HIS DREAM DISPELLED.

In West-side-Park at e'en she stood. In the water gazed with thoughtful eyes, Perhap-she saw reflected there Bright angels darting 'cross the akles. What wonder that my heart beat fast With deep emotion long unknown? A fervent longing filled my breast To win chat angle for my own.

With this emotion scarce subdued
I ventured, "What a glorious night!"
I to angel m:ved seraphic lips.
And said, "You bet! it's out of sight."

de and strongly advised Lieut. D to es-ape with his men and leave him and his ecople to their fate, assuring him, how-ver, of his belief that the Indians would not herm them. But the lieutenant pro-essed against his course, and upon callwith him and declared in favor of remaining at their post.

Then something strange occurred.
But before relating it I must go back to the night preceding the council and tell what then took place. The men were resting with their arms andy for any emergency and prepared, resist an attack at a moment's notice, ying close to each other were two mrades engaged in a whispered soncontrades engaged in a whispered conversation, and this is what they said:
"Pierre," said one, whose name was lack Cohn, "we are in a tight box, and inte to think of all the boys being surdered, for that is what it means, tain't goin' to be a fair fight. The itentenant is game, but it will be a slaughter."

slaughter."
"Yes," replied Pierre, "Mr. L is right. We ought to get out of here without ighting if we can. The red devils will e too much for us. I hate to run away s mach as any one, but what's the use of staying? They'll be too much for "Say, Pierre," said Cohn, "you and I know more about Indian fighting than the rest of the boys; can't we hit upon some scheme to save them. I guess the itentenant would listen to us."
"Well," replied Pierre, "there is only one way to do it that I can think of. It means running away sure, but it's the only scheme I can get through my head."

head."

"What is it?" asked Cohn, eagerly.

"You know the scow down at the river back of the fort?" answered Pierre,

"Well. if the boys could only get aboard it and shove off down current without the Indians knowing, I think it would work out all right."

"But," remarked Cohn, 'how can the blamed reds be kept in the dark?"

"Only one way," said Pierre.

"Out with it," said Cohn.

"You and I have got to do it, Jack,"

was the reply.

was the reply.

"I am with you," said Cohn, "but I don't quite catch on to your plan."

"Don't you see," replied Pierre, "if you and I ride out of the fort and go different ways the Indians will be after a company to the property of the representation of the control of the fort and go different ways the Indians will be after the control of the property of the representation of the control of t different ways the Indians will be after us. They'll think we're going for rein-forcements, and there'll be a big chase, I reckon. You and I would have to ake desperate chances, but our horses ire good and we're the only two who know how to play the Indians. What do you think of the scheme?"

"It will work, Pierre; it will work, if only the lieutenant agrees to it. Say we put it to him in the morning."

Then these two brave fellows worked out their plan in detail, and it was this; They were willing to take their lives in their hands and ride out of the fort to livert the attention of the Indians while livert the attention of the Indians while Lieut. D. and his men slipped out and embarked upon the scows. They did not conceal from each other the risk, hey were taking, but they discussed a plan of action which would give them a plan of action which would give them a good chance to escape capture.

They knew that nearly the whole band of Indians would be after them, and if they were taken it meant worse than mere death—it meant torture—but they also knew that it would leave the door of escape open long enough for their comrades to get away from the fort.

Then came the question—which one Then came the question—which one would take the direction down stream, for both knew that he who rode that way would have the best change of escaping from his pursuers,
So they agreed to toss for place, and in the dim light these two men cast outs between them for life or death. That was what it meant_that is how it turned out. Pierre won, and then he said to Cohn, "Take my horse, Jack. He is longerwinded than yours. It will be a long chase with you and a short one with me.

I'd sooner take your place, Jack," he added, sadly, for they loved each other as brothers, and Pierre knew from experience the risk his friend would run.
But Cohn would not consent to an exchange of horses and expressed his ability to cutrun the Indians. So the heroic compact was concluded, and it only remained to obtain the lieutenant's consent and approval.

Reports are coming in from a large number of dairy States that the friends of honest dairying are making a special effort to provide more stringent legislation in regard to the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine. The fact can be no longer disguised that this spurious article coming in competition with butter is gradually reducing the price of the latter, and in a few years more on the same ratio of decline, dairying, instead of being one of the best paying operations in connection with farming, would be affected to that extent, that the millions now invested in cows and

This speech of Jack's was the strange thing that occurred, because he was known to be one of the bravest men on the force, but Lieut. D. quickly perceived that there was something behind the words spoken which had yet to be disclosed. So he said: "Well, Cohn, suppose I consent to abandon the fort, how are we to get away? It seems to me we will be worse off outside than inside the walls."

