HAROLD CLARK IS FOUND GUILTY

Interesting and Amusing Mock
Trial by the Knights of Pythias

One of the most amusing entertainments that has been held in Hartland for a long time was the mock trial put on by the Knights of Pythias on Friday night, in conjunction with the three-act comedy, "A Rival by Request," by the Amateur Dramatic club. The entertainment was to help the Women's Institute in lighting the streets and their fund will be increased by about $50 as a result.

The court was made up of A. A. Nevers, judge; M. L. Hayward, Ward Ginson and Wendell Nixon, lawyers for the prosecution; A. D. Colwell, W. E. Nevers and Alfred Moore for the defence; T. Simms, clerk; Geo. Stevens, crier. Harold Clark of Clark's hotel was the prisoner at the bar.

After the formal opening of the court clerk Simms called out the docket.

A great many cases of local interest and screaming jest were stood over. When the case of Harold Clark was called Hayward moved for trial, which proceeded. Clark was charged that in or about the month of December last past he did unlawfully, fraudulently and maliciously harbor a certain German spy, Herr Von Bung of Hamburg in the Kingdom of Germany, contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided and against the peace of our sovereign lords the County Councilors for the Parish of Brighton.

The jury being impanelled Mr. Hayward opens the case for the prosecution and calls Fred Hayward and Geo. Henderson as witnesses. Their evidence, both in direct and cross examination drew forth hilarious applause as the names of local parties and incidents of recent dates were brought in.

The case for the defense was opened by A. D. Colwell in a short speech in which he said in part: The prisoner is a respectable, upright, God-fearing, law-abiding citizen, a temperate and industrious citizen of the town who never did anything more than haul a few pianos for Mrs. Adney and run a temperance hotel. As a hotel keeper it was his duty to provide accommodation for the traveling public, and he had refused to take in Mr. Von Bung we know what would have happened—Hayward would have taken the German's case and entered suit against the prisoner and declared that Hers Von Bung was a British subject in good and regular standing. I do not want to say anything up-parliamentary or to be severe on my learned friend, but if he cannot make out any stronger case than this he had better stop reading law and devote his attention to studying a Centreville poem entitled "Hayward the Orator," which now reposes in the Observer waste basket.

Vernon Noddin and Perley Clark were called to shatter the prosecution's case and some genuine fun was the result of their examination by the prosecuting and defending counsel.

The hour being late there were no addresses of counsel to the jury, who were then charged by the judge as follows:

It is now up to you, gentlemen of the jury to decide this case according to the evidence adduced and the ignorance of the lawyers on both sides. Remember that the motto of this court is that no innocent man escapes and no guilty man suffers. You will now consider your verdict.

The jury returning delivered the following verdict: "We find the prisoner guilty with a strong recommendation to the mercy of the court on account of the high cost of living." Judge: "Prisoner you have been found guilty by a jury, and I believe it is a jury of your peers, for I know they are all as big criminals as you are. Now the sentence of the court is that you pay a fine of twenty five cents and be imprisoned in H. Y. Tommy's laundry for one half hour. And may Allan Day have mercy on the bluing."

The young people in the comedy acquitted themselves in fine style and drew forth much favorable comment on their acting. There were many amusing incidents and the players portrayed their parts in a very creditable manner. The costumes were very good.

EAST FLORENCEVILLE

Last Wednesday evening Freeman Haughn of Florenceville entertained a number of people by giving a magic lantern show and lecture entitled "A Trip Through Ireland." Mr. Haughn took his audience on board the steamer at New York, from there describing the trips and the different ways to enjoy ones-self while on board a large steamer. He showed the different ways of seeing Ireland by the tourist such as the different styles of jaunting carts, boats and cars. Some pictures of interest were the beautiful lakes, the wishing chair, kissing the Blarney Stone and some old ruins as well as some very fine buildings more modern. The pictures were very interesting and instructive. A silver collection was taken. The proceeds will go toward new hymn books for the United Baptist church.

