

BACKED DOWN ELEVATOR SHAFT; JOHN WISE TERRIBLY INJURED

And May Die—Wife Is Now on the Ocean on Her Way to Meet Him.

John Wise, an Englishman living at 123 McGarvey's Terrace, met with a terrible accident at the McClary works this morning.

He supplies the machines with material, and was taking a truckload of heavy tin up to the second floor.

He had delivered the material to the man for whom it was intended, and was about to take another truck loaded with goods to the ground floor. He proceeded backwards to the lift, pulling the heavy truck, and was unaware that someone had removed the hoist to the floor above.

Fell Into the Shaft.

Wise backed right into the elevator shaft and pulled the heavily-loaded truck after him.

He fell a distance of about 25 feet, and the truck fell across his right arm, splitting it completely open from the elbow down, breaking the bones in a dozen places. He was also crushed, and received internal injuries. He was removed to Victoria Hospital, where Dr. Drake attended him and found it necessary to wire all the bones together to hold them.

Dr. Drake thinks that the arm will have to be amputated and if he fears, blood-poisoning sets in, Wise will have little chance of recovery.

Came From England.

Wise came here from England in May, and liked the city so well that he sent for his wife, who is now on the ocean on one of the Allan Line boats, which will arrive at Montreal on Saturday.

Only yesterday he purchased a house, and intended to take tomorrow off and get things in shape for his wife's arrival.

Bostonian Against Filtration; Warns Londoners to Avoid It

Mr. A. W. Donovan, of Boston, Board of Trade, Talks to The Advertiser.

Mr. A. W. Donovan, of Boston, Mass., vice-president of the Massachusetts board of trade, first vice-president of the Rockland Trust Company and manager of the E. T. Wright Shoe Company, of Rockland, Mass., one of the largest shoe firms in the States, is in the city, the guest of Mr. Joseph P. Cook, of the Cook-Fitzgerald Shoe Company.

This morning Mr. Donovan talked to The Advertiser on the water problem, and his word to the citizens of London is that they beware of the filtration scheme. He characterized it as the double tax-system, and considered the adoption of such a scheme a step backward, and not a step in advance. Nearly every city that had adopted filtration had regretted it. This was especially true of the cities along the Mississippi Valley.

Favors High Pressure.

Mr. Donovan came out very strongly in favor of a high-pressure system. That system was being adopted in nearly all American cities, and was the most successful. The Titus scheme was also very successful in many states. Mr. Titus was a man of influence and had made good in every instance.

The London Problem.

"What do I think of London's water problem," asked Mr. Donovan, "Well, I hardly know. Have you a high-pressure system here? Well, if you (Continued on Page Eight.)

"Hello" Girl Develops Smallpox; Operator in the Local Exchange

Case Is a Mild One and There Is No Danger to Anybody.

A case of smallpox has developed in the city, and the patient was removed to the smallpox hospital today. The patient is a young lady.

The cause of the infection is not known. The young lady has not been out of the city so far as can be learned, and, consequently, much difficulty is being found in tracing the disease to the source of infection. It is said her step-father was at Ingersoll recently, where the disease exists.

The family is being vaccinated and all precautions are being taken to prevent a spread of the disease.

A Hello Girl.

The young lady in question is a Bell telephone operator, and just left her position the other day on account of illness. Now the hello girls are scared almost cold.

Dr. Hutchinson is on his rounds and he will vaccinate all the girls who have not yet gone through that splendidly humorous business. And the sleeveless girl is in rebellion, and many of them are objecting to having their arms all scarred.

Some People Silly.

Some people will not speak through a telephone for fear they will catch the infection. One man wanted to know if the medical health officer was going to vaccinate the telephone. Only sterilized messages will be transmitted and conversations now must show a cleavage of health. Heated conversations are liable to break out anywhere, thus increasing the danger.

This is another instance of the danger of telephone operating. Smallpox and matrimony, two of the worst diseases are being spread by the telephone.

The case is looked upon as more of a joke than anything else, but every precaution has been taken.

Indian Paid for Fire Water Privilege

Magistrate Love's time was chiefly occupied this morning in dealing with drunks, of whom there were a large number in the cage of all sorts and colors.

Four Indians who had been away pulling flax all summer apparently couldn't stand prosperity, for they spent a goodly part of their season's earnings in firewater and then wanted to indulge in a war dance at the Michigan Central station.

The authorities refused to permit the stunt to be pulled off and his worship gave them all a good talking to. He ended up by fining Nicholas Nichols $2. The others were allowed to go and between them raised the necessary cash to liberate Nichols, who was broke.

Gave Wrong Name.

Robert Richardson admitted riding a bicycle on the sidewalk. He didn't mention, however, that he had given the police the wrong name, and Magistrate Love, when he found out that such was the case, taxed him another dollar, remarking that this practice of giving wrong names was becoming altogether too common, and the next one who does it will be given a term of imprisonment.

Three other young men were fined $1 each for riding on the sidewalk.

Were Intoxicated.

Michael Davis and William Mason were each fined $5 or 20 days for being drunk, while Richard Ross got off with a $3 penalty.

George Currell promised to take the pledge if allowed to go, and was given a chance to make good. The little boy who was arrested with him and charged with being a vagrant, was sent down to the Industrial School for a term, where an attempt will be made to educate him and make a man of him.

A telegram was received from him today stating that it was formerly the custom to do this, and he was merely reverting to it.

He has been asked to stop it, as it is an infraction of the treaty.

While on King street, a shaft broke, and the horse started to run away. He kicked to splinters. The young lady came to the rescue, and pulled on the lines with all her might. Simon C. Rae Buried by Cave-In Was Rescued by Two Heroic Women

Narrow Escape From a Terrible Death of Well-Known Citizen This Morning.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Simon C. Rae, of the D. H. Howden Hardware Company, who resides at 24 Regina street, had a miraculous escape from an awful death this morning shortly before 7 o'clock.

Only the tremendous efforts of two brave women—his wife and a neighbor, Mrs. Fortner, who worked with shovels until their hands are covered with blisters—saved him from death by suffocation.

For some time Mr. Rae has been annoyed by accumulations of rain water in his yard, and as there is no sewer on Regina street, he decided to overcome the nuisance by constructing a drain of his own. For several weeks he has been working nights and mornings to complete it, and this morning was just about to finish it by connecting the lines with a large hog-head which he had sunk in the ground about ten feet.

Earth Caved In.

He was busy boring the hole in the top of the barrel, when, without the slightest warning, the earth fell in on both sides, completely covering him, and bending him almost double, so that he was unable to move.

In this awful condition he remained fully fifteen minutes, until his wife came to call him to come to breakfast. She only came for the door the first

NEITHER NATION WISHES WAR, SAYS SECY. TAFT, AT TOKIO

Both the United States and the Japanese Government "Will Strain Every Nerve to Prevent It"—Neither Would Gain Anything.

Tokio, Oct. 1. — A banquet in honor of United States Secretary of War Taft was given jointly last night by the municipality of the capital and the Chamber of Commerce. The guests included the members of the cabinet, Prince Iyesato Tokum, president; Tei Sugita, speaker of the House of Commons; Field Marshal Prince Oyama, Marquis Matsugata, and other leading Japanese and Americans; Mr. suite, Ambassador O'Brien and members of the embassy—in all about 200 persons.

Mr. Taft, in responding to the speech of welcome, said I cannot trespass upon the jurisdiction of the department of state and discuss the even in San Francisco, but I can say that there is nothing in them that is not capable of honorable and full adjustment by ordinary diplomacy.

"The word war is not allowable in diplomatic correspondence, but those who are not diplomats can talk war. I do not hold that war is entirely unjust in cases where the national grievances cannot otherwise be remedied, but 'war is hell,' and only a great cause, which cannot be settled by diplomacy, justifies it.

"A war between America and Japan would be a crime against civilization. Neither nation desires it, and both Governments will strain every nerve to prevent it. Neither would gain anything by war.

Japan is looking for a great commercial conquest. Why wish for war, I am confident that Prince Ito and the Japanese Government in their Korean policy are for justice and civilization. Why stop or delay the reform in Korea?

"Why should the United States desire war, to change in one year to a military nation.

"During the last year the United

G. T. R. Will Wipe Out Dangers Of the Egerton Street Crossing

Only One Main Line Will Cross the Street in the Near Future.

The dangerous double main line crossing of the Grand Trunk at Egerton street, will be shortly replaced by a single line, as the company have secured the land for some distance east of the present crossing, and have commenced work that, when completed, will do away with the long curve that now stretches to Pottersburg.

It is the intention to run the line from a point a short distance east of Egerton street straight to Pottersburg, so that there will be but one main line entering the city from the east.

A switch will be placed near Egerton street, so that the yards, which will be greatly enlarged, can be placed in connection with the proposed new main line.

NEW YORK POLICE HELD AT BAY

Riotous Demonstrations at a Meeting in Cooper Union—Cowed by Revolvers,

New York, Oct. 1.—So-called Socialists caused the most riotous excitement ever seen in Cooper Union last evening in a determined effort to break up a meeting of the federation of Italian societies, called to protest against the recent action of the Italian Government against the clergy, and the attacks to which Cardinal Merry Del Val, papal secretary of state, among others had been subjected during the agitation.

For twenty-five minutes the disturbers, who were all Italians, held the police at bay, and it was not until Captain Short, with twenty reserves, hurried to the rescue of Lieutenant Powers and the eight men detailed to the meeting, that order was restored.

In the night court eight men paid fines of $5 each on the technical charge of disorderly conduct. Magistrate Crane said in fining the men:

"You cannot go into a peaceful gathering of citizens and act in this manner. If you don't like the Pope, go back where you came from and tell him so."

The call for the meeting had been sent out to eighteen churches, and prominent priests and laymen and clergymen of other denominations were there. When Dr. Lorenzo Ulla, an attorney, opened the meeting and stated its purpose, fifty young Italians jumped up and yelled: "You're a liar," and "Down with the Pope."

Dr. Ulla appealed to the disturbers to be quiet, as did clergymen on the platform, but by this time the hall was in an uproar. When the reserves arrived the rioters fought and attempted to release arrested men, until Captain Short instructed his men to shoot any one who tried to rescue prisoners.

The warning had its effect and the mob fell back in abject cowardice. Later the disturbers were driven from the place or arrested and the meeting was resumed.

The Woodstock Fair Board has a surplus of $200. The total receipts were $2,483.90, an increase over the preceding year.

Special harvest home services were held at Blenheim in the Methodist Church on Sunday. Rev. W. H. Graham, of Chatham, preached.

Stratford has a gang of boy burglars who are doing some rather clever work in that line lately. The police have a clue and will probably land the youngsters shortly.

David Shein, a Jewish peddler of London, was fined at Woodstock on two counts of peddling without a license and abusive language. He paid $20, and was let go.

