Short Exposition of Christian Doctrine

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST.

The life of our Lord with its teachings, words and actions proclaim his Divinity. "He spoke as no man ever spoke before" is the testimony of those who heard Him, and the teachings of His lips are credentials of His Divinity. He taught that all men are made to be happy with God in Heaven. He taught that the Son of Man came on earth to forgive sins; and that "forgiveness of sins should be preached to the whole world." His Religion was to be confined to no tribe, or race of men, but He taught His disciples that they were to go out into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature.

He taught that love of God and love of one's neighbor for God's sake is the motive of true religion which He came to place in the world. He taught the maxim which the world laughs to scorn, "Love your enemies, do good to them that hate you, and pray for those that use you despitefully and persecute you," and, "If a man smite thee on the one cheek turn to him the other also. Forgive, not seven times only, but seventy times seven."

He taught Faith in the unseen, Hope in that which appears not, and Love for Him whom no man has ever seen, and that these three virtues are necessary for one who will be a Christian and follow in His footsteps. These are a few of His teachings. On the face of them they are not the teachings of one who is merely a man. They are Divine Commands, and each one He has prefaced with the words: "I say unto you." They are His commands to us and they proclaim Him to be God.

The words of Jesus Christ are the words of God. He spoke as God, when He was teaching, when He was commanding, when foretelling the future. He taught with authority and not as one who fell back on some one greater than Himself. So when He would have persuaded the people of Capernaum, they rejected Him because of this "creative manner which He showed." When He was on the Lake of Tiberias in the great storm He said to the winds and the waves: "Peace, be still" and they ceased their uproar. He spoke to the demons who possessed men and they went out. He said to the dead man at the gate of Naim: "I say to thee arise," and the dead came to life at His word. He spoke to the paralytic, to the blind, to lepers, saying only "Be healed" or equivalent words, and what He said came to pass. He said, "Thy sins are forgiven thee," and worked a miracle to prove He could forgive sins by a word. Yet God only can forgive sins. He foretold His passion and His death; He read the secret thoughts of men; and all His teachings He exemplified in His life. He must be Divine.

The acts of Jesus Christ proclaim Him Divine. He was conceived in the womb of a Virgin, a thing which God alone can do. He comes into the world without any violation of the virginity of His Blessed Mother. What merely human being can have anything to say about His birth? He teaches, and listens to the teachings of the Doctors in the Temple when He is but twelve. He goes about His ministry as more than human. He works wonders by hundreds and all proclaim Him God. He allows men to worship Him as God and forbids them not. He says of Himself I have power to lay down my life, and I have power to take it again. He bestows the same powers which He claims to have upon others, as in the case of the seventy-two disciples, and later of the twelve Apostles. He gives them powers which are given only by God, of consecrating His Body and Blood, of forgiveness of sins, of giving the Holy Spirit, and of conferring all the life giving Sacrament.

Finally He builds His Church on St. Peter The Rock and foretells that it shall last until the end of time. Now if after these few glimpses at the thoughts, words, and acts of Jesus Christ, we should say, "He is not God," who can say He may be?

Important Items.

(From the Ave Maria.)

Our belief that the policy of the French government in forcing priests and seminarians into the army, however hostile in spirit, will ultimately help both the priests and the army, has already met partial confirmation. Mr. P. O. Conybeare declares in the London National Review that the army has capitulated to the clergy. "O. H. H. clubs for soldiers," he says, "have been started in all barracks and the enforcement of military service on seminarians, instead of laicizing the priests as was hoped, has clericalized the army."

