FROM OLD QUEBEC

The Historic Capital Furnishes a Story of Interest to Many.

The newspapers in and around th city of Quebec are just now relati-the story of a well-known French-Canadian gentleman who for years na been a martyr to Dyspepsia.

The sufferings Mons. Bouchard endured have been beyond the power o tongue or pen to describe. His pains were very severe, so much so that for two years he had but little pleasure in life. Dyspepsia wrought its worspunishment in him, and nothing h could get seemed able in any way alleviate his distress.

At last, however, he has found a cure. Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets have met and conquered his Dyspepsia, have relieved him of all his pains and distress, and have made an all round well man of him. He is very grateful and is full of praise for Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets, which he says, "have made a new man of me."

This story should be of greatest interest to thousands who are now suffering just as Mons. Bouchard did before he used Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. If this remedy can, and does cure such acute and advanced cases it surely will cure any case of Stomach

It is but reasonable to at least give a trial to a medicine that has proven itself to be effectual in so many cases. Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets are no experiment, but a tried and proven remedy for Indigestion, Heartburn, Sour Stomach, Bloating, Palpitation of the Heart, or any of the many symptoms of deranged or impaired ligestive machinery. Mons. Bouchard's address is, 300 St. Valier, Quebec.

The Girls of Holland.

[London Humanitarian.] In Holland the mass of every class go to public schools and all mix together. Education begins at 6 years of age in the public schools, and at 12 a girl is examined and passes on for a five years' course in the higher burgher schools, of which Holland possesses 72. the coeducation of the sexes is an admitted principle. In the primary schools boys and birls are brought up together, they learn side by side, and are on familiar terms from earliest childhood, without the smallest ill resulting. A great point is made of languages, and no Dutch girl of the upper or middle classes is considered educated who cannot speak English, French and German more or less fluently.

Probably owing to the system of education in force, the women folk are inclined to grow up somewhat independent; we are told that the prejudice against women working for a livelihood has almost disappeared, and even rich women sometimes choose a profession. They include doctors, dentists, many of the first rate, photographers and gardeners. About 1,000 girls hold posts as assistant chemists, some 3,000 are nurses, trained in the White Cross homes, and on a par with the very best of their profession. A woman is curator of the National Museum in Haarlem, and another holds the same post at Utrecht, while a third is head dispenser at a hospital in Amsterdam. The railway, post and telegraph offices are largely served by female clerks, who altogether outnumber the male.

Girls in Holland have a great deal of liberty. They pay calls, shop and do to parties at the houses of friends without a chaperon, walk and travel alone, cycle and have tennis and wheeling clubs in company with young men. They enjoy their fun and freedom, and are in no hurry to find hus bands. Marriages are not arranged, and the parents' consent is only asked after a proposal is made and accepted.

That a little over two years ago my mother contracted a severe cold which developed into

DR. JOHNSTON'S REPORTS.

August 9th, 1901. THE OZONE Co., Ltd., On August 3rd, 1901, I was asked by the Ozone Company to examine Mrs. E. A. Magnan, residing at 795 Cadieux St., Montreal, and report on her condition. She gave me the following history:

Age 40. Married. Had nine children. Never had any serious illness, strong and healthy until two years ago. At that time she took a bad cough with profuse greenish expectoration, followed in a short time by a hemorrhage, and felt very weak and sick, so much so that from last November until May she was in bed most of the time, had copious night sweats and a disgust for any kind of food, and could do very little work. In May, 1901, she began taking Ozone, and immediately her appetite began to return and she felt better. The expectoration became less and in a short time she was able to resume work. On examination, I find heart normal and no lesions that I could find in the lungs. She says at present she has a good appetite and can eat as much as her husband; bowels regular, sleeps well; face cheerful, eyes bright; cough and expectoration almost gone, and she is at present attending to her household duties. She says that Ozone has put her on her feet again. (Signed)

Further Report from Dr. Johnston, re Mrs. E. A. Magnan. Montreal, P.Q. Gentlemen: According to your request, on August 14, I again visited Mrs. E. A. Magnan, 795 Cadieux St., I found no trouble in her lungs and she looks well and strong. She feels well and attributes her present good health to taking the Ozone, and I have no doubt she is right. She has gained in flesh since I last saw her. (Signed) A. Johnston, 194 Bleury St., Montreal, P. Q. You can't want any stronger proof than these sworn statements that Powley's Liquified Ozone does cure Consumption. It does it in a simple way, too. Nature's way: the best way. No compound of drugs, no alcohol, simply oxygen in liquid stable form prepared only by us, requiring at least twelve days to turn out the finished product.

Nothing else like it, truly a medical wonder. If you are troubled with pains in the chest, slight cough, catarrh of the nose or throat, hoarseness in the morning, loss of appetite or tired feeling, look out, take them in time and save yourself years of suffering and possibly death. Powley's Liquified Ozone is blood food, destroys the germs of consumption, stops their attack and heals the broken lung tissues. Cures you, not for a little time, but for all time. It doesn't cost much to prove it; better try it. Ozone is life.

BOOKLET IS FREE. Let us send you special booklet. "The Great White Plague." It gives the causes of Consumption and the extreme method of cure by Powley's Liquified Ozone substantiated by the sworn declarations of Wm. McKay of Sutton, and Let. Julia Sheffield. of Zephyr P. ## * How to Make a ROUGH SKIN SMOOTH

There are some whose skin is naturally very tender, so much so, that a slight change in temperature, either heat or cold, will cause it to become rough and scale. This is very annoying, whether it makes the skin sore or not. A trouble of this kind is due to the skin being too dry, the underlying glands not giving it food enough. It must, therefore, be fed artificially. This may be done by using OLA CREAM, a scientific skin food. OLA CREAM is not a thin, watery fluid, but is of a creamy consistency. Prepared from a valuable formula, consisting of healthful ingredients, which feed the skin, building up the tissues, supplying to the glands that which they lack to prevent roughness.

Anyone who is troubled with roughness of the skin or chapped hands will find OLA CREAM a sure preventative. We are receiving many testimonials for OLA CREAM. We have made a study of the care of the skin, and will be glad to give any in-

We are pleased to learn that of the many excellent and successful monetary institutions that have been organized in this city, the latest, "The Empire Accident and Surety Company," bids fair to equal, if not excel, any of its predecessors. The manager reports splendid success in the placing of its stock, not only in this city and district, but also throughout other por-tions of this province. He is daily in receipt of letters of inquiry from investors and others, from Halifax in the far east, and the territories in the far west, as to the disposing of the stock, and were it not that it is the policy of the directorate that the bulk of the present issue of stock be placed largely in the hands of Ontario investers, no difficulty would be found in placing very large blocks of the stock in the outlying provinces.

External Remedies Can't Cure Cancer

It Is a Disease of Germ Origin and Must Be Reached Through the Blood.

The most advanced scientists and specialists in the medical profession, now consider cancer to be caused by germs or parasites in the blood, which operate in certain tissues of the body most favorable for their development. Thus the breast, lip, nose, stomach, bowels and liver are favorable seats for this disease. It is not reasonable to expect a permanent cure for cancer can be obtained by the use of ex-ternal remedies alone, such as oils, pastes and plasters. They never touch the real origin of the trouble. Our new constitutional remedy for cancer is a most rational and scientific treatment. It destroys the cancer germs in the blood without injuring the system. It buids up and invigorates the body, relieves pain, and permanently eradicates the disease. Send two stamps to Messrs. Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont., for

STRANGE MENTAL POWERS

How People Are Influenced.

Startling Words from the Committee Appointed to Investigate Hypnotism for the Benefit of the Public.

REV. PAUL WELLER F. H. STOUFER, Sec'y and Treas .. of Railway Conductors, Pueblo, Col. Hypnotism is no longer a myth, a fanciful creation of the mind, but a reality, a most potent power, capable of producing infinite good. For the purpose of ascertaining the exact value of this much-talked-of power a committee composed of a physician, a well-known jurist, a prominent minister and leading railroad man was appointed to investigate hypnotism.

The committee carried on a series of investigations in regard to the power of hypnotism to influence the actions and deeds of people in the every-The first step taken by the members of the committee was to master the science in every detail, so that they might state from personal experience the good or evil this strange power might produce. They wrote to the New York Institute of Science of Rochester, N. Y., the greatest school of Hypnotism and Occult Sciences in the world, and received full and complete instructions in regard to how hypnotism may be used to influin treating diseases, etc.

days they mastered these instructions and were full-fledged hypnotists.