Murray Stephens, of St. Thomas, a former Wabash engineer, will be charged with manslaughter at the fall assizes as a result of a collision on the diamond some time ago, when a man was killed.

James Wadsworth, a Queenston hotelkeeper, was convicted at St. Catharines of receiving stolen goods from a gang of boys who were recently convicted of robbing railway cars.

The Woodstock Ministerial Association elected officers as follows: President, Rev. Dr. Wafle, vice-president, Rev. Mr. Pedley; secretary, Rev. R. B. Cochran. A big union service will be held on Thanksgiving Day.

Mrs. Granville, a former resident of Mount Forest, died in Leduc, Alta., the other day. Mrs. Granville and her husband were pioneers of the town of Mount Forest. She went west twenty years ago. Her husband predeceased her some years ago.

The population of Woodstock is now 9,601, an increase of 179 last year. The total assessable real property amounts to $4,424,081, and the business assessment amounts to $421,335, and the assessable income amounts to $121,175, amounting in all to $4,966,591.

Gaston Capelle, who was to have been executed at Parry Sound today (Tuesday), has been granted a reprieve until Nov. 7, pending an application of an appeal for a new trial.

Frank Rawson, of Newark, N. J., alias Frank Brown, was sentenced at Chatham to one year in prison for stealing from a boarding house.

HAD BOTH LEGS CUT OFF

Little Girl Terribly Injured on Track at Toronto.

Toronto, Oct. 1.—With both legs cut off above the knees, the little daughter of Mr. Warrington, of Swansea, was taken to Grace Hospital from Swansea station yesterday afternoon.

The child was crossing the tracks just east of Swansea station when she was run over by a G. T. R. shunting engine.

The engineer did not have time to stop his engine to prevent the accident, but the conductor, who was standing on the footboard pushed the child aside with his foot thus clearing her body of the rails.

The engine wheels passed over the child's legs just above the knees, badly mangle them.

The child was taken by a special engine and coach to the head of Bathurst street, where an ambulance conveyed her to Grace Hospital.

Her recovery is doubtful.

BRANTFORD STABBING AFFAIR.

Brantford, Oct. 1.—In police court yesterday Joseph Podgorny, a Pole, charged with stabbing John Newerusk, another Pole, was remanded until Oct. 2, when it is thought that the latter may be able to appear against him.

ELECTRIC BONUS REFUSED.

Goderich, Oct. 1.—The bylaw to guarantee the bonds of the Ontario West Shore Electric Railway to the extent of $25,000 was defeated by about 40 votes. Salford gave 39 of a majority, but Leeburn polled a big vote against.

TORONTO'S GROWING TIME.

Toronto, Oct. 1.—Toronto's population this year will show an increase of almost 20,000, based upon the figures already issued. The increase last year was 15,078. The assessment this year has increased $21,000,000 and will pass the $205,000,000 mark.

DR. A. J. STEVENSON DEAD

Was One of Kent County's Best Known Medical Men.

Chatham, Oct. 1.—Dr. A. J. Stevenson, one of the best-known physicians of Kent County, died suddenly while at breakfast yesterday morning at Kingsville. He had been very busy of late, and the strain gave evidence of breaking him down. He went on a holiday, and returned the other day apparently much improved, intending to resume his practice this week. There was no warning of the approaching end.

Deceased is survived by two brothers, Dr. J. A. Stevenson, on the staff of Queen's University, and Bert, a student of the same college; also by a sister, Mrs. Gesner, of Kingsville. Dr. Stevenson was educated in Simcoe, and practiced for some years in Morpeth.

DEWDNEY'S TROUBLE

Says They Were Largely Result of Ontario Bank Failure.

Toronto, Oct. 1.—Albert H. Dewdney, charged with having on May 31 obtained $2,000 from Solomon Lorie by false pretenses, and with intent to defraud, appeared before the magistrate yesterday, and pleaded not guilty. His lawyer, J. W. McWhinney, neither pleaded nor elected on behalf of his client, and the case was remanded until Monday next. Dewdney was granted bail, his own in $3,000, his wife, Rose, in $2,000, and John P. Mill, in $1,000.

The arrest of the wholesale jeweler follows the failure some months ago for $100,000 of his jewelry business, but it is not connected specially with it. He was also connected with the Fulton Jewelry Company and the North Toronto Land Company.

The arrest was made upon the complaint of Mr. Solomon Lorie, of the jewelry firm of Saunders, Lorie & Co., Simcoe and Adelaide streets.

The complaint alleges that Dewdney wrongfully obtained from him $2,000 on May 1, 1906.

Dewdney states that the failure of his business was one result of the Ontario Bank failure. He also blames the fact that for two years past he has devoted much of his time to another business.

SETTLED WITH SWORDS

Duel Fought in French Style in a Rink at Halifax.

Halifax, Oct. 1.—Contrary to expectations the duel between Editor Mazier, of The Rebell, and Doctor Dupuy, was fought in the rink at St. Pierre-Miquelon.

It was believed that the differences had been settled in court, but the opposing factions clamored for satisfaction in the ancient French style and the two met.

There was a large gathering in the rink. Swords were chosen as the weapons.

After ten minutes of fierce fighting the editor received a bad thrust of the sword in the right breast. His second, Dr. Thibault, seeing the nature of his friend's wound, declared Mazier unable to continue the fight.

The duel was the result of an article in The Rebell questioning the honor of Dr. and Mrs. Dupuy.

It is reported that Mazier will be compelled to accept another challenge to a duel from Lelefre, a prominent ship-owner of St. Pierre.

PLAIN TALK FROM THE DOCTOR

A prominent physician, famous for his success in the treatment of kidney and bladder troubles, stated that to the following prescription is due a great deal of his success:

One ounce fluid extract dandelion;

One ounce compound salutaria;

Four ounces compound syrup sarsaparilla.

Mix and take a teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime, drinking plenty of water.

This mixture will, he says, positively cure any diseases arising from weak, clogged or inactive kidneys, and will assist these organs to cleanse the blood of the poisonous waste matter and acids, which if allowed to remain, cause lumbago, lame back, rheumatism and sciatica, and at the same time will restore the kidneys to healthy normal action.

The ingredients, which are purely vegetable and entirely harmless, can be procured from any good druggist and mixed at home at very little cost.

This advice will undoubtedly be much appreciated by many readers.

A SENSIBLE WESTERN VOICE.

The Victoria Colonist, a Conservative newspaper, and an opponent of Asiatic immigration, makes a plea for the sensible discussion of the Japanese problem. The clamor for the abrogation of the treaty with Japan, it says, is unwarranted. The Japanese Government believes that Japanese people have just as good right to go for lawful purposes to any part of the world as Englishmen, Frenchmen or anyone else. "We may just as well let that idea soak down into our minds," adds the Colonist, "for what we have to deal with in respect to Oriental immigration, so far as Japan is concerned, is not what that nation has gained by treaty, but what it has won in war, namely a national prestige, which is possibly reckoned at just a little more than it is worth."

It is an imperial question; it is a Canadian question; it is a British Columbia question, but the settlement of it must be through the Imperial Government with the co-operation of the Dominion Government. Canadians will be simply standing in their own light if they take an attitude which has a tendency to make a satisfactory adjustment of it more difficult than it would be under normal conditions. It is almost too much to hope that the Colonist reflects the temper of the majority of the people of the Coast Province in the following:

"The solution will come by an agreement and we have not the least doubt that Japan will bring to bear in negotiations for an agreement that exceedingly good sense, which has marked her statesmen under much more difficult circumstances. It is an easy thing for a number of people to get together and pass resolutions. We take no exception to such a course. The more plainly it is demonstrated to Japan that the sober sense of the people of Canada demands that immigration from that country to ours shall be greatly restricted, the more quickly will Japan see the need of meeting our views. The question has been discussed on one hand as if Japan were a negligible quantity and that we have only to say what we want to get it. On the other hand, it has been approached as though the Island Empire were a political stinging nettle, which had to be handled with gloves, and even then was not safe to touch. Both these ideas are absurd. The Anglo-Japanese alliance is just as important to them as it is to us. Japan's trade with us is as important to them as our trade with them is to us. Japanese racial characteristics have no more right to be controlling factors to the intercourse of the two nations than ours have. An alliance which is lacking in reciprocal obligation is not worth continuing. The people of Canada have expressed themselves in an exceedingly foolish way. Now let the matter rest for a time. To keep rapping away at the feelings of the Japanese people will not help matters in the least."

The sane counsel corresponds with the attitude of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Federal Government. If it were followed in British Columbia, the difficulties of the situation would be immensely reduced. The Colonist is rendering a national service, and showing no little courage, in view of its constituency, by lifting its voice in behalf of a statesmanlike treatment of a problem which might become dangerous if not handled with circumspection.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP ON TRIAL.

In the twin cities of Port Arthur and Fort William the principle of thorough-going municipal ownership appears to be undergoing a severe test.
 Not that the people have wavered, but they have gone far enough to realize that there must be put into practice some other method of operation and control than the present system of an elective committee.

The first to enter the field was Port Arthur, with a street railway of its own. Next came Fort William with an electric lighting and a water system, and finally the two towns ventured into municipal telephone business.
 Now the people complain that what with finding places for personal and political friends, and endeavoring to carry out some pet theory of operation, instead of trying to put the utilities on a complete working basis,
 the committee has placed them beyond control of those who have had the welfare of the systems at stake.

Citizens freely declare that their money is being squandered. All of this grumbling and dissatisfaction seems to have arisen through mismanagement, and the people appear convinced that unless some change of a radical kind is made in the management, and the operation of the utilities is taken hold of by business men, capable of injecting business methods into civic affairs, the different systems must eventually fall into the hands of private investors.

Evidently the great obstacle to the successful working of municipal ownership—or for that matter of even ordinary municipal business—is the difficulty of getting men of the right kind to take hold. In all communities there are men possessing the business ability to make a success of anything they undertake; but, unfortunately, they can rarely be induced to give of their valuable time to the civic service, and the duties of public office too often fall into incompetent hands.

SCOTLAND'S CRUSHING BURDEN.

Two-thirds of the whole area of England is held by 10,217 persons, and two-thirds of the whole area of Scotland by 330 persons. Half Scotland is held by 70 persons, who own over nine million acres, equal in area to the whole Kingdom of Denmark. One-sixth of Scotland is under deer forests, which are increasing at an enormous rate.
 The Highland and Islands Commission found that 1,780,000 acres set apart as deer preserves were suitable for small farming.

