SOCIETY

In Last Year's Camp.

By M. Adair Macdonald. They staid the camp's glory, they scoured the foals at play. They yearned for temporary on every woodland way. Their tent peaks pricked the dawning, their bugles shook the dew. While the cheerful Division became the men we knew. The tents were struck at twilight, the pipers skirled a cry. The stars came out in heaven to bid the lads good-bye. That night they took the Old Road, the straightest road that runs. Deep with the dust of armies and graven by their guns. Now fearless in the moorlands, the glades and the lone hills. But still the russet ponies stand solemnly afar. And still I think they harken, and know the sound of men. The marching tramp of heroes we shall not see again. Now leave us to its glory the camp of yesterday. Vex not its echoes lightly—their souls may come this way. The lads who cut the bracken when beechen leaves were red. And, ere the cuckoo's calling, were England's Deathless Dead! From The Spectator.

Knights of Columbus as Guards

By Special Wire to the Courier.

Winnipeg, June 19.—This morning at 11.05, the body of the late Archbishop Langevin is expected to arrive in Winnipeg. Practically every man and male child of the Catholic faith of both Winnipeg and St. Boniface, besides a large representation from out of town will be formed up near the station and when the casket arrives will escort it to the historic St. Boniface cathedral. Besides a large number of Catholic laity, the officers of every Catholic society in Winnipeg and St. Boniface will march, and several thousand children of the parochial schools. The clergy of this province besides high Catholic dignitaries from the entire country will participate and many have already arrived. When the Cathedral is reached the coffin will be taken into the edifice and carried into the sacristy, where it will remain in state until the funeral services Tuesday morning. The remains will be guarded night and day by four fourth degree knights of Columbus, armed in the full uniform of that order.

NO DELAY EXPECTED

New York, June 19.—Counsel of Harry K. Thaw and for the state were agreed to-day that there should be no attempt to delay or adjourn the hearing on the question of his sanity before Judge Hendrick and a jury next Tuesday. Morgan J. O'Brien, of Thaw's counsel, said Thaw was anxious to go on the witness stand and demonstrate that he is now sane and that his counsel had scores of witnesses including aliens.

CONFIRMED NOW.

Berlin, June 19.—Included in the new stories given out to-day by the Overseas News Agency is the following: "The German Admiralty has published a confirmation of the long-standing rumors that the submarine U-29 was destroyed by a British tank steamer, which flying the Swedish flag at the time, rammed the submarine after it had been ordered to stop. Commenting on this, German newspapers say it is proof of the British abuse of neutral flags, and that the illegal course followed by ships of commerce compeled the commanders of German submarines to consider their own safety first and sink such ships without warning."

Nearly one hundred delegates, representing the Patriotic League of the County of Dufferin, waited on the county council to advocate a grant of one million dollars or ten thousand dollars for patriotic purposes.

Protest has been lodged with the British Government. George S. Payne, of Niagara Falls, received word that his son, Harold, who was Staff Signaller, had been killed in action May 29th. He was a member of the 44th Regiment, and left with the first contingent.

| WEEDS ON VACANT LOTS. | |
| What undoubtedly constitutes a menace to those farmers who are making an honest effort to keep their farms clean, is the crop of weeds found growing on vacant lots and roadsides in and around our towns and cities. These vacant lots are often nothing more or less than nurseries and breeding places for all kinds of weeds. This is especially true of towns where large areas adjoining have been subject to wildcat subdivision, forming lodging places for weeds, which are allowed to grow unmolested. These produce countless numbers of seeds, to be blown and scattered by the winds over the farms. So far, bulletins, articles and advice pertaining to weed control, have been directed at the farmer. A glance at the conditions found in most of our cities and towns will prove convincing that the farmer is not entirely to blame in the matter of weed seed production and distribution. In the West the weed inspectors are being trained and instructed along lines that will enable them to assist the farmers in weed control, while at the same time provision by law is made to prevent any farmer from allowing his farm to become a breeding place for weeds and a menace to his neighbors. In most towns there are by-laws covering the weed problem, but too often they are not enforced. Those living in towns and cities should co-operate and do their bit in the war against weeds. This is an important matter, and should receive strict attention by every town council. Action should be taken at once and not deferred until the weeds ripen and scatter their seeds. The District Labor Council will take steps to secure the elimination of the dangerous running board on Toronto's open street cars. | |

An extraordinary and unlooked-for piece of good fortune has fallen to the lot of the wife and family of the captain of the Niggen, a vessel of about 500 tons, belonging to Belfast, which foundered near Malta about Christmas. On December 21 the boat sailed from Alexandria to Barcelona. She was "spoken" off Malta about Christ, but since then no word had been heard of her, nor had any intelligence been received from any of the occupants. The captain, along with the crew, consisting of sixteen hands, were given up for lost, but judge the astonishment of the owners in Belfast when they received a cable from Alexandria stating that the vessel had been received the following cable from the captain of the vessel, dated from Solloom: "Niggen foundered December 27. Myself and seven of crew proceeding to Alexandria." The wife and family of the captain have been in deep mourning since the time the boat was supposed to have foundered, and the fact that no news had been received from them strengthened them in their belief that she had gone to the bottom.

Unprecedented Piano Sale

We desire to sell every piano in our store before July 1st. Some are new, several only slightly used, and one very old, but each and every one will be placed at such a surprisingly low price that it will simply have to go. In fact, the opportunity to buy pianos at such bargains has never been equalled in the history of piano selling in Brantford, and we should know, for, as many of our readers are aware, we are the oldest dealers in town.

Our object is to empty the store, and our reason for wanting an empty store will be explained to you after the object has been attained.

We want to impress upon you as strongly as words can do that this is a real bargain sale. Come and prove our statement. We will not allow a few dollars to stand between us and clearing the store.

We will make terms so reasonable for responsible people that they cannot help buying.

SOLDIER'S SMOKES GET FURTHER BACKED UP

Big Organization Sees to Cheaper Rates on Postage To Soldiers at Front.

Toronto, June 19.—Experience has shown that perfecting tobacco and nowhere has this lesson been brought home more forcibly than in England since the outbreak of the war. The realization of this fact has resulted in the perfecting of machinery not only for the supply of munitions of war, and the material needs of the men at the front, but for everything that relates to their comfort. The Overseas Club, an Imperial organization with a membership of over 13,000 scattered throughout the Empire, with headquarters in London, soon discovered that the efforts of its members and others in supplying tobacco and other comforts for soldiers at the front were being greatly negated by the lack of proper organization. In consequence of this, the management of the club, at great expense, devised a scheme to overcome the many difficulties which confronted them at every turn. After several months' strenuous labor, a system was inaugurated whereby it was made possible for one individual or group of individuals to send tobacco or cigarettes to men at the front with absolute certainty of the parcel reaching the persons for whom it was intended in a reasonably short time. Following this achievement, the club turned its attention to cutting the cost of express or postal rates; next came a scheme for wholesale purchase of supplies, by which the purchasing power of every shilling was made as great as that of a pound. In other words, the small contributor was able to send about double the quantity of tobacco or cigarettes at less cost to men on the firing line than formerly. So rapidly was advantage taken of the improved system that the club is now sending two tons of tobacco in quarter-pound packages, and 1,300,000 cigarettes in packets of 50 to the front daily.