Last Thursday evening a number of young folk drove to Centreville to attend the Bachelors At Home. About seventy couples were present. The music was furnished by the Woodstock orchestra.

This evening will be held the Bachelors At Home in the Star Theater. About fifty couples are invited. The chaperons are to be Mrs. Thomas McCain; Mrs. F. T. Atkinson and Mrs. W. R. Trafford.

The literary class will meet on Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. W. R. Trafford on Maple street.

Perley B. Shaw of Hartland spent Sunday at the home of his brother, Theo.

On Friday evening at Bath a dance will be given to aid the Belgians. After the dance supper will be served. The price is 35 cents and all are invited.

A. D. Colwell of The Observer office was in town on business Saturday.

Mrs. Wilmot Hunter and Mrs. Caspar Caldwell are on the sick list.

HARTLAND HARBORS A REAL DESERTER

Private Lindsay, Absent from Regiment for Two Weeks, Arrested
by A. R. Foster

For two weeks Hartland harbored a really truly deserter from His Majesty's ranks. This was in the person of Ralph Lindsay, who last autumn enlisted with the 26th Battalion at St. John.

It seems the man, who had been here on leave on a former occasion, left his regiment, this time without leave, and remained absent for two weeks. His superior officers, evidently knowing Hartland had attractions for him, communicated with Justice R. W. Cameron and asked him to locate the fellow. It was known that Lindsay had a girl friend here, and a little detective work brought forth evidence that the girl was sheltering him in her home.

Late on Saturday night A. R. Foster was asked to arrest Lindsay, which he did without meeting with resistance. Kneeling at the door he was admitted by the young woman and Lindsay was found partly disrobed in another room. He claimed he came here a fortnight ago and had not since been out of the house.

Mr. Foster held the man in custody until Tuesday, when Sergt. Lallanc and Pte. McNutt came from St. John and escorted him back. At the time of going to press it could not be learned what punishment was meted out to him. It will in all likelihood be severe since, it is said, this is his third absenteeism without leave. Moreover, it is stated that he named the girl in the case as his wife and that she has been drawing a wife's allowance from the militia department.

The correspondent of the Standard made such a sensational report of this that Hun Yee Tommy the Chinese laundryman is sorely vexed that the name of his wife and little daughter were brought into the case.

Tommy told The Observer that information of the man's whereabouts did not come through him and he had no part in the harboring of him. His little girl, he said, may have known of his hiding place, and may have told enquirers about it, but to him she denied having done so. Lindsay, Tommy says, was married to a cousin of his wife's and on a former occasion visited at his house; but the couple are now parted and Lindsay afterward made his rendezvous at another house in the village, a house, Tommy took pains to inform The Observer, he had never set foot in since it has been occupied by the present tenants.

Lindsay claims to be a native of Indiana.

Bridge Dynamiter Nearly Mobbed

Just before the train started from Vanceboro Friday morning, a Canadian went over to Vanceboro and asked Deputy Ross to take Horn, the bridge dynamiter, down to the international bridge and let him go.

"You take him down to the bridge and turn him loose and we will look after him," said the Canadian.

"I guess not!" Deputy Ross replied.

"What will you do if a crowd of us come over after him," the man from across the line persisted.

"If they get this man they will have to take him over my dead body," the deputy replied. "Just go ahead and get your crowd."

Speaking of the incident later in the day Deputy Ross said rather wistfully: "I kind of wished that fellow had started something."

Believes Man Who Dynamited Vanceboro Bridge was Here

Section Foreman Tompkins is firm in the belief that Werner Horn was here a few months ago, in company with another man. Tompkins says the description tallied and the published portrait fully satisfied him that the stranger he met on the track was Horn. He says that the stranger, in broken English, nervously asked questions, and commenting on the country, said it was the finest in the world, but was not to be ours much longer.

PARLIAMENT

Parliament opened on Thursday, and if the two parties follow the course of their leaders contentious matters will be stood aside and party politics will play no part. The weal of the nation is at stake, and the leaders have uttered lofty sentiments of united aid to the empire.

