does he will be a failure as a working man. Therefore if to keep in society be the important thing for a young man or his young wife they do well to avoid manual labor. They would only make a feature of it. But are the advantages of "Society" worth any sacrifice? Let the young man about choosing a career think of it. Let those if there are any such who have spent many valuable years in seeking to find some way of making their living with their coats on consider it. When it is better to work hard when you are at the loss of certain decorations or to continue with the loss of the "high" you think otherwise, go and with your foreman men and palms are like.

tioned as an exten- that they do not outline Solomon in all his glory. If anything they are a trifle seedy. They are usually of a respectable family, and their fathers have worked hard and faithfully. Some of them marry and raise families. Some how or other they get a living. Somebody brings their clothes and sets a table for them to eat at, and they go along through life without an aspiration except that they may drop into a government office some day. At the bottom, if you can find it, most of these young men have some good qualities. If they could be removed from their surroundings and be set to work they would accomplish much, but they go on from day to day trying to do nothing but kill time and succeeding in nothing but ruining themselves. There is no excuse for the existence of such a class in a new country, and it would not exist if the pernicious idea that a certain degree of degradation attached to manual labor was not more or less prevalent. That certain social disadvantages, as society is usually considered, attach to the practice of any manual employment will not be denied. The man who works at the bench, or in the factory, or on the farm all day will not spend half or two thirds of the night in gaiety. If he

A serious mutiny among the Mounted Police at Edmonton is reported.

Hon. T. W. Anglin, of Toronto, will, on the evening of St. Patrick's Day deliver a lecture in Kingston on the subject "Irishmen in America."

The Quebec provincial branch of the Dominion Alliance has censured the senate for its action respecting the Scott Act.

It has been decided to admit Kansas City into the vacancy in the National Baseball League.

Six thousand people require relief among the distressed fishermen of Gaspe and Bonaventure.

In the event of renewed hostilities, Serbia will be able to put 30,000 men on the frontier within ten days.

While the London riots were in progress gangs of pickpockets and sneak thieves were as busy as the rioters were.

Mr. John Morley says that a fresh coercion policy for Ireland means having the whole honeycombed with secret societies, midnight drillings, and a secret press that will pour furtive poison far more deadly and virulent than any now poured.

"shall I sing 'Far away'?" he asked, as her slender fingers sought the keys. "Yes, I think you had better," he replied, "unless you want the neighbors to make a complaint." He doesn't visit there now.

A French-Canadian lady, Mrs. Leveille, who died at Yamaska a few days ago, leaves no less than 519 descendants. Of these, 46 are of the fourth generation, 383 of the third, 83 of the second and 9 of the first.

Aroostook county is dependent upon the Queen's Dominion for currency as well as transportation. The Aroostook Herald says that three-fourths of the "circulation" there are provincial. When they wish to send money out of town they have to hustle around and find somebody who has some United States money and is willing to swap.

News Summary.

WINNIPEG, Feb. 12.—An Edmonton despatch says the insubordination among the police has been effectually stopped by the arrest of seven ringleaders, taking them by surprise and locking them up. The trouble is probably over.

One of the most promising and praiseworthy efforts to definitely solve the problem of "pure insurance" is that of The Dominion Safety Fund Life Association. It appears to have hit upon a very happy solution of most of the difficulties connected with the system, while preserving its principles with strict fidelity.—Insurance Society Montreal.

A SHARABLE ITEM.—During the breaking up of winter, when the air is chilly and the weather damp, such complaints as rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, sore throat, croup, and other painful effects of sudden cold, are prevalent. It is then that Hagyard's Yellow Oil is found truly valuable as a household remedy.

A Wise Choice.—In selecting a remedy for coughs and colds the wise choice is to take one that loosens the tough mucus clinging to the air passages. Such a remedy is Hagyard's Fectoral Italian, which promptly breaks up hard colds and their troublesome effects.

No Incidents.—There is no blundering in the dark—in the action of Burdock Blood Bitters upon the system. It is no mattering whether the stomach, the liver, the bowels, and the blood, and works its cure in a natural manner through nature's channels.

A Bad Breakdown.—It is a common thing now-a-days to hear one complain of feeling "all broken down with a fair, weary, restless languor, with strength and appetite nearly gone, and no well defined cause. This is general debility, which Burdock Blood Bitters promptly relieves, and most invariably cures.

SEARCHING FOR PROOF.—There is no trouble in ascertaining from any druggist the true virtues of Hagyard's Yellow Oil. All painful and inflammatory troubles, rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, foot-lameness, bruises, sprains, contracted cords, stiff joints, pains and soreness.

TWO MARES FOR SALE.

Black Mare, "Jennie Taylor,"
 Bay Mare, "Kitty Parker."

"JENNIE TAYLOR" is a jet black mare, foaled 1878, stands 15 hands high and weighs 1000 lbs. She was sired by "Old Taylor," an imported American. She is kind in harness, steady, and without any special handling, for speed, has shown miles in 2:30, 2:40 and 2:45 half mile in 1:25 and 1:31, and quarters frequently in 2 seconds. This mare would make an excellent family or brood mare.

