OR, THE Countess of Basingwell

CHAPTER XXX.

"I don't quite see how it can be done," he said; "but of course, if it is possible I shall be pleased to do so."

"I will read it aloud to you," said Lady Basingwell. "Will not that do?"

It was such a simple device, yet so adequate that the lawyer looked at her with approval.

"Hm!—yes," he said. "Be pleased to read, my lady."

So she read, changing the names throughout so that he should not be able to recognize the parties to the settlement, and she had looked furtively at the door; but his answer had reassured her, and she had become sympathetic in an instant.

"No, I am not ill. It is nothing," he said. By what strange freak of fortune was it that he had never heard the full name of his Phyllis.

"You must wonder what has brought me here with this young lady," said Mr. Stillman, taking up the conversation as if it were an interrupted speech, "and I will frankly tell you. Nothing less than your well-known probity of character."

"Oh!" said Lionel, impatiently, "you wish my name to a subscription. I am very busy, and if you will let me have the paper at once, and assure me that the object is a good one, I shall be happy to put my name down for a reasonable amount."

Mr. Stillman let him finish, as if he would thereby set him an example of careful and patient listening.

"You are mistaken, my lord; and while I will admit that your time must be engrossed by many cares—"

Lionel, leaning back with a sigh, as one saying to himself that he might as well listen—"I am able to state positively that the business I come on is of more importance than any thing you may know of."

"You will oblige me greatly, sir, if you would state what it is without this preface," said Lionel.

"Some preface and a few patiently answered questions are in a measure a necessity," answered the deliberate Mr. Stillman. "Will you tell me if you recall the night the late Earl of Basingwell died?"

Lionel was alert in an instant. The matter of the dying man's struggle to do some one justice had never wholly left his mind, notwithstanding that any actual effort to learn any more had been finally given up.

"I remember perfectly," he answered. "What do you know of the matter? How do you know of it?"

"In good time, your lordship," said Mr. Stillman, deprecatingly. "You do remember how anxious he was that a certain document should be found," a day or two from school with bilious, sick headache. I have taken doctor's medicine and other preparations, which did little good.

"When I had the sick headache I would vomit a lot and could keep nothing on my stomach. My mother got Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and I was soon improved and continued the treatment until entirely cured. My condition generally was greatly benefited, and I am now in the best of health."

Mr. J. J. Keohan, J. P., writes:—"This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Miss Cora Cochran and believe her statement in regard to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to be true and correct."

Keep the liver active by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and you will prevent a multitude of petty ills. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

either of them and that it was a call of business."

"Then let them come in here," said Lionel, shortly.

He rose when a gentleman of good presence, and of the unmistakable deportment of the man of law, came into the library, accompanied by a young lady of perhaps twenty years of age, though her age must have been a somewhat doubtful matter to any observer. He scarcely looked at her, except to bow; then he turned his eyes inquiringly on the gentleman.

"My name," said the gentleman, "will be unknown to you; and the nature of my business must be my excuse for this intrusion. I am James Stillman, of the law firm of Stillman, Stillman & Travers. This young lady, whom we will call Miss Phyllis Dearborn for the present—Are you ill, my lord?"

No wonder he asked. At the name of Phyllis there had risen before him, like a sudden phantom, the image of the Phyllis whom he had known, and who had never stepped from the niche she had filled, from the first, in his memory. It was the sickening thought of how his life had been wrecked since then that somehow smote him most, and he had leaped from his chair as one struck.

A look of alarm had shot into the face of the girl at his sudden action, and she had looked furtively at the door; but his answer had reassured her, and she had become sympathetic in an instant.

"No, I am not ill. It is nothing," he said.

By what strange freak of fortune was it that he had never heard the full name of his Phyllis.

"You must wonder what has brought me here with this young lady," said Mr. Stillman, taking up the conversation as if it were an interrupted speech, "and I will frankly tell you. Nothing less than your well-known probity of character."

Mr. Stillman let him finish, as if he would thereby set him an example of careful and patient listening.

"You are mistaken, my lord; and while I will admit that your time must be engrossed by many cares—" in order that justice might be done somebody, unnamed, unknown."

"I remember perfectly," answered Lionel, with difficulty refraining from asking questions; but restraining himself from a feeling of the usefulness of trying to hasten Mr. Stillman.