We like to think that many Americans read with deep regret the President's reference to the destruction of the Maine in his message to the Senate and House of Representatives, and that the jingo senators and congressmen were not all pleased to be reminded of their action, at a moment when so much depended on the ascendancy of reason or of passion. Mr. McKinley was justified in stating that the finding of the board of inquiry established that the origin of the explosion was external by a submarine mine; but in adding that the members of the board "only halted, through lack of positive testimony, to fix the responsibility of its authorship," he must have known that every intelligent reader would naturally supply the words "on Spain" in order to complete the sense. Our government did not dare to charge the Spaniards with that crime, because there was no way of proving it; but we undeniably acted on the conviction that they were guilty of it. At this late day Spain might safely admit the responsibility of the catastrophe if it were here; but, on the contrary, she still disclaims it with indignation. Under these circumstances it was anything but magnanimous to refer to the matter in an official message. "It is good to have a giant's power; but, oh, it is tyrannous to use it like a giant!"

It is, of course, too much to hope that all those who considered our war with Spain perfectly just and absolutely necessary will modify their views, now that peace is restored and excitement allayed. There are persons who never change their minds on any subject. But we notice that not a few of our leading citizens now see the stirring events of last summer in a light very different from that in which they first viewed them. The President's message will have the effect of opening the eyes of many more. It is a labored effort to justify a war that every sane man must sooner or later regard as unjustifiable, and to shift the responsibility of its inevitably disastrous consequences. The need of a standing army of 100,000 men is now generally admitted; but it is a significant fact that recruiting was never more slow than at present. The ardor of the patriot has cooled. We shall have to fight the gentle savages of the Philippines yet; and those who were so eager to arm them will not be so ready to fight them. It may be a long time before we enjoy peaceful possession of our Asiatic provinces. And the acquisition of Cuba and Hawaii may have a result little dreamed of now, if at the next presidential election the citizens of the United States find themselves divided into imperialists and non-imperialists. The change in our attitude toward the rest of the world must effect changes among ourselves. There are crisis in every human organization. The crisis for us will be when the nation begins to expand in wrong directions. A republican form of government has weak points, as well as strong points, and both should be studied by voters as well as by statesmen.

The Work of Old Postage Stamps.

At the Catholic Seminary of Liege, (Belgium) has been undertaken for several years a Work which, though humble in its means, aims at realizing a very noble purpose, viz., the conversion of Congo, (Central Africa) to our Catholic Faith, and, by our divine Worship, the civilization of the poor negroes, who still are plunged in the darkness of paganism: We mean the Work of Old Postage Stamps. This Work gathers up all the postage stamps which generous benefactors forward in order to obtain funds for the foundation of Catholic villages on the dark continent. A hard labor, exclaims a dear reader. We will answer by showing the results of the Work. Very humble in its origin, the Work, thanks to its perseverance and to the generosity of its benefactors, got an importance and an extension which provoke the admiration of those who have at heart its success. Let the first Catholic village founded by the Work is called St. Trudo and is situated about 12 miles from Luembob. Its direction has been entrusted to the Rev. Missionaries of the Immaculate Heart of Mary. The second one called St. Lambert, was started by the African Fathers of Mgr. Lavignerie between the two lakes Kivu and Tanganika. 3rd. Liege St. Hubert founded by the RR. Jesuit Fathers not very far from the sea coast, on the line of the Congo Railway. 4th. St. Leo and St. Julien: their foundation has been accepted also by the RR. Jesuit Fathers. In short, 2100 pounds sterling have been collected during seven years by means of these little squares of paper so generally despised, which are called old postage stamps. Several marks of high approbation and encouragement were also granted to us: The Belgian Government honoured our Work by a gold medal at the World's Fair of Brussels (1897). But the highest mark of incentive as well as of approbation is certainly that which His Holiness Pope Leo XIII. granted us in Apostolic Brief of February 1898, in which he concedes 40 days indulgence for "any work or gift" by which one aids the Work. A few days after despatching this Brief, the Holy Father gave His Apostolic Blessing to all the benefactors of the Work and to their families. These favours and these proofs of kindness are for us a precious incentive and suggest to us the hope that the Work will continue to flourish and to receive the blessings of Heaven. Therefore, we made a most earnest appeal to all generous persons who have at heart the progress of the Catholic Church, their Mother and benefactress, in order that they may help as far as possible the poor negroes of Congo, and we beg all persons who have any stamps or can collect any, to kindly send them to us. We take advantage of this occasion to offer to all our devoted agents and benefactors, as also to the Catholic Press throughout the world, our most sincere thanks for their inexhaustible kindness and generosity. We are hoping stamps will reach us ever more and more so that we may be able to continue founding centres of religion and civilization by means of humble postage stamps, but so visible all appearance, but so visible all appearance, but so visible all appearance. THE official tests by the Inland Revenue Department of the Canadian Government show the Royal to be a pure baking powder, superior to all others in leavening strength.