Sir Wilfrid referred to the request for an additional war vote of $100,000,000 and said they supported the government in its war policy. Sir Wilfrid maintained, however, that the people of Canada were entitled to a full statement of all public expenditures placed at the disposal of the government for war purposes last August. There have, doubtless, been mistakes made and errors of judgment, he said. With these I am not disposed to be critical. But if there have been more than mistakes, more than errors of judgment; if, indeed, there have been frauds, grievous frauds against our troops, frauds that have caused brave men much suffering and loss and ill health, then I think that the government should fearlessly expose them. I was startled to hear that such frauds had been committed—frauds so gross and so criminal that the minister of militia had stated publicly four times that if he knew the man who supplied the boots to certain of the troops, that man deserved to be shot. The fullest light should be thrown on all the circumstances. Sir Wilfrid concluded with a patriotic appeal to all Canadians to do their full part in service and sacrifice. It was their privilege and duty to render these to their motherland.

That party politics will come up is, however, a foregone conclusion: for if the Liberals vote to spend money for war purposes they have a right to know how it is spent, and they have a right to resent its being paid out through and to political favorites. The public wants to hear from Valcartier.

Had the Liberals voted against the $50,000,000 appropriated last summer for war purposes they could not be excused for insisting on knowing how expenditures had been made. But to a man they voted with the government and they must not be ignored.

Mr. Carvell has asked, among other things, for correspondence, etc., relative to freight rates on the Transcontinental, papers relative to the removal of the Y connecting the N.T.R. and C.P.R. at Wapeke, for further and full information on B. F. Smith's operations on the Tobique Reserve, and also documents relating to salmon fishing on the St. John between tide-water and Andover.

F. B. Carvell's appearance at Ottawa draws a few more soft-nosed editorials from the Standard. These sounds of wrath and woe from the Conservative newspaper merely serve to remind the public that it was Mr. Carvell who found some of the Standard's friends with the plunder in their possession and sufficiently indicated the guilt of others. Mr. Carvell left his mark upon several statesmen whose anger is frequently made manifest through the Standard. The public knows their names and their specialties.—Telegraph.

At 11 o'clock all repaired to the dining room which looked like fairyland in its decorations of potted plants, ferns, carnations, colored lights and wax tapers. The polished table with its beautiful doilies and dainty viands was a sight to please the most fastidious. Mrs. T. B. Bedell poured tea and was assisted in serving by Misses Pearl Waite, Mabel Peat and Rosa Hoyt.

Mr. Gerrish has been induced to give a concert in the Specialty with fourteen members of the orchestra, the deal being closed on the night of February 4. Provincial newspapers have been very kind in their criticism and Mr. Wooten, manager of the specialty is to be congratulated upon securing such a treat for the people and should be assured of a full house. The funds are to go to the patriotic fund and to defray the expenses of the orchestra. A social dance will be held after the concert.

Save your hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is sure evidence of a neglected scalp, of dandruff—that awful scourge.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair root to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Known Danderine from any drug store. It surely can restore your hair and so if it you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it.

Rev. E. C. Jenkins Tenders Resignation

At Waterville on Sunday last after communion service and singing "Blest be the tie that binds," Rev. E. C. Jenkins, pastor of the United Baptist church, tendered his resignation. As he walked slowly out the deacons requested the congregation to remain. Deacon Wm. D. Culbertson with few well chosen remarks full of sad emotion explained why Rev. Jenkins had done this. Immediately Deacon McLeod moved a resolution seconded by Bro. Charles Palmer that this church and congregation tender Rev. Jenkins a call to remain another year.

A standing vote was taken—the large congregation all came to their feet amid many tears.

Since coming to Waterville nearly three years ago Bro. Jenkins and his good wife have made many friends that will never forget them.

