own hymnals at camp meetings were condemned as "out for the cash," and Sunday school music was declared to be far behind the public schools in developing the finer appreciations of children.

"If Sunday schools were up to date," said Mr. Washburn, "they would at least keep pace with the development of music as it is taught in the public schools. Moreover, I don't believe the results are permanent when persons get salvation by listening to psalms sung by popular rag-time music. Church music needs to be re-nated."

It was rumored in financial circles here yesterday that the Dominion Steel and Coal Company had closed down two of their blast furnaces in Sydney, but no confirmation of the report was obtainable. 22-7-11

YOUNGEST SON OF THE FAMILY.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman was the youngest son of the family and the one that distinguished Coleman and Washington Irving were the youngest of eleven children. Benjamin Franklin, the last boy, was the youngest. John Christian, the eleventh and youngest of Johann Sebastian Bach's children, was also the youngest of them; Wagner, Mozart and Rubens were each the last of seven, as was also Daniel Webster. Reinhardt was the baby in a family of six, Schumann in one of five, George Eliot in one of four and Charles Lamb the youngest of three. The full list of famous youngest sons is a formidable one. 22-7-11

AN IDOL SHATTERED.

The Toronto Globe, one of the most moderate newspapers in Canada, and one which always displays marked consideration and regard for its worthy political opponents, has lost confidence in Mr. R. L. Borden. The Globe has consistently bestowed upon Mr. Borden that measure of respect to which, as leader of the opposition in Parliament, he has been entitled. He has been believed worthy of that esteem and even the most injudicious attacks have been but mildly criticized by the Globe, because of the feeling that a course somewhat similar to what he has pursued may be viewed as a safe one and to be expected from the leader of the opposition party. But the Globe finds now that Mr. Borden has not been worthy of the confidence reposed in him. In a lengthy editorial article the debate in the Commons of Friday evening of last week is reviewed. The subject under discussion was Canada's financial standing as it is viewed in Britain. Mr. Borden, in the course of his address, referred, at five or six different times, to an article in the London Economist, recognized as the greatest financial journal of the Empire. He read extracts from this article, introducing them repeatedly as the opinion expressed by the editor of the Economist. The Globe refers to this and expresses the belief, which certainly is supported by facts, that Mr. Borden intended Parliament to believe, and intended the people of Canada to believe, that the paragraph which he was reading contained the opinion of the editor of the Economist, thus representing the ideas of the leading financiers of England. When challenged by a member of the Government, Mr. Borden admitted that the extracts read by him were not editorial opinions, but were merely paragraphs from an article by the Ottawa correspondent of the Economist, a writer, who, it was afterwards alleged, receives a regular salary from the Canadian Pacific Railway. And opinions expressed by this or any other correspondent are certainly not the opinions of the paper publishing them. Such articles are given to the public for what they are worth. The opinion of the paper editorially expressed is a very different matter. Mr. Borden knew this perfectly well, and the Globe charges him with a deliberate attempt to deceive his fellow legislators and the people of Canada. The Globe makes no violent attack on the leader of the opposition, but expresses regret that he has permitted himself to fall to such an act, and that he has shown himself to be not wholly worthy of the confidence placed in him. Such a course, it is suggested, may have been due to the influence of Mr. Foster and the Globe is sorry to see that Mr. Borden is gradually losing his grasp on the leadership of the opposition and sinking to the level of Mr. Foster, who is succeeding him as head of the Conservative party.

TO PREVENT STRIKES.

The New Zealand legislature which in past years has had troubles of its own, is now struggling with an amendment to the Industrial Conciliation and Arbitration Act. It is intended to do away with strikes. The bill provides that every worker who is a party to a strike is liable to a fine of £10, and also of £1 for every week the strike continues. The penalty for lock-outs is £200 for each offence, and £50 weekly during the continuance of the lock-out. Every individual who incites, aids, or abets strikes or lock-outs, or assists any person to become a party to them, is liable to a fine of £10. If it be an industrial union, trade union, employer, or any person other than a worker, the penalty will be £200. The section of the Amendment Act of 1906, which enabled strikers to be imprisoned in the last resort, is repealed. Workers in industries the stoppage of which would affect dangerously the health or safety of the public, or cause injury to, or the destruction of, the property of employers, who strike without having given at least twenty-one days' notice in writing, are liable to a fine of £10 or three months' imprisonment. Any union convicted of aiding, inciting, or instigating a strike by any of its members is to have its registration suspended for any period not exceeding three years. The penalty for a breach of award is £100 in the case of a union, association, or employer, and £10 in the case of a worker. A Conciliation Council is created, to consist of one magistrate and two assessors. The latter must be appointed by both parties to the dispute, and must be actually bona-fide workers or employers of the industry in respect of which the dispute has arisen.

