Church News
For the Sunday

FIRST BAPTIST.
Yesterday was a good day at the First Baptist church. The pastor preached at both services. The morning message dealt with the life of Gideon, the Judge, and helpful lessons were drawn from it. "The man Whom God Can Use" was the subject of the sermon.

In the afternoon an open session of the Sunday School was held at which Mr. J. J. Hurley gave the address. The subject was an old one, but the method used in bringing it forward to the attention of the boys and girls was fresh and arrested the attention of every one. When the there is usually something doing boys and girls listen for some time worth while, and Mr. Hurley succeeded in holding the attention of the Sunday school throughout his address. This message should be heard by every school in the city. The speaker congratulated the pastor, the superintendent and officers of the school upon the splendid attendance despite the storm. Miss Edna Phipps sang in splendid voice, "The Better Land" during the session. Steps were taken at the close of the Sunday school session looking toward a closer affiliation of the Baptist.

In the evening there was a good attendance. The pastor preached upon "First Aid to the Anxious, the Second Thing to Do." The musical part of the service was excellent. The Misses Phipps sang, "O What a Change." The choir sang, "Lead Me Lightly," accompanied in splendid unison, also "The King of Love My Shepherd Is." Miss Senn sang "Lead Me All the Way" very tenderly and effectively. Miss Hutchinson's solo, "Come, Holy Spirit," formed a fitting conclusion to the pastor's message. Mr. V. O'Neill of Woodstock, will assist the choir next Sunday evening and will sing "Fear Ye Not, O Israel."

PARK BAPTIST CHURCH.
The evangelistic services were a source of great joy and rejoicing yesterday. The wisdom of such services is clearly evinced by the members who attend who are not Christians, and who are led to begin a new life, this is especially true of the Sunday services. The address of Dr. Troy to the Sunday School and the response of over a score of boys and girls, and young men and women will never be forgotten by the officers, teachers and pastor. The evening sermon was one of the most convincing and helpful gospel sermons heard here. His text was taken from Hebrews 2:3 "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?"

The music of the day was good. Choirs, lay preachers and deacons, are made better by a season of special evangelistic effort. There was in the singing of the day a heartiness and power which will be remembered. The ladies quartet and the solos by Miss Jean Cornelius and Mr. Nell, were all of a high order and a source of strength to the service. The choir was not affected much by the rain, for they were there in large numbers and with undampened enthusiasm.

Dr. Troy will be with Park Church one week longer. Services will be held each afternoon at 3:30 and each evening at 8 o'clock.

WELLINGTON STREET.
Mr. John Buskard was the speaker at the Brotherhood yesterday morning and he gave a fine address. At the morning service the pastor, Rev. R. D. Hamilton gave "Gleanings from the Provincial Sunday School Convention." The choir sang the choral hymn, "From All that dwell below the Skies" (Walmisley.) Miss Mabel Limburg sang a solo very acceptably.

"Temperance Day" was observed in the Sunday School at 2.45. A very interesting service was held. Mrs. Kelly and Miss Gimby gave short addresses on the Owen Sound convention.

A special service for "Fathers" was held in the evening. A full choir of men was present besides leading in the hymns, sang two choruses in fine style. Those taking a prominent part in the music were Messrs. Stubbins, Strickland, W. Darwin, F. Houghton, F. Sugden and Jos. Daniel. The pastor delivered a very strong address on "Fathers" The male choir will repeat their music next Sunday night as the audience was so small at last night's service owing to the very disagreeable weather.

ALEXANDRA.
The weighing and the judging of life and the consequences was the key D. T. McCintock's subject for consideration at the morning service, based on the text, "Thou are weighed in the balance and found wanting." He said we are judged at the bar of public opinion. What do people think of us? What do we think of ourselves? We are called upon to face the judgment seat of Christ, even in this life. One test is the simple test of fruit-bearing. We are to have in our lives the fruits of spirit. At the final bar shall we be found wanting or found trusting? At the conclusion of the sermon, a solo "The Handwriting on the Wall," was appropriately sung by Mrs. Barton. A solo and chorus, "Lord, I am Coming Home" was sung by Mrs. Barton and choir during the service.

In the evening the music included a bright song service; a quartette "God Will Take Care of You," by the Misses Waldron and Heath, and anthem "Oh Happy Band of Pilgrims," the solo was sung by Mrs. Barton. "The Lost Chord" was splendidly sung by Mr. W. T. Cullen.

MONTREAL MARKET.
MONTREAL, Nov. 8.—Business in all lines of grain over the cable today was quiet, owing to the fact that prices here by foreign buyers were still out of line. The demand for oats for November shipment was not so strong as in the week of advance of 30, but exporters say it is impossible to get a steady business in the amount of the scarcity of ocean freight from this port for the balance of the season. The local demand for oats is steady and further sales of round lots of number one and two are being made. The local trade in flour is fair, but the export demand was quite a decline with steady at the recent. Hay is fairly active and firm. Hides are being sold at a fair demand. "I had dark circles under my eyes; I perspired freely with the slightest exertion, and my perspiration had an unpleasant odor.

"I could find nothing to relieve me till I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. I can heartily recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to all who suffer from headache, and nervousness.

"Nearly all women's troubles are caused by diseased or disordered kidneys. Dodd's Kidney Pills bring back youth to women by curing their kidneys.

NIPIGON FIRESWEPT.

Business Portion of Village Is Totally Destroyed by Flames.

NIPIGON, Ont., Nov. 10.—The business portion of this village, sixty miles east of Port William, was totally destroyed yesterday by a fire, which started at 8 p.m. Saturday and continued until 12.30 yesterday afternoon.

The fire was discovered in a clothing store and swept west as far as the International Hotel, where it was checked. The business places burned include three stores, two restaurants, three barber shops, two pool-rooms, and two butcher shops. The total loss is approximately $75,000, partly covered by insurance.

The origin of the fire is unknown.

Miss Schwartz, the clerk to whom the order was presented for payment, quickly recognizing the stolen order by the number, called Agent A. J. Ross to the scene, but the man was not apprehended and he left without getting his money.

Up to Date Milkman.

"What are you giving your cows now in the way of galactagogues?" asked the Irvington professor of the milkman.

"Oh," said the milkman, who has just been graduated from Purdue and is not to be stumped by any Butler olgce pedagogue, "their sustenance is wholly of vegetable origin, rich in chlorophyll and opulent in butyricous qualities."

"A pint, if you please," said the professor.

"Gt up," said the milkman.—Indianapolis News.

OIL ON TROUBLED WATERS.

Everybody is familiar with the above saying, but it took the Volturino disaster to bring the full force of it fully home to the mind of the average individual.

Vessels which hurried to the scene in response to her wireless calls, were for a long time forced to watch the burning craft with its hundreds of lives, as the sea then running made it impossible to launch small boats.

Then the oil tank steamer the "Naragansett," fortunately hove in sight, and free use of that fluid enabled the rescue work to proceed.

It appears that one drop of oil will spread itself over the surface of seven square feet of water. When, therefore, it has spread over a certain area of the sea, the film on the crest of a wave is thicker than the film on the trough.

