There are wild roses and robins there, There are wild roses and robins there, just as, one see on the painted placques in the store windows. And perhaps we can have a flower bed, and some dear little downy chickens.
But the first sight of Mulleinstalk Farm was dispiriting in the extreme.
Between rock and swamp there was reasonably presture for the two learn cowe.

Between rock and swamp there was scarcely pasture for the two lean cows that Mr. Cheeney had bought at 'a bargain,' and the hollow-backed horse, which stalked about the premises like some phantom Bucephalus.

The apple-trees in the orchard were three-quarters dead, and lean sorrowfully away the last winds, until their houghs touched the very ground the boughs touched the very ground; the fences were all gone to ruin, and the front gate was tied up with a hemp string.

'Is this home?' said Elma, with an 'Is this nome; said Lims, with an indescribable intonation in her voice.

'We'll get all things straightened up after a while,' said Mr. Chesney, bustling to drive away the pigs, who had broken out of their pen and were squeaking dismally under the window.

Mrs. Chesney cried herself to sleep that night, and awakened the next. that night, and awakened the next morning with every bone instinct with shooting pains.

'And no wonder,' said Spencer.
There's a foot of water in the cellar.'

'We must have it drained,' said Mr. We must have it drained, said Mr. Chesney, with an uneasy look; 'but there's plenty of things to do first.'

And now began a reign of the strictectonomy. Mr. Chesney paid for everything with checks, and not an article came into the house or came out of it without his cognizance. New dresses were framed a non; springly hop. dresses were frowned apon; spring! hon-nets were strictly interdicted; orders were issued that the old carpets should

'Save, save' save! That is the chief try their best to save.' 'It's all very well for papa,' growled Will. 'He goes to the city every day and sees something besides the pigs and the dead apple trees. He orders a new suit when he needs it. Look at new suit when he needs it. Look at mamma's patched gown and Rosie's dyed bonnet string! Why, they can't even go to church, they are such objects. He gets his lunch at a resturant,

'Boys,' fluttered Rosie, 'I've an idea.
Mary Penn, who lives on the next farm you know, came to see Elma and me yesterday. Papa is earning his living: Jewelery, we'll earn something too.'

'I should like to know how,' muttered Spencer. 'I might hire out somewhere as farm hand, if it wasn't for that wretched old horse, and the pigs, and the wood-chopping and—'
'Oh, there's something that won't interfere with the chores, nor with school!' said cheerful little Rosie.
'Inst listen—all I sak of you is just to 'Just listen-all I ask of you is just to

The weeks grew into months, and the red leaves eddied down in little swirls from the maple trees, and 'pig-killing' time came, and, with the aid of a lame, one-eyed man, Mr Cheeney laid down his own stock of pork and sausage for the winter with the sense of feeling triumphantly economical. The family had left off complaining now. Apparently they were resigned to their doom. But there was some things that Mr Chesney could not exthings that Mr Chesney could not explain at all.

A new rug brightened up the dismal hues of the parlor carpet; Rosie had a crimson merino dress, trimmed with blrck velvet bars; Elma's fall jacket was edged with substantial black fur; and—grand, grand climax of extravagance—Mrs Chesney had a new shawl, in place of the old broche garment, which had been her mother's, and was which had been her mother's, and was which had been her mothers, and was well worn before she received it.