WOLFE AND MONTCALM.

(The Plains of Abraham, 1759.)
They die forever dear to me
The very brothers of my soul,
Two foemen brave as brave could be—
The first on either battle roll.

On the high Plains—In Morning's eye,
Each fell in onset, or defence;
Each held back death while the cry
"They run!" aroused his fading sense.

Each held back death to ask "Who runs?"
And unto each his death was sweet:
To this, because his flag had won;
To that, because of sheer defeat.

Immortal each in word and deed—
Not yet can I their story read
Not yet can I their story read
On every hateful army's roll:
Shame, shame, on causes all that slay
Through War the brothers of my soul!

"Why should I?" demanded tired Tiffins.
"I ain't got no constituents to kick about my inactivity."

Patience.—Don't you think that a merciful man is merciful to his dog?
Patience.—Yes, I do. Why papa, always puts the dog out of the room when he starts the phonograph.

Little Willie.—People talk of the "milk" in the coconut.
Mr. Clitman.—Well?
Little Willie.—Why do they say "milk"? It doesn't look like anything but water.

Mr. Clitman.—Well?
"My good man, why don't you do something?"
"I ain't got no constituents to kick about my inactivity."

Elderly Bore.—Your face awakes a memory. When I look at you my thoughts are taken far, far away!
She.—How I long to follow him!

Martin Littleton of the New York delegation is one of a family of nineteen children, so they say, born to a heritage of poverty and pluck. When he was a small lad down in Texas he fell into the creek one day and Michael, the next younger brother, ran whistling to Lyttleton, the teacher, and said: "Dad! Martin is drowning!"
"Martin! Martin!" repeated the father of the nineteen. Then he turned dubiously to his wife and said: "Norm, he inquired anxiously, 'have we a Martin?'"

METHODIST CHURCH IN OPEN REVOLT

Refused to Accept Pastor Assigned Them and Ask Leave to Withdraw from Methodist Community.

AMHERSTBURG, Ont., July 23.—The Methodist church here is in open revolt against the constituted authorities of the denomination and are daily refusing to receive Rev. Redmond, the pastor recently assigned to them by the appointive powers of the London Conference. Mr. Redmond preached last Sunday for the first time in Amherstburg but the official members have locked him out of the parsonage and he is forced to sleep at the Amherst Hotel, because no one appears to be possessed of sufficient Christian Charity to give him entertainment. Those who have bitterly opposed to Mr. Redmond's incumbency admit that they have no personal feeling against him, nevertheless they then accept his leadership for twelve months they intend actually to ask the conference president to allow their withdrawal from the Methodist Communion for one year that they may call a man of their own selection.

65,000 ELEPHANTS KILLED IN AFRICA LAST YEAR

(Frank G. Carpenter.)
Sixty-five thousand elephants were killed in Africa last year, and more than a million and a half pounds of ivory were taken from them and shipped out to Europe. Of this tally one-third came from Zanzibar, another third was from Portuguese East and West Africa, and a large part of the balance was from the Valley of the Congo.
Cape Colony furnished a hundred thousand pounds, and a large part of the balance was from the Valley of the Congo.
During the past six months I have been travelling through the lands of ivory and elephants. I saw tusks for sale in the Egyptian Sudan. At Mont-hassa I was shown $10,000 worth of ivory in one pile, and during my travels through Uganda and German East Africa I passed many long lines of porters carrying elephants' tusks on their heads or tied to long poles, which rested on their shoulders.

GREAT IVORY MARKET.
Zanzibar has for years been one of the chief ivory markets of the world. These are companies in Zanzibar which have their buyers and traders scouring German and British East Africa, as well as the Portuguese possessions, farther south. These men take beads, cottons and other merchandise to trade with the natives, and when they have accumulated a cargo they send it on the heads of porters down to the coast.
"There are herds of elephants about the slopes of Mount Kilimanjaro, and the hunting goes on in the forests of the Great Rift Valley. In British East Africa, it costs $20 for the right to shoot elephants and a hunter does not kill more than two during a season. It is against the law to kill the baby elephants or cow elephants there, and the same regulations prevail in Uganda. In the British Sudan a license to hunt elephants costs $100, and the hunter is allowed to kill one elephant a month, and this is also true of British Central Africa.