The British Board of Trade in connection with its "notices to mariners," say, with regard to the use of oil: "On free waves, that is, waves in deep water, the effect is greatest. In a surf or waves breaking on a bar the effect is uncertain, but even then it is of service. The heaviest and thickest oils are most effectual. All animal and vegetable oils, such as waste oil from engines, have very great effect. The best method of application for a ship at sea appears to be: hanging over the side in such a manner as to be in the water, small canvas bags capable of holding from one to two gallons of oil, such bags being pricked with a nail needle to facilitate the leaking of the oil for boarding a wreck it is recommended to pour oil overboard to windward of her before going alongside."

This use for oil was well known to the ancients and the officers of Pliny's fleet employed the method over eighteen hundred years ago.

The Eskimos have for generations poured oil on the sea to make a smooth path for their canoes, and the islanders of St. Kilda make puddings of the fat sea fowl, and fasten their astern of their "Cobles" to prevent waves from breaking aboard.

What, with wireless telegraphy, small boat and raft accommodation for all passenger vessels, and the proved value of oil, the dangers of the deep will to a large extent be greatly lessened.

MR. BORDEN'S HEALTH. The Toronto Globe returns to the above subject with the following editorial:

"Some Tory papers are pretending that the Globe has circulated false news about the condition of Mr. Borden's health. The Montreal Mail, the Managing Director of which is a half-brother of the Minister of Finance and a true-blue Tory, quoted a gentleman who holds an important official position in Ottawa on Nov. 5 as follows on Mr. Borden's health: 'The present precarious condition of his health is due entirely to the burden he has personally assumed. It is simply silly for the Government organs to deny that Mr. Borden is a very sick man. How serious his condition really is may be judged from the fact that at an official dinner some time ago at Ottawa he fainted.'"

"It has been practically decided that parliament will be summoned for January 15. Mr. Borden, according to present plans will not return to Ottawa until about the middle of December. He has gone south to a health resort for complete rest, and if his health is restored on his return he will at once set about making arrangements for meeting Parliament."

"When papers so close to the Government as The Montreal Mail talk so plainly about Mr. Borden's health why should The Globe refuse to let its readers know the facts?"

Whether the Montreal paper is correct or whether it isn't, is not in issue. It may be that under the strain as Premier, and the brutal obstruction in the House by the Liberals, the Premier may be temporarily unwell, and there would be no surprise if such were the case.

To gloat over that and to speculate as to his successor as The Globe did, was exceedingly bad taste, not to say inhuman.

When Laurier looked to be physically down and out a few years ago, and used to literally crawl into the House, Tory papers did not exult over that but wished him renewed health.

LONDON INDUSTRIAL BUREAU

The Forest City, which until very recently, was quite a sleepy spot, has latterly wakened up in good style.

The latest scheme there is an industrial bureau, composed of a board of directors representative of various affiliated bodies appointed annually, while all citizens are eligible for membership. Here are the various committees connected with the Bureau and their duties:—

Executive Committee—Advance all movements advocated by committees, if approved. Finance Committee—Controls all funds entrusted to Bureau.

Manufacturing Promotion Committee—Works to secure new industries and to establish a "factory fund" to augment capital of desirable new industries.

Home Reunion Committee—Assists the wives and families of deserving London workmen from Old Country. Supervises immigration. Deals with housing and employment.

Trade Expansion Committee—To bring buyers for what London merchants have to sell by promoting attractions in London. Arranging excursions. "Trade Week" twice a year. delegates. Assist trade expansion Western Ontario of London merchants, etc., with fixed itinerary, establishing London as trade centre. "Made-in-London" campaigns, etc.

Advertising and Publicity Committee—Compiling facts and statistics of London's progress. Preparing literature for distribution. Placing and preparing advertising. Preparing articles (news and magazine) for publication and weekly news letter service.

Convention and Entertainment Committee—To secure conventions, and entertain and house convention delegates. Assist trade expansion committee in devising and promoting attractions all the year around to bring people to London.

Educational Committee—Assisting Board of Education in advancing technical and vocational training of London's industrial workers and schoolboys, by securing co-operation of business men.

WHAT LAURIER SAID. Refuting an intimation in the Hamilton Times that under the Laurier naval plan the "Canadian fleet" would automatically be available for John Bull in case of war the Hamilton Herald quotes what Sir Wilfrid has stated on the subject.

Speaking in parliament in support of his navy bill on February 3, 1910, he said: "If England is at war we are at war and liable to attack. I do not say that we shall always be attacked, neither do I say that we would take part in all the wars of England. That is a matter that must be guided by circumstances, upon which the Canadian parliament will have to pronounce, and will have to decide in its own best judgment."

On April 3 of the same year Sir Wilfrid explained his position more definitely. Being questioned as to what would happen in case war broke out and the government were not to issue an order to the officer in command of the Canadian navy authorizing the participation of the navy in the war, Sir Wilfrid replied: "Then the navy does not take part in the war, but remains in inactive service." Later in the debate he made further explanations. "Undoubtedly," he said, "when England is at war Canada is at war, but it does not follow that Canada is bound to take part in all the wars in which England is engaged. These wars may be very far from Canada. They may be of such a character that Canada might have no interest in them." He added that Britain might be engaged in insignificant wars in which it would be folly for Canada to take part.

Then Mr. Borden put this pointed query: "Suppose a Canadian ship meets a ship of similar armament and power belonging to an enemy, meets her on the high seas, what is she to do? I don't say if she is attacked, but will she attack, will she fight?" "I do not know that she would fight," replied Sir Wilfrid, "I do not know that she should fight, either. She should not fight until the government by which she is commissioned has determined whether she should go into the war."

And this, in addition to our inability to build Dreadnoughts for many years, or to man them, is the fool proposal for which Liberal papers are shouting.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Borden Club. Hitch up to it and feel that thrill. The Asquith government is a goner. Jupiter Pluvius with that Sunday douche put the kibosh on India's summer.

Reading constitutes the reading on the wall for the Grit government in the Old Land.

The two sides in the Borden Club contest are known as the Red and White. Nothing Blue about the thing at all.

The milk of human kindness in Hamilton has been extended, as far as the lactal vendors are concerned to the breaking point.

Brantford Liberals are going to form a mock parliament for the winter months. That's the only brand they are likely to have for many a long year.

The figures in connection with shipments from Cobalt continue to make big reading. In 1904 the output was 158 tons, valued at $316,217. In 1905, 2,144 tons valued at $1,454,106. In 1906, 5,835 tons valued at nearly $3,000,000. In 1912 the figures stood at 21,500 tons. This year the figures are expected to show an advance on that.

"One does not expect from the Prime Minister brilliance or high statesmanship or the far vision. The level of the average chancery lawyer is his height."—Toronto Globe.

To which it may be remarked: One does not expect from the leading Grit organ fair play or good vision. Exhibit A, Reciprocity. Exhibit B, Navy. The level of gloating over the temporary indisposition of political opponents is its height.

Live Wires On Borden Club

Get your man wherever you can nab him. To be a member of the Borden Club is to know the joy of living.

There is talk of billiard and pool handicap contests during the winter. The billiard and pool room and the carpetball room are the scene each evening of many interesting contests.

In the city league carpetball, Borden team No. 1 defeated the Liberal Club team No. 1, and Borden No. 2 handed out a similar dose to Liberal No. 2.