It was clearly demonstrated that hypnotism may be employed so that the person operated upon is entirely unconscious of the fact that he is being influenced, and, all things considered, the committee regard it as the most valuable discovery of modern times. A knowledge of it is essential to one's success in life and well-being in society. Dr. Lincoln says, after a through investigation, that he considers it the most marvelous therapeutic or curative agent of modern times.

Judge Schafter, although a legal light, turned his attention to healing the sick, and in a few treatments he completely cured John E. Myers, of Flemington, N. J., of a strange malady that had kept him bedfast for nine years, and which the doctors said must surely kill him. Mr. Stoufer performed the astonishing feat of hypnotizing Dr. Cunningham, of Pueblo, Col., at a distance of several blocks. He also hypnotized an aged gentleman, and had him run through the street shouting "Red-hot peanuts for sale." Mr. Stoufer says it is indispensable to one's business Rev. Paul Weller says that every minister and every mother should understand hypnotism for the benefit they can be to those with whom they are brought in daily contact. In speaking of this marvelous power. President Elliot, of Harvard College, said to the graduates: "Young gentlemen, there is a subtle power lying latent in each one of you which few of you have developed, but which when developed might make a man irresistible. It is called Personal Magnetism or Hypnotism. I advise you to master it."

The New York Institute of Science has just issued 10,000 copies of a book which fully explains all the secrets of this marvelous power, and gives explicit directions for becoming a practical hypnotist, so that you can employ the force without the knowledge of anyone. Anybody can learn. Suc-

THE LONDON ADVERTISER COMPANY

LONDON, ONTARIO

London, Saturday, Jan. 11. State-Owned Cables and Telegraphs.

Sir Sandford Fleming, in an open letter addressed to the Hon. William Mulock, Postmaster-General of Canada, puts forth a powerful argument in favor of state-owned cables and telegraphs. The question of state ownership and control of public utilities is at present a live one, and no phase in it is more prominent than that of public ownership of the cable and telegraphic service.

Every European nation has nationalized its telegraph service. The telegraph lines of the United Kingdom were, prior to the year 1870, in the hands of companies. About that time, however, the British Parliament expropriated the systems and placed them under the control of the Postoffice Department. Canada is, in fact, the only colony of the Empire which has not nationalized her telegraph lines. Telegraphic lines, state-owned and administered by the Postoffice Department, have got so far beyond the experimental stage and so firmly established, that Canadians may copy the example of the other colonies and of other countries without the fear of taking an unwarranted step.

The advantages are many and apply equally to cables and telegraph lines. In an open letter addressed to the Postmaster-General a year ago, Sir Sandford pointed out that telegraphic charges, based on the distance, were false; that the wear and tear of sending a message 100 miles were practically the same as in sending it a shorter or longer distance. Notwithstanding the fact, the companies rate their charges on the basis of distance. By this we see uniform charges could be adopted for all distances under a system of state ownership and control. Taking as an example the postal telegraphic service of Britain, we find a remarkable combination of economy and utility. It is necessary that, like the Postoffice Department, telegraph lines under government management should be self-sustaining, messages might be sent at a fraction of the present rates and still pay well

Closely akin to the telegraph is the cable. Owing to our increased comnercial relations with the mother country, greater need is felt for cheap cable communication. Equally with the scheme of an imperial penny postage, will cheap cable comunication aid in drawing together the various federations comprising the British Empire, and will it promote a spirit of imperial unity? A state-owned Atlantic cable, we are given to understand, with a twenty-word-per-minute service, would be capable of transmitting a maximum of 10,000,000 paying words per annum. This volume of traffic, reckoned at the exceedingly small rate of two cents per word would give a gross return of $200,000; a sum $34,000 in excess of the total annual charges for establishing, maintaining and operating the line. It may be seen by this, that a stateowned Atlantic cable employed up to its maximum limit, would be self-supporting at the very low rate of two cents a word, which is only one-twelfth the amount charged by existing cable

The great incentive to commerce, as well as improved facilities for the diffusion of general intelligence, should be strong inducements for the adoption of a state-owned telegraphic system, and when occasion permits, state-own-

Kipling's Hard Hitting.

Kipling's latest poem continues to receive a varied reception. It may be open to criticism both as poetry and philosophy, but to a certain extent it is a reflection of life. Anyone traveling through England last summer might hear very little about the war The novelty had worn off, and if the war was not over, well, it ought to be over; that was all. But cricket-that was a different matter; and the Derby -that was a horse of another color. On the trains crowds of people could be met who were going to races, ready to win, or to lose their little. And everywhere the talk was of the county cricket matches, and the wonderful performance of the Yorkshire eleven No doubt athletes are useful, and even sport may have a noble as well as a base side. But sport should not be a nation's god, and when there is serious work to be done, the nation should get up and do, and spend a little less strength in sport. This we take to be the poet's message, and there certainly is some truth in it.

"The flanneled fools at the wicket, and the muddled oafs at the goals," may not be very elegant language, and not likely to enhance the reputation of the poet as poet, but it may none the less be a bit of excellent preaching. It place of business, has no incentive to will certainly "strike and stick," and will probably help to rouse the British form of license is this possible. The debate on the speech from the throne was this session confined within very reasonable limits. It was moves by Mr. J. F. Gross, M. P. P. for Welland, and seconded by Colonel Mutrie, of South Wellington. Both these gentlemen, in well-worded addresses, referred to the leading items that constitute the programme now before the Legislature. The speeches of both gentlemen also reviewed some of the more important events that had transpired since last the Legislature was in session, such, for instance, as the visit of the Duke and Duchess of York, and the success of the Provincial Winter Fair at Guelph, which was a conspicuous event from the point of view of the Ontario agriculturist.

Mr. Whitney, as leader of the Opposition, in opening the debate, referred to what he thought a strange proceeding, namely, the calling of a session at this time of the year. He also criticised the Government on the legislation carried through last year with reference to the alleged extension of the life of the Legislature. Premier Ross, in reply, was greeted with more than old-time enthusiasm. With reference to the finances of the Province, he announced that the cash balance of $800,000 last year would be increased to over $1,200,000. The debate on the address has been laudably brief. The House has settled down to the dispatch of business for which the members are assembled. Everything points to a moderately short session.

The Dispensary System of Liquor Selling.

The Advertiser, a few days ago, gave an outline of the new attempt to combat drunkenness in Great Britain through what is known as the Public House Trust system. Today we will give the contentions in favor of the Dispensary system, as carried out in South Carolina. The best defense of though not necessarily sources of rev- that method of controlling the traffic enue. Sir Sandford Fleming thinks in intoxicants that we have seen is tended for with vigor by Mr. Archie formulated by United States Senator | Campbell and the brother of the late Benjamin Tillman, in a contribution to the current number of Frank Leslie's Magazine. The senator holds that the law is working well, and he makes an interesting comparison between the results obtained under the dispensary system and those obtained in prohibition Maine and Kansas. The statistics adduced by him show that whereas in Kansas there is one liquor retailer to 595 people, and in Maine one retailer to 585 people, in South Carolina there is only one liquor seller to 3,005 of the population. Four hundred and forty-six persons are retailing liquor in South Carolina, having paid the United States revenue tax, 94 being dispensers, and the other 352 being illicit dealers, a majority of them in the city of Charleston, who have obtained permits from the United States Government. Senator Tillman thinks this issuance of licenses by the United States to sell liquor in South Carolina contrary to the law of South Carolina is anomalous. He gives a detailed account of the actual working of the dispensary system, showing that the profit made by the local dispenser, after deducting expenses, goes half to the county and the other half to the town, the state receiving its profits in the price charged to the local dispenser. The net profits to state, town and county are nearly $600,000 a year, the state's profit going to the free school fund.

Four reasons are given by Senator Tillman why his method of managing the liquor traffic is superior to the "First-Liquor is the only article of ommerce in general use that is consumed at the time and place of its purchase. It is safe to say that threeourths of it is thus disposed of. The lispensary law enforces a different nethod, by requiring the purchaser to take it away, as he would a package of shoes or a sack of flour. He must go somewhere else than to the place where he buys it to consume it.