AFRICAN IVORY THE BEST.
In German East Africa hunters are charged a few hundred francs for their elephant shooting license, but they must pay a royalty to the government on all the ivory they get. As it is there is considerable profit in it, a fair good hunter or often makes big money. A single elephant may give a hunter worth a hundred dollars and upward, and an old bull may produce three or four hundred pounds of the choicest ivory.
This African ivory brings the highest prices in the markets. It is superior to any other in the class of the tusks. In addition to the ivory which is much less than two hundred pounds each, the average weight of a tusk is much less than that, and one of a hundred pounds is quite valuable. In India the average tusk does not weigh more than fifty pounds, but that of the African elephant is much heavier. Many of the tusks are broken when they are brought into the market. The elephant uses them for ploughing up roots and tearing down trees, and also for fighting their enemies. The average tusk is strong and elastic; but it can be broken, and the ends are sometimes snapped off.

PULLING ELEPHANT'S TOOTH.
Ivory tusks are always sold by weight, and the traders tell me that in buying them of the natives they have to be careful to see that pieces of iron or bits of stone have not been driven into the hollows of the horns to make them weigh more.
Many of you have been in the hands of a dentist and have seen how he almost breaks your jaw in pulling a molar with a long root. The tusks are really elephant's teeth, and it is difficult to get them out of a dead elephant. They are fitted into a bony socket, and the root goes almost up to the eyes. A tusk eight feet long may have two feet of its root imbedded in the skull, and if it is taken away at once the head has to be chopped to pieces to get it out.
Many of the tusks inside its mouth on each side its jaw above and below, and these are almost as firmly imbedded as the tusks themselves. The tusks are hollow about half way up. The smallest forms a big load for a man, while one weighing 150 pounds requires four porters to carry it.

DEAD IVORY.
Have you ever heard of dead ivory? There is a great quantity of it still left in Africa, and thousands of pounds are shipped to the ports every year. Dead ivory comes from animals which have died a natural death, or from tusks which have been gathered by the chiefs of the villages and stored away.
Ivory has always been an evidence of wealth in Africa, and some of the petty African kings have piled up ivory as misers hoard money. Some of them have buried it near their villages and others have made stockades of ivory tusks about their dwellings. During recent years some of such ivory has been gathered together, but there is said to be much buried yet to be unearthed.

ROOSEVELT WANTS A FIRST CLASS NAVY
Capable of Seeking Out the Enemy and Hammering Him Until He Quits—
Notable Conference

NEWPORT, R. I., July 23.—Pleading for popular support for a "first class fighting navy, a navy capable of seeking out the enemy and hammering him until he quits," President Roosevelt was the central figure here today in the most notable conference of American naval officers ever called together to consult and discuss in a broad, general way, the features of future United States battleships. President spoke publicly for more than half an hour and then the conference went into executive session for one hour. During this session the President took a leading part in the discussion.

ABOUT PROMINENT PEOPLE.

The Earl of Aberdeen, for whose arrest "for conspiracy with Mr. Birrell in connection with the Irish jewelry" a man recently applied in a Dublin Police court, is a skilled engine driver. As a boy he delighted in travelling on the engines of a local railway, often acting as fireman. Lord Aberdeen met his future wife under peculiar circumstances. When a young man he visited a shooting lodge in the Highlands. One day his host could not accompany him on the moor, so he went alone, and accident crossed a "march" or boundary of a neighboring estate.

TOO INQUISITIVE.
He was tramping along, gun on shoulder, when a gentleman asked him if he was aware he was trespassing. "Oh, no," replied Lord Aberdeen, "I am the guest of So-and-So." "Very probably," said the gentleman, "but you are now on my property." Lord Aberdeen apologized profusely, and handed him his card.

The owner of the soil was Mr. Macdonald, afterwards Lord Tweedmouth. He promptly invited the trespasser to lunch with him. The result was a marriage.

One day, when walking through a village in which he had only been once or twice, Lord Aberdeen passed before a cottage garden fence to watch an old man at work. "Is this good soil?" he asked. "Aye," responded the other, "what your crop to be?" was the next question. The worker looked up, gazed disapprovingly at the stranger, and finally remarked, "Look here, my young fellow, me lad; you just scoot off. You want to know too much for a youngster!" Lord Aberdeen, with the remark, "Sorry I spoke," moved on.