One member was heard to murmur at the Saturday evening rally, "with a Hall for a President the boys are determined to make a landing in connection with the increased membership."

These were the musical numbers at the Saturday night rally: Accordion solo, H. Cowperthwaite; solos, J. Howson, Mr. King; piano, (ragtime) Mr. Atkin; song, Mr. Murphy; solos, Mr. Hodson, Mr. Wilson, H. Pearcey, Mr. King; piano renditions, Mr. Ohry. Encores were frequent.

His Honor

I'd hate to be a jurist and listen by the day to lawyers whom a jurist would feel desire to slay; to hear their mangled grammar, their pleadings long and dull, and have at hand no hammer with which to bust a skull. I'd hate to sit forever, and watch attorneys rag the witness pert and clever, the witness with a jag; the witness scared and rattled until three-quarters dead, the witness who embattled, would punch a lawyer's neck.

I'd hate to sit and ponder o'er books that bring, despair, o'er stupid laws that wander, and drive love knows where. I'd hate to have to hearken to skates who talk too much, with intellects that darken all matters that they touch. I'd hate to make decision on knotty points of law, and know the next court's vision is sure to find a flaw. To watch o'er stupid juries with minds upon the blink, would fill my mind with furies and drive me soon to drink.

To sit for years and measure out law, upon the bench, and be denied the pleasure of taking monkey wrench and killing ten attorneys, and other healthful sport—Oh, gee! I'm glad my journeys don't lead me into court!

TERRIBLE CONDITION. MONTREAL, Nov. 10.—After a struggle with Bright's disease and starvation Lloyd Chapman succumbed to the latter yesterday at the General Hospital. Chapman was found with his wife and family, who were also in a terrible condition due to lack of food in a miserable hotel in Young street.

NOT A BUSHEL LOST. WINNIPEG, Nov. 10.—By to-night all the wheat will be removed from the C.P.R. elevator at Transcona, which on October 18th sank 20 feet into the ground and tipped at an angle of about 45 degrees, when carrying 85,000 bushels of wheat. Not a bushel has been lost or spoiled.

P. S. A. BROTHERHOOD AT CONGREGATIONAL

An Address Given Yesterday by Mr. Lorne Johnson Hamilton.

The second meeting of the P. S. A. Brotherhood was held in the Congregational church on Sunday afternoon. Considering the inclemency of the weather there was an excellent attendance. This was extremely gratifying to all who have the success of the movement at heart. Those men who were present on such an afternoon must indeed be enthusiastic and will form a nucleus around which can be built a fine strong organization.

The bright singing was an important feature of the meeting and the audience were favored with solos from Mr. Cox and Mr. Douglas, and also with two items by the Brant Male Quartette, all of which were most heartily appreciated. The speaker was Mr. Lorne Johnson, of Hamilton, who is a member of the executive of the brotherhoods of Ontario. His subject was "The four sided man" and he dealt with it in a most interesting manner. At the commencement he tendered the meeting the congratulations and greetings of the Hamilton P.S.A., wishing it the greatest success, and thus showing that the idea of brotherhood does not exist only between members of one organization but between all P. S. A. men wherever they happen to be. During his address he sketched briefly the scope of the brotherhood movement, and finally urged upon all members to do their utmost to make the Brantford P. S. A. a powerful organization in this city.

Brotherhood Sunday. Yesterday was Brotherhood Sunday in Sydenham Street Methodist church, and considering the inclemency of the weather, the attendances were splendid and the services were exceptionally inspiring. The day began with a brotherhood prayer and praise service, followed by the regular church service, at which Mr. Butcher and Mr. W. F. Thomson gave very helpful addresses. At the evening service Mr. Milford and Mr. W. S. Brewster, M.P.P., gave inspiring addresses on "Brotherhood." The music in the morning was in charge of the local Brotherhood, and a male choir led the service of song. Mr. Shicker and Mr. C. McWebb sang pleasing solos. Mr. John W. English, president of the Sydenham St. Brotherhood, was chairman at both services. Pastor Snyder made feeling reference to the death of the late James Houlding, who only two weeks ago assisted in the musical services of the church.

STORM IN KINCARDINE. KINCARDINE, Ont., Nov. 10.—One of the worst wind storms in years raged here yesterday. It was accompanied by a heavy fall of snow. The tug, John Logie, Southampton, made the harbor about one o'clock, in a few minutes from the lake, which was running mountains high. The large steel smoketank on the Ontario People's Salt Block stood the storm, but collapsed this morning about 10 o'clock. No other damage is reported.

Obituary. The Late James Houlding. Many friends will sincerely regret to learn of the death, which occurred on Sunday at the home of Mr. L. HAVING TROUBLE AT LORNE BRIDGE

The Grand River Has Risen About a Foot Owing to Storm.

The waters of the Grand River have risen about a foot in the last few days, owing to the recent storm and the canal gates being closed.

The steam shovel working on the south side of Lorne bridge excavating for the Lake Erie and Northern Railway is completely surrounded by water, and is not working, as some minor repairs are being made to it, consequently the teamsters are off work.

Work quit at about 9 a.m. yesterday on account of the inclemency of the weather. A few men are working this morning. The large power pump being moved into the upper trench, as to lower the water to allow the excavating to be finished, as the pump there now is not of sufficient capacity to keep the water out.

OUR BUSINESS CREED. We are Sole Agents for McCall's Patterns. Our phones are for your convenience. No. 190. In business, as in other things, nothing but a very temporary success can be built without the foundation of a solid, substantial creed. The keynote of our creed, as laid down many years ago, is a belief in absolute square dealing. We believe absolutely in the good faith and good sense of the general buying public. We believe that our name imprinted on an article amounts to a personal assurance on our part that that article is good value at that price. We believe that honest effort and honest value merit an honest price. IN A WORD WE BELIEVE IN THE GOLDEN RULE AS APPLIED TO BUSINESS--NOT DAVID HAREMS' VERSION OF IT, BUT THE ORIGINAL. Emerson says, "Put Thy Creed into Thy Deed!" We have consistently tried to do this. As long as this business has the most treasured of our assets--Our good name--the principles laid down above will govern it.

POLICE COURT A MERRY PLACE

His Worship Misunderstood a Real English Term This Morning.

During a scuffle and quarrel in a local hotel on Saturday night, Jan O'Neill drew a knife and things looked ugly. He replaced it, however, before anything dangerous occurred.

Magistrate Livingston thought the case proved and fined him five dollars and costs.

Don't you remember the red checked line? With that gold curve and dancing eyes? That runs on your coat in all her curves, fresh as a breath of paradise?

Leg Fractured. A Hamilton note says: "William Chevis, aged 31, whose home is at 5 Balfour street, Brantford, met with a serious accident last night. John Remell of this city was driving his auto out an alley on Park street south about 10 o'clock when he felt the machine jolt over something and found it was a man. The police were notified, and the man, who it was learned was Chevis, was removed to the hospital. He had been lying in the alleyway and Mr. Remell had not seen him in the extreme darkness. One wheel passed over Chevis leg breaking it."

