THIS MORNING'S DESPATCHES

The House of Bourbon still at variance. Union of Spain and Portugal. Germany will recognize the Spanish Republic. Paris, Feb. 14. - L'Univers, the legitimate organ contradicts the report that a reconciliation has been effected between the two branches of the house of Bourbon. It asserts that nothing has been done toward union. Lisbon, Feb. 14. - In the Chamber of Deputies to-day a debate arose on the recent events in Spain. Silva said there was reason to expect that the changes in the neighbouring country would have an echo in Portugal. He urged all to support the Constitution. The Prime Minister replied that he saw no danger to the country. Amadens will leave Lisbon for home as soon as the Queen can bear the fatigue of travelling. The idea of the union of Spain and Portugal is gaining strength. Rome, Feb. 14. - The Italian Senate has adopted a laudatory and affectionate address to Amadens. Berlin, Feb. 14. - The Spanish Minister had a conference of two hours with Bismarck to-day. Immediate recognition of the Spanish Republic by Germany is expected. Paris, Feb. 14. - Several days' mails from Madrid are due. The report that a meeting was recently held at the residence of the Duke D'Annale in the interest of the Duke De Montpensier in pronounced without foundation. Specialists from Madrid report that Figuras intends to disengage the regular army and rely solely on the Civic Guard for the preservation of order. The Gazette De France says there is a party in the Portuguese army which is conspiring in favor of a Republic and an Iberian union. The Execution of Gaffney. HE CONFESSES HIS GUILT. In our issue yesterday (Friday) we announced by special telegram the hanging of this noted criminal. We now give fuller particulars: Gaffney, attired in black gown with the fatal noose around his neck, mounted the platform with a steady step, and took his position directly in front of the trap. The under-sheriff then read the death warrant. After this Gaffney came forward to speak, but the priest tried hard to dissuade him, but he said, "I must speak and tell these gentlemen the truth." He finally disengaged himself from them, and came forward, saying, "I shall speak," and in a clear voice he spoke for nine minutes, telling them the circumstances of his crime, how his brother-in-law, who was sober at the time, handed him a revolver and he, in the frenzy of drink, did the deed that brought him to this disgraceful end; he acknowledged feigning insanity, and said that he would do anything to prolong his life, even though it was spent in a dungeon, for then he would have the comfort of occasionally seeing his wife and children; he asked forgiveness from all those he had injured. The priest then offered up prayers contained in the litany for the dead. His arms and limbs were then pinioned, the black cap drawn over his head, the ugly knot adjusted, and the signal was given, and at 11:58 o'clock, the Sheriff pressed the lever, and the bolt shot back, letting the drop fall, and the body of John Gaffney fell six feet. He swayed backward and forward for some time, the muscles of his hand twitching, and twenty minutes later his heart had ceased to beat. His body was cut down a half an hour later and delivered to his friends. Foster, the Murderer. It was currently reported in New York, on Wednesday, that a petition had been presented, asking the exercise of executive clemency in the case of Foster, the car hook murderer. The murder was committed two years ago, and was both wanton and atrocious. Foster had been drinking a little - not much, but enough to make him feel comfortable and insolent. He was simply jolly and humorous, ready to kill on slight provocation, like the young man Rodgers, recently hanged for "laying out" a policeman on his beat, by way of a lark. Foster was a man of great muscular power, no conscience at all to speak of, a bullying and overbearing habit. He was one of those loafers whom every one has met in crowded cars and public places, a little better than the murderous demizens of the worst dance-houses. Several months ago one of them insulted a woman on the Bowery, and when her husband remonstrated knocked him down and killed him. On this special evening, Foster, who had been a car conductor, and who had been dismissed for his worthlessnes, entered a car of the Broadway line, open for any fun which might present itself. He saw a young girl, and after the manner of his kind, insulted her. The gentleman who was escorting the young girl and her mother to church, took a seat between Foster and the ladies, to protect them from him. No rough will stand such affront as that. It would injure his own self-respect if he passed it by without "laying out" the offender. Foster abused Mr. Putnam for awhile, but not being able to draw him into a quarrel, he asked him how far he was going. Receiving no answer, he said deliberately, "I will go as far as you do, and when you get off I will give you a h-l." He then went forward and asked the driver if he had a car-hook, and when Mr. Putnam was assisting the ladies to alight, Foster ran to the rear of the car, and crushed in his skull with the car-hook.

How the Madoc Indians Fight.