QUESTION OF EFFICIENCY.
A man who, for a bet amounting only to a bottle of champagne, is ready to risk his life by going up in a balloon and descending in a parachute, is a dare-devil indeed.

This is what Rear-Admiral Sir Alfred Paget, who has been selected senior officer on the coast of Ireland, did in India some years ago. Clever is the man who can score off Sir Alfred; but on one occasion he got more than he bargained for. He met a midship at a house party, and was criticizing him in a friendly manner. "When I was at sea, I was a sub-lieutenant," he remarked. "Yes, sir," replied the boy, with a degree of simplicity, "but, then, is it not a fact that the navy was not so efficient as it is today?"

The navy in 1865, took part in the negotiations which resulted in the settlement of the French claims in Newfoundland.

A COOL LADY.
Lady Beatrice Dalrymple, Lord Montagu's newly-wedded wife, and elder daughter of the Earl of Stair, once had an adventure with a burglar when staying at Preston Grange, in Scotland, with her grandmother. She was in bed, but awoke; saw a man enter her room; watched him at his work, and took note of his features. But she did not make a sound; in fact, she pretended to be asleep. Then as soon as the man had left the room by the window, Lady Beatrice communicated with the police by telephone, and the burglar's capture was quickly effected.

THE DRINK PROBLEM IN FRANCE.

France has also a drink problem and a reform bill is now before the Senate, says the Paris correspondent of the London Chronicle. There is practically free trade in public houses or wine shops, which has led to the existence of 35,000 in Paris alone—one for every 30 inhabitants. When France was only a wine-drinking country little harm was done, but in recent years beer has been in growing favor, and absinthe and other strong spirits have led to alcoholism. The scientists and reformers took up the study of alcoholism as a disease, and a heavy duty has been levied on spirits since 1901 and a light duty on wine, in order to repress the consumption of the former and encourage the old wine-drinking habits of the people.

According to the latest available official returns, there are in France 600,000 debits de boissons, in other words, public houses. These must not be confounded with the many residential hotels and the thousands of cafe restaurants. The distinction is that the debits de boissons exist solely for the supplying of drink, chiefly intoxicating liquors. To find the reason of the abnormal growth of these establishments we must go back to 1890.

In that year a law (perhaps dictated by a hatred of everything appertaining to imperial regime) removed certain liquor-law restrictions which had existed under the second empire. What has been the result? Drinking shops have sprung up everywhere, and from being perhaps the soberest nation in Europe France threatens to degenerate into one of the most drunken.

Between 1890 and 1879 the increase in public houses was 4 per cent., since 1880 the increase has been 22 per cent. And no wonder! As the law now stands, any French citizen who has no easier judicial, is of age, and has paid his military debt, may become a debitor with as little formality as would be required for setting up in England as a grocer or a butcher. M. de Lamarzelle, the present Minister of Finance, probably voiced a commonly held opinion when he said in the Chamber some time ago that while absinthe might be a social evil, it was, at any rate, a source of considerable revenue to the State, and that he, therefore, saw no reason for suppressing its sale.

PARLIAMENT AROUSED.

Already in 1901 a section of the Parliamentarians of the day felt that they must do something toward the discouraging of the consumption of alcohol, for the leading French scientists and philanthropists were crying aloud for some measure to lessen the evil of drunkenness. Parliamentary intervention took the form of a differentiating tax on spirits. Alcohol of a certain fixed standard strength and sold retail had up to this paid a duty of 286.00 francs per hectolitre. By the law of 1901 the duty on all spirits was increased to 415 francs per hectolitre, while that on wine was fixed at 1.05 franc per hectolitre.

As had been anticipated, the alteration of the existing duty led to a large increase in the sale of spirits. The harmful wine, while, as indicated by the revenue returns, there was a marked falling off in the sale of spirits. But there was this corollary: Illicit distillation increased, and the market was flooded with spurious brandies, champagnes, and even of absinthe, which were little better than poisons, thinly disguised. The decrease in the duty on spirits made a hole in the budget, but this, to a large extent, was largely compensated for by the imposition of a series of petty taxes, and it is doubtful if in the long run the revenue suffered at all by this apparently rash flinging away of millions for the public weal.