As a preacher Bro. Jenkins has few equals if any in the United Baptist denomination, and we only hope that some arrangements can be made whereby we will be able to have him to minister to our needs at least three more years.—J. M. M.

Between Bugles

A Salt Water Romance.

By MATTHEW WHITE, JR.
Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

The dressing bugle had sounded some time since, but Dorothy still stood looking out over the sea. She was thinking how unfortunate it was that dinner on shipboard always robbed her of a view of the sunset. She was a good sailor and consequently had no excuse for taking her meals on deck.

"Still, if this were the only thing I had to worry over," she reflected, "I might indeed be a happy woman."

And this was why Dorothy Shaw was a mystery to all her friends. She refused to be happy, though rich.

"Try it yourselves," she would reply to their expressions of incredulity. "Have so much money left you that your every movement is followed by reporters. If you happen to order a different paper on Friday from the one you bought on Thursday you are certain that you will read in all of them on Saturday that you have decided to give a million to the campaign fund."

She felt that she could trust no one. By sorry experience she had learned that wealth was a half few could resist, and "How much does he or she want now?" was her first thought on the advances of every new friend she made.

Finally in desperation she had taken passage in a slow ship under an assumed name, but even so was beset by the constant fear that some one on board would have seen her picture in the papers when her uncle left her the fortune which was her nightmare. That was an additional reason why she liked to linger on deck after most of her fellow passengers had gone down to array themselves for dinner.

"Oh!"

The exclamation was forced from her by a sudden gust of wind that took her hair on its wings and blew it straight across the gap of lower after deck that intervened on the Allice between the first and second cabins.

The next instant she smiled and barely refrained from applauding. A man standing well forward on the deck had stretched out his hand and caught the frayed bit of red worsted as it went whirling by him.

A half minute later and the two were standing on the neutral territory of the deck below, for Dorothy had descended in order to meet him halfway in restoring her property.

"I'm very much obliged," said she.

"Not at all," said the man.

He was tall and straight and had the clear blue eyes that Dorothy preferred above all others.

She was about to turn back when the other exclaimed:

"Look! there's a whale! He's just spouted. He'll come up again in a minute, if you care to watch. See, where my finger points?"

Dorothy certainly did care to watch. In all her crossings she had never seen a whale. Now she was rewarded with a view of a large specimen.

As it happened, this one kept on in the direction of the steamer for awhile, and after each spout she felt she must wait and see the next one. And then her companion seemed to know a good deal about the creatures, which he imparted in a voice which possessed for Dorothy an indefinable charm.

Voices were a sort of hobby with her. She often declared that this was the one point on which she was not thoroughly patriotic—she could not bring herself to admire the average American accent.

But this stranger's voice puzzled her. He looked and dressed like one of her countrymen, but he spoke with neither the western burr, the southern twang, the Boston affectation, nor the New York flatness.

She did not know until some weeks later that he was English born, but had come to the States as a young fellow hoping for better opportunities to make a living than his mother country afforded him. He was returning to England to claim a sum of money left him by an uncle.

The dinner bugle sounded, and the man, as if reminded by its notes that he belonged in a different atmosphere (the second cabin is called to meals by a pebbled bell), lifted his cap and walked away.

For the remainder of the voyage Sherwood Roberts hung over the back rail to gaze into the swirl of waters surging out from the twin screws and curse the fate that had led to his meeting this pretty woman on the present trip instead of on the one he expected to take a few weeks later.

"I might as well be a thousand miles away from her as in second cabin," he muttered between clenched teeth. "Idiot that I was for coming this way. And to think that within ten days I could lay a fortune at her feet. And the conventions won't even permit that I send her a note to say that this is positively my last appearance in poverty. But perhaps I'll meet her in London."

He never did, however, although he haunted Hyde park and the fashionable hotels after his claim to his uncle's property had been established and he had come into the possession of that which enabled him to dress three times a day.

"I wonder now," he would sometimes ask himself, "if I had put my pride in my pocket and borrowed enough on my expectations to come over first instead of second, would things have turned out differently? She looked as if she didn't mind so very much my having detained her to talk about whales. I wonder if!"

