For Daisie's Sake

CHAPTER XXVII.
TO REMEMBER A LITTLE WHILE.

"Yes?"
"You will see his wife to-night, if you come with me to see Calve. Mrs. Fleming will have a box party that includes Daisie Sherwood and her guests, Miss Janowitz; and we will meet them at the Morton ball afterward, for they told me they were coming."

Lord Werter resolved at first that he would not attend either of these functions, not caring to renew the impression Daisie made on him first under the drooping wistarias—that picture that was graven on his heart.

He hoped that time was effacing it now, since she was another's wife; but insensibly there grew on him a wild longing to see her again.

He explained it to himself on the score of curiosity as to how she would look in the garb of wealth and fashion—beautiful Daisie, who had been irresistible in the simple white gown with lavender ribbons.

So he went with his cousin to hear Calve, and in the opposite box he saw his old love sitting—Daisie, in her white silk and misty face and costly jewels, and that crown of golden hair—golden hair that had once lain on his breast, in that time that seemed so far away. And people kept going in and out of the box to speak to the three beauties; but he saw quickly that she attracted always the most admiration. She must enjoy it, too; for her face wore the most enchanting smile, as if no care disturbed her mind.

"Yes she pretended that it grieved her to give me up. Was it not true? Has she forgotten so soon? Is she happy?" he mused angrily.

In his heart he was bitterly angry that she could be happy without him, though that was selfishness, he knew.

By and by he saw Mrs. Fleming looking over at their box, and the start she gave as she recognized him.

"Who is the young man in the box with Mrs. Hill-Dixon?"

"Her cousin, Lord Werter, a regular swell," he replied.

Annette Janowitz brought her opera glass into play, exclaiming:

"What! a real live lord? Let me have a good look at him. Oh, dear me;

he's the living image of Dallas Bain! Do look, Daisie!"

Daisie looked, and Dallas met her glance and waited for recognition, but none came; and he could not see how pale she grew as her eyes wavered and fell.

"Snubbed!" he said to himself indignantly, and it aroused the keenest anger in his breast. What had he done, that neither of the three would recognize him?

And, to add to his injury, Daisie never even looked at him again, though the eyes of the other two strayed to him often in wonder at his likeness to one they had known in the past.

He wondered cynically if Mrs. Fleming had got over her fancy for him as easily as Daisie seemed to have done. "I will go to the Morton ball and see," he resolved, in a spirit of audacity.

So, when the opera was over and they were in the crush of the ball, he asked the hostess for an introduction to Mrs. Fleming, and the little blonde beamed with delight when he asked her to dance.

"Lord Werter, I could not keep my eyes off you at the opera. You must have noticed it, and thought it strange. But I was almost certain you were an old friend of mine named Dallas Bain. When Major Mays told me your name, I could hardly believe it," she twittered.

So that explained her failure to bow? It lifted something from his heart; but he took a whim not to undeceive her yet, not to own his identity, to masquerade under his new splendor.

So he danced with the gay little widow, but his eyes wandered often to Daisie, who was Major Mays' partner, and danced divinely. It vexed him that she would not even look at him, though she might have done that much for the sake of the likeness to her old love.

"She is heartless. Prosperity has spoiled her," he thought bitterly, as he leaned against the wall and watched the clear-cut, smiling face so fair and flowerlike.

He felt as if he hated her for forgetting so soon.

"She might have done me that poor grace, to remember a little while," he muttered, in his pain.

Then it came to him what his cousin had said, that though she seemed to be gay, there was sometimes a strange sadness on her lovely face.

"Perhaps it is for me. She is playing a part, as I am," he thought, with a quickened heart throb.

Mrs. Fleming made herself just as charming as she knew how; but she could not help seeing how his gaze wandered, and she exclaimed, with something like pique:

"The lady you are looking at is my cousin, Mrs. Royall Sherwood. Would you like to be presented?"

"Yes, thank you," he replied, although he knew it was not wise to risk it. His headache was too keen already.

Mrs. Fleming was secretly piqued, for she had fallen in love with Lord Werter as madly as she had loved Dallas Bain, and was determined to marry him if she could.

But she did not dread Daisie as a rival, for she knew the girl was too pure and honest to flirt, so when the dance was over she led the handsome young nobleman over, and presented him to her cousin.

Daisie had been watching them furtively, and she was sure in her heart that it was Dallas Bain.

"Why, then, was he masquerading under a title?"

Her heart grew hot within her as she thought of the indignity he had put upon her in his elopement with Mrs. Fleming's silly maid, Letty.

CHAPTER XXVIII.
"A SHOCKING LITTLE FLIRT."

Daisie saw them coming, and braced herself for the rencontre. She was determined he should not see her flinch.

Stately as a young princess, and cold as ice, she received him, and he could not but admire her perfect self-poise and grace, though he wondered at such a reception.

"She knows me—her heart is not deceived. Then why not give me a kinder welcome?" he thought, not knowing of the false stories she had been told to turn her heart against him.

As for Daisie, she was thinking under her cold, proud smile:

"Where is Letty? Did he really marry her? And why is he masquerading under a false title?"

an air of proprietorship, presented Lord Werter.

Annette flashed her great black eyes at him with so friendly a smile that he took refuge with her at once from the hauteur of Daisie's manner.

"Will you dance with me?" he asked; and the gay little brunette, seeing a chance to tease the jealous little widow, replied carelessly:

"Oh, dear, no; I've almost danced my slippers off already. But I'll sit out the next waltz with you in the conservatory."

He gave her his arm, bowed to the other two, and led her away.

"Shocking little flirt!" Mrs. Fleming exclaimed sharply to Daisie.

"Oh, no; she is only tired, I suppose," generously.

"You are looking tired yourself, my dear, and as pale as if you had seen a ghost. It is wonderful, is it not, that man's likeness to Dallas Bain?"

"Yes."

"But we had better not mention it to Royall, poor fellow; for I think he is still jealous of the very memory of Dallas Bain."

"He need not be!" Daisie cried, with a flash of spirit. "My husband need never be jealous of the man who could stoop to elope with your maid!"

But she knew that her whole soul was shaken to its depths by this rencontre. Oh, those dark, dark eyes, how their glance could wound and dazzle still! How that smile could thrill her very soul!

Mrs. Fleming looked at her curiously, and smiled.

"I'm glad you have learned to despise him! Of course, he wasn't worth a thought of yours; and it was fortunate you married Royall and escaped him, wasn't it? I wonder what became of him, though, and if he really married Letty."

"The subject is not worth discussing," Daisie returned, with her loftiest air.

Meanwhile, Annette, sitting out the waltz in the cool, odoriferous conservatory with her elegant partner, exclaimed artlessly:

"Do you know it gave us all quite a start when we saw you to-night at the opera? You are so like a gentleman we met at Gull Beach last summer."

"Mrs. Fleming has been telling me the same thing, and I am very curious over my double. Tell me about him, do," said Lord Werter, fixing his large, magnetic, dark eyes on her brilliant face, and smiling his most persuasive smile.

Annette played with her fan in sudden embarrassment.