Presently it dawned upon those responsible for this important legislative step that they had not gone far enough in seeking to combat the evil of intemperance, and their next effort was in the direction of mild repression. The methods of England, America, Sweden and Norway were studied amongst others. Two rival schools of temperance reformers arose in France: one pleaded for the total suppression of all bars privately conducted and for the nationalization of the liquor trade; the other suggested a gradual reduction in the number of debits. Based upon this latter view, a bill was introduced into the Senate by Mr. Berenger, who was supported by many colleagues of differing political principles. This was eight years ago, and until the other day it had remained shelved and almost forgotten. But your French politician is full of surprises, and when he acts, acts quickly. Thus it was that a few days ago the bill was suddenly dragged forth from its cupboard, the accumulation of dust and cobwebs removed, and in the course of one afternoon its 12 short clauses were passed practically without amendment. A second reading was ordered, and this was to have taken place two days later. It did not, and no one knows when it will or when the bill will finally emerge from the Senate to be submitted to the Chamber of Deputies for approval.

WHAT THE BILL PROPOSES.

As it now stands, the bill is brief and businesslike. Its one fundamental principle is the gradual limiting of debits and the placing of them on a population basis. Should M. Berenger's measure become law, the debits de boissons will ultimately be at the rate of three for every 600 inhabitants, and increasing at the rate of one for every subsequent 600. This would not include debits where wine and beer alone are sold. These the proposed measure will not affect, as it aims solely at the diminution of the consumption of spirits. The bill not including expropriation in its clauses, it follows that, were it to be put in force tomorrow, years must elapse before its beneficial influence could be appreciably evident. It provides that in the event of the death of a holder of a retailer's license or "patente," or of his becoming insolvent, or being convicted of a criminal offence, his license shall lapse, his premises be closed, and no fresh license granted for them.

M. Berenger, who sees a connection between the numbers of debits in existence and the amount of alcohol consumed, hopes that restrictive legislation on the lines of his bill will ultimately have the effect ardently desired by all well wishers of France of satisfactorily settling the national drink problem. But on this point there is a divergence of opinion amongst the cially among members M. Maxime Lecomte are right, that the is not stringent enough. (e)le that, desperate disease desperate remedies, he main- the country cannot afford to te, while the flower of its manhood ing destroyed. "If we cannot drink altogether," he says, "it be made a State monopoly. will at least be a safeguard a the dangers of adulteration. F already controls the sale of mat tobacco and playing cards. Why go a step further, and include in category the sale of spirits?" fears that the gradual lessening in number of public houses will not a much good, that the eliminating o the struggling debitor will only lead to the centralizing of the liquor trade in the hands of a few individuals backed by capital, and that France may see her humble debits "replaced by the gin palaces of England and America."

MAY NATIONALIZE THE TRAFFIC.

M. de Lamarzelle, another Senator who supports the measure, is, as far as the sale of absinthe is concerned, an uncompromising prohibitionist. In a chat I had with him the other day, he affirmed that 50 per cent. of the spirituous liquors sold in France at the moment were little better than poisons. In support of his contention he related a conversation he had with a prominent French distiller. This latter had suggested to the retail trade that in the process of rectification the quality of certain spirits largely in demand by the public might be improved, or at all events made less harmful, at a small extra cost. But the debitors would not listen to the suggestion. Their clients, they said, had long been accustomed to paying a certain price for their "petit verres," and any augmentation of this would be disastrous to the trade. The Government Commissioner in the Senate, charged with the piloting of M. Berenger's bill, has refused to accept M. de Lamarzelle's amendment, and the latter has decided that if the Government will not listen to him, he will exercise his parliamentary right and introduce a fresh measure nationalizing the liquor traffic and prohibiting the sale of absinthe in any form.

TWO OF A KIND.

"Come, come," cried the brusque and bustling real estate man, "why do you pay rent when you might own a home?"
"I don't pay rent," replied the startled stranger.
"Then you have a home?"
"Yes."
"That's strange. May I ask your business?"
"I'm a real estate dealer."

THE METAMORPHOSIS OF KATHARINE.

By HARRIET LUMMIS SMITH.

Outwardly there had been little to distinguish it from the ordinary summer flirtation, but in his heart Dorchester knew a difference. He was aware that moonlight and music in combination had led many a man into difficulties, and that the syphilis-like girl in white who clung to your arm as you strolled along the beach after dinner, frequently seems quite another being from the sunburned young creature with an inflated nose, who sits opposite you at breakfast. Accordingly, Dorchester told himself to "go slow," but at the same time he knew that his friendship with Katharine Elmslie was in a class by itself.