It therefore makes purer, more wholesome and economical food than any other baking powder or leavening agent.

Royal Baking Powder is more convenient for use than cream of tartar and soda and makes finer-flavored food.

Life Among the Lowly.

People who may imagine that in all the poorer sections of our big cities vice and misery always abound and virtue and happiness are absent, will be disillusionized by such portions, in part at least, by reading two articles which may be found in Harper's and the Century for the month of December. In the latter magazine Mr. Jacob A. Riis, a writer whose previous contributions upon kindred topics have frequently been mentioned in these columns, treats of "The Passing of Cat Alley," a poor residential lane of New York City which has given way to the march of improvement, and tells us of some phases of the life which the residents thereof led. After describing the poverty of the locality and the hard struggles which the occupants of its hives usually had to keep the wolf from their doors, Mr. Riis adds: "Withal, there was as much kindness of heart and charity in Cat Alley as in any three community up-town or down-town or out of town, for that matter. It had its standards and its customs, which were to be observed; but underneath it all, and not very far above the surface, was a human fellowship that was capable of any sacrifice to help a friend in need. Many was the widow with whom and with whose children the alley shared its daily bread, which was scanty enough, God knows, when death or disaster had brought her to the jumping-off place. In twenty years I do not recall a suicide in the alley, or a case of suffering demanding the interference of the authorities, unless with such help as the hospital could give. The alley took care of its own, and God bless them over the world when it came to that. And death was not always the worst." Mr. Riis mentions in particular one case where a father of a large family of little children went suddenly insane and had to be taken to an asylum, which he afterwards quitted. Then the children, says he, came upon the alley and lyally did the alley stand by them until a place was found for their mother by the politicians of the ward, for whom Mr. Riis adds the ally was ever afterwards solid. But, remarks he, by way of explanation, organized charity might, and indeed did, provide groceries on the instalment plan. The Tammany captain provided the means of pulling the family through and of bringing up the children, although there was not a vote in the family; and he tells us, furthermore, that this was not by any means the first unselfish act of charity which this politician of Cat Alley performed in behalf of its needy residents.—S. H. Review.

Probable Fruitless Negotiations.

It was a favorite shibboleth with the Grits, when in opposition, that the "Tories" had antagonized the people of the United States and that in consequence no trade concessions could be hoped for from the authorities at Washington until a change of Government took place at Ottawa.

As already announced, the imperial penny postage came into effect on Christmas Day. By this change the letter postage from Canada to Great Britain and all the principal colonies of the Empire, except Australia and India, was reduced to two cents.

As mentioned elsewhere, Premier Farquharson has gone to Ottawa. The Premier of Nova Scotia and questions before taking up the subject of reciprocity, and now when practically questions of settlement which mean a considerable gain to the United States are in shape for ratification, the Canadians are told that they will be unable to secure the single one concession which they demanded as a basis for the treaty.

As mentioned elsewhere, Premier Farquharson has gone to Ottawa. BETHLEHEM.

