NEW RATE CUTS PUT LONDON AT MERCY OF BIG ROADS

CITY'S PORT IS MENACED BY TWO BIG RAILWAYS

Manager Predicts Big Losses If Existing Coal Rate Is Cancelled.

TWO PORTS AFFECTED

London C. of C. Will Join in Strong Protest To Higher Freight Charges.

The life of the London & Port Stanley Railway hangs dangerously in the balance, according to J. E. Richards, manager of the road, in commenting last evening on the action which has been taken by the Canadian National and the Canadian Pacific railways, in cancelling the existing freight rates on all coal shipped through Port Stanley and Erieau, to points east of Woodstock.

"If this cancellation order is allowed to proceed and takes effect on January 1, as announced by the railway companies, the operation of the London electric railway will be placed in imminent danger," remarked Mr. Richards.

"One-half of our business is transportation, and 75 per cent of our transportation is in coal shipments. London, through this municipally-owned road, gets the benefit of these shipments to many western Ontario points. If the order goes through, and we are to lose these shipments, the road must ultimately operate at a loss. The matter is most intricate, and of vital importance to the people of London, and immediate action must be taken."

City Body To Act.

That immediate action is to be taken by London in this matter, is assured by R. H. Dowler, president of the London Chamber of Commerce, who returned to the city last night from the annual meeting of the western Ontario United Boards of Trade in Preston.

The chambers of commerce of Windsor, Chatham, Hamilton and Toronto, and the Kitchener Board of Trade, have filed protest with the dominion railway board over the cancelling of the existing coal rates. Mr. Dowler will place the matter before the local chamber of commerce immediately, and it is expected that a strong resolution will be sent to the railway commission, asking them to revoke the decision of the companies.

If the freight rates are cancelled, it means that coal will be placed under a commodity rate which would mean a big jump in the cost of transportation. Erieau and Port Stanley would receive no further shipments, as all coal would come through Detroit and Buffalo.

Port Stanley Affected.

The cutting off of rates on all shipments to points east of Woodstock, will especially affect the Port Stanley and Erieau trade, because more than 80 per cent of their shipments are to points in this direction, and according to A. Leslie, president of the Erieau company, it would be unable to continue in business with this percentage of their trade lost.

The huge storage plants at Erieau would be useless, and the cities in western Ontario would find it necessary to build their own plants. The thousands of dollars spent on facilities and improvements at these ports will have been for naught. At the present time, the City Gas Company, McClarys, Hunt's flour mills and other local plants, depend on Port Stanley as the source of their coal and coke supplies.

L. and P. S. Threatened With Extinction by Proposal To Cancel Coal Rate.

CITY TO FEEL PINCH

Manufacturers and Institutions
Join in Protest Against the Plan To Raise Freight.

Regarded as the most serious threat to the prosperity of London in many years, the proposal of the C. P. R. and C. N. R. railways to cancel the existing transportation rates on coal shipped from Port Stanley and Erieau, raised something akin to consternation in local manufacturing circles this morning.

Aside from the irreparable damage such action would work to the London and Port Stanley railway, the city-owned and operated electric road to Port Stanley, cancellation of existing rates, which have been in force for over thirty years, would place local manufacturing concerns entirely at the mercy of the two big railroads as regards coal supplies. Every manufacturing concern in the city using soft coal would promptly experience a rise in freight on coal of at least one cent a ton, representing the difference in freight rates between the all-rail route through Black Rock or Detroit as against the water route from Canoeau to Port Stanley or Erieau.

Not only will manufacturing costs be raised, but many public institutions will feel the pinch. For example, the Marlborough Hotel, the McClary Manufacturing Company stated this morning that not only would that company, the largest manufacturing concern in the city, be seriously affected, but the cost of operating Victoria hospital would be much increased as a result of the rise in the cost of coal. Even the provincial government would experience heavy extra cost, as the Ontario hospital and the Westminster hospital are both large users of soft coal, most of which come in through Port Stanley.

But the most serious effect of all would be the practical wiping out of London's port on the great lakes at Port Stanley, probably the greatest single asset the city has. For years car ferries have been plying between Canoeau and Port Stanley, bringing in coal and also iron and steel by a quick and cheap route for distribution all over Western Ontario.

Coal has formed the bulk of this business and if that business is wiped out there will be little inducement to Canoeau and Port Stanley to continue operating their lines to Port Stanley. The thousands of dollars spent by the federal government in dredging the harbor and building breakwaters and docks will be practically thrown away and Port Stanley will become nothing more than a pleasure resort to Londoners.

"Collusion between the two big roads," an attempt to eliminate the L. & P. S. so as to secure the long haul on coal, were among the expressions used by London businessmen in discussing the situation this morning.

"What Will Board Do?" "Surely the Ontario railway board will never consent to this cancellation of rates," commented T. D. McFarland, manager of the D. S. Perin Co. "London would never stand for it."

"The chambers of commerce in London and of every city and town in Western Ontario should get busy at once to fight this move," stated J. E. Richards, president of the Erieau company, at the annual meeting of the western Ontario United Boards of Trade in Preston.

The local chamber of commerce, after a session lasting until after midnight, gave out the following statement on the situation this morning:

Chamber's Statement.
"Since the London and Port Stanley railway is a public utility, owned and operated by the public for public profit, the London chamber of commerce is of the opinion that the cancellation of the existing coal rates is a gross injustice to the public and should be immediately revoked."

LONDON SHARES ROYAL GRIEF; MESSAGES OF SYMPATHY SENT

Mayor Forwards City's Message to the King at Buckingham Palace and G.W.V.A. Sends Cable—Flags Float at Half Staff Throughout City.

From all parts of the empire messages of sympathy are pouring into the home of the late Queen Mother Alexandra, but none are more expressive of genuine grief than those sent by the people of London.

The late queen was one of the most popular of the royal family to Londoners, and news of her very sudden death came as a real source of regret. Cables from many organizations and some private citizens have been sent to His Majesty the King, at Buckingham Palace, on behalf of the Londoners, "To His Majesty the King, at Buckingham Palace: Kindly accept sincerest sympathy of all the citizens of London, Canada."

The sanatorium at Byron, which had been named in honor of the late queen, also sent an address to the King. Elliott & Gillanders are acting for the plaintiffs, and Kelly, Porter & Kelly for the defendant.

NO BUGGY LIGHTS, SAYS LAWSUIT DEFENDANT

R. W. Silverthorn Asks That $5,000 Damage Action Be Dismissed Without Costs.

Declaring that the buggy in which Palmer D. Bull, London, and Bessie McQueen, Lobo, were riding on Sept. 4 last, did not have any lights, R. W. Silverthorn, Port Dover, submits that the former's $5,000 county court suit should be dismissed without costs. The case will be tried by Judge Macbeth and jury at the December sittings of the court opening Dec. 4.

The accident took place on the Hyde Park side road, Silverthorn's car smashing the buggy and injuring the occupants. Bull claims $4,000 damages and Bessie McQueen $1,000. Elliott & Gillanders are acting for the plaintiffs, and Kelly, Porter & Kelly for the defendant.

DEMAND FOR HOMES INCREASES IN LONDON

Real estate dealers in the city report an unusual demand for homes. S. A. Campbell stated that at present the applicants for residences are very numerous and some difficulty is experienced in filling the orders.

Bert Weir also reports considerable business on the smaller lines. Outside of the sale of the Fairfield residence, 239 Wortley road, which was sold for $7,900, no large transactions took place.

Parisian Smashes Glass Cage

Associated Press Despatch.
Paris, Nov. 21.—The sight of a young woman eating a chocolate éclair with great relish outside his glass cage caused Albert Wolly, a professional faster, to go violently insane. After gazing fixedly at the fast-disappearing dainty in the girl's fingers, Wolly suddenly rose, seized his chair and smashed the glass in an effort to reach the food.

The faster was on the twelfth of his scheduled 30 foodless and sleepless days, and had been an attraction in a busy thoroughfare, where his cage was installed in a large hall.

REPORT TORONTO TO HAVE CANADA'S LARGEST HOTEL

Canadian Press Despatch.
Toronto, Nov. 21.—News reports today are that an announcement will shortly be made to the effect that the site at Yonge, Wellington and Jordan streets, in the heart of downtown Toronto, will be the location of a hotel which is to be the largest in the dominion, exceeding in size the Mount Royal at Montreal. Andrew Dods is sponsoring the project.

NOMINATIONS ARE AT TEN ON MONDAY

Entries for Mayoralty Early in the Day, and Aldermen Come Later.

The thrilling cry, "They're off," will resound through the city hall on Monday when the official nominations of candidates for office in the municipal election, to be held two weeks hence, will be held and all further doubt removed as to who the candidates are to be.

City Clerk Baker, official starter, has announced the first race for 10 o'clock Monday morning when entries in the big mayoralty handicap will be called to the barrier. Nominations for the office of the city's chief magistrate will be received between the hours of 10 and 11, and in the same hour nominations will be in order for public utilities commissioners and hospital trustees.

The latter promises to be the best event from a spectator's standpoint, as the prospective field contains a number of fractious colts just "faring to go."

Strenuous efforts are being made to induce John M. Moore, popular local architect, to enter the contest. He is considering the matter, and many are of the opinion that Monday will see him enter the lists.

Buildings Are Draped In Mourning

All Classes in Great Britain
Are Steeped in Profound Sorrow.

FUNERAL UNDECIDED

Fortnight Will Probably Elapse
So That Distant Relatives
May Come.

Associated Press Despatch.
London, Nov. 21.—All Great Britain stood today with bowed heads, mourning the passing of the beloved Dowager Queen Alexandra. Flags flew at half-mast and many buildings were draped in black.

Death came to Queen Alexandra late yesterday afternoon in Sandringham palace while her son, King George, and Queen Mary and various members of the royal household stood with tear-bedimmed eyes at the bedside. The Prince of Wales, always her favorite grandson, had fate in the nature of a heavy fog against him as he travelled from London to Sandringham and did not reach the palace in time to bid his grandmother farewell.

Attacked by heart disease Thursday, the aged queen mother—she would have been 81 years old in a few days—sank rapidly and death intervened as twilight was coming on. When the announcement was made at Sandringham that Alexandra was dead, the little crowds that had gathered outside the gates, all of whom knew her, silently bared their heads and sadly withdrew their way homeward.

The news was quickly broadcast and listeners throughout the British Isles heard over their radio sets that the widow of King Edward VII. and the mother of their present monarch had gone to her rest. In London from 8 to 9 o'clock the big bell in St. Paul's tolled out sonorously the tale of the passing of a member of Great Britain's royal family. It is only when a member of royalty dies that the clang of the bell in St. Paul's awakens the sleeping city.

The newspapers came out this morning in deep mourning. They print many details of the life and doings of Alexandra and many pictures illustrating her career since she arrived in England in 1863 to become the bride of the Prince of Wales.

An indication of the popular affection existing for Alexandra is the fact that the Laborite organ, the Herald, which usually ignores royal matters, or prints an inch concerning them when other newspapers print a column, today devotes two columns to the death of the dowager. The paper also carries an editorial headed "A Woman With a Kind Heart."

Parliament had already adjourned before word arrived of the dowager's passing. Many official and private functions were abandoned tonight, but the news came too late to arrange for closing the theatres. There will, however, be a general closing on the day of the funeral, arrangements for which will not be decided until the king's two bedchambers in the lord chamberlain's department is responsible in these matters.

Funeral in Fortnight.

No date has yet been announced for the funeral of Alexandra, nor when her body will be taken to Windsor to lie in the royal chapel beside that of King Edward VII. It is thought that the funeral will not take place before a fortnight, so that all relatives in Europe will have time to reach London.

There is no modern precedent for the funeral of a mother of a reigning British monarch. For an exact parallel the lord chamberlain will have to go back to the death of Catherine of France, mother of Henry VI, in 1438.

Lying-in-State Probable.
It is expected, however, that the ceremonial observed at the funeral of Queen Alexandra, in 1849, when Queen Victoria, her niece, was on the throne, will be followed, namely, that the body will be brought to London, lying-in-state and a funeral procession.

The body will then be taken to Windsor and will lie in state for a few days.

Takes First Step In Six Years To Discover Her Husband Dead

Canadian Press Despatch.
Cambridge, N. B., Nov. 21.—The first steps she had taken in six years carried Mrs. Noah Hamm from her own room to that of her husband, where she found him dead on Wednesday morning in their home at "Hammtown" parish of Johnstown, Queens.

Mrs. Hamm had been paralyzed for years. When she found that her husband had not risen at the usual hour, she called repeatedly to him but got no reply. She managed to get out of her bed and walked to her husband's room only to find him dead.

The couple lived alone, and Mrs. Hamm had to sit in the window of her home practically all morning before she succeeded, by tapping on the window and calling, in attracting the attention of passers-by who came to her aid.

former secretary of the London chamber of commerce and now connected with the Windsor chamber, announced his withdrawal from the post of secretary of the United boards of trade of Western Ontario at the annual convention of this body in Preston Friday.

BLAME COLLISION FOR LOSS OF SUB

Swedish Steamer Felt Shock—Admiralty Convinced M-1

Associated Press Despatch.
London, Nov. 21.—Loss of the monitor-submarine M-1, with 65 lives, last week, now appears to have been due to a collision with a Swedish steamer, the admiralty announced today.

Information sent by the captain of the steamer Vidar, now at Stockholm, that he felt a shock at the time and appearance, leads to the conclusion that the M-1 struck the Vidar and sunk immediately.

Politics May Cause Breach in Chiefs.

Associated Press Despatch.
Berlin, Nov. 21.—Gen. Erich Ludendorff, Fascist and Nationalist, and one of the main co-ops of the great German war machine, is out with a bitter denunciation of his war-time chief, President von Hindenburg, because of the president's support of the Locarno treaty.

Now that the Socialists definitely have decided to vote with the extreme right, it seems certain that a representative of the Reich will be in London when the documents are signed, formally to give his country's adherence to them. The bills are due to come up in the Reichstag on Monday, and are expected to be quickly passed by an extremely large majority.

FORMER PREMIER DEFEATED IN AUSTRALIAN ELECTION

Associated Press Despatch.
Brisbane, Australia, Nov. 21.—E. G. Theodore, former premier of Queensland, was defeated by Dr. Knott, government candidate, in the federal election of last Saturday. The related elections received here yesterday definitely decided the matter. Hon. Edward G. Theodore, who was at the head of the Labor administration of Queensland when the federal election was announced, resigned his premiership to run for a seat in the federal house of representatives in the Labor party's interests.

Campaign Is Opened By Hydro Head

CITY PLEA LATER

Head of Ontario Commission Makes a Tour of London's Hydro System With Officials.

Today's dinner at Queen Alexandra Sanatorium, to be addressed by C. A. Magrath, new chairman of the Ontario hydro-power commission, and also by Bishop Williams and Bishop Fallon, marks the opening of the campaign throughout Western Ontario for the $500,000 Beck Memorial Endowment Fund.

It is a coincidence that news of the death of Queen Alexandra, for whom the sanatorium was named, comes just when a big effort is starting to place its work on a permanent and sound basis.

Many out-of-town visitors are expected at this afternoon's function, invitations having gone out to the mayors and other civic officials of many of the surrounding cities and towns. In all, about 175 invitations were sent to outside places.

Opens Monday Night.

The local campaign does not actually open until Monday night, when a dinner has been arranged at Smallman & Ingram's, where the workers will be addressed by Monsignor O'Connor of St. Peter's cathedral and Rev. Quinlan Warner of Croydon Memorial church.

All the team workers in the local campaign, and there are nearly 250 of them, have been invited to visit the sanatorium at 3 o'clock on Sunday afternoon. The Kiwanis club is providing cars at 2:45 at the champagne of commerce. The Kiwanis club is providing cars at 2:45 at the champagne of commerce.

Workmen were heartened this morning by news from Toronto that the proceeds of prize apples sold at the Royal Winter Fair, amounting to $4,000, had been donated to the Beck memorial fund.

Magrath Arrives.

Chairman Charles A. Magrath arrived in the city this morning, eager to visit for the first time the home of Alexandra, for whom the Beck memorial fund was named. Magrath, a benefactor, hydro knight and philanthropist, his predecessor as head of the great hydro system of the province.

Mr. Magrath stepped from the train with hand outstretched in cordial greeting to Col. Ibbotson Leonard, D.S.O., local head of the Beck memorial endowment fund campaign; Jared Vining, chairman of the public utilities commission, and other members of the commission.

Significant is it that Mr. Magrath's first visit to London should be made in the interests of the Beck memorial fund, because on numerous occasions he has stated publicly that it will be his endeavor to follow in Sir Adam's footsteps.

Second only to his eagerness in London as Sir Adam's home appeared Mr. Magrath's becoming modesty concerning himself. Perhaps concerning no man has there been uttered so many glowing compliments in many months in Ontario than the new hydro chairman, and yet the unsought publicity of a pleasant nature thought it rests lightly on his shoulders because he is a genuinely modest and quiet man.

Tour of the City.

SURVEY PLANNED ON WAVE LENGTHS

U. S. Department of Commerce to Determine Amount of Time Used.

Officials of the radio section of the U. S. department of commerce, guided by recommendations of the fourth annual radio conference, are planning a thorough survey of conditions now existing on all wave lengths, and the amount of time that each of the licensed stations is using on the air.

The present list of stations, which includes almost 600 broadcasters, is known to contain the names of a number of plants which have dis-
porarily or permanently, without notifying the department. Deletion of some of these inactive stations will follow the checkup, thus assisting the department in making some necessary rearrangements in the present scheme of allocation.

The most congested wave length at present is 275 meters, on which 25 stations are operating. Several other lengths are almost as badly congested. In the past it has been the policy of the department, in order to make room for everybody, to assign two or three plants of five hundred watts or power, with widely separated locations, to every wave length, and then to fill up these wave bands with the rest of the stations having power of from five hundred to one hundred watts. This scheme has been disrupted of late, however, by the general trend of broadcasters to higher power, and the ever-increasing number of applications for licenses.

As an illustration of how the plan has worked out on the 275-meter wave length, there are on that portion of the spectrum one station of five thousand watts located at Batavia, Ill., one of one thousand watts at Elgin, Ill., eleven of five hundred watts at Atlantic City, Port Huron, Milwaukee, Mansfield, Conn., Los Angeles, Harrisburg, Dayton, La.
Kings, Pittsburg, (two), and Lincoln, Neb., and thirteen plants of lesser power well scattered over the United States. Many of the stronger plants divide the time with one another, but the situation still is far from satisfactory.

Elimination of a few of the present licensed stations, together with the halting of the practice of rushing to grant licenses to all applicants, will give the radio officials an opportunity to straighten out many of the present kinks in the ether.