Mayor of Hamilton's Fight to Break Milk Combine Succeeding

One Dealer Says 50 Per Cent. of Usual Supply Is Being Sent Back

HAMILTON, Nov. 10.—In a large number of the churches in Hamilton yesterday mention was made of the extensive milk strike. Mayor Allan is waging against the big dealers in an effort to make the latter reduce the price from nine to eight cents a quart.

FORGES WILL AND AFFIDAVIT And on These Documents Swindles a Toronto Trust Company.

TORONTO, Nov. 10.—When Cecil Irwin was placed under arrest in the offices of the Trust and Guarantee Company on Saturday afternoon, what is believed to be one of the cleverest swindles which has ever been perpetrated in Toronto was brought to light by the work of Irwin the Trusts and Guarantee Company, within the last few weeks, has lost nearly $5,000.

Recently Irwin's mother died and left him a small legacy, which he quickly spent. Shortly after her death he started a small business in the Dineen building, selling stationery supplies to downtown offices. It is alleged that recently he drew up a bogus will, in which he and his father were named as executors. Under the terms of this will he was a beneficiary to the extent of $15,000 in the shape of real estate throughout the city. Irwin then drew up an affidavit, it is claimed, by which his father withdrew his powers as executor, leaving Irwin with the power to administer the estate.

Bad at Hamilton.

HAMILTON, Nov. 10.—With telegraph and telephone wires out of business in all parts of the city and surrounding country Hamilton is in the midst of the worst time it has experienced for years. The terrific wind and rainstorm that blew across Ontario yesterday afternoon howled in and around Hamilton without ceasing, and after cutting off communication with a large number of outside places put the police and fire wires out of gear, with the result that all messages to these departments had to be sent in the most primitive way.

The firemen were kept busy answering calls in this way. Several big fires taking place. Policemen had to carry vags and drunks, also several prisoners accused of more serious crimes, for fifteen or sixteen blocks, not being able to get the patrol of a street car.

Hamiltonians were also without any electric lights for many hours. The transmission lines from Decew Falls were blown over.

The hydro power, though off for some time, gave the best service, giving Hamiltonians who use that juice a very favorable impression of its stability in comparison to other concerns.

Bad on Lake Erie.

DETROIT, Nov. 10.—The steamer Mary Elphinstone which went ashore yesterday off Bar Point in Lake Erie, has been released and is now in shelter. The reports last night of an unidentified vessel on the rocks off Point Pelee in Lake Erie, were not confirmed to-day. The tug sent to her rescue turned back when passing steamers notified them that they saw no vessel in distress in the locality where the accident was said to have happened.

The wind yesterday attained a velocity of 40 to 48 miles an hour off shore. It was said that the velocity was greater on Lake Erie and that the hindling snowstorm made navigation practically impossible. Weather bureau officials announced last night that there were no indications that the gale would subside before to-day at the very earliest.

Wild Weather for Boats in Superior

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., Nov. 10.—Lake Superior has been lashed by a 50-mile gale for the last 26 hours. Steamers arriving at the Soo yesterday from Lake Superior ports are all heavily coated with ice. The Northern Navigation Company's steamer Caronia was sheathed with ice as she steamed in.

"We never had a let-up from the time we left Duluth," said Captain Story of the Maripao, last night. The gale blew 50 miles an hour all the way down Superior. It was necessary at times to thaw the ice away from the front of our wheelhouse in order to see."

Fifty or more vessels are sheltered at various points. The steamer Farrell, of the Pittsburgh fleet, lost both her anchors off Gros Cap, Point last night and returned to-day. Down-bound steamers are lying up at the docks.

E. Company Won.

Saturday evening at the Armouries E. Company indoor baseball team defeated A. Company team 10 to 4 in a great game. E. Company were champions last season, but A. Company are living up to carrying off the honors. They seem to place much of their hops in Allen, catcher, Andy Firrell, pitcher, and Jones, first base.

SOCIALISTS ADOPT MILITANT TACTICS

Howl Down Liberal Speakers to Force Release of Dublin Strike Leaders.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Socialists have adopted suffragist tactics and have decided to oppose all Liberal candidates and refuse them a hearing at public meetings until James Larkin, the leader of the striking Irish transport workers, who was recently sentenced to seven months' imprisonment at Dublin, is released.

The Right Honorable Charles Masterman, M. P., for Bethnal Green, and financial secretary to the treasury, was the first victim. He was howled down yesterday when he attempted to speak at St. Andrew's Tabernacle. A small party of men kept up a continual cry for the release of Larkin, but eventually, the police were called to clear the church.

A demonstration was held at Dublin yesterday by the strikers in celebration of the success of the Socialists in keeping the Liberal candidate out of Reading. This had reference to the success of Captain Wilson, the Unionist candidate, in capturing the Reading seat Saturday, when the Socialist Mr. Butler cut into the Liberal vote.

Baseball, Played Around The Hot Stove Circuit

I've seen many a close game settled quickly and decisively," said John McGraw, "but poor old Bugs Raymond settled one for us about as quickly and decisively as any one would want to see a thing done. We were playing Pittsburg. The Wagner crowd had got off with a lead, and we had gradually crowded up on them until in the sixth we had tied the score. It was a warm game all right. Both of us wanted it and wanted it bad. In the seventh and eighth we had to fight for our lives to keep 'em from scoring. It looked as if they were getting to Matty and I decided to do something to stand off the desperate rally they would make in their half of the ninth. I told Bugs to go out in the right field corner and warm up. You know poor old Bugs really had more stuff on the ball than any pitcher that ever lived. He had been doing first rate for us too—keeping almost as steady as any one. I figured that the Pittsburgs wouldn't even begin to find him in our half of the ninth.

"We didn't score in our half of the ninth, I sent Matty to the club house and sent in Bugs. The first ball he pitched was a fast one over the outside corner of the plate. I learned afterwards it got there entirely by accident. The Pittsburg batter—I forget who he was—just tapped it and sent it on an easy bound right into Bugs' mit. It was the easiest assist in the world. Bugs whirled and threw the ball as if he were trying to cut off a home run from deep centre. The ball went so far over the first baseman's head that it hit the grandstand on the fly. Before we chased it down and got it back, the Pittsburg batter was on third. Then Wagner came to the bat. The first ball Bugs pitched to him struck the grandstand eight feet behind Wagner's back. It was about six wild pitches all wrapped up in one. The man on third simply walked in with the winning run and the game was over.

"After the game I did a little investigating. Here's what Bugs did when I sent him out to warm up. He took a ball, went out through the gate in full uniform, walked to a saloon a block away, sold the ball for 50c, bought whiskey with the money, drank every drop of it, and came back to wait for me to send him in to pitch. He admitted to me afterwards that when he went into the box he had to stand and study the scenery a while before he could locate the home plate."

"Having read of some of the heady plays in base ball told by players who were actual witnesses reminds me of one I saw the past summer in Tacoma, Wash., with Iron Man McGinnity, manager of the Tacoma team, in the title role." writes Eddie Fries, right fielder of the Tacoma team.