First of all, he was keenly alive to Katharine's uniqueness to the other girls of his acquaintance. This opinion, so original and startling in a lover, was almost justified by the facts in the case. The pliant prettiness of the girl's face, which had at first attracted him, was almost forgotten in the new charms which unfolded as their acquaintance progressed. Katharine could talk nonsense between dances with delightful abandon; when a man was not in the mood for nonsense, she could meet him on his own ground. Grave or gay, by turns, equally ready for a game of golf, a flirtation, or an economic discussion, she seemed half-a-dozen girls in one; and Dorchester did not know which of the six was the most charming.

Dorchester had a prejudice against seaside engagements. "If she cares enough about me to marry me," he reasoned, "she'll wait six weeks. And, at the end of that time, I feel as if I do now, by Jove, I won't wait a day longer." By dint of almost super-human self-control, he got through their last evening together without committing himself, and in the morning, when he took Katharine to the train, he asked her for her address in the city.

The girl did not answer with her usual frankness, nor did her eyes meet his. "I'm going to be on the wire for a while," she said cautiously. "I'll send you a line when I'm settled again."

"But you'll let me write to you, won't you?" asked Dorchester, dismayed. This was something he had not counted on.

"I shall be too busy to answer any letters," answered Miss Elmslie, with decision. "Wait till you hear from me."

Dorchester felt so ill-used that he took refuge in aggrieved silence, and repented only as he watched the vanishing train which whirled Katharine from his sight. "I should have insisted on a promise," he thought. "I should have refused to submit to anything so preposterous." But the mischief was done, and the only thing left was to wait with what grace he could muster for the promised letter.

In the months that followed Dorchester experienced every imaginable form of resentment over Katharine's silence. At first he was only pale and abstracted, and jumped nervously at the sound of the postman's ring. Then he reached the cynical stage, and spent his leisure composing stinging epigrams on feminine heartlessness; following that, he plunged into desperate flirtations with half of the girls of his acquaintance, and when the rejected came refused all invitations and abused society. And so the winter wore away, and the coming of spring found his pygmy passion grown to full stature. As he had strolled with Katharine on the shore, he had not known how much the charm of the moment was due to the moonlight, and how much to the magic of her eyes. Was it the touch of her hand that quickened his pulse, or the sound of distant music and the sighing of the sea? He had doubted then; but he doubted no longer. He told himself bitterly that he was a craven who had lost paradise by his indecision.

He met Claudia Ward at the entrance of the park one afternoon in April, and sauntered by her side along the path bordered by elms, their branches tossing riotously, drunken with new sap. The steaming earth sent up its incense, and the crocuses were in bloom. For the time being, Dorchester lost the realization that life was a failure, and felt distinctly pleasurable to have a pretty girl at his elbow, sweet and sympathetic and anxious to please.

At a bend the path they came full upon a trio that almost blocked their way, a nursemaid engineering a baby cab, with a small child clinging to her hand. As Dorchester fell back, allowing Miss Ward to precede, he glanced carelessly from the plump occupant of the cab to the girl behind it. For an instant all the blood in his body seemed to leap to his brain. There was a roving in his ears, and his heart plunged. He had just seen enough to snatch off his hat, a greeting to which Katharine responded with a curt little nod, and then she had passed on. He stood like a man in a trance, listening to the crunching of the wheels of the baby cab on the wet gravel, and Miss Ward looked around, wondering, and asked if anything were the matter.

How Dorchester excused himself and got away from the park he never knew.

He was in an agony of humiliation, not for himself, but for her. His pride revolted; not that he had fallen in love with a servant, but that she had stooped to such a masquerade. She had made him the dupe of one of those deceptions with which the humorous journals had familiarized him, but his shame and resentment were for her sake, not for his own. In the midst of his torment, Dorchester could have laughed, as he realized that he had passed with the barest greeting the woman for whose summons he had been waiting so long—the woman he had hoped to marry. He told himself bitterly that it was better so. Reproaches were as futile as excuses. Silence was the only thing possible between them forevermore.

From dark to dawn he was in a dozen moods; but by morning his chief desire was to see her again. Since she could not plead her own cause the heart of her lover defended her. After all, where was the deception? She had only taken her rightful place among her equals. Who of the women he had known a right to look down on her because of her brains or her breeding? Who of them could hold a candle to her in wit, or tact or charm? Dorchester cursed himself for a cad that he had given her up even in thought. If he had been severe with her, he was merciful to himself.