"KITTY PARKER" is a bay filly with black points, foaled Oct. 2nd, 1884. She now weighs 600 lbs. Sired by "Redemption," he by "Concentration," by "Almont." "Kitty" is one of the best mares I ever saw. "Kitty" is beautifully painted and truly so, and from her breeding should make a good one.

R. BELLAMY, Chairman.

N. B.—The Convention to be held in St. John for the purpose of organizing a Provincial Liberal Association.

TWO MARES FOR SALE.

Black Mare, "Jennie Taylor,"
 Bay Mare, "Kitty Parker."

"JENNIE TAYLOR" is a jet black mare, foaled 1878, stands 15 hands high and weighs 1000 lbs. She was sired by "Old Taylor," an imported American. She is kind in harness, steady, and without any special handling, for speed, has shown miles in 2:30, 2:40 and 2:45 half mile in 1:25 and 1:31, and quarters frequently in 2 seconds. This mare would make an excellent family or brood mare.

"KITTY PARKER" is a bay filly with black points, foaled Oct. 2nd, 1884. She now weighs 600 lbs. Sired by "Redemption," he by "Concentration," by "Almont." "Kitty" is one of the best mares I ever saw. "Kitty" is beautifully painted and truly so, and from her breeding should make a good one.

White Cottons,

LILIAN, THE HEIRRESS.

"I have seen the widow," he says at length, rousing himself to a sense of his own tactfulness. "On my way home this morning, before I met you,"—turning to Lilian—"I thought it my duty to look her up, and say I hoped she was comfortable, and all that."

"And you saw her?" asks Cyril, regarding Guy attentively.

"Yes she is extremely pretty, and extremely coy—could I ought to say, as there didn't seem to be even the smallest spice of coyness about her?"

"That's the safest beginning of all," says Cyril confidentially to his mother, "and I no doubt the latest. I dare say she looked as though she thought he would never leave."

"She did," says Guy, laughing, "and, what is more unflattering, I am sure she meant it."

"However, if she intended what you think, she rather defeated her object; as I shan't trouble her again in a hurry. Can't bear feeling myself in the way."

"Is she really pretty?" Cyril asks, curiously, though idly.

"Really; almost lovely."

"Evidently a handsome family," thinks Cyril. "I wonder if he saw my friend the sister, or step-sister, or companion?"

"She looks sad, too," goes on Guy, "and as though she had a melancholy story attached to her."

"I do not hope my dear," interrupts mother, uneasily. "There is nothing so objectionable as a woman with a story. Later on one is sure to hear something wrong about her."

"I agree with you," Cyril says, promptly. "I can't bear mysterious people. When in their society, I invariably find myself putting a check on my conversation, and blushing whenever I get on the topic of forgeries, burglaries, murders, and so forth. I never can keep myself from studying their faces when such subjects are mentioned, to see which it was had ruffled the peace of their existence. It is absurd, I know, but I can't help it, and it makes me uncomfortable."

"Does this lady live in the wood, where I met you?" asks Lilian, addressing Guy, and apparently deeply interested.

"Yes, about a mile from that particular spot. She is a new tenant we took to oblige a friend, but we know nothing about her."

"How very romantic!" says Lilian: "it is just like a story."

"Yes, the image of the 'Children of the Abbey,' or 'The Castle of Otranto,'" says Cyril. "Has she any one living with her, Guy?"

"Yes, two servants, and a small ill-tempered terrier."

"I mean any friends. It must be dull to be by oneself."

"I don't know. I saw no one. She doesn't seem anxious about making acquaintances, as when I said I hoped she would not find it lonely, and that my mother would have much pleasure in calling on her, she blushed painfully, and said she was never lonely, and that she would esteem it a kindness if we would try to forget she was at the Cottage."

"That was rather rude, my dear, wasn't it?" says Lady Chetwode, mildly.

"It sounds so, but, as she said it, it wasn't rude. She appeared nervous, I thought, and as though she had just lately recovered from a severe illness. When the bluish discoloration, she was as white as death."

"Well, I shan't distress her by calling," says Lady Chetwode, who is naturally a little offended by the unknown's remark. Unconsciously she has been viewing her coming with distrust, and now this pleasing message—for as a message directly addressed to herself she regards it—has had the effect of changing a smoldering doubt into an acknowledged dislike.

"I wonder how she means to employ her time down here," says Cyril. "Scenery abounds, but lovely views don't go a long way with most people. After a while they are apt to pall."

"If there pretty scenery round Tru-tum?" asks Lilian.

"Any amount of it. Like 'Auburn,' it is the loveliest village of the plain." But I can't say we are a very enterprising people. Sometimes it occurs to one of us to give a dinner party, but no sooner do we issue the invitations than we sit down and repent bitterly; and on rare occasions we may have a ball, which means a drive of fourteen miles on a freezing night, and universal depression and sneezing for a week afterwards. Perhaps the widow is wise in declining to have anything to do with our festive gatherings. I begin to think there is method in her madness."

"Miss Chesney doesn't agree with you," says Guy, casting a quick glance at Lilian: "she would go any distance to a ball, and dance from night till morning, and never know depression next day."