"Second-The element of personal profit, which lies at the root of the saloon evil, is destroyed. The dispensers receive fixed salaries, proportionate to the amount of work they do. They don't get a commission on sales, and have no incentive to push

"Third-'Treating' is destroyed, and his does more for sobriety than possibly any other feature of the system. The man who has bought a bottle at the dispensary may treat one or a half a dozen of his friends to one drink, but that will be all. The inducement and obligation to reciprocate which are so well understood do not exist.

"Fourth-At sundown the dispensary closes. It opens at 8 o'clock in the morning. The legitimate demand for whisky is supplied during daylight, and the dispenser, having closed up his reopen it to make a sale. Under no sides it is a misdemeanor to make sales in any way or at any time ex-

FOR THROAT AND LUNGS A SUPERIOR REMEDY

In Angier's Petroleum Emulsion is combined two most valuable remedies, Petroleum and Hypophosphites. The Petroleum, as prepared by us, is a pure, bland hydro-carbon oil, almost tasteless, and agreeable to the most delicate stomach. This oil has a peculiar soothing, healing and cleansing effect upon the mucous membrane of the throat, lungs, stomach and bowels. Combined with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda in a perfect Emulsion, it makes a preparation which physicians say is superior to any other for the treatment of throat and lung affections, nervous diseases, disorders of the digestive organs, and all forms of wasting diseases.

Is better than cod liver oil in every way, and has great medicinal value not possessed by animal oils. By its soothing, healing and cleansing action upon the stomach and bowels the digestive organs are kept in a healthy condition so as to perform their functions naturally. It cures the most stubborn coughs, and soothes and heals any inflamed or catarrhal condition of the throat, lungs or bronchial tubes, and at the same time tones up the nervous system and builds up the health and strength generally.

WEAK LUNGS AND CONGESTION: - I have been afflicted with weak lungs and congestion for many years, and have tried many remedies without receiving any benefit whatever. kept at The Hartman Sanitarium. The map is made in four shades. The lighest shade shows the States which have the lowest per cent of deaths due to catarrhal diseases. In these States very close to 42 per cent of all deaths in 1890 were due to catarrhal diseases. That is to say, four out of every ten deaths were from catarrhal affections. In the States of next darker shade the per cent varies from 42 to 45. In the next darker shade, 45 to 48 per cent of the whole number of deaths resulted from catarrhal diseases. In the darkest shade we have indicated the States in which over 50 per cent, or one-half or more, of all the deaths, were directly traceable to catarrh as the cause.

This is an appalling state of affairs. This nation has got to confront the fact that catarrh has become a national curse. Catarrhal diseases threaten the life of our people. Lessons Learned From Recent Defeats - Twenty Field Batteries To Be Withdrawn From South Africa.

Pretoria, Jan. 11.-Lord Kitchener has set his hand to a new form of campaign.

The recent disasters to small columns have shown how undesirable it is to move insignificant numbers in a hostile country.

The multiplicity of small columns plays too much into the hands of the Boers, who watch their opportunity for weeks and fall in united strength upon some isolated section, and one having guns, if possible.

Columns in future are to move in greater strength, and in order to 'secure the greater mobility which will be necessary, the use of guns will be largely discontinued. The artillery has been found to hamper the free movement of mounted columns, and as no artillery is in use against us there is no necessity for so many guns, and large numbers are to come home. During January and February a score of field batteries will be withdrawn. The needs of India will be first satisfied, and then the balance brought to South-

Several cavalry regiments are also badly in need of relief one in particular having only 80 men left out of 500 who originally embarked. One of the augmented columns will commanded by Brigadier-General Dartnell, whose tactics meet the op-position so well that the Boers now clear before him wherever he goes. With a larger force he should do excellent work. The new mounted army will number 100,000 men.

A GALLANT FIGHT. Heilbron, Jan. 10.—The Boers who attacked Colonel Damant were under the supreme command of Wessels. Two hundred men, hidden in kraals, covered Colonel Damant's position from two sides. These Boers were responsible for most of the British casualties, as Colonel Damant had no

THE ENGLISH UNAPPEASED

Von Buelow Has Failed to Quiet Their Nerves.

London, Jan. 11.-Count Von Buelow's second speech has quite failed to appease the English press. Times puts the matter most strongly and says, with reference to the speeches of Herren Liebermann and Sonnenberg:

"Seldom, if ever, has a friendly nation been so grossly insulted in a foreign parliament, and never within our memory has insult met with such mild rebuke from the representative of a friendly power with whom he pro-fesses to desire the maintenance of good relations, as Count Von Buelow thought sufficient to inflict on Herr von Sonnenberg.
"Even brigands and thieves may know how to die. What we have a right to expect from the minister of a friendly state is a definite repudiation of the calumnies uttered within his hearing. With regard, not to the British soldiers dead, but to those who are living, we must state frankly and emphatically that the limit of British patience will be overstepped if Count Von Buelow imagines he can court English friendship and at the same time use the King's uniform in which our kinsmen are fighting honorably in South Africa in order to wipe his parliamentary feet upon it." SIR ASHMEAD-BARTLETT ILL. London, Jan. 11.-The condition of Sir Ellis Ashmead-Bartlett, M.P., following a serious operation last night, is now dangerous. He has been suf-fering from internal inflammation for

Generally speaking, a girl of seventeen is far older than a boy of eighteen—but it was not so in this case; and instead of being mistress of the situation, she was only too willing to deliver up her whole self into his hands if he required it. Indeed, had she been less innocent than she was, the position would have been full of extreme danger for her. The relation between lovers is almost invariably of much the same character as that between a tyrant and a slave, either one way of the other; and, in this case, Marie was certainly not the tyrant. Mark could not even quarrel with her; he could not even invent the smallest cause for imaginary jealousy. If the vacation had lasted much longer, his happiness must have inevitably become tame; and Marie, to whom up to the end it was nothing but a period of the wildest and most intense excitement, would never Generally speaking, a girl of seventeen

Marie, to whom up to the end it was nothing but a period of the wildest and most intense excitement, would never have dreamed of keeping him up to the proper fever-heat by such artificial means as women for the most part know so well how to use.

But the vacation flew by only too quickly for both; and it was fated that before it was over she was to pass through a period of excitement indeed.

One day her impatient tyrant asked her to marry him—to marry him before the beginning of his approaching three years' absence, and to marry him secretly. He was, of course, not wholly open as to his motives for making this proposal, even to himself. But he was wholly honest in what he did say. He laid before her his great love for her; he told her how upon her depended, as he sincerely felt, the whole of his happiness; how, in fact, he must marry her at once—an illogical but always a most powerful argument in such cases; how, on the other hand, all his prospects in life depended upon his success at college; how he should, as he fully believed, do nothing there unless his mind and heart were at ease; how, if he felt that it was for his wife he was working, he should do everything in the world; and lastly, how all his fine prospects would be ruined should their marriage be known to others before the end of at least three years. In a word, he argued, she would destroy him if she refused to marry him at once, and ruin him if she did not marry him secretly. Of course, he urged all this in far more lover-like manner, but this is what it all came to.

Not only was Marie singularly poor in the worlds but if she had had troops of all came to.

Not only was Marie singularly poor in friends, but if she had had troops of them, their united opinion would not have weighed a feather, or rather a tuft of down, against the wish of Mark. Besides, the proposal itself was made, as it were, under the seal of confession. Still she could not help feeling, in spite of her ignorance of the world's ways, ot her ignorance of the world's ways, that somehow she had been asked to do what was not right. She would have been content to wait for twenty years—why should not he? And so, almost to

But even so does the mouse gain time to think when the cat suffers her for a moment to get a few inches away from his inevitable claws. Marie did think, or rather fancied that she thought; and this was what all her thinking came to. Self-denial was with her a habit. To please any one she loved she would willingly have jumped from the top of the church tower: to save her lover there was absolutely nothing that she would not have done. Every word that he, in his wisdom, had said to her she believed implicitly. How or why should she not? And she could not, when she came to reason, seriously think that what he wished her to do could be really wrong. If to do what he asked her involved self-sacrifice, why so much the better. And then, after all, to conceal what she meant to do from others would eost no effort and no shame. Her shyness, beyond the surface of which no eye but his had cared to penetrate, had grown into an artificial reserve that was none yond the surface of which no eye but his had cared to penetrate, had grown into an artificial reserve that was none the less a part of her now for having but little to do with her real nature. No one ever caring to know her thoughts and feelings, she had acquired a habit of not telling them; and as no one ever asked her questions about what she did or where she went, she naturally assumed that no one cared. Though not self-confident she was self-sufficing; and so in this matter too, she, as a matter of course, followed the advice of her own

of course, followed the advice of her own heart.