"I am very curious to hear about my double," repeated Lord Werter; and then she blurted out:

"It will not flatter you to hear the truth about Dallas Bain. He—he turned out badly."

"Indeed? What did he do?"

"Why, he—he eloped with Mrs. Fleming's maid, a pert little wretch, and—Daisie and I had to help her do up her hair for a week before she got another girl to suit."

"Miss Janowitz!"

Lord Werter's voice was so stern it made her tremble.

"Do you realize what you are saying about Dallas Bain?"

"Oh, yes; it's the honest truth, Lord Werter. He was Mrs. Fleming's guest, and flirted with the maid. And on the night Daisie married Mr. Sherwood he eloped with Letty Green. Oh, yes; it's true. They were seen to board the New York train just before daylight. Besides, the girl left a note to her old beau, a servant at Sea View, confessing the truth, and saying Mr. Bain was going to marry her in New York. So, you see, your double was no credit to you, and—"

"Why, Lord Werter, are you angry at my nonsense, or are you ill? Your face is as pale as a dead man's, and your eyes are like fire. What is the matter with you?"

MACSWEENEY. LONDON, Sept. 15. Little change in the condition of MacSweeney was reported this morning. In his report to the Home Office the physician declared "increased weakness" was noticeable. The bulletin issued by the Irish Self-Determination League read, "This is the 34th day of the strike. The Lord Mayor passed a somewhat better night and had a few hours' sleep. Pains in the body and limbs continue. He is still conscious and his mind is active."

WILL NOT ACCEPT OFFER. LONDON, Sept. 15. The Board of Directors of the Daily Herald will not accept the Russian Soviet offer of seventy-five thousand pounds. LITHUANIA TO NEGOTIATE? COPENHAGEN, Sept. 15. Lithuania has accepted Poland's proposal to send a peace delegation to Kalwarya to negotiate with the Poles, and consequently hostilities ceased at noon Monday, says the Kovno correspondent of Berlingske Tidende.

THE CANADIAN SIDE. WINNIPEG, Sept. 15. Local industries, representing capital investments of millions of dollars, in statements before the tariff commission urged the retention of a protective tariff, which they hold made their existence possible. Several local farmers definitely told the commission that any drastic lowering of the tariff would result in their having to cease business on account of competition from the United States.

DEMANDS OF ITALIAN LABOUR. MILAN, Sept. 15. Plans for a new law providing for the collaboration of workmen in the management of industrial plants, which will be presented at the next session of the Italian Parliament, have been placed in the hands of a commission appointed by the Socialist members of the House of Deputies. The leaders of the workmen insist that the agreement with employers must admit the men to the management of the technical departments, finances, and the offices for the engagement and dismissal of men. They assert that such powers should be exercised by organizations appointed by Labor Unions. The leaders declare the occupation of plants throughout the country will continue until employers' privileges are suppressed and the new right of labor acknowledged.

PROMISES PROTECTIVE TARIFF. NEW YORK, Sept. 15. The complete text of the speech delivered by Senator Harding, at Marion, Ohio, yesterday, which was received here to-day, shows that the presidential candidate forecast the possibility of a Republican protective tariff against Canadian wheat. It may be that a long list of our farm products will require a Republican protective tariff policy, he said. He then included Canadian wheat in the list of products, which he cited, and which he said, may threaten the life of production in the United States.

Joy Once More Holds Sway in McDonald Home

Daughter Again Picture of Health After Several Months' Illness.

"Tanlac has certainly brought joy to our family for it has restored my seventeen-year-old daughter to perfect health," was the statement made a few days ago by Mrs. Mary McDonald, of 16 South Kinross Street, Halifax.

"Florence was operated on about a year ago and she has never been able to get over the effects of it until now. She didn't seem to have any strength or energy and just had to drag herself about all the time. Often she went all day long without eating scarcely a bite of anything, and that kept me worried all the time. "Every morning she complained of feeling weak and dreary, and it just seemed to take all the strength she had to get out of bed and dress herself. Quite frequently she had awful headache spells and we could not get a thing that would relieve them. In spite of everything we did she gradually grew worse and fell off in weight all the time."

"Finally I decided to get her some Tanlac and see if that would help her, as several of our friends spoke well of it. That was two months ago and today she is the very picture of perfect health. She looks like a different girl and all our friends are surprised to see her so well and strong."

"Her appetite is just splendid and everything she eats seems to agree with her perfectly for she never complains of even so much as an uncomfortable feeling now. Those headache aches have all left her and she has gained back all her lost weight and strength. She is bright and cheerful all the time and takes a new interest in everything. I am certainly thankful that I tried Tanlac, and I wish every mother in Halifax knew what I know about it."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors; by Reg. Sullivan, Pouch Cove; Sound Island Store, Sound Island; Dennis Flynn, Avondale; J. J. O'Brien, Cape Broyle; J. W. Smith, Baine Harbor; W. A. Burdock, Belleoram; John Morey, Fermeuse; Mrs. Jos. Quinn, Renew.—adv't.

(Twillingate Sun.)

STILL SAVING THE COUNTRY!

A great deal has been said about the new Fishing Regulations. The Advocate and Mr. Coaker have defended them very strenuously, while the bulk of the Exporters seem to be very much opposed to them.

Mr. Coaker has been meeting the Licensed Exporters at St. John's, but has refused admission of any newspaper men and only "cooked" reports are allowed publication. This takes us back to Charles's methods.

In the Advocate of last Thursday appears a pathetic letter from Edwin Keen, of Brookfield, B.B., who being very uneasy about the cull, asks for information. The reply of Mr. Coaker's is probably as purile a piece of deception as can be well imagined.

Beginning by a couple of paragraphs of self-inundation, he goes on to say—"The Fish Regulations are all that stand between the fishermen getting $6 for fish and $10."

But in the very next paragraph he admits—"Our salvation this year is . . . a short catch. If the catch this year was equal to last year, the result would prove a public disaster."

Mr. Keen must be still wondering whether the Regulations or the short catch, or both, or neither will "save the country."

THE "SNIFF."

An Insult to Notre Dame South.

Everything that had been said about the Senef, Mr. Coaker's new Bay Boat, was found to be true on her arrival on Wednesday; in fact, as the Queen of Sheba said of Solomon, the half was not told. In a word this little ship is absolutely unsuited to the traffic, and a deliberate insult to the travelling public of the South side of this bay.

The "saloon," so called, is not half as good as the cabin of many a coasting schooner. Three little state-rooms open off the saloon with a total of ten berths, one being dignified with the name of the Ladies' cabin. There is only one lavatory on the ship, that is on deck and on the opposite side of the ship to the entrance to the "saloon," which is below and absolutely unavailable for female passengers during fall weather on this coast. No woman can travel on such a contraption as the Senef, unless absolutely forced by urgent necessity.

Compared with a $200 monument for his dog Smutt's, Mr. Coaker's action in removing the Clyde, which suits the needs of this bay and substituting this horrid little tug, shows what his regard for Notre Dame Bay South is.