These are some of the tragic facts
 adduced in support of the Scotch Small Landholders' Bill, introduced by the British Government, and adopted overwhelmingly by the House of Commons, but rejected summarily by the Lords. Writing in the Nation, Mr.
 Molteno, a Scottish member of Parliament, says:

"The population is diminishing,
 not only relatively but absolutely,
 while the markets which it might supply are expanding enormously.
 There were 42,000 fewer agricultural laborers in Scotland in 1901 than in 1881; they now number less than 100,000 all told; there are fewer farmers; fewer agricultural holdings.
 While in Denmark there are 73 persons per 1,000 acres cultivated, in Scotland there are only 39. Land is going out of cultivation; there is agricultural depression; there is a small yield of produce. Our agricultural land is now going down to pasture; our pasture land is going down to moor and heather and rough grass,
 and is used for the support of game,
 the result, of course, being that the country can no longer support an adequate number of people. The disastrous conditions are reflected in our emigration returns, from which it will be found that emigration from Scotland has made enormous strides in recent years, and the figures have become nearly equal to the whole annual increase in population."

Economists have cited Scotland as a living example of the tremendous evils wrought by the laws of primogeniture and perpetuities, which have led to the agglomeration of land in a few hands.
 The object of the Scotch Small Landholders' Bill was to facilitate the transfer of land to small owners, by lending them the credit and machinery of the state. The Bill would have curtailed the hereditary privileges of the great landowners, who are supreme in the House of Lords. The action of the upper chamber, dictated by class selfishness, has given the Liberal party a battle cry which should rally the British democracy to its standard in its fight against the peers.

After all there are only 10,000 Japanese in Canada. These are not going to leaven the whole lump.

Canada has negotiated a treaty with France without the intervention of the mother country. Has anyone noticed a crack in the imperial fabric?

It is again necessary to remind correspondents that letters addressed to the editor for publication must be accompanied by the writer's name.

Canada's revenue for the current fiscal year promises to be $100,000,000.
 It is to be hoped that all of it will not be spent, but Canada is getting to be a hundred-million-dollar country.

The directorymen estimate that 800 houses were built in London and suburbs in the past twelve months. It is difficult to credit this if you are looking for a house that just suits you.

Kipling is going west to see whether all that has been said about Canada's progress is true. It is to be hoped he will find inspiration for a poem and write one. There could be no better immigration literature, if he will kindly omit any reference to snow and ice.

STRATFORD GETTING BRAVE.

[Toronto Star.]

Stratford has a population of 14,000 and an assessed valuation of about $4,000,000.
 And what's more, the town has got past feeling pale when the G. T. E. shops threaten to move to London.

LONDON IN HER GLORY.

[Country Gentleman.]

Somewhere under the glory of a really fine sunset, London must be one of the most beautiful and impressive spectacles in the world. You may look up the Thames, and see the red sun turning the pall of smoke that hangs over the shipping into a satiny crimson cloud, and lighting the dirty water and dingy wharves with a gleam of gold; or you may see the dome of St. Paul's caught in a haze of pink color; or the high buildings of Bond street standing clearly out against the warmly-tinted sky; and wonder, not unreasonably, whether any other city that ever was built could show such a magnificent series of pictures as can this dingy London of ours of an autumn evening.

EVIDENCES OF LIKING.

First Nighter—Did they seem to like your sketch, Bill?
 Timid Actor—I think they did. They called for me, and finally they dared me to come out!

TO CELIA.

[Sir Charles Sedley.]

Not, Celia, that I juster am
 Or better than the rest;
 For I would change each hour, like them,
 Were not my heart at rest.

But I am tied to very thee
 By every thought I have;
 Thy face I only care to see,
 Thy heart I only crave.

All that in woman is adored
 In thy dear self I find—
 For the whole sex can but afford
 The handsome and the kind

Why, then, should I seek further store,
 And still make love anew?
 When change itself can give no more
 'Tis easy to be true.

THE REASON.

[Lippincott's.]

"Why is it that it is so easy to gather an 'exclusive crowd' in the street? Is it because people haven't anything else to do?"
 "No; it is because they'd rather not do it."

MORE FASHIONABLE.

[Exchange.]

"Speaking for myself," said the eligible bachelor, "I do not believe in early marriages."
 "Nor do I," replied the fair maid. "High noon is the correct time."

THE MODERN SCHOOL GIRL.

[Life.]

Make haste to school, my little child,
 Or else you will be late;
 Your books are all asseptic now,
 And here's your sterile slate.

Your pencil has been boiled an hour—
 'Tis germless now, I hope;
 And don't forget to wash your desk
 With this carbolic soap.

And lest about the schoolroom floor
 Some unseen microbes lurk,
 Just sprinkle formaline around
 Before you set to work.

You'd better put, for safety's sake,
 Bichloride in the ink;
 And water that has not been boiled
 You must not dare to drink.

Of course, when recess comes around,
 Some food you'll want to munch;
 So in this disinfectant box
 Is predigested lunch.

And since 'tis said that in a kiss
 Bacteria may dwell,
 I may not give you, as I'd like,
 A mother's fond farewell.

NEW REALM OF DESIRE.

[E. P. Fitzer.]

Since we are in the airship age,
 And folks go sailing to and fro
 Across the sky, on pleasure bent—
 Man wants but little here below.

AN EXCEPTION.

[Toronto Star.]

The report of the commissioner exercising the principals of the Blind Institute at Brantford and the Deaf and Dumb Institute at Belleville, seems to be the outstanding exception to the rule followed by that instrument of fate, Mayor Judd, of London.

ASK THEM.

[Hamilton Herald.]

The report is that a thousand "marriageable" women are on board the Baltic bound for Canada. That means that the women are spinsters. But are all spinsters marriageable?

SOME TIME.

[Eugene Field.]

Last night, my darling, as you slept,
 I thought I heard you sigh,
 And to your love I cried I cry,
 And watched a space thereby.

And then I stooped and kissed your brow,
 For oh, I love you so—
 You are too young to know it now,
 But sometime you will know.

Sometime when in a darkened place,
 When others come to weep,
 Your eyes shall look upon a face
 Calm in eternal sleep.

The voiceless lips, the wrinkled brow,
 The patient smile will show—
 You are too young to know it now,
 But sometime you will know.

Look backward then, into the years,
 And see me here tonight—
 See, oh, my darling how my tears
 Are falling as I write;

And feel once more upon your brow
 The kiss of long ago—
 You are too young to know it now,
 But sometime you will know.

NOT DARK BROWED.

[Chicago Record-Herald.]

"They had a curious villain in that play."
 "What did he do?"
 "It wasn't what he did. He was a blonde."

THE FIRST ASCENDANT.

[Bon Vivant.]

Guide—You will be the second person, my lord, who will have climbed to the top of the mountain.
 My Lord—Yes; and who was the first?

NO EXPERIENCE.

The editor of the London Daily Mail
 does not think much of the dollar meals served in Canada. And what makes it harder for us to bear, most of us haven't had enough experience in the matter to contradict him.

A LAND OF PROMISE.

[Victoria Colonist.]

A settler, who went into the Peace River Valley last year and sowed wheat, has come out for his family, and says that his crop averaged 47 bushels to the acre of grain, weighing 65 pounds to the measured bushel. This fertile land is a part of British Columbia, which the Colonist hopes soon to see opened for colonization by a progressive railway policy. Half of the greatness of Canada has been as yet wasted.

SHORT INTERVIEW WITH MR. KIPLING

The Noted Author Does Not Expect to Write "The" Canadian Novel.

Montreal, Sept. 30. — Mr. Rudyard Kipling reclined restfully in the lounge in the reading room of the Place de Viger Hotel as he discussed with a newspaper man a number of questions affecting the Dominion, in a strict newspaper sense. The conversation would hardly be called an interview, for Mr. Kipling kept such a current of questions flowing that he left little room for his views and opinions. These latter he seemed determined to hold rigidly in the background, but now and then there would come an illuminative flash revealing the workings of the mind behind the impenetrable mask of the features.

There was no open avowal, but a tacit admission was apparent that "Our Lady of the Snows," must be a lady of sunshine.

Set on a small but powerful body,
 the large head and face, every line of the face and of the mind behind the challenged attention, and the piercing eye seemed to look through you as the tongue fired volley after volley of questions.

There was absolutely nothing about the dress that attracted attention unless an apparent carelessness so common to many Englishmen.

Mr. Kipling's most interesting remarks were in answer to the question whether he would write anything regarding Canada, and especially whether he would endeavor to write a great Canadian novel.

"I cannot say yet," said Mr. Kipling,
 "but my present intention is that this should be a pleasure trip only."
 "May you not attempt what might be considered a great Canadian novel?"

"While I feel that the great Canadian novel is yet to be written I think it ought to be written by a Canadian. There is no hurry for it yet.
 You are building up a great country
 here, and you cannot do everything at once. The great Canadian novel will come later."

With regard to his intention in visiting Canada Mr. Kipling said:
 "As I had not been to Canada since 1889 I am anxious to come out and see if the glowing reports of Canadian progress are justified. Since visiting Montreal I have been asking myself if the progress of the eastern cities is so great, what must it be in the west? I am particularly anxious to see Calgary and Medicine Hat, as these two towns were in their infancy when I saw them last."

Mr. Kipling then showed how close he had kept in touch with Canada by stating just what the wheat yield was expected to be and the lesson that had been taught the farmers by the coal famine of last winter.

The Japanese situation in British Columbia was referred to, but Mr.
 Kipling quickly jumped to a comment on what beautiful cities Vancouver and Victoria had grown to be when he visited them. He said he had not had time to look into the race problem with which the Pacific province was now grappling, and could not, therefore, say anything regarding it.

Calumet, Mich., Sept. 30.—Upon the results of this week's meetings of the International Hockey League in Chicago will depend the makeup of the organization during the coming winter. Delegates to the Chicago meeting were nearly all Shriners, and as they gathered there to attend the big Shriners' convention, advantage of the opportunity was taken to discuss the hockey outlook. Several matters are still hanging in the balance and it will not be definitely known for a few weeks just what teams will be in the league this season.

It now appears that there was little basis in fact for the rumor that Pittsburgh would not be in the International Hockey League this year. The only thing that the Pittsburgh management has been kicking about is a fine of $300, which was imposed because the Pittsburgh club left the ice at the American Soo last winter in the middle of a game. It is admitted that this is a pretty stiff fine, but it was sanctioned by the league directors, and must stand. The league had so much trouble two years ago over teams leaving the ice before games were finished that last year it was decided to put a stop to the practice.

Cleveland, Columbus and Toronto have made it known to the league officials that they would consider seriously propositions for membership in the International Hockey League.

Cleveland is regarded as almost a certainty as a fine big rink has been built there. Several Canadian hockey players have been in that city stirring up hockey interest and the outlook for a team there this year is excellent.

Toronto, that hotbed of Canadian hockey interest, is practically certain to have a team in the International League this year. The hockey followers there had out-and-out professional hockey last winter and liked it. Some of the International League clubs also played there, with the Toronto professionals, and the Canadians liked the article of hockey that is put up on the American side. Private advices from Toronto are to the effect that already players of International renown are being signed to play on the professional team that will be put in the field there this year.