"It happened in the seventh inning in a game against Vancouver. Tacoma was two runs behind, with McMullin on third and McGinnity on first and one down. The Vancouver infield was playing back for a double play, because of McGinnity's slowness on the bases. Hensing, the batter, drove a hot grounder to the second baseman, who threw to the shortstop who covered second base, forcing McGinnity out. The shortstop then threw to first to complete the other end of the double play, but Hensing beat the ball and was safe, the runner on third having scored. In the meantime McGinnity rounded second in a mad dash for third and the first baseman, on the spur of the moment, threw to third to head off the already out McGinnity. The Iron Man having been beaten the ball there, continued on his way home. The third baseman threw home to head him off and then a chase took place. While they were running him down, Hensing moved up to third base.

"The Vancouver players, thinking there were three down after having put McGinnity out for the second time, started to leave the field and I'll admit he had the umpire, as well as all of us on the bench, puzzled until he explained the situation. Needless to say, a howl went up from the Vancouver players, but there was nothing to do but continue play, leaving Hensing at third with two down and Tacoma, but one run behind. Million then came up and singled to centre field, scoring Hensing, and the game was tied. Tacoma then made a run in the next inning and won the game.

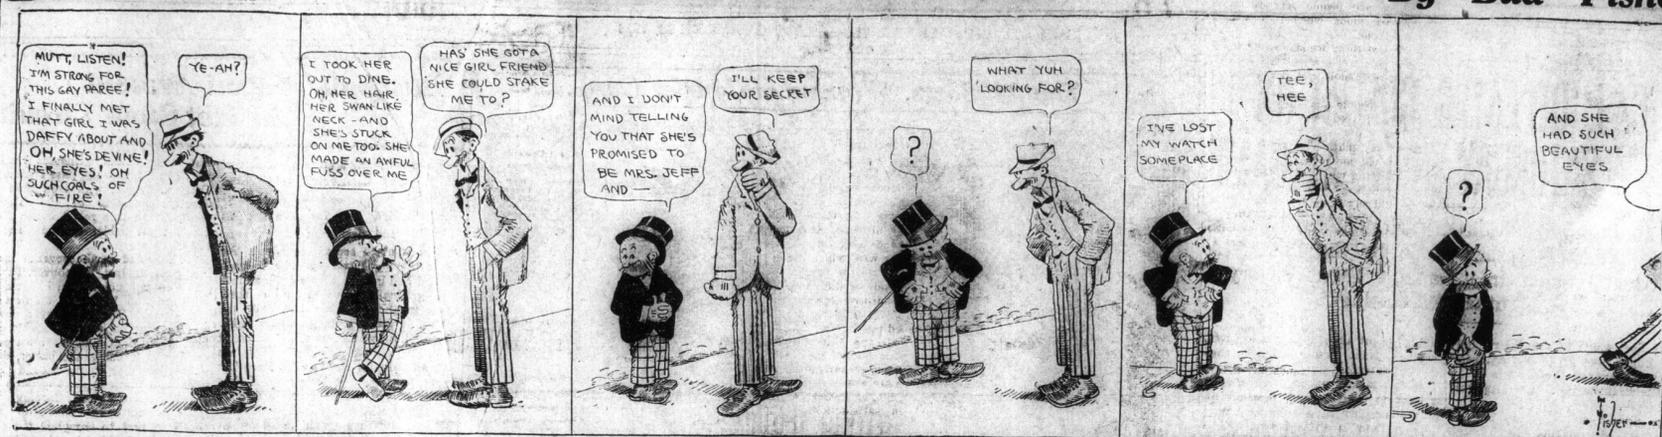

"The foxy old McGinnity giggled in the club house after the game and we all had to give him the glad hand. The Iron Man certainly knows the old national pastime from A to Z and can still turn the heavy hitters back for a drink of water."

Aches and pains of rheumatism are not permanently, but only temporarily, relieved by external remedies. Why not use an internal remedy—Cook's Sarsaparilla, which corrects the acidity of the blood on which rheumatism depends and cures the disease.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE PERIL.

I am led to make a few remarks on woman suffrage. It is a beautiful dream that female suffrage will purify politics. But the vital and important thing for us to consider is the effect on women themselves. We had better endure the evils of corruption in politics and debauchery in our government than bring about a condition which will mar the beauty and dim the luster of the glorious womanhood with which we have been familiar. I know the demand for suffrage on the part of women is growing too fast for old fogies like me to stop it, except possibly in the south and New England, where conservatism is more strongly entrenched than anywhere else in the country. I sincerely believe that the usefulness and goodness of woman vary inversely as the extent of her participation in politics. I believe she will improve politics, but ultimately politics will destroy her. And when our good women are no longer to be found the doom of the republic is near.—Senator Ben Tillman.

EPIGRAMS OF GAYNOR.

There are people who think they are pious when they are only bilious.

The last thing we should try to do in this world is to force our religious opinions and prejudices on others.

Some people say they do not believe in God even. I do not believe them. No one can sincerely say that.

You ask me to give an interview saying what I would say to the readers of 3,000 newspapers. I would say to them to be very careful about believing all they see in the newspapers.

I know of no place where there is more philosophy than in a barnyard. You can learn much from animals. Within their circle they know much more than we do.

He who cares to do no more than he is paid for will never be paid for more than he does.

Public clamor is almost always in the wrong. It is so loud that we think it includes everybody, whereas in fact it may include very few. One strident grasshopper in the angle of a fence makes more noise than the whole noble herd of cattle near by.—W. J. Gaynor, Late Mayor of New York.

TENDERNESS.

So soon as one's heart is tender it is weak. When it is beating so warmly against the breast, and the throat is as it were tied tight, and one strives to press the tears from one's eyes and feels an incomprehensible joy as they begin to flow, then we are so weak that we are fettered by chains of flowers, not because they have become strong through any magic chain, but because we tremble lest we should tear them asunder.—Goethe.

CHAPTER XII.

IN the meantime Dr. Zephan, crossing the library, passed before the door at the far side of the fireplace and after a moment of frowning hesitation resolutely thrust open the door and entered. To his surprise Henry Breed was not there.

In the corner of the room, on the outside side of the safe, at door stood open, and Zephan, with an angry de-

"IN VIOLENCE," RETURNED BLAGG, and Breed. While he was searching for the millionaire Sumner Rollins appeared.

"I came down rather unexpectedly," he said. "I suppose Kelvin's in his office?"

"No," said the doctor, rather shortly. "Mr. Kelvin is not in his office. He is out with Mrs. Rensselaer and young Rensselaer and Miss Breed fishing in a private lake for pet fish that come up to be fed when they are called."

"It doesn't sound much like sport," confessed Rollins. "but, after all, I envy them. Where is Mr. Breed?"

Again the frown returned that all the morning had crossed Dr. Zephan's brow. "I don't know," he snapped, "but he is some place about the house. I'll find him for you."

He stepped into Henry Breed's dim old library, slamming the door behind him.

Going back through the upper hall, Rollins stopped for a moment in Higg's room, where the wireless operator sat idly at his instrument, the greenish light giving to his gaunt features a particularly deathlike ghastliness.

He hooded Rollins two wireless messages, which the latter read with a passing frown. One was signed by the head of an immense packing house in Chicago, the other by the president of the largest fruit shipping company on the western coast. To both he dictated the same curt reply: "Discussion positively closed."