"Yes, sir," said Jack; "but Pierre and I have talked it over, and we propose to go out and give the rebels a run while you and the boys get away. If you can get aboard the scow at the river bank and push off I guess we can keep the Indiana engaged long enough for you to get well down the river. Mr. L and his people are all right. The reds won't hurt them.

"And what is to become of you and "And what is to become of you and Pierre?"

"Oh! I guess we are able to take care

Two here in the second of the same in the the moment the soldiers boarded the scow.

At last the critical moment arrived at a time when the Indians were engaged in their camp and unprepared for an immediate chase. Quickly the gate of the fort was thrown open and Jack and Pierre fice out at full gallop, each taking a separate direction. Then a shout arose from the Indians who rushed for their horses and were soon in hot pursuit. One party dashed after Jack, while another pursued Pierre. For a few moments the soldiers in the fort watched the course of their comrades before taking advantage of the opportunity to escape. Then silently they stole out of the fort and down to the bank of the river, where the scow lay. The extra ammunition and guns were thrown into the river and the rude craft shoved off and poled into the stream, where the current caught it and sent at a rapid rate down the river.

Every minute brought Lieut. D. and his men nearer to safety, but how fared it with Jack and Pierre? When the scow was well down the river and rounding a point a splash was heard, and then Pierre's head appeared above the water as he swam eagerly towards the boat. As he came near he cried faintly, "I'm shot through, boys; help to pull me in,"

In a moment one of the men had plunged into the river and was supporting Pierre, while willing hands were ready to lift him tenderly into the scow. Pierre was badly wounded and faint from loss of blood, but he had strength doubled on his pursuers, who he admitted were better mounted than he had expected.

Asked about Jack, he said that the last he saw of him was his horse stumbiling along as if wounded. "Then I lost sight of him, but I fear," said Pierre, "that Jack is a goner. The Indians were close on to him."

Pierre was tenderly cared for until a body of the troops was overtaken, when he received proper surgical attention, and I am glad to say he finally recovered from his wounds and is alive to-day.

A detachment of the troops was then sent out in search of Jack, and on passing the ruins of the fort, which the Indians had destroyed, the body of poor Cohn was found, not far from the spot where Pierre had last seen him. His body was in a horrilly mutilated condition his fiendish captors having tied him to a stake and torture I him in the most terrible manner. Fire had been applied to him and he had been hacked with knives, probably while still alive. At his feet, almost hidden in the grass, a locket was found with part of a chain attached. Evidently he had torn it from his neck, thus breaking the chain, in an endeavor to save it from the Indians.

Reverently the troopers carried the mitted were better mounted than he had

Fort P.

When Pierre was shown Jack's locket, which out of respect for the dead had not been opened, he said:

"Ah! boys, that is the portrait of his mother, which he always wore next to his heart. His last thought was of her; his last effort was to save the gift she gave him from the clutches of the red devils. Poor Jack! Ah, me! my only friend," sighed Pierre. "Would to God it had been me instead of you!"

The Morwegian Wood-Pulp Industry.

The Bulletin du Musee Commercial says the year 1893 was a very favorable one in Norway for manufacturers of wood-pulp, the prices having on the average been four & kroner (4s 5id) higher for wet pulp, and eight kroner (8s 10id) higher fer dry than they were in the preceding year. Purchasers hastened to place their orders, and at the commencement of the year the qualities sold amounted to 130,000 tons. The demand having again increased, the wood pulp syndicate realised that the reduction of the production to the extent of 33g per cent.,

which was primarily fixed upon, was too great, and at a meeting, which was held in May, the maximum reduction was fixed at 23g per cent., but in spite of this prices continued to rise. Towards the end of the were sold at 55 kroner (£3 ls. 11d) and 100

The father indicated some surprise.

"She isn't going to fly the track is she?" he asked.

"No, not that he going to stay on and make he nee but I'm afraid it's entirely for the purse that's up."

"O ho." laughed the father; "she's making a shy at the shekels, is she?"

"No, pop." protested Fred; 'Iwouldn't say that; only I'm afraid she might be."

Mr. Burgess became thoughtful and fred was alient for some time.