COMMISSIONER'S ADDRESS. This splendid service is now available for the Canadians. The details of the scheme was fully explained at a meeting at the city hall last night by Mr. Arthur Private, special commissioner from the headquarters of the Overseas Club in England. The meeting was under the auspices of the local Overseas Club. Mayor Church presided and commended the organization to the citizens. He asked Mr. Richard Ivens, president of the local club to introduce Mr. Private. That gentleman explained with a great wealth of detail, the working of the scheme, which he said was the disposal of any and every society or organization in Canada who chose to avail themselves of it. He explained that it was proposed to organize a campaign to raise funds in Canada for the supply of tobacco and cigarettes for men at the front. Contributors would have the privilege of earmarking their subscription for the sending of packets to individual soldiers, or to groups of soldiers, or to the general fund for the support of comforts "to the lonely soldiers."

OPPOSITION CONVERTED. Several questions were asked Mr. Private by persons who were inclined to oppose the scheme. These included a deputation from the District Labor Council and tobacco manufacturers. Mr. Private won the labor men to his side and disarmed the criticism of the tobacco men. Replying to an enquiry regarding the supply of Canadian cigarettes, he expressed a desire to meet the manufacturers and discuss the proposition with them. He was offering an honest service, no single interest was being served. Every investigation was being courted by the organizers of the scheme; no one had an axe to grind, their only object was to serve the public and benefit the soldiers.

A WORD WITH YOU FELLOWS. "Now then, boys, it's up to you to see that the Tommies who are out at the front, bearing the brunt and hardships of this war, are provided with the one great solace nature has provided for the man in trouble—tobacco. He who smokes knows no trouble. Anything, however small, tobacco or cash, will be gratefully acknowledged, and used in sending comforts to the front. If we cannot fight, we can help. Here is downright common sense, from the smokers standpoint. It shows a clear grasp of the situation away there in Flanders. Such an appeal as the above placed at the head of a contribution sheet, and sent around among the employees of any manufacturing plant, is sure to result in a hearty response. See the "COURIER BOX" is kept filled up.

KAISER STILL HAS DREAMS OF EMPIRE

Letter From His Majesty Talks in Terms of Futurity.

Paris, June 19.—Extracts from a letter said to have been sent to Emperor William to a person connected with the Bavarian court and published in Spain are reproduced in The Nation. The emperor is quoted in part: "Our only object is a peace profitable for the German states. This peace may be concluded sooner than thought. If it gave for the time being only an incomplete result it would at least serve as a preparation for the future. It could be signed to-morrow if I wished. "When my august grandfather placed the Empire on its present basis he did not pretend to have realized a completed work. The empire always is susceptible of growth. What cannot be achieved to-day will be achieved later."

Transferring to submarines, he has served on the Empire-famous B-4, and wrote to say briefly how they had lain nine hours submerged and found their way safe through five lines of mines in that exploit. Later he told of his new underwater craft, the B-8, which recently penetrated into the Sea of Marmora and struck a submerged ship and buckling their bow plates had to make a hasty exit from that dangerous water.

He is now at Gibraltar with the sub. B-8, where some repairs are being made to the ship, and he himself is getting a much-needed rest. They were submerged at 90 feet deep during this last exploit.

The MASQUERADER

By Katherine Cecil Thurston, Author of "The Circle," Etc. Copyright, 1904, by Harper & Brothers

"Isn't it possible to get out of this?" Eve heard him call to the coachman.

Then she heard no more.

He had leaped out of the carriage with the intention of looking onward toward the cause of the delay.

Instead, by that magnetic attraction that undoubtedly exists, he looked directly in front of him at the group of people waiting on the little island—at one man who leaned against the lamp post in an attitude of apathy—a man with a pallid, unshaven face and listless eyes, who wore a cap drawn low over his forehead.

He looked at this man, and the man saw and returned his glance. For a space that seemed interminable they held each other's eyes; then very slowly Loder drew back into the carriage.

As he dropped into his seat Eve glanced at him anxiously.

"John," she said, "has anything happened? You look ill."

He turned to her and tried to smile.

"It's nothing," he said. "Nothing to worry about." He spoke quickly, but his voice had suddenly become flat.

All the command, all the domination, had dropped away from it.

Eve bent close to him, her face lighting up with anxious tenderness. "It was the excitement," she said, "the strain of tonight?"

He looked at her, but he made no attempt to press the fingers that clasped his own.

"Yes," he said slowly. "Yes. It was the excitement of tonight—and the reaction."

CHAPTER XXVI.

THE next morning at 8 o'clock, and again without breakfast, Loder covered the distance between Grovesnor square and Clifford's inn. He left Chilcote's house hastily—with a haste that only an urgent motive could have driven him to adopt. His steps were quick and uneven as he traversed the intervening streets; his shoulders lacked their decisive pose, and his pale face was marked with shadows beneath the eyes—shadows that bore witness to the sleepless night spent in pacing Chilcote's vast and lonely room. By the curious effect of circumstances the likeness between the two men had never been more significantly marked than on that morning of April 19, when Loder walked along the pavements crowded with early workers and brisk with hisistent news vendors already alive to the value of last night's political crisis.

The irony of this last element in the day's concerns came to him fully when one newspaper, more energetic than his fellows, thrust a paper in front of him. "Sensation in the 'ouse, sir! Speech by Mr. Chilcote! Government defeat!"

For a moment Loder stopped and his face reddened. The tide of emotions still ran strong. His hand went instinctively to his pocket; then his lips set. He shook his head and walked on.

With the same hard expression about his mouth, he turned into Clifford's inn, passed through his own doorway and mounted the stairs.

This time there was no milk can on the threshold of his rooms and the door yielded to his pressure without the need of a key. With a strange sensation of reluctance he walked into the narrow passage and paused, uncertain which room to enter first. As he stood hesitating a voice from the sitting room settled the question.

"Who's there?" it called irritably.

"What do you want?"

Without further ceremony the intruder pushed the door open and entered the room. As he did so he drew a quick breath—whether of disappointment or relief it was impossible to say. Whether he had hoped for or dreaded it, Chilcote was conscious.

As Loder entered he was sitting by the cheerless grate, the ashes of yesterday's fire showing charred and dreary where the sun touched them. His back was to the light, and about his shoulders was an old plaid rug. Behind him on the table stood a cup, a teapot and the can of milk; farther off a kettle was set to boil upon a tiny spirit stove.

In all strong situations we are more or less commonplace. Loder's first remark as he glanced round the disordered room seemed strangely inefficient.