MILITARY SAGACITY OF THE RED MEN. A correspondent writing from Yreka, on the 27th ult., says that all is quiet at the front. Captain Jack, Scarface, Wharley, Schack Nasty Jim and the other warriors are resting complacently in their bow-like camp, waiting for the next demonstration. He had a conversation with James C. Fairchild to-day. Mr. Fairchild is a brother of John A., the man who had the famous interview with the Madocs. Both his brother and himself are men of great experience. He went through the late war on the rebel side; was at Vicksburg, all through the siege, and a dozen others, which were at that time supposed to be impregnable strongholds, and he says he never saw anything like it. These lava rocks, he says, are filled up in a way that no engineer could plan out. The Indians use them as real forts, getting behind them and shooting through the cracks the same as through a casement. Their positions cannot be changed because some of them are 100 feet in height, and utterly inaccessible from below. Neither can they be shelled for shells would strike against these rocks like boiled turnips against a tombstone. Mr. Fairchild says there are two ways of getting these Indians. One is to charge on them with a force of twenty to one, expecting to lose six lives out of every ten. The other is to surround and starve them out. The one plan will cost an ocean of blood, the other a mint of money. The latter plan is almost impossible to carry out for the reason that supplies cannot be brought into the lava bed, and any cordons that is carried around Jack must be located right in the rocks. As it was the other day, the wounded had to be packed out on horseback for miles. Nothing in the form of a wagon could be brought within ten miles of where the troops fought. Again, Jack has beef cattle by the hundred in his camp, with plenty of grass on the lake shore to feed them on. Months would have to elapse before he would even feel the necessity of supplies; and that time our side would feel as tired of the starving out process as he. The only feasible plan, then, is to charge on them - kill and get killed. This will involve a terrible loss of life; but then - what are our soldiers made for, and what are their lives worth when the dignity of the government is to be preserved? (Vide Senator Cole's despatches to Governor Booth. Mr. Fairchild informs me that the Indians fight with the tenacity of purpose, and with a military sagacity worthy of the highest civilization. Their evolutions on the day of the main battle were carried out with consummate tact and wonderful precision. They seemed to have their whole position worked out in parallel, each man having his own lava rock breastwork from behind which to fire. When they fell back, which they did whenever they were hard pressed, they did it deliberately, merely taking their positions behind the rocky outcrops next in their rear, where they were even more secure than before. Captain Jack was constantly heard giving his orders, and to all appearances his authority was recognized as promptly as though he had been a major-general. The Indian warriors and children who occupied a position in a kind of basin, within the Indian lines, and the fight took place all around them in a circle. Wild Oats. We clip the following from the New York Tribune: - The other day one of those sad little individual histories, which have a rarer flavor of romance than any fiction, reached its close in a neighboring city. A pretty, clever young girl the daughter of a man of great wealth and culture, fell into a morbid melancholy state common to school-girls, which they usually regard as evidence of an exalted mind, and attribute to a lack of comprehension on the part of an unfeeling world with the tenacity of purpose to love. To her entered, at one of her weekly receptions, a young Spaniard, high Leon, with an introductory letter from a friend in Paris. This Hidalgo, as warranty of his gentle blood, seems to have only offered a taste of his purpose to love. To her entered, at one of her weekly receptions, a young Spaniard, high Leon, with an introductory letter from a friend in Paris. This Hidalgo, as warranty of his gentle blood, seems to have only offered a taste of his purpose to love. To her entered, at one of her weekly receptions, a young Spaniard, high Leon, with an introductory letter from a friend in Paris. This Hidalgo, as warranty of his gentle blood, seems to have only offered a taste of his purpose to love. No MORAL SENSE. - Mrs. Sherman, the female police officer sentenced to death in New Haven jail, has been visited by the Rev. Mr. Goodsell, who reports that she appears "to be a person born with no moral sense whatever, with not the slightest idea of a right and wrong, and yet not to be a person of loose habits, deep passions, or of libidinous tendencies." It is hard to believe that a person with intellect enough to conceive the idea of administering poison, and with shrewdness enough to conceal for a time this particular crime, can be totally deficient in moral sense. If she did not know that the deed was evil, why did she try to hide it? HARD ON THE PRIESTS. - The Swiss Council of State has stopped the salaries for three months of all priests who read from their pulpits an unauthorized Papal brief establishing a separate bishopric for Geneva. The Conference at Basle has determined to create a grand Swiss bishopric of dissidents from Rome. The annual meeting of the Provincial Orange Lodge No. 1, will be held in Orangeville, commencing on Tuesday next, and continuing in session for three days. Several distinguished members of the Order will be present.

Affairs in Spain.

We have news from Spain of a very interesting character, and which will be read with more than usual interest. One of the first acts of the new Government was to issue a decree for the pardon of a number of men who were sentenced to be executed at Barcelona on the 14th.

The Carlist bands are still giving the Government a great deal of trouble, and the system of arming the people to repel the invaders will be largely developed immediately. The Government is determined that quiet shall be restored at whatever cost.