"Radio Kiss" Is Latest Stunt With Receiving Sets

Apart From Giving Its Customary Entertainment, Outfit Can Become Excellent Medium For Parlor Magic Stunts Under Certain Circumstances.

Persons who think that a radio receiving set is good only for listening to the various broadcasting programs are mistaken. Aside from giving its customary entertainment, a radio outfit, when properly used, can become an excellent entertainer of the parlor magic variety.

In order to perform the experiment herein described, it is necessary to get at least a 3-tube, or, better, a 5-tube set. The stunt, which never fails to evoke surprise, might be termed "The Radio Kiss," although this may not be an exact name for it.

In this entertainment, it is necessary to have for the surprise element a metallic chair. This iron chair is of the garden variety, and while it is not so good, because such a chair will always arouse the suspicion of the party to be initiated.

If a metallic chair is used, one wire from the loud speaker is run to one of the chair legs and connected with it. This may be done under a rug or carpet, so the connection will not show. In this manner, there will be no possible suspicion and the surprise effect is consequently heightened. The other end of the cord from the loud speaker goes to the phone plug, while the other pole of the plug connects to a cord or wire, which may be wrapped around a spoon or other metallic object, in order to make good contact with the performer's hand. It will now be seen that if the performer kisses the lady's hand, providing the radio set is turned on and there is a station going, the instant he touches the hand, the music, or whatever program there is from that station will issue from the horn.

In this experiment, the current flows through the performer's body.

thence through the body's hand and arm, while her other hand or arm is grounded on the chair, from which part of the current goes back to the loud speaker, thereby completing the circuit. It will be noted that music can issue from the horn only so long as contact is made between the performer and the one entertained, nor is the music or sound weakened as a rule. So long as a good contact is made, the high frequency currents pass readily through the body, almost as if there were a solid metallic connection throughout.

As a rule, the lady being entertained will be skeptical that it is the contact between mouth and hand that causes the music. If she is, just ask her to touch your face or your hand herself. At the very contact thus made, music will, of course, be heard.

An added interest is given the experiment by touching a sensitive part of the subject's face, such as for instance, her ear, or her lips, lightly with the finger. If a 3 or 4-tube set is used, a slight tingling sensation will be experienced, which, if a set is powerful enough, will sometimes be felt as harmless little shocks, such as are given off by a weak shocking machine. This occurs only if the touch is very light. If the finger is pressed solidly against the skin, this effect will not be noticed.

Of course, the entire success of this experiment hinges upon the "victim's" not seeing the one wire running to the performer's body.
Variations of this can be made as follows:

Which the performer may have a few short hairs run through his shoes, in which case a hole has to be cut from the sock, so that his foot makes contact with the heads of the nails.
Then metallic plate may be under the rug and connected with the end of the loud speaker cord. The performer has then only to step upon the plate and the music will piece the rug and make good contact with the brass plate. This will be very mysterious and afford an opportunity for quite a good deal of fun.

There are, of course, many other variations that will readily suggest themselves to any clever performer.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1925.

An Unfortunate Situation.

The finding of the county judge at Goderich has changed the verdict of the people from a victory for Mr. J. W. King, Progressive candidate in North Huron, to a win for Mr. George Spotton, Conservative. When the official count was made Mr. Spotton had 5,173 votes and Mr. King 5,342, giving him a majority of 169. The recount leaves the result as follows:

George Spotton, Conservative..... 5,088
J. W. King, Progressive..... 5,080

Majority for Spotton..... 8

The judge, in recounting the ballots, found that in three polling subdivisions, two in Grey, numbers two and six, and in seven, Ashfield, the counterfoils had all been left on the ballots by the deputy returning officers, and therefore these could not be counted. He held that the secrecy of the ballot could not be maintained were such practices allowed, and quoted precedent to substantiate his opinion.

There was no charge made that there was intentional wrongdoing on the part of the deputy returning officers who had handled their work in a faulty way; the judge gave it as his opinion that it was due to ignorance of the requirements of the law on their part. It is here that the unfortunate part of the situation comes in, because it means that all those whose ballots were improperly handled have been disfranchised.

The voters in those subdivisions went to the polls and marked their ballots in good faith. The figures recorded show what the desire of the electors was:

	King, Spotton.
No. 2, Grey.....	88 24
No. 6, Grey.....	90 39
No. 7, Ashfield.....	82 19
Totals.....	260 82

The judge is right in his claim that the secrecy of the ballot must be maintained, and he pursued the logical course in refusing to count the ballots. But that does not end the matter, for the plain fact is that the seat goes to a candidate for whom a majority did not vote, and representation under such circumstances cannot be satisfactory. The only way in which the situation can be cleared up is the holding of a by-election, at which it should be made very certain that the officials in charge carry out instructions to the letter in the proper handling of ballots.

The Position of the Trustee.

Discussion that has taken place recently in committee and also at the board of education meetings shows an increasing tendency on the part of members to combat increasing costs of operating our school system. This does not imply an unfair attitude on the part of trustees toward the teaching staff, but it does show that there is more disposition to consider the rate-payers who have been faced with rising costs for twenty-five years.

Included in the costs of today are the debt payments for fifteen new public schools, the central collegiate and the technical school, and to this will soon be added the annual payments on the east end collegiate. None of these payments have as yet matured as they have been spread over a twenty-year period, so we still feel the full force of the annual levy for seventeen new buildings. When some of these run out there will be a measure of relief, but that will not be for some years yet. The people today are paying the price because in years gone past there was no building program planned or carried out.

Apart from that there is reason for trustees taking the attitude that they must combat further increases. It is difficult for the member on the board to act effectively in this direction. He finds himself part of a vast educational system that was in operation before he came into it and that will go on functioning after he leaves.

The trustee has nothing to do with framing the school curriculum—that has all been arranged; he may have glimpsed the idea that he was going to come to close grips with the method of educating boys and girls, but he realizes that only on rare occasions does he ever see them. He finds there are a certain number of schools in operation, that salaries are more or less automatically arranged, and that teachers move in a competitive market where other cities are always on the lookout for the best.

A very limited experience shows the trustee he is engaged in the handling of detail, the location and style of buildings, repairs and alterations to existing plants. He has not come nearly as close to the real business of education as he had hoped. He knows the costs are going up and have been going up. The figures in London show it this way:

Year.	School Taxes.	Year.	School Taxes.
1905.....	$129,588.12	1921.....	$799,253.87
1910.....	199,575.45	1922.....	866,126.95
1915.....	333,897.34	1923.....	938,146.28
1920.....	627,120.68	1924.....	974,823.91

The trustee knows that people are asking him when the end of the period of increase is going to take place. He can see that the cost for 1924 compared with that of 1915 represents an increase of over $2,000 for every working day in the year, and he knows that the tendency is still higher. There can be no disposition to charge the trustee with being helpless or incapable of meeting the situation, because London has had the services of many of its best men and women in this work. But it is a fact that the individual trustee often realizes that in spite of his best efforts and intentions many of the currents that carry education costs to new high levels are beyond the reach of his oar.

A Matter of Methods.

The report that France will have a deficit of five billion francs at the close of its fiscal year is not going to help French credit. Neither has the official report of General Sarrail on the bombing of Damascus served to dispel the impression that the French had made a move as grotesque as it was unwise.

The Jerusalem correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, who visited Damascus only a short time after the bombardment, gives a very carefully prepared report of what took place, one that makes all possible allowance for the military necessities facing the French. His conclusion, and he judges from what he saw taking place after, is that the French blunder has aggravated the situation, and many Damascus who had taken no part in the rebellion against French rule in Syria have gone out and joined the rebel Druses.

This means that there will be more fighting in Syria, and if France is going to succeed in it she will have to spend still greater amounts in a war that threatens to disturb the whole Moslem world.

There is a contrast in results obtained by two methods in Palestine and Syria. Syria is supposed to have a measure of self-government under the French mandate, but it is seething in rebellion and trade is depressed to such a degree that foreign nations find it impossible to do business. Palestine, under British rule, is in a flourishing state, the native trade is well developed, and world commerce as it touches that land is carried on with the assurance that the people there are contented and fairly treated by the governing power.

The French school of colonization and mandatory government has not yet grasped the meaning of British success in Palestine or India, places that present greater problems than that of Syria. As a result France has a war in Morocco, an increasing one in Syria and a debt that is nothing short of startling.

The President's Advice.

President Coolidge told one thousand businessmen in New York that there were constantly accumulating reasons why United States should signify its adherence to the permanent court of international justice.

The president also declared: "I can conceive of nothing that we could do, which involves assuming so few obligations on our part, that would be likely to prove of so much value to the world." It is to be hoped that there will be no inclination to read into this declaration that membership in the League of Nations is something that can be lightly regarded or that does not call for wholehearted support and a definitely recognized responsibility.

United States in the League of Nations would be of tremendous advantage, and the importance of such a step can hardly be over-judged. The republic needs closer association with other powers, particularly when such association means opportunity to promote world peace. United States is wealthy beyond need and strong in man-power, but its position of comparative isolation will never make of it as great a nation as its logical destiny might indicate.

President Coolidge is doing as great a service to his own land as he is to the League of Nations when he points to the chair that has too long been held waiting for the United States in the League's councils.

Why Not Now?

The anthracite miners' committee met the mine owners at New York, but the public have no knowledge of what took place. They gather their information in the way of scanty supplies and higher prices.

The miners will eventually go back to work. They will agree to certain things that today they refuse to consider; the mine owners will do the same. Compromise will be the ultimate solution, as it is in every other case.

The mine owners know this, the miners know it and the public knows it. Then why not make the concessions now that will have to be made in the future?

Brazen-Faced.

A gangster in Chicago was buried in a casket that cost $10,000. Flowers that banked it were worth $20,000.

The whole business, the fruit of lawlessness, was paraded through the streets of that great city.

This is not honoring the dead, because there was nothing to honor. It was a brazen-faced glorification of crime of a kind that beckons on more crime.

Let's Be Fair

By ARK.

I heard a man speak yesterday, he ridiculed the women folks, and on them cast ten kinds of scorn and heaped a stock of puny jokes. He laughed about their hair and skirts and scoffed about the modern clothes, and likewise had somewhat to say about the powder on their nose.

Which set me thinkin' how some men are fussy on the things they do, and always strivin' in their way to look as slick and smooth as new.

Why I know men who stew around and have a drug store in their home, they're battlin' seven days a week to hold the hair upon their dome. They rub the ointment on each sprout and put a dressin' on it, too, a-hopin' in a month or so they'll see that place a-sproutin' two.

And them what's got a little hair, they spread it lengthwise on the plot, to try and make the folks believe that they still harbor quite a crop.

And some with whiskers on their chin they dabble in the paint each day, determined how they'll make a stand agin the time when they turn gray.

Yet I'm not blamin' them a bit, it be the duty of each man, to spade and rake about his dome and look the very best he can. The only thing I'm pointin' out is that when men will crack a joke, they shouldn't take their shaft each time and hurl it at the women folk.

Editorial Opinion

A CANDID ANALYSIS.

From the Ottawa Journal.

PROBABLY the most pitiable figure in Canadian newspaperdom in the recent general election was the once forcible Toronto Globe. The Globe certainly didn't want Meighen, neither did it seem to want King, and it did not see any merit or hope in Forke. Something was wrong in the control. The brains of its editorial staff resigned with disgust by instalments at various stages during the weeks preceding the election, and what was left in the editorial department evidently did not know exactly what to do to please the proprietor.

AND HE DOESN'T MEAN MAYBE.

From the Peterborough Examiner.

GUSTAVE EVANTUREL, member-elect for Prescott, says he ran as a straight Liberal, has been all his life a straight Liberal, was elected by the Liberals of Prescott, and is a loyal and most devoted supporter of the King government. All of which seems to indicate that he is not going to be of much assistance to Mr. Meighen.

From the Hamilton Herald.

THE declaration of President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University, returned from Geneva, that the League of Nations is "one of the greatest public agencies of all times," will make it harder than ever for the Republican party leaders to keep up the pretence that the league is a failure and seeks an excuse to die.

From the Kingston Whig.

Trying To Catch the Breeze

Voting On Going To War

HON. ARTHUR MEIGHEN'S statement to a Conservative gathering at Hamilton, in which he set forth the belief that a general election should be held before Canada sent troops beyond her own shores, has been variously received and interpreted by the Ontario press. The point on which the message pivots is contained in the following:

"I believe it would be best, not only that parliament should be called, but that the decision of the government, which, of course, would have to be given promptly, should be submitted to the judgment of the people at a general election before troops should leave our shores."

The Brantford Expositor believes that Mr. Meighen is not following British precedent, for it remarks, "The British government consulted parliament, not the people, when it declared war against Germany in 1914." The Expositor also recalls that when Premier King declined to send troops to the Dardanelles on the strength of a hurried message from Winston Churchill he was bitterly attacked for his decision by Mr. Meighen, quoting the Conservative leader's words, "When Britain's message came, then Canada should have said, 'Ready, aye, ready, we stand by you.'" The Expositor concludes:

"In his speech at Hamilton Mr. Meighen receded from this untenable position, and went even farther than Mr. King, who desired to consult parliament. Mr. Meighen has gone a long way in his desire to placate Quebec."

THE Woodstock Sentinel-Review doubts that if a vote were taken on going to war if the result would be emphatic, or the issues kept free from straight party lines.

"But what chance would there be, asks the Woodstock paper, 'of ascertaining the will of the people as the result of an election? In such an emergency there would be confusion in the minds of great masses of the people as to the issues involved, and the result of an election campaign would probably be to add to the confusion. Outside issues would be dragged in and there would be a tendency to divide along party lines.' Further the Sentinel-Review sees another objection in that if there were not a decisive majority given to back up the government it would mean that Canada would present a broken front to the enemy.

The St. Catharines Standard, while not falling in love with such a roundabout way of going to war if our liberty is threatened, holds that Mr. Meighen's declaration is justified if it "will allay fear in Quebec, create confidence and promote good will and national unity." If these ends are attained, then "the words were well spoken." The Standard interprets Mr. Meighen's utterance to mean "that sovereign power belongs to and can only be exercised by the people, whose patriotism can always be depended upon."

THAT the present position of Mr. Meighen is very different to that which caused his criticism of the King government on the question of sending Canadian troops to the Dardanelles, is a point made by the Quebec Mercury. It also sees in it an attempt to placate Quebec, and adds:

"However, it is the right of the Conservative leader to set himself right with the people of Quebec, who have unquestionably displayed no prejudice against him because of his occupancy of a position of power when conscription was a vital issue before the people of Canada. If Mr. King benefited by the campaign of Quebec's provincial premier frightening the people against any future conscription, why not the campaign merely on a par with the campaign in Ontario in other elections where it was accused that the Liberal party was planning to turn over the Dominion to the United States, lock stock and barrel, of which reciprocity was merely the preliminary move."

Resentment to criticism of Toryism in Toronto that Mr. Meighen "had grovelled" to Quebec is expressed by the Hamilton Herald. "Why not," it asks, "consider Mr. Meighen's declaration of policy on its merits, excluding Quebec from the picture altogether?" The idea of an election preceding the sending of troops the Herald regards as "soundly democratic and also as expedient. With a direct mandate from the people a government would be enabled to proceed with confidence and energy. . . . But if public opinion, as expressed at the polls, is against active participation in the war, surely even the most extreme imperialist will not say that the government should enforce participation. Even in such a case the will of the majority should govern."

increasing demand for literature that dealt with spiritual topics, and in some cases the sales of these books were rivaling the demand that usually went to some of the newest and most popular fiction.

This feeling is abroad in our own country. It may be more marked in the rural sections than in the cities at present, but it is on the increase. I know that in our section we are glad to see the manner in which The Advertiser is reporting the sermons that are preached on Sunday in some of your churches in London. These are eagerly read, and I have heard them commented upon. There is a demand for more of this kind of material, and newspapers feel it, for they are coming forward to give their readers what they want.

Outlawing Subs

(From the Montreal Star).

IT is only natural that the shocking tragedy that made the giant submarine M-1 the unmarked tomb of 48 noble heroes who died for their country as truly as if we were at war has lighted in Great Britain a mighty flame of anger against a condition of things which makes such weapons necessary.

The policy of Great Britain favors the complete abolition of the submarine. We would never build one of these devil's contrivances if we did not need them to defend ourselves against the submarines of other nations.

The British proposed at the Washington conference to outlaw the submarine. Lady Astor is mistaken in saying that this demand was supported by the American delegates. The British delegates hoped that it would be, knowing the strong humanitarian feeling throughout the United States. But the Americans did nothing of the sort. The general impression was that they rather inclined to support the French veto on this proposal.

HOW a man became his own grandfather is told in the Addict, a London, parish magazine. "I married a widow," says, "and she had a grown-up daughter," he says. "My father visited our house very often, fell in love with my stepdaughter and married her."

"My father then became my son-in-law, and my stepdaughter my mother, because she was my father's wife. Some time afterwards my wife had a son—he was my father's brother-in-law, and my uncle, for he was brother of my stepmother."

"My father's wife—namely, my stepdaughter—also had a son; he was, of course, my brother, at the same time my grandfather, for he was the son of my daughter. My wife was my grandfather, because she was my mother's mother."

"I was my wife's husband and grandfather at the same time, and as the husband of my own grandfather, I was my own grandfather."

JUSTICE DEPT. STATES ACT MISINTERPRETED

Holds Judge Lewis in Error
For Decision in N. Huron Recount.

PRECEDENTS CITED
Judge Submits Complete Finding With Authority For Decision.

By E. C. BUCHANAN,
Special to The Advertiser
by Staff Correspondent.

Ottawa, Nov. 20.—It is learned tonight that the justice department holds that County Judge Lewis is in error and has wrongly interpreted the dominion elections act in his decision on the recount of ballots in North Huron, in which he threw out all the ballots in three polls because the counterfoils had not been detached.

The opinion of the justice department confirms that of Premier King given to your correspondent this evening. Premier King expressed astonishment at the decision of Judge Lewis, and believed it to be contrary to the meaning and intent of the act. Officials and others in Ottawa are of the same mind in the matter.

Premier King was advised by wire that an appeal had been instituted against the decision by the Liberal association of Ontario. This appeal invokes section 71 of the dominion election act, which provides that, except in the Yukon territory, in case of any omission, neglect or refusal of the judge to comply with the provisions of the act in respect of the recount of final addition of the vote, any party aggrieved may within eight days thereafter, make application to a judge of the high court division of the supreme court of Ontario.

Judge's Powers.
The judge to whom the application is made shall, if it appears that there is such omission, neglect or refusal within eight days, and a place for the consideration of such application and requiring the attendance of all parties interested. If it is established that there has been omission, neglect or refusal to carry out the provisions of the act on the part of the county judge, the judge hearing the application shall direct him to proceed with the recount and the final addition of the vote in the proper manner.