"Frederick, my chicken," said he after a while, laying his hand on the young man's shoulder, "I have a scheme; a great scheme;" and he tapped his dome of thought with much personal pride.

"Where did you get it, papa" asked fred ban'eringly; "import it?"

"No, my son; I manufactured it right here at home, "again tapping his foreshed." Now you sit down and, let me tell you all about it."

"Wait till I brace myself, in order to resist the shock," said Fred, seating himself deep down in a big easy chair. "Let her go, pop, I'm ready," and pop thereupon proceeded to let her go.

Three menths later Mr. Burgess and Fred were in the library of the Burgess mansion once more, Fred having returned only that day from a visit to some friends in England.

"Well, Father Burgess," he said, with minual impatience, "how did the scheme work!"

"My boy, my boy," groaned Mr. B. ingubriously, "I'm not in it sixty seconds."

"Wouldn't it work?" asked Fred in a disappointed tone.

"Let me tell the harrowing tale," and Mr. Burgess fixed himself comfortably.
"A month after you left, in my coy and difficent manner, I asked Miss Harriet one day on the street if Leouldn't walk home with her. She was just too sweet the library of all and in the scheme work!"

The acting fand it says of the edition will from the the other—a love which will lend to the declining days of the worm and it is stay to the dewling years of the girl's life, the assistance that experience can give to youth.

"Wait till I brace myself, in order to reside the should will here a house of the least the should will here a house of the ment of the should will here "Weuldn't it work?" asked Fred in a disappointed tone.

"Let me tell the harrowing tale," and Mr. Burgess fixed himself comfortably.
"A month after you left, in my coy and diffident manner. I asked Miss Harriet one day on the street if i couldn't walk home with her. She was just too sweet for anything—Fred winced—"and said it would charm her beyond expression. So I walked along with nes, talking about you and other young men. Miss Harriet was enraptured to hear what I said of you and other young men, and then very demurely said she thought older men were so much nicer. Then I was charmed, and when we reached her home she invited me to call with such a winning grace that I couldn't resist it, and accepted the invitation in my very best style."

Fred got up and tramped around the library awhile.

"Confound the women," he said. "Did you go?"

"Didn't I go?" responded the father with a semi whoop. "Well, I should say I did, and until four days ago I didn't give one of those other youngsters a ghost of a chance at anything. By the way, Fred," he sadded, regret; fully, "it costs like the mischief to court a girl right these days, doesn't it! I had no idea it was such an expensive luxury."

Fred writhed in his chair.

PEOPLE WHO WRITE

J. M. Barrie, the novelist, is reported seriously ill from lung trouble in London. Count Tolatoi is writing a "cosmopolitan drama" which he says is to be the best of his works.

English critics are finding famis with Mr. Gladstone's translation of Horace. They say that Gladstone's Homese is very stiff and very pedantic.

Rose Young, a direct descendant of one of the Pitcairn mutineers and a woman of more than usual intelligence, is writing a history of the Pitcairn, colony.

Mrs. Julia Ward, Howe celebrated her 75th anniversary recently. She is at this ripe age in the fall possession of her faculties, and is rejoicing in a beautiful and vigorous old age.

It is reported that some old-fashioned English people who have met Rudyard Kipling during his present visit to England are pained at what they consider evidence of Americanization in his manners.

Robert Louis Stevenson has grown then to emaciation. His wrist is now so thin as to look, it is said, as if a child could break it in two. His lean body has become visibly leaner, and his face is so sharp at the chin as to give a V-shaped appearance to his physicgnomy.

Fred writhed in his chair.

"On on," he said almost sternly.

"Oh, I did go on," haughed the father,
"and she encouraged me, too, and, by Jove, young fellow, I became so interested I couldn't stop going on."

Fred looked at his father in amazement. If this thing continued he felt that something disagreeable would happen to him, but he said nothing.

"Well," resumed Mr. Burgess, "four days ago, at 8 p.m., I called for the four dozenth time, and my mind was made up to have that girl in the family, even if I had to prove myself a traitor to do it." his physiognomy. SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

A devilfish measuring thirty feet across was caught recently in the infet at Van-couver, B. C. The Texas court of appeals has decided that the laws prohibiting prize-fighting in that state are null and wold. The only penalty that prize fighters can be subjected to is a small fine for assault and battery.

Go it.

Fred almost forgot himself, but he exercised all his powers of restraint.