The steerage has bunks for eight and is situated forward. It is quite as good as the first-class, however, but the whole accommodation is altogether too cramped for the passenger traffic on this route.

As for freight, there is but one little hatchway, which is utterly useless to handling bulky cargo, being only about four feet square.

It is time that the people of Twillingate and surrounding settlements are protected against such an imposition on the part of a Government, which seems to think that any old thing is good enough for them.

The Presidential Candidates.

"World's Work," a leading independent United States magazine, has the following to say about the two leading presidential candidates: The Republican candidate selected from the standpoint of the men who selected him, is ideal. His outstanding quality—if such a quality can be said to be outstanding—is utter commonplaceness. To the mass of American voters Warren G. Harding is hardly even a name. His Ohio career had been so conspicuous that, until his election as Senator his name had not even appeared in "Who's Who." His remarks in the Senate, for the last five years, have seldom been printed anywhere except in the "Congressional Record." When great public questions have appeared no one has ever thought of seeking the opinions of the Ohio Senator. No popular magazine, scanning the horizon for possible Presidential material, has ever considered presenting to its readers a sketch of the life and character of Warren G. Harding. . . . The biographical details which newspapers patiently unearthed were scanty and not inspiring. It appeared that Senator Harding was a genial, respectable, hard-working American and that no scandal attached to his private or political life. Almost his whole career had been spent as the proprietor and editor of a country newspaper; as a country editor he had necessarily figured in Ohio politics; he had served as Lieutenant-Governor of the State before winning his election as Senator. In the Senate his companionable personality had made him popular with his associates, but he had never been a leader, his name had never been associated with important legislation—he was simply a good-natured, well dressed member of the Republican majority who could always be depended upon to vote as party discipline directed. The Democrats have followed the example of the Republicans and nominated one of their most commonplace men for the highest office in the nation. Apparently the greatest strength of Governor Cox is that he comes from Ohio. The great political importance of this state was emphasized in 1916, for the change of its twenty-four votes from the Wilson to the Hughes column would have given victory to the Republicans. It was therefore inevitable that, in the Presidential struggle of this year, the utmost attention would be paid to Ohio. The determination of the Republicans to "redeem" this state was one of the several reasons which caused the nomination of Senator Harding. The fact that the voters of Ohio had refused to make Mr. Harding Governor while they had elected Mr. Cox to this office three times by great majorities, has been accepted as an assurance that the Dayton newspaper editor has a greater following in this "pivotal" state than his fellow journalist of Marion. Thus, from the standpoint of the practical politician, the nomination of Cox seemed to be the indicated course. And politicians of an eminently practical kind are responsible for his selection. The San Francisco Convention marks a new date in our political development; it is the first time in the memory of the present generation when Tammany Hall has exercised any affirmative influence in the selection of a Presidential candidate. For fifty years the support of Tammany has always been a liability in a Democratic Convention. Grover Cleveland was nominated three times against the howling protests of the Tammany delegates. One of the strongest arguments in favor of Mr. Wilson, in 1912, was that the Tammany braves were fighting his nomination. Yet at San Francisco Mr. Cox, from the beginning, was the favorite son of Tammany Hall. Only the support of Tammany, and the Tammanies of Indiana and Illinois, made him possible as the Presidential candidate. Charles F. Murphy and his followers selected Mr. Cox not only because he was regarded as a "wet" candidate but because he was the most available instrument for striking at the Wilson Administration. Whatever may be Governor Cox's personal qualities, however able and well intentioned he may be, he starts his presidential campaign with the heaviest burden of any candidate for a generation—the indorsement of Tammany Hall. American politics so far as Presidential candidates are concerned, have settled down once more to the dead level of "availability." Only the mere accident that they were residents of Ohio makes Mr. Harding and Mr. Cox the candidates of their parties. Their selection represents no higher aspirations than the desire to win. The back wards forces in both parties are now in control; the elements which have made for progress, for idealism, for the general betterment of political life, have suffered a temporary eclipse. It is one of the ironies of history that the least worthy should have gained the upper hand in both parties at the very moment when the nation needs its best, its ablest, and its most unselfish men in high places.

Hidden in a Cupboard.

ARTILLERYMAN DISAPPEARED FOR TWELVE MONTHS.

Looking thin and pale, a man, who had been concealed for over twelve months in a cupboard formed of a dummy chest of drawers, appeared in the dock at Exeter. Beside him was his wife, and they were jointly charged with defrauding the Postmaster-General of £290. They were Charles and Sarah Holland, and the story told by prosecuting counsel was that when the man came home in December, 1918, from France, where he was serving with the Garrison Artillery, he did not return. He and his wife then planned, it was alleged, that he should remain at home. Mrs. Holland was receiving 34s. 6d. a week for herself and two children. The officer in command of Holland's battery failed to notify the Post Office that the man had not returned, and the separation allowance went on as usual. With her husband's assistance, Mrs. Holland hollowed out a chest of drawers in a bedroom, and into this the man crept whenever there were callers in the house. For more than a year Holland remained in his place of concealment, and during that time his wife received nearly £100 in allowances. A remark made in the street by a little child of the Hollands' to a companion led to inquiries and a visit by the police. Mrs. Holland, however, evaded the inquiries, but later, in consequence of information given by the family, Detective Edwards saw Mrs. Holland, and demanded he search her house. The husband was discovered in a cupboard of a recess, hidden behind some clothes. This formed an alternative place of refuge. Mrs. Holland broke into tears in the dock during a part of her evidence, and Holland also seemed to feel his position acutely. The magistrate committed for trial both husband and wife, but granted bail. Brick's Tasteless at Stafford's. Price $1.20 bottle. Postage 20c. extra.—1j19.1f

A Bible Prophecy About to Be Fulfilled.