"I can tell you where that document is, my lord," said Mr. Stillman, solemnly.

"Then I beseech you to do so," said Lionel.

"I can tell you what wrong it was that should be righted."

"For Heaven's sake man, do it, do it!" cried Lionel, half-angrily.

"You said that night to that dying man, in the hearing of several witnesses," went on the imperturbable Mr. Stillman, "that you would do justice at any cost to yourself."

"I needed neither dying man, nor witnesses, nor promise, to make me willing to do any justice in my power then or now."

"I believe it, my lord, from all I have ever heard of you. But forgive me if I seem prolix or far from the point. May I ask that Lady Basingwell be asked to favor us with her presence here?"

"This passes all decency, Mr. Stillman," said Lionel, angrily. "Make known your errand to me alone. It is not—"

"I beg of you, my lord," pleaded Mr. Stillman. "What I ask is in the interests of the justice you have promised to see done."

Lionel remembered what his wife had confessed to him a few days before, and his hand fell on the bell-rope and pulled it.

"My compliments to Lady Basingwell, and ask her if she will do me the honor to come to the library," said Lionel, to the lackey.

While the man was gone there was no effort at conversation made by Lionel, and Mr. Stillman wore the air of finding it impossible to use his eloquent tongue until the advent of Lady Basingwell. She did not keep them long, but presently swept into the room with an air of haughty pride which had of late been her distinguishing characteristic. She bared, noticed the girl, who shrank from her with a sort of fear; and Mr. Stillman might as well have not existed.

"You sent for me, my lord," she said to Lionel.

He put a chair where she could sit down, bowing with the most ceremonious politeness.

"I regret disturbing you," he said; "but this gentleman requested your presence, and I look to him to justify his request."

"Do not fear, my lord," said Mr. Stillman. "Let me say to you, my lord, that the paper which the dying earl tried so hard to tell you about, was nothing less than his written confession,"—he looked with a sort of triumph at Lady Basingwell, who was listening with a languid interest that did not change at his words—"a written confession, my lord."

"Confession of what, sir?" demanded Lionel, suspecting some mystery, but rendered irritable by Mr. Stillman's prolixity.

"Lady Basingwell," said Mr. Stillman, "I call upon you to tell us what that paper contained."

CHAPTER XXXI.

"By Heaven! Mr. Stillman," exclaimed Lionel, "but this passes all effrontery I ever heard of. How dare you address my wife, Lady Basingwell, in such a manner?" and he advanced toward the man of law with so furious a countenance that the latter very quickly placed himself behind a substantial chair.

"I meant no offense, my lord, none whatever," he hastened to say. "I have reason to believe that Lady Basingwell has been aware of the existence of such a paper, and I have taken the liberty—I admit that it seems like a liberty, quite unwarranted—of asking her to produce it. Will you ask her to do so, my lord?"

Lionel turned to Flora, who had watched and listened quite unmoved. "I asked you, Lady Basingwell," he said, "to come here at this man's request. I know nothing of his errand or motives. If you wish I will have him ejected from the house."

Flora could not repress a gesture of admiration at the masterful manner of Lionel. Mr. Stillman grew red and white by turns—red at the proposed indignity, and white for fear it would be executed on him.

"It would be useless," said Flora, calmly; "though he might have accomplished his purpose without so much foolish effort at effect. I have the document he speaks of, and I will procure it if you desire it."

"If it be a document in which I have any interest, I beg that you will procure it at once," answered Lionel, as icily as she spoke.

Without any further words she arose and left the room.

"I hope your lordship—" began Mr. Stillman.

"It will be just as well to spare me and yourself," said Lionel, coldly.

"Without knowing your errand I am of the opinion that your attempt at dramatic effect has been of childish ineffectuality."

Mr. Stillman could not but feel the justice of Lionel's rebuke, but he was angered by it—angered the more, no doubt, that he did feel the justice of it. There was nothing further said until Lady Basingwell returned. She entered the room in the same easy, collected, indifferent manner that she had left it, and in her hand was a document which she handed to Lionel.

Then she sat down, curious to see the issue of the conference.

Lionel slowly opened the paper, giving a bow of inquiry to his wife and to the girl who called herself Phyllis Dearborn. Then he read it. There was nothing in it that the reader does not know; but it was of startling novelty to Lionel, and he devoured it rapidly. Then he read it over again; but the second time it was for the purpose of collecting his thoughts.