Blagg read the answers with a grim smile. "Allow me to congratulate you," said he. "You may not know it, but you are doing splendid preliminary work for the equality cause."

"The preliminary work," repeated Rollins. "How do you think it will be finished?"

"In violence," returned Blagg, with a darkening brow.

Rollins shrugged his shoulders. "Vigilant conversation largely," he guessed, he rejoined.

Blagg's eyes snapped. "Indeed," he declared. "Let inequality and oppression go on for but a short time, more and there will be such a revolt from the darker depths of this country as not even France has ever known. There exists even now a close organization of the underdogs who are ready at a word to rise and undo the wrongs to which justice has grown blind."

"You seem to know a lot about it," commented Rollins, largely, "I guess," he rejoined.

"Blagg calmed down his excitement with an effort. "I keep fairly well posted," said he. "Among other things I know that there is a branch of that organization which needs just such men as you."

"I am rather busy as it is," returned Rollins dryly and walked over to his own office. "Have you prepared the data I asked you to get ready, Nelson?" inquired Rollins.

"Yes, sir," replied Nelson. He walked across to a filing cabinet, brought from it a drawer, which he set upon Rollins' desk, and lifted up the spring Rolllins leaped through the indexed flaps, beneath which, very carefully arranged, were displayed the mileage distances by various routes between all important points in the United States, with the percentage of grade resistance figured in miles, these compounded with the mileage, showing the ultimate hauling resistance. It had been a tremendous task. It was neatly and perfectly accomplished, yet Nelson showed neither elation nor diffidence.

"This is splendidly done," observed Rollins after a long interval of careful inspection.

"Thank you," said Nelson quietly. Rollins glanced up at him with puzzled curiosity. "That will do just now," said he, with a slight frown, and Jens walked composedly into his own room, a fatuous enigma to Rollins.

termination to see everything here, approached that closet. He put his hand upon the rear wall at the deeper side, and it yielded to his touch, swinging inward into a narrow space from which came a dim odor and a faint gleam of light.

"So," said Dr. Zephan aloud, and immediately he squeezed back into the narrow space and descended the two flights of narrow stairs to the big vault, the entrance of which he had never even suspected. In the center of the vault, with the light from a cluster of electric bulbs gleaming down upon his bald head, with one of the many row diamonds upon his knees and with in old, well-thumbed Bible on the reach at his side, sat Henry Breed. In his hands was a parchment paper, and he was gazing at it, as if he were reading, and he nodded his head in satisfaction. "Those other ideas were filled by the bread business, but this is railroad dividends in ash-sold cash!"

Dr. Zephan was looking about him in amazement. "There must be millions here!" he gasped.

"Millions," chuckled Breed, his wrinkles of care breaking into a leathery smile. "There's over a billion and a half. How did you come here?"

"You were told that that little room upstairs was my strictly private study—that I wished no one to come into it."

"Exactly," agreed Zephan dryly. "But now that I have found the way in, coming whenever you do or I am not going to stay at Forest Lakes. 'Don't go away, doctor!' pleaded Breed in sudden fright. 'Don't leave me. When you arrived, I was a nervous wreck, but since you came I have been able to do a lot of work—good work, splendid work!'"

"That's because you at first did what I told you. But to let you've grown careless. You give me the slip every morning now, and I can't find you. When you should be out in the fresh air you are down here in this unhealthy atmosphere with unhealthy thoughts, counting money—not the money that you have, but the money you expect to make, and I hadn't the slightest idea that you were a miser."

THE CASE-BOOK OF A PRIVATE DETECTIVE

Inside History of the Methods Employed in Criminal Investigation, Embracing True Narratives of Interesting Cases by a Former Operative of the William J. Burns Detective Agency. BY DAVID CORNELL

3 — The Hollister Jewel Robbery THE STORY OF A MYSTERIOUS THEFT

(Copyright, 1912, by International Press Bureau.)

(Editor's Note:—In order that no annoyance may accrue through the publication of these narratives to persons involved therein, other names and places have in many instances been substituted for the real ones.)

One Monday morning in August, 1910, the Independent Burglary Insurance Company called up the office of the Burns Detective Agency and requested that an operative be sent to their offices at once.

"Cornell," said the manager to me, "you haven't had any experience in the burglary insurance line, but I guess you can handle the work. Go over and see what's up. And, say, Cornell, remember this: this agency is retained by the year by this insurance company. Treat their work accordingly."

I found the offices of the Independent Company in a Forty-second street building not far from Fifth avenue. On presenting my card I was ushered at once into the private office of the vice president, Mr. Blaney.

"Ah! The man from the Burns Agency?" said Mr. Blaney. "Cornell is the name? Ah, yes; glad they sent you, Mr. Cornell. We've heard something of your work. You've never handled any of our cases, have you?"

"Not any," I said.

"Well, fortunately this isn't a complicated case, or at least we don't think it is. It's merely a case of investigation to assure ourselves of the propriety of a policy holder's claim. A mere matter of form, almost. We always investigate all claims for payments, you know. Sometimes we are convinced that something is wrong; then we instruct your agency to find something for us to start a fight on. In this case, it isn't anything like that. In brief, Col. Malcolm P. Hollister's home up on Long Island sound was entered by burglars Saturday night and Mrs. Hollister's diamonds and pearls, valued at $75,000, and insured with us for $50,000, were stolen. There is scarcely the slightest possibility that there is anything wrong in the case. Col. Hollister is a fine, high-minded man, a gentleman of the old school. He has paid this company thousands of dollars in premiums for the last ten years and never presented a claim before this. We are all of the opinion that he will pay his claim in full, in due time. But—as a matter of form, you understand—we're sending you down to look the thing over. Be careful, Mr. Cornell, but be careful of our interests as well as the feelings of Col. Hollister and his family. Assure yourself that the burglary was committed, that Mrs. Hollister's jewels were stolen, and report. That is the case."

That was enough, for before I had got through with it the Hollister case had developed into a case so sensational, so full of strange features that the Independent Burglary Insurance Company never dreamed of that even today it is spoken of in the office of the agency as "The Hollister Job."

Being new to the work of investigating burglaries for the insurance company I went about the task in a way considerably different from that employed by the experienced investigator. I did not go to the scene of the robbery. The Hollister home lay up among the hills of Long Island on the sound. I had heard of it as a good example of what taste and moderate wealth—moderate for New York—could do in making complete a home. I had heard of Col. Hollister, too, in the same indirect way. He was a retired bond broker, approximately 65 years old. His first wife had died many years before. Five years ago he had married again, this time taking for his bride Margaret Winderly, the Margaret Winderly who for a brief space had won such distinction in Bernard Shaw's plays. There had been some opposition to the match at the time on the part of Mr. Hollister's two grown sons by his first marriage. After the wedding this opposition was said to have simmered down until now report had it that Colonel and Mrs. Hollister were happily at peace with all the world, especially including Hollister's two grown sons. I had seen pictures of both the Colonel and his young wife in the society sections of the papers. The Colonel was an ardent member of the Nassau Hunt Club, and Mrs. Hollister was credited with having developed a great interest in aviation. This served to keep them in the public print often enough to make them comparatively well known.