The application that has been made in connection with the North Huron decision submits that Judge Lewis did not comply with the provisions of section 62 of the act, which stipulates that at a recount the judge shall have power, where counterfoils, through inadvertence, remain attached to the ballots, to detach them and count the ballots.

Action Illegal Premier States

Canadian Press Despatch.
Ottawa, Nov. 20.—"The decision in North Huron is contrary to the act," declared Premier King in referring to the decision handed out yesterday on the election recount giving the seat for that riding to the Conservative over the Progressive candidate, previously reported to have been elected. "Action will be taken," replied the prime minister, when asked if any steps would be taken in the matter. Later in the evening Premier King stated that he had received advice by telegram that an appeal against the decision on the recount was being entered in the supreme court of Ontario.

the three in which the Progressive candidate, J. W. King, had a majority of 175, on the ground that since all the ballots had the counterfoils attached, this could not be ascribed to inadvertence.

Appeal Is Filed.
The question that is now concerning politicians here is as to whether or not the matter can be decided before Parliament opens.
The appeal has already been filed, the hearing may come on within eight days, but there may be counter-appeals which will hold up the decision. In that case it is not quite clear whether the Conservative Spotton or the Progressive King would be allowed to take the seat in the commons. The chief electoral officer, Colonel O. M. Biggar, states tonight that the returning officer must accept the certificate of the county judge as to the candidate elected, which would seem to indicate that Spotton would be given the seat.

It is recalled, however, that in the case four years ago, in which an appeal taken by the Progressive candidate in East Calgary, J. F. Shaw, against the decision of the judge of recount, was fought out, a different view of the matter was held. In the Calgary case, ballots that had been marked with a pen were ruled out by the county judge, and Captain Shaw appealed against his decision, winning the case before the supreme court.

It is hoped however, that in the North Huron case, the final decision can be reached before parliament meets.

JUDE LEWIS' FINDING.
Judge E. N. Lewis of Goderich last night submitted his complete finding in the North Huron case to the Advertiser. The judgment follows:
The returning officer's first certificate states that King received 5,342 votes; Spotton 5,173 votes; Total 10,515 votes.
"I personally handled and recounted all of said votes, except those of three polls hereafter referred to, and I am indebted to the two senior counsel, who were in the final argument, and to the two junior counsel, who were acting all the way through,

for their assistance in my arduous task, I commend them for the able and fair manner in which they conducted their work throughout.

"There were about 140 ballots from 45 polls objected to and laid aside for later consideration. I have allowed and counted all but five of these ballots. I have sealed up all of same, in separate envelopes for their respective polls. Scattered among these ballots objected to were a number with counterfoils on. These ballots, I found came under sec. 62, ss. 3, of the dominion election act, and I allow same, they being otherwise in proper form. These I consider to have the counterfoils left on same by inadvertence.

Votes Questioned.
"On opening the packets, said by D. R. O.'s endorsement on same to contain the following votes, viz.:
Poll No. 2—Grey...for King...58
for Spotton...24
Poll No. 6—Grey...for King...90
for Spotton...39
Poll No. 7—Ashfield...for King...32 making for King 260 votes; for Spot-ton 82 votes; an aggregate total of 342 votes. I found that all the ballots had their counterfoils attached. At once, without looking at same, or allowing same to be looked at, except sufficiently to assure myself and counsel for the candidates, what they were, I sealed same up again, and reserved same for further consideration.

"Argument of counsel was delivered on Nov. 16, 1925.
Cites Precedents.
"In forming the conclusion that I have reached as to these three polls, and ballots therein, I have consulted a great many authorities, and especially refer to the judgment of Justices Langton, Duff, Anglin, Brodeur and Mignault, of the Supreme Court in the Calgary west election case, vol.

64, page 235, of Canada Supreme Court reports. This report says on page 254:

"At this late day, it is strange that citizens should not be familiar with the manner of voting, and however regrettable it may be that the will of the majority should not prevail, still that must be expressed in the required manner, otherwise it is of no effect." Also, South Oxford case, appeal division, Ontario supreme court, vol. 32, page 7, of the Ontario law reports. Justice Clute delivered justice says:

"The object of the act is to secure complete secrecy in voting. The counterfoil is destroyed as soon as the deputy returning officer identifies the number on it with the number opposite the voter's name. The clause requiring the official stamp prevents fraud and gives security to those having the right to vote, by ensuring the use only of ballots issued by the returning officer, the identity of which shall be certified by the official seal, furnished by the clerk of the crown in chancery stamped on each ballot.

"Permit ballot papers, not so stamped to be used, would in the long run, destroy the secrecy approved by Lord Blackburn in the Young case, 'in effect be repealing the act of parliament,' and would deprive the public of that protection, which parliament intended to secure for them."

In Owen Sound case, Ontario law reports, vol. 27, page 230, Justice Lennox says:
"Secrecy is now a basic principle of our municipal voting; and, if it is important in a municipal contest, it is vital in a vote upon a question of public policy, such as this—it is the statutory method that gives meaning and validity to the vote."

Irregularities at Polls.
"I also refer to South Waterloo provincial election, vol. 55, Ontario law reports, 324, page 230. Here it says that where irregularities at the polls are traceable to oversight or to mistake, or downright carelessness, or ignorance of the officers responsible, it is impossible to say that the election was conducted in accordance with the principles laid down in the act.

"In the Windsor case, 924, Ontario law reports, vol. 55, page 288, Justice Logie says:

"If the election was not conducted in accordance with the principles laid down in the act, the saving clause does not apply and the election must be voided."

"Justice Strong, in the Haldimand case, Supreme Court of Canada, vol.
15, page 515, says:

"I hold secrecy to be imposed as an absolute rule of public policy, and that it cannot be waived."

Secrecy Necessary.
"My own opinion is, that secrecy is the basic principle of the act and that the loss is vital, if it is not present.
Secrecy is fundamental and of the first necessity, and the very life and meaning of the act."

"The saving clause in sec. 62, ss.
3, is governed by the word 'inad-vertence,' and I interpret this clause to mean that if a D. R. O. unwittingly, by mistake, or through carelessness or ignorance, leaves the whole poll of ballots, with the counterfoils on.

"I, accordingly, do not count the ballots for the said three polls, and I leave same sealed up, as above stated.

"As one of the principal points involved was the non-compliance of three returning officers, with the requirements of the statutes there-should be no basis to either party

Special to The Advertiser.
Toronto, Nov. 19.—Sixty original inhabitants of Canada left by C. N. R. tonight on their first trip overseas to England, and incidentally their new and permanent home.

They were somewhat of a mixed crowd and included Mr. and Mrs.
Bear and their family of 12 little bears of different ages. Mr. and Mrs.
Porcupine and eight children, as well as six raccoons, five coyotes, 14 chipmunks and one weasel. The animals were shipped from Toronto zoo to private dealers in London.

APPEAL IS ALLOWED.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Toronto, Nov. 20.—The second divisional court at Osgoode Hall this afternoon allowed the appeal of Samuel McBride from the decision of Mr. Justice Lennox dismissing his action against the Ontario Jockey Club, Limited, for an order to compel the organization to register him as a shareholder. The appeal court held that a company incorporated under the Ontario companies' act could not validly pass a bylaw preventing a shareholder from transferring his stock as he sees fit. It was held that no case had been made for damage.

ONE MAN KILLED IN DETROIT RAID

Five Bandits Get $18,000 in Swag On Offices of Ainsworth Company.

Associated Press Despatch.
Detroit, Mich., Nov. 20.—A gang of five men tonight obtained $18,000 at the Ainsworth Manufacturing Company offices after a fight with two express messengers, one of whom was killed and the other injured.

Ross Loney, 30, seriously wounded when they returned the fire of the robbers, who surprised them as they entered the office building with the payroll.

A fusillade greeted the two messengers as they entered the doorway, and one of the bandits jerked the satchel from their hands and fled with two companions toward the street.

Both Loney and Radloff fired several times without effect and fell the next minute, the victims of the aim of another member of the gang, who fired both barrels of a saved-off shotgun. Loney was instantly killed.

Lonesome Man Takes Elephant

Boston Man Charged With Theft, Has Novel Excuse.

Special to The Advertiser.
Boston, Nov. 20.—"Charged with stealing one elephant valued at $8," read Clerk James Milward in calling the case of James Fahey in district court today.

"What?" exclaimed Judge Michael Murray, "an elephant, you say?"
"Yes, sir," the clerk insisted, "one elephant."

Then the clerk suddenly discovered the scene of the crime was a department store, not a circus, and said:

"It was a toy elephant, your honor."

"What was the motive?" asked the judge of the defendant.

"Well," replied Fahey, "I was hungry and lonesome and the elephant looked hungry and lonesome, so I took it."

"Ten dollars," said the judge.
Fahey paid.

His right arm crippled, and with another slug through his chest, Rad-loff continued firing at the fleeing men with the revolver held in his

White Duck Trousers and Cubical Puck No Longer Seen, But Game Seems Improved.

ADVANCE IN LONDON

by JIM BURNS.

The drop of the puck, the scramble for possession, the lithe bodies as they whirl up the ice, dodging, passing and re-passing; the twang of the net as the disc is cannon-balled past the discomfited, sprawling goalie; then the wild, maniacal cheers of the crowd.

That's hockey, Canada's national game. Historians are said to differ considerably over the place in which the great Caesar first saw the light of day, and similarly in respect to the birthplace of the dominion's sport, hockey.

There may be some who claim sundry and divers places as being the authentic spot or locality. Whatever measure of merit the claims of other places may have, it is generally admitted and has been substantially proven that the actual birthplace of ice artistry was in the city of Kingston in the year 1888.

the pied piper of hockey, and former Toronto Aura Lee coach, who is putting the local seniors through their paces, and who is responsible for the formation of the London Junior hockey association.

The first actual game that there is any record of took place in Captain Dix's rink, located on the harbor mouth in front of the city buildings, Kingston. The game was played between teams representing Queen's university and the Royal military college.

The players wore long white duck trousers and used a set of sticks which had been borrowed from an eastern firm, said sticks being expressed back to the company after the game. The rink, which was intended for skating purposes only, had a handstand erected in the center, and when a player dashed up the ice he was greatly assisted in his attack by his ability to dodge around the stand while en route. A solid rubber ball, which had been cut into a square, was utilized as a puck.

Rinks Too Few Now.
In the last few years, hockey has received a tremendous impetus. So great is the interest shown that there is not a sufficient number of rinks to accommodate the many teams engaging in this sport and present-day facilities are inadequate to cope with the ever-increasing crowds. Within a few years, hockey will be to Canada what association football is to Great Britain and what baseball is to the United States. In fact, the time is not far off when a much larger number of teams, both amateur and professional, will be seen playing on artificial ice.

Even in the district surrounding London, the growth can be seen. London has an arena, so has Stratford, and both cities are able to boast strong senior O. H. A. teams as well as a great number of hockey players that are in the making. Development of the game stands out like a wart on a flapper's nose, and the above prediction that comes from Captain Jimmy Sutherland, past president of the Canadian amateur hockey association appears to be well founded.

Hockey is popular for many reasons, but the main one is that it is the game for the healthy man. In addition to physical skill required in skating and stick-handling, speed, accuracy, endurance, strength and hardiness or ability to take bumps and bad falls without a whimper are of great value.

The finished player keeps his temper, has a clear head and uses good judgment. The youngster, early in his experience as a team member, learns the value of co-operation with others in developing team play, obedience to the team captain and to officials in charge of the game.

How Battles Are Won.
Down through the ages, sport has held a prominent part in the life and success of nations. It is because of this that the Duke of Wellington once said: "The battle of Waterloo was won on the playing fields of Eton." Sport brings out all that is good in a man and makes for fair, clean and gentlemanly competition in real life as well as in the athletic arena.

And so it is not extraordinary that Canadians, who love the thrill of physical contact and the joys of fair battle, should lead all others in introducing, even as late as the nineteenth century, the greatest of all spectacular games. For Canada claims the fascinating winter sport as its own invention. It was in this country that the sport was born and it is here that the leading players have been, and will continue to be developed.

So well has hockey been introduced in foreign lands that it has now become a world-wide competition, not a fly-by-night affair, but a sport that promises to hold its place in the centuries to come. Twice the world's championship has been competed for at the Olympic games, and just as many times have Canada's representatives triumphed.

In 1920, the Winnipeg Falcons swept aside all opposition at the historic city of Antwerp, defeating the United States team in the final 2 to 0. In 1924, the Canadians, made up for the most part by Toronto Granites, made even a better impression and whipped the United States sextet in the final with a 6 to 1 score at Chamonix in the French Alps.

regarded as any out-of-the-ordinary events by Canadian fans, who know that rival countries have not perfected the sport to such an extent that they can successfully compete against the home of hockey. It is true that the game had made wonderful strides in the United States, but it is also true that the vast majority of the players in the progressive land to the south of us are Canadians. In time the United States will rise up as a whole to challenge the supremacy of Canadian teams. They have partially started by entering three teams in the National hockey league, and the time when wholesale competition will be a reality is eagerly looked forward to by Canadians, who welcome international tests of strength.

For success in hockey, the development of younger players is essential, and London has finally started off on the right foot. Bill Marsden, known as the maker of hockey champions and the pied piper of the game, is now the leading light in London sport circles.

The former Aura Lee coach, as well as giving the city one of the strongest prospects in the senior field, is responsible for the junior hockey association, a league especially organized to develop school boys, which sprung into being this season.

Last year there was a junior league, but it was run by the players and was anything but satisfactory. They just played the game as they knew how and had no one to point out their little mistakes. This year it is different.

Every night the junior teams are on the ice Marsden is there picking out material for a junior O. H. A. team. He already has a squad of fourteen working out under his supervision, and London's hockey future is a bright one.

Higgledy Piggledy, My Fat Pheasant

GEORGE VIVIAN
The FAMOUS TRAP SHOT, AN ARDENT PHEASANT HUNTER

Ten Thousand Guns Cut Loose in the One-Day Pheasant-Shooting Season in Niagara Peninsula—Fields, Orchards and Barnyards Swarm With Hunters—and From Every Ditch Pheasants Leap

By GREGORY CLARK

WHURRUP! Up leaps a pheasant out of the stubble field.

BANG! Bang! Bang! BANG! Bang! Thirty men shoot at it as it skims low over two fields.

It falls! Fifty men claim it! "Mine!" "My bird!"

"Sorry, mine, I think!" "Hyah! Thass my bird, there!" Whoever gets to it first keeps it.

It's the one day open season for pheasant in the counties of Lincoln and Welland in the Niagara Peninsula, Ontario.

For three hundred and sixty-four days of the year, the English ring-necked pheasant, which has been successfully transplanted to Canadian soil, is a beautiful barnyard fowl throughout the fruit belt, half time, to be seen all summer long in every grape-garden and every orchard, a thing of gold and bronze and metallic green. For three hundred and sixty-four days a year, it is to be seen running across roads in front of your car, skimming on race-horse legs along the ditches and furrows, flying like a bullet, its low, floating, sudden-dropping flight, amid the orchards and the corn.

Then—the one day out of the three sixty-five!

And in the neighborhood of ten thousand guns swarm out into the two counties which the government throws open for the day—and from dawn unto dark, the pheasant believes the end of the world to have come.

This is not woods shooting. It is field shooting, right out in the open farms, grape-arbors and orchards of the famous fruit belt. In parties of from two to eight men, the hunters deploy across the fields, thirty yards apart, shot guns held at the ready. And from every ditch and fence the pheasants leap.

In every field, hunters. As dawn breaks, the earth seems to be fairly crawling with gunners. And it sounds like the battle of Amiens.

Each gunner is allowed five cock pheasants for the day. Hen pheasants are protected by law, and a fine of $50 is set for the man caught with a hen pheasant. It is estimated that this army of gunners that invades the peaceful fruit belt for the day kills about five thousand birds.

It is an invasion, nothing else. Every farmer is out. Every city, town and village turns out its full quota of men and boys and dogs. St. Catharines is in the heart of the belt, and there is scarcely a man to be found in that city by mid-afternoon of the day. And motor cars from far and wide bring sportsmen, so that the highways and side roads of the counties are lined with autos abandoned while the hunters stalk the barnyards.

World's Most Elusive Birds

ACTUALLY, the barnyards. There is no set plan. The way the pheasant is hunted in Old England is by means of the drive. The gentry stand or sit behind coverts or butts, and the yokels in a line walk through the fields, scaring the pheasants down wind. As they cross over, the gentry rise to their feet and shoot them.

It is far different in the Peninsula. It is higgledy-piggledy. You come along the road, in your car or buggy or on your bicycle, and seeing an expanse of stubble field and orchard fairly free of hunters, say, only twenty being in view, you dismount and start to walk the fields. The pheasants are everywhere and anywhere. Their favorite hide is in stubble and weed fields and in the rows of weeds along the fence bottoms.

Before you have gone the length of one field, you have either met, passed through, crossed or find yourself following another gang of hunters. You come to a corn field full of stooked corn stalks. Here is a likely place. Treading soft and pretty, bent forward, gun ready, you begin to sneak. Suddenly you round a corn stook and come face to face with another huntsman, also bent over, gun forward and eyes gleaming. You both blush, lower your gun muzzles and pass over. It is like a huge, crazy cotillion. Crossing and recrossing. You would marvel that any pheasants get by at all.

But of course they do get by. A pheasant is about the most elusive bird that flies. Plenty of men who have seen them fly but have never put a gun at them think they are easy. The secret is the pheasant's build and method of flying. A pheasant is a big bird, big as a game chicken, a fine specimen weighing three and a half pounds, with short rounded wings and a long, streamer tail. When it leaps up with a sudden whistling whirr, its wings beating rapidly, it appears to be a big bird winging heavily and not very fast. It is when you lay your bead on him that you find how really fast he is going. It is safe to say that most men who got their first pheasant last Saturday—which was the one open day—fired thirty shots to get them. And the average would be far greater than that. Hundreds and hundreds must have fired a score or more of times and got nothing at all.

For the pheasant is running bird as well as a flying bird. Practically none of them is shot on the ground. It is a hundred per cent. wing shooting. Despite his size, a cock pheasant can hide in a stubble field and cross it at a race horse gallop, without ever being seen.

Shortly after sun up, the air was already torn by gunfire. And by that time, the pheasants knew that the bad day for them had come. They were wild as partridges. They flew at the slightest warning and had a smart eye for the hunter, curving beautifully away. The average bird, when being stalked across a field, jumped at something beyond thirty yards.