"Where's Robins?" he asked in a brusque voice. His mind teemed with big considerations, yet this was his first involuntary question.

Chilcote had started at the entrance of his visitor; now he sat staring at him, his hands holding the arms of his chair.

"Where's Robins?" Loder asked again.

"I don't know. She—I— We did not hit it off. She's gone—went yesterday." He shivered and drew the rug about him.

"Chilcote"—Loder began sternly. Then he paused. There was something in the other's look and attitude that arrested him. A change of expression passed over his own face. He turned about, with an abrupt gesture, pulled off his coat and threw it on a chair, then, crossing deliberately to the fireplace, he began to rake the ashes from the grate.

Within a few minutes he had a fire crackling where the bed of dead cinders had been, and, having finished the task, he rose slowly from his knees, wiped his hands and crossed to the table. On the small spirit stove the kettle had boiled, and the cover was lifting and falling with a tinkling sound.

Blowing the teapot and, with hands that were evidently accustomed to the task, set about making the tea.

During the whole operation he never spoke, though all the while he was fully conscious of Chilcote's puzzled gaze. The tea ready, he poured it into the cup and carried it across the room.

"Drink this," he said faintly. "The fire will be up presently."

Chilcote extended a cold and shaky hand. "You see"—he began.

But Loder checked him almost savagely. "I do—as well as though I had followed you from Piccadilly last night. For a time that seemed interminable, and, walking to the window, stood looking down into the court. His eyes were blank, his face hard; his ears heard nothing but the faint sound of Chilcote's swallowing, the click of the cup against his teeth.

For a time that seemed interminable he stood motionless; then, when he judged the tea finished, he turned slowly. Chilcote had drawn closer to the fire. He was obviously braced by the warmth, and the apathy that hung about him was to some extent dispelled. Still moving slowly, Loder went toward him and, raising him to the empty cup, stood looking down at him.

"Chilcote," he said very quietly, "I've come to tell you that the thing must end."

After he spoke there was a prolonged pause; then, as if shaken with sudden consciousness, Chilcote rose. The rug dropped from one shoulder and hung down indifferently; his hand caught the back of the chair for support; his unshaven face looked absurd and repulsive in its sudden expression of scared inquiry. Loder involuntarily turned away.

"I mean it," he said slowly. "It's over—we've come to the end."

"But why?" Chilcote articulated blankly. "Why? Why?" In his confusion he could think of no better word.

"Because I throw it up. My side of the bargain's off."

Again Chilcote's lips parted stammeringly. The apathy caused by physical exhaustion and his recently administered drug was passing from him; the hopelessly shattered condition of mind and body was showing through it like a skeleton through a thin covering of flesh.

"But why?" he said again. "Why?"

Still Loder avoided the frightened surprise of the other. "Because I withdraw," he answered doggedly.

Then suddenly Chilcote's tongue was loosened. "Loder," he cried excitedly, "you can't do it! Great heavens, man, you can't do it!" To reassure himself he laughed—a painfully thin echo of his old sarcastic laugh. "If it's a matter of greater opportunity," he began, "of more money—"

RED CROSS WORK.

The problem of keeping up funds for the continuance of Red Cross work has been engaging the attention of the Women's Patriotic League for some time past, and it has been finally decided to dispense for the present, with all forms of entertainments, teas, concerts, etc., in aid of the league, and to make a direct appeal to citizens for monthly contributions during the next six months.

In this way it is hoped the work of providing and forwarding hospital supplies may be kept up steadily and perhaps increased. It is unnecessary to emphasize the greatness of the need. Those in authority at Canadian Headquarters in London, report that after the last of Langensmet's immense supplies on hand, just vanished before their eyes, and the most optimistic among us know that such occasions must recur, and it is confidently hoped, that the people of Brantford will see to it that, in so far as possible, no wounded Canadian will suffer unnecessarily, owing to lack of interest and self-denial, on the part of those at home.

Plans have been made whereby everyone will be given an opportunity to help. A house to house canvass will be undertaken next week by members of the league. Contributions of all sums from five cents a month upwards will be gladly received. The league would emphasize the fact that a very large number of contributors of small amounts is more to be desired than fewer contributions of larger amounts—seven children's pennies will be welcome.

Canvassers will be provided with printed slips, which all willing to assist will be asked to sign, and with envelopes, one for each month, which will be left with contributors. These envelopes are to be deposited at the beginning of each month in a Red Cross box, which will be centrally placed for this purpose, and it is earnestly hoped that everyone will be ready for the canvassers when they call.

Let us all unite in setting aside each month what we can, be it penny or pound in aid of the most necessary and noble work. Let us do this in honor of the thousand volunteers who have left our city, in memory of those gallant fellow-citizens who have already given their all, in sympathy with those who now lie in the hospitals of Britain and France, and in appreciation of those who are still in the battle line and those too, who later on, will bravely face the foe, in order that freedom and justice may yet prevail.

of the splendid temper of our army in the field, have you ever thought that its qualities of undaunted courage and never-failing optimism to have burned so brightly all through the weary months of the campaign, "must have been fed from some steady source?"
You know what the presence of "Corporal John" meant to Marlborough's troops. This war has been heard how Wellington's soldiers declared that the sight of "old Arty's long nose in a fight" was better than a reinforcement of 10,000 men; you have seen how the calm steadfastness of "Corporal John" meant to the French army in a methodical, businesslike organization. In the same way the spirit of our army in France is the spirit of its leader, Sir John French.

It is not in the hour of victory that an army turns to its head for solace.
It was when the fate of the combat hung in the balance at Malplaque that Marlborough's troops derived fresh heart from the sight of "old Arty" thrusting to the charge at the head of the British and Hanoverian cavalry.
It was in the dark days in Spain that Wellington's hard pressed legions took comfort from the presence of the imperturbable Englishman in their midst.
This war has shown that Britons have lost nothing of the fighting qualities of their fathers. But there are times in war when with disaster lowering, men in the stress of battle become weary and it is then that they need a true leader. Then it is that the leader's character is tested.

Thus it was at Mons and after. Thus it was at Ypres. Those who lived with Sir John French through the dark days of the great retreat will tell you that he, almost alone of all men there, never lost heart. He maintained his brave confidence in God, in his men, and in himself throughout, even when the heaviest burdens were piled upon his shoulders. He was looking for a spot where the British expeditionary force could make its last stand. For the little army that Sir John French originally took out from England he had secured a magnificent position. So the field marshal had decided.
Such is the spirit of the man.

Through sleepless nights, through days when one message of bad news succeeded another, when regiments were being cut up when the men were so dog tired that they staggered as they followed the long road towards Paris, Sir John remained calm and confident. No outward sign betrayed the anxiety that gnawed at him, destroying him, burdened with the awful responsibility of the flower of England's army confided to his charge.
He wore his field marshal's cap with the same jaunty rake as ever. He was scrupulously neat in his attire, as is his invariable wont. Whenever the accommodation allowed he would sit down to luncheon at the appointed hour as placidly as though he were at his London house. And the talk would be of pleasant English topics, gossip, home politics, the latest number of Punch, etc., then luncheon over, back to the maps and the reports and the onward rush of war.