But what was the use of wondering anything about a woman he would probably never see again?

So this Englishman who had lived so long in the States that he could not keep away from them re-embarked for his adopted country in a first cabin deck room and tried to be happy in spite of a handicap that he couldn't forget.

During the first night out it came on to blow great guns. Roberts lay in his berth late, debating whether to get up or not, when suddenly something shot through his open port and hit him squarely in the face.

It was soft and red, with gold threads running through it, and—"Great Scott!" ejaculated Roberts, starting up in his berth. "Her tam!" Surely there could not be two of them—at least, he hoped there couldn't. But how had it come into his cabin?

It could not be possible that she knew he was there and had taken this means of apprising him of her presence? Why, she had scarcely spoken half a dozen words to him in her life.

But the cap was here unmistakably. He fondled it foolishly for a minute or two and then got up and proceeded to dress with all speed, or at least with as much speed as was consistent with the rolling of the vessel.

All day he haunted the ladies' room and the decks, almost deserted on account of the storm, and had begun to read the cards affixed beside each stateroom door when he suddenly remembered the foolishness of this plan to find a woman whose name he did not know.

"This is simply maddening," he told himself after a day of the weather and still no sight of the tam's owner. "At this rate she will escape me again."

Then he bethought him of a brilliant expedient.

He took a pen and wrote the following notice:

Found.—A lady's red tam, shot with gold. Owner may have same by applying at cabin 2 between bugles any evening.

This he affixed to the bulletin board in the companionway and that night dressed a half hour before the first bugle sounded so as to be in readiness to receive company during the period named.

But nobody appeared that evening nor the next, and now there were only two days left on the voyage.

He had passed a half hour of impatient waiting in the stuffy stateroom on the third day of the notice, and quite discouraged, threw open his door to go to dinner, when he stepped squarely into the person who had emerged from her room just opposite in the narrow entryway.

"I beg your pardon," said Roberts, and then he fairly gasped as he realized that the other person was the lady of the tam.

"I have something of yours," he blurted out—"that red tam you lost once before."

The girl's cheeks suddenly took on the hue of the cap that hung over Roberts' berth.

"Oh," she said, "was it your port I hung it into? I didn't know. It started to blow away again that first morning, and I thought I was tossing it into my own cabin."

"And you've been just across that five foot space," Roberts rejoined, "while I've been ransacking the ship for you—to restore the tam," he hastened to add. "Didn't you see the notice on the bulletin board?"

"No. This is the first I've been out since the storm. It left me with a nasty reminder of the shaking we all received. I'm so glad to be on deck again! Did you have a pleasant trip on the other side?"

"Jolly fine," answered Roberts.

But he wasn't thinking of the other side at all when he said it, but of the woman he had lost and found again. Unconsciously they had walked to that part of the deck where Dorothy had been standing when the tam blew off on the voyage over.

"I suppose I must pin the cap in tightly this time," she remarked. "You won't be there to catch it if it flies off again." And she glanced over at the second cabin.

He looked up at the one she was wearing.

"That's a very pretty tam," he observed irreverently. "I trust it is skwered in tightly."

Whether she read his timer meaning, she gave no token then, but suggested that it was high time they both went down to dinner. The next night was the dance, and after the final two-step she reminded him that in the morning there would be the bustle of landing.

"And I haven't relieved you of that tam yet," she added.

"I shall miss it very much," he replied. "And you won't need it now the voyage is over."

"Yes," she said softly, her eyes fixed on Nantucket Light, toward which they were swiftly cutting their way. "I suppose it has served its purpose, but I don't want to lose it again."

Roberts knew she wasn't thinking of all the words implied, but he was quick enough to seize at the opening, and—well, before they faced the customs officers on the pier he knew where to take the tam.

But he always forgets to carry it with him when he calls, and when Dorothy one evening said "Yes" to a certain question he asked her she added, "This is a desperate step to take to regain possession of a little old red tam-o'-shanter."