WHY WOMEN WRITE LETTERS

To Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co.

Women who are well often ask "Are the letters which the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. are continually publishing, genuine?" "Are they truthful?"

"Why do women write such letters?"

In answer we say that never have we published a fictitious letter or name. Never, knowingly, have we published an untruthful letter, or one without the full and written consent of the woman who wrote it.

The reason that thousands of women from all parts of the country write such grateful letters to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. is that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought health and happiness into their lives, once burdened with pain and suffering.

It has relieved women from some of the worst forms of female ills, from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, nervousness, weakness, stomach troubles and from the blues.

It is impossible for any woman who is a well and who writes such letters to realize how these poor, suffering women feel when restored to health; her best desire to help other women who are suffering as they did.

LIGHT, HEAT, COMFORT!

The proprietor of one of the best known multiple shopping systems is credited with saying, "Give me any old shop, in any old street, and I'll guarantee to make it in twelve months the most widely known and best frequented shop in the district." He was asked to explain. Holding up three fingers he said, "I believe in the triad of LIGHT, WARMTH, COMFORT. I should dazzle the moths until the candle drew them, I should bring them into a warm, comfortable shop, filled with a soft, pleasing radiance, and the rest is—well, mere child's play."

Mixed metaphors, perhaps, but expressive. Now we can more than imagine the kind of shop this well-known individual would open, for we pass it in almost every town—always a landmark to the street. No one fails to notice it. There is an indefinable air of welcome and invitation as one stands for a moment on the pathway and lets one's gaze travel inside it. The subdued, restful lighting effect that so charms because of its very unobtrusiveness, the absence of dark corners, the intangible feeling that if one would step inside one would be sure of experiencing a delicious sense of warmth and comfort and cheerfulness—all these are part of its appeal. Truly a shop with an individuality.

We cordially invite all progressive business men to visit our showroom and see our latest Lighting and Heating Appliances, by the adoption of which the ideal outline in the above extract from a London paper may be easily secured. Our new RADIO X Lamp and GASTEM Rad stores fill all light and heat requirements.

Manifesto of British Bankers & Financiers

THE NATION'S NEED.

At this time of great national emergency it is imperative that every citizen should realise the vastness of the work which Great Britain has to perform and should so act that the strength of the nation may be maintained. Not only must every citizen but in order that the work may be well within the nation's strength it must pull together.

The Allied fleets have driven the enemy's ships from the seas, and have established a blockade of the enemy's coasts. The enemy are thus prevented from carrying on their foreign commerce except to a very small extent, their income is seriously curtailed and their financial strength diminished. Moreover, the fleet has enabled both the British people and their Allies to draw abundant supplies of food, of material and munitions from all parts of the world to conduct their foreign commerce as usual, and to maintain their income at a high level. The straits of the Dardanelles and of the Bosphorus, indeed, the only remaining impediment to the overseas commerce of the Allies.

On land the Allies have added greatly to their military strength and power to weak ever since we have met only actually but relatively to the enemy. Germany's hopes of victory depended upon a short and swift war. These hopes have been completely dispelled.

In a long war success depends not only upon the respective material resources of the combatants, but upon the conquest power of one of them to maintain, or to add to, its fighting strength when the other's is diminished, or is not capable of expansion. It is not in doubt that the material resources of the Allies, when fully mobilised and wisely controlled, will be

Saved It Up!

By RUTH CAMERON.

"No man has any right to waste his powers of protest by fretting and fuming against the imaginary or irremediable ills of life."—Robert Whittaker.

If all the energy in the world that is wasted not only in "fretting and fuming against the imaginary or irremediable ills of life," but also in pointless, futile protest against the real evils, could be gathered together and focussed where it would really accomplish something, what a grand push toward the millennium this old world of ours would get!

I have an acquaintance who is very much troubled by the mistake she thinks her neighbor is making in permitting her daughter to go about with a man of questionable morals.

She Rants and Shouts

I seldom see this woman that she does not bring up this subject and talk about it. She gets very much excited and before she has finished, she is talking at the top of her voice, especially if I make bold to question any of her statements.

Nor is this the only subject on which she excites herself. There are several similar points of neighborhood conduct which are as a red rag to her feelings.