As to how and where the ceremony that was to make them husband and wife was to be performed, there was but little real difficulty. Mark Warden was not likely to be conquered by mere details not likely to be conquered by mere details.

In Denethorp secrecy would have been impossible, and but little less so in Redchester. But in the neighboring county, some thirty miles away, was the large and important city of B—, where a man might do many more difficult things than getting married without a soul being the wiser. Mark Warden, some few weeks before the beginning of the Cambridge term, found out that he wanted a tutor for mathematics. He told his father so, who, as usual, thought that whatever his son did was all right, and who, in fact, never thought of interfering with his children so long as what they wanted to do did not interfere with his momentary comfort. He therefore scarcely listened when Mark went on to say that he must find the required help at B—. Indeed he would have been much more interested had he been told that it was likely to be a wet day. As to expense, the scholarship was henceforth to cover everything for ever. He happened to have a little more by him just then; and so he gave for ever. He happened to have a little money by him just then; and so he gave his son a few guineas, on a sort of semihis son a few guineas, on a sort of semi-understanding that he was never to be asked for any money again, and, if the truth were known, was not very much grieved when the house, was left once more to himself and Lorry; for Mark had come to take not over-kindly to his shiftless ways and acquaintances of the bar parlor. So the future Fellow of St. Margaret's went to stay for a while in B—, and in the beginning of October, when all was arranged, sent Marie enough money to bring her there

Then, it is true, she felt frightened at Then, it is true, she felt frightened at what she was going to do; and she would have given anything to have been able to draw back. But it was certainly too late now. So, with much sinking at the heart and much confusion, she made a half-true excuse for going over to Redeperter. There she reached B— in half-true excuse for going over to Redchester. Thence she reached B— in the forenoon; and from B— she returned home the same evening.

Of course they had, to say the least of it, been guilty of a desperate piece of folly. But enough has now been said to show that, under the circumstances, their folly was not only natural, but almost a necessary consequence of their respective characters, and of the relation in which they respectively stood to almost a necessary consequence of their respective characters, and of the relation in which they respectively stood to each other and to those about them.

When the next morning came, Marie found herself half proud, half frightened, to think that she was now a wife—at least in law and in name; for what being a wife means she knew no more now than she did two days ago. Her first unconscious feeling when she awoke was one of wonder that the world had not come to an end. She almost thought that she must have been dreaming; and she almost anxiously felt under her pillow for the ring that she was not allowed to wear. But in spite of the secret that filled her heart, the feeling with which she met her father was neither of fear nor of shame. Mark would be a great man one of these days; and, like the child she was, she looked forward to telling her father the news, when the time came to tell it, as a pleasant surprise. Her only really uncomfortable thought was that she was allowed to tell her friend I aure that they had be thought was that she was allowed to tell her friend Laura that they had be-come sisters. She was certainly terribly But if her innocence had caused her to commit a great error, it had also stood her in good stead. After all,

"The surest panoply is innocence," and so it had been with her.

In a day or two her husband in name and in law returned, and a day or two after that he came to bid her good-bye. It was a real parting; for at that time to go to Cambridge frem so distant a place as Denethorp did not mean, at least in the case of a poor man who really intended to devote himself to the work of the place, to be absent for a few weeks at a time, and then to come home for weeks or months. It meant with Mark an almost unbroken absence of three years.

with Mark an almost unbroken absence of three years.

To him, with all his ambition and hope, the parting was full of pain. To her it meant almost desolation. But there was no heip for it, and at the last moment, as he passed her window on his way to the coach, she bravely held back her tears for a moment that she might give him a smile of hope and encouragement, which made his old purpose seem faint indeed. He felt that to make her happy. indeed. He felt that to make her happy, and not himself great, must be his purpose now.
So much at present for these. Mean-

So much at present for these. Meanwhile, it must not be forgotten that there was such a person in the world of Denethorp as Miss Clare, of Earl's Dene, and this must be more especially borne in mind, as she was now, in fact, Denethorp's great lady.

SURPRISE FOR VICTORIAS. Winnipeg, Jan.11.—The game between the Rat Portage intermediates and the Senior Victorias of Winnipeg last night resulted in a win for the latter, as expected, but proved the biggest eyeopener to the local team that they have received for a long time. It was one most hardly contested games seen in this town. During the first half they were up against a team playing in their own class, and for a considerable time the Rat Portagers carried the puck into the Victorias' end. The Vics scored the first goal with a brilliant rush in 15 minutes, and it was the only goal scored in the first half. In the second half the Victorias went up and mixed things. Another five minutes elapsed before the second goal was ored in the Vics' favor, and then they did the trick again two minutes later. A short time after the Rat Portage boys took the puck down the ice and scored the goal from a pass to the wing. From this time to the end the play was of the flercest kind.

The Cup That Cheers. It is a well-known fact that the men have in the past strongly opposed the use of green tea, pointing out that it was injurious. This was on account of the artificial coloring that was used in its preparation in Japan and China, but since the introduction of green tea from Ceylon by the "SA-LADA" Tea Company, medical men find no objection whatever to its use; the entire absence of artificial coloring with the pale delicate liquor so desirable to the green tea drinkers is threatening to destroy the entire Japan tea trade. With the cup that cheers the "SALADA" Tea Company is always to the front.

BUILT A MUNUMENT

The Best Sort in the World,

"A monument built by and from Postum," is the way Mr. J. G. Casey, of Ayres, Ill., describes himself. He says: "For years I was a coffee drinker until at last I became a terrible sufferer from dyspepsia, constipation, headaches and indigestion, and was a physical wreck.

"The different kinds of medicines I tried did not cure me, but finally some one told me I must leave off coffee and take up Postum Food Coffee. I was fortunate in having the new coffee Kind-Hearted People Who Made Christmas made strictly according to directions, so that from the start I liked it. It has a rich flavor and I made the change from coffee to Postum without any trouble "Gradually my condition changed. The old troubles disappeared and I began to get well again. My appetite became good and I could digest food. Now I have been restored to strength and health. Can sleep sound all night and awake with a fresh and rested body. Everyone who meets me comments on my getting so fat and rosy. "I am really a monument built by Postum, for I was a physical wreck, distressed in body and in mind, and am now a strong, healthy man. I know exactly what made the change, it was leaving off coffee and using

MISS BURKE GIVEN $1.000 DAMAGES

Winter Assizes Will Be Continued Next

The jury in the case of Burke vs. Burke et al., last night returned a verdict for the plaintiff awarding her $1,000 damages. The jury held that the plaintiff was rightfully on the premises of the defendant, and that her ejectment was illegal. Counsel for defense contended that the defendant Burke was justified in removing her, even if she had not been guilty of obnoxious acts. Judge Ferguson will hear argument on this point next week. The assizes will continue next week. Judge Ferguson was to have presided with other judges at a session of the divisional court, but he received a telegram from Chief Justice Meredith yesterday saying that court had been postponed, thus leaving Judge Ferguson free to continue the present court.

HILL BROOK FARM

The Owner Comments On Grape-Nuts

A farmer with his out of door work might have reason to expect more than the average of good health if he would use proper food and have it well cooked, but many of them, in middle age, suffer torments from dyspepsia, and following that a weakened nervous system. To show the value of a change in food we quote from a letter written "I have spent a very considerable and Grey streets, will take place on amount of money in trying to cure my stomach trouble with medicines, and have changed climate several times. About two years ago I was taken worse. My heart and kidneys gave me much trouble. I could not sleep nights. Was very nervous, thin and discouraged. Finally I changed fcod and began taking Grape-Nut Breakfast Food. This agreed with me, and I thought I could see my way out, so I have stuck to Grape-Nuts for a year and a half and gradually the old troubles have disappeared.

"I have made splendid progress in health and strength, sleep well, and can now do a good day's work for a man of 50 years. "I know that Grape-Nuts caused the change, and although I am now able to use other food as I like, still I stick to Grape-Nuts because I know how It nourished me, and besides, wife and both like the food.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

ROBERT B. MANTELL TONIGHT. Mr. Robert B. Mantell will be seen at the New Grand tonight with a most carefully selected company in the ro-mantic tragedy of "Hamlet." Mr. Man-tell is conceded to be one of the leading actors in the legitimate field of tra-gedy. Established as such, it is only fitting that he should be presented to the public in a manner worthy of the position he holds. If reports are true, his productions are elaborate and his productions are elaborate and costly, and well deserve the praise bestowed by critics along the route so far this season. No expense has been spared in the staging of his plays. "Romeo and Juliet" is being presented at the matinee.