HONEY CROP LIGHT.

Cold, Wet Spring Reduced Supply of Clover Nectar.

It is generally conceded that the beekeepers of Ontario are not expecting to harvest any great amount of surplus honey this year. The season has been one of keen disappointment. The early part of the year when the bees should have been active was unfavorable to their flight. The clover seemed to be short of nectar, while the basswood was injured by the May beetle. The spring was unfavorable to the honey flow, then the dry and hot months of summer have reduced swarming and honey gathering to the minimum.

The majority of the beekeepers were last year fortunate in handling their apiaries and had their colonies in good condition for a large harvest this year. Extensive preparations were made well in advance. Extra frames, supers, foundations, etc., were prepared; and additional facilities for storage provided; but the bees refused to gather honey. This is admitted to be no fault of the bees as they are keen enough to work when there are supplies of nectar available. The clover fields suffered from the cold and wet weather of early spring. The May beetle, which was unusually abundant this year, fed largely on the honey-producing trees and cut off part of the fruit bloom with the result that the bees, no matter how extensive their pasture area, found their field of operation limited and their work cut short.

The same story is told by beekeepers over a wide stretch of country. The apiaries have manifested conditions of unhappiness. The bees instead of multiplying their numbers, killed off the drones; instead of working early into the pastures the workers were like laborers on a strike, hung about the yards all day long. Instead of making wax and getting ready for a harvest of honey the colonies organized bands of robbers and declared war on one another. Each colony mounted sentinels and doubled their lines when the sun was shining. If a stranger walked into a yard he quickly received notice that his presence was not desired. If the attendant happened to open a hive during the day he immediately had a fierce fight on his hands. If a bee came from the fields with a load of nectar she had to run the gauntlet of an army of banditti and was often rescued only with difficulty by her friends who were on guard. Such are the conditions in scores of bee yards today, conditions of unhappiness and often of terrible war, because of the scarcity of food. The bees are very human when it comes to living in an atmosphere of affection and good will under adverse circumstances.

A prominent beekeeper of western Ontario, who lives in an alkali clover district, says that he will not be able to pay expenses this year. He thinks he will be fortunate indeed if his losses do not aggregate hundreds of dollars before the harvest of 1915 arrives. Another successful beekeeper says that he has so far received very few pounds of honey even from the strongest colonies, while many of the weaker colonies will have to be fed.

The beekeepers are still hoping that Nature's compensations will attend them in good stead before the season closes. They hope that the honey flow from the buckwheat, golden rod and from other autumn plants will be good. The honey will probably be mixed and maybe dark in color, but it will be very welcome if it can be gathered. The autumn honey is not as saleable as the honey from the fruit bloom. It is not as good to look upon, but it has more food strength and is far better feed the bees during the winter months.

Prince Rupert Fisheries.

The Prince Rupert fisheries are developing very rapidly, and during the month of July the fleet gathered in a catch, valued at $490,535. This included salmon taken in the canneries or used otherwise. Of that quantity 6,800 pounds were either frozen or used in a fresh condition. In a canned form there were 3,156,000 pounds made use of, while for mild curing 1,289,000 pounds were utilized.

Halibut is easily the next most important fish for the month, with a total catch landed of 1,016,000 pounds. The only other variety that was represented in any quantity was the cod to the extent of 5,000 pounds, all of which was used in a fresh condition.

There is also an ever-increasing production of fruits and vegetables in the district around Prince Rupert. These have been of exceptionally good quality. Fruits ripened earlier than usual this season, bringing them into close competition with produce grown farther to the south.

One grower, Mr. H. D. Lenhart, at Mile 37, on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, along the Skeena River, has received $700 for the strawberries grown on one and a half acres of land, while much of his crop still remains to be picked.

Snakes In Squirrel's Cage.