Jack Sheridan, the veteran of the American League umpires, is in a class by himself. He uses neither indicator nor chest protector, yet he never stops
 a ball with his manly bosom and never loses count of the number of balls and strikes.

There are a lot of things about a ball game that the casual observer seldom notes. The conduct of the umpire is one of them. The arbitrators are considered a part of the baseball machinery until they displease the populace, and then they are anything from a horsechief up.

Every man working as a judge of play in the American League has some marked peculiarity. The method of calling balls and strikes is quite different.

Jack Sheridan yowls "str-r-ik" in a ball
 lot in his street clothes, the only bulldog tone, lifting his right hand to indicate that a ball was over the plate.

 What he says for "ball" has never been interpreted. His term for "ball" is an unintelligible growl, yet it is so different from the strike that the fans have no trouble knowing his decision.

Sheridan crouches behind the catcher
 as the pitcher delivers the ball.
 "Silk" O'Loughlin, the near-alderman, is also in a class by himself.
 "Silk" yells "stri-l-rk" with particular emphasis on the "l," and draws his right hand back over his shoulder and points his thumb at the grand stand.
 When he calls a ball he makes no movement with his hands. "Silk" calls
 two "tuh," which never fails to raise a laugh.

"Tubby" Tim Hurst appears on the field in his street clothes, the only

"Then why not pretend to be Edna when he comes?"

"By Jove!" I cried. "There's an idea!"

"But I couldn't possibly do it!" Joy objected.

Leah explained further. "Mr. Castle and I will teach you. We have all night before us, and we'll have to stay up, anyway, to make sure that it is you who meets the doctor. During that time you can learn your part. It will be hard work, but I know you can do it."

"It will at least keep us awake," Joy smiled at last.

"And then, early in the morning you as Edna, can telephone to him and ask him to come down."

"He'll come," I said. "He'll be only too glad to find that Edna has had two days running."

Joy began to enter into the humor of the situation. "I'll not have to make up for the part, at least, shall I? And Edna's costumes will fit me. But do you think I can really do it?"

"I was convinced that she could," I then you think that he will be predisposed to find you Edna, and how little cause he has to suspect such impersonation, and moreover how much more like you Edna is becoming, I think that there's very little risk, I said. "The best part of the plan is that after it's over the doctor is likely to go back and he'll be safely out of the way for my experiment."

"Oh, your experiment! How it terrifies me! What are we doing to that poor girl? What possible crime am I consenting to?" Joy broke down again.

Leah put her hand on Joy's arm and looked at her. "You'll do it for my sake, Miss Joy?" she pleaded. I knew that though she was not urging me to do a thing, she was pleading for me, she was pleading for my peace of mind.

"But her words had their effect," I said for mine. "I saw fit to add the double appeal still Joy's protest."

"We began, therefore, to instruct Joy in her part, and I think that she learned more of her secondary self that night than she had known in all the rest of her life put together. It was not easy for her, at first, to abandon herself to the character, and assume the gaucherie that was typical of Edna. It was hardest of all to do what, indeed, I was loath to teach her, the little coquettish and familiarities which I imagined Edna to be in the habit of lavishing upon the doctor. But there was a humor, as well as a pathos, in the play, and occasionally the fun of it overthrew our seriousness.

So we went over and over the plot that night. Edna's languishing glances, Edna's awkward poses and active gestures, Edna's quick speech and obvious sallies, her impatient, pettish whims, all were rehearsed. Joy, becoming gradually interested in doing her best, threw herself into the attempt. Her mimicry of Edna was a strangely confusing sight—it was like one mirror reflected in another. I took the doctor's part, going through the motions of hypnotizing her, teaching her how to resist while simulating sleep, how to reply, how to awaken from the trance. I prepared her for every complication that I could think of, not forgetting Edna's character."

"The Morning of Life"

Make youth happy by making it strong. Help it to pass on to middle life, the vigor that commands success. Hard study at school and rapid growth weakens the system, and so it needs early to develop a strong constitution early—one that prepares you to enter manhood and womanhood equipped for any work. GI is especially need to build up vigor for the strain, wear and tear of life.

Then build up by taking Ferronose; it is the very essence of health, and producer of vitality, that gives strength and mental clearness.

Ferronose clears the skin by purifying the blood, and gives you color by making the blood rich and red. It not only removes nervousness, but builds up the nerves, too.

It gives you good health and the feeling of strength and vigor, nothing gives such lasting results as Ferronose. Every sickly child, every boy and girl, in fact any persons in failing health, it will rebuild and restore. Sold at all dealers.

"I had to stay from ten till two o'clock before I saw the carriage go back with its passenger. That wait had been long, but it was not so anxious a time as I had spent before, for I knew that Joy would be quite able to cope with the situation. But I was relieved to see the carriage go back, and left the cabin the moment the vehicle was out of sight."

I had gone only half-way up the lane when I saw Joy coming to meet me. She looked tired and pale. She ran to my arms and kissed me. "Oh, he's infamous!" she cried. "I never would have believed it of him!"

"He didn't suspect you, then?" I asked anxiously.

"Suspect? No, he was too busy with his own machinations for that. Chester, if you had been there, I think you would have killed him! And I acted—how I acted! I got more and more in a rage, and I led him on with every bit of cunning I had till I had found out his worst. Oh, it was vile!"

"What happened?" I demanded.

"Oh, I can't tell you! Let me try to forget it! He did everything that we have suspected, and more! I let him borrow money of me—I permitted his familiarities and his vulgarly as long as I could endure it—I listened to all his schemes. Why, Chester, d'you know, he is trying to destroy me, and make her take my place permanently? He hasn't a scrap! He's after my money, and worst of all, after me! It's incredible. Oh, if you can't outwit him, I'm lost."

"There's only one sure way, now, to foil him, Joy. You must marry me this afternoon!"

"I thought of that, too," she said, "and I think I'm ready. This forenoon has opened my eyes to the danger. If you say so, we'll go over to the Harbor. Oh, Chester, can you really marry such a mutilated, enslaved person as I am?"

"I am going to free you," I said, still holding her close.

"And Edna?" she broke away to look at me fearfully. "What will you do with Edna?"

"Tomorrow there will, I hope, no longer be such a person."

"Then shan't we wait till tomorrow?"

"You forget," I said, "that, at his first opportunity, it is possible for him to marry her! The risk is too great."

"That settles it—come to the house and we'll get Leah!"

My hopes reached to the skies, then and I was sure that I could conquer anything and everything that stood between me and the fulfillment of my rescue. With the surrender, she, too, gave herself up completely to the occasion. We took hands and raced up the lane like two children. In that moment I got a fresh glimpse of what sort of a person Joy really was, when she was free. Edna's gauntness was not more gay and abandoned, Edna's laugh never rang out more merrily. When we burst into the house I think that Leah, for a moment, thought we had both gone mad.

We did not even wait for Uncle Jerdon to return with the carriage. I went out to see that my motor car was in order, while Joy, laughing with Leah so gaily that I could hear them even from the stable, prepared for the trip.

Joy threw up her window, to call out: "Chester, I want that little chain Edna gave you! I must have something old and something new, something borrowed, something blue!" I knew, then, that the last trace of feeling at that incident had disappeared.

She came down all in white—hat, veil, gown, gloves, stockings, shoes, parasol, Leah too, was dressed for the occasion, modestly, as usual; for though she could well have carried off a modish toilet, she always shrank from being in the least conspicuous, as if fearing to compromise Joy by appearing to assume a social equality. She was in a frock of ecru linen, just severe enough in its trim design to keep her place with Joy's bewitching laces and flounces and chiffon. only costume I had little good. So, bidding King goodby, we were off with enthusiasm. Even Leah had caught the infection of our high spirits—for a moment the tension had been let down all along the line. Leah had, indeed, much reason to be happy. She had implicit confidence in my ability to frustrate the doctor's plans, she saw herself now safe with Joy, she anticipated for her mistress a new beatitude. Under the influence of this I noticed that she lapsed, for the first time in my experience, partly into a negro dialect. It was the more remarkable and significant because I had seen her under the stress of fear and horror, and neither had affected her speech. It showed me how rare perfect happiness had been in her life, that this glint of joy should burst from the bonds of her speech and unloose the tongue of her girlhood. Both Joy and I laughed freely at her, and she herself laughed with us.

GRAND DISPLAY OF BRITISH NAVY

Autumn Maneuvers Begin on October 14—Three Immense Fleets Take Part.

London, Sept. 30.—Under command of Lord Charles Beresford, the combined Home, Atlantic and Channel fleets, will leave Portland about Oct. 14 for the autumn maneuvers, which are being conducted in the North Sea this year.

The greatest interest is being taken in this gathering of England's first line of defense, for while the usual fleet maneuvers and exercises will be carried out the main object, it is believed, is strategic, to teach the officers what the admiralty would expect of them in case of war with Germany. The programme is being kept a strict secret and journalists will not be invited to accompany the fleet. The naval attaches have not been given any information and will not be present, except the Japanese, who, as England's allies, have in recent years been the guests of the officers in command on occasions of the kind.

The meeting of the fleets will be accompanied by nine admirals and so many officers is also to be taken if Cromarty on Moray Firth as a place of anchorage for big ships and its eventual adoption as an auxiliary naval base to that being developed at Rosyth on the Firth of Forth.

CHARGED TO JAPANESE
Complaint That Schooner Pillaged an Alaskan Village.

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 30.—A report has been made to United States Consul Smith, of Vancouver, by Captain Munro, of the Schooner Case, of the alleged pillaging of the Alaskan village on Litak Bay, southwest of Kodiak Island, by the crew of a Japanese sailing schooner operating in Behring Sea this season.

The Case called at Litak Bay for water, and the Russian priests asked Captain Munro to inform the United States authorities of the outrage. The Japanese landed from the schooner, broke open houses and looted right and left. All manner of things were dragged from the houses.

Another report was received that the Japanese sealers had landed on Shetkoff Island and killed cattle running on ranges there.

A SEASONABLE DRESS FOR THE SMALL MAIDEN. (4253.)

Frocks of woolen material will be in order for some months to come for the small maid who requires warmth in her clothing, and the design here represented is one that will be welcomed.

It is both stylish and practical—two desirable qualities that do not invariably fasten in the back, but a front closing is prettily simulated in a turreted effect, buttons assisting the illusion. Box-pleats in front and back dispose the fullness becomingly, and the blouse is gathered at the waist-line, where it is attached to the straight skirt. Clear-colored cashmere was used for making the frock and fancy braid for trimming, but nun's veiling, challis or any soft novelty woolen would do for development, the 8-year size requiring 4 yards 27 inches wide.

4253—8 sizes, 5 to 12 years. The price of this pattern is 10 cents.

TINTED, NOT TAINTED; COLORED BANK BILLS

Bankers Make Novel Suggestion to the United States Government.