AT THE LONDON OPERA HOUSE. Prof. Theo Pull is tonight concluding his three days' return engagement at the London Opera House. For his closing performance he will put on some interesting hypnotic feats, including the breaking of a stone on the body of a man suspended by the head and feet. Last night's performance was well attended and greatly enjoyed.

One of the best numbers in the Metropolitan Course will be furnished at the New Grand next Monday evening by Albert Armstrong, who will present his charming picture play, "The Sky Pilot," by "Ralph Connor" (Rev. C. W. Gordon, of Winnipeg, whose latest novel, "The Man from Glengarry," made such a hit). Over two hundred colored views are shown, all of which were made by Mr. Armstrong himself in the Bocky Mr. Armstrong himself in the Rocky Mountains, where the scenes of "The Sky Pilot" are laid. opened this morning. FIRST DUCHESS OF MARLBOR-OUGH."

Mrs. Sarah Cowell LeMoyne, whose name is familiar to the admirers of the higher drama all over this country, will be seen at the New Grand on Friday evening next in her new play, "The First Duchess of Marlborough." It was written by Charles Henry Meltzer, and is a comedy of manners, the action concerning the principal characters at the court of Queen Anne. Sarah Jennings, afterwards the wife of the Duke of Marlborough, was the most powerful individual in English affairs during nearly the entire reign of Anne. They had been intimate before the latter ascended the throne, and when she became queen, the duchess almost completely shaped her policy and controlled her actions. The story of the piece is that of an attempt by envious rivals to undermine the duchess in the king's favor and overthrow both her and the duke, and the defeat of the plot. In her latest role Mrs. LeMoyne has fully borne out the great reputation she nitherto enjoyed as an actress of authority, dignity and artistic finish.

THE LONDON OPERA HOUSE. Mr. Ward Kelly, advance agent for 'The Big Female Minstrels," is in town arranging for the company's appearance here on Saturday, Jan. 18, at the London Opera House.

Details of Sir William MacDonald's Scheme for Improvement.

Toronto, Jan. 11.-Prof. Robertson forwarded to the government the details of the scheme of Sir Wm. Mac-Donald for the improvement of education in the rural schools of Ontario. toward which Sir William is prepared to give generous aid. The intention is to consolidate five or six rural schools at convenient points, changing them into one graded school, with a school garden and a manual training room as part of the equipment. One experiment will be conducted at Sir William's expense in each of the provinces, and a thorough test given to the idea. ## Surprising Results

A Simple Internal Remedy Makes Co.'s review: Buying of staple com-Remarkable Cures of Catarrh.

People who have used sprays, inhalers, salves and washes for catarrh and have found how useless and inconvenient they are, will be agreeably surprised at results following the use of a pleasant, internal remedy in tabet form; druggists everywhere admit that Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, which they sell at 50 cents for full sized treatment is the safest, most effective and popular of all catarrh remedies.

Nearly all cheap cough mixtures and throat lozenges contain opiates; these cheap medicines give a temporary relief, especially with little children by destroying nerve sensation; the irritation in throat, which causes coughing is temporarily removed, not by removing the cause, but by deadening the nerves of feeling the irritation is not felt although it is still there and will promptly return

Stuart's Catarrh Tablets is the best remedy to remove catarrh secretion, whether in the nose throat or stomach, because they are composed of wholesome antisepties like Red Gum, Blood Root, etc.; when you use these tablets you know what you are putting Into your system and not taking chances with cocaine, opiates or simllar poisons found in so many catarrh cures and cough medicines. Dr. Randell, in commenting on catarrh cures, says: "I can heartily recommend Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, because they contain no cocaine nor other dangerous drug found in so many advertised catarrh cures. I have known of many cases of long-standing catarrh of the head and throat completely cured by the daily use of these tablets for several weeks. One case in particular which I could not reach with an inhaler or spray, and where and a noticeable loss of hearing was entirely cured by this harmless but effective remedy

Dr. Wainwright says: "I never hesitate to prescribe Stuart's Catarrh Tabcatarrhal headaches and catarrhal deafness because I know them to be perfectly safe for child or adult, and have seen many remarkable cures resulting from their daily because they are advertised and sold in drug stores is no reason why any good physician should not use them because we should selze upon the means of cure wherever found." Stuart's Catarrh Tablets are especially valuable for catarrhal colds in children, because they are pleasant to the taste and may be used freely to break up severe colds and croup at the very beginning.

All druggists sell the remedy at 50 cents for full sized package. A little book on cause and cure of estarth mailed free by addressing the P. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

OUTLOOK FOR TRADE

Is Bright Throughout the Dominion

As Shown by the Weekly Reviews of Bradstreet and Dun & Co.

Wholesalers Anticipate a Satisfactory Spring Business—The Situation Across the Border.

Toronto, Jan. 10.-Bradstreet's trade review, weekly summary: At Quebec business during the past week has been fairly active. The general outlook is favorable, and wholesalers anticipate a good spring business. Arrangements have been about completed with outside capitalists for the erection of a million-bushel elevator. From the present outlook the prospects of this port getting the bulk of the grain trade export are very favorable, and the local shipping men are sanguine as to the results. Collections are reported quiet. At London this week there is a bet-ter feeling. Retail sales are picking up, and jobbers are steady for most

Business at Montreal has been picking up. Travelers out on the road with spring samples in drygoods have been sending in some fair-sized orders. but have scarcely got fairly to work The orders for the goods for spring delivery generally are very satisfactory, and the outlook for trade generally considered very bright. Country remittances are rather bet-

At Toronto this week there has been a fair inquiry for spring goods, the travelers being now out with samples for the sorting business. The outlook for this trade is promising. Values of staple goods are mostly firm. The is a keen demand for feeding stuffs, for wheat and for oats for shipping to Province of Quebec points. Country remittances are fair.

Business at Hamilton is good, and the outlook for the spring is promising. Manufacturers are busy, the labor is well employed, and the conditions of trade are encouraging.

Trade at Pacific coast points is moderately active. The demand for spring goods is beginning to make itself felt. Payments have been rather better since the holidays, but there is still room for improvement in that respect.
At Winnipeg trade has been rather The grain movement is still light, owing to the elevator blockade, and it is not likely to improve much till the railways are in a position to get out more of the crop. Spring goods are beginning to move more freely, and travelers are meeting with fair success.

At Ottawa this week there has been some revival of interest in business for the spring. Immediately after the holidays the trade in that regard was quiet. Now it is expected to conis encouraging.

IN THE UNITED STATES. New York, Jan. 10.-R. G. Dun & modities is on a large scale, fully sustaining quotations of a high level, except in the few instances where efforts were made to hold prices above the point warranted by the ration of needs to supplies. Labor controversies are few and unimportant, while the new year has brought advances in the rate wages at many points. Although speculative operations have been much smaller than in the corresponding week of 1901, New York bank ex-changes show an increase of two per cent, while compared with the same week in 1899 the increase is 48.3 per cent. Losses in railway earnings during the third week of December, by storms and washouts, were more than balanced by gains in the other weeks, and the month's total shows an increase of 6.1 per cent over 1900 and 17 per cent over 1899. Activity continues at cotton mills, although domestic ouying is on a moderate scale. Jobbing trade in woolens gradually expands, new flines selling fair at moderate advances over prices prevailing a year ago. Worsted yarns are scarce and firm. A further slight rise has occurred in the average of wool prices, and the tone is strong, but there is a tendency to await the London sale ten days hence before making further changes. Footwear factories are well engaged on spring and summer lines. prices showing a firmer tone and fewer producers ready to do business at old Leather has sold freely at Boston with quotations fully maintained, especially on hemlock and union Chicago packers stubbornly hold to former list prices. There was further support in the general resumption of activity at flour mills, together with added inquiry for foreign account. Corn was fairly well held in sympathy with wheat. Sugar was irregular because of legislative possibilities and a low record price at London. Money was abundant and easy, call rates ruling at about a per cent. Liabilities of commercial failures for the first week in January aggregated $4,040,639. About one-third of the total was due to a single failure in rubber goods manufactur-ing. Failures for the week numbered 573 in the United States, against 324 year and 27 in Canada, against 37 year. BRADSTREET'S REPORT. Trade advices as reflected in telegrams exhibit some irregularity caused by the weather conditions or proceeding from the early stage of the season. Retail distribution of heavy clothing, boots and shoes and rubbers, is checked by mild weather, but on the other hand wholesale trade in spring goods, though still quiet, is preparing to throw off the inertia of midwinter. The industries in the main continue active, iron and steel still setting the pace, and lumber, the textiles, boots and shoes and machinery manufacturers are actively employed. growing ease of money is the reflection of previously reported good col-lections, following active trade in the late months of last year. Bank clearings continue to show moderate gains over a year ago, and railway earnings likewise show growth. Cotton goods are apparently in strong position. Spring styles of prints and ginghams have been opened at eastern markets, but jobbers claim the season is later than usual.