Instead of repairing at once to this reputed ideal home of wealth and culture, I went down town. At the end of three hours' work I entered the offices of the broker with whom Col. Hollister had been associated in business, and who now handled the old gentleman's investments. I was equipped with letters of introduction.

The news of the burglary had not been made public so, after introducing myself as a real estate man whom Col. Hollister had approached with a view of making extensive investments, I found no trouble in furthering my avowed mission—that of obtaining a confidential opinion on the state of Col. Hollister's finances. The broker, Glavis by name, pulled his mustache and smiled easily.

"O, the Colonel; all right," said he with a twinkling of his eye. "He isn't rich, you know, not New York rich, but he's comfortably fixed, very comfortably fixed now, since he took my advice and handles the family pocket-book himself."

He laughed reminiscently, and I chuckled with him.

"Yes," he went on, "the old man had to be advised a little bit some time ago. I advised him. Mrs. Hollister's fine woman, lovely lady, but inexperienced in handling large sums of money, you know—had been given a free swing at the colonel's bank account. By jove! I tell you she tore a hole into it for two or three years. Yes sir! Nearly had the 'lommel off his feet," I said to him, "Colonel, only one thing for you to do. Shut down on Mrs. Hollister. Don't let her handle a dollar. Otherwise you'll be selling that happy home of yours up on the Sound."

"Was he shut down?" I asked.

"Yes, yes. Closed down on her right. For about a year she's had to go to the colonel for every cent she got, and, believe me, sir, the colonel has been careful, very careful, indeed. O, yes, the colonel is set up financially. Anything up to a million I should say."

I thanked my new found friend for his friendliness and confidence, and went further on my way, rummaging around Wall street to find all I could about the state of Hollister's finances. There was little enough to find. Apparently the colonel was sound so far as money was concerned, and Glavis was the only man who knew that there ever had been any financial difficulty between him and his wife. Everywhere that I investigated I found Hollister spoken of in the highest terms. He was a fine, honorable gentleman. Mrs. Hollister wasn't so well known among the colonel's friends as to order to make my investigation thorough I got on a Broadway car and rode up to the theatrical district, to the office of a friend of mine who conducted a booking agency.

There I gathered that Mrs. Hollister, formerly Margaret Winderly, was not as happy with her rich husband as she had expected to be. It seemed that Mrs. Hollister had expensive tastes. The colonel did not approve of them. At one time, so the gossip of the Kialto had it, Mrs. Hollister had gone so far as to threaten to go back to the stage to earn money to gratify her whims.

All these minute investigations may seem to the layman to be superfluous in a case like this. What could the Hollister's family affairs have to do with the advent of a burglar in their home? I could not answer this question any better than the reader at the beginning of my search, but successful detective work is largely a matter of watching the small things. It is the small things that the wrong doer fails to cover, not the large ones; and it is among these small things that the careful detective will often find the tiny item that puts him on the trail of something big. I had no definite plan in so carefully looking up the Hollister family circumstances. I only knew that it was my duty as an investigator of this case to find all about them that I could.

I ran down all the information I could scare up in New York; then, next morning, I bought a ticket to the station on the Long Island Road, where the Hollister home was located.

I arrived at the station, Sound-burst, near noon and registered at the little hotel in the village. The clerk at the hotel dined at my table and I led him to talk about the Hollister family. I was surprised to find that even there the news of the burglary had not become known, and the clerk did not hesitate in discussing the people who lived in the big house on the Sound.

"I've got a cousin who takes care of the launches and boats," said he, "and I know about all that's going on up there. And I tell you, mister, those rich folks don't have so much smoother sailing than us poor ones. No sir, they have 'beir rows jus' like we do. Why, here two months ago this spring, Mrs. Hollister had some of her old theatrical friends out for a visit, and they were raising Ned out in one of the big launches, and Old Hollister came running out in a smaller launch and ordered the 'hole lot of 'em back to shore. They had a merry old row that night, him and her, and she was going to leave him, and then he cooled down, and at last she agreed to stay. I guess he must have given in to her because she's had that bunch of show people out every Saturday since. And believe me, they have some times, then. One of them is her brother. A young fellow; great sport. After the rest of 'em have gone down here and has a few drinks with the 'unch in the bar here. Great little fellow."

After dinner I went out and strolled down to the nearest telephone office and called up my friend in the booking office in New York.

"Do you know anything about Mrs. Hollister's brother, a little fellow with sporting tendencies?" I asked.

"Yes, I know of him," came the slow answer. "He's a little no-good. Tries to be an actor sometimes, and a press agent occasionally, and falls down on both jobs."

"What does he live on?"

"Search me. He always has money, though. I've heard that old Hollister sort of takes care of him. Don't believe it, though. The boy is a cheap, bright-light sport."

I went back to the hotel and sat around and smoked for awhile until the clerk again fell into conversation with me. I led the talk back to the Hollisters.

"Was that bunch of theatrical people up there last Saturday night?" I asked.

"Sure thing," was the reply.

"Was the brother with them?"

"O, yes. But I didn't see him drinking around here that time."

I bought the clerk a cigar and strolled away toward the Hollister home.

Instead of going at once to the house I walked twice around the place sizing it up as if I were a burglar looking for a place to enter. One could hardly imagine a better prospect from the burglar's point of view. The house was upon a bluff overlooking the Sound. All around it ran a red brick wall 12 feet high. On top of the wall were long iron spikes. On the side fronting toward the Sound was the kitchen, the dining room, the opposite corner of the grounds was a small living house, evidently the home of the gardener, while in another corner were the stables and garage, with living quarters for coachman and chauffeur. To enter that house a burglar would have to scale the wall, risk detection from one of the three outlying houses, cross a long open space, and break into the house which obviously was well protected by safeguards. The more I looked at the house the more I became interested. If a burglar had entered and stolen those jewels he must be a man whom it would be an interesting task to run down. But had a burglar entered? Were there any burglars out of prison just then, who would venture such a task?

I ran over the list of two-story men whom I knew to be at liberty then. None of them seemed of a class to perform a job like this. There was one man whom the job fitted—Peters, the gentleman burglar—but Peters was in the Federal prison at Leavenworth and so was eliminated.

I spent a long hour studying the house in this fashion; then I went back to the hotel and called up the agency to report for the day. Chief Burns himself answered my call.

"Say, Cornell," he said, "Hollister has been phoning the insurance company asking why they don't send out an investigator to look up his claim. What's the matter?"

As briefly and succinctly as I could I related all that I have here told.

"The thing doesn't look right from his side," said I. "That's why I'm not reporting at the Hollister house."

"The chief was silent for a moment. 'Are you sure her brother was out there Saturday?' he asked. 'That's the information I got here,' I replied.

"Well," said he, "you go up to the house and report, and make your investigation. Come back to your 'stavel' for the evening. And for heaven's sake, don't do anything to make them think you may not believe things are all right."

He rang off.

At the Hollister house I was ushered at once in to Col. Hollister on informing the butler of my mission.

stairs, the window of the room had been opened, the jewel drawer had been forced and the jewels taken.

"A plain case of robbery by someone who had studied the premises for a long time," said the colonel.

I asked a score of questions to throw them off the scent, and in the meantime I took a careful look at that window. It was 30 feet from the ground, in a flat wall. I looked at the marks on the frame; and then I nearly whistled in surprise. The marks were made by some clumsy round instrument not at all resembling the efficient jimmy of the experienced burglar.