Atlantic City, Oct. 1. — "Ribbon counter finance" is the term applied facetiously to one of the most novel banking suggestions ever made to the United States Government. It originated with the American Bankers' Association when in session here, and contemplates the printing of all bills hereafter with a different color for each denomination.

The idea is that a bank teller's desk can then be more readily handled by reason of the ease with which bills can be piled up according to their color instead of by the slow task of having to look for the denomination of each bill.

A resolution which demands that a request for this style of currency be made upon the secretary of the treasury, was referred to the new executive council of the association, and it is believed that the request will be made and granted.

The colors decided on for the different denominations, which will enable a teller to know the value of a bill at many yards away, are: $10, yellow; $20, pink; $50, white; $100 and over.

HE FEEDS 30,000 DAILY

Famous London Caterer Lyons, Now Visiting in New York.

New York, Sept. 30.—Joseph Lyons, a famous London caterer, who provides the lord mayor's annual banquet and controls more than a hundred restaurants, including the Trocadero and Throgmorton, known to the London stock brokers as the "Thieves Kitchen," has arrived here to find a publisher for a fanciful tale which is his pride.

His story, "The Master Criminal," caused a sensation in Great Britain, when it was published. It purported to show how easy it would be to break the Bank of England.

Seven years ago Mr. Lyons caused some stir in the London restaurant world by opening a cafe in Piccadilly, in which no tips were allowed. To the surprise of the waiters, it was a great success. He is an energetic man, about 55 years old, who started his profitable business career with a small eating house in Walbrook 20 years ago. Now he feeds 300,000 persons a day.

GREAT FLOOD IN FRANCE.

Paris, Sept. 30.—The flood situation in the south of France is a little better. The damage in the department of Hérault is estimated at $4,000,000. Many heroic rescues are recorded. A dispatch from Madrid says: The Church of Benamargosa, which was undermined by the flood, fell during the night. There was no loss of life.

At Malaga many dead bodies have been washed to sea.

Stops Itching, Heals the Skin

It is because Dr. Chase's Ointment possesses in a remarkable degree the ability to stop itching and heal raw skin that it has become known the world over as the most successful treatment for such diseases of the skin as eczema, salt rheum and psoriasis. By all means use up the system by the use of such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, but also cure the eczema by the local application of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

The wretched stinging, itching sensations will soon disappear under this treatment and gradually and naturally the raw sores will become smaller and smaller until they entirely disappear. But there are scores of ways in which Dr. Chase's Ointment is useful in every home, and especially so where there are children who suffer from teething, eczema, chafing, insect bites, hives, poisoned skin or any form of skin irritation or eruption.

Mothers use Dr. Chase's Ointment for the chafing and skin troubles of their babies in preference to unsanitary pore-clogging powders; 50 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

IMPROVE LORDS; ROSEBERY'S PLAN

Would Inject Elective Life, Not Abolish—Places for the Colonies.

London, Oct. 1.—Lord Rosebery has been chosen chairman of the select committee appointed to consider reform of the House of Lords, though this was against the wishes of the Government. The committee will sit to take evidence for the greater part of the next session.

In his latest public utterance Lord Rosebery has made it clear not only that his committee intends to deal fully with the question of reasonable reform of the upper house, but that its recommendation probably will form the basis of a bill.

At radical headquarters arrangements had been almost completed for opening the long-threatened furious autumn campaign against the "gilded chamber," but the ball has been set rolling in the wrong direction, with a spirited protest against the abolition of that body by an ex-Premier admitted by the brilliant Liberal statesman of the day, who declared that he was not a House of Lords man, but added: "I am, from the bottom of my heart and soul, convinced by every motive of political life and historical experience, that an effective second chamber is necessary."

Rosebery's Plan.

Although the recommendations of the select committee will not be made public until the next session of the Parliament, enough is known to furnish an outline of Lord Rosebery's views on the constitution of a second chamber, which, in his opinion, would complete the national representation in Parliament by including in its members that a direct popular representation does not at present, and is not likely in the future, to contribute to it. He adheres to that cardinal principle of English politics which respects old names and traditions and would give a large place to the hereditary principle, though associating it with the method of election which presumably would lead to the choice of the fittest and would do much to convert the House of Lords into a general assembly of notables.

Lord Rosebery thinks that Scotch and Irish peers should be created peers of the United Kingdom and that body, so enlarged, should choose a certain number of representatives to sit in the House of Lords. The peerage would thus become as a whole a body of hereditary electors and of hereditary eligibles.

The former Premier believes the Lords would choose, the most competent members, and, if the principle of representation of minorities were adopted, as in this case would be essential, no able peer of either party would fail to be chosen. The black sheep of the peerage thus would be automatically excluded, together with a vast body of habitual absentees and "mutes and stagers." The debating superiority and business capacity of the House of Lords still would be maintained, and the hereditary principle, which has a strong hold on human nature, would be respected and, by being associated with conspicuous talent and public service, would be strengthened.

To the peers thus chosen, Lord Rosebery would add a certain number of members elected either by future county boards or by the larger municipalities, or by the House of Commons, or even by all three. These members, owing their seats to popular election, direct or indirect, presumably would keep the House of Lords in closer touch with national feeling, and with variations of that feeling.

Colonial Representation.

Lord Rosebery further would give seats to the agents general of the colonies, so that through the second chamber the empire at large would acquire a direct parliamentary representation and England's great dependencies an immediate parliamentary hearing, an arrangement which, his lordship thinks, would lead to a more accurate understanding in England of colonial feelings and ideas, and to a more cordial and closer union of hearts and minds.

Lord Rosebery is in favor of shutting out these peers who decline or who would not receive a writ or summons of the House of Lords—peers, that is, who have been elected and refuse to sit or who have not been elected, being eligible for the House of Commons, in this case they would come to be long to what has been called the electoral college of peers. It is understood that his lordship has an open mind on the question whether representative peers of the United Kingdom shall be elected for life, according to the Irish fashion, or for successive Parliaments, in the Scotch manner.

It is thought in some quarters that the latter scheme would probably be the better, as affording a means of introducing young men of vigorous capacity and getting rid of the superfluous veterans whose parts are played out, although they may not know it. Lord Rosebery rather ridicules the idea of conferring life peerage on any considerable number of men eminent in literature, science and arts as tending to convert the House of Lords into a zoological collection of celebrities. There are, however, members of the select committee who think that the residents of the Royal Society and the Royal Academy and other bodies conveniently might be members of the House of Lords during their terms of office.

Rosebery has the happy knack of appealing straight to the intelligence and common sense of the people, and it is understood that he will, at meetings which he intends to address in November, give the details of the scheme thus briefly outlined.

WIRELESS WILL CUT CABLE RATES?

Marconi's Promised Service Is Eagerly Awaited by the Merchants.

London, Oct. 1.—Marconi's inauguration of his promised transatlantic wireless service for commercial work is awaited here with keenest interest. Representatives of the submarine cable companies in various published interviews maintain much the same position as they took when an announcement of the transmission of the electric spark through 3,000 miles of air first startled the world. They admit the wonderful development of wireless telegraphy since then, but will not admit it is yet entering into serious competition with the older established system.

There is, however, a growing feeling that Marconi's promises of a rapid and trustworthy transatlantic service cannot be dismissed as an over- sanguine prediction.

The submarine cable companies claim that even if Marconi accomplished all he predicts, it will be only equivalent to an addition of a seventh cable to the sixteen already in existence and that at best it can only handle a certain amount of business.

It is pointed out, however, that this seventeenth "cable," assuming it is successful in working, will be taking messages at less than half the rates charged by the submarine companies, and that, therefore, it will be always fully occupied. It is also declared by the Marconi Company here that a new system with merely two stations will be able to handle as much business as eight ordinary lines. To this the cable companies reply that they have no response other than to vouchsafe no response other than to iteration of the declaration that no reduction of rates would be found necessary, whereupon Marconi's London representative intimated that the rates with which the wireless service is to be inaugurated were susceptible of a reduction.

While it is universally recognized the cable companies are justified in their present refusal to consider the question of reduction of rates, some criticism is heard about their cocksure attitude. Among the businessmen here there is a conviction that if Marconi accomplishes what he promises, the cable companies would inevitably be forced to reconsider their position. The head of a prominent firm whose cable tolls run into many thousands of dollars annually, said he was hopeful of Marconi's success, for he regarded the present rates as excessive. "It would be of interest to the cable companies themselves," said a large manufacturer in London, "I am forced to cable several thousand words annually and naturally I only cable when it is absolutely necessary, owing to the present high rate. But if the rate were reduced, say, 10 per cent, I would cable 20 per cent more than I do now. I dare say many firms would do likewise, and business would be enormously increased." The manager of a London office of a corporation doing a large international business said the cable tax of his company's foreign transactions ran into many thousands of dollars.

"This is a serious impediment to the expansion of foreign trade," he said. "Of course we expect to receive quick and accurate transmission, but the local telegraph lines' price is fixed by the six existing cable companies on a purely arbitrary basis. Unless the prices are reduced we expect to see various governments take up the matter." A member of a stock exchange firm which is one of the best patrons of the cable companies said he believed that Marconi's system, even if it were not immediately successful, would probably result in an eventual break in the prices charged by existing companies. "Should the cable tolls be reduced to a proper level," he said, "practically all the business between Europe and America would be transacted by the corporation. While all other means of communication have been facilitated and cheapened, practically no progress in this respect has been made with cables. Thousands of messages, both private and commercial, now are sent by mail which will be cabled when the cost is on a reasonable basis. Now it costs a shilling or more merely to instruct the cable company to whom you wish the message to be delivered."

FELL DEAD.

Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., Sept. 30.—Death came suddenly about 7 o'clock this morning to James Lee, an employee of the corporation. Mr. Lee had just begun his day's work, when he was seen to fall, and before assistance could reach him he was dead, heart disease being the cause. He was 50 years of age, and leaves a widow and three daughters.

PANDORA RANGE

The easiest way to remove ashes from a range is with an ash pan—the Pandora method (see illustration). Such an extra large ash pan is provided with the Pandora that it will contain more ashes than will accumulate in one day. All the ashes are in the pan, too, because they are guided there by flanges attached to either end of the fire-pot.

Easiest, cleanest, quickest, is the Pandora way. With the scraper and pan provided with every Pandora it's merely a matter of a minute or so to clean out the dirt in the Pandora flues.

Less dirt accumulates in Pandora flues than in ordinary flues, because they are wider and deeper, with no bolts, projections or crevices to catch the dirt, consequently you need not clean them out so often.

Saves a lot of labor, does the Pandora. If your local dealer does not sell the Pandora write direct for Free Booklet.

MIGHTY BASEBALL BATTLE; 17 INNINGS AND ENDS A TIE

Detroit and Philadelphia Play Each Other to a Standstill—Darkness Stops the Conflict—Forty Thousand People Saw the Game.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 30.—For 17 innings Tiger and Athletic fought this afternoon and when welcome night brought relief they were still struggling with the score 9 against 9. A double-header was to have been played, but the first game took the entire day and then was not finished. This means that the remaining games of the series between the Athletics and the Tigers will never be played.