You would see a cock bird—they don't fly high, twenty feet or less would be the average height they attain to in any one flight—you would see the cock bird come sailing down and alight in the field ahead of you. You would hasten to that field and scramble over the barb wire fence—and there is more barb wire in the Niagara Peninsula than in the Hindenburg line—and begin to stalk him where he dropped. But the pheasant, immediately on droppings, begins to run. And he runs in a diagonal line to the opposite end of the field into which he dropped. You stalk the whole field, and when you reach the far end, a volley of shots behind you informs you that your bird has been jumped two hundred yards away by another gang of gunners who came upon him unexpectedly.

It sounds dangerous. You would think the air would be full of flying shot. But a shotgun shoots only a short distance, and the scattered shot falls spent. Only one accident was reported from last Saturday, out of the ten thousand hunters who were out.

The only danger is the danger of a fight with somebody over whose bird it is—yours or his.

One Dog Could Find Them

GUNS of every description, from pee-wee .410 squirrel guns up to ten gauge goose guns. Even on occasion twenty-two rifles came into action, and then you would hear a roar. It would usually be a small boy with a twenty-two and when the little rifle squeaked men from every side would let out a yell—"Hey! Get out of this!" And the little fellow would have to scamper for his life to the nearest road. No rifles in a place like that.

And dogs—dogs of every description from a Pom to a bloodhound out helping to stir up pheasants. Of course the average mutt dog is the most helpless thing in the world for pheasants. If he has enough brains or training to know what it is he is after, he usually runs wild and chases up the hot trail of a racing pheasant only to put him up on the wing a hundred yards away from his master and fair game for half a dozen other gangs of hunters in the next three fields.

But we saw one little dog—His name is Nitsdale Rab, and he is a Scottish field trial champion. He is a little black and white Springer spaniel, and he is one fine little sportsman.

His master goes into the field, and Rab runs with high head and excited tail, at his heels.

"All right," says his master. "Go on." Rab with a little leap of joy races ahead, in a circle thirty yards across, with his master at one edge of it and his furthest run at the other. A whistle from his master, as he reaches the thirty yard run, turns him and, nose to the ground, he races back to his boss. Out again he goes, the master steadily walking forward, gun ready, while Nitsdale Rab continues to circle out thirty yards and back, to right, to left and to centre. It is as perfect a piece of work as you could ever see.

Half way across the field, Rab begins to wriggle all over. His nose is very close to the ground. The master holds his gun forward and ready.

"Put him up," calls the master, softly. And suddenly, from a few feet in front of Rab, a pheasant rockets up.

"Hup!" cries the master. Rab squats flat.

patient, remarked with a sincerity that gripped the onlookers:

"The only thing we can do is to pray for you. And that we shall do."

"And me, too," another woman was heard to murmur, while one of the men in the group, in a voice that indicated he was feeling deeply, remarked:

Not What He Expected

THE small boy was watching the vicar, who was working in his shirt-sleeves in the garden, making a fence.

Presently the vicar looked up at him and smiled.

"Ah, Tommy," he said, "trying to pick up a few hints so that you may become a carpenter?"

"No," replied the boy; "I'm waiting to hear what a clergyman says when he hits his thumb with a hammer."

On the Station Platform

By W. L. EDMONDS

TOURISTS entraining at Souris, Prince Edward Island, the other day were witnesses of a scene that both excited their sympathy and turned their thoughts God-ward.

Lying upon an improvised stretcher, preparatory to being placed on board the outgoing train, was the pain-wracked body of a woman that had evidently long since passed the age of "three score and ten." Standing by in shirt sleeves, his bent and emaciated body leaning heavily upon a rubber-tipped walking-stick, was the aged husband—a pathetic figure. His wife was being conveyed to a hospital in Charlottetown, and he had hobbled with difficulty to the station platform for what, judging from the worried expression carried by his sallow features, he feared might be the final farewell.

And just before the stretcher, with its aged occupant, was placed in one of the cars two black-robed sisters quietly approached, asked an attendant the nature of the illness, and then one of them, after gently stroking the brow of the patient, remarked with a sincerity that gripped the onlookers:

"And me, too," another woman was heard to murmur, while one of the men in the group, in a voice that indicated he was feeling deeply, remarked:

Not What He Expected

THE small boy was watching the vicar, who was working in his shirt-sleeves in the garden, making a fence.

Presently the vicar looked up at him and smiled.

"Ah, Tommy," he said, "trying to pick up a few hints so that you may become a carpenter?"

"No," replied the boy; "I'm waiting to hear what a clergyman says when he hits his thumb with a hammer."

Bang! The pheasant falls. Rab never budes. "Fetch!" calls the master.

And Rab like a bullet races to the pheasant. He turns it carefully with his nose until it lies back up. Then he picks it daintily in his mouth by its closed wings and shoulders. He lays it at his master's feet, practically untouched.

Nitsdale Rab ran from dawn until dark and never quit for one moment. He put up hundreds of pheasants. His master took more joy out of Rab and his magnificent performance than in the shooting. Dozens of hunters seeing him forgot their hunting and followed just to see him work.

After lunch, when those who couldn't get off for the morning began to swarm, a new ferocity came into the bawling and whacking of guns far and near. And by mid day the pheasants were wild and shy, preferring to run than to fly. And the mysterious way a big pheasant can light in a stubble field and disappear, to appear again two hundred yards away in a minute, is one of nature's first rate phenomena.

Pheasants Came From England

BOYS and old men have their share. One father proudly displayed two fine cocks shot by his fourteen-year-old son. We met one old man surely all of eighty years, slowly and carefully picking his way through a grape arbor, walking on a stick and carrying his twelve bore over his shoulder. He was deaf.

"Any luck?" "No, not yet," replied the old fellow, jovially. "But I always get my bird!"

He went and sat down in a fence corner where he could watch three fields for strays coming his way.

As far as exercise is concerned, it is a gruelling day. The November fields are wet and muddy. Fences are to be negotiated at every turn. Ploughed fields to be waded across. There are twenty thousand stiff and sore legs all this week in southwestern Ontario.

So plentiful are the birds, it inspires the thought that in some future day, when the duck and partridge are practically extinct, this imported English pheasant may be the only game bird left. Ontario. For with a short season and a strict limit, with the way they are becoming acclimated, the pheasant seems to have become a native for keeps.

The first pheasants were introduced into the Peninsula by an Englishman named Furminger, whose sons are amongst the best shots in the Peninsula to-day. Mr. Furminger brought out the parent birds and released them. Then when they began to flourish, Mr. Welland Woodruff, M. P., continued the good work by planting eggs in several parts of the Peninsula, about 1908 and later. The birds have flourished marvelously since, and this is the fourth year the government has permitted the shooting of them.

The finest sportsmen of the whole show, however, are the fruit farmers of Welland and Lincoln, who permit these hordes of hunters to swarm over their fields and orchards and grape arbors and fences, without one word of protest. It is everybody's day that one day. The hunters come right through the private yards of the residents of the country, and those fine sportsmen just grin and bear it.

One old fellow who has big orchards three miles south of St. Kitts stood with his gun for-bidding all to enter his land. Scores of pheasants found refuge there.

"Well," said one of the hunters, "you're a genial old sport, ain't you? I hope your apples freeze and your grapes all turn sour, next season."

One city sport had the misfortune to shoot a perfectly good Red Minorca hen. He saw what he thought was a pheasant in the early morning light, and took a crack at it. When he went over to pick it up, the expiring hen turned an astounded eye up to him. For though hens live in constant knowledge of their final fate, they expect the ritual of the barnyard execution and not a sudden thunder out in the thistles.

This gunner paid for the hen.

And as far as the ten thousand pheasant hunters are concerned, they say or should say, each and every one, to the farmers of the Peninsula—

"May your orchards and vines be fruitful and we will all help to create your market by consuming a hundred per cent. Canadian fruit. For you have given us a gorgeous day of fun and excitement."

JUST A LITTLE IDYL

THE sunset sky is waning green;
The twilight's sweet creases Steals soft on the mysterious scene;
The pale stars evanesce;
Though just what evanescence may mean
I know not, I confess.

The light is on the march, my sweet (Love, to my love give heed);
Down from the hills with rhythmic beat,
Swift through the silent mead;
The gibbous moon rolls at its feet—
Why gibbous? Why, indeed!

Thine eyes are pools of darkling sky
When wan suns linger late;
Thy voice the twilight's ecstasy
Where love lies long in wait;
Pale gales are on thy cheek—though why
I'm not prepared to state.

Thy face, thy lips, thy windblown hair
Are like, my love divine,
A star (as Wordsworth said) when there Is only one to shine;
Though why one star should be so fair
Is his affair, not mine.

My love is like the dawn that wakes
He flowers on the lea;
Or like the swift, fair wind that takes
The tall ships out to sea.
Just take your choice, my dear, it makes No difference to me.

And if your love for me floats free
Like banners swift unfurled;
Or wheels like scaterers over the sea
Upon the storm-wind hurled, We'll tell some better bard than we
And he can tell the world.

REV. ROBT. NORWOOD.

former Londoner, whose contributions to literature have attracted wide attention.

of this country the fact that Canada has a great deal of worthy literary talent of its own, and that Canadian writers in the various fields of literature deserve the patronage and support of their own fellow-countrymen.

The old proverb about a prophet not being without honor save in his own country, has, alas, proven only too true in the case of Canadian authors of bygone days, but this feeling is rapidly giving place to one of genuine pride in Canadian achievements in the literary field, and the work of Canadian writers is now in demand at public libraries and in bookshops the whole year round.

Librarian R. E. Crouch, of the London public library, reports that the year just closing has seen a notable increase in the production of works of merit by Canadians on Canadian themes. They are being read, too.

There is a steadily increasing demand for Canadian literature, showing, in the opinion of Mr. Crouch, that Canadians are becoming more appreciative of the fact that their country is now developing a distinctive type of literature.

Canada is Developing. "Canada has developed a distinctive type of art," said Mr. Crouch, "and is also developing a distinctive type of literature which is replete with Canadian scenery, and with the experiences and thoughts of Canadian people."

"One of the developments of the past year," he continued, "has been the marked increase in the treatment of purely Canadian problems by Canadian writers in the social, economic, religious and even in the historic field. Much literature of this type is now coming out, including some good treatises in practical medicine. All of them are being widely read to judge by the demand we experience here."

Mr. Crouch very kindly conducted a brief tour of the stockroom at the library for a survey of books bearing the names of Canadian authors. Brief and cursory as such an examination must necessarily be, it was astonishing to note how many and varied have been Canadian contributions to current literature.

The year just passing has seen some notable examples particularly of the type of book in which Canada's scenic beauties form an excellent background. One book of this character which is attracting much attention is Beautiful Canada, by Heyward. Another notable production of the year was a story of Quebec life, Chez Nous, by Judge Rivard.

The novel, Wild Geese, which recently won a prize of $25,000, was written by a Canadian, Martha Ostenso.

London Writers. London and the surrounding district has been prolific in the number of writers which it has given to the field of Canadian literature. One of these who have attained outstanding success in the present season is Adrian Macdonald, a London boy who received his public and high school education in this city. His book, Canadian Portraits, is a series of biographical sketches of outstanding Canadians in many spheres of activity. Admirably written, his sketches are just what their title implies, portraits of the originals which give the reader an accurate picture of the personalities whose genius contributed so much to the making of Canada.

Mr. Macdonald will be remembered by many former pupils at the London collegiate where his scholastic prowess not less than his scholastic attainments won him recognition and popularity.

Another former London resident whose literary abilities are attracting increasing attention in the United States, is Rev. Dr. Robert Norwood, now rector of a large church in New York. Mr. Norwood continues to produce poetry of the highest quality besides occasional dramatic productions.

Sage's Works Popular. Since his lamented demise in a Victoria hospital, (it seems only a few months ago), the works of Peter MacArthur, the "Sage of Elfrid," have steadily increased in popular favor and are in great demand at the local library.

Another great loss to Canadian literature was the death this year of

BABY'S OWN TABLETS ARE OF GREAT VALUE

To All Mothers Having Young Children in the Home

No other medicine is of such aid to mothers of young children as is Baby's Own Tablets. The Tablets are the very best medicine a mother can give her little ones during the dreaded teething time because they regulate the stomach and bowels and thus drive out constipation and indigestion; prevent colic and diarrhoea and break up colds and simple fevers.

Concerning Baby's Own Tablets, Mrs. John A. Patterson, Scotch Village, N.S., says: "I have six children, and all the medicine they ever get is Baby's Own Tablets. I would use nothing else for them and can strongly recommend the Tablets to all other mothers."

Baby's Own Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.—Adv.

Nora Holland, recently a visitor to London, whom critics all agree was a poetess of rare promise.

Harvey O'Higgins, a former London boy, is achieving fame as a writer of fiction, and there are many others whose work is adding lustre to London's reputation as a home for Canadian writers. Among these might be mentioned Miss Beatrice Taylor, and Mrs. James Thorburn, (Amy Campbell), whose short story Elsie Has Loveliness to Sell, won a prize of $200 this summer.

From a sick bed in Queen Alexandra sanatorium, C. M. Freeman, better known to Londoners as Doc Pen, continues to make literary contributions which are attracting wide attention.

In the wider field of Canadian literature one meets with such names as Thomas O'Hagan, R. J. Stead, Robert Watson, and Miss E. A. Wilson, all poets of more than ordinary distinction, not to mention such well known poets as Bliss Carman, Charles Mair and others.

Charles G. D. Roberts, who first gave the world psychological interpretation of animal life in story form, is still contributing to Canadian literature. His work is followed in the person of Arthur Hemling, Frank L. Packard of Montreal continues to write detective stories which are widely read, while Stephen Leacock maintains his place as Canada's premier humorist. Some very charming contributions have recently been made by E. Harrington, a Vancouver lady.

Book of Folk Songs. A notable contribution of the year was a book entitled Folk Songs of French Canada by Marius Barbeau and Edward Sapir. A book of verse, My Rose, by Euphemia McLeod has also been highly praised, while a fiction story by John Middleton, Sea Dogs and Men At Arms, has given pleasure to many Canadian readers.

To the student desiring information on Canadian literature is recommended a book which appeared a little over a year ago entitled Headwaters of Canadian Literature, by

This book, to quote its preface, "avoids the dictionary type of literary history; it narrows the definition of 'Canadian'"; it suggests a new criterion for judging the success of a Canadian book; it tries to establish a relationship between the growth of rational, at first, provincial, self-consciousness and the production of books; and it emphasizes the importance of Canadian periodicals in the different literary movements."

Whether or not Canada has produced literature in the truest sense is a question which has been long and hotly debated. That the question has been raised at all is a sign, in this writer's opinion, that the young nation has a soul which is striving to articulate.

"On the surface though Canada be prosaic and commonplace," he says, "there is deep down in the nation's heart a capacity for the ideal. Literature is the voice of a people. Through its literature, the life, the soul of a people may be known. And though it is vain to look for a Canadian Charles Dickens or a Canadian Tennyson, work of this rare kind has been written in Canada, of Canada, by brilliant Canadians. It is a question of degree, not of kind."

A Long list of Names. The volume deals in some detail with the work of such Canadian writers as Robert Service, W. Wilfred Campbell, Bliss Carman, Ralph Connor, (who incidentally is a visitor to London this week, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Dr. D. C. Macgregor, the latter of whom has made some notable contributions to Canadian fiction under the nom-de-plume of Marion Keith), Octavo Cremazie, Willis Gray Drummond, Sara Jeanette Duncan, Louis Frechette, Thomas Chandler Halliburton, Joseph Howe, Rev. Robert Knowles, Archibald Lampman, Stephen Leacock, Col. John McCrae, Gilbert Parker, Marjorie L. C. Pickthall, Goldwin Smith, Charles G. D. Roberts, Arthur Stringer, Duncan Campbell Scott, Prof. G. M. Wrong, and a score of others.

The writer sums up the literary achievements of Canadians as follows: "In the literature of power Canada has repeated the history of all primitive peoples. Poetry has come first. Prose is a late development. The only native prose fiction worth considering is that of the very latest period. Most of it shows the weakness of the amateur. The novelists do not speak for Canada as the poets do. Frechette has voiced the aspirations of his province; Roberts, the aspirations of Canada. The absolute achievement of our true poets, Cremazie, Lampman, Carman, Morin, Pickthall is far higher than the best work of our novelists." A remarkable feature of Canadian literature, the writer finds, is the popularity of Canadian authors in their own country. "Being interpreted," he says, "this phenomenon means that the Canadian public is interested in itself and is able and willing to buy home-grown books." "It also implies a rapid and widespread literary cultivation and genuine interest in the world of letters. A Canadian public has been formed which is ready to welcome the work of Canadians and is becoming more and more competent to judge that work. Canadian writers need no longer exile themselves abroad or look first for a market south of the border. Nor does a sweeping, popular success mean that Canada cannot appreciate a pure and high idealism in literature. It is with the idea of developing and fostering such ideals that Canadian Book Week has been instituted, and will be more widely observed this year than ever before.

A Tree that Grows Chocolate Bars

Nature's Wonder and Mystery

There is something very strange about this tree. It grows buds, fruit and flowers all the year round and all at the same time. The Indians used to gather the pods that grow on it; split them open; take out the beans; and, after drying them in the sun, they ate them just as you would eat the chocolate bar sold in stores.

268 years ago there appeared this advertisement in an English newspaper called the "Public Advertiser."

"In Bishopsgate Street, in Queen's Head Alley, at a Frenchman's house, is an excellent West Indian drink called Chocolate, to be sold, where you may have it ready at any time, and also unmade at reasonable rates."

From this primitive beginning, "The Book of Knowledge" tells us the whole wonderful story; and, with a series of interesting pictures, it takes us through every step in the development of this great industry. Boys and girls at school find stories and pictures such as these just as delightful as the dainty confection itself. "The Book of Knowledge" makes every school subject so simple and interesting that learning becomes a joy. The child is being delightfully entertained while very important knowledge is being stored up in his mind.

Sir Arthur Currie, Principal McGill University says—

Of the queens who have graced the pages of English history one will ever stand alone in the mellow light of tragic romance. And her descendant through three hundred years will ever be remembered as one of the most beautiful and queenly of the consorts of our kings.

Mary, Queen of Scots, and Alexandra, sea king's daughter from over the seas, and beloved consort of Edward the peacemaker, are two of the most picturesque figures in the history of England's royal family. The ill-fated Mary Stuart passed out a martyr to the jealousy of Elizabeth. Alexandra had died in peace, mourned by a great empire, leaving the story of her life as a lasting example for her successors.

The fate of the former was the penalty for her beauty as much as of her ancestry, and it was beauty of character as well as of feature that gave to the latter her fair fame, and established her within the hearts of her husband's people.

Princess Alexandra Caroline Marie Charlotte Louise Julia, eldest daughter of King Christian IX. of Denmark, was born at the Gule Palace, Copenhagen, on December 1, 1844. It was said that her parents' marriage was a love match, certain it is that the princess of Denmark was a girl of love and care of a true mother on the children that were born to the royal couple. A chronicle of the time says: "She paid the greatest attention to the education of her children, and was careful, while having them instructed in all the graces and accomplishments befitting their position, to inculcate in them the love of God, the love of their fellow creatures, and the love of family and home."