"An amateur's job," said I to myself. I looked more closely, and saw that the window never had been forced open at all. It had been left un-locked! The marks had been put in for a blind, or I was no judge. The force open such windows as were in the Hollister house requires considerable leverage; and the marks of the tool used are sure to sink deep into the wood. In this case, the surface of the frame was only bruised—scarcely denting at all. The windows were not locked when the burglar came to do his work! Whoever had done the job had done it from the inside. The window had no part in it.

I thanked the Hollisters for their courtesy, excused myself because it was getting late, and said it would be necessary for me to pay another short visit to the house in the morning.

"I see that the man who did this job is an old experienced hand," I said, as I took my departure. "The signs of an old-timer's work are all over the job. I'm afraid we'll have a hard time recovering your jewels, Mrs. Hollister, if we ever do."

As I said this I watched her closely and I thought that a slight look of relief seemed to flicker in her eyes; but instantly she began to lament.

"O, I hope you do, recover them. I never, never will be able to find such perfect stones in another set."

But all the time the impression was with me that the woman still was playing a part, still was acting.

At the hotel I entered my room and stopped short in surprise to see Mr. Burns sitting in my chair.

"Shut the door," he said. "Well, what did you find at the house?"

I told him, I was rather proud of my work. He smiled.

"Cornell," said he, "I picked you out for this case because I know you've got patience for digging up details, and you've certainly made good. I want to tell you, however, that when this case came in I had a hunch that we'd find something queer about it."

"Because," said he, "Mrs. Hollister's brother's reputation is no secret to me. And Mrs. Hollister's affection for him is known to be almost like a mother's."

We sat still and looked at each other for several long, silent seconds. The Chief waited for me to speak.

"Chief," I said, "I'd better find this brother right away."

He burst out into a hearty laugh.

"What is it?" she cried. "What has happened to my brother?"

"Don't be alarmed, Mrs. Hollister," I said. "Nothing has happened to him, and nothing will—unless you wish it. It is all up to you."

"What is it?" she whispered. "O, what is it? Tell me."

"Mrs. Hollister," said the chief, "hasn't your brother been pressing you to give him large sums of money lately?"

Her eyes ran from one to the other of us, seeking to read what we knew. She wasn't acting now, and I felt sorry for her.

"How do you know that?" she asked.

"Isn't it a fact," continued the chief, "that Colonel Hollister refused to give you any more money to give your brother?"

She sank into a chair and sat staring at us in terror.

I called up Mrs. Hollister and asked if she would consent to see me alone without her husband's knowledge.

"Why?" she demanded.

"I cannot say over the phone, Mrs. Hollister," I replied. "But—it is about your brother."

There was a silence of several seconds. Then came the answer: "Come to the house at once."

"Good," said the chief, "I'll go with you."

It was night now, and at the Hollister home we were ushered into the library by a maid. Presently Mrs. Hollister came in alone and closed the door behind her.

"What is it?" she cried. "What has happened to my brother?"

"Don't be alarmed, Mrs. Hollister," I said. "Nothing has happened to him, and nothing will—unless you wish it. It is all up to you."

and called for her wraps and the big touring car.

"Where are you going madame?" asked the maid.

"I've got to run in to the Delmont Hotel," said Mrs. Hollister calmly. "I have an appointment there for this evening."

Late that night Col. Hollister called up Mr. Blaney of the Independent Burglary Insurance Company.

"I say, Blaney," said he, "drop that claim I presented for Mrs. Hollister's jewels. Luckiest thing in the world just happened. Mrs. Hollister's brother just came out to the house and took a walk down by the beach and found the jewel case with the stones all in it lying under a bunch of sand grass. Yes, yes; found them—all of them—yes; the burglars must have dropped them in making their escape. Yes; probably escaped in a motor boat up the sound—Yes, Smart boy, that Mrs. Hollister's brother, Blaney. I'm going to do something handsome for him—Yes, drop the claim completely. The jewels are back here safe in the house, and that's all we care for. Good night, Blaney, good night."

A few days later the news of the attempted burglary of the Hollister home leaked out, and the newspapers made a great ado over the finding of the stolen jewels. But I wonder what they would have done had they known at the time that what I have told here is the real story of how the Hollister jewels did not disappear.

CITY COUNCIL MEETING

Two By-Laws Were Mission and One F Various Other Mat

Two by-laws were submitted City Council meeting last night for the election of a Hydro-Board and another for the of Ward 10, for Bell Memorial purposes. The session was rather less, but there was at that some patch to the proceedings. Various items of interest to ratepayers touched upon all of which are mentioned below for Courier read.

Board of Works

The Board of Works reported follows.

"That the claim of Michael Laughlin for injury to auto, overhanging tree be paid, it has been found that tree was on Ray street."

"That the following communication be referred to the City Solicitor: M. S. Howitt of Oct. 23rd (Law street); Brewster & Heyd of Oct. 14th, (re Mrs. Luckner)."

"That the following communication be filed: Joseph P. McHugh of 10th; Brewster & Heyd of Oct. (re Whayman); L. M. Metcal Oct. 25th."

Mr. A. C. Lyons appeared before the council in regard to Law street. By narrowing the street, rate property would be damaged, Mr. Lyons, it was in its way, a street. He protested against having narrowed. A few years ago, property owners received the worst of that section when St. Paul's Ave was closed.

CENTRAL IS SURE TO KNOW

Telephone Operator Infallible Authority on Pronunciation of Difficult Proper Names.

Three men argued over the pronunciation of a fourth man's name. The fourth man was not present. He was prominent, but unknown to the disputants.

"We'll settle this thing right now," said one.

He called a telephone operator on the fourth man's exchange.

"Say, Central, how do you pronounce this name?" he asked.

He spelled it out. She told him. Her pronunciation differed from anything previously suggested.

"But it is all right, am sure," said the man who had telephoned. "Those girls always know. They are an authority on the pronunciation of proper names. A man with a funny name can't bear to hear it called wrong, even over the phone, and the first thing he does when he acquires the use of a new telephone is to drill the operator on the correct pronunciation."

Tactful Request

Dobbleigh has a confirmed borrower, and what was worse, he seldom returned the borrowed articles. He had held on to Whibbey's umbrella, for instance, for nearly a year.

"And I'm blest if I know how I am ever going to get it back," said Whibbey.

"Easy," said Hickenlooper. "Call a messenger and send Dobbleigh this note."

And he scribbled off the following: "Dear Dobbleigh: If you can spare it I'd like to borrow that umbrella of mine for a couple of days. Can you oblige me?"—Harper's Weekly.

Not so Bad as He Feared. "I will be your Nemesis!" she hissed.

"All right," he answered. "I was afraid you might take advantage of the fact that this is leap year and insist on being something else."

Dress for an Earthquake

An old lady was staying at a hotel at Nice at the time of the earthquake. "My dear," she was wont to say, "I was simply tumbled out of bed and the ceiling cracked. I threw on a fur cloak and unconsciously pulled on my long black suede glove, and when I got down to the hall and found all the other guests—my dear, I was the best dressed woman there!"