A. L. Husing, Alma, W. Va., writes: "I suffered thishtfully for twenty years from iteling, blind and bleeding piles. ing with a liberal business and orders for men's wear are such as to stimulate confidence in the raw material, which is fully half a cent higher on the week at Boston.

Shoe shipments are still largely in excess of a year ago. No diminution of strength is noted in leather, though hides are easier. And advance in price of the finished product of from 21/2 to 5 cents per pair is considered sure to come.

Weather conditions favor lumber at the Northwest, and demand there is active. Yellow pine is said to be scarce at Chicago, and an advance is expected. The paper trade is active. Small sizes of steam coal have advanced 15 cents at Philadelphia, and family grades are 25 cents per ton higher, while bituminous is from 10 to 15 cents up. Iron and steel production is active beyond precedent for this season of the year and further advances of 50 cents and $1 per ton are noted in charcoal pig. Other metals are weak. The feature in cereals has been the unquestionable growth of speculative feeling as reflected in improved outside of commission buying of wheat, corn and oats, while flour has also improved in general demand. Estimates of the Statistician of the Department of Agriculture.

Washington, D. C., Jan 11.-The statistician of the department of agriculture estimates the average yield per Inhale Catarrhozone Daily and Insure Youracre of wheat in the United States in 1901 at 14.8 bushels, as compared with 12.3 bushels in 1900, 12.3 bushels in 1899, 15.3 bushels in 1898 and 13.3 bushels the mean of the averages of the last ten years. The newly-seeded area of winter wheat is provisionally estimated at 32,000,000 acres-an increase of 3.6 per cent upon the area estimated to have been sown in the fall of 1900. The newly-seeded area of winter rye is provisionally estimated at 1,250,000 acres-an increase of 2.9 per cent upon the area estimated to have been sown in the fall of 1900. The department has no reports as to the condition of winter wheat later than Dec. 1. At that date it was 86.7 per cent of the fail your money will be refunded. normal, as compared with 97.1 in 1900, 97.1 in 1899 and 92.6 in 1898. The department will not issue any further estimate of the total production of any product of the soil, nor of the number of farm animals until it has made such adjustments of its estimates for the last two years as may seem to be required by the reports of the census based on an actual farm-tofarm visitation now in course of publication.

DON'T WANT "UNCLE TOM'S

CABIN." Lexington, Ky., Jan. 11.—Lexington clears the nose and throat instantly, prevents droppings, the Confederacy has sent a written petition to Charles B. Scott, manager of the Lexington Opera House, asking that "Uncle Tom's Cabin" never be played again here. They say the citizens and old families living in and about Lexington were once slave-owners; that the incidents of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" are not typical of slave life in the south, but of isolated cases; that the production and its advertisements, with bloodhounds and pictures of an old negro in chains, and a slave-owner with whip in hand, present a false idea of the history of the times to the children of the city, and are in disrespec to the southern gentleman and good citizens and their families in this part of the country. The petition is signed by four of the most prominent women of the chapter, and is indorsed unanimously by the members. It has created a sensation here.

Epilepsy Carable

A DISEASE THAT HAS LONG BAFFLED MEDICAL SKILL.

Mr. M. A. Gauthier, of Buckingham Gives His Experience for the Benefit of Other Sufferers From This Terrible Malady.

[From The Post, Buckingham, Que.] We venture to say that in our town of 3,000 inhabitants few business men are better known than Mr. M. A. Gauthier, the young and hustling butcher, of Main street. He wasn't, however, as energetic or as hustling a couple of years ago as he is today. and for a good reason—he wasn't well. Having gone into business ere reaching his majority, his desire to succeed wa such that no heed was paid to keeping the body in the state of health necessary to stand a strain, and in consequence of the extra demands upon the system it became run down to such an extent that epilepsy or falling sickness resulted, and these lapses into unconsciousness becoming alarmingly frequent, he consulted physicians and took some remedies, but without beneficial results. Finally seeing Dr. Williams' Pink Pills advertised as a cure for falling sickness, he decided to give them a trial. As to the result the Post cannot do better than give Mr. Gauthier's story in his own words: "Yes," said Mr. Gauthier, "for nearly four years I suffered from epilepsy, or falling fits, which took me without warning, and usually in the most inconvenient places. I am just 24 years of age, and I think I started business too young, and the fear of failing spurred me to greater efforts perhaps than was good for my constitution, and the consequence was that I became subject to those attacks which came without any warning whatsoever, leaving me terribly sick and weak after they had passed. I got to dread their recurrence very much. I consulted doctors and took their remedies to no purpose, the fits still troubled me. I saw Dr. Williams' Pink Pills advertised and determined to try them. I did so, and the medicine helped me so much that I got more and kept on taking them, until today I am as well, yes, better, than I ever was, and am not troubled at all by epilepsy or the fear of the fits seizing me again. Thinking there may be similarly affiicted, I give my story to the Post; it may perhaps lead them to give this great medicine a trial." Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a positive cure for all diseases arising from impoverished blood, or a weak or shattered condition of the nervous system. Every dose makes new, rich, red blood and gives tone to the nerves. thus curing such diseases as epilepsy, St. Vitus' dance, paralysis, rheuma-tism, sciatica, heart troubles, anaemia These pills are also a cure for the ailments that make the lives of so many women a constant misery. They are sold in boxes, the wrapper around which bears the full name-Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. #### STRONG DRINK.

It is more than half a century since the eloquent voice of the late John Bright was raised against the evils from which the country suffers by the traffic in strong drink. In one of his earliest speeches he said: "What is the greatest obstacle to the diffusion of education amongst the masses of the people of this country? Their love of strong drink. How many thousands of innocent children are deprived of in-struction, and reared in contact with vice and every debasing influence through the drunkenness of their parents? What chiefly prevents the good which the general distribution of the Holy Scriptures is calculated to produce? The drunken habits of the people. Look into the pawnshops and you may see loads of Bibles, and ask who brought them there. The answer will probably be 'a wretched woman reduced to extreme want by her husband's intemperance.' The missionary societies, the school societies, the Bible societies, and every benevolent institution utters the same complaint. Our path is before us, but a monster ob-stacle is in the way; strong drink, ale professor; this-this prevents our success. Remove this obstacle, and our course will be onward, and our labors will be blessed ten thousandfold."

In the sight of the Infinite it is always present; there is no past or fu-ture, and they who have gone before in the long generations of the dead and they who are to come after, with the men and women of today, constithe men and women of today, consti-tute one innumerable, unbroken com-pany. This sublime fact, the glorious incarnation of the idea of immortal-ity, is rarely realized by men, but it exists as a fact in their lives, if not in their consciousness. Sir Philip Sidney, the image of all nobleness, said, "They are never alone who are accom-panied with noble thoughts." This is the beautiful and impressive side of the picture; there is another and darker side; he might have added, "They are never alone who are accompanied by evil thoughts." But, to put it more accurately, no man is ever alone so long as thoughts, good or evil, noble or debasing, accompany him. He is not solitary; and since every man must think, and to every man, however isolated, thoughts come and go in countless troops and in unbroken succesno man is ever without com-

The real question is, "What kind of company shall he keep?" That depends upon what he selects; for, in a very true sense, every man creates his own world. Every man is born into a vast workshop full of materials and tools. His business in life is to select the material upon which and the tools with which he shall work; and then, out of his own imagination, he fashions his world, and, as the pro-duct of what he thinks and does and feels, that world passes out of the realm of imagination into reality and becomes his world. So every man creates his companionship according to his thought. If his thought is fine and generous and high, he is the best company and the most inspiring; if it is mean and low and vile, no matter what deserts surround him, he is in base and vile and ignoble fellowship; it is a matter of character. Companionship does not depend upon accident, but upon selection. Every man makes his own friends; and it is this fact which gives the profounder truth to the old proverb, "A man is known by the company he keeps."-New York

It had inception in the next chair to mine in the dispatcher's offce at Traynor. It was the result of a cross order— short a lot of logrollers and delethat terrifying shadow of doom and gates." He glanced smilingly over the disgrace which hovers over every train dispatcher's life, though happily not so menacing as formerly, owing to improved methods.