'Said I," continued Mr. Burgess,

"after I had beaten around the emotional bush for half an hour, 'Miss Harriet, you have become very near and dear to me.' U. S. Visit with me a pleasant house like cottage not far distant. In a large easy chair drawn up before the grate where a coal fire is burning brightly reclines an elderly woman; it is the calm hour of pensive twilight, the child of day and darkness. At the window in the curtained niche, gazing dreamily into the quickly descending gloom, stands a young girl of some seventeen years. The woman sits intently studying the girl. She sees a profile outlined in the deepening twilight against the windowpane, a more silhouette. One would think that the fate of the woman depended on the correct reading of that profile, so breathlessly and thoughtfully does she gaze. But what has fate to do with a woman of forty, fifty, sixty; it matters not for the exact number of years only that youth with its dreams and hopes is a thing of the past with M. Moissan, the distinguished French chemist, has made some more crystals of diamond by plunging the electric crucible containing the carbon at a temperature of 2,000 degrees C. into cold water. The diamonds thus obtained scratch rubies and burn with the production of carbonic acid gas, but the largest weighs only six milligrammes. SPEAKING OF DINNERS.

HORSE TALK.

Don't be afraid to buy a horse because he is thin. In other words, look out when buying a fat one. Flesh hides blemishes. Better muzzle the horses than hinder the free use of their necks by checking while at word. Checked horses sweat more and grow thin faster than free horses. A team that is yelled at and jerked will become so nervous that they do not know what they are about; they grow thin with half the work of one that is naed kindly and steadily. The manners of the team show tifs temper of the driver.

If for any reason the houses have not show this temper of the driver.

If for any reason the horses have not shed their coats or are unthrifty, give them a little oil meal in their teed daily. Begin with a tablespoonful and gradually increase until feeding a pint twice per day. Few feeds will give a horse so much strength and make him look so well.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN

is Pleasant to the Taste as the Sweetest Nectar: It is Safe and Harmless as the Purest Milk.

This wonderful Nervine Tonic has only recently been introduced into this country by the proprietors and manufacturers of the Great South American Nervine Tonic, and yet its great value as a curative agent has long been known by a few of the most learned physicians, who have not brought its merits and value to the knowledge of the general public. This medicine has completely solved the problem of the cure of indigestion, dyspepsia, and diseases of the general nervous system. It is also of the greatest value in the cure of all forms of failing health from whatever cause. It performs this by the great nervine tonic qualities which it possesses, and by its great curative powers upon the digestive organs, the stomach, the liver and the bowels. No remedy compares with this wonderfully valuable Nervine Tonic as a builder and strengthener of the life forces of the human body, and as a great renewer of a broken-down constitution. It is also of more real permanent value in the treatment and cure of diseases of the lungs than any consumption remedy ever used on this continent. It is a marvelous cure for nervousness of females of all ages. Ladies who are approaching the critical period known as change in life, should not fail to use this great Nervine Tonic, almost constantly, for the space of two or three years. It will carry them safely over the danger. This great strengthener and curative is of inestimable value to the aged and infirm, because its great energizing properties will give them a new hold on life. It will add ten or fifteen years to the lives of many of those who will use a half dozen bottles of the remedy each year.

NERVOUS DISEASES.

As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine-tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow, and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied; and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This South American Nervine has been found by analysis to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its universal adaptability to the cure of all forms of nervous de-

To the Great South American Medicine Co.

DEAR GENTS:—I desire to say to you that have suffered for many years with a very serious disease of the s.omach and nerves. I tried every medicine I could hear of, but nothing done me any appreciable good until I was advised to try your Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and since using several bottles of it I must say that I am surprised at its wonderful powers to cure the stomach and general nervots system. If everyonchew the value of this remedy as I do you would not be able to supply the demand.

A SWORN CURE FOR ST. VITAS' DANCE OR CHOREA.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., June 22, 1887.

My daughter, eleven years old, was severely a nicted with St. Vitus' Dance or Chorea. We gave her three and one-half bottles of South American Nervine and she is completely restored. I believe it will cure every case of St. Vitus' Dance. I have kept it in my family for two years, and am sure it is the greatest remedy in the world for Indigestion and Dyspepsia, and for all forms of Nervous Disorders and Failing Health, from whatever cause.

INDIGESTION AND DYSPEPSIA.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incal-culable value who is affected by disease of the stomach, because the experience and testimony of many go to prove that this is the one and only one great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.