The game is probably without parallel in the history of the sport. Close to 40,000 people packed the park and swarmed over the rooftops of nearby houses, whose thrifty residents charged from 25 cents to $1 for seats, and watched the battle of the baseball giants that waged for almost four hours. The street lamps outside were lighted, but the warriors, nine and nine, wanted to go on.

The excitement was added to in the fourteenth inning by a riot on the field. Only the prompt work of the police prevented serious trouble. A police officer bumped into Sam Crawford as he tried to field a fly from Davis and as it was plainly intentional, O'Loughlin called Davis out. In the row that followed Monte Cross was pushed about the field by the thousands of wild-eyed fans who swarmed over the diamond and the game continued after Rossman had been taken from the game and Monte Cross ordered out of the park.

Athletics Lose Nerve.

Six runs to the Athletics in the seventh inning, the Tigers, facing some of the most marvelous pitching of the year, gradually out-nerfed the Athletics. Connie Mack's men showed that the strain was telling on them, and with the Tigers taking advantage of every misplay, the Athletics slowly forced their way to an equal footing.

The climax of this came in the ninth inning, when Crawford singled and Ty Cobb hit a home run, tying the score. From then on neither side could gain a lead. In the eleventh inning, with the score 8 and 8, hits by Cobb and Rossman netted one run, but the Athletics tied it up again in the same score.

Fluke Two-Bagger First.

Victory for the Tigers was made impossible by a fluke two-bagger. With one down, Nichols hit a long fly to left field. Jones misjudged the crowd, thought he was nearer to it than he was, and the ball sailed over his head with him two or three yards from the ropes. This was followed by a wild pitch that sent Nichols to third, and after Seybold had walked Davis fled to Jones. The fly let Nichols score, and both teams were again neck and neck. Neither side could score from then on.

Bill Donovan pitched the entire 17 innings for the Tigers and time again stamped himself as one of the greatest box men of the present day. Repeatedly when heavily in trouble he would get himself out by striking out two or three Athletics batters.

Pitchers Are Derided.

Philadelphia used up three pitchers in trying to stave off the Tiger rush. Dygert, he of spitting fame, opened and lasted two innings. He was so nervous he nearly threw the game away for the home club before they could deride him.

Then followed Rube Waddell. He struck out six of the first nine men to face him. He had the time and the wonderful control. But in the face of it and despite the commanding lead, the Tigers fought on. They tied the score with that hit of Cobb's as the climax. Then Waddell gave way to Plank.

From then on it was pitcher's battle between the great Wild Bill and the southpaw star.

Women Cry and Men Shriek.

But one run was made on each side as was recounted above. It was one of those games where heavy hitting, sensational hitting and wonderful pitching are recorded in almost every round. Added to this the pennant symbolic of the winning of the greatest fight ever known in baseball was practically at stake. Drawn into the vortex of excitement, women cried and men shrieked themselves into a state of utter exhaustion.

Little wonder that the police swept down on the field in the fourteenth inning and took complete charge of the park. A riot that might have resulted seriously was averted only by quick work of the officers.

For nine innings, it was not good baseball. Both teams showed signs of the nervous strain they were suffering.

The Athletics had the game pocketed, but could not hold it. But with the score a tie and Plank in the box, the crowd sat almost spellbound watching one of the greatest pitching duels of the year for eight innings.

Philadelphia Outlives Detroit.

Philadelphia outlived Detroit, but errors were numerous. In the seventeenth inning the Athletics made nine two-base hits and one home run, not counting the numerous singles. But after that ninth inning they got but two hits off Donovan, and one of those was the fluke two-bagger that caused the second tie.

Cobb, Crawford and Rossman were the run-getters in the day for the Tigers. Ty was the biggest star with his home-run drive and a two-base walk in the eleventh that saved the day at three last. Plank started in

by retiring the Tigers in order. Rossman rolled to Murphy, and Coughlin fled to Oldring. Payne grounded to Murphy also.

Athletics Take a Lead.

The Athletics took a big lead in the first inning when they netted three runs off Donovan. Hartzel singled cleanly to right as a start and stole second. Nichols sacrificed himself and Seybold was given a base on balls. Davis bounded out to Coughlin and Hartzel scored. Murphy hit sharply to Rossman and beat Donovan to the bag as Hill tried to cover. This filled the bases. Collins lined to Jones and Seybold beat Davy's throw home. Oldring hit to right and Davis scored, the ball going into the crowd. O'Leary tossed out Shreck and the side was retired.

The Tigers could do nothing with Dygert in the first inning but they opened the second by getting on base. He was way up in the air and only the quick change of Connie Mack to Waddell saved him from being beaten right there.

Rossman started by singling cleanly to center; Coughlin grounded to the box and Dygert threw to second to get Rossie. It should have been an easy throw. He hesitated so long that Rossman was almost at the rubber. Then he tossed it slowly to Schreck. O'Leary was so furious, he grabbed too quickly and dropped the ball. Claude scored.

Waddell Is Reinstated.

Donovan was walked, and the bases were full. It was the grand chance, but Connie rushed Waddell in.

Then came some remarkable pitching. The Rube struck out Jones and he fanned Schaefer. And he struck out two men in each of the two innings following.

Meanwhile the Athletics were continuing at Donovan. Bill retired them in the second round, but in the third Seybold doubled as an opener and scored a few moments later on another double by Davis into the left field crowd. Murphy singled to first and Davis made third. Oldring hit to Coughlin, who tried for a double play, throwing to second instead of to the plate. His throw got Murphy all right at second, but Schaefer was unable to get Oldring at first. Davis scored a run on the play. Schreck was out to Donovan. In the sixth they added to this by more long-range hits.

Davis Hits First Homer.

Harry Davis, first man up, caught one on the nose for a clean home run hit over the low right field fence. Coughlin threw out Murphy, but Collins doubled to center and Oldring followed with another at second. Jimmy Schreck retired the side by striking out.

The Tigers were helpless before Waddell until the seventh. Then the nervousness of the Athletics showed plainly, and their clinch game was lost.

Donovan sent an easy fly to Oldring. The Philadelphia center fielder got it fairly in both hands, but dropped it. Jones drew a base on balls. Then Schaefer hit sharply to Nichols, and Nichols, like Oldring and Dygert, was up in the air. He got the ball fairly, then lost it, and the bases were full.

Crawford Starts With Double.

Crawford doubled into the left field crowd and Donovan and Jones trotted home. Cobb grounded to Murphy, but Schaefer scored. Rossman hit a terrific drive past first that Murphy made a sensational pick up on. He threw out Rossman, but Crawford scored. Coughlin popped to Waddell and the side was out.

In their half of the seventh the Athletics gleaned one more. Murphy singled to center and Collins sacrificed. Oldring rapped one to right, sending Murphy to third. Murphy scored when Schreck forced Oldring at second.

O'Leary showed the way in the eighth. After Payne, who had taken Schmidt's place behind the bat, had popped out, Charley doubled to left. Donovan struck out, O'Leary stole second then and scored on Jones' hot grounder to third. Schaefer fled to Collins and the side was out.

The Rube "Gets Hit."

Donovan retired Hartzel, Nichols and Seybold in the eighth, but in the ninth the Tigers finally gave Rube Waddell "hit." For the eighth time this season the Tigers knocked the crazy one out of the box.

Crawford led off with a clean single to center. Cobb watched just one go over the plate. The next met his bat fairly and shot over the right field fence, striking the walk on the far side of the street. That home-run tap tied the score, and saved the Tigers from defeat. Connie Mack jerked the Rube out and sent in Plank. Plank was the same steady southpaw against the Tigers, and as Donovan seemed to improve every inning, a pretty fight was on.

Real Battle Begins.

With the never-ending roar of thousands ringing in their ears, they tolled side by side and even jostling one another, have—but a single thought

"Whoop La! One to the Good, Anyhow!"

by retiring the Tigers in order. Rossman rolled to Murphy, and Coughlin fled to Oldring. Payne grounded to Murphy also.

Donovan had Davis, Murphy and Collins and then the extra innings started.

In the tenth O'Leary grounded to Nichols, a sensational play by the Athletics' shortstop. Donovan rolled to Plank and Jones was easy for Murphy. Donovan was going even better. He struck out Oldring and Powers, who had taken Schreck's place to catch Plank. Plank rolled an easy one to the pitcher and was so disgusted he did not try to run it out.

The Tiger chance came in the eleventh. With two out, Cobb doubled in the right field crowd. Rossman singled over second and Ty sprinted to the plate. Coughlin fled to Davis, but there was a one-run lead and the Tigers were wild with joy. It was only for a few short minutes, however.

Athletics Also Score.

Hartzel fled to Crawford. Nichols hit that fly ball to left that Davy Jones missed. It went for a two-bagger. A wild pitch followed right after this and Nichols made third. Seybold walked but Davis lined to Jones and Nichols scored. Murphy also walked and things began to look bad.

Rossman, however, pulled off a star play. Collins drove one at him and he knocked it down. It rolled back of first and as he fielded it he slipped in the mud. Donovan was racing for the sack and Claude threw as he was stretched on the ground. Collins was out by inches and the day was again saved.

In the twelfth the Tigers filled the bases, but could not score. Payne singled, but O'Leary and Donovan both popped out. Jones was hit by a pitched ball and Schaefer by a great sprint turned a grounder to Murphy into a hit. Crawford was up next, but fled to Hartzel.

In the thirteenth Philadelphia Donovan struck out Oldring and Powers and Plank fled to Jones. The thirteenth was equally uneventful. Then came the big storm of the day in the fourteenth. Plank had retired the Tigers and Davis was the first man up for the Athletics. He hit a long fly to center that Crawford had judged perfectly. Sam went to the edge of the crowd and was about to pull the glove from his shoulder. Sam went spinning and the ball dropped from his mitt.

Big Row Is Started.

The Tigers rushed to O'Loughlin, who was umpiring behind the plate. Silk had not seen the play, but left it to Umpire Connolly, who was watching the bases.

"The play was interfered with," said Connolly.

"Then the man's out," said Silk.

Immediately there was a roar. Monte Cross rushed from the coaching lines and made a few personal remarks to Bill Donovan. Donovan answered him, and as Monte was shrieking in his face he pushed him away. Monte jumped at the smiler and Rossman got in front of him. Claude had done nothing, but the police grabbed him as they grabbed Monte. Several of the fans who rushed on the field swung at the Detroit players, and it looked as though there would be a merry row.

The spectators hunting for trouble, however, were driven from the field, and play was resumed. Rossman, however, was not allowed back in the game, Killian going to first. The Tigers had more men on in the fifteenth, but Plank was again too effective. Schaefer singled and Crawford sacrificed. Plank wanted no more of Cobb's game and walked the Georgian.