At the end of the day, when the field marshal would break off work and announce that he was going for a walk. He would stroll away, a dapper, well gaitered little figure, chatting with a companion about such things as the weather, the state of the fields, a good horse, a garden. But when he returned it was with his mind made up about some knotty point to solve which he had thus sallied forth.
"Will you be so kind," a general checked him here, a messenger standing there, all the apparatus of general headquarters set a quivering in a flash.

Read his despatches (written entirely by himself) let him hasten to dispose of that idle hypothesis so often heard when his reports are praised,
"if he writes his own despatches" dis-passionate, calm, and admirably lucid, written in the very midst of the tumult of war. Mark the date of that splendid story of the great retreat, September 7 or two days after the French and British armies had gone over from the defensive to the offensive and were in the act of driving the Germans back across the Marne.
Note the strictly businesslike account of the operations, the almost cold language only warming when the writer pauses to speak of "the glorious victory of the British troops" or to bestow praise on his officers and regiments by name.

You can almost hear him say, "I will not dine to-day; I must write my despatch." You can almost see him seated in his room among his maps, building up sentence by sentence, amid the bustle of headquarters during a great advance, the deathless story that shall make an empire ring.

MYSTERY OF GHELUVELT.
See him during the battle of Ypres.
This is his version (despatches dated November 20, 1914) of one of the most dramatic moments of the war, that critical hour on October 31 when literally the fate of the British empire trembled in the balance "I was present with Sir Douglas Haig at Hooze between two and three o'clock on this day when the first division were retiring. I regard it as the most critical moment of the whole of this great battle. The fall of the British position and the capture of the village of Gheluvelt at such a time was fraught with momentous consequences. If any one unit can be singled out for special praise it is the Worcesters."
"The Chief" as Sir John is called throughout the army in France, presides over his household in a benign and affectionate, almost a paternal manner, though in himself he is as young as his younger brother. The alarms and excursions of war are outwardly banished from his charming house though the to-and-fro of ord-eries and of staff officers at all hours of the day and night denotes the ceaseless activity going on within—London Mail.

to the Commander-in-Chief at Ports-nity of visiting the important port un-should like you to express to the Ad-departments, and the workmen in the dockyard my appreciation of the task which, by their devotion to duty, they are taking in maintaining the strength and efficiency of the Fleet. I was much impressed by the smart and seamanlike appearance of all ratings which I saw at Whale Island and at the barracks. It reflects great credit on the officers responsible for their

Old World Notes

Determined to fight, Trooper Warren, of the 9th Wellington East Coast Mounted Rifles, unable to find a place in the New Zealand Contingent for the front (members of the force being selected by ballot) worked his passage home, and has now secured a commission in the Highland Divisional Train of the Army Service Corps.

for the help of the Blue Cross in various ways is certainly on the increase. One of the hospitals in France is now being extended to accommodate 500 horses, and a special envoy left London a few days ago for Italy to discuss the establishment of Blue Cross hospitals in that country.

The most interesting military spectacle ever witnessed in Belfast took place the other Saturday, when the Ulster division of Lord Kitchener's Army was reviewed by Maj.-General Sir Hugh MacCallum, and afterwards paraded the principal streets of the city. Altogether seventeen thousand troops participated. Flags were profusely displayed from public buildings, business establishments, and private houses, and along the line of route stands were erected for the accommodation of spectators.

LONDON WINS IN FOURTEEN INNINGS

London, Ont., June 19.—It took London fourteen innings to defeat St. Thomas yesterday by a score of 3 to 2. Score: R.H.E. St. Thomas—000200000000—2 6 2 London—100100000000—3 14 4

Hamilton, June 19.—Roberts went a bit wobbly in the sixth yesterday with the result that Hamilton got four runs. This proved enough, although Ottawa was fighting to the finish. Score: R.H.E. Ottawa—0001000000—2 6 1 Hamilton—000004008—4 5 1

MAPLE LEAFS WINNING

Guelph, June 19.—Guelph outbatted and outfielded the Brants again yesterday and won by 9 to 5. Close, who twirled for the visitors, was hit hard, whereas Dorbeck pitched a steady game, and was tight in the pinches. Score: R.H.E. Brantford—020 000 030—5 7 4 Guelph—220 210 118—9 11 1

Manager Warner is not satisfied that all the Brants are trying, and he has reported several of them to President Nelson, with the result that the shirkers will likely be benched without pay, if they do not get out and exert themselves in the immediate future. "Slab" contended that nine errors should never have been chalked up against the Indians on Wednesday if every man had been out to win, and he saw no reason why, with Close's good work, the Brants should lose out yesterday. Therefore, the bench suspensions are looming up, and some

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Philadelphia, June 19.—Felsch's batting and fielding and four double plays were the features of yesterday's game in which Chicago defeated Philadelphia 11 to 4. In addition to driving in three runners with a homer, Felsch figured in the scoring of three other runs and he broke up a batting rally by the home team in the fifth inning by a wonderful one-hand running catch off Walsh's bat after which he doubled up a runner at first base. McAvoy was badly spiked above the right knee in the eighth, and was carried off the field. Score: R.H.E. Chicago—00240111—11 12 2 Philadelphia—20000020—4 8 0

At Boston—The Red Sox took another game from St. Louis yesterday, three runs to one. It was a pitchers' duel, Hamilton allowing fewer hits than Foster, but being less effective in the pinches. Score: R.H.E. St. Louis—10000000—1 7 1 Boston—010020003—3 6 2

At Washington—Detroit ran the bases at will yesterday, and aided by Boehling's wildness and Williams' three errors, defeated Washington 5 to 3, making it two straight games. The Tigers made a triple steal and

CANADIAN HUSTLE HELPS IN MANY TIGHT CORNERS AT FRONT

An article of particular interest to Canadians appears in Collier's Weekly from the pen of Frederick Palmer who writes of a visit to the Canadian trenches. While no location or division is mentioned, the officer who owns a newspaper in Quebec, is obviously Lt.-Col. D. Watson, of the 2nd Battalion, First Brigade, and brigadier, is Brigadier-Gen. Mercier, of Toronto. The following excerpts from the article are made with the permission of Collier's:

When the Canadians were at Salisbury Plain some British officers were a little uncertain about them. They appeared to neglect time-honored military forms in respect to saluting superiors and other details. However, anybody bred in America did not worry about that, not if they were real Canadians.

I got nostalgic and suggested that I would like to go into the Canadian trenches.

"That is for the general to say," he said, "I'll write him a note."