Whenever I see her expending all this energy and tiring herself out (for whether you realize it or not, speaking in loud tones and getting excited does tire you and use up your energy), I think how much good it might do if she used that energy positively in trying to help community conditions, instead of negatively in criticizing them.

Just Suppose She Used That Energy Positively

Suppose, for instance, she put it into doing settlement work, or into making things pleasant for some of the young people in her neighborhood, or into thinking of pleasant, encouraging things to say to her friends.

The woman who nags is another type of protest waster. "People are always talking about women nagging as if they thought they did it because

Hr. Grace Notes.

Mr. James Wells, late of the Royal Naval Reserve, leaves to-morrow for Boston where he will seek employment.

The ice in the outer harbor broke up and went out yesterday, but the inner harbor is still firm.

Miss Winnifred Giese, of Spaniard's Bay, was in town for a few days, the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Goodwin.

A fine horse owned by Mr. Charles Slade, perished a few days ago, and is a great loss to the owner.

Mr. H. Simmons arrived from New Brunswick on Friday to spend a few months with his family here. Mr. Simmons is in the coasting trade along the New Brunswick coast.

It is expected that Rev. R. H. Maddock, of Bay Roberts, will exchange pulpits with Rev. A. A. Holmes, of the Methodist Church here on Sunday next.

Coal is getting scarce here now, but the McRae Bros. are sparing their stock along in small quantities to householders and hope by their plan to tide all over the hard weather without much inconvenience.

Fathers McPhail and McDougall arrived on Saturday and are at present conducting a mission at Riverhead. Later they will conduct similar services at the Cathedral here.

We were shown yesterday the quarterly card of a poor widow whose only support was the amount received from the Relieving Office. The card assures her four dollars a quarter; $4 to provide food, firing, light and everything for 91 days—about 4 1/2 cents a day. Is our Government so poor that a poor old lone widow is to be treated thus? God help the poor!

A man when he reaches a certain age, if he needs it, is supposed to get $50 a year, which is small enough, goodness knows. But for the crime (?) of being a woman the punishment seems to be to starve her to death, as slowly as possible, on $15 a year. In some health lands, baby girls are little thought of, and in fact, are often thrown in the river. Even this to our mind is kinder than to put them when old and helpless, on an allow-

January.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Sivasah."

January is the first month of the year. For this reason we should not be too impatient with it. The succeeding months improve steadily, which shows that practice is necessary to make even a calendar perfect.

January arrives after winter has taken off its things and has settled down for keeps. It is one of our finest, indoor months, but is not affectionately regarded by fishermen, baseball players or scenery sellers. Nature is as beautiful in January as she is in July, but very few people worship her. It is too much trouble to shovel snow off of her face.

January is a fine month in which to read "Pickwick Papers," "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," "Fotash and Perlmutter," and other gems of literature. It takes some practice to do this, but a man soon learns how to chafeur a book with one hand and a furnace with the other and can absorb a great deal of learning during the cold winter evenings. When January is in good form and is going strong, the owner of an old-fashioned top-rod furnace has to have his meals brought down to the cellar to him and only escapes now and then to shovel 245 lineal feet of sidewalk after each snow. It takes a broad man to accommodate a snow-shovel lame back and a coal-shovel lame back at the same time without confusing the two and getting his treatments mixed.

January is a favorite month with the amateur gardener. In this month he does his finest work. At no time of the year is he so happy as he is in January as he sits by the fire during the evening, growing ten-pound potatoes and melons which have to be cut with a two-man saw. Nursery men become rich in January by accompanying amateur gardeners in their dreams, but no nursery man is foolish enough to come around in July to pay a friendly call.

In Canada, January is greatly beloved because of the toboggan slides, ice palaces and hockey games which flourish in that climate. The style of January used in the United States south of Minnesota is not stable enough to encourage ice palaces, however. The only ice palaces erected in the United States are those built by ice men. They are made out of ice and last all summer, but they are not popular.

In January the principal amusements are skating, sleighing, and attending annual meetings. January is now a more pleasant month than it was when it was first discovered, but it will be still further improved as soon as some method of heating, cooling and ventilating street cars at the same time can be devised.

Don't Scold, Mother! The Cross Child is Bilious, Feverish

Look at tongue! If coated, clean little stomach, liver, bowels.