I had been some three months in the dispatcher's office. My position was that of way operator, which signifies that I had not reached the grade of dispatcher, but stood next to it, my work being confined to receiving car reports from the different stations and sending and taking all sorts of messages relating to the train master's department.

There were three dispatchers, dividing the 24 hours of the day into 'tricks' of eight hours each. Besides myself and the three dispatchers there was Trainmaster Wilkins, "Old Wilk" we called him, a grizzled graduate from the dispatcher's chair. Charley as well as usual and how his thin Sanline had the second trick-that is, from 8 in the morning until 4 in the afternoon. He was a dear fellow, kind, conscientious, painstaking, and every one liked him. Through several years until 8 in the morning, and with never a serious blunder. But his night vigils and the long strain had broken his health. Gradually he had grown thin, and the telltale pallor of overwork crept into his cheeks. Daily I sat be-side him, marveling at his pluck, as I saw his long, thin fingers dancing on the key, as he bent over the trainsheet, guiding the hurling monsters over 200 miles of track. Old Wilk wanted him to quit and go to California, but Charley couldn't afford it, he We knew this was true, for he had a mother to support, his father being dead; besides he was trying to keep a younger brother in high school until the boy should graduate. "Oh, I'll be all right when cool weather comes," he would say in summer; and, "Never mind, I will trace up when spring arrives," would be his laughing excuse in winter.

The trainmaster, grim, serious and seemingly as cool and unfeeling as observed, often watched Sanline, and sometimes gruffly ordered him to go out and walk about for a halfwhile the old veteran himself took Charley's chair and ordered the trains, to the discomfort of many a lazy operator out on the wire.

One day, toward the hot end of June, a long train of coaches, decorated with bunting and many flags, came pounding across the switches and drew up alongside the platform at Traynor. The train was loaded, principally, with well-dressed men, wearing badges upon the lapels of their coats, and carrying ribbon-knotted canes, the noisy aggregation representing a great political club on its way to a nominating convention at Chicago. As the panting engine was uncoupled and started for her stall in the roundhouse, the crowd swarmed onto the station platform. Looking down from the bay window of the office, for we were in the second story, I saw the general manager of the road in a group of men by the train. Having some messages for him, I hurried down and presented them. He drew a writing pad from his pocket, and, scribbling several replies, handed them to me, then turned with a cheery "Hello, Drant!" and shook the grimy hand of Traynor, Drant pulled her throttle to make 60 miles an hour, and then we a short, grayish, solid-looking man in engineer's overalls, who was passing toward the front. "How is the "90," Drant? Can she take us to Chicago in two hours, you think? The boys are anxious to get in for the afternoon session," said the general manager.

Drant looked up at the tall official, a twinkle in his keen, gray eyes. He was an odd mixture of humor and

The fireman began shoveling coal into the firebox with might and main. The heat from the boiler-head, combined with the hot sultriness of the day, was something maddening. I clutched my fingers in the engineer's smutted clothes and clung to him, trying to tell him the situation of the imperiled trains as the roll of the engine banged me back and forth.

"There's no operator at Fruitlane, you know." I shouted near his ear, "and the man at Treetor is at dinner. The oil-wild will come through Treetor without stopping, making Fruitlane, and the special will pass Fruitlane without stopping, making to meet the oil-wild at Treetor. They will collide about two miles this side of Treetor, Charley said." Did he give the cross?"

A stifling heat lay over the land. Over 10,000 fields of motionless corn it pulsed in soft gleamings, cattle stood in the still shadows of trees, or thirstily pushed their red nostrils into the streams, horses at plow and mower stopped without bidding, heaving their dripping flanks, while the faces of the working men were scarlet. A thin, hot steam seemed to fill all space, the sun looked faintly dim; yet out of it an saw a glimmer of small houses, a man intolerable heat seemed to beat as from falling back with uplifted the open door of a furnace. Sweat was dripping from the man's chin. He rocked back and forth like a machine. Stevens held his watch in his right hand, his left on the trottle. Now and then he glanced at the timepiece, then strained his eyes ahead. In seven minutes we rushed through Fruitlane like a meteor.

From Traynor to Fruitlane we had come in almost a straight line, but here we struck the flanking hills of the broad valley, and from thence eastward the track flowed forward in long curves, following in some degree the flexures of a small river. Here the drawn, intent look on Stevens' features worked nervously, as if he would gladbefore, for Sanline suddenly sprang to held her throat wide open and we flew onward. To one not strung to the keenest pitch of excitement, our speed would have been terrifying; but personally I was not strongly impressed by this, for the transcendant danger of crashing into the passenger train, somewhere before us, the fact that in five or ten minutes the splendid special and the oil-wild might rush together, eclipsed all else, save fleeting bits of thought that raced through my mind like sparks: How was Charley bearing Would the Treetor operator return to his office before the oil-wild passed his station? the hot, still atmosphere had turned a brown-green hue, and as we whirled round a long bend suddenly miles and round a long bend suddenly miles and miles of level valley lay open before us. To the northeast of it, indescribably majestic and awful, hung a leaning mountain of cloud, black-green at the base and smoky through all its foamy crags. It seemed pitching forward as if to fall upon and overwhelm the world. Half way down the boiling mountain an immense island of brassy vapor was plunging into it like a moving continent. I saw the two twisting continent. I saw the two twist-ing together like mighty serpents, and knew that death was abroad in the Stevens did not seem to notice it. His eyes were feeding on the reaches of track before us. Swinging in to-ward the hills for half a mile or more, I lost sight of the colliding storm clouds for a little space; but when a half-minute later we rushed round an outward-bending curve, I saw miles away to the northeast, a forest being torn into fragments. Above it whirled an indescribable cylinder of cloud, an appalling monster of destruction. Alost black at the base it towered heavenward for thousands of feet, and spread out against the sky, dark-green and veined with curling forks lightning. As it spun round it seemed an infinite auger boring into the earth and tearing the very hills into ruin. It was moving toward the southwest with far greater speed than ever a locomotive ran.

I was on my knees in the left-hand forward window of the cab, clutching the frame-work as the engine rolled and plunged. I glanced at Stevens. He was leaning forward watching the track ahead, the veins on his temple distended, the cords of his neck standing out. The fireman seemed never to look up. The handle of the shovel was wet, his face was streaming.
"There they are!" Stevens suddenly shouted. "Pound it under her, Burns! Give it to her!" He surged forward over his knees, as if he would push the rushing engine faster.

I loked ahead, for my eyes had been lifted to the spinning core of storm approaching from the northeast. With one glance I saw that which made my scalp creep. We were within three miles of Treetor, and something more than a mile ahead of us the track swung outward into the valley, fol-lowing the base of a long, projecting ridge. Near the beginning of this great curve we saw Drant's special rushing obliquely toward the outer point of the sloping ridge; beyond the point of land, perhaps a half a mile, I saw for an instant the polished jacket of the eil-wild's engine glitter against the lightning; then she was lost to sight on an immense curve.

Stevens saw it at the same moment, and threw himself back and pressed his hands over his eyes, writhing like one who felt something of the pain of the hundreds of human beings who must surely be crushed to death in a few seconds. As for myself, I was dumb with horror for a little space My tongue and lips seemed suddenly parched, and I swallowed painfully, trying to speak. With my eyes following the special as she thundered to-ward destruction, I forgot the monster in the heavens. Suddenly I was conscious of pointing toward the north-east, and shouting something. Stevens saw, and jaming the throttle shut, fell forward on his knees and gazed outward and upward, all his features working oddly.