With that note we proceeded down more dark roads with a guide to another farmhouse which also had its windows curtained to keep any ray of light from escaping. When I went into the "parlor" and office, which was about ten by twelve, with at least three chairs, and remarked that I lived across the street from Montreal, in New York, the reception I got was good for my home-sickness. There was a glad hand over that border, which is, and ever shall be without fortresses, for the "Yankee" correspondent, battling about in the night around the front in France.

The speech and manner in that room was as different from that of a British headquarters as of two different countries speaking the same language. Some of the officers by their accent might be taken for Canadians in London and for English in Montreal. But not so the Brigadier-General. He had breathed the wine in the air of North America from childhood. In accent, manner, complexion, he was Canadian.

"The men got pretty bored some times at Salisbury Plain in England while they waited," he said. "Any cases up for discipline to-day" he asked his aid.

"None, sir." "That's the result of being in the trenches," he said. "They were for war, and what was what the men wanted to steady them. You know how it is in our countries. A man has to hustle. He learns to depend on himself, and pretty fast, or he goes to the wall. As soon as we got in the trenches and we were in touch with the real thing, we weren't long in learning what was required in this kind of fighting. It's the natural American adaptability."

"May I go into the trenches" I asked. He turned to an officer, who went to the telephone on a little table in one corner of the room and called up an officer in one section of the trenches. Half a dozen sentences and all was arranged as simply as if the general manager of a corporation in Toronto had given directions to the superintendent to show a visitor over the plant. Sergeant White would meet us at a certain point and take us to a battalion headquarters where he would be in the hands of a major who would do the rest.

SERGT. WHITE'S TRENCH PARTY.

No door of a lighted room is opened toward the enemy unless it leads to a darkened hall, and that of the Canadian parlor and office opened on to one. Again we were plodding along the road. Ahead we heard the sound of a struggle and saw a faint glow of light. A transport horse was down in the slough at the side of the road and dim shadows under an electric flash were trying to free him of this tangle of harness.

In the midst of the broken walls of a village of roofless houses, which were a little farther demolished by each day's visitation of German shells, Sergt. White, lean and tall, with clean-cut features unmistakably American, met us. We left the car and the chauffeur to wait without thinking how lonely one used to the glitter of the White Way might be amid the ruins. He had to wait in the alley while his two passengers went to see the show—and after coming all the way from New York, too.

"Well, you've had your baptism of fire," I said to Sergt. White. "How does it feel?"

"You're nervous; sort of keyed up," he said.

"But you're used to it now—used to the shells, anyway?"

There wasn't any pose about Sergt. White. He was an intelligent Westerner.

"No, sir, I don't see how you can say you get used to them. It seems to me if you got used to them, you'd get careless about your work. You don't just let them get your nerves. You've got to keep your head and your nerve all the while."

"It might have sounded more staid if the sergeant had said: 'Shells? Why I don't mind 'em now any more than bumblebees!'"

I asked a British general, who had been fighting since Mons, about Sergt. White's views and he replied: "Excellent. If a soldier gets callous to fire, he settles down to a sort of a deadly lethargy of existence in the trenches. He gets shiftless and loses his initiative. The result is that he does not keep his trench in a proper condition of defence; he is not keen on his watch, and life is lost unnecessarily."

OH, THOSE COMFORTS OF HOMES.

The British general also approved of this attitude—considering the number of German trenches, which must be taken before the enemy is put out of France. Young Sergeant White is very likely the high-strung type who will still be charging unless some one orders him to stop long after the fellow with the pose of contempt for shell fire has "had enough."

"Battalion headquarters, sir," he said, as he opened a door of a peasant cottage.

Inside five or six officers were sitting about in one of the two ceilinged rooms. Sitting about correctly expresses the character of modern war. When German trenches, work of reports and orders to write, officers wait like firemen for an alarm.

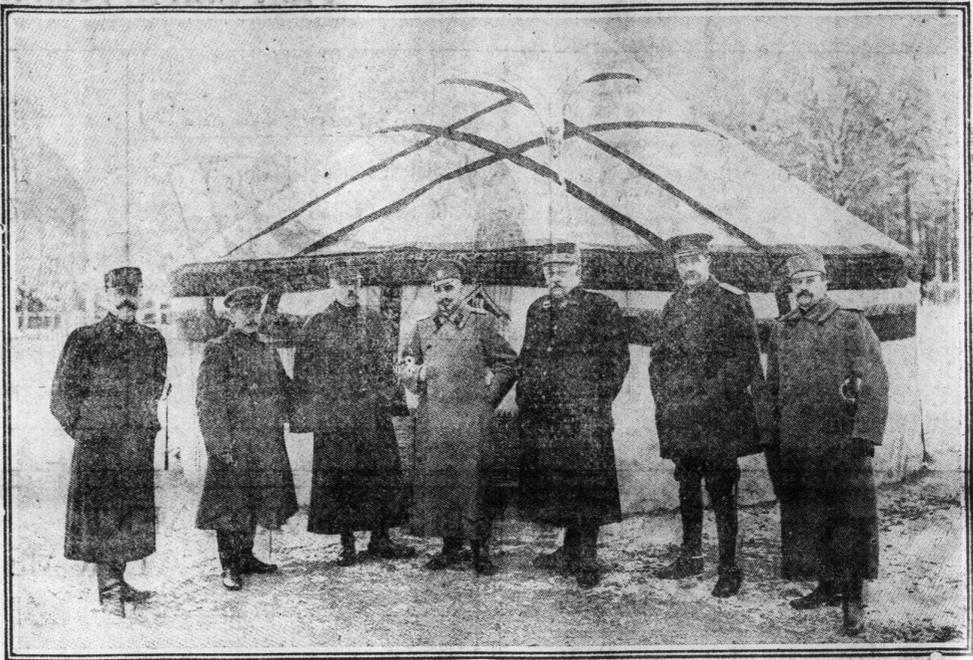

"I've a newspaper myself in Quebec," said the major. "Ever been there? It's a good old town, isn't it? Did you stop at the Chateau? Everybody does."

"More comfortable than this, eh?" put in one of the officers.

They were used to good rooms with hats and to steam heat instead of that funny charcoal brazier glowing in the middle of the floor. If they got enough hot water for shaving they were lucky. However, there was plenty of cold water. If there wasn't, there would be no mud in the flat country of northern France and Flanders. They had come three thousand miles in order to enjoy one another's company in these miserable quarters whose only ornament, there in sound of the most vicious fighting in history, was a dusty lithograph of the boy Christ. If you had asked them to wait in such surroundings for a train at home, they would have howled and fidgeted and written a complaint to the traffic director. If they had been in the shacks of a mining camp in the British Northwest they could at least have taken a walk around without drawing fire. A man in jail could hardly be more confined.

Yet they were perfectly cheerful about it. Indeed, they actually seemed to like it. Men will endure such conditions in the quest of gold or in making war; hardly for adventure, which feeds on love of change. They were not even certain that they would have this shack long. At any moment a German shell might spread it over the landscape. Wasn't it Lord Kitchener who said to the soldiers starting for the front, "You are about to taste the salt of life?" These Canadians were having an experience that came at the cost of danger which would have the land of a deadly lethargy of existence in the trenches. He gets shiftless and loses his initiative. The result is that he does not keep his trench in a proper condition of defence; he is not keen on his watch, and life is lost unnecessarily.