BY RAMON HAYES.
On the white hills ethereal music fell,
Serpentine to a faint, sweet cry
That thrilled the slumbering earth, the watchful sky.
And rent the pillars of insistent hall.
An auspicious hour for Israel!
Yet lo! she viewed with dark, disdainful eye
Her Infant-King, and haughtily passed by
That snow-swept cave—His lowly cradle.
Hath pride enslaved us too? Seek we a crown
Of fleeting glory? Do our hearts recoil
In fierce rebellion at some earthly loss?
Or what the world has stung us with its frowns,
With Christ to guide our feet and cheer our toll,
Tread we the narrow pathway of the Cross.
—Ave Maria.

YOUR DANGER NOW

It is from the overworked condition of the liver and kidneys which are unable to expel impurities from the blood. This causes rheumatism. Hood's Sarsaparilla has been wonderfully successful in curing this disease. It neutralizes the acid in the blood and permanently cures the skin and scalp which other medicines fail to relieve. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best winter medicine because it purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood. It gives help just where help is needed. It tones the stomach, stimulates the liver, and increases and sustains the kidneys. It wards off pneumonia, fever, bronchitis, colds, coughs, and the grip.

Mary Gainer's Inheritance.

MARY CATHERINE CROWLEY IN AVE MARIA.

"The projectors of the scheme are keeping very quiet about their plans. If the news of the ostensible discovery were noted abroad, the people up in that region would either refuse to sell or else would hold their farms at such fabulous figures that it would amount to the same. Mr. George Hazelton is already an enthusiast upon the subject. He has invested to a considerable extent, and he offers me, as a special act of friendship, an opportunity of joining with him. Mr. Hazelton senior, on the contrary, being an ultra-conservative, stands aloof from the enterprise, and has no faith in it. He maintains that it is altogether too chimerical—a fairy tale; the honorable men who have gone into it, he says, may be the dupes of the others. Of course, one might visit the locality and examine for one's self; but even then, who knows but sharpers might put oil into the wells surreptitiously, with intent to deceive, as gold miners are 'told'?" Who ever heard before of wells of coal oil? And, then, who knows that the speculators ever intend to put the money subscribed into land for the benefit of the stockholders at all? The old gentleman advises his son to go up there and buy land independently, if he is determined to take up with the idea. Now, the question is, how do you regard it all? Why—what is the matter—dear?"
Bernard refrained from watching Mary's face during the last few minutes. Not wishing to be distracted in his statement of the case, he had kept his eyes fixed the while upon a distant church spire outlined against the horizon, which he had unconsciously likened to a commentary upon the text of his remarks. Now when he turned to her, he saw that her countenance was singularly white, and wore the expression of one who had received a mental shock of some kind.
"Mary, you are over-tired, and I have selfishly induced you to walk! Shall I hail a car?" he asked, anxiously.
"No, not I am not tired. I have had a revelation and am dead, that is all."
How could Bernard but misconstrue the remark! "She thinks I have become possessed by an inordinate eagerness to be rich," he thought, with a tinge of bitterness at being so misjudged.
"There is little likelihood of my developing into an insatiable speculator absorbed by the passion of money-getting, pray understand," he continued, in a burst tone. "My highest ambition is to make a happy home for you to share; my dream of wealth, to be able to gratify your every wish."
"I know, Bernard, I know!" she gasped. "In my thoughts I did you no injustice; you are too generous and upright ever to begrudge yourself by unjust means. You are my advice? I think, with old Mr.