Tigers Lose Last Chance.

George Mullin was sent in to bat for Killian, but the best he could do was to line to Seybold. Coughlin's force-out of Cobb at second retired the side.

It was the last chance the Tigers really had. In the seventeenth it was so dark that it was hard to see the ball, and they called the game. The score:

appeared and slowly, deliberately, as though conscious of the importance of his message, added one figure to each of two long rows of similar figures, following the words Detroit and Philadelphia.

The effect each time was electrical. Sometimes the crowd burst out into enthusiastic cheers—sometimes groans and hisses followed the announcement.

But for an hour the throng had been in suspense. At varying intervals the figure had appeared and chalked up zero after zero. The thirteenth, fourteenth, fifteenth and sixteenth innings were thus recorded. At each appearance of the marker there was a moment of strained expectancy, then a relapse into disappointed silence, followed by the hum of conversation.

Jennings for President.

The man with one suspender and a streak of soft coal soot across his nose leaned against a hydrant and discoursed upon the merits of Hughie Jennings.

"He oughtn't run for president," said he. "They talk about Fairbanks saving a hired girl, what is that to maintain the reputashun of a great city?"

"I wish dey'd put an odder one over de fence and tree or four ob um run in," said a youngster whose heels were building an addition on the backs of his shoes. "If they would, he would forget to lick me fur runnin' away down town."

"Whoa, back; get out of the way there." It was a beer wagon trying to make its way down the street.

"Git out of the way yourself," yelled someone from the crowd. "You needn't be in a hurry. Nobody ain't agoin' to get thirsty till this game is over."

A Matty Throng.

"What's the use of hanging around here any longer?" said a stout individual who had been trying to get a little rest by leaning up against a waste-paper box, the cover of which was full of sharp spikes. "It's getting dark in Philadelphia and if the game is called off we can get the story in the News extra before they get it on the board." And with that he shuffled off toward Shelby street dragging his friend with him.

"They don't play ball much as they used to when I was a boy," said a gray-beard, backing up to a trolley pole and leaning his cane. "We played with a soft ball then, and if a man got from base we hauled off and patted him with the ball. They didn't have a club in the country in them days that could tie Detroit for seventeen innings, and no one here in the rest. The crowd had pushed away to the other side, where one nery, excited 'newbie' had another by the hair and was just putting into execution in workmanlike manner a threat which he had voiced vehemently several times, to put a 'win ear' on him.

"I don't care," shouted the excited hopeful, "he said he hoped Philadelphia would skin us."

"Hank! Hank! Hank!" came from up Grissom street. "Here is the News," shouted someone. The board was forgotten in a moment, while the throng rushed to the spot where a bundle of extras had been thrown off by the flying runaway and lay enveloped in dust and a smell of gasoline. Soon green colored papers were flitting from hand to hand, and the crowd was satisfied.

It was the same thing in hundreds of other places in the city. Wherever there was a bulletin board there was an excited, struggling, pushing crowd, craning their necks and tramping each other's toes to see whether the Tigers would win or not.

In front of O'Connell's saloon the throng was backed up into the middle of the street and greatly hindered the traffic. Farther up on Woodward avenue another board drew a crowd that blocked the sidewalk and all pedestrians who passed. Every downtown business house where a "ticker" or a blackboard was in operation was crowded to the doors.

Excited, yelling, cheering fans crowded all the newspaper offices and clustered round the operators at telephone and wire until it was almost impossible to work.

Have You Got the Baseball Bug?

One of the most contagious diseases known to medical science is "Baseball bug," and just at present every city and town in both the States and the Dominion seem to be suffering from epidemics of that nature.

London has ever been noted for its love for the greatest of all summer games, but never has interest in the sport reached the intense point it has at present.

Each night vast throngs gather around The Advertiser bulletin board to get the results of the race in the American League, and the cry all over the town is "Did you hear how the Tigers made out?"

To entice a reporter near the editorial rooms after 6 o'clock at night just at the present time is an impossibility.

The constant ringing of the telephone and the incessant query of "How did the game come out?" is too much even for the most hardened reporter, and one couldn't be enticed upstairs after hours on a bet.

Even the telephone girls are talking of striking. All they hear during the day is "Did you hear the score?" or "Has the game been finished yet?"

Never has as much interest been developed in any big league race as the present one in the American League, and even such places as Chatham, Fife and Dundas are frantic with excitement.

It is a surety that if the Tigers win out there won't be enough people around here while the world's championship games are being played off in Detroit to wag a Ridout street car.

Here's rooting for the Tigers! Tonight, as usual, bulletins of all the big league games will be posted in front of The Advertiser building, and tomorrow's Advertiser will give in detail every play made in the Detroit-Washington contest today.

YESTERDAY'S GAME

Ty Cobb's home run in the ninth inning with Crawford on first, tied the score and made a remarkable contest possible. Donovan pitched all 17 innings for Detroit, while Philadelphia was forced to use three pitchers to steer off defeat.

With the score 7 to 1 against them in the seventh and defeat inevitable, Hugh Jennings' fighting athletes began their great battle which retained the leadership for them.

Just 13 players figured in the game for each side. Donovan struck out 11 men. The entire trio of Athletic twirlers fanned out but 10 Tigers.

Detroit had 70 chances at the plate and Philadelphia had 68. Three Detroit players stole a bag, while Philadelphia pilfered but one.

The Athletics outlived the Tigers by five bingles, hammering 20 hits off Donovan's delivery.

Schmidt made the lonely error chalked up against Detroit, while the Athletics had six in their error column.

Eight two-base hits were secured by the Athletics, while Detroit secured three two-baggers. Hartzel himself secured three.

Seventeen Tigers were left on bases and 13 Athletics.

Both teams scored one in the eleventh.

Forty thousand people watched the game, many of them coming from eastern cities, to say nothing of a large crowd of loyal Detroiters.

Smiling William had his usual wild pitch. Just one.

But that wild pitch in the eleventh prevented the Tigers from winning, and the reason why Donovan did not pull away from Philadelphia with two victories to his credit was his own fault.

Householders near the park charged from 25 cents to $1 for a seat on their roofs and made a nice bit of money in that way.

During an argument in the fourteenth inning, Claude Rossman hit Monte Cross and nearly caused a riot. Rossman was arrested, Cross sent off the field.

Cobb Is Almost Sure of Winning The Champion Batting Medal

Leads His Nearest Rival by Fourteen Points—But a Week To Go.

Ty Cobb, the Detroit slugger, increased his standing a point over his work of a week ago, while Elmer Flick, his rival, lost three points, so there is a difference of fourteen points this week as compared with but ten last.

This is quite a lead with but a week yet to play, and it looks as though the Tigers will have the honor of the champion batsman for 1907, his percentage will not, however, be so high as Stone had last season.

Cobb has also passed all others in stolen bases, having today pilfered 44 bases against 43 for Flick. Ty is also leading in total bases with 254 against 245 for Crawford, while Flick has 222.

In the matter of hits it is now almost certain that Cobb will be the only player in either major league to make 200 or more hits. He now has 192 and he should have no trouble to average a hit per game from now on until next Sunday, as these figures closed with the game of Thursday. He will have the benefit of Friday and Saturday, as well as the games to be played this week. Crawford and Stone are the only ones who have chances to make the 200.

There are eight 300 hitters this week as compared with six last. Cobb, Crawford and Killian, while Washington has two in Clymer and Milan. This leaves one each for Cleveland, St. Louis and New York.

The Tigers are the leaders in the batting table, with an average of .262, ten points ahead of St. Louis, who is second, the Tigers are also the champion sluggers of the league, having a grand average of .331, while Sam Spencer, St. Louis, is second.

There was ease in Ty Cobb's manner as he stepped into his place. And there was pride in Ty Cobb's bearing and a smile on Ty Cobb's face) As, when responding to the silence, he tightly pulled his hat.

No stranger in the crowd could doubt 'twas Ty Cobb at the bat.

Eighty thousand eyes were on him as he rubbed his hands with dirt. Forty thousand bit their lips when he wiped them on his shirt.

Then, when the writing Waddell ground the ball into his hip, Defiance glanced in Ty Cobb's eye, a sneer curled Ty Cobb's lip.

But fame is fleeting as the wind and glory fades away. There were no wild and woolly cheers, no glad acclaim this day.

They hissed and groaned and hooted as they clamored, "Strike him out!" But Ty Cobb gave no outward sign that he had heard their shout.

Rube Waddell smiled and cut one loose; across the plate it sped; Another hiss, another groan—"Strike one!" the umpire said.

Zip! like a shot, the second curve broke just below his knee "Strike two," the umpire yelled, but Ty Cobb made no plea.

No roasting for the umpire now—his was an easy lot. But when Rube Waddell whirled again—was that a rifle shot?

A whack! a crack! and out through space the leather pellet flew, A blot against the distant sky, a speck against the blue.

Above the fence in right field, in rapid whirling light, The sphere sailed on; the blot grew dim and then was lost to sight.

Forty thousand hats were crushed, forty thousand threw a fit; But none will ever find the ball that mighty Ty Cobb hit.

Oh, somewhere in this favored land the sun is shining bright; The band is playing somewhere, and somewhere hearts are light;

And somewhere men are laughing where there never hangs a pall, But there is no joy in Phillie, since mighty Ty Cobb hit that ball.

—With apologies to Ernest L. Thayer and James Wilson, authors, respectively, of "Casey at the Bat" and "Casey's Marriage."

How Detroit Viewed the Game; Ball Fans Go Fairly Frantic

"Git off my toe."

"Pull your toe out from under my foot. If he marks up anything but a goose egg for Detroit, I want both feet on the ground to steady me while I yell."

It was one of those dramatic moments when men, assembled from the most varied interests, pursuits and stations in life—the merchant prince, the shabby clerk, the boot-black, and the mendicant—standing side by side and even jostling one another, have—but a single thought

September Maintained the Record; Was Cool Compared With Last Year

Lowest Temperature of Month Was 37.5, Against 39 in September, 1906.

Although the highest degree of temperature recorded in September of 1906, was three degrees lower than the highest mark reached in September of this year, the former month was, on an average, a much warmer one than the latter.

The lowest temperature recorded in September last year was 39 degrees, while this year the thermometer fell as low as 37.5 degrees.

Last September there were 23 days in which the temperature reached a height of 70 degrees or over. The month just gone showed but 16 such days.

In 1906 the month opened with a temperature of only 65 degrees, but it closed at 60, while the closing day of last month registered but 55 degrees.

The rainfall during September this year was exceedingly heavy, the precipitation being 4.23 inches against 1.44 inches during the same month a year ago.

BOARD OF EDUCATION WILL MEET TODAY

Will Deal With Vacancies in High School Staff.

The board of education will meet this afternoon, when routine business will be transacted. The two vacancies in the Collegiate staff have not yet been filled.