MILITARY ATTACHES OF THE ALLIES FOLLOWING THE RUSSIAN OPERATIONS

The above group shows the military attachés of the allied nations who are following the operations of the Russian armies in the field. Reading from left to right, the names are:—Captain Semet (Belgian attaché), General Oba (Japanese attaché), General Marquis de la Guiche (the French military attaché at Petrograd), General Daniloff (Quartermaster General and Director of Military Operations), Major General Baron de Rickel (Belgian attaché), Major General Sir John Hanbury Williams, K.C.V.O. (British attaché), and Colonel Lompkivitch (Serbian attaché). Since the above group was taken General Oba has returned to Japan, being succeeded by General Makadima.

Think of the major, that prosperous-looking owner of a newspaper in Quebec, sleeping in a cellar at home even for one night! But the cellar was the privilege of his rank. His juniors had to go outside to a dugout. The only sign he showed of "putting on side" was a reference to his cellar; a reference to that with something of the pride of some people to "our motor car." He ascended from it carrying a curtain pole for a "swagger stick."

"That helps," he explained, "to keep from slipping off a board into the mud in the darkness." Of course he was in any war at all. He was an amiable host who was seeing me safely out to the main road across lots in some sparsely settled region out west. Nevertheless we were in range of the German trenches, where the bright flares like Roman candles kept rising. Sentries continued to appear from cover with their sharp enquiries for identification. The sniping shot from the trenches grew more audible, and there was an occasional rifle crack well to the rear of the trenches, unaccountably near in the darkness on our right.

"A sniper," the major explained. "He got our men to-night through the back."

Yes, behind that vigilant line of watching rifles which holds the German army back a German was taking hot shots at shadowy, moving figures in the night. Of course he was in khaki taken from some dead British soldier. In the early days of the fighting such cases were most frequent.

"We got one yesterday," said the major. "We're out after this one."

"ANYONE HERE FROM VANCOUVER?"

We seemed a long time in reaching the trench, but getting up to a trench is the most interesting and ticklish part of the business. A novice, at least, when he arrives has something of the sense of relief that he has when he is safe across a tricky current or around the edge of a precipice on an unstable path. There does not seem to be any danger till a bullet finds its mark and a man falls.

"Well, it's darned disappointing!" one Canadian said after his first day in a trench. He was looking for excitement. He thought he would be shooting all day at Germans and that they would be shooting at him. But he did not see any to shoot at. All he could see was the parapet of the German trench a couple of hundred yards away.

"Glad the Canadians have come!" called out a voice from the other side of the enemy's parapet. "I've been in Vancouver. Anybody there from Vancouver?"

"Stand up so I can see you. Maybe we've met before."

"No, my dear. We'll meet when we come over to take your trenches to-morrow, come on now. Don't be bashful. Stand up and have your photograph taken like Kaiser Bill!"

One head raised above the parapet, and bang. A bald head would be particularly good target. But bald heads know what is good for them.

After a while the occasional casualties becomes a part of life. Fatality creeps into the soldier's mind; though he may not have become callous, he has entered a "his turn."

and "My turn next!" state of mind. The fellows in the dug-outs of the trench walls are safe from bullets and from the shrapnel shells which throw a spray of bullets, but not from high explosive shells. If one of these happens to land in the particular few square feet they occupy, why, as the soldiers say, "It's all over; all over with that lot."

When trenches are close enough to permit of hand grenade throwing, say as far as from first base to the home plate, trench life loses much of its placidity. Grenades are exchanged often enough to keep everybody on the lookout. It takes a nice throw to put a grenade in a narrow ditch. As you can see them coming you may duck. A more ugly visitor is the trench bomb, fired from a mortar high in the air so it descends almost vertically. But you can see that too.

Yes it's necessary to keep your eyes peeled like a good shortstop, said one of the Canadians. "We got one bomb that knocked out a few men, but the rest did not harm anything except the soil of France. All chance, you see. The Germans are always shouting out questions to us. Where do we come from—in that way they think they'll learn which battalion we belong to—and if the second bunch of Canadians has arrived yet. We shout back: 'Waiter, bring two beers and not too much soda! Most of them that speak English are waiters. We tell them to come on over and be taken prisoner and we'll give them a square meal. One of them asked if we would throw the wheats. He'd been in the United States."

Dismiss it if you can have any idea that the old craft of the plains in fighting Indians is not useful in the trenches. What better stalking-hunter's craft is needed than that of the man who crawls scouting over that zone between the two trenches in stealthy silence knowing that if he is discovered a dozen Germans will range until they are sure that he is dead! Craft in dodging grenades and bombs! Hardihood in enduring the night vigils! Good marksmanship telling when you fire at the small points of a man's head above the parapet. No quality associated with a frontier life is waste. But not all the Canadian are frontiersmen.

When I spoke to one thinking perhaps that he was a native of Winnipeg, he replied in the Cornish dialect. He was an emigrant Englishman who had returned to fight for England. Many of his comrades are Englishmen of all classes. About half of the Canadians, I am told, are native born.

"How do you like it," I asked. "I don't believe the Germans have got much on us," he replied. "But it's up to us to show them. I like it better than Salisbury Plain."

They all said that. They had left Canada to go right to the front and were kept in England some six months in camp being made into soldiers after some of them already thought that they were. Salisbury Plain was muddy as Flanders. There they got acquainted with drill and preparation, according to the thorough-going ideas of British regulars, and probably they will not regret it. The British may have their faults, but thoroughness is certainly one of their virtues.

A SUNDAY SERMON BY PASTOR RUSSELL

THE NEW CREATURE'S RESURRECTION BEGUN Death the Great Enemy of the Human Race.

Resurrection in the Heart—Death the Great Enemy of Humanity—Living the Resurrection Life Now—Knowing the Power of Christ's Resurrection—Death to the World Now—Risen—With Christ Now—The Philosophy of the Process—Terms and Conditions of Discipleship—The Loveable Plan of a Loveable God—The Outcome Glorious.

Seattle, Wash., June 13.—Pastor Russell is here to-day, a home-ward bound from the I.B.S.A. Convention at Oakland, Cal., to home-ward bound from the I.B.S.A. Convention at Oakland, Cal., to home-ward bound from the I.B.S.A. Convention at Oakland, Cal.

The resurrection to which the Apostle here refers is not that great change from human to spiritual conditions of which he speaks elsewhere, but a resurrection already begun in the hearts and the minds of the New Creatures in Christ.

There is something very definite in the Bible. Perhaps in times past we failed to get its real import because we supposed that it was a Book of such deep mysteries that it could be understood only by the clergy. Consequently if anyone thought respecting the Bible came into our minds, we put it away as untrue because so reasonable.