One of the most momentous events which have happened as a result of the war is the decision of the Peace Conference to hand over Palestine to the Jews. Thus is the old Biblical prophecy that the Jews would one day return to the land of their forefathers about to be realized. At the present time Britain is administering and policing the country. Since the Armistice we have given Jerusalem a much-needed water-supply and a complete drainage system, built railways and roads, thrown bridges across the Jordan, and generally opened up the country. Now, as time and conditions are ripe, Palestine will gradually pass over to Jewish control. Already a powerful Zionist Commission is sitting in Jerusalem, discussing ways and means. The extremists among the Arabs do not like the idea of the country passing under Jewish domination. But just as Belgium is the cockpit of the Western world, so in olden times was Palestine the battleground of the old empires. Here they met and settled their differences. It was this succession of wars that drove the Jews out of their land, and thus they were scattered over the face of the earth. Although no larger than Belgium, Palestine is one of the most remarkable tracts of territory in the world. It boasts every kind of soil, from sand and broken limestone to rich red and chocolate loam. Every variety of climate, too, may be experienced. You can indulge in a game of snowballs on Mount Hermon, and an hour or two later be baked in the tropical heat of the Jordan valley. "Flowing With Milk And Honey." As a result, every kind of temperate and tropical produce can be grown. Joshua described Palestine as a land flowing with milk and honey. In the production of the latter commodity it has no equal. At Jaffa a hundred hives have been known to yield six tons of honey in a season, nearly three times as much per hive as the maximum yield of the great honey farms of Australia and America. Some of the finest wine is that made from Palestine grapes; while the best oranges are those obtained from the groves that have sprung up around Jaffa and Gaza. As a wheat-growing country Palestine cannot be beaten. The Jews are aware of its unique possibilities, and even under Turkish rule many of them were settled there. When war broke out there were some fifty Jewish colonies scattered throughout the land, owning between them about eleven per cent. of the cultivated area of the country. This land had been purchased by Baron Rothschild and other wealthy Jews and given to their co-religionists. They established agricultural schools and various industries, such as wine-making, silk factories, glass works, perfume distilleries, soap and candle works, butter and cheese making, and the like. But the Turk gave the colonists little encouragement. Instead of encouraging the development of the country, he only hindered it. Nevertheless, the annual trade of Jaffa rose from £760,000 to £2,000,000 between 1904 and 1912. Less than forty years ago there were 20,000 Jews in the country; in 1904 there were 170,000. The total population of the land to-day is about 680,000, against 3,000,000 in Bible times. By adopting more modern methods, Palestine should become one of the richest agricultural countries for its size in the world. It is desirable, too, to create a harbour at Jaffa for the encouragement of shipping. At present steamers have to lie over a mile off the shore and load and unload their cargoes in small boats. Then the minerals of the Dead Sea region should prove a veritable Klondike if properly developed. This region is rich in oil, coal, sulphur, salt, and other valuable commodities.—Tit Bits.

Cricketers in Petticoats.

The cricket matches between teams of women which marked the beginning of the present season are no novelty in the world of sport. They were fairly common during the eighteenth century, though the players at that period were usually recruited from the working classes, because strenuous physical exercise was not considered "genteel" by women of more exalted social rank. Thus, in 1792, we read of a cricket match between eleven girls of Rotherby, Leicestershire, and an equal number of Hoby, in which the fair cricketers of Rotherby were victorious. Four years later a highly exciting match was played on Bury Common, Suffolk, between the married women and maidens of the parish. The married team won by eighty runs, and so elated were the maidens by their victory that they forthwith challenged any eleven in the county to play them for any sum and on any ground. The Cedars of Lebanon.

The wholesale destruction of art during the war brought forth protests from all parts of the world, but the chopper's axe has nearly destroyed the cedars of Lebanon, and there has been little comment. According to the Argonaut, the cedar forests that were historic when the armies of Sennacherib laid waste about 700 B.C., as recorded in the Bible and mentioned in the Psalms of David, were reduced during the war by the Turkish soldiers. Individual trees produced a profound impression. There were many that were forty-two feet in diameter and often the spread of the branches was greater than the height. Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

WHEN NOT TO ARGUE.
Isn't it extraordinary how a fit of anger and resentment can alter one's whole set of values, one's whole outlook on life? "Red paint" came to my mind again the other day, in this connection. Do you remember how I told of following a red paint trail up the mountain, that is, red paint splashes on rocks and trees, and how I found that if one had a preconceived notion as to which direction the trail was going to turn one would surely lose it. The only way to look for it was with an open mind of mine who has been married a little over a year was the cause of my thinking of red paint again.

Somewhat we fell to talking of that immortally interesting subject "how to be happy though married."

The "Hurtinest" Thing You Can Say.
Said the not so very long married lady, "Henry and I have made up our minds to one thing and that is that we might just as well get a divorce now as try to thresh things out when we are angry. It's the hardest thing in the world to stop discussing things when you are red hot and put it off until you are cooler but we realize that if we are going to get anywhere we've simply got to. Because when you're red hot you don't either of you try to get at the truth, you just try to find the hurtinest thing you can find and say it to each other."

Isn't that a perfect description of a quarrel or an argument carried on in a moment of heat?

You Aren't Hunting for Justice at All.
You pretend to be each hunting for the red paint trail that leads to justice, but ten to one you aren't either of you hunting for any such thing. You are just hunting for the hurtinest thing you can find to say to each other.

What chance has justice under such conditions? None whatever, of course. The hurtinest thing relieves one's mind perhaps but it certainly doesn't get one anywhere.

Of course, at the time, one is not inclined to admit that it is the hurtinest thing. One probably would assure oneself then that it is the truth and that it is one's duty to speak it.

Go Down to the Bottom of Your Heart.
But try an experiment I recommended some years ago. Go down to the bottom of your heart and there commune with yourself and examine some of the things you feel impelled to say before you say them and see what your real motive is.

Then if you can only have the self control to put off discussions until you have gotten back to a more normal outlook, you will increase fifty per cent your chances of getting at some sane and reasonable conclusion.

Food in the Sea.
OCEAN BED MORE PRODUCTIVE THAN DRY LAND.
Dr. W. A. Herdman, Professor of Oceanography in the University of Liverpool, in his presidential address to the British Association at Cardiff, made an urgent plea for more knowledge of the life of the sea and the mysteries it carries from its surface to its depths, six miles below. He concluded with an argument in favour of taking a sort of census of the population of the sea. "It has been shown," he said, "that the common edible animals of the shore may exist in such abundance that an area of the sea may be more productive of food for man than a similar area of pasture or crops on land. A Lancashire mussel bed has been shown to have as many as 16,000 young mussels per square foot, and it is estimated that in the shallow waters of Liverpool bay there are from 20 to 200 animals of sizes varying from an amphipod (sand flat) to a plaice on each square metre of the bottom."

Mystery of Eels.
The mystery of the eels was also referred to by Dr. Herdman. The eels, he said, live and feed and grow under our eyes without reproducing their kind—no spawning eel has ever been seen. After living for years in their lives, the large male and female yellow eels undergo a change in appearance and in nature. They acquire a silvery colour and their eyes enlarge, and in this bridal attire they begin the long journey which ends in maturity, reproduction, and death. From all the fresh waters they migrate in the autumn to the coast, from the inshore seas to the open ocean and, still westward and south to the mid-Atlantic, and we know not how much further—for the exact locality and manner of spawning has still to be discovered. The youngest known stages of the Leptocephalus, the larval stage of eels, have been found by

Two youthful Americans were discussing the relative merits of their fathers.
"Well," said Arthur, who lives next door, "you ain't got so much to be proud of; my father's taller than yours, anyway."
"He is not!" came the quick reply.
"Bet yer a dime he is!"
"Aw, go on. My father can see over the wall at the end of the garden. Yours can't."
"Yes, he can—with his hat on," came the swift defence.

The excuses offered by schoolboys are often ingenious, perhaps none more so than those of two pupils of a country school for being late. Asked why he didn't come when he heard the bell, one boy said:
"Please, sir, I was dreaming I was going to California, and I thought the school bell was the steamboat I was going on."
"You did, eh?" said the teacher.
"And now, sir (turning to the second boy), what have you to say for yourself?"
"Please, sir, I—I was just waiting to see Tom off."—Boston Transcript.