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, indigestion, diarrhoea, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the food passes out of the bowels and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless "Fruit-laxative," and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, Mother! A little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeiters sold here, so surely look and see that yours is made by the "Calf." The "California Syrup of Figs" Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

German Ruses to Supply Submarines Amaze British.

London, Jan. 17.—"The ruses adopted by the Germans to supply their submarines with fuel and stores have been manifold," writes a special correspondent in the Scotsman.
"In the Mediterranean the enemy has not been able to maintain the measure of success he achieved at first, and there is evidence that against the ships of war there, as in the North Sea, he is now almost helpless.

"It is an record that an enemy submarine was a spectator of an important phase of the final departure of the Allied forces from the Gallipoli Peninsula, but there were risks involved in an attempt to interfere with the operations, and the submarine took no risks.
"Submarine supply arrangements in the Mediterranean were not so well advanced when the war broke out as they were in the northern waters. The German had foreseen his difficulties in the north. His purpose had been well defined and his plans were complete and his depots stocked.
"The underwater depots of the German submarine service were not created after the beginning of hostilities. Something of the care which had been bestowed by Germany upon peace time preparation for the war at sea may be realized from an incident in which two vessels of our county class figured in many months ago. The vessels were on duty in the North Sea, out from the eastern edge of the Dogger Bank.
"Quite a lively time was experienced on one of the ships when in the distance an object which appeared to be a periscope was seen just lifting above the surface of a very calm sea. The sighting ship was about to warn her neighbor when from the latter vessel also the suspicious object was seen. A pretty game at once developed between the two ships. It was a game which had been fatal to submarines of the enemy before, but on this occasion the prospective victim was unresponsive.
"The supposed periscope remained where it had first appeared, despite the wiles of the cruiser. The uncertainty did not last very long, and as soon as it was realized that, whatever the object was, it certainly was not a periscope, there was an examination by launch, and the young naval officer in charge of the examining party received what was perhaps the greatest surprise of his career.
"The object which had sent the cruiser on a merry dance, was a very unpretentious buoy made in Germany. It was hauled aboard the launch, and the light tackle which held it was carefully gathered in. Then came a swirl in seaweed, heavier tackle which had lain on the ocean floor, and with the heavier tackle came the surprise. Running gear, devised and shrouded with great ingenuity, was set free, and the launch crew hauled away happily. Up to the surface bore a great steel tank, and as its crusted top threw off the load of water with a sidelong heave, a voice from the launch remarked, it is said, "What price the Great Eastern!"
"Thus was found one of the first petrol supply depots set under the sea, while we were wrangling over domestic affairs, for the use of an enemy who had no thought of war? The tank was carefully examined, and the surprise occasioned by its discovery was no greater than the respect evoked by the skill displayed in its construction. Without difficulty and in complete safety the U. boats could draw oil fuel from this store, either by bringing it to the surface or by submerging beside it. There was provision for compensation by weight of water for petrol withdrawn.

"A single shot from a light gun smashed the tank to atoms, and the oil that spread over the surface of the sea was not the last film of oil which from such a source floated far to puzzle the mariners and raise strange tales.
"The problem of dealing with the 'neutral' supply ship is much more difficult in the Mediterranean than it proved in the North Sea and in northern waters generally. A serious problem enough it was in the north. Trawlers in scores took the risks of war and came out to the fringes of the Dogger Bank to glean what they could of fish or information. We are respectful of the rights and feelings of neutrals. But there came a day of reckoning all along the Dogger Bank, and of what was found in the weeding out of that place many interesting things might be told. Here is an instance:
"There was a surprise one breezy dawn for a tiny group of British trawlers on that bank. Examining destroyers rushed out of the west, and were in the midst of the fishers almost as soon as sighted. Every trawler bore an English number and every one had certainly done some fishing. There was not a single hold but held some spoil of the deep. And there was one hold in particular that seemed well filled.
"That was the traitor ship. The 'hold' was not much more than a depression. It was a false hold, fitted over the real hold and the real cargo. Under that shallow cupped upper 'hold,' with its burden of fish there was the real hold with its burden of supplies for submarines, its wireless outfit, its bombs and benzine. She was one of the best examples of her kind taken.
"The submarine supply ships were very badly shaken up that week, and none more effectively than the one trawler, which was actually a cleverly constructed oil-tanker, 'double-skinned' all over! Neutrals have but little reason to grumble if the British navy has now an inquisitive way with it. The 'concrete blocks' which were proved to be oil cases, the coils of new hawsers which yielded each its little tank of petrol, the copper packed 'tunnels' of innocent tramp steamers, have not been forgotten.
"With his under water depots failing him, his coast depots discovered and removed, and his supply ships falling into the hands of the British fleet, the resourceful German looked to the north—and it seemed to him that from the willing west—for cash down—his U boats might be reached by vessels with supplies. Then came stirring days on the edge of the ice. Little or nothing has been heard of the swift dash upon a certain station up in that bitter No Man's Land, and the silencing of a 'voice'—a German voice—which was being raised for the benefit of the U boats and the supply ships of the same."