Yet much of this Word has been hidden because of the error and misunderstanding which the Adversary foisted upon us during the Dark Ages. As we get the eyes of our understanding open, we see that the Bible teaches what to most of us is a certainty—that everywhere are death, sickness, sorrow, weakness, mental, moral and physical.

The facts are that death is the great enemy of the human race; that death is here because of sin; and that unless God helps us there would be no future life. Plain, simple, reasonable, is the Bible proposition: Death is upon all mankind; and God's provision is that all shall be recovered from the death sentence.

But, as the Apostle points out, it was necessary not only that Christ should die for mankind, but that He should rise from the dead for our justification. (Romans 4:24, 25.) For Christ merely to die on our behalf and then to make no application of His merit for us would leave us in as terrible a condition as before.

Our text speaks of the Church as though separate from the world. Elsewhere the Bible declares that the whole world lies in the Wicked One. The world are still under condemnation. But the Apostle explains that the Church has escaped the condemnation that is upon the world. We have not gotten free from the weaknesses of the flesh and the death condition, but we have escaped the condemnation—the legal phase of the subject. God is taking this Church class out of the world to be made partakers of the very highest rank of spirit nature—the Divine. (2 Peter 1:4.) This is the promise made to God's people, the Church of the First-born, whose names are written in Heaven.

"If ye be risen with Christ," the Apostle does not intimate that this is a thing future. All who belong to the true Church of Christ should know that they have this resurrection. But in order to be risen with Christ we must be dead with Him. (2 Timothy 2:11.) Whoever shares

His death will also share His resurrection. We must walk in His steps. (1 Peter 2:21.) Our Lord declares that He came not to do His own will, but the will of the Father, who sent Him. (John 6:38.) So we must do whatever the Father desires us to do; we must not desire our own way. We should seek to know God's will respecting our body—what we shall eat, what we shall wear, what we shall do, and so on. We shall do to do so will give us what the Apostle calls "the spirit of a sound mind."

Before we became the Lord's children we did not think properly along these lines. Like the Gentiles we were thinking of what would satisfy our appetites. Now we think of what would enable us best to serve the Lord, and what is best for our welfare. Since we have come into God's family, all our talents are His; the more we realize how few are our talents and our opportunities, the more we shall be to make the most out of everything we have—mental, moral, physical.

Our will is that which we wish, and our wishes represent our personality. If we yield our own will to another, we give up our will to that extent. If we give up our will to some church denomination, then it becomes our head, our ruler. If we give up our will to some society or order, it takes supervision of our affairs and our time. God is purposing to have an Order—the Order of the Royal Priesthood.

As the cross and crown pin, the cross represents our faith in the death of Christ and our desire to walk in His steps; the crown represents the glory, honor and immortality; and the wreath around the cross and crown represents the Restitution blessings coming to the world of mankind. A brother who has been asked "What degree he had," he replied, "All of God's people are Odd Fellows in the sense that they are all Masons in that they are of the Temple class, whose Chief Corner-Stone is the Lord Jesus Christ. The Royal Temple is built on the foundation of God's people, and we as living stones, are being built into that Temple, which by and by will be glorious."—1 Peter 2:4-10.

Invariably God's things are the primary thoughts of the world, and so far as others have the Truth, they are with us. Otherwise they are against us. Just as it was respecting our Lord, so it has been with all the members of the Church—there has been a division of the people, some seeing more, some less.—John 9:16.

But God's work goes on steadily, grandly. He is finding these precious members of the Church. In one picture they are represented as jewels, in another as living stones, in a third as a Royal Priesthood. "The Lord King with them that are His." We do not know they are. All that we can do is to assist and leave the rest to the Lord. He makes no mistake.

In order to share in the First Resurrection with Christ, we must share in His death. I remind you of what St. Paul said. He had been discussing the glorious things of the Kingdom and expressing his opinion that all things in the world were not worthy of consideration in comparison with it. He declared, "I count all things but loss, yea, that I may know Christ and be found in Him." (Philippians 3:8, 9.) He desired membership in the Body of Christ.

The word Christ means anointed; Jesus is the Head of the Church, and the Church are the members. God is raising up a great Anointed One. He raised up Jesus first, and gave Him to be the Head over the Church which is His Body. Throughout the Gospels of the New Testament, the members of the Anointed; and through the Apostle He has said that all things are to be counted as loss and dross in comparison to that which is to be gained by membership of the Church; for to Christ God promised the Kingdom and glory, honor, immortality.

Jesus has already entered into His glory and sat down with the Father, and He is raising up a great Anointed One. He has sat down in Heaven, but that glory rest of which the Apostle speaks, (Hebrews 4:9.) He is raising up a great Anointed One. He has sat down in Heaven, but that glory rest of which the Apostle speaks, (Hebrews 4:9.) He is raising up a great Anointed One. He has sat down in Heaven, but that glory rest of which the Apostle speaks, (Hebrews 4:9.)

Then St. Paul declares that he does all this that he may win Christ, and be found in Him—a member of the Body of Christ, the Church. Just as we speak of a board of directors or of the body of Congress, so the Church is such an organized body. The Apostle was anxious to be a member of that Body of Christ. He saw that Jesus had fulfilled the Father's will in all His experiences; and knowing thus what the Father is pleased with and seeing that the Father had exalted our Lord, the Apostle desired to follow the Master. So he says, "That I may know Him and the power of His resurrection"—experience the grand resurrection—be "changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye." Since flesh and blood cannot inherit the Heavenly Kingdom, therefore all the had Christ must undergo the wonderful transforming power of the First Resurrection.—1 Corinthians 15:49-55.

St. Paul knew that he could not enter into Christ's resurrection unless he entered into Christ's death. Only those who would suffer with Christ could reign with Him. This knowledge was what made St. Paul so different from others of his day. We look back and see what a wonderful man he was—how Christ's character shone in his words and deeds, how much he was filled with the Master's words and disposition.

The same admonition is given us, that we should "follow His steps." In proportion as we become dead to the world, the flesh, and the devil, that proportion we become risen with Him. But there is a difference between our case and that of Jesus. He was especially born, as the Bible declares, to die for us. He had never been our Saviour if He had not been. To deny this fact would be to deny the Ransom. Whoever denies that Jesus came into the world a perfect man, is denying the whole Plan of Salvation. His life did not come from Father Adam, but was transferred from a higher plane. He left the glory which He had with the Heavenly Father, and humbled Himself to become a man. He was able to do the Father's will. No sin debarred Him from Divine favor. But all of us were born in sin; God made Him Adam and his posterity unfit for everlasting life and Divine fellowship.

At the age of thirty years our Lord presented Himself to the Father in consecration. The Father accepted the sacrifice, and manifested His acceptance in the impartation of the Holy Spirit. Then, having received the gift of the Holy Spirit, our Lord was crowned with the New Creature. There, at Jordan, He died, in the sense of giving up His life as a human being; and there He began the new life. From that time He made His Covenant of Sacrifice He was a New Creature.