Loved By English People.

Of her childhood one story may be told that to-day must have a real significance. With her two sisters she was sitting in a sunlit glade of Bernstorf Forest, near her home. "I should like to have power and influence, in order that I might do much good," wished Princess Dagmar, who afterwards became Empress of Russia and mother of the ill-fated Nicholas. "I would like to be clever and accomplished," sighed the Princess Thyra, later the Duchess of Cumberland, and the future Queen of England, heroine of the Primrose Day in London, recipient of a great city's annual demonstration of heart whole affection, wistfully confessed: "I would like above all things to be loved." And above all things was she loved by the English people.

They fell in love with the fair princess who stepped on to their shores in March, 1863, as the bride of the Prince of Wales. She retained that first hold on their affections to the end.

It was not until the princess was eight years of age that her father became heir to the Danish throne. In 1858 the Times, discussing the eventual marriage of the Prince of Wales, named the Princess Alexandra as amongst those from whom his bride would surely be chosen. The young couple met for the first time on September 24 in the ancient cathedral of Speyer and by a strange chance at the very foot of the altar. A romantic story is told of the discovery by the prince whilst an undergraduate at Cambridge of a photograph of the beautiful princess which aroused his interest. The meeting resulted, it is said, from his expressed wish to see the living reality that appeared so fair in the portrait.

Second Danish Conquest

Judging from portraits taken at the time of her marriage, it is not hard to believe that Prince Edward was in truth in love with his royal bride. The betrothal was formally announced on September 9, 1862. The reception accorded the announcement at the time is well indicated by an extract of a contemporary newspaper. "The first Danish conquest came with fire and sword; this one comes with the mightier power of love."

Of the reception of the princess in that never before or since was there such a spontaneous demonstration which in fact reached such a pitch of enthusiasm that it soon appeared "at there was an utter lack of adequate organization to meet the huge crowds that gathered. The police, it is said, were powerless, and the masses surged about the carriage, impeding its progress, and endangering the lives of many who were lifted off their feet in the crush. At one point even a man became caught in one of the wheels of the carriage and for a moment the young princess lost her poise, but as the chroniclers say, "a reassuring word from the Prince of Wales restored her equilibrium."

KEPT EARLY STYLES

Went Home to Denmark Every Year to Scenes of Her Childhood

Since the day that she first set foot on British soil, Alexandra was probably the most popular figure of the Royal family.

"Magnetic charm is her chief characteristic," wrote one of her biographers, "that indefinable something that is not beauty, though beauty so helps in making it; that is not merely kindness and benignant graciousness, though without these it cannot exist; that is certainly not intellect, though it includes a fine tact that belongs to the higher mental faculties; but that is a combination of so many gifts and graces that it can be neither defined nor taught. This charm Alexandra has in full measure."

Her life was not always smooth and strewn with roses, but it was pure as crystal. She was a good woman in every sense of the term, devoted to her husband and family, and full of practical sympathy for human suffering in every form.

Princess Alexandra was ten years old when she made her first visit to London as the guest of the Duchess of Cambridge. On that occasion the princess obtained her first glimpse of royal splendor when she attended a party given by the late Queen Victoria at Buckingham Palace. Although the duchess's daughter, Mary, was some years older than Princess Alexandra, a great affection sprang up between them, and many visits were afterwards paid by Alexandra to Rumpelheim-on-the-Main, which belonged to Mary's grandfather, the Landgrave Frederick of Hesse.

The Royal Match-Making

All the European courts were searched when the time came to find a bride for the Prince of Wales. Lady Paget, then only 22 years of age, played a leading part in bringing together the Princess Alexandra and her future husband. Sir Augustus Paget, British minister at Copenhagen, told his wife, Lady Paget: "I know the prettiest, the nicest, the most charming princess in Europe. She is only 16 and as good as she is pretty."

The Princess Royal (Queen Victoria's eldest daughter, afterwards the Empress Victoria of Germany), who was informed of the discovery, suggested that Princess Alix should meet her at Streilitz.

Lady Paget heard from England that both the Queen and the Prince Consort were in favor of the marriage, having been entirely satisfied by the accounts given them by the Princess Royal.

A meeting in Germany in the autumn between the Prince of Wales and Princess Alix, as by chance, was arranged, and passed off satisfactorily.

Notwithstanding her age, she retained traces of her early beauty, and on one occasion late in life when in the presence of Adeline Patti, friends declared they were "the loveliest looking old woman in England."

She dressed her hair in exactly the same style as when she was Princess of Wales and the "Alexandra dress," which she wore in the famous French couturier Worth built frocks which caused her to be regarded as the best dressed woman in England.

Her Long Widowhood

The queen mother, after the death of King Edward, made her home at Marlborough House, where she passed more than 30 years of her married life. Besides her country residence at Sandringham, she had a villa on Klampenborg Bay, seven miles from Copenhagen where, annually in August, before the war, she held happy reunions with her Danish kinsfolk.

For thirty-eight years the princess, and her husband stood in the shadow of the British throne, maintaining the difficult position of prospective King and Queen with dignity and grace. Alexandra had become the Princess of Wales the aristocracy of England surrendered to her "ladies' set" amongst the European royal society as effectively as her husband, as Prince of Wales, ruled the "ladies' set." From the day of her marriage to the time of her death no word other than good was ever said of Queen Alexandra. By her kindness and tact and her gentle humor she won all hearts and even Queen Victoria's sadness melted under her influence. During the thirty-eight years before Prince Albert Edward became King and Princess Alexandra queen they traveled extensively through the European continent, India, Egypt and other oriental countries. But their happiest days were spent at home, particularly at Sandringham, their beloved Norfolk home. They took the deepest interest in their estate and in the people of their village and were proud of the model conditions existing in their domain. Princess Alexandra always had a warm spot in her heart for Sandringham and its people, and when she became queen her relations to her faithful subjects at Sandringham remained unchanged. Many stories are told giving evidence of her kindness of heart, helpfulness and humane sympathy.

AN ACCOMPLISHED PIANIST

VERY FOND OF GARDENING

Queen Alexandra's favorite pastimes were damasking, the European and her favorite flowers were carnations and roses. Music and photography were her chief recreations. She was an accomplished pianist, a water color painter of no mean order, and had an excellent knowledge of gardening.

DID MUCH FOR SOLDIERS DURING THE WORLD WAR

Queen Mother Always Re- tained Deep Interest in Philanthropies

The Queen Mother always retained her deep interest in her many philanthropies.

During the world war she served as head of the British Red Cross, the Queen Alexandra Imperial Military Nursing Service, the Territorial Force Nursing Service and the Royal Naval Nursing Service. The Alexandra Field Force Fund, of which she was the head, kept British soldiers supplied with comforts and delicacies throughout the four years' struggle.

Between 1914 and 1918 she visited every hospital in London including the famous home for blinded soldiers at St. Dunstan's. She was also interested in infant welfare work. When a new nurses' home was named in her honor in London, she requested that it be not called the "Alexandra" home in memory of the martyred British nurse.

HAD A NARROW ESCAPE WHEN BOAT CAUGHT FIRE

During the visit of the prince and princess to Egypt in 1889, a midnight fire broke out in the hotel where they were staying. The royal party were going up the Nile at the time in a boat named Alexandra, which was towed by the steamer Federabene. One evening the prince was on board the Federabene and saw a bright light burning inside the Alexandra in which the princess had retired. He at once caused the princess and her lady-in-waiting to be hurried off to the shore, and the fire which sprang from a lighted candle in one of the cabins was put out by the prince suite.

Related to Many Royal Families

Queen Alexandra was related by blood or marriage to many of the royal families of Europe. She was a sister of King George of Greece, who was assassinated in 1913, of King Frederick VII. of Denmark, of the former Dowager Empress Marie Dagmar of Russia. The Emperor Nicholas II. of Russia, who with his family was killed by the bolsheviks, was her nephew, as was also the former Emperor William of Germany and King Hakan VII. of Norway. Another nephew, by marriage, is King Alfonso XIII. of Spain, husband of the former British Princess Ena of Battenberg, the daughter of King Edward's sister, Beatrice. Queen Alexandra's younger sister, Dagmar, was married to Alexander III. of Russia three years after her own betrothal to the then Prince of Wales.

Was Trained in All Domestic Arts Large Family Shared Small Income

When Alexandra was born her father was still a prince, impecunious and without prospects for the future.

He was extremely poor for a prince, and his marriage to the Princess Louise of Hesse-Nassau brought but a very slim dowry. His income was only between $3,000 and $5,000 a year, barely enough to support his large family upon any but the most economical basis. Fortunately, his wife was an excellent manager, and although there were but few servants at the Gule palace at Copenhagen, with miles of deer forest be-

WAS SYMBOLIC OF BEST IN NATION'S CHARACTER

Will Ever Be Regarded as an Ideal of Noble
Womanhood

The whole empire mourns the passing of the queen mother. Whatever chances time may bring in the social order, her life will always stand out as the fulfillment of a national ideal—deep, true and symbolic of the race. Simplicity and common sense characterized all her work. Though she disliked ostentatious show and ceremony for their own sake, no queen filled the regal part with more brilliance and lustre when occasion demanded.

Womanliness was the keynote of her life. To Englishwomen she will ever be an inspiration and an example. By Englishmen she will ever be regarded as an ideal of noble womanhood, with all that it implies of grace, gentleness, kindness, beauty, refinement and powers of love and endurance. Her appeal was always to the heart, not to the head, and by her delightful personality and by her life as wife, mother and Queen, and by her unflinching sympathy and devotion to her people, she firmly established herself in their affections.

Sorrow and pain did not pass her by, and that she could endure protracted mental strain was proven during her husband's long illness in 1871 when she waited and watched by the Prince's bedside, and again in the anxious days preceding his coronation.

Ever since she arrived on Britain's shores she represented something outside the bustle of daily life. Though she never shrank from facing the stern realities of life or the responsibilities of her high position, her pleasures were not those of the crowd, sought in gay festival and merry assemblies. Her happiness was rather found in the sound of children's laughter, and in the quietude of home life.

Of Queen Alexandra it may be truly said that she had "an infinite capacity for doing good." In thousands upon thousands of British homes for generations to come fond mothers will gather their daughters around them and "by the evening fire repeat Alexandra's story."

BRITISH CROWN NEVER WORN BY MORE COMELY QUEEN

Queen Alexandra was ever beloved by the British nation for her beauty of character, no less than for the personal beauty and charm which she retained to the very end. As a queen she shared with King Edward the honor of being a real leader in European royal circles and during her long widowhood devoted her life in a quiet way to the many philanthropies in which she had always been interested. EVER ANGEL OF MERCY ONCE IN MIRACLE ROLE

As an angel of mercy Queen Alexandra played her part many times, but only once did she appear in the role of a miracle worker. The story is told in a book of "Forty Years On," of a cure worked by the fairy princess on the author in the days of his extreme youth when he was afflicted and humiliated by warts on his hands. In vain with caustic he had sought to banish these ugly looking blemishes; they had changed into yellow brown. Then the Princess of Wales changed to

Own Flag Flown By Queen Mother

Privilege Previously Exclusive Right of Ruling Monarch

Amongst the privileges extended to the queen by King Edward was the right to fly the royal standard, hitherto the exclusive right of the ruling sovereign. Upon his death a special standard was designed for the widowed queen. It measured 24 feet by 12 feet, and consisted of the British standard on one half and the Danish standard on the other. It was quite a remarkable flag from a zoological standpoint, including as it did seven British lions, two horses, a winged dragon, a swan, a falcon, a goat and a seated bear, with six more quaint lions in the Danish section.

Each animal represented several pages in the histories of the two nations, whose long and enduring friendship had been consummated in the union between their royal families. Thus did the widow of Edward the Peacemaker hoist to the masthead a standard that symbolized Europe's most striking example of international peace and goodwill.

HAD NEAR RELATIVES ON BOTH SIDES IN WAR

During the war the queen mother withdrew largely from the public eye. She suffered doubly in that it was her unhappy fate to have near relatives on both sides of the struggle. Yet quietly and unobtrusively she went about doing good, spreading good cheer, when her own heart ached wearily within her, giving, always giving, so far as her restricted means permitted, so that on the occasion of her annual progress through the streets of London there was no lack of warmth in the greeting extended to her.

Princess Greeted With Flowers; Flowers Were Linked With Name

Sea King's daughter from over the sea, Alexandra Saxon and Norman and Dane are we. But all of Danes in our welcome to thee, Alexandra. Welcome her, thunders of fort and of fleet. Welcome her, thundering cheer of the street. Welcome her, all things youthful and sweet. Scatter the blossoms under her feet. Break happy land into earlier flowers. Make music, a bird, in the new-budded bowers.

Thus was Princess Alexandra greeted by England's poet laureate, Alfred, Lord Tennyson, when she landed in England in March, 1863, as the bride of England's heir to the throne. With flowers she was greeted, and with flowers ever since. Each year one day is dedicated to Alexandra. It has been named Alexandra Rose Day, and on it the people of the empire give freely to charity in her honor.

In London, England, it was always a day of wonderful demonstration, when the stately dowager queen

LOOKED WELL AT NIGHT; STONE DEAD IN MORNING

Symptomatic Anthrax or Blackley is Cause of Many Sudden Deaths.

AMONG YOUNG HERDS

Swellings and Cracking Are Symptoms—Dr. McGilvray Gives Advice.

In a number of Western Ontario herds this summer and fall, young cattle have died in a manner decidedly puzzling as well as costly to the owner. Sometimes only one or two were lost, sometimes as many as a half dozen. The animal seemed in normal health in the evening, perhaps a trifle uneasy, but apparently not seriously ill. In the morning it was dead, often without much sign of disease—so little, in fact, that where the carcass was found in the pasture after a thunderstorm the cause of death was frequently taken to be lightning, unless it was examined by a veterinarian or someone well skilled in animal diseases. In some cases, indeed, the symptoms were so slight that they escaped the notice of the veterinarian who had been called in. A minor epidemic of this sort took place in the township of Carleton Place, and isolated cases were also reported elsewhere.

Crackling Swellings. Where the symptoms were more pronounced than in the cases mentioned above, or where the post-mortem examination was conducted, it was usually seen to be somewhat bloated, with a reddish, frothy liquid oozing from the mouth and nose, and a certain amount of swelling in the surface, usually along the spinal column, on the rump, or elsewhere on the hindquarters. Pressing upon this swelling gave a crackling sound, and the animal showed the meat a dirty dark red or brown, exuding a rather muddy-red, frothy fluid containing gas bubbles. The odor is the characteristic appearance of symptomatic anthrax, often known as blackleg or black-quarter, and the cause of the swelling is the gas produced by the bacteria of anthrax, which enters the body of the animal usually through a wound in one of the feet or legs, but sometimes through a contaminated feed or drinking water.

"Once an animal becomes infected, the disease develops very quickly," writes Dr. McGilvray, "and the duration of the disease is very short and may terminate fatally in from one-half to three days. In cattle, the first symptoms are usually swellings in the neck and shoulder and other parts of the body. The swellings are very characteristic in that they develop rapidly and are first very hot and painful, and subsequently become tender and the skin in the center of the swelling feels dry, like a piece of leather. Another striking peculiarity is that when the swollen parts are pressed or handled, they give a crackling sound, usually due to the presence of gas or air in the affected tissues. The various lymphatic glands are also swollen and may be felt under the skin in different parts of the body, in the form of firm lumps about the size of apples. In addition to the swellings and lameness, symptoms of general disturbance become noticeable, such as high fever, labored breathing and rapid beating of the heart. Sometimes attacks of colic are observed. Finally the animal becomes prostrated and lies on the ground stretched out and soon thereafter dies."

Infection From Soil.

Symptomatic anthrax, which is not the same as anthrax, and does not affect horses and human beings, does the latter is caused by a soil bacillus, B. anthracis, which enters the body of the animal usually through a wound in one of the feet or legs, but sometimes through a contaminated feed or drinking water. "Once an animal becomes infected, the disease develops very quickly," writes Dr. McGilvray, "and the duration of the disease is very short and may terminate fatally in from one-half to three days. In cattle, the first symptoms are usually swellings in the neck and shoulder and other parts of the body. The swellings are very characteristic in that they develop rapidly and are first very hot and painful, and subsequently become tender and the skin in the center of the swelling feels dry, like a piece of leather. Another striking peculiarity is that when the swollen parts are pressed or handled, they give a crackling sound, usually due to the presence of gas or air in the affected tissues. The various lymphatic glands are also swollen and may be felt under the skin in different parts of the body, in the form of firm lumps about the size of apples. In addition to the swellings and lameness, symptoms of general disturbance become noticeable, such as high fever, labored breathing and rapid beating of the heart. Sometimes attacks of colic are observed. Finally the animal becomes prostrated and lies on the ground stretched out and soon thereafter dies."

Prevent by Vaccination. As the disease is so rapid a course, successful treatment is scarcely possible after it becomes established. Fortunately, however, cattle can be protected by vaccination, which holds good for about one year. "Where blackleg is suspected, the owner should have an examination made by his veterinary surgeon, and if his suspicions are justified, he should be vaccinated. The vaccine may be obtained at small cost from the veterinary director-general at Ottawa in the shape of pills, for injection under the skin of the shoulder with a hypodermic syringe. Young cattle under four years are more frequently attacked than those over that age. As the disease germ is carried over in the soil, care should be taken to keep it out of the soil. Dr. McGilvray warns: "In all cases where an animal dies of blackleg, the carcass should be effectively disposed of by cremation or by burying it in a deep hole, and the soil should be covered with quicklime or lime. The dead body should not be dragged over the ground surface, nor should it be skinned or cut open, but should be buried or burned intact in its skin."

Once established in the soil, blackleg may remain active for years. "In fact," says Dr. McGilvray, "in some localities the field may stay permanently infected, and the germ appears to be a natural inhabitant of certain soils." The disease chiefly affects cattle, but in some cases sheep are also infected.

College at Guelph, who gives some valuable information on symptomatic anthrax, or blackleg. "It may remain and be carried over in the soil for

WESTERN ONTARIO HAS BEST CHEESE

But Prizes in Creamery Butter at Royal Again Go to Prairies.

Two apparent contradictions, now so common as to attract little attention, developed with the sweeping victory of Western Canadian butter at the Western Ontario cheese and butter show at the Royal Agricultural Fair at Toronto this week. Neither Ontario, as a whole, nor Eastern Ontario, in the cheese classes, secured one first prize; yet Ontario is a heavy producer of creamery butter, and Eastern Ontario is noted for its factory cheese. Very few factories from east of Toronto got into the prize money at all in the cheese, and the sweepstakes and three first prizes went to W. Kroetz, Palmerston. In butter, the western creameries were again victorious, with almost every province of Canada represented, but repeated winners of this year's prize were the creameries of Ontario, which took the first prize offered, including every first, went to the prizes and British Columbia, and only two Ontario creameries found place in the list.