Americans Ready to Die for Canada.

Thirty-Two U. S. Regulars Members of Western Irish Corps.
Vancouver, B.C., Feb. 15.—"You Canadians should not be sharp in your criticism of old Uncle Sam in his attitude in connection with the scrap across the pond. It must be remembered that there are two or three hundred Americans who have joined the western Irish battalion and we are only too glad to do our part to whip the Germans."
The speaker was Private Seymour, who wears on his hat the badge of the 121st Battalion, Western Irish.
"I received my honorable discharge from the 106th Company of the United States Coast Artillery at Fort Wayne, Washington, some months ago."
"When we received our discharges—33 of us—the colonel of our regiment said—'boys, if you have nothing else to do, have made no definite plans for the future, do me a favor and go and fight for Canada.' We loved the old Colonel, and many of us gave the matter serious thought. The result was that to-day 32 of that 38 are wearing khaki and ready to do or die, if necessary for Canada, and there are many more, who are strong for our brothers. Your battles are our battles and we will go through thick and thin to beat the Germans."

The Nickel Monopoly.

The agitation for the refining of Canadian nickel ore in Canada has resulted in a curious arrangement between the International Nickel Co., of New York, and the Borden Government. The Company has agreed to erect a nickel-refining plant sufficient to provide the refined nickel necessary for Canada and Great Britain, with the intimation that "it will cost more to refine the nickel in Canada than in the United States." Does this imply that there will be a higher charge for nickel made in Canada? If so, the Govt. should not for a moment allow British manufacturers to be so penalized. Even if higher prices are not charged for nickel refined in "Canada the arrangement is far from being satisfactory. The government should see to it that this valuable metal, of which Canada has the world's monopoly, is all refined in Canada, in stead of being shipped to the United States, leaving Canada with nothing but a hole in the ground.—Montreal Herald.

CORRECT WASHING OF THE HAIR.
The correct manner of washing the hair is of great importance and it is equally essential that the scalp be massaged, so that a healthy condition of blood will be stimulated in the small veins of the scalp.
The night before the shampoo olive oil should be applied to the scalp and gently rubbed in at the roots of the hair. It serves as a scalp food and prepares the hair for the work of the soap and water.
Before the shampoo the hair should be thoroughly wet and then the shampoo should be performed, firmly but not so vigorously as to bruise or irritate the scalp. Be careful that the finger nails do not scratch the scalp.
The following formula for soap jelly is very simple and it is a very effective shampoo. Shave a small cake of best white castile soap into a pint of boiling water and let stand until thick, then add a teaspoon of glycerine. The glycerine is soothing and healing to the scalp.
The hair must be wet enough so the jelly will adhere, then by rubbing until a thick lather forms, the whole head and scalp will be thoroughly cleansed before using the abundance of warm water always necessary for rinsing. After a careful rinsing with the water, continue with water which is gradually cooled until quite cold.
After the hair is rinsed and dried the scalp should be massaged with the four fingers and the thumb, beginning at the crown and working the fingers in a rotary motion.
This will have a beneficial effect upon the circulation of the blood at the roots of the hair. The hair should then be brushed with a soft brush, the greatest of care being maintained at all times not to irritate the scalp.

Be Ready To Hold Out.