Dorchester took to haunting the park, till the police and peanut vendors recognized him as a permanent acquisition, and gave him friendly greetings. He saw nothing more of Katharine, but he met Claudia Ward with a frequency which upset the accepted theory that this is a world of chance. Dorchester did not have much to say to Claudia, but he did not mind hearing her talk, while he kept watch for the other woman, a type of generosity characteristic of his sex.

At last patience was rewarded. Late one afternoon Dorchester looked up to some observation of his companion, and on a parallel path he saw a trim nursemaid manipulating a baby-cab, and leading a little girl by the hand. Her chin was up, as when they had led the grand march together at the hotel, and she moved as lightly as she had floated through the walls, in his arms. Dorchester's heart leaped up.

"Excuse me. I wish to speak to a friend," he said. Miss Ward, who had followed his eyes as he seen his face, answered stiffly, "Don't let me detain you." There was more than resentment in her voice; there was dismay, wounded pride, even appeal, but all this was lost on Dorchester. He was too much of a man to think of two women at the same time, and he ran across the grass, his heart full of the thoughts of one. The round-eyed baby screwed its head about to look at him, and the little girl peeped up shyly, but Katharine stared straight ahead.

"You didn't write to me," said Dorchester. All at once he felt master of the situation.

"I have been busy. You know I expected to be," returned Katharine demurely.

"I want to see you," continued the young man. "Will you be at home tomorrow evening?"

"I'm not allowed followers," Katharine's voice was forbidding, but a dimple broke the curve of her cheek. Then she added, "And I can't give you my address."

"Then I'm going along with you, and I'll find it for myself," said Dorchester kindly. He laid his hand on the firm little fingers clutching the handle of the baby-cab, and rejoiced to feel that they were trembling.

Dorchester was as good as his word. He accompanied Katharine and her charges home, and at the gate raised his hat, saying "Au revoir!" And, though Katharine shook her head and looked at him with sweetly reproachful eyes, he went away undisturbed. But when he presented himself the following evening, the man who opened the door assured him that there was no Miss Elmslie in the house; and Dorchester's explanation brought no more cheering information than that the nursemaid had given up her place and left that morning; the footman adding affably that she was a capable young person who had given great satisfaction.

"Can't you get me her address?" asked Dorchester, taking a bill from his pocket, and the man departed with his evident intention of earning the money. But after some minutes he returned chagrined. The girl had not left her address. Perhaps he might find out something later. She had been very friendly with the housekeeper, and had promised to write.

The only thing left was to be a man—if he could. Dorchester threw himself into his work feverishly; went out every evening, and hardly slept at all. The consequence was that when he presented himself at his friend's, Mrs. Holland's, ten days later, she exclaimed at sight of him.

"Your mother told me you were working too hard," she said. "But I never dreamed it was as bad as this. Now I'm going to introduce you to a charming girl, who will make you forget business for a time. If I'm not mistaken, you are to take her to dinner, you know. Miss Elmslie, let me introduce you to my friend, Mr. Dorchester."

Katharine's greeting was the model of courteous composure, but Dorchester was at the end of his resources. Present Mr. Dorchester.

The strain of the winter had told upon him. He looked at her vacantly, and his chin quivered like a child's.

"For God's sake, Katharine," he said, "if there is any explanation, if you have anything to tell me, don't wait. Come here," said Katharine. She led the way to the music room, which happened to be unoccupied, and turned upon him a flushed face and eyes that were frankly kind.

"There isn't much to tell. It's simple and silly, and not even original. But the editor of a woman's magazine was awfully kind to me when I was getting my first start as a writer, and I couldn't but be a little bit vain. I wrote before I met you. I promised him a series of articles on the working woman; and to write them I had to get out something on the subject. I've been all kinds of things since I saw you—a factory hand, a waitress in a restaurant, a dressmaker's apprentice—Oh, everything you can think of."

She looked at Dorchester timidly, and seemed encouraged by his expression to continue. "People who have read the articles say they're pretty good. They ought to be; they cost enough. But I haven't much confidence in them, myself; for I didn't put my heart into them, as I usually do in my work. I wanted—"

She floundered for a moment, and Dorchester came to her rescue. "What was it that you wanted, dearest?"

"Not much," she answered, with her old sauciness. "Just you."