In the Realm of Wheat.

Such a record again calls attention to the remarkable advance made in dairy production in the western provinces during the past few years. A few years ago, for instance, Saskatchewan was importing most of its butter, and in 1907, produced in the province only 1,000,000 pounds of butter, now has about 100 plants and expects to produce in 1923, 25,000,000 pounds. Much of the credit for the excellent showing made by the western creameries is given to the cream grading system, in effect since 1907, and the somewhat similar system it is expected, will be put into force here next year, and preliminary training has been given to dairymen during the past summer.

PRIME MINISTERS OF WEST ARE ALL FOUR FARMERS

The farm is the highroad to political eminence in the Canadian west. If the careers of all four provincial premiers may be taken as examples, Hon. John Bracken of Manitoba is a farmer, Hon. J. G. Bennett of Ontario is a farmer, Hon. C. C. Dunning of Saskatchewan was born on a tenant farm near Leamington, England, and came to Canada at 17, and worked as a hired man near Yorkton, Sask., until old enough to file on a homestead for himself. He still lives the original homestead, with three other quarter sections added. Hon. Herbert Greenfield of Alberta is another farmer, and Hon. J. H. Ross of British Columbia is a farmer, and has farmed all his life.

TO MEET AT MELBOURNE

"A meeting of farmers' sons and daughters will be held in the auditorium of Melbourne school at 8 o'clock on Monday evening, Nov. 23," announces R. A. Flinn, agricultural representative for Ontario. The purpose of the meeting is to discuss a short course to be held at Melbourne during the month of February. We are asking all organizations to send representatives to the meeting, and also asking any who might be interested in attending to be present."

The boys' course, it is expected, will take the regular form, while the girls have the choice of any two of home nursing, cooking, millinery and sewing.

LOW-WEIGHT EGGS PRESENT PROBLEM

Prof. W. R. Graham Advises
Males From 25-Ounce
Ancestry as Solution.

With weight per dozen an important factor in the grading regulations, many poultrymen are becoming worried over keeping up the size of the eggs from their flocks almost as much as over keeping up production. Selection for breeding based upon number of eggs only, without regard to size, forcing pullets into production before they were properly matured, and in some cases poor feeding methods, have led in many flocks to the establishment of a strain of birds somewhat undersized in body and laying a somewhat under-sized egg. The general average weight of eggs on Canadian markets is now probably below what it was a dozen years ago.

A Breeding Problem. This is evidently largely a breeding problem. It is doubtful whether high production in itself cuts down the size of the egg. For instance, bird R179 on the Delaware poultry farm at Stratford, with a record of 251 eggs in her pullet year, averaged well over 24 ounces to the dozen, and her daughters, with well over 200 eggs each to their credit, also run high in egg weight. If Col. Delaware's hens do not lay up to the 24-ounce average they are discarded as breeders, regardless of their other desirable characteristics.

"The easiest way to avoid small eggs is to set only large ones," says Prof. W. R. Graham of the O.A.C. poultry department. "Use male birds from hens that lay at least a 25-ounce egg. I am free to admit, however, that if you want out to buy eggs, you will find them in the egg market. We have not on the place many hens that have laid 25-ounce eggs, but we have 25 eggs or better—you would find them pretty scarce and high-priced."

"We do not use at the college a male out of a hen layer, but it eliminates a great number of high-priced ones. We have not on the place many hens that have laid 25-ounce eggs, but we have 25 eggs or better—you would find them pretty scarce and high-priced."

Can Raise Average. "I believe that we can raise the size of eggs from hens of high production by a process of selection," says the professor. "It will take a few years to do it, however. The process may have the effect of hastening maturity in the short time, but not to any serious degree."

The average pullet, with all common breeds, lays about 23 eggs in the average yearling eggs a little over 24 ounces, according to Prof. Graham.

Resume Field Work Upon Lighter Land.

Need Fine Weather To Complete Root Harvest in Some Sections.

With a few fine days this week plowing and root harvest have been resumed on the lighter lands. In some counties considerable quantities of mangels, turnips, sugar beets and potatoes still remain to be lifted. In spite of the unfavorable weather, comparatively little damage has been done to the crops, and the sugar beets have been plowed down and there are rumors of a good crop. In the sugar beet districts of Kent and Essex there are still many acres of beets to be plowed out, and the work is being done as fast as possible. Work is further advanced in the eastern part of the province. In some of the eastern counties there are still occasional fields of beets, wheat and clover seed in the shock.

Threshing Nears Close in Western Grain Fields.

After weeks of intermittent work, with weather ranging all the way from fine to rainy to snowy, the threshing in the prairies is at last nearly complete, and farmers are having a sigh of relief over the removal of the spring threshing machine. The work is now over 90 per cent completed, and in Saskatchewan and Alberta 95 per cent. One week of good weather would see all threshing finished in the west.

Although the grain has suffered loss in grade from weathering, and is turning out tough, damage is not nearly so severe as was feared, and the 30,000,000 bushels rise in the government estimate will do much to offset the drop in this regard. Fall plowing has also been held up, and the acreage will be smaller than usual.

Death of Dean G. L. Starr is Shrouded in Mystery.

Associated Press Despatch. Boston, Mass., Nov. 20.—Circumstances of the death of the Very Rev. Dean George L. Starr of St. George's Cathedral, Kingston, Ont., who, according to a medical examiner, took his own life yesterday in the Deaconess Hospital, were known tonight to the authorities, who declined to reveal them. All that was known was that Dean Starr suffered from a chronic ailment, and had been in the hospital since Oct. 24. Dean Starr was a chaplain in the Canadian Expeditionary Force during the war with the rank of major. His military service began in 1888, when he held a lieutenant in the forty-first battalion, Brockville rifles. He served overseas in 1916 and 1917.

Germany's Entry Into League of Nations Taken For Granted.

Associated Press Despatch. Geneva, Nov. 20.—Germany's entrance into the League of Nations is so taken for granted that the league secretariat has prepared a communication to the German officials concerning the representation of the Reich on the secretariat.

It is probable that the additional post of secretary-general will be created. Predictions are made here that the Berlin government will apply for membership during the December session of the league council.

Hurt in Street Mishap.

Not aware of the approaching motor, Mrs. Dockrill stepped from the curb directly into the path of the car. She was picked up and carried to her home, suffering somewhat from shock. Dr. John Ferguson was summoned and announced that her injuries were not serious. The driver of the car was not held.

The average composition of well-cured Emmentaler cheese is 24 to 25 per cent moisture, 31 to 32 per cent butter fat, and 34 to 35 per cent solids not fat. Swiss law requires at least 45 per cent of fat in any matter.

Although the wheat crop of the northern hemisphere is 265,000,000 bushels above that of last year, it is still 106,000,000 bushels below the 1923 level, and Canada is in a good position to dispose of her huge crop of 422,000,000 bushels, the second largest ever reaped in this country, according to the international institute of agriculture.

The Russian and some of the Balkan crops have turned out to be smaller than was at first estimated, and with short crops in India and the United States the export market for the late fall is left almost entirely to Canada.

"The total yield, excluding Russia, is now estimated at 2,999,000,000 bushels, compared with 2,644,000,000 in 1924 and 3,012,000,000 in 1923," says an official report. "The wheat crop of Europe, outside of Russia, is 313,000,000 bushels, compared with 300,000,000 last year, and 1,222,000,000 in 1923, an increase of 286,000,000 bushels over last year, and of 91,000,000 over 1922."

Little Yet From Russia. "In September the Soviet government estimated the wheat crop of Russia, including Siberia, at 601,000,000 bushels, against 382,000,000 in 1924, but since then states that this should be reduced by 10 per cent. It also stated on good authority that the crops of several Balkan States have been overestimated. At any rate these countries have done very little exporting so far."

Special interest is now being taken in the crops of the southern hemisphere, soon to be harvested, which are expected to appear on the markets in competition with Canada early in the new year. A good wheat crop on an increased acreage is a now most assured prospect for the Australian crop is now in a critical condition. There was very little rainfall in October, the drought has been relieved, and it is reported that the crop will be at least 4,000,000 bushels less than that of last year.

CONSTANCE TALMADGE AT LOEW'S ON MONDAY

Makes Big Hit as Flapper-Vamp—Antonio Moreno Supports.

The younger generation of today, like the younger generation of yesterday, and of the yesterday-year before that, believes firmly in the supremacy of its own wisdom. The exuberance of youth is immortally unconquerable.

Such is the underlying thought in Constance Talmadge's new comedy, Learning to Love. Constance, though a sub-deb just out of boarding school, is a wiseacre in matters pertaining to love. What she doesn't know about love—well, just simply isn't. The profound willingness of her numer-

Today—Pola Negri in her greatest picture, Flower of Night. Comedy, There Goes the Bride. Capitol News and special music.

Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday—D. W. Griffith's latest super-production, Sally of the Sawdust, a circus story and spectacle—a menagerie, side show and big top rolled into one. With W. C. Fields, the highest paid comedian of the Ziegfeld Follies, and Carol Dempster, Capitol circus band and usual added attractions.

Thursday, Friday, Saturday—The monarch of mirth, Raymond Griffith in A Regular Fellow, a picture screened for laugh purposes only.

Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Nov. 30, Dec. 1 and 2—Rudolph Valentino in his greatest and latest picture, Cobra.

Thursday, Friday, Saturday, Dec. 2, 3, 4 and 5—James Oliver Curwood with Jack Holt.

Young college boy admires to trade their hearts for one flash of her flirtatious eyes; a soft-spoken word and, perhaps, a kiss, convinces her of the fact.

And so she dashes gallily into the whirlpool of New York's society with an all-conquering spirit—the exuberance of youth.

It is an ideal characterization for Constance Talmadge, a girl of the daintiest, daintiest, daintiest of those delightfully absurd sophistries of the younger generation which she interprets so well.

Having lashed five fiances to the mast of her charms, Constance finally meets a real man (Antonio Moreno). And because he sees through the tinsel of her flapperish onslaughts and refuses to become impressed, she loves him. In fact, she determines to win him as her husband. It's the way with women—spurning what's at their feet, yearning for what they can't get. But Constance wins him.

SALLY OF THE SAWDUST GREAT GRIFFITH COMEDY

Winning Drolleries, Gay Laughter, Sudden Signs and Tears Stopped by Outburst of Mirth Feature New Production Featuring Carol Dempster and W. C. Fields.

For entertainment, for tears tossed away by laughter, for lovable characters and the quick tread of exciting action, never has D. W. Griffith done anything finer than in his newest picture, "Sally of the Sawdust," a United Artists Corporation release, playing at the Capitol theatre on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

This hearty comedy is one of the truly master productions of this or any other, interesting from rim to core with the most winning drolleries, the gayest laughter, sudden sighs and the drift of a tear stopped by outbursts of mirth, woven throughout with a suspense of urgent action that becomes as exciting at the close as anything this great producer has ever done.

Young and old, the serious and the gay will find this picture a treat as brilliant a piece of picture-making as that wise old artist, Griffith, has ever done. It measures "D. W. G." once more as being the first in his craft, a national genius who can tickle America's funny-bone and dampen its eyes almost in the same moment.

With this greatest success is linked that of W. C. Fields, appearing as the imitable Prof. Eustace McGargle, juggler, entertainer and occasional rogue given to plundering a strange pocket. The genius of Fields has long been accepted on the theatrical stage, he now being one of the greatest of comedy stars, featured in Ziegfeld "Follies."

His gifts of pantomime has carried him to the screen with an efficiency which immediately ranks him with the best of screen comedians. Under the handling of Mr. Griffiths, his comedy gleams with a new subtlety, broadening at times into hilarious uproar. Never have there been louder laughs in a theatre than Fields casts in "Sally of the Sawdust." The characters of father and daughter are as fine as anything ever done for the screen, and their gay humanity is priceless.

Never has Mr. Griffith dressed one of his pictures more lavishly, or more beautifully. Scenes of richest luxury float past in variety and without emphasis. Here a glimpse of beautiful tableaux and they are gone. Here is a picture that is good for your amusement; it is good for your soul; it is good for Griffith and his players, and it is good for the world of pictures. Too rich amusement, it is, for anyone to miss. It is the sweetest of laughter, and isn't that the best of life? Go and see it.

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday there will be featured at the Capitol one of the funniest screen stories of the year, with that genuinely funny man, Raymond Griffith, in his newest picture, A Regular Fellow. The events depicted have to do with a European prince whose life is shown to be not one of leisure, as many suppose, but a continual round of corner-stone layings, christening of boats, judging at baby shows to which Griffith turns into an endless stream of fun and hilarity. The most blasé cannot help but laugh at this picture.

On Friday night the Capitol theatre is holding the second father and son night. Sons are urged to bring their fathers and fathers their sons and to enjoy an evening of wholesome amusement together, one such as only Raymond Griffith can provide.

This is Constance Talmadge, one of the famous Talmadge sisters, who is starred with Antonio Moreno in Learning to Love, a great comedy, coming to Loew's on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Jackie Coogan, recognized throughout the entire world as the greatest child actor to have ever graced the silver screen, comes in Old Clothes, the sequel to The Rag Man, to Loew's theatre next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, with a special children's performance on the Saturday morning at 10 o'clock.

Today—Buster Keaton in Go West, the greatest comedy to ever hit London. It's a satire on the famous western dramas. Loew's premier comedy, Loew's Kingogram News, Asop's Fables, In vaudeville—Eight Southern Cyclones, a special scenic act of music, songs and dances; two other big acts.

Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday—Constance Talmadge, in a brand new line of comedy, Learning to Love. Our Gang comedy, Circus Fling. Loew's up-to-date News of Current Events, and three big acts of supreme vaudeville.

Next Thursday, Friday, Saturday—Jackie Coogan, the kid himself, in Old Clothes, a picture of youthful tears and trials and smiles that will touch your heart. Loew's premier comedy, Loew's Kingogram News, Asop's Fables, and three big acts of Loew's supreme vaudeville. Special children's show on Saturday morning at 10 a.m.

A bevy of girls with Erin Jackson and her Girl Friends' Burlesque Revue, at the Grand next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, twice daily.

JACKIE COOGAN COMING TO LOEW'S

Appears in Sequel to The Rag Man and Wins Hearts Anew.

Probably you have surmised from the title that Old Clothes, Jackie Coogan's newest picture for Merton Goldwyn-Mayer, is similar to The Rag Man, which immediately preceded it. Not only is this the case, but it is really a sequel to the former picture.

The Rag Man ended with the firm of Kelly & Ginsberg possessed of great wealth. Old Clothes starts off by having them lose their money in copper stock in Wall street and we see them again in the junk business. Heart interest and romance which forms the basis of the story, are supplied by introducing a poor girl who comes to room with the boys.

They become attached to her and "father" her.

Brings Laughs, Smiles.

With Jackie in the kind of character and costume that made him popular and Max Davidson again cast as Ginsberg, this picture has the same points of appeal as The Rag Man.

There are a lot of sure-fire bits of the kind that have proved their entertainment value. The comedy, which is effective and good for a number of laughs and smiles, is built up largely on the Irish and Hebrew angles.

Jackie again gives an excellent performance. With each succeeding picture he of course grows a little older, but he still retains his wonderfully pleasing personality even if he has lost some of his baby winsomeness, and has developed as an actor. He puts over his points with the best of the profession and never fails to score.

Old Clothes will be at Loew's theatre on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week, with a special children's performance on the Saturday morning at 10 o'clock.

DUNLOP'S SECRETARY RELATES LAX METHODS

Cash Book Pages Torn Out—Ledger Rewritten, She Alleges.

Canadian Press Despatch. Toronto, Nov. 20.—Testifying in the trial of W. W. Dunlop, former inspector of prisons and charities, charged with the theft of $40,000 from the province, before County Court Judge Denton, Miss Edna Haskayne, one time secretary to Dunlop, and afterwards bookkeeper, today told a rather surprising story of clerical methods in the department of prisons and public charities.

Cash book pages were torn out, she stated, ledger pages were rewritten, and loans were taken from government funds by government officials. Also featuring the evidence was the statement of Major A. E. Nash, expert accountant that she had recorded in Dunlop's bank account or accounts totalled $33,471.10. Interest up to April this year would exceed $11,263, he said. She could not say, however, that some of the larger amounts deposited had not been spent on government business.

R. H. Greer, K.C., defending Dunlop, denied for his client many of the allegations of Miss Haskayne, one of which was to the effect that the accused had said: "I have burned the records," when asked by her to replace the money, which had been borrowed from the department. "Witness stated that she had recorded a loan of $2,000 on her house and later borrowed $2,000 from Dunlop to repay it, the second loan coming from another government account. She also received a number of bonuses and an increase in salary. Asked if she had earned them, she replied: "I did and very dearly, too."

SLAYER GETS 10 YEARS. Vancouver, B.C., Nov. 20.—Gujar Singh, a Hindu, convicted last night of manslaughter in connection with the death of Tarah Singh, at Kelowna on July 11, was this morning sentenced to 10 years' imprisonment by Justice Morrison in the assize court here. Tarah was stabbed to death in a drunken brawl.

SAN HEAD SENDS KING SYMPATHY

Institution, Named After Late Queen, First With Regrets.

Queen Alexandra Sanatorium, on the eve of its province-wide campaign to raise $500,000 for the Beck Memorial endowment in aid of the tuberculous poor, paused late yesterday to join in the empire's sorrow at the death of the Queen mother in Britain.

While the sanatorium flag was lowered to half-mast, Dr. F. H. Pratt, the medical superintendent, cabled to King George the first message of sympathy sent from this district to the bereaved royal family.

Fifty years ago when the late Sir Adam and Lady Beck launched the movement for the establishment of the new haven of refuge for sufferers from tuberculosis, they awakened the genuine interest of the queen and received her consent to the use of her name.

The cablegram despatched last night follows: "To His Majesty King George—I am directed on behalf of Queen Alexandra sanatorium for the tuberculous, which the late queen mother was graciously pleased to endow with the prestige of her name.

RELIABLE WORK DONE BY FORSTER'S GARAGE

Makes Constant Effort To Give Every Customer Maximum of Satisfaction.

Service all the time, repairs that can be relied upon, and a constant effort to see that all customers receive real satisfaction have been the reasons for the success of the Forster garage on Fullarton street. This establishment, because it has built up its reputation on these principles, is now recognized by the motorists of the city and surrounding districts as a place where the owner may leave his machine, safe in the knowledge that what he wants done will be done and done right, that he will receive the car back in a remarkably short time, and that he will not be forced to pay an exorbitant price for the repairs made.