Senor Castelar, Minister of Foreign Affairs, is now engaged in preparing a manifesto, which will be sent to the different foreign powers, explaining the policy of the present Government.

The address in reply to the King's message of abdication has been adopted. It concludes with the declaration that when the present perils, conspiracies, and obstacles are overcome the Spaniards will not be able to offer Amadeus a crown, but they will offer him another dignity, that of being the citizen of a free and independent country. This is magnanimous on the part of the Government, and will no doubt be duly appreciated by Amadeus.

The local papers declare that the act of abdication was voluntary and personal, and that the King's father was strongly opposed to it.

The ex King and family have gone to Lisbon, where they were met on their arrival at the railway station by the King and Queen of Portugal, Prince August, and members of the Cabinet. The Italian Ambassador received Amadeus. The ex-Queen was weak, and was carried in a sedan chair to the Palace. The streets through which they passed were crowded.

Couriers have left the capital with Minister Castelar's manifesto to foreign powers. Eminent statesmen are trying to prevail on the Government to relinquish the idea of dividing the country into separate States, and forming a federated Republic like the United States. It is probable that the arguments against the scheme will have this effect. Gen. Novillas has been appointed Captain-General of Madrid.

Slight disturbances have taken place in Malaga, but order has been restored. The snow is now so deep in the neighborhood of Madrid that the railroads are blockaded and the running of trains is suspended. General Pavia has been appointed to the chief command of the troops in Catalonia. Senor Cruz will probably be appointed ambassador at Paris; Senor A. Marsagna, at London; and Senor Fiol, at Brussels. A decree is expected suppressing titles and decorations. It is rumored that the royal palace will be converted into a museum and academy of Arts. The revolutionary juntas which have long existed in secret in the provinces are dissolving. The Spanish banks have offered financial aid to the Ministry. The Gazette reports the defeat of several Carlist bands in Catalonia.

Outside Opinion.

In speaking of the synopsis given of the charter of the Canadian Pacific Railway, the New York Tribune says it seems likely that, if legislative provisions are sufficient to procure the construction of a road, that result will be obtained within a reasonable time. But there is another consideration which may not be without its influence on the prospects of the road before completion. The line must run through a very large district so unfavorable that there is no probability of its being inhabited for many years to come. It is a doubtful question whether the profits made by the general traffic on the road, if completed, will compensate for the peculiar disadvantages of the route.

Ontario Legislature.

Feb. 11. Attorney-General Mowat moved that the House will on Monday next, resolve itself into a Committee to consider the following resolution: That the proposed contract between the Government of Prince Edward Island and the Canada Car Company respecting the labour of prisoners confined in the Central Prison be rescinded. He said he does not regard the House as the proper body to consider the subject of establishing the Central Prison, as it was to provide for the penal advantages that would result from prisoners being kept at work instead of being left in idleness, being occupied having the effect of leading them to habits of industry and virtue, whereas, if they are left in idleness their habits become worse. The Act under which the Central Prison had been established was passed in Feb., 1871. The policy of employing the prisoners in this way was adopted by the Legislature at that time, and considerable progress had been made towards the erection of necessary buildings. The cost in the first year was $150,000, and last year a further sum of $100,000 was voted. He explained the nature of the agreement between the Government and the Canada Car Company for the employment of prison labor. He believed the system adopted would avoid many of the evils of the system of entire Government control, at the same time that it escaped some evils which sometimes flowed from the contract system, as generally carried out. The reason for the execution of the interim contract was that delay was impossible. The statute of 1871, established the Central Prison, gave express authority to the Inspector to hire the labour of the con-

OR THE TEMPTATION.

CHAPTER V.
AN UNLOOKED-FOR MEETING—HAPPY NEWS FOR ANNABEL—STRANGE DEPARTURE—BRIGHT PROSPECTS—THE UNSEEN SHADOW.

Philip did not lose hope of hearing who he was some-time or other. The evident connection between the stranger and Mr. Langton rendered it highly probable that he could not be long in the Mossley Street establishment without having the mystery revealed. For the present, however, it was a mystery, and one which all efforts there were not able to elucidate: therefore they resolved to let it rest, and meanwhile to give themselves up to the joy and happiness which had come to them.

Though we have not yet formally introduced Philip and Annabel to our readers, the latter have, through the narration of the incident in Woolman's Lane and what came out of it, learned a good deal of their characters, circumstances, and relative positions. The scenes in which we have found them bearing a part, and the manner in which they have conducted themselves therein, have shown to no inconsiderable extent their character and dispositions, and we hope these are such as to give the reader a favourable idea of them, and an interest in their hopes, prospects, and fortunes. As yet these are neither very uncommon nor very exciting. They are lovers, they are betrothed, and hope soon to be united—a set of plausible circumstances which tens of thousands have experienced before and since, and which of themselves would not have justified us in making them the subject of this story. But inasmuch as the events which we have detailed have brought them to the threshold of very singular adventures and experiences, we hope to excite the reader's strong interest in their future, and in order that this interest may be more readily created, we shall shortly refer to their earlier history, and relate how their acquaintance began, and how their love for each other was formed and grew into that beautiful and noble affection towards each other.