During the three and one-half years of His ministry, which culminated at Calvary, Jesus was not living according to the world. He was living a higher life. During that time His sacrifice was satisfactory to the Father; and because of this, the increase of His offering entered into the antitypical Most High and covered the Mercy-Seat. Therefore, when He died at Calvary, there was laid up for Him the blessing which He received from the Father. Because He had proved faithful during the three and one-half years of His anointing of the Holy Spirit, the Father raised Him from the dead, and exalted Him far above angels.

The experiences of the Church are somewhat similar. From the time that we surrender our will and begin the sacrificial life, we are dead with Him. This is for us to live the new life—dead according to the flesh and alive toward God, dying daily and living daily. Our resurrection is going on moment by moment, year by year, until our trial is finished. Then we shall be rewarded according to our faithfulness from the time we came into God's family—from the time we received the Holy Spirit, and we are recognized as sons of God, risen with Christ, to walk in newness of life.

Before we came into the family of God we were merely outcasts. But when we heard that God had provided for the redemption of our race through the death of His Son, and was willing to receive us, His nature, and we were made members of the Church, we were recognized as sons of God, risen with Christ, to walk in newness of life.

God has a wonderful Plan, and we fall in love with it as we come to understand it for it is the loveable Plan of a loveable God. How much the Message of the Bible has changed since we have come to know of the things beyond the veil and have received the understanding which God has given! Surely we can truly love Him, and give Him our whole lives, and show our loyalty to Him by doing His will to the best of our ability. In comparison to the glory, honor and immortality which is offered to us, the things of the present time are not worthy of note. But this high reward we shall receive only on the terms laid down. The resurrection process goes on until we shall have finished our course in death.

"All things are yours!" What a grand thought—things present, things to come; earthly things, Heavenly things. What a beautiful arrangement God has made! "As it is written, 'Ye have not seen, nor heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him.'—1 Corinthians 2:9.

Lesson XII.—Second Quarter, For June 20, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Pa. cxli.—Memory Verse, 3, 4.—Golden Text, Pa. cxli, 5. Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

This is not such a fascinating portion for meditation as that of last week. This tells of workers of iniquity and the snares and gins and nets which the wicked set for the righteous. Yet it is written by the same Holy Spirit. It seems somewhat like coming down from the Mount of Transfiguration to contend with the devil and his works. It reminds us that our adversary, the devil, still goeth about and that we need the whole armor of God for the daily conflict, and if we would not be overcome nor grow weary, we must consider Him who endured such contradiction of sinners against Himself on our behalf (1 Pet. 2:21; Heb. vi, 10-12).

It does not matter what particular part of David's life this psalm refers to. He was in the conflict from the time that Samuel first anointed him; before that as a shepherd; after that more or less publicly till his death. From the time that a sinner receives the Lord Jesus and thus becomes His redeemed property he is in the conflict with the world, the flesh and the devil and can overcome only by the blood of the Lamb and absolute confidence in Him (Rev. xii, 11; 1 John v, 4).

"Lord, I cry unto thee," so also in Ps. cxli, 1, 5, "I cried unto the Lord with my voice." No place nor circumstance need hinder our cry to God, for He is ever ready to hear the cry of the fish and was heard (Jonah ii, 1, 2). On this occasion David seems to have needed help at once, for he said, "Make haste unto me." When Peter was sinking in the sea he needed help quickly and cried, "Lord, save me!"

And immediately Jesus caught him by the hand (Matt. xiv, 30, 31). The thief on the cross needed salvation quickly, and he obtained it and went to paradise. Prayer as incense reminds us of Rev. v, 8; viii, 3; the latter passage teaching us that the merits of Christ are necessary to make any prayer acceptable and that by those merits every true prayer in His name reaches the throne. We think of the father of the Lord who the Baptist offering incense in the holy place while the multitude was praying without, and we see by faith our great High Priest interceding for us as we continue here in prayer Luke 1, 8-10. The evening sacrifice reminds us that salvation and service all depend upon His precious blood, for He died at the hour of the evening sacrifice.

We need continually to pray the prayer of verse 3, "Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth; keep the door of my lips," for if any man offend not in word the same is a perfect man and able also to bridle the whole body (Jas. iii, 2). "Who so keepeth his mouth and his tongue keepeth his soul from troubles" (Prov. xxi, 23). Elsewhere David said, "I will keep my mouth with a bridle while the wicked is before me" (Ps. xxxix, 1). In Ps. lxxvii, 10, the writer speaks of being a door-keeper in the house of God, but here David asks the Lord to be his door-keeper. The word of God in our hearts is mentioned as a remedy against sin (Ps. xvii, 4; cxix, 11). Verse 4 of our lesson sounds like: "Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from the evil one. May the thought of our weakness keep us far away from all that is evil." Verse 5 reminds us of Prov. ix, 8, "Rebuke a wise man and he will love thee." And there is a note of hope, "As a man stand a reproof, but imprisoned the Lord's messenger (1 Chron. xvi, 10). The marginal reading of this lesson verse is helpful and also the revised version.

In verse 8 we are reminded of the prayer of Jehoshaphat, "We have no might against this great company that cometh against us; neither know we what to do, for our eyes are upon thee" (1 Chron. xxi, 12). There also comes to mind Heb. xii, 1, 2, "Let us run with patience the race that is set before us looking unto Jesus." "Let thine eyes look right on, and let thine eyelids look straight before thee" (Prov. iv, 25). It is necessary that we look in the right direction and at the right person, for our eyes affect our hearts (Lam. iii, 51). It is blessed when we see no man any more save Jesus only with our selves (Mark ix, 8). The last two lesson verses make us think of Haman, who was hanged upon the gallows which he had prepared for Mordecai; also of David's prayer in Ps. xxv, 8, "Let his net that he hath hid catch himself." See also Ps. vii, 15, "He made a pit and digged it and is fallen into the ditch which he made," and Prov. xxvi, 27, "Who so diggeth a pit shall fall therein."

We can safely leave all the workers of iniquity to work out their own ruin, while we put our trust in the Lord, rely wholly upon Him and live only for Him. When we can say from the heart, "I know Him whom I have believed," we can also add, "And am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day" (1 Tim. i, 12). He is able to guard us even from stumbling, and we may joyfully sing, "If God be for us, who can be against us?" (Jude 24, revised version; Rom. viii, 31).

632 Gerrard St. East, Toronto. For two years, I was a victim of Acute Indigestion and Gas In The Stomach. It afterwards attacked my Heart, and I had pains all over the body, so I could hardly move around. I tried all kinds of medicines but none of them did me any good. At last, acting on the advice of a friend, I decided to try "Fruit-a-tives". I bought the first box last June, and now I am well, after using only three boxes. I recommend "Fruit-a-tives" to anyone, suffering from Indigestion, no matter how acute."