In Scotland observance of the Sabbath is—or was—very strict, and manual labor on that day is looked on with horror. One Sunday the good wife of Jock was horrified to hear a great knocking in the garden. Going out she found her husband hammering away at a barrow behind the trees.
"Mo gudeness, Jock," said she, "what are ye doing; don't ye know it's the Sabbath?"
"Aye," replied Jock, "but I'm behind the trees, and I must knock the nails in."

Mending the Broken Cross.
There was recently held on the top of the hill of Vaudemont, on the plain of Lorraine, a unique ceremony, partly religious, but chiefly patriotic.

The hill was the site of the castle of the Dukes of Lorraine and of the Emperors of Austria. From its top a hundred villages and small towns can be seen and naturally it has been selected as the scene of many ceremonies.

In 1873, after the peace had condemned Alsace and Lorraine to German ownership and government, 49,000 Lorrainers gathered on top of the hill and laid before the shrine of Notre Dame de Sion, protectress of Lorraine, a broken cross with the inscription "It is not for ever."

At the recent celebration, attended by the Bishops of Metz, Nancy, Strasbourg, Verdun, St. Die and Luxembourg, Senators and Deputies from all over Lorraine and thousands upon thousands of pilgrims, there was first an open air mass, after which the broken cross was bound together with a gold wire, the old inscription was taken off and replaced with a new one, "It is forever," and the cross was laid at the foot of the shrine.

S. W. Coast Hard Hit

From being the most prosperous portion of this Dominion, the South West Coast from Burin to Channel, has fallen to an alarming state of stagnation, paralysis of business and impending poverty in one short year. It used to be the El Dorado of the commercial traveller and the shining example of progress and prosperity for all the rest of Newfoundland, and today its fishing industry, its trade and commerce lie prostrate and the young men are fleeing from the country in hundreds, and business people are putting up their shutters to avoid bankruptcy and await better times. All this must be well known to Messrs. Warren, Cheeseman, Foote and Small, and how they can look on and apparently make no effort to relieve their constituents and save them from the impending ruin, passes our comprehension. The Gorton-Pew Company have been driven off the coast, to the great loss of the fishermen, and Messrs. Harris, Patten and Forsythe, Thos. Garland, J. Penney, Moulton and others have been hit so hard by the Fish Regulations that their total losses by being held up and hampered in sending their fish to market, runs up into a million dollars. In the face of all these facts, the sponsors of the Fish Regulations have the affrontery to keep up the bluff that the Regulations have been a blessing to the country, and the fishermen ought to bless the name of Mr. Coaker.

There is nothing in common between the fishermen of the South and West Coast and those of the North, and their operations and times of securing their fish are so different that even though the regulations would turn out a boon and a blessing to the North, they would be certain to work out to the ruin of the South and South

West Coasts. The latter part of June, all July and August are their best shipping months, and the advantages that have been given them by Nature must be forgone and sacrificed, and they must be kept out of the markets to suit the selfish ends of a few big fish exporters in St. John's and Port Union, who were always jealous of the prosperity and independence of the shippers west of Placentia Bay. They have now got a chance to kill them out of competition, backed up by the laws, and they evidently are doing it in good style. Mr. Foote should know this better than we do, so does Mr. Warren, Mr. Cheeseman and Mr. Small. They are standing by and seeing these people strangled to death, and the young men who voted for them so trustingly last fall, fleeing out of the country in which they see no hope of making a living at the fishery under the new rules made by Mr. Coaker and Mr. Squires. It is in their power to save their constituents to-morrow from this impending ruin, and say to Mr. Coaker "stop it at once; you have gone far enough." But will they do so? Will the sweets and emoluments of office, the little jobs and pickings that they are receiving, be a sufficient inducement for them to keep quiet and allow these people to be ruined? This is the question that is in the minds of the residents of the South West Coast, and there is one thing that they may regard as certain, and that is, if they do not their political careers may last out three more years, but never again will they be elected for their constituencies.

Strike On Labrador.

Marconigrams came in from the upper part of the Labrador coast to-day, saying that the fishermen at Batteau, Domino, Indian Tickle, Flat Islands and all that section of the coast have struck for $9.00 a quintal for their fish shipped off the coast. The vessels loading there have been held up awaiting a reply from those interested in St. John's. Speaking to one exporter about it this morning, he said, "the prices laid down for Greece and Italy will warrant $9.00 for the Labrador fishermen."

Mechanics, Laborers and others who wear Overalls should see the line BISHOP'S are now offering at Three Dollars and Ten Cents. These Overalls if purchased to-day could not be sold for less than Four Dollars and Thirty Cents. They are specially protected where the strain and wear comes. Large numbers of these Overalls have been sold in the lumber camps again this season.

The Advocate and the Fish Exporters.

The Advocate gleefully announces that the conference between licensed exporters of fish and the Minister of Marine and Fisheries "ended in harmony" and that they have decided to work together "for the good of Newfoundland." Now in the first place, it is an altogether nice thing for the Advocate to regard merchants as friends of the Colony, or to hail their agreement with anything as likely to be for the public good. The fishermen are now told for the first time that Mr. Coaker and the merchants are in the same boat. In the second place, it is not true that, even the exporters who attended the conference were harmonious, or that they approve of the Export Regulations recently published. Views were freely expressed against the then existing regulations, and they have been modified, but those that remain are not concurred in by the majority of exporters.

In the third place, some of the chief exporters were not present at the conference, and their absence was intended to imply their entire disagreement with what had been done, and would be done. There is a clique in charge of the Export Board, a big six, or a big three, or call them by any other name, and these men for reasons of their own uphold or concur in the policy of the Hon. Mr. Coaker.

The Advocate concludes its announcement with the fake assertion that the repealed regulations did great good to the Colony. It is because they did great harm that they have been repealed. Why make Spain an open market if it were beneficial to keep it controlled? Why alter the conditions about Brazil if they were wise? The alterations have been made in the hope that it is not altogether too late to prevent the harm which would otherwise be done.

Police Court.

A tradesman for assaulting his wife, from whom he is separated, was placed under bonds of $100.00. He also had to deposit a weekly allowance of $10.

A tradesman, who owns a shack at Maher's, charged with the larceny of 40 feet of belting belonging to Goss's saw mill pleaded not guilty. The evidence given by some 6 or 7 witnesses showed that on Monday, the second day of August, the belt of the mill had been cut. The defendant, on the previous day, visited the place and was ejected from a religious service, being then held there. A saw with which the belt was cut was found near the mill.

Mr. W. J. Higgins for the defendant moved for a dismissal as there was absolutely no evidence of larceny. The case was dismissed.

Opening of 24th Session of Diocesan Synod.

On Wednesday, the 15th day of September, His Lordship the Bishop of Newfoundland opened the 24th session of the Diocesan Synod.

The day was duly observed by a celebration of the Holy Communion at the Cathedral at 7.30, at which a large number of the delegates, clerical and lay, attended. His Lordship was the Celebrant, Rev. Canon Bolt being Epistoler and Rev. Canon Jeeves Gospeler. Rev. J. Britton acted as Sacristan with Rev. Canon Field assisting at the distribution of the sacred elements.