Several years before, their parents lived next door to each other in another though similar street of Liverpool. Misfortune and comparative poverty had overtaken both families, and ill-health had come in the train of misfortune, as it often does, to intensify and complete the sore discipline of spirit by which chastened souls have their faith tried and their steadfastness tested ere they are made ready for the blessedness of a higher life, in which care and sorrow, pain and poverty are unknown. Philip's father had sunk under a weight of disease and left his mother to his care, he fell in ill-health, with the half of her heart in her husband's grave and the other half centred on her devoted son, who strove in every way that lay in his power to promote her comfort.

Annabel, too, had by this time lost her father, and her mother endeavored by sewing to supply their simple wants, which strained means rendered still sorer. There was a more sorrowful case than that of the Westons, for the former had always been in circumstances of respectability. They had not experienced such hard fortunes as the latter, who had not only comfort but affluence. Mrs. Langton had been the daughter of a wealthy merchant, whom she had married, and who had died, leaving her an old and often told tale. Pride and riches had set themselves against honest humble worth. Love had been true to itself and truth and constancy had incurred the usual punishment. In marrying the man who had won her heart, Mrs. Langton had forfeited the friendship of her family, further intercourse with them was denied her, and even on his death-bed her father refused to be reconciled to her, and never mentioned her name in his will, but left all his means to her only brother, who with the money inherited also the animosity which had made his sister an outcast from the home and even the thoughts of her family.

This cruelty and injustice would have done her little harm had fortune continued to smile on her husband's business, but misfortune came—misfortune which crushed him into the grave, and left her with an only child—Annabel—to fight for subsistence in a cold and heartless world. At first she entertained the thought of applying to her brother, who out of his abundant wealth could have supplied their wants without feeling that he did so; and after a sore struggle she did bring her mind to go to him and seek assistance. She sought his presence, she stood before him, and told him she was a widow and penniless, with herself and her child to support; but he cruelly closed his ear to her prayer, and sent her empty away, telling her—God forgive him!—that as she had sowed so she must reap; that she had made her choice against the wishes of her family, and must now abide by all its consequences. With a burning heart, in silence and wounded indignation, she turned away from that unfeeling and unnatural heart, and thenceforward endured the battle and the struggle for existence.

She did not altogether fail. She managed to support her child and herself in humble respectability, and ere long Annabel, to whom she gave a good education, was able to do something for the common object. Alas, very soon the whole burden came upon the young girl, for Mrs. Langton fell into ill health, and was no longer able to perform her share of the necessary work. But Annabel undertook it all, and never complained, for in the love of Philip Weston she had a secret strength which sweetened the bitterness of their lot, and infused a hope into her heart that rendered toil unobnoxious.

When the love of Philip and Annabel began it was difficult to say. The intercourse between the inmates of the two houses being close and unintermittent, they saw each other daily and in circumstances which gave them a perfect insight into each other's character. When love grows up under such conditions, be sure that it has a true and lasting basis. It is not like the impressions which grow out of a chance meeting in a ball-room, or at a social party, which may turn out well enough, but which, on the other hand may yield only disappointment when the parties come to know each other at home and as they really are, and find them, when too late, that they had been strangers to their real nature. No such mistake could occur in the case of Philip and Annabel, for they had full and ample opportunity of becoming thoroughly acquainted with each other, and it was out of this full knowledge of their real character that their esteem and affection grew—a result which the mothers of both saw with delight, and which they mutually congratulated each other upon when they were alone together.

PETRIE'S

NEW DRUG STORE

Nearly opposite the Old Stand.

NOW OPEN.

Mr. PETRIE takes this opportunity to thank the Public for their large and liberal support during the seven years he has been in business in Guelph.

The New Store is the one formerly occupied by Mr. H. Berry, and lately by Mr. J. R. Porte, as a Confectionery Store. The store has been enlarged and refitted, making it a much more desirable place of business than the old stand.

Having secured the new store for a term of Ten Years, I hope, with the assistance of the Public, to present in the future as I have done during the past seven years, any monopoly in the Drug Trade in Guelph.

The old store will remain open for business until the first of May.

By conducting my business in the future in the same upright principle as in the past, I trust to receive a continuance of your generous support.

I am, yours very truly,

A. B. PETRIE.