The service track of this garage is well known on all the roads for fifteen or twenty miles around London, as it is constantly being called into use to repair wrecked or crippled cars in the city.

P. B. Forster, manager of this growing concern, has had many years experience in handling automobiles, and employs men thoroughly acquainted with all phases of repair work.

RUTH'S CONFECTIONERY HAS MANY BOOSTERS

East End Establishment Known For Excellence of Chocolates and Ice Cream.

Nothing but the best goes into the chocolates, ice cream and confectionery prepared in Ruth's ice cream parlor at 445 Dundas street, and this is the main reason why this establishment has such a wide and satisfied circle of customers. Friends of these customers are, too, and in more than a business way, because here they know that there is awaiting them a spirit of welcome that is always far more than the casual, more or less impersonal spirit quite noticeable elsewhere.

All candy sold at Ruth's is made by James Carter, who has had 25 years' experience in this line in both London and Toronto. Mr. Carter is an expert candy maker, as any one of the hundreds of customers of Ruth's will testify.

GERMANY TO SOON BE DRY, IS DOCTOR'S PREDICTION

Associated Press Despatch. Westphalia, Nov. 18.—Despite the fondness of many Germans for their beer, Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism, believes that Germany will be the next great country to go dry. Economic conditions will demand the change.

"The European industry is finding it hard now to compete with American industry," he said. "The reason is that prohibition is reflected in a better American workman, and this improvement goes all along the line."

Dr. Cherrington says that the adoption of prohibition by either Great Britain or Germany will cause other countries of the world to fall in line.

GOVERNMENT OF ONTARIO DEFENDED BY FERGUSON

Canadian Press Despatch. Toronto, Nov. 19.—Addressing the members of the Canadian National Newspapers and Periodicals Association which is holding its annual meeting here, Premier Ferguson today defended the action of the Ontario government against certain criticism for its efforts to add agriculture and industry.

"I would like to know what a government is for, if it is not to take the leadership in business," he said. "Outstanding results have been obtained by the appointment of an agricultural inquiry committee in Ontario, which is doing work the public is not aware of. Plans have been completed for the standardization and marketing of products which, if properly pressed home, will regain for Canada markets who has lost, and will bring her to the front rank of Canada's producers."

RADIO-AUTO ELECTRIC BARGAINS ARE MANY

A gale of bargains is waiting radio sets and appliances, auto parts and accessories, electrical tools and kindred articles of every description out of the Radio-Auto Electric shop at 295 Dundas street into the homes of London. Everything is being sold regardless of cost, as it is the intention of the proprietor, William Kernohan, to have his entire stock disposed of within two weeks. The reason for this big sale is that Mr. Kernohan in future will concentrate his efforts on the sale and installation of radio equipment alone. The genuineness of the sale is emphasized in the remarkable reductions on every article of stock. One Radio super-heterodyne radio set, which ordinarily sells for $235, is marked down to $179, and everything else is in proportion.

Mr. Kernohan's decision to concentrate on radio was just reached lately, when he saw that almost all his time was being taken up by this department of his business.

Of late he has been working night and day installing sets, and on Wednesday of this week gave a demonstration at 1:15 a.m., so busy had he been up to that hour.

Firm Has Served London 10 Years
Local Rapid Electrotyping Plant Well Known in District.
The local Rapid Electrotyping plant at 211½ King street is a branch of the Rapid Electrotyping Company, Toronto, and has been established here for some ten years. Here specialties are centered in electrotyping and stereotyping plate and matrix work. At the Toronto plant new equipment has been put in to take care of lead molds, wax molds, wax rule engravings, nickel-type and colored plates.

The wax rule engravings, for instance, make far better reproductions than hand-set rules. By the use of the special wax method every job is perfect, something which is most difficult to achieve in hand-setting. These wax rule engravings are used in connection with order forms, charts, seals, time sheets, circles and other irregular shapes in various sizes.

The work of the Rapid Electrotyping Company, Limited, extends from coast to coast. Printing houses, advertising agencies, etc., use the complete service of the company to fill their needs. No job is too small for the firm. The staffs are ready and willing to co-operate in every way possible to provide the utmost in service.

New Bread Gains Favor of Public Brighton's New Process Loaf Entirely Different.
In response to a wide demand for something a little better in the way of bread—something that can be depended upon to be good not once in a while but all the time—Brighton's Bakery, after extensive testing, has placed on the market a New Process loaf, and this, in a very short space of time has become a general favorite with the housewives of London and vicinity.

This special loaf is made from finer flour than that used for ordinary bread and as well as the ordinary ingredients is of a higher grade, thus insuring a brand of bread that is consistently smooth in texture and more pleasing to the palate and, as well, will stay fresh for a longer period.

Have you noticed that more and more people every day are buying Brighton's bread?

Brighton's bread is not just another loaf of bread. It is different, created to contribute to the health and happiness of the active people of a great city.

It is appetizing. It has a fine flavor. People want more of it. You get a new delight out of eating it. And because you like it, you will eat it often and get more nourishment.

You will find this bread a great favorite with your children—three times a day and between meals.

If you should go to the trouble to make your own bread, you could not find anywhere finer ingredients than those used in Brighton's bread.

More and more people every day are buying Brighton's bread. Get yours today at your grocer's.

HAD TO BE CARRIED, BUT NOT DRUNK, SHE SAYS

Levin Harris, 20-year-old colored girl, defiantly pleaded guilty to an intoxication charge in police court this morning. Her interpretation of the word drunk differed to such an extent from that of the constable who arrested her, however, that the court called upon a third officer, one skilled in the judging of inebriates, to give his decision.

"She was so drunk that I had to carry her," the expert declared. "We couldn't wake her up."

"I was on my way home from a dance," the young girl said. "But I knew what the constables said to me all the time."

"This is not the first time you've been here," Mr. Graydon informed as he recalled the girl's record of the past year. "I'll let you off with a $10 fine this time. You can consider yourself fortunate in not being charged with vagrancy and sent to the reformatory."

SATISFACTION RULE AT GRIGG HOUSE CAFE

Richmond Street Restaurant Serves Best Meals Possible At All Times.

Newly decorated and with a front of gleaming white, the Grigg Cafe, opposite The Advertiser on Richmond street, where day or night one may secure a satisfying and delightful repast, is one of the most up-to-date restaurants in this district.

This establishment, operated as one of the city's cleanest and most satisfactory restaurants, is a place where excellent cuisine and unexcelled service predominate. Since the time of opening the Grigg Cafe has paid most particular attention to the needs of its patrons, at all times endeavoring to serve them the best meals and lunches it is possible to provide.

In order that the busy man may be accommodated, the Grigg Cafe makes a specialty of meals served at the dinner and supper hours. A rapid and efficient service is carried out, yet the quality of the food prepared has been in no way sacrificed. Dimson Bros., the owners, purchase only the best materials from the most reliable sources and most care is taken to see that these materials and supplies are properly handled, so that when they are offered to the patron they are in a state of excellence.

The Grigg Cafe carries with it an atmosphere of refinement which adds much to the pleasure of dining or luncheon there. The interior has been carefully arranged so that every convenience and comfort is given the customer. During the summer months and touring season every attention is paid to the transient visitor that he or she may be accorded the best. And this spirit of co-operation, in fact, is carried on year in and year out, so that all who patronize the Grigg Cafe are satisfied and exceptionally well pleased.

TOM WALSH ARRESTED BY AUSTRALIAN POLICE
Heads of Seamen's Union Will Be Deported From the Commonwealth.

Associated Press Despatch. Sydney, N. S. W., Nov. 20.—A deportation was created here this morning with the arrest of Tom Walsh, president of the Australian seamen's union, following a finding of the deportation board, appointed by the Commonwealth government. Both men are now held at Garden Island naval depot in Sydney harbor, pending their shipment out of the country. Counsel for the two men has applied to the supreme court for a writ of habeas corpus.

Arrest of Walsh and Johanneson was made at their homes at 1 o'clock this morning by Commonwealth police. Both men were prominently associated with the recent strike of British seamen, and have been fomenting industrial trouble for many years. Their deportation was the most prominent question before the country in the recent federal elections. As a result of the vote Prime Minister Bruce has acted quickly.

Destination of the deportees is unknown. The government offers passages to the wives and children of Walsh and Johanneson and sustenance. Walsh married Adella Pankhurst, and has a family of six children.

After President Tom Walsh and Secretary Jacob Johanneson, of the Australian Seamen's Union, had been arrested and taken to Garden Island, an application on behalf of both men was made in court here for a writ of habeas corpus, which was granted. The writ of habeas corpus calls upon the commonwealth police superintendent to show cause why he should not produce Walsh and Johanneson in court and why they should not be released from custody.

PREMIER BRUCE YEATS.

Melbourne, Australia, Nov. 20.—Premier S. M. Bruce, referring to the arrest of Tom Walsh and Jacob Johanneson, respectively president and secretary of the Australian Seamen's Union, in Sydney today, with a view to their deportation, stated that both of the accused were concerned in acts directed at hindering and obstructing the transport of goods and passengers in relation to trade with other countries and that their presence in Australia was injurious to peace and order. Furthermore, the premier said they had tried to show cause why they should not be deported.

TEN KILLED IN ATTACK.

Beirut, Syria, Nov. 20.—Ten soldiers and civilians were killed or wounded when an auto bus proceeding from Beirut to Damascus was attacked a few miles northeast of the latter city. The attack occurred in the region where the Druse tribesmen are endeavoring to induce the inhabitants of the various villages to rise against the French.

CANADA'S GROWTH MARVEL TO IRISH

Editor of Belfast Telegraph Gives Impressions of Tour Through Dominion.

To the mind of an Irishman the most outstanding feature of present-day Canada is the manner in which towns and cities develop so rapidly in this country. This view is expressed in the editor of the Belfast Telegraph, who was one of the party which recently toured the Dominion. In his paper he says: "Belfast folk are proud of the growth of their city, and boast of the fact that one hundred years ago it had a population of only 30,000, which today has advanced almost to half a million, a record of progress that, for the British Isles, is wonderful. But the Canadian would hardly be so quick to boast of cases by the score where yesterday there was nobody and today there are thousands. Timmins, in Northern Ontario, is one of the most striking instances of rapid development that could be cited today. It is the do of the greatest gold camp in the do of twelve years ago it is a thriving place of 15,000 inhabitants. Not a trace of the lumberman's shack, but of substantial wooden structures that would put many an Irish town in the shade. Named After Brothers. "The town was named after two brothers named Timmins who foresaw the possibilities of the district as a gold region. There are various stories as to how they came to find gold, but the fact is that they are so contradictory that the truth is so deep down in the well or rather the mine, that it was more difficult to discover than gold. One story is that a lumberman kicked a piece of rock and found traces of the metal. "Timmins explodes all our youthful ideas of rough miners in rude shacks, hard-bitten, hard-drinking, revolver-shooting desperadoes, who would dig up nuggets of gold. It is a busy little town with an assessed value of over one million pounds, duplicate high pressure waterworks system, complete sewerage and disposal plant. There are modern shops, wholesale establishments, good hotels, three theatres, four banks, paved and asphalted streets, miles of concrete walks, five bridges, five churches, and eight schools. Output Tremendous. "On the outskirts is the gold mine of the Hollinger Consolidated. Company, Limited, the foundations of which were laid by the Timmins Brothers. It is the largest of some twenty mines in a forty-mile area, which supplies over 75 per cent of the Dominion's total output of gold. In the last sixteen years supply of gold to the world's market has been enriched by the world's supply of gold to the extent of $23,000,000, which has yielded the shareholders over $7,000,000. "The Porcupine mines are producing gold at the rate of five million pounds a year, and the man from Timmins declares that the surface has hardly been scratched as yet. Want of capital alone prevents the development of other promising properties. It is truly a wealthy land around Timmins, for it has proven supply of nickel, barite, asbestos, and other minerals. "A few observations on the gold mining industry of Ontario generally will not be out of place, and will perhaps contain something new for those who have hitherto associated gold with the Rand and Western Australia. As a matter of fact Canada is the largest gold-producing country in the world, and the vast bulk of it comes from this Northern Ontario region. Opened by Railroads. "It was the building of the C. P. R. main line across the continent in 1883 that exposed the vast nickel-copper deposits of the Sudbury area. History repeated itself, for it was the construction of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario line that led to the discovery of the world-famed silver deposits of Cobalt in 1903, and indirectly to the great gold field of Porcupine six years later. It was the intense prospecting following the Cobalt discoveries that found Porcupine. These hardy men spread out from the line of railway as it extended northward to Cobalt, now a town of 2,200 inhabitants, and made successive discoveries of gold-bearing

Toronto's Drive For $150,000 of Beck Fund Is Under Way

Spirit of Sacrifice Which Enriched Life of Noted Humanitarian Pervades Opening Ceremony in Endowment Campaign—Objective Is Half-Million Dollars.

Canadian Press Despatch. Toronto, Nov. 20.—The Toronto campaign to raise $150,000 of the $500,000 which is to perpetuate the name of Sir Adam Beck in the endowment of his beloved Queen Alexandra hospital for the tubercular, was launched at a big luncheon tonight. Speakers pointed out that the fund to be raised is not for capital expenditure or to take care of past deficits, which have always been looked after through Sir Adam's efforts, but is for the specific purpose of insuring that the hospital's doors may always remain open for indigent tubercular citizens of Ontario. Inter- est from its investment is to meet the $3 per day per capita cost of caring for tubercular people who have no money.

That Sir Adam himself would have chosen just the memorial that is being undertaken was indicated tonight in address after address from public-spirited Toronto businessmen, who gathered for the final organization touches on the eve of the campaign.

Ex-Mayor Alfred Maguire, George Wright, E. A. Gaby, trustee of other seph killed Martineau and host of other prominent citizens who had known him intimately, all spoke of the devoted service which he gave the Queen Alexandra, established by Sir Adam and Lady Beck in gratitude for the recovery to health of his own daughter 15 years ago, during which should have been Sir Adam's leisure hours.

Ryan, St. Paul, and Daniel, Owen Sound.

Mrs. Paul Nichol Mathews.
An invalid for almost a year, Mrs. Paul Nichol Mathews died tonight. She was born in North Easthope, but came to Stratford with her family as a child. Ten years ago, she married Paul Mathews, who survives her, with one brother, Dr. Angus Nichol, M.O.H. Sebringville.

Special to The Advertiser. Windsor, Nov. 20.—Vernon Thibert, driver of the motor truck that struck and killed Christopher Martette, and killed Christopher Martette, a retired farmer, this afternoon was charged with criminal negligence and released on $500 bail to appear Saturday for arraignment. Martette, a retired farmer of 610 Martette avenue, was instantly killed at 9:40 o'clock this morning when struck by one of the Rivard Cleaning Company's delivery trucks, driven by Thibert. In a statement to the police, Thibert said he could not tell how the aged man got into the path of his car, which was travelling at a moderate rate of speed.

Every Three minutes-get New Health

Twenty times an hour, all your blood is sent to the kidneys to be purified. The kidneys, if they are functioning properly, remove all waste matter and return rich, red blood to refresh your body and keep you healthy. But what if the kidneys are inflamed, or so congested they cannot perform this important duty? The blood, with its impurities, flows back to poison instead of to invigorate the system. Pains settle in the small of the back, the muscles stiffen, the joints swell, urination is often painful, and headaches are frequent. These are all clear indications of deranged kidneys. Gin Pills will promptly cleanse and stimulate the kidneys, thus allowing them to work freely and properly. Through their mild laxative action, Gin Pills relieve attendant constipation and pass off all poisonous secretions. The healing oil of the famous Juniper berry is one of the eight diuretic and antiseptic elements of Gin Pills. For twenty-two years, Gin Pills have been bringing health to thousands by restoring the kidneys to normal action. 50c a box from your druggist.

Twenty times an hour, all your blood is sent to the kidneys to be purified. The kidneys, if they are functioning properly, remove all waste matter and return rich, red blood to refresh your body and keep you healthy. But what if the kidneys are inflamed, or so congested they cannot perform this important duty? The blood, with its impurities, flows back to poison instead of to invigorate the system. Pains settle in the small of the back, the muscles stiffen, the joints swell, urination is often painful, and headaches are frequent. These are all clear indications of deranged kidneys. Gin Pills will promptly cleanse and stimulate the kidneys, thus allowing them to work freely and properly. Through their mild laxative action, Gin Pills relieve attendant constipation and pass off all poisonous secretions. The healing oil of the famous Juniper berry is one of the eight diuretic and antiseptic elements of Gin Pills. For twenty-two years, Gin Pills have been bringing health to thousands by restoring the kidneys to normal action. 50c a box from your druggist.

SOCIAL HYGIENE EXHIBIT IS OPENED

Alarming Spread of Social Diseases Revealed in Pictorial Form.

TO EDUCATE PUBLIC

First Half of Week For Men—Last For Women.

Remarkable exhibits in the interests of social hygiene were given in rooms at the Royal Bank building yesterday under the auspices of the Canadian Social Hygiene Council. Two private showings were held preliminary to the general exhibition of next week, commencing Monday. It is to advocate the knowledge and practice of social hygiene as the one way to racial improvement, and to prevent through the spreading of informative propaganda, the now alarming growth of venereal diseases, that the federal and provincial departments of health have granted large sums of money. More than sixty-five London women, officers of various women's organizations, attended the display yesterday afternoon, and in the evening the exhibit was open for men. Posters and circulars, not intentionally of an alarming nature, but grippingly impressive in the presentation of authentic facts, were displayed, as well as a number of lifelike wax models, manufactured by Parisian artists. These form a comprehensive outline of the growth of the two major venereal diseases, gonorrhea and syphilis. It is revealed that as a public health problem these diseases are as important as tuberculosis or cancer.

Week Divided.
During the first half of next week the exhibits, under the supervision of local doctors, will open to men, and for the last three days, women of the city will have an opportunity of visiting the social hygiene rooms at the Royal Bank building. Nurses of the Victoria Hospital are to attend several lectures, which will be illustrated by the hygiene posters and models. They will have charge of the display for the latter half of the week. The exhibit is in charge of Miss Estelle Hewson, Ontario secretary of the Canadian social hygiene council, and Mrs. Ames Haygarth, social service nurse of the provincial department of health. "The exhibit cannot help but be beneficial," Miss Hewson said yesterday. "This problem is one of the most vital with which the health department deals, and through the exhibit, parents and young alike may be instructed and helped in the betterment of a sordid condition, which has become alarmingly prevalent, and to which, unfortunately, many have shut their eyes. It is only through education and candidly getting at the facts of the trouble, that the disease can be shut out of the province, and more healthy generation of children in the future."