The vast, whirling cone of cloud was oming directly across the valley toward the point of the ridge. Houses, barns, fences, trees, all things were earth by its awful lips. The air about us was green, and somehow all objects seemed touched with a film of

As the mad speed of the "103" slackened, we gazed forward in fascinated terror at the converging forces near the point of the ridge. The panting fireman threw down his shovel, and, dashing the sweat from his eyes, looked and wondered. Our suspense was but a few moments. With the roar and power of a hundred rushing trains the cyclone struck the point of the ridge. waters of the little river burst up the hillside; tons of earth lifted into the air and turned to dust; trees on the flying straws, and, in the midst of dust and whirling atoms we saw Drant's stop on the hillside, the engine turning on its side. ## THOUGHTS ON THE NEW YEAR

Amusements Have a Prominent Place in Religious Life.

Visions of Great Possibilities Come to Youth; Age Looks Only to the Future.

A thousand years in Thy sight are but as yesterday when it is past.-Psalms, xc., 4.

Time and eternity! The one is the beautiful porch to the grand temple, the other is the magnificent temple itself, whose spaces are immeasurable, even by the imagination.

In very truth we begin the eternal life with the first breath we draw in childhood. As a matter of convenience, however, we cut off a small section of eternity, just long enough to encompass our earthly life, and call it time. Dividing it into years and months and days, we are able to keep our varied experiences in mind, telling ourselves that at such a moment we suffered defeat, at such another we won the victory and at still another some dear one came into the household to add its little voice to the dochorus, or perhaps some dear one suddenly became silent and left us to wonder in what clime she is now wandering.

it is a beautiful and profitable custom, this which we celebrate as the cold sun shines on each successive first of January. There are 70 hillocks ridge leaped clear of the ground like in the short journey of human life, and as we reach each one in turn we lay our burdens down for a short respecial mount directly up the slope and spite, gather our friends together, recall the past, forecast the future, and with kindly greetings wish each other markable vision ever vouchsafed our a happy arrival at the next hillock then take up our burdens once again and enter the valley that lies between down from the "103" near the wreck. the two elevations. It is a day of good cheer, of fraternal assembly. The air is full of happy thoughts and wishes. The whole world is brighter for it, for heart goes out to heart, and universal sympathy lifts us for a time to a higher level. Earth is a little more comforting and heaven a little dearer.

Some new faces have come and some of the old faces have disappeared, but love welcomes the one and faith still catches at occasional glimpses of the other. It is the day when we stop for a moment to listen to the keynote of a better life. Dissatisfied with what we have done, the soul bids us be braver, truer and nobler. We heed the warning, and though the cares of the coming days may diminish the force of our resolution a subtle something remains which points to possibilities unattained, while it reminds us of the ability to attain them. With the capacity to be great we are still strangly small of soul, and on New Year's Day we chide ourselves for weakness. A sense of shame mingles with the consciousness of power, and we annually promise ourselves better things.

Amid the hilarities of the hour there come to us serious thoughts. Laughter, amusement, pleasure have a conspicuous place in the religious life. Be sad when you must, but be glad whenever you can. The sadness will come of itself, unbidden, but the gladness must be sought, and it is a duty to search for it until it is found. But behind the smiles, the frivolities, the gayeties, every reasoning soul finds food for grave questioning.

To the youth come moments when the vision of great possibilities visits

These are well enough, and quite worthy our utmost effort. Still, if we have only wealth, or fame or position, yea, if we have all three in our grasp. they are not enough. Without manliness, honesty, self-respect, the ability to look back on the path we have traveled without a sigh, they count as nothing when the soul criticises and measures itself. A life of moral principle, of honor, of even-handed justice is the only life worth living. fore, with all your striving, let nobility of heart, an unblemished career, be your guiding star.

To the man in middle life the question asks itself on such a day as this, What have I done to make the world better for my living in it? Peasant or merchant, learned or illiterate, that question must be answered, and the answer comes with an armful of joy or of regret. One can make his character great and noble in whatever station he may be placed, and character is the only thing that lasts. Death cannot change it, for it walks through the valley of shadows to the throne of God, to be accepted there. On this bright morning, if we can congratulate our own souls on what they have achieved we have a new year blessing that comes straight from heaven. To the aged there is nothing left but the future. The past has gone beyond recall, and tomorrow beckens. In the sweet faith that the sun will rise the winter points to spring. There is no sadness, though the journey draws to a close, for the Beyond opens up its glories and with a single step we shall be with our beloved ones once more. If we have done our work well we shall go hence with joy. For the young, therefore, and for the aged, and for all, there is but one wish-that the new year will find us strong for its duties and ready to reap the harvest in the field in which Providence has placed us.-George H. The visitors must carry away with them a very poor opinion of the respect enter-tained by the audience for their sovereign and their national hymn when they can so rudely ignore the fact that it is being sung. Surely "God Save the King" should have more meaning to a Canadian audience than to suppress and prevent. merely as an accompaniment to the process of jostling out of the theater. There should be too deep a sentiment connected with our national hymn to allow it to be cheapened in this manner. London audiences are especially flagrant in their breach of the unwritten law which enjoins respect for the empire's national air. No less illbred is the habit so many have of coming so late as to seriously disturb both the actors in the play and the sensible section of the audience who have paid good money for their seats and expect and deserve to receive value for their outlay. Quite as reprehensible is the conduct of many, who, by virtue of their position in society, are supposed to know better, but who throughout a performance mar the enjoyment of all America until the fall of 1908. around by audible criticism of the play or conversation on other topics. A realization that they are not the "whole thing" and a little regard for the rights of others is what a section of London's theater-going patrons should have instilled in them.

A strong rumor in theatrical circles has it that Julia Arthur, who retired from the stage two years ago in response to the wishes of her husband, England States. Benjamin P. Cheney, a Boston millionaire, had decided to return to the stage, and was looking for a Broadtheater to open in next season. The rumor also had it that she was in the field for a suitable Romeo to play to her Julet. It was reported on good authority that Mrs. Cheney had won her husband's consent to her reappearance, after much opposition. There have been rumors before of Mrs. Cheney's return to the stage, which she has denied. This one was said to be on

Perhaps the most notable theatrical event of this latter half of the season will be the engagement at the New Grand next Friday of Mrs. Sarah Cowell Le Moyne, in her new play, "The First Duchess of Marlborough." Mrs. Le Moyne is recognized as one of America's foremost actresses, and the public of this city are fortunate in having an opportunity of seeing her in this play, which has been greeted with warmest praises and packed houses all across the continent

Its greatest vogue was in Buffalo, where it met the eye every few steps and it assailed the ear at every turn. It has a place in the production of "A Trip to Buffalo," which will be presented at the New Grand next Tuesday. The music of "A Trip to Buffalo" is by Wm. Lorraine, composer of "Salome," the popular intermezzo.

"Undersleeves" are coming into fashion again with women, it is said, and men are once more wearing "stocks." Photographs of the members of the cast of "The Dairy Farm," which comes to the Grand next Saturday, show that in 1854-56, with the stocks men wore "spike-tail" coats, with ab-normally high collars, low-cut waistcoats of gorgeous fabrics and pertop trousers, while women were clad in gowns with long straight bodices and skirts of enormous width, inflated by hoopskirts. The clothes worn in the were carefully copied from oldfashioned plates, daguerreotypes and articles of dress that have been handed down to descendants of the original wearers as heirlooms.

A state censorship of the drama and the suppression of such plays as "Sapho" and "Zaza" are the objects aimed at by a bill drafted for introduction in the state legislature of New York, by Assemblyman John F. Ahern, of Troy. Mr. Ahern is a Pepublican, has been a stove polisher all his life, and was born in New York City in 1859. His bill provides for the sup-pression of immoral plays through the state censorship, and the licensing of actors and actresses. Bliss Carman contributes to the December number of the North American Review a poem, which he calls "The Tidings to Olaf." The Norse King sits on his throne and the priest of Thor challenges him: "Whom shall we serve, O King-Christ or Thor?" reciting the reasons why the royal choice should rest with the god of his fathers. Then a pale, dark monk steps forth, and, delivering his "tidings," makes appeal for his Master. He thus answers the plea that Olaf owed his greatness to the heathen god:

What lifts thy name, Olaf, aloft on the shout of thy folk in war? What keeps it warm by the hearth? Is it the favor of Thor?

'No! 'Tis the love of thy people, the great common love of thy kind, The thing that is old as the sun and stronger than the wind.

"And, Olaf, all these things, these goods which thy priest proclaims, That make thee a lord among men, and give thee a name above names,