A small red squirrel caged in the natural history section of the Government building was so frightened recently that it held by its claws to the sides of its wire cage nearly all night. Two riband snakes from the cage next to it some way managed to get into its compartment. One took possession of the water pan, where all the squirrel's food was, and another patrolled the bottom of the cage.

The snakes were removed by attendants after being in the cage several hours.

Affairs of S. W. Smith

S. W. Smith who has been conducting two stores, one at East Florenceville, the other at Mount Pleasant, besides running a hotel, has found his interests so varied and complicated that an adjustment is found advisable. Accordingly he has consented to placing his business into the hands of trustees representing the principal creditors who will give him every assistance in getting his affairs straightened out.

A statement issued to the creditors shows his assets exceed his liabilities by 50 per cent, so that there is no apparent need of a compromise.

So far as the buying public is concerned business will be carried on as formerly and the creditors confidently look forward to a full settlement within a reasonably short time.

Since opening business at Mount Pleasant twelve or fifteen years ago, and at East Florenceville more recently, Mr. Smith has shown a good deal of pluck and industry. That he will finally triumph is the reasonable hope of his many friends and well wishers.

DEADLY ANAEMIA

Nine Women and Girls Out of Ten are Afflicted With this Trouble

It is an unfortunate fact that nine women and girls out of every ten are afflicted with anaemia—which means bloodlessness—in one form or another. The girl in her teens, the wife, the mother and the matron of middle age all know its miseries. To be anaemic means to be pallid, with dark marks under the eyes. You are breathless after slight exertion. You feel worn out and depressed all day. You have no desire for food and often cannot digest what little you do take. Headaches, blackheads and skin diseases make life miserable. If you sleep at night you do not feel refreshed in the morning and are utterly unfit for the day's duties. If neglected, anaemia almost surely leads on to deadly consumption. Renewed health can only be obtained through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—the most reliable blood enricher ever discovered. These pills actually make new, rich blood; they bring brightness to the eyes, and the glow of health to pale cheeks. They have literally saved thousands of women and growing girls from the grave, and what they have done for others they can do for you is given a fair trial. Here is a proof. Mrs. Wm. Kiernan, Watrous, Sask., says: "I have used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills with wonderful results. I suffered for upwards of two years with anaemia in a severe form, and was doctoring all the time with no benefit. I was so weak I could scarcely walk. I suffered from severe headaches and at times from backaches that were almost unbearable. The trouble affected my digestion, and this caused additional discomfort. Finally through the persuasion of a friend I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I shall ever be grateful that I did so, as after using nine boxes I was fully restored to health. I would earnestly urge all all anaemic women and girls to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for I feel confident that they will renew their health."

These pills are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had by mail at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"It is a pleasure to me to inform you that after suffering from Chronic Constipation for 24 years, I have been cured by 'Fruit-a-lives.' While I was a student at Berthier College, I became so ill I was forced to leave the college. Severe pains across the intestines continually tortured me and it came to a point when I could not stop down at all, and my Digestion became paralyzed. Some one advised me to take 'Fruit-a-lives' and at once I felt a great improvement. After I had taken four or five boxes, I realized that I was completely cured and what made me glad, also, was that they were acting gently, causing no pain whatever to the bowels. Corpuscles in Normal Blood.

Normally there are approximately 5,000,000 red blood corpuscles in the cubic millimeter. The number is temporarily diminished during fatigue and after the ingestion of much food. Fastening and profuse sweating increase the number of red blood cells by concentrating the blood. In high altitudes the number is also increased. There are 5,000 to 10,000 white cells in the cubic millimeter, the ratio of white to red cells being about 1 to 500. In health the blood amounts to about one-thirtieth of the body weight.

Two Speeds in Same Wheel.

The top of a carriage wheel in passing along the road moves more quickly through the atmosphere than the bottom. This sounds absolutely foolish, but it is absolutely sound. It is due to the movable axis, or axle. The top of the wheel has forward motion plus forward revolution. The bottom of the wheel has the same forward motion minus backward revolution. — London Saturday Review.