There was something else that Dorchester wanted. It might not have been much, but there was no question about his wanting it. And he got it, too, just as the voice of Mrs. Holland's butler was heard announcing that dinner was served.

POLICE COURT

In the police court this morning two drunks, who were remanded yesterday by Magistrate Henderson, were fined $4 each.

Florence Le Roque, an eighteen year old girl, who has lately been seen too frequently on the street, was arrested shortly after last midnight on Princess street by Detective Marshall. Florence was attired in a brown suit and for head gear a light merry widow. She had been in company with a young man who departed on the arrival of the officer. The court intimated that there was but little sympathy for street walkers and Florence was sentenced to a term of two months washing in the home of the Good Shepherd.

Detective Marshall had Thomas Campbell before the court for begging and the sentence was 30 days without a fine.

SUFFICIENT MONEY AND CLOTHING RECEIVED

For the Destitute Family—A Little Furniture Needed—Response Has Been Most Generous

Will those kind-hearted people who have been contributing to the relief of the family mentioned a day or two ago kindly stop sending donations. There is now sufficient money and clothing on hand to provide for the destitute one until they can look after themselves. Some furniture is still required, but no doubt this will be found. Mrs. Hall desires that any ladies or gentlemen who feel like sending money or clothing shall remain in that frame of mind without following their desire, for other cases of destitution may arise later, in which their gifts will be needed. The response to this call has been extremely generous and through the Star Mrs. Hall wishes to thank St. John people for their readiness in helping her. In addition to the donations acknowledged yesterday, the following have been received: Money from several "friends," working girl, "Inasmuch," "Frederickton," "E. A. S.," and an enclosure which the following letter explains:—

THE RECTORY, Woodstock, N. B., July 22, 1908.
Dear Editor—Some of my little friends, my sisters and I had a little "Show" in my father's barn today for our pleasure and profit. After the "Show" was over we heard, and then read in your paper (page two) about the case of distress in St. John, and we all felt so very sorry for the poor woman and her four children, who are so badly off, that we at once decided to send all that we made at the "Show," $144, to you to help them. Please enter it in your paper as sent by the "Children's Delight Co." We hope that other children will try to help them.

Yours truly,
MARJORIE ALLDER.
Aged 9 1/2 years.

A lady sent a most generous supply of clothing, her little girls insisting on doing their share in helping other and less fortunate ones. Mrs. Hall also received many packages of clothing, but names of donors were not given. A suitable house is still needed, and any information as to where quarters can be secured will be gladly received. But kindly stop sending money and clothing.

The Salvation Army sent a lot of clothing. Mrs. Landau, Mrs. Hartt and Mrs. Isaacs sent three dollars, and offered a quantity of clothing, which, however, was declined with thanks.

RUMOR THAT SURVEY MAY BE A SURPRISE

Lubec Herald Hears That Campobello May Become Part of Maine.

A report is circulated in this vicinity that under the new survey now being made by the representatives of Canada and the United States Campobello Island might cease to be Canadian soil, and pass under control of the United States, as lying to the westward of the newly marked channel from the St. Croix river to the sea. The Ashburn survey which gave the island to Canada, many years ago, has always been called into question, on account of the evident location of the deep water passage, Lubec Narrows being an artificial and shallow passage unsuited to vessels of deep draft.

If the new survey shifts the boundary it will cause a most surprising change. In the first place, a colony of as good people as can be found anywhere will be acquired by their neighbors, and will have an opportunity to show that loyalty to a new government, and flag which has always characterized them.

The island products of fish could come in free without any special arrangement or evasion of customs duties. It would be represented at the home. The island products of fish could come in free without any special arrangement or evasion of customs duties. It would be represented at the home. The island products of fish could come in free without any special arrangement or evasion of customs duties. It would be represented at the home.

Whatever the inhabitants might think of the change, it is sure that no locality would ever come into the Union more welcome than the island of Campobello.

And we could go over and fish pale lock right off the wharf at Wellsport, borrow a chew of black Jack from Captain Elias Mitchell, and thumb our noses at the Curlew and its Puz-Lubec Herald.

RACES POSTPONED.

The Moosepath races have been postponed again until Friday and Saturday. This morning the track managers and drivers and owners gathered at the grounds, and for some hours watched the weather. Opinion was divided but at eleven o'clock as there did not seem to be any prospect of material improvement, a decision was reached to put off the events till tomorrow.