Mr. H. G. Martyn, of Berlin, who was chosen to fill the chair of modern languages to succeed Mr. McCutcheon, has informed the board that it will be impossible for him to come.

Another effort was made to get him to come, but so far it has not been successful. The matter will come up before the board this afternoon. The other vacancy, caused by the resignation of Mr. W. C. Ferguson, will likely be filled.

time, but on receiving no reply came out to look for him.

Being unable to find him, she was fearful that something had happened, and when she went to look for him in the pit, she took in the situation at a glance.

Ran for Help.

She hurriedly ran to a neighbor, Mrs. Fortner, and together the two women toiled with superhuman efforts with two shovels that happened to be lying near.

For some minutes their efforts seemed to be fruitless, as they did not know where Mr. Rae had been working, but at last their efforts were successful as the shovel struck against something which afterwards proved to be Mr. Rae's head.

Mr. Rae Unconscious.

The women literally tore the earth away then and were horrified to find Mr. Rae in an unconscious condition, and his face entirely blackened as a result of being so nearly suffocated.

About this time another neighbor, Mr. Fenn, happened along and took charge of the work while the exhausted women went to seek more help from some bricklayers who were working half a block away.

Was Released.

In a short time Mr. Rae was released and in an unconscious condition, was removed to the house, where Dr. Cowen attended him. Beyond the effects of the shock, from which it will take him some time to recover, Mr. Rae was uninjured, and was soon restored to consciousness.

Dr. Cowen states that had Mr. Rae been in the earth a few minutes more he would inevitably have been suffocated.

Both Mrs. Rae and Mrs. Fortner are suffering from very sore hands, and will be several days before they can use them.

G. T. R. WILL WIPE OUT DANGER

Completed it is hoped that the new seal chutes will be so far advanced that they can be used, when the present chutes will be torn down and moved east to a point near where the new Stratford and St. Marys line will join the present main line.

Rebuild the Chutes.

The company have decided to rebuild the chutes here, and not at Woodstock, on account of the fact that the run between Sarnia and Woodstock, while easily accomplished during the summer months, without recouling, is impracticable in the winter.

The 40,000 tons of coal that are stored at present at the old chutes will be used in filling the mogul engine that are handling the freight traffic, and when used no more will be placed there, as it is expected the new chute will be ready for operation and will supply all necessities until the chutes can be reconstructed further east.

EVENING IN THE EMERALD ISLE

Pleasant Event Brought About by the Empress Avenue Literary Society.

The Literary Society of Empress Avenue Methodist League entertained the Leaguers to an Irish programme last evening.

"The Emerald Isle" was very ably taken by Miss Clara Lawrence, who spoke of the people and industries.

Mr. S. Charlton enumerated the sterling qualities of the Irish people as displayed by the immigrants who now make Canada their home.

"Irish Poets and Poetry" was reviewed by Mrs. F. A. Wallin, M.A., in right literary style, and snatches of interesting verse were quoted.

With "Irish Wit and Humor" Mr. William Gibson was quite at home, and kept the audience in continuous merriment with instances of clever wit and humorous stories of the Irishman.

During the evening a solo was rendered by Mr. Fred Rossiter, with all the feeling of a true patriot for his native soil. This selection, "The Land of the Shamrock" was composed some years ago by a brother of Mr. Rossiter's, Mr. L. B. Rossiter, of Philadelphia, and was much appreciated by his hearers.

THE NOMINATIONS FOR BROCKVILLE

Mr. Lewis Named by Liberals and Mr. Donovan by the Conservatives.

Brockville, Oct. 1.—Hon. A. G. MacKay will visit this riding during the week and assist in the election of Mr. Lewis. He is scheduled to deliver addresses in Athens on Thursday evening, Mallorytown on Friday evening, and on Saturday evening will speak to the electors here. Hon. Geo. P. Graham will also take part in the campaign.

At the nomination for the Legislative by-election next Monday, which took place here yesterday afternoon, Messrs. Wm. A. Lewis and A. E. Donovan were nominated, and the contest was in earnest.

The duty on fish and shellfish nomination was made by Mr. N. W. Downey, seconded by Mr. W. S. Buell, while Mr. Donovan's was made by Mr. H. A. Stewart, and seconded by Mr. J. T. Quinn.

An overflow meeting was held in Victoria Hall immediately afterwards, about 700 being present. The candidates were the only speakers, and by arrangement Mr. Donovan took the first forty-five minutes, with a ten-minute reply to Mr. Lewis. Supporters of both candidates were present.

Mr. Lewis got a hearty reception, and his address at frequent intervals was punctuated with hearty applause.

Mr. Donovan's speech could be summarized as a defense of the Whitney policy, with very few promises as to what he would do if elected. He strongly advocated the Government's school policy, and assured his hearers that he would not be a party to any change in the school system.

The customs returns indicate that trade has been very active during the past month, and practically all commodities show a large increase over the same period for last year.

Imports of woolen and cotton goods from England have apparently never been more numerous than during last month, and the statistics would show that there is a decided preference growing in favor of English goods as compared with American. In the course of a ramble near Goose-neck Lake, Mr. Green saw a deer in one day, eight of them in one meadow. While pumping a handcar along the track deer were frequently seen getting off the track in front of the car and waiting at a short distance away until the intruders had gone past.

RATIONAL LEAGUE FOR SUNDAY CARS

Annual Meeting in Toronto on Monday Night—Some Warm Statements.

Toronto, Oct. 1.—The manner of conducting the campaign of the Lord's Day Alliance and the necessity for a more liberal observation of the Sabbath was the principal features of the discussion at the annual meeting of the Rational Sunday League, held last night in the King Edward Hotel. The chair was occupied by Rev. J. J. Gilpin, Unitarian minister, of London, Ont.

Mr. J. Enoch Thompson, secretary-treasurer, read the annual report, and scored the Lord's Day Alliance for its manner of conducting its campaign. He said, among other things, that the alliance was a money-making organization for some of those who were attached to it. In the past seven years the Alliance had, according to his reckoning, secured funds totalling about $51,378, made up as follows: Collections, $42,000; for the Sunday car campaign from churches, $4,200, and from the Ontario Government in legal fees, $5,178. Some of this money from the Ontario Government, continued Mr. Thompson, was distributed as follows:

A. E. O'Mara, secretary Lord's Day Alliance, re Lord's Day act, $300; J. A. Patterson, solicitor Lord's Day Alliance, legal service re Lord's Day act, $330; Kerr, Davidson & Patterson, re Lord's Day act, $99.77; J. A. Patterson, solicitor, re Lord's Day Alliance appeal to Privy Council, $500; Barwick, Aylesworth & Co., appeal to Privy Council, preparing case, $750; Rev. J. Shearer, Lord's Day Alliance, to pay cost, Fox vs. Preece, Lord's Day act, $243.61; Mr. S. H. Blake, Lord's Day Alliance, re Lord's Day act, $368.52, and J. A. Patterson, re Lord's Day act, $467.18.

Resolutions were passed asking for legislation favoring the opening of libraries, museums, art galleries, and similar institutions on Sundays, asking for the repeal of all legislation which prevents the running of street cars and for the repeal of all laws which prevent the transportation of merchandise on Sundays, and asking that the laws be so altered that the charging of fees for Sunday admission to lectures, musical entertainments and other useful and enjoyable amusements be abolished.

The following names were handed out as composing the new executive: Philip Jameson, Mrs. Calvert, Mrs. F. McD. Denison, R. M. Meeks, D. W. Livingstone, G. D. Lorsch, R. J. Moodie, Rev. J. J. Gilpin, George Graham.

The trustees are J. Enoch Thompson, R. S. Williams, Victor Cawthra, D. G. Lorsch and D. W. Livingstone. J. Enoch Thompson was re-elected secretary-treasurer, and the other officers will be elected at the first meeting of the new executive.

CHOLERA SPREADS OVER RUSSIA

Twelve Boomas Affected and Deaths Reach Into Thousands.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 1.—The epidemic of cholera which broke out early in August is spreading rapidly, and already twelve provinces are affected. The disease is reported mostly along the Volga, but it has gotten as far north as Archangel, and made its appearance at Semipalatinsk, Omsk, Tomsk and Uralak in Siberia.

The provinces of Kazan, Samara, Saratov and Nizhni-Novgorod are the worst afflicted. The deaths already reach into the thousands. The greatest mortality is in the towns, the doctors in the country finding it easier to handle the cases effectively. It has been found impossible, however, to check the scourge and every day it is appearing in new provinces.

its economy attracts the poor.

There are scores of articles lost which never find the owners, because no effort is made to bring them back.
For a very small outlay the loser may be made happy. That The London Advertiser is in the lead is demonstrated by the frequency in which lost articles are returned through in-serting a "Lost" advertisement in its widely-circulated issues. Two particular cases happened last week, with the following advertisements:

LOST—BLACK LEATHER CARD-case, containing return transportation
from Toledo, Ohio, to Atlanta, Georgia, in favor of C. M. Hudson, Southern Railway; also $40 in United States currency. Finder liberally rewarded on returning same to G. Gillett, 502 Grey street.

LOST—SILVER WATCH, WITH FOB
of gold cross; initials, "A. M. H."
Reward if returned to Advertiser.
Mr. Gillett called at this office on Saturday and thanked The Advertiser for finding the valuable cardcase. He said he would always place The Advertiser as the best paper to find anything.

Mrs. Todd, of 119 Albert street, handed us the watch and fob, having read the advertisement in The Advertiser.

GIVEN PURSE OF GOLD

Mr. P. H. Stevenson's Fellow Employes Pleasantly Surprise Him.

The management and employees of the London Street Railway Company sprung a pleasant surprise on Mr. P.
H. Stevenson last night, when they presented him with a purse of gold previous to his departure for California, where he will spend the winter owing to the illness of Mrs. Stevenson, who has been ordered south by her physicians.

Mr. Stevenson was called into the offices, where his fellow-employees were assembled, and then Manager King, after a few brief remarks, presented him with the purse of gold. Mr.
Stevenson has been absent for some time, and his departure is keenly regretted by the management and the employees.

C. P. R. WILL TRY IT

Will Experiment With the English
Staff System.

The English "staff" system for the protection of railway trains is to be experimented with by the C. P. R., Pacific division, and the first installation will be made on a run known as the "Big Hill," between Field and Hector, a section of about eight miles of heavy grade.

It is claimed that the "staff" system makes collision impossible, and that it will obviate the system of dispatching orders.

It is called the "staff" system because each train conductor is given a staff of brass, or sometimes of wood, on entering a block, and no
train is admitted without this "staff."

The system was devised many years ago for single track work in England, and each station is provided with a switch, where the trains have to wait until they are provided with the staff which entitles them to the right of way over the section.

In this way it is almost impossible for two trains to be on the same block of track at the same time, and the only danger of collision is from the carelessness of trainmen in leaving an open switch.