"Is that true, Miss Chesney?"

"Sir Guy says it is," replies Lilian, demurely.

"When I was young," says Lady Chetwode, "I felt just like that. So long as the band played, so long I could dance, and without ever feeling fatigued. And provided he was of a good figure, and could dance well, I never much cared who my partner was, until I met your father! Dear me! how long ago it seems!"

"Not at all," says Cyril, "a mere reminiscence of yesterday. When I am an old gentleman, I shall make a point of never remembering anything that happened long ago, no matter how good it may have been."

"Perhaps you won't have anything good to remember," says Miss Lilian, provokingly.

"Guy, give Miss Chesney another glass of wine," says Cyril, promptly: "she is evidently feeling low."

"Sir Guy," says Miss Chesney, with equal promptitude, and a treacherous display of innocent curiosity, "when you were at Belmont last evening, did you hear Miss Bellair say anything of a rather rude attack made upon her yesterday at the station by an ill-treated young man?"

"No," says Sir Guy, rather amazed.

"Did she not speak of it? How strange! Why I fancied—"

"Miss Chesney," interposes Cyril, "if you have any regard for your personal safety, you will refrain from further speech."

"But why?"—opening her great eyes in affected surprise. "Why may I not tell Sir Guy about it? Poor Miss Bellair! although a stranger to me, I felt most genuine pity for her. Just fancy, Sir Guy, a poor girl alone upon a platform, without a soul to take care of her, what she must have endured, when a young man—apparently a gentleman—walked up to her, and taking advantage of her isolated position, bowed to her, smothered imperceptibly, and was actually on the very point of addressing her, when fortunately her cousin came up and rescued her from her unhappy situation. Was it not shameful? Now, what do you think that rude young man deserved?"

"Extinction," replies Guy, without hesitation.

"I think so too. Don't you, Lady Chetwode?"

"Lady Chetwode laughs. "Now, I shall give my version of the story," says Cyril. "I too was present—"

"And didn't fly to her assistance? Oh, he!" says Lilian.

"There was once an unhappy young man, who was sent to a station to meet a young woman, without having been told beforehand whether she was like Jane, tall enough 'to snuff the moon,' or whether she was so insignificant as to require a strong binocular to enable you to see her at all."

"I am not insignificant," says Lilian, her indignation getting the better of her judgment.

"Am I speaking of you, Miss Chesney?"

"Well, go on."

"Now it came to pass that as this wretched young man was glancing wildly round to see where his charge might be, he espied a tall young woman, apparently in the last stage of exhaustion, looking about for some one to assist her, and seeing no one else, for the one he sought had meanly, and with a view to his disfigurement, crept silently behind his back—"

"Oh, Cyril!"

"Yes, I maintain it; she crept silently behind his back, and bribed her maid to keep silence. So this wretched young man walked up to Jane, and pulled his forelock, and made his very best Sunday bow, and generally put his foot in it. Jane was so frightened by the last bow that she gave way to a stifled scream, and instantly sank back unconscious into the arms of her betrothed, who just then ran fantastically upon the scene. Upon this the deluded young man—"

"That will do," interrupts Lilian, severely. "I am certain I have read it somewhere before; and—people should always tell the truth."

"By the bye," says Guy, "I believe Miss Bellair did say something last night about an unpleasant adventure at the station—something about a very low person who had got himself up like a gentleman, but was without doubt one of the swell mob, and who—"

"You needn't go any further. I feel my position keenly. Nevertheless, Miss Bellair made a mistake when she rejected my proffered services. She little knows what a delightful companion I can be. Can't I, Miss Chesney?"

"Can you, Lady Chetwode? I am not in a position to judge."

"If a perpetual, never ceasing flow of conversation has anything to do with it, I believe he must be acknowledged the most charming of his sex," says his mother, laughing, and rising bears Lilian away with her to the drawing-room.

CHAPTER VII.

When seven long uneven days have passed away, every one at Chetwode is ready to acknowledge that the coming of Lilian Chesney is an occurrence for which they ought to be devoutly thankful. She is a boon, a blessing, a merry sunbeam darting hither and thither about the old place, lighting up the shadows, dancing through the dark rooms, casting a little of her own inborn joyousness upon all that comes within her reach.

To Lady Chetwode, who is fond of young life, she is especially grateful, and creeps into her kind heart in an incredibly short time, finding no impediment to check her progress.

Once a day, armed with huge gloves and a gigantic scissors, Lady Chetwode makes a tour of her gardens, snipping, and plucking, and giving superfluous orders to the attentive gardeners all the time. After her frolics Lilian, supplied with a basket and a restless tongue that seldom wears, but is always ready to suggest, or help the thought that sometimes comes slowly to her hostess.

"As you were saying last night, my dear Lilian—"

"says Lady Chetwode, vaguely, coming to a full stop before the head-gardener, and gazing at Lilian for further inspiration; she has evidently remembered only the smallest outline of what she wants to say.

"About the ivy on the north wall? You wanted it thinned? You thought it a degree too straggling?"