We must not expect peace to come soon, or expect it to come through economic pressure, even when we succeed in making that pressure much more grinding than it is. It will come when we beat Germany in the field, and it is on this assumption only that our financial policy, like all our war policy, must be framed. We cannot without reckless imprudence base it upon the hopes of a speedy economic collapse amongst our enemies. We were led with hopes of that kind a year ago. To cherish them is to impair the vigor of our defense; to utter them cannot fail to encourage the enemy. We must so think, and so act, as to be ready to hold out for five, ten or twenty years if necessary. Our financial system must be drawn to meet all eventualities and to admit of revision from time to time as occasion may demand. Deep and earnest thought, manifold investigations, and no small strength of moral purpose will be needed to devise it and to enforce it.

New Parliament Home to Be Like Old.

Ottawa, Feb. 14.—Plans for the new parliament buildings will be started as soon as a report is received from the architects, Messrs. Pearson and Marchand, to the extent which the walls now standing can be utilized. The report is expected this week. The general plan in view is to preserve the Gothic lines of the old building but to eliminate the high tower.
It is also proposed that the Chambers of the Senate and Commons, instead of being located in the interior of the building, will be on the outside wings, ensuring better light and ventilation than were possible under the old conditions.
Should the old walls be available, it may not be necessary to call for complete plans but to start at once the rebuilding. In any event the Minister of Public Works intends to push forward the construction.

German Airmen Sent for Fresh Trousers.

FOR BRITISH PRISONER.
Berlin, Feb. 16, via London.—A new illustration of how the amenities of warfare are observed by hostile air-men is given in a letter from a German aviator on the western front.
This aviator was a participant in an aerial battle in which a British aeroplane was shot down and one of the aviators killed. The second was injured in person, but in landing his trousers had been irreparably damaged.
The aviator thus afflicted, the German letter writer says, was so distressed that the German aviator mounted an aeroplane and dropped a note into the British lines.
An hour later an English flier appeared, returning the call, and dropped a bundle containing new trousers for his comrade.

THE TIGER

is one of the most destructive of animals, and is a source of much danger to life.

Sunlight Soap

preserves and lengthens the life of your clothes, but it is a source of destruction to all dirt and uncleanliness. The amount of destruction wrought by a tiger in a single night, cannot be compared to the amount of destruction wrought by inferior soap in a single wash-day.

SUNLIGHT SOAP is an absolutely pure Soap, that saves your clothes, time, money, and labour.

NFLD. HONORED.

The Evacuation of Cape Helles — Lieut. Owen Steele and Twenty Men of the Newfoundland Battalion Selected to Remain Behind to Guide All Allied Troops Back From the Firing Line—Fifty Lost Men Found by Lieut. Steele.