At 7.50 in the evening the official service which customarily precedes the opening of the Synod took place at the Cathedral. The procession moved from the vestry through the church yard to the west door of the Cathedral in the following order:—Cross Bearer, Choir, Banner Bearer, Deacons, Priests, Rural Deans, Canons, Chaplains, Bishop.

To the strains of hymn 215, "The Church's One Foundation," the procession, which included 50 priests, slowly moved up the aisle to the seats reserved, while the Canons proceeded to their stalls in the Sanctuary, and His Lordship the Bishop in full Episcopal Habit of Cope and Mitre went to his Throne by the Altar Rails.

The Divine Office was said by the Rector, Rev. Canon Jeeves; Rev. Canon Bayly read the first Lesson and Rev. Canon Smart the second. The Rev. Canon Bolt was the preacher. Preaching from the text "Old things are passed away, behold all things are become new," II Cor. V-13, the preacher showed that in every new age new problems and difficulties called for readjustment and settlement and that in any attempt to solve these, many viewpoints of past ages must be surrendered, while the truth in its essence must still be maintained only in a transformed state to meet the new conditions. In other words the old must become new.

At 9 o'clock the Synod was officially opened by His Lordship the Bishop. After prayers were read the secretary called the roll, and announced that there were present 51 clergy and 65 lay representatives. Secretaries for conducting the business of the Synod were then appointed and an official reporter to prepare a synopsis of the proceedings for the daily papers. Rev. Canon Bolt was elected clerical secretary with Rev. C. A. Moulton assisting, and Mr. H. W. Stirling was elected lay secretary, with Rev. H. W. Facey as reporter.

His Lordship the Bishop then delivered his charge to the Synod. No synopsis could be attempted which would give an adequate idea of the way in which His Lordship dealt with the many and varied matters to which he referred. For more than an hour His Lordship maintained and held the closest attention of the Synod as he made reference to the doings of the Lambeth Conference and their decisions, and how they affect us in this Diocese; His own Diocese and its administration, including the supply and training of clergy, the need of a ship for visitation purposes, and a fuller and more progressive policy in all the church's many activities. In closing he stated that it is the Church's duty this Synod to bring in means for a progressive policy, financial, educational, spiritual and moral. "This is our duty of opportunity." Our contributions which we may be able to make may seem to us to be feeble, but we must face the task.

Thus ended one of the most memorable addresses ever delivered in the history of the Synod. It calls for and demands a re-constructional policy, and it foreshadowed that this Synod may come to be known from the character of its work, as the "After the war reconstruction Synod."

After the charge a notice was moved and seconded that His Lordship allow his address to be printed and distributed. This was agreed to by the bishop.

Various notices of bills to be read on to-morrow were then given, as well as a notice calling for a suspension of the rules of the House to deal with the question of finance, first in order. Dr. Blackall also gave notice of motion in reference to roll call. His Lordship announced that the hours of meeting for the Session of the Synod would be 3.30 to 5.15 and 7.30 to 10. He also announced that during the day when the Synod was meeting there would be a celebration of Holy Communion in the Cathedral at 8 a.m. and it was also announced that at St. Thomas's at the same hour there will be a celebration of Holy Communion with special intercession for Queen's College.

At 10.40 the House adjourned with the Episcopal Blessing.

MR. H. W. STIRLING will resume lessons in Organ, Piano, Singing and Theory on Tuesday, Sept. 14th. Pupils of all grades received. Further particulars on application. Studio: 29 Victoria St.—sep11,13,14,16

South Branch Coal Mine.
The South Branch coal has been in progress for some time, and already the mine, cut about 2 or 3 thousand tons of coal previously been taken, has been pumped free from water. By the middle of next month it is expected that the mine will be in full blast and producing 50 tons of coal per day. From the pit to the railroad, a distance of three miles, some fifty men are engaged in building a motor road. Four five ton trucks to convey the coal are expected to arrive in a few weeks. Mr. J. F. Downey has been appointed accountant and time-keeper. Boring has been resumed at Grand Lake, and in a short time it will be definitely known whether coal in commercial quantities exists there. The indications are that a large deposit of coal exists in the area.

Prohibition Campaign Opened in Scotland.
The prohibition campaign in Scotland has opened, and a preliminary poll, under the Scottish Temperance Act, will be taken to decide whether a plebiscite shall be held on the reduction or abolition of licenses. If the latter is adopted it leaves a loophole for drinking at hotel meals, but abolishes the bar. It does not affect clubs. Anti-liquor people say a third of the country will vote for prohibition, and, as they are perfectly organized, the liquor traffic is frightened. The public is incredulous of a dry victory.—Wesleyan.

Football Game.
To-morrow night's football match promises to be the most interesting of the League series. The contesting teams will be the Feildians and B.I.S. A win for the latter will mean their playing off with the Cadets for the Championship, while victory for the Feildians will give them the honors. A draw will put the Feildians and Cadets equal in which event they will have to play off.

SAVE THE BABIES!

During these hot days when infants are suffering and dying from Summer Diarrhoea, it might be interesting to quote from a report read by Dr. Alan Brown, Child Specialist of Toronto, who says:—

"In severe cases of Diarrhoea which do not respond to the elimination of carbohydrate in the usual milk mixtures, PROTEIN MILK is indicated, as in practically all cases of intoxication and infectious diarrhoea, and many cases of dyspepsia in breast-fed infants."

The process of making LIQUID PROTEIN MILK is a long and difficult one. After four years of careful experimentation a PROTEIN MILK has been manufactured in powder form,—conforming exactly to the analysis of the Liquid preparation.

Upon presentation of a prescription from your doctor it can be obtained at any of the three Child Welfare Milk Stations where it is sold at cost of importation.

Where Our Heroes Lie.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—I should be very grateful if you would kindly publish the following list of cemeteries which contain the graves of our fallen comrades in France and Belgium. Map references are inserted, so that any one desirous of locating the exact position of any grave may be able to do so by calling at the Department of Militia. It will be a comfort to parents and others to know that these cemeteries are looked after with the greatest care and made as beautiful as possible. Indeed, those that are completed or in process of completion are perfect gardens in themselves, generally situated in some peaceful country side and carefully laid out, though simple in design.
Yours faithfully,

Stunned and Robbed.

ANTIQUARY HUDDLED UP IN TRAIN LAVATORY—£75 MISSING.

An extraordinary attack on a passenger in a South-Western train, between Waterloo and Weybridge, was reported recently. The victim, Mr. Freeman, who is an antiquary, with offices in London and Guildford, was robbed of £75, and was found unconscious in a lavatory compartment by the railway officials at Weybridge. Seen in his home, 11, The Kingsway, Woking, later, Mr. Freeman was in a state of partial collapse, and suffering from severe injuries. He is thirty-two years of age, and during the war served in the Army Service Corps. He caught the train from Waterloo to Guildford at 2.50. The train does not stop before Surbiton, and he entered what was apparently an empty compartment in the front portion of the train.