Mortality Rate High.
Miss Hewson explained the surprising mortality rate of syphilis in comparison with other death-causing scourges, such as tuberculosis, pneumonia and cancer. The venereal diseases caused the loss of many more lives than other better-known diseases, she said, mortality statistics showing that in a death-rate of 100,000, syphilis was responsible for 222, cancer 131, pneumonia 88, influenza 28, and typhoid fever 13.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action, it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germs. Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu.

Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

DR THOMAS' ECLECTIC OIL

The Dream Detective

By SAX ROHMER

CHAPTER III
"The date is no matter," said doctor Zeda, "but there was a temple to the north of the Sphinx, a temple dedicated to Isis, but wherein the worship was different. We only know of this shrine by the monuments, but they prove it to have been—eh, Mr. Halesowen?"

Halesowen nodded.
"Here, then, the gods of the dead were adored—but the worship of Anubis took precedence, and was conducted at a shrine apart. Here, locked within three-and-thirty doors, having each its separate janitor who held the key, reposed a sacred symbol—a symbol, my friends, upon which was based the occult knowledge of the initiated; a symbol more precious than the lives of a hundred hundred warriors—for so it is written."

"I have never met with the inscription!" said Halesowen, drily.
Doctor Zeda smiled.
"You never are likely to meet it," he responded. "Your Belzoni and Lepsius, your Birch, Renouf, Brugsch and Petrie, is a more unseeing vandal, than the great truth—to the ultimate secret that Egypt holds for him who has eyes to see and a brain to realize!"

The mysterious foreign gentleman looked about him with a sort of challenge in his glance; then he quietly resumed his story.
"At the change of the moon in the sacred month, Methori, a maiden selected from a noble house for her beauty and purity, and for a whole year dedicated to the service of Isis, was in her hands the sacred thing—held it aloft that the initiated might worship until the first white beam lit up the receptacle, when all bowed down their heads and chanted the 'Hymn of the Souls Who Are Passing.' Then was it locked again within the three-and-thirty doors, there to remain four another year."

"She let fall from her hands the sacred vase, and the holy symbol was lost to the children of earth for evermore. Lost was the key to the book of wisdom; closed was that book to man for all time!"
"Go on!" said Halesowen, harshly, for Zeda had paused again.

"You do not grasp," asked the doctor, "Well, then, know that the sentence was 'Until the parts of this vase be made whole again.' Five fragments there were: a large one, which is your potsherd, and four smaller. The four smaller, after twenty years of untiring search, I have uncovered and joined together. What we if we now make whole that which was broken? May I not, by the exercise of such poor shreds of the lost wisdom as I have gathered up, summon before me that wandering spirit ere it return again to plead for rest at the judgment seat of Amenti?"

When I say that the man's words proved electrical I do not exaggerate the effect which this astounding proposition had upon us. Halesowen was fairly startled out of his chair, and stood with his eyes fixed on the other in a fascinated gaze.

Zeda, entirely returning to his customary urbanity, shrugged and smiled. "You believe my story?"
Lesty was the first to recover himself, and his reply was characteristic. "Can't say I do," he drawled frankly. "I don't say that you may not, though," he added.

"Then do not owe it to assist in proving my words? A little science? You are sceptical, quite? Very well. I try to show you. If I fail, then it is unfortunate, but—I bow to an inevitable!"

We looked at each other, interrogatively, and then Halesowen answered, "All right. It's a queer yarn, but we leave the matter entirely in your hands."

The doctor bowed. "Shall we say tonight to begin?" he said, tentatively.
"By all means."

The doctor expressed himself delighted, and, carefully relocking the fragment of the vase in its double case, he was about to depart, when a point occurred to him.

"Might I ask whom you suspect of the attempted burglary?" I said.
He turned in the door, and fixed a strange glance upon me. "There are others," he replied, "who seek as I seek, and who do not scruple to gain their ends how they may. Of them we shall beware, my friends, for we know they design upon us!"

With that and a low bow he retired.
Little of interest occurred during the day, until about four in the afternoon, when Halesowen aroused us out of a lazy doze to show a letter just received from the British Museum.

It was in reply to one asking why he had received no acknowledgment of the photographs and drawings submitted; and it intimated that such photographs and drawings had come to hand!
We usually took tea in the afternoon, and Halesowen joined us on this occasion, whilst, at about five o'clock, Doctor Zeda also looked in. He remained until it began to grow dusk, when we all went to bed. Halesowen to arrange for the projected seance. Retiring, for a few minutes, to his own establishment, Zeda returned with the lamp shade, and explained what he proposed to do.

"Around this small table we sit, as at seance," he said, "but no medium—only the potsherd. With these flexible bands I will attach temporarily, the parts, and stand the vase in Mr. Halesowen's frame, here by the window—so. Beside it we will place the lamp shade, thus—so that a dim light is upon it. We can just see from where we sit in the dark. We will now wait until it is more dusk!"

Accordingly, we went out on to the balcony and smoked for an hour. Zeda, polluting the clean air with the fumes of the long, black cigars he affected. They had an appearance as of dried twigs and an odor so wholly original as to defy simile. Between eight and nine o'clock he expressed himself satisfied with the light—or rather, lack of it—and we all gathered around the table in the gloom, spreading our hands as he directed. For close upon an hour we sat in a tense silence, the room seeming to be very hot. A slight breeze off the common had wafted the fumes of Zeda's cigar in through the open windows, which he had afterward closed, and the reek filled the air as with something palpable—and nauseous. I was growing very weary of the business, and Lesty, despite the doctor's warning against disturbing the silence, had begun to cough and fidget irritably, when the rumbling foreign voice came, so unexpectedly as to startle us all: "It is useless tonight; something is not propitious. Turn up the lights." From the celerity with which Halesowen complied, I divined that he, too, had been growing impatient. "The re-son of some of the conditions," said Zeda, relocking his portion of the vase in its case. "Tomorrow we shall make some changes in the order."

He seemed not at all disappointed being apparently as confident as ever in the ultimate success of the seance. One of the windows suggested should be left open on the following evening during our sitting; and this we were only too glad to agree upon, since it would possibly serve to clear the atmosphere, somewhat, of the odor emanating from the doctor's cigars. Several other points he also mentioned as being conceivably responsible for our initial failure—such as our positions around the table, and the relative distance of the potsherd. "We shall see tomorrow," were his last words as he left us.

"A perfect monument of mendacity!" muttered Lesty, as we heard the retiring footsteps of our foreign friend on the gravel below: "and I think his accent is assumed. I don't know why we even seem to credit such an incredible fable." "I don't know, either," said Halesowen, reflectively. "But he certainly possesses the missing part of the vase, and if he does not believe the story himself, what object can he have to serve by these seances?" "Give it up!" replied Lesty, promptly; and that, I think, rather aptly expressed the mental attitude of the three.

We saw nothing of Zeda, throughout the following day, but he duly put in an appearance in the evening, and placed us around the table again, but in different order. One of the French windows was left open, and the potsherd, with the lamp beside it, placed somewhat to the left. After persevering for about forty minutes, we were rewarded by a rather conventional phenomenon. The table rocked and gave forth cracking sounds. There was no other manifestation, and, at about half-past ten, the doctor again terminated the seance.

"Excellent!" said Zeda, enthusiastically. "Excellent!" we were in rapport, and within the circle there was power. Tomorrow we shall too much light from the lamps in the room. It is good, I think, to have open the windows, but this Japanese screen will keep out that too much light and shelter the vase. Tomorrow we will observe these things."

MEIGHEN CAUSES WAR AT BANQUET

Hon. Rodolphe Monty Declares He Was Barred From Quebec.

CAHAN, M.P., DENIES

Says Conservative Leader Kept Away of His Own Volition.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Montreal, Nov. 20.—"Don't you think Mr. Meighen was deceived? You have witnessed the fact that Mr. Patenaude declared against him, saying that he was against his imperialism as much as he was against the Americanization of Mr. King. Under such circumstances Mr. Meighen was unable to come to Quebec. He was forbidden to come. He submitted then but will come now. He will go into Bagot and other parts of the province. It takes a French-Canadian to defend an Englishman."

The foregoing was directed last evening by Hon. Rodolphe Monty, former secretary of state and unsuccessful Conservative candidate in Laurier-Quebec, to C. H. Cahan, K.C., Conservative member-elect for St. Lawrence-St. George, in the course of an interchange at a meeting of the Liberal-Conservative association here. An address by Mr. Monty, wherein he spoke sharply of the situation created in Quebec by which, according to him, the opposition leader had been "prevented from coming here" during the federal campaign, had brought from Mr. Cahan a denial that such was the case.

Doubts Success Anyhow.

"No man ever prevented Mr. Meighen from coming to this province," said Mr. Cahan, "except his own will. When he comes he will receive a welcome from Montreal and other parts of the province. I have my own doubts as to whether he would have got more than 10 per cent of the French vote in the province and it may as well be understood that he was not coming here—and as to the conditions under which the fight was conducted—any assenting party."

In Hon. Monty's address the former secretary of state said that it was time to discuss the political situation as it existed. It was true, that defeat in Quebec was due to Mr. Meighen, nor had the Conservative party been defeated.

"What is true is that an independent party has been defeated," said Mr. Monty. "I have nothing to say against the leaders of this party; I do not say that Mr. Meighen and his colleagues would have brought about a better result. Everyone has a share of responsibility."

The Conservative party, continued Mr. Monty, had been losing in Quebec since 1897.

Backs Patenaude.
Following Mr. Monty, Mr. Cahan addressed the gathering and defied any one to point to a single word said by Mr. Patenaude that was not Conservative doctrine. He had no personal part in any fight but the committee, but he felt that it did not help the unity of the Conservative party to cast any reflections on those who fought in the last campaign on the Conservative platform.

A verbal interchange between Mr. Cahan and Mr. Monty ensued, in which Mr. Cahan declared that he knew of no deception.

"If Mr. Meighen can be deceived in a province which is open to investigation and where he has himself declared that he is a leader of a great party," said Mr. Cahan. "I do not want any argument with Mr. Meighen. He is a friend of mine, but I will add this: Mr. Meighen was prevented from coming to this province. He received a warning when in the maritime provinces and he was stopped by it at Lewis."

Mr. Cahan insisted that he had never been a party to any such arrangement to keep Mr. Meighen out of Quebec.

LORAIN IS BARED AS BIG RUM BASE

Ohio Officers Make Hauls of Boats and Whiskey—Planes Were Used.

Special to The Advertiser.
Cleveland, Nov. 20.—Disclosure that Lorain is a landing base for rum-runners and bootleggers was made today by federal authorities, following the seizure of three rum-running boats, confiscation of 400 cases of beer and whiskey hidden along the beach west of Lorain, and the arrest of an Akron man and a woman.

Warrants for the arrest of four men, said to be ringleaders of the rum-running gang, whose activities center in Cleveland, Lorain, Sandusky, Akron and Pelee Island, are in the hands of federal authorities, it was said.

Five cases of "British Special Beer" were taken from a 40-foot power boat. The boat had apparently been abandoned after most of its cargo had been loaded, either on planes or autos.

Another boat was seized a quarter-mile out in the lake by the Lorain coastguards. This carried no liquor, but the odor of liquor was strong in the hold. The third boat was found tied to the pier at the foot of Georgia avenue in Lorain. It is believed to belong to the "Georgia avenue gang" of bootleggers and runners.

It is believed the liquor was brought over to the Lorain port by small boats and then loaded onto planes for distribution throughout Ohio, Western Pennsylvania and eastern cities. Planes landed and took off in a large field near the place where the beached boat was found, officers said.

WOMAN MUST SERVE TERM ON APPEAL BEING DENIED

Special to The Advertiser.
Windsor, Nov. 20.—An appeal to the attorney-general of Ontario having failed, Mrs. Mary Osterovitch, 33 Charles street, Ford Ont., probably will begin serving a sentence in the Essex county jail at Sandwich, Saturday.

Mrs. Osterovitch was convicted of violating the Ontario temperance act three weeks ago and sentenced to one month in jail and fine $300. If she is unable to pay the fine she will be compelled to spend another three months in jail.

While the appeal was pending, Mrs. Osterovitch was permitted to remain at her home. Members of the provincial police were to take her to jail Thursday, but delayed for a few more days when they learned she had not yet made arrangements for the care of her three young children.

ESKIMOS ENTHUSIASTIC ABOUT TOBACCO

Civilization's many wonders apparently made but slight impression on Savakak, Anaktot, Attawinga and Tapita, four Eskimos brought to Montreal by officials of the Revillon Press Trading Company. The four visitors from the frozen north smiled and were mildly amused by the white man's environment and pastimes, but displayed little enthusiasm for the mechanical devices which they were viewing for the first time.

These light of one thing, however, invariably caused the quartet to display an enthusiasm anyone could understand. Tobacco was unmistakably a tremendously prized article, one that they enjoyed hugely, though they had never in their lives made its acquaintance previous to boarding the good ship, "Jean Revillon," which brought them from Baker Lake to Liverpool, Nova Scotia.

As a solace for the rigors of winter as they know it, all four took away with them to Pasqua, Ontario, a plentiful supply of Millbank Cigarettes.

SHIP FAIR PRIZES BY FREIGHT TRAIN

Haley and Lee Carry Off 23 Prizes at Royal Winter Exhibit.

OXFORD MEN SCORE

Cream of Holsteins From Western Ontario—Other Ribbons Many.

By PURDUM LOVE, Advertiser Staff Reporter.

Toronto, Nov. 20.—Western Ontario will need several freight cars to carry home all the prizes and ribbons won by stock and horse men from that famous breeding district at the Royal Winter Fair this year.

Not only did the Jersey breeders clean up in their classes, but the two Western Ontario Holstein breeders, Haley & Lee, Springfield, Oxford county and J. W. Innes, Woodstock, carried off the cream of the Holstein prizes.

Haley & Lee won a total of 23 prizes and carried off two champion ships, Belle Calamity Wayne, the champion Holstein cow of America, was acclaimed champion of the Holstein cows, Belle is five years and seven months old, and just about the most valuable cud-chewer at the fair. Her owners have been offered the price of a farm for her. Belle will go back to Springfield and resume her job of giving 112 pounds of milk per day, an unofficial record she has established.

Haley & Lee Winners.

Lady Pouch Susie, junior champion female, is another product of the Haley & Lee farm and gazed at interested spectators with novice contentment during the entire show.

Mr. Innes won these second to Haley & Lee in number of prizes won. The City View Stock Farm captured 20 prizes with sixteen animals. This included five firsts, four seconds, three thirds, two fourths, four fifths and a sixth and a seventh.

V. Duchess Toitilla, a splendid animal, was first in junior heifer calves. Mr. Innes also won second and fifth in this class, and was first in get of quill-winning the latter with Alvarita Colantha Ormsby. City View Stock Farm was also first in cows under four years.

Quality, Not Quantity.

"Western Ontario has many Holsteins entered, but we sure took a lot of prizes," was the way in which the Haley & Lee herdsmen summed up the winnings.

George E. Day, secretary of the Shorthorn Breeders' association, declared that many fine animals from Western Ontario had carried off prizes in this breed.

There has been a little better quality in the Shorthorns all the way through, said Mr. Day, former professor of animal husbandry at the O. A. C. Among the Western Ontario breeders who were winners, Mr. Day mentioned Robinson Brothers, St. Marys, J. Douglas, Caledonia, William Walde, Stratford; E. Brien & Sons, Ridgeway; Gordon, Auld, Guelph; J. A. Watt, Elora, and James White, St. Marys.

Won With Cotswolds.

J. D. Brien, Ridgeway, general superintendent of the show, was a big winner in Cotswold sheep, as was Ernie Robson, Denfield, with a Lincoln. Mr. Brien won the best out of fifteen prizes in Berkshires.

W. E. Wright & Son, Glanworth, were prominent in Dorset sheep and Chester White hogs, having won the first prize for flock of Dorsets to Middlesex, had grand champion Chester White male and reserve junior champion.

The champion Berkshire hog of the show was won by an entry of P. J. McClellan, Wyoming, while Henry Capes of the same village was a winner in Chester Whites.

John Harris, Kingsville, was among the big winners in Herefords.

Do you wonder that Western Ontario has so many cars to carry home their winnings?

BUSINESS WORLD GIVEN OPPORTUNITY

Coolidge Promises To Keep Hands Off—Opposes Public Ownership.

Associated Press Despatch.

New York, Nov. 20.—President Coolidge last night held out a promise to business that it need fear no interference from his administration so long as it confines itself to legitimate activities.

Addressing 1,000 New York business executives at the 157th annual banquet of the state chamber of commerce, he emphasized the desirability of the "largest possible independence between government and business," declared that business should be unhindered and free, admitted that "proper regulation and control" of business as "disagreeable and expensive," and expressed the belief that, judged by its conduct during the last few years, business can be trusted to keep its own house in order.

"When government enters the field of business with its great resources it has a tendency to extravagance and inefficiency, having the power to crush all competitors, likewise closes the door of opportunity and results in monopoly."

Repeatedly during his address the president was applauded, his audience giving approval to his expressed attitude toward business; to his appeal for continued government economy; to his endorsement of his appeal for United States adherence to the world court.

FLOWERS ARE URGED TO BEAUTIFY HOMES

George Simpson, Ottawa, Gives Illustrated Lecture To Kiwanians.

"City Garden Plots and Flower Beds" was the subject of an illustrated address, before the Kiwanis club yesterday, George Simpson, of Ottawa, president of the Ontario Kiwanis cultural society, was the speaker.

Mr. Simpson pointed out the economic side of beauty, and that home gardening was therefore worthwhile, declared that beauty should be unhindered and free, admitted that "proper regulation and control" of business as "disagreeable and expensive," and expressed the belief that, judged by its conduct during the last few years, business can be trusted to keep its own house in order.

The slides were for the most part taken at Ottawa and depicted very beautiful garden scenes from the estates of the government houses and private homes. Many of them were taken in Mr. Simpson's own garden.

There were also many slides of different types of flowers. Mr. Simpson explained and pointing out the points of beauty in each, and showing their suitability in gardening.

The use of stone-work in gardening was recommended, if it were naturalistic and not artificial, it can be used for flagging, gates, rock gardens, drive boundaries and pools.

He appealed to the club as an organization trying to improve civic conditions, to do their utmost to make their property beautiful. "Everybody seems to complain about some ugly spot, but nobody seems to feel it is their duty to see that the place is made beautiful. The Kiwanis constitute an immovable force and they cannot be stopped by anything, therefore they are the most logical people to attend to such conditions."

Dr. Alfred Grant made an appeal for the Kiwanis to give their support to the nurse's home, in the coming vote. Miss Hazel Hunt played several numbers on the piano, which were much appreciated. Rev. Hays was the booster for the day, and gave an interesting account of the success of his business, Russell Wright, Gib. Ward and Dr. Sweeney were the winners of the drawing.