Lieut. Owen W. Steele, son of Mr. S. O. Steele, a well-known Newfoundland champion long distance walker, writes an interesting letter to his parents, giving a brief account of the evacuation of Cape Helles. His letter was written on board a British warship and some extracts from it says: "An still safe and sound. Was in the final stages of the evacuation of Svina Bay and most certainly have been in the final of Cape Helles portion of the Gallipoli Peninsula, which is at the foot of Achi Baba. We landed at Cape Helles Dec. 22nd, and were there for 16 days, leaving at 4 a.m. on the last boat, January 9th. Most of our battalion left on the first night of the evacuation, which was Thursday night January 6th. Nearly all the remainder went on Friday night, the 7th, excepting twenty men in charge of myself, who were left behind. I had been turned over to General Odowda, the principal military landing officer, who was in full charge of the evacuation. We were to act as guides to the troops coming back from the firing line. (In describing the way out from the firing line, Lieut. Steele, who was a well known country walker here, compared it with going over our South Side Hill and on to Cape Spear) also to show them to which piers they had to go in the rush. He was needed in the principal military and landing officer's office assisting in various ways, such as taking messages to officers, etc., as all were getting ready to leave at 3.30 a.m. and while thus engaged it was found that an officer with some fifty men had not turned up. They had lost their way as it was pitch dark. Some of the stores that were to be left behind had been hit by fuses and four or five magazines had been lit with forty-five minute fuses, commencing at 3.15 so that they should explode at 4 a.m. General Odowda then said that some one would have to go over the hills to find the 50 men. The General asked who knew the grounds best or who was most familiar with them. Lieut. Owen Steele offered to go and went alone. It was a very unenviable task going over the hills unaccompanied. During the search, which fortunately was brief, he occasionally shouted the officer's name to attract the attention of the missing party. Eventually they were found. What occurred for their going astray was that when reaching the barbed wire enclosures coming over the hills they could not get through, as the gaps were closed. They then began to cut them and the noise they made brought Lieut. Steele to the spot and proved the success of his mission. All were on board the boats at 4 a.m., the appointed time of embarkation. Just as we were unloading from the pier, continued Lieut. Steele, our first magazine went off with an immense explosion, debris flying in all directions but did no damage beyond the breaking of a man's arm. Besides a strong gale and heavy sea ragged at the time, making the work of getting away from the wharves more difficult. When about a hundred yards off a second explosion went off and a volume of flame and smoke ascended hundreds of feet in the air but did no damage to the ships or men. Those who remained behind to guide the British troops down to the piers from 100 men all told, including the 21 Newfoundlanders and about a dozen officers, mostly staff officers, got on board a lighter to go to Imbros. The sea was raging heavily and washed over the vessel, and all on board were ordered down below and the hatches battened down and preparations made for the trip to Imbros. The trip was supposed to take from two to three hours, but owing to the heavy seas it occupied five hours. While enroute the third explosion of a magazine occurred with even greater violence than before, but no one was injured. On reaching Imbros Lieut. Steele reported to the Camp Commander, the latter informing him to put his men under canvas and to take the first opportunity to go to Mudros as this was where the balance of his Division was. He then went to the pier where he found that two trawlers were going to leave shortly for Mudros and already the trawlers had troops aboard. As he wanted to get to his battalion as soon as possible he got his twenty men on board the smaller of the trawlers, but as a strong gale was raging they were shifted to the larger trawler. Leaving Imbros at 1 p.m. on January 9th, Mudros was reached at 11 p.m., a journey of 10 hours instead of it was the stormiest experience ever known and some were surprised they came through at all. The trawler was repeatedly buried by huge waves and the 150 troops, including the Newfoundlanders, who were standing on the deck all the time, had it trying. Most of them were sick and besides holding on grim death for fear of being washed overboard, they were soaked to the skin from the sprays of sea. But a greater hardship still had to be encountered when Mudros was reached, as the soldiers had no dry clothing to don. At Mudros there were over forty thousand bags of mail matter for the Allied troops held up for military reasons. These mail bags were saturated with water and the letters, etc., that they contained in "fine condition." However, after being an hour and a half shifting around Mudros Harbour, Lieut. Steele and associates were put on board the "Aragan," a large Royal Mail Liner with hundreds of other troops on board and were brought to Lemnos where he saw his brother, Color-Sergeant James Steele who with 50 men under Lieut. Knight, were sent back from Cape Helles sick two days before the evacuation of that place, but were on the mending hand at time of writing. Later Lieut. Steele and his 20 men reached their Regiment on board the "Nester."

Yesterday Mr. S. O. Steele was in receipt of a communication from a firm he does business with in Scotland, intimating that they had received letters from Lieutenant and Sergeant Steele dated January 11th. Both officers stated they were both well and in good spirits; that seemingly they were not going to have much of a rest but that they were going to some other point to resume fighting. Evidently Sergeant James Steele has recovered fully from the ailment he was suffering from.

Blood was like Water Anaemia

You eat your dinner and the blood is slow to heat. The blood is watery and fails to form a clot. The lips and gums are pale. You are anaemic. This condition is best overcome by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. In this food cure there are combined in concentrated form the elements that go to form new, rich, red blood. The appetite is sharpened, digestion improves, color and strength return, and many annoying derangements, such as indigestion, nervousness, and headache, are removed. 25 cts. a box, or four for $1.00, all dealers. Dr. Chase & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

EVERY THREE MINUTES ONE DIES IN THE U. S. The Anti-Tuberculosis Society illustrates the frightful toll of consumption by extinguishing a light every three minutes, and shows that it is the man or woman, girl or boy, who neglects colds, whose blood is impure, who feels weak and languid, who is the very one to contract tuberculosis—and none are immune. During changing seasons, or after sickness, blood-quality is most important, and if you and your family will take Scott's Emulsion after meals it will charge your blood with health-sustaining richness, quicken circulation, and strengthen both lungs and throat. Scott's is free from drugs—easy to take—cannot harm. Get a bottle to-day. Scott & Bowne, Toronto, Ont. 15-23