"Soon after the train left Waterloo," said Mr. Freeman, "a man came out of the lavatory and sat down facing me. He was of burly build, about 5ft. 10in. in height, with dark complexion and wore a dark suit and cap. Suddenly I received a terrific blow in the face. I jumped up and went for my assailant, who was armed with a stick with which he struck me at least eight blows on the head, but not before I had got in a blow on him. "I remember nothing after that until I found myself lying on the platform at Weybridge and the railway officials attending to me. I was informed that I was found lying huddled up in the lavatory, so that my assailant evidently dragged me there after I had lost consciousness. The officials placed me in a train which had just arrived and was going to Woking. My clothing was torn and my trousers pockets ripped. My gold watch chain was broken in four pieces, and my papers were scattered all over the floor of the compartment. The man had taken £75 in cash, but the only other things I missed were my Army papers and ribbons."

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.
Gentlemen,—I was badly kicked by my horse last May, after using several preparations on my leg nothing would do. My leg was as black as jet. I was laid up in bed for a fortnight and could not walk. After using three bottles of your MINARD'S LINIMENT I was as well as ever, so that I could start on L.e. road.

LONDON GOSSIP.

THE ARAB THRONES.

LONDON, Aug. 30th, 1920.

I am a little afraid that there may be trouble in store for all the Allies on the Tigris and Euphrates. Not to mention the present Arab risings in Mesopotamia, the murder of the new Francophile Ministers near Damascus does not augur well for the new regime inaugurated in Syria by General Gouraud. The French have already protested against the possible installation of the Emir Feisal as King of Mesopotamia. They declare that in deference to our wishes they are so far refrained from supporting the Emir Said, whom Lord Allenby has obliged to expel from Damascus, as the future King of Syria. But they also declare that if we insist on Feisal's enthronement in Mesopotamia they will put up Said at Damascus. In which case, in view of the ancient feud between the two Arab families, we shall be threatened with a bitter inter-Arab war.

SOLDIERS STILL IN HOSPITAL.

There are still 8,000 soldier and sailor patients in the London hospitals. Eight hundred of them are at the great Orthopedic Hospital, Shepherd's Bush, where there is an elaborate equipment for the treatment of surgical cases, and 400 are at the Southampton Hospital, which supplies and trains men in the use of artificial limbs. Hundreds of other patients are at such distant places as Lapham, Edmonton, Woolwich and Footing. The 4th London General Hospital, at Denmark Hill, still retains between two and three hundred men, and a number are fortunate enough to be at Milbank Military Hospital, from which they can easily get to central places of interest. These long-term patients are suffering from shell shock, from wounds and fractures which will not heal, and from other troubles which require tedious treatment. Those that one sees about the streets—and they are very few nowadays—look as though their long convalescence bored them, but they are happier than the men who cannot walk abroad or the cases still confined to bed. They are not entirely forgotten. Here and there one hears of people who arrange entertainments in certain wards or outdoor excursions, but generally speaking they do feel that the public has forgotten them. They miss the frequent hospital visitors, the gifts of fruit and cigarettes, the numerous entertainments that used to be arranged for them, and the motor rides.

FASHION IN SPECTACLES.

There are fashions in everything—even in spectacles. The circle in which all modes are said to move has brought us back to the horn "specs" of the days of our grandfathers. Gold-rimmed and rimless pince-nez are fast disappearing in London, and their places are being taken by clumsy looking contraptions which suggest an optician's test frame or a pair of motor goggles. The vogue is said to be of American origin. One of its earliest devotees here was Ian Macpherson, the present Pensions Minister, who soon found many imitators in the House of Commons. The optician will tell you that the horn frames are lighter in weight and more restful to the eyes, and that the larger lenses—usually about the size of the glass of a watch—also have special advantages. He may be right, but he probably knows that the decree of fashion more than his expert advice influences purchasers in many cases. So far the new fashion seems to have found favour only with the men. The new style is a disfigurement rather than an aid to beauty, and this doubtless accounts for woman's shyness in adopting it.

A BAN ON GAUITY.

Civilised life on this planet is a series of contradictions. The days have gone by when we went abroad for our little summer vacation. But we can all of us recollect the refreshing charm of foreign scenes and foreign habits.

How many of us have not listened in rapture to merry parties of Frenchmen or Italians going home after some sociable evening entertainment singing as they went, and regretted the absence in our own country of this cheerful and picturesque feature of everyday Continental life. Yet how strangely illogical is the British nation. When our young people attempt to emulate this fascinating gaiety, what do we do? According to police court reports we promptly arrest the songsters and charge them with "insulting behaviour," and with being "a nuisance to pedestrians and inhabitants." Three young and respectable girls were actually locked up at the police station until midnight and charged with this offence at the North London Police Court because they walked home from a music hall arm-in-arm singing. It is small wonder that the Magistrate expressed indignation with the police authorities. We are officially condemned. It seems, to take our pleasures sadly.

THE OLD TRAIL AGAIN.

Motorists know about the great commercial traffic on the road, but the ordinary public has little conception of the degree to which this trade has swollen. Much of it is done by night. North and South the big motor wagons trail along, waking up the old hostleries that have revived in the new world. In consequence of the extraordinary amount of damage done in transit to valuable machinery and of the habitual delay, an enormous carrying traffic is now done on the road. It costs more, but it saves days. The firm knows where it stands about its good. Newcastle, Coventry, Dudley, Port, Lincoln, Nottingham, and other big industrial towns are now sending their machinery by road to London. The road has reacted to the new traffic, and the inns that used to house the carriers' traffic, the Wagon and Horses of the smaller towns, are now enlarging themselves from the public-house status to which they had fallen and opening their creaky old yard doors, and providing stocks of petrol, too, and good lodgings to the heavy wagons and drivers. In such inns now the talk at night is of the Bapaume Road and Ypres and Armentieres, for the drivers are nearly all old army transport men, glad to get out again on the egrat road.

THE ALL-ROUND ATHLETE.

Londoners seem to be taking very little interest in the Olympic Games, and many of them are wondering if they serve any useful purpose. Provided they were held in London it is probable that there would be considerably larger attendances than have followed the most important events at Antwerp, and that a degree of enthusiasm in particular contests might be provoked. At the same time there is a strong feeling of doubt in many quarters whether the games are worth participating in, and a good many appear to be inclined to the view expressed by Eustace Miles (who runs a large food reform and vegetarian restaurant in London) that the competitions are conducted in circumstances and under conditions which render the results unconvincing. They do not, it is urged, provide any test for an all-round athlete. On the contrary, as the American achievement shows, success is more a matter of technique and practice than of all-round physical efficiency and versatility, the highest number of points being scored by Americans because the contestants had confined their training to one particular phase of the game. It is suggested that if this country is to take part seriously in them in the future the best persons should be selected for each event after a series of competitions, otherwise all-round British athletes are promised small chance of many victories.

THE PETIT PALAIS OF THE EMBANKMENT.