Hazelton, it would be better to buy land independently and deal personally with the present owner. In this way you would be confident of treating him honestly, and at the same time would protect yourself. These people are trying to buy up the land; for—well—father has a little farm up there."
"Y or father!"
"Yes. Did you not know he once lived in Clarion County? And yesterday, quite unexpectedly, he had an offer for the property—an offer that seemed most advantageous, but which is in reality a paltry sum in view of this project."
"Oh, beg him to hold on to his land by all means!" broke out Bernard, in joyous congratulation. "It will secure to him and to your mother every comfort against their old age."
"Alas! he has this very evening to mail the papers transferring a right and title to it—another," faltered Mary. "I pray God I may reach home in time to prevent this misfortune. You will permit me, I am sure, to repeat to him so much of what you have told me as may serve to warn him?"
"That goes without saying. Mary, how you must feel along!"
"I must. An old friend has sought to wrong father, I am afraid. However, perhaps I am at fault, after all," she exclaimed, stopping short.
"His farm is some distance from the coal fields; there is not a bit of coal on the place, I have often heard him say. Yes, I must be under a misapprehension, for the oil is found only in the vicinity of the coal veins."
"Then there is still a chance," she continued, hastening on again. "No doubt father will be glad to have a chat with you upon the subject later, but I will ask you not to wait to see him now; it will be better for me to break the news to him alone. At last here we are at the door. Good-evening, Bernard! I shall pray that your every venture may be attended with success. Perhaps you have not only furthered your own fortunes but saved ours from wreck to-day."

The vision of prosperity conjured up in her mind by Bernard's story, his bearing upon her father's affairs, was not a wish one. The fifteen hundred dollars would, she knew well, have been either laid by against the hour of need, or spent mainly for her. Peter would still have been obliged to retain his post of night-watchman. But if oil should be found on Peter Gainer's land, then indeed might he and his good wife enjoy the contentment of well-earned ease and rest for the remainder of their days.
"Oh, that father may not be gone!" she exclaimed. "Ah, here is his hat in the hall, Father! He is out alone, no longer able to restrain her impatience—" father, did you mail the deed?"
"No," he answered from the dining-room, and came out to meet her. "But I have it signed and ready, Mr. Peniston says everything is all right. He wrote a bit of a letter to go with it, and addressed the packet so there would be no mistake. See, here it is! I shall drop it in a post box on the way to my watch. I was just going out. Good-night, alanna!"
Mary threw her arms about his neck and burst into tears.
"No, no, father, everything is not all right!" she said, brokenly. "But, thank God, 'tis not too late to make it so." And she hastily related to him what Bernard had told her.
Peter stood listening with the packet in his hand. When she had finished, he took out the deed, and after running his eyes over it, tore it into shreds, cast the fragments on the floor and stamped upon them with a muttered imprecation. Then he put on his hat and went out, banging the door after him.

CHAPTER IV.
Peter would not admit that his brother had knowingly conspired in the attempt to induce him to part with his farm at the moment when it promised to yield a golden harvest.
"No, no! Michael was deceived by the talk of that smooth-tongued sharper who pretended to want it for pasture," he affirmed. "Why, Michael would not see his own brother defrauded—and he had no other concern in the matter." If Mrs. Gainer and Mary thought differently, they refrained from expressing their opinion.
The day following the disclosure, however, Peter applied for leave of absence from his post; and at the end of the week set out for Clarion County, to see for himself what was going on there. He was accompanied by Mr. Peniston; the latter being very glad of an opportunity to look into the matter on his own account, as well as to protect the interests of his client.
Peter was away for six months. An interminable exile it seemed to his wife and daughter; never before had he been from home for more than a day or two at a time. But the reports that came from him and the apparently fabulous figures on the checks he sent them, but which the cashier of the bank where they had hitherto kept their small savings, smilingly cashed or deposited to their credit without question, made the two women feel as though they were living in a dream, and must presently awake again to the stern struggle of life.