The Astor Estate Office building on the Thames Embankment has not been very busily used in recent years, and the news that it is to be sold was expected. It was built by the late Lord Astor as the petit palais of a millionaire. It was romantically designed in the nineties by L. C. Pearson, the architect of Truro Cathedral (Cornwall), in the late Tudor style, and its setting, half-hidden beside office buildings in a byway of the Embankment, where no one would see the lights of its hospitable night in that deserted quarter, must have had something of the new Arabian fantasy that Stevenson has brought into the period. Its great bronze gates and screen with grills and scrollwork, rich stone portico, carved stone gables, and decorated finials surmounted by a beautiful metal ship indicated the sumptuousness which its interior revealed. A second marble stair-case decorated with carved wooden figures of the characters from "The Three Musketeers," rooms with rare, sweet-smelling woods and elaborate carvings and silver door-panels with reliefs illustrating the "Idylls of the King," heavily eilded ceilings, and state bedrooms are some of the fancy features. A curious conceit, far removed from the taste of our time, is the east and west windows, that are filled with colored glass to represent sunrise and sunset. The brightest period in the history of the house was when Astor first ran the "Pall Mall Gazette" with his band of fashionable young men and held his staff parties there. Even

Lord Ronald Sutherland Gower wrote of one tea party there: "I was quite oppressed with the crowd of duchesses that were there." It is hard to see how so specialised a building can now be profitably adapted to the uses of common day. But it would make a nice little pied-a-terre in London for a movie king.

Education.

S.—OUR CHILDREN—AT SCHOOL.

There are fourteen Protestant schools, including colleges, in St. John's, in which are registered 2817 scholars. Of these there are 1994, or nearly 70%, in the Primer grade and the first four standards. After the fourth standard the numbers very greatly decrease. That is, a very small proportion of our children go beyond the elementary stages of education. The majority leave school in their twelfth year, very meagrely prepared to assume the responsibilities of citizenship or to undertake any form of leadership.

The ages of the children attending school range from 4½ years to 19 years, and above. Of the 2817 scholars, 342 are in the second standard, and the ages range from 5½ years to 13 years. In the primer grade there are some children 4½ years of age, and others 12½ years and over. In the same grade. The educational experts visiting one of the better schools examined four standards selected at random. In one of these standards the children ranged from 8 years of age to 12 years, in another standard, from 10 to 18 years, and in another standard from 4½ years to 9½ years.

A distribution which is almost as wide exists in the large majority of grades or standards. One might expect this condition where four school systems are involved, as they are in St. John's, and examination of individual classes chosen at random, showing the same situation to be true. The cure for the wrong appears to be some scheme of compulsory education, so that children at a certain stated age should be compelled to attend, and take up the proper standards at their proper ages.

Of the 2817 scholars it was found that 21% were under the age for the standard in which they were found, 47% were of the normal age for the standard, and 32% were over the age for the standard. The underage children are the bright intelligent scholars who are ahead of their years in education, while the overage, that is, over one third of the whole number, are those who were either mentally slow or who did not commence to attend school at the proper age.

The experts remark that "The tremendous burden of teaching when children are spread over such wide range of ages, is surely clear even to the ordinary layman. To those who are satisfactorily trained and who recognize the large number of problems involved in teaching which are not apparent to the layman, the task of conducting the teaching of the boys and girls in St. John's, becomes, under present conditions an insuperable one."

With the 2817 children scattered among 14 schools it is almost impossible to deal with this situation. Were the children brought together, in say, four large schools, the various standards could each be divided into three grades, one grade to contain the underage, one for the normal pupils, and the third for the overage. Thus the peculiar condition existing in each grade could be specially dealt with by the teacher. The educational experts believe that the children of St. John's can only secure fair and just treatment with respect to classification and grading through the consolidation of the present school systems, and through the erection of large building units which will permit children of like ability to be taught together.

In regard to school attendance, the experts took a single page in each of four school registers selected at random. In one case it was found that the absences of scholars were 45% of the school time, in the second case the absences were 40%, in the third case 35%, and in the fourth case 21%.

The Government have undertaken a most necessary work in the establishment of a normal college for the training of teachers. While it will be of very great benefit in future years, the results cannot be what they should, so long as the present conditions persist.

The authorities and the superintendents in Newfoundland are to be congratulated upon the results that have been achieved at so little cost. Last year the average cost, per pupil, throughout Newfoundland was about $9.00 which was an increase over the cost in previous years.

We have certainly not erred on the side of extravagance. In St. John's the elementary schools showed an expenditure of about $10.23 per pupil, while the colleges showed an average of $36.00 per pupil. The respective figures in other counties range from $30.00 to $50.00 for elementary pupils and from $60.00 to $120.00 for high-school pupils.

The present situation in St. John's, including the inadequate plants, the defective equipment, the lack of proper maintenance, and the failure to attract boys and girls to school, is, in a very large measure due to the fact that enough money is not being spent on the schools to interest men and women in their proper development.—COM.

Mr. George Bemister, formerly of the Bank of Nova Scotia here, but now of the Bank of Nova Scotia Western Bay, came in by yesterday afternoon's train on a short visit to friends in town.

Mr. William Snelgrove, son of the late James and Jane Snelgrove of Bear's Cove, arrived from Sydney a few days ago, where he has been working for a number of years. Mr. Snelgrove will be remembered in connection with the blacksmith business of the late Bernard Parsons where he worked for some time. This young man's home-coming is a sad one, as both of his parents have passed beneath the vale since he left the old home. He is residing with Mr. Andrew Kennedy and family during his stay in town. His friends welcome him back to the old spot again.

Miss Florrie Wells, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Wells, of Bristol's Hope, left by yesterday morning's train enroute for Badger's Quay, Bonavista Bay, where she proposes teaching at the C. of E. school there. This is our young friend's first start in this sphere of life, and all her old school-mates wish her "good luck" in the "school marm" business.

Mrs. Joshua French and child of the West End, left by this morning's train for Montreal to join her husband, who has been working there for some time. It is very likely they will make their home there.

Miss Minnie Noseworthy left yesterday for the city, having enjoyed her holiday in the home town immensely.

Amongst the visitors to the town this week there has been Messrs. William and Ernest Frost of Bay de Verde, Theophilus Hart of Lady Cove, Leander Drover and wife of White-way, T.B.

Master Alfred Simmons left yesterday for St. John's to resume his studies at the Methodist College there. We wish this young chap every success in the coming year's work, as well as good results of last year, which has not as yet come to hand.

Mr. Max Perry of Indian Islands, B.B., has taken upon himself the duties of Principal of the Methodist Academy here, the former teacher, Mr. G. Moore, having resigned. The school opened on Monday week last. We wish this young man much success.

Mr. Bert Spry left town this morning for Alexander Bay to go to work there.

At the present time, business seems to be at a standstill; there seems to be very little doing in any line; one Boot and Shoe factory having closed down for some time, and the other running on half time. We trust as the fall advances and the returns from the fishery come along, things will be looking a bit brighter.

Today is the last of our summer holidays, and a very poor one it is for those who planned on picnicking. CORRESPONDENT. Hr. Grace, Sept. 15, 1920.