At last the husband and father returned, and they found the dream indeed a reality; for he brought with him eighty thousand dollars in cash, besides an income from leases amounting to several hundred a day.
Both Peter and his wife had but one idea of the value of money—to use it for the benefit of their Mary. A fine house was purchased in the northern part of the city, furnished throughout with every comfort and elegance of the day, regardless of expense; and, with happy, unselfish hearts, the family entered upon their new life.
Thus in the sunlight of prosperity three years passed with them. Peter looked well after his affairs, and his substance increased. Mrs. Gainer took an old-fashioned pride in the management of her spacious home and the direction of her servants; in her stores of household linen, china, and plate. And both she and her husband delighted in their daily drive behind the "high-stepping bay", which Peter did not buy from the enterprising stock farmer who had, ostensibly, sought to purchase his wealth-yielding acres.
To be sure, the Gainers' aristocratic neighbors characterized the old people's frank enjoyment of their tardily acquired possessions as vulgar display, and a few acquaintances of their humbler days attempted to ridicule their so-called pretensions. But, tranquilly unconscious alike of envious or supercilious criticism, they continued in "the even tenor of their way"; and not a charitable institution in the town but was the better off because old Peter had "struck oil."

As for Mary, though naturally quiet and retiring, she seemed to glide into her new sphere "as to the manner born." Gently overruling her parents' ambitious desire to obtain for her an entrance into the exclusive society by which they were surrounded, she devoted her leisure to doing the good that came nearest to her hand.
The working-girls' clubs had no more generous friend than this sweet-faced young woman, who herself had been a working-girl. The Newby's Home and the parish societies received a share of her largess and sympathy. Her days were thus as busy as ever, until as time went on she was surprised to find that, engrossed by the interests of the unfortunate, she had unconsciously furthered her own.

The zealous woman of prominent social position beside whom she had worked in self-forgetfulness, grew to respect and admire the gentle-minded daughter of the plain old oil magnate; for she not only had beauty and good-breeding combined almost irresistible factors of success everywhere? Invitations began to come to her naturally. Mrs. Guy Peniston no longer considered Mary's spiritual face an impossibility as an adjunct of her drawing rooms; and Mrs. Oswalder Biddle predicted for the daughter of the willow miner a brilliant worldly future. Unknown to this exalted authority, her opinion and that of good, unsophisticated Mrs. Gainer exactly coincided. Mary must make a grand marriage; this was the desire of the doting mother's heart. To be sure, there was Bernard; and for some time an "understanding" had existed between the young people; but 'tis she was now disposed to disclaim. "Mary should look higher than the foreman of a mill," she said; for Bernard had not gone into the oil speculations as largely as he might have done, perhaps because of some inconvenient scruples against acquiring the property of the rude mountaineers upon false pretences, as had been attempted in the case of Peter Gainer. He was, indeed, now a partner as well as foreman of the mill; but this Mrs. Gainer amiably chose to ignore.
Peter, too, thought, with his wife, that Bernard was all very well, but Mary should "do better." There was Mr. Peniston's son, for instance; college bred and a society swell; "a leader of the gentry!"—Peter supposed the latter to be a political contingent.
But Mary only laughed, and proclaimed that she would marry Bernard or she remain unwed.
"No," she declared, with decision. "Bernard and I love each other worthily and truly; our hearts are united, and I would renounce all the wealth in Christendom rather than be separated from him."
"Well, well, alanna! have your way," consented Margaret at last, sighing as she saw her ambitious six castles fade away; but with a tender recollection of the long '70s when she too, in a humbler station, had chosen with a like unworshipfulness, and yet, as had happened in God's providence, wisely and to her own advantage.
It was harder to win Peter over. "Married to young Arthur Peniston, she might hold her head as high as any of them," he said.
Mary answered with spirit that she would be prouder to be Bernard's wife than of any other distinction the world had to offer. And finally the dread of rendering her unhappy by his obstinacy caused the old man to yield.

A Dunville Jeweller's Wife
CURED OF PALPITATION OF THE HEART AND SMOOTHING SPELLS BY MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS.
Mrs. D. E. LaSalle, Canal Street, Dunville, Ont., whose husband keeps a jewellery store, and is one of the best known and most progressive citizens of Dunville, Ont., gives the following description of her recent experience in the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills for weak nerves, dizziness, palpitation of the heart, smothering spells at night and sleeplessness. Before I used them I could not get to rest at night, and my nerves were often so unstrung that I would start in alarm at the least noise.
