Duke of York's Farewell To the People of Canada.

H. M. S. Ophir, at Halifax, N. S.,
October 19th, 1901.
Dear Lord Minto,--Before leaving Canada, I am anxious to make known through you with what regret the duchess and I bid farewell to a people who, by their warm heartedness and cordiality, have made us feel at home amongst them from the first moment of our arrival on their shores.

I should like particularly to express our gratitude for the generous feeling which has prompted all classes to contribute towards that hearty and affectionate welcome which we have everywhere met with. This has been so strikingly shown, not only in the demeanour of the crowds, and the general manifestations of rejoicing with which we have greeted, but also by the trouble and ingenuity displayed in the illuminations and street decorations, carried out with such conspicuous taste and success by private persons as well as by the Government and local authorities.

We are greatly touched to find in the smallest and most remote places through which we passed what great efforts had been made by the inhabitants to manifest their kindly feelings towards us. I recognize all this as a proof of the strong personal loyalty to the throne, as well as a declaration of the deep seated devotion on the part of the people of Canada to that unity of the Empire of which the Crown is the symbol.

We wish to record our most sincere thanks to the Dominion Government, the Provincial Authorities, the Municipal bodies and private individuals, for their generous hospitality, their kind forethought, and the extreme care and trouble they have bestowed upon all the arrangements for the reception and accommodation of ourselves and our staff. I feel that we are especially indebted to Mr. Pope, by whom so much of the detail was ably dealt with.

Wherever we have been, the police duties were admirably carried out, and we wish to express our special obligation to the Commissioner of the Dominion Police and other police officials for the excellent manner in which they have discharged the important responsibilities developing upon them. Short as unfortunately our stay in West Canada had to be, it was sufficient for us to understand something of its boundless possibilities, and the scope which it affords to those who, with a spirit of enterprise, determination and willingness to work, desire to seek a wider, less crowded and richer field than that offered by the congested industries and professions of the Mother Country.

I trust that these possibilities may be taken advantage of in the future, and that suitable emigrants from the Mother Country may come in larger numbers. At Calgary we witnessed a large and representative gathering of Indians. Then and on other occasions addresses were presented from different tribes. I was glad to hear of the progress they have made and the contentment in which they live under the arrangements made for their benefit by the Dominion Government.

One of the most important features of our visit was the enormous distance traversed by rail, and we feel a difficulty in adequately thanking the Dominion Government for all that was organized and most efficiently carried out for our railway journeys. The train built especially for the occasion by the Canadian Pacific Railway was a marvel of convenience and comfort, and nothing seems to have been forgotten which might tend to reduce the fatigue inseparable from such a long journey. Special facilities were afforded to enable us to see the most striking points of interest in the vast regions of magnificent scenery through which we passed, while we received every possible attention and consideration from the officials and servants of the company.

To the authorities of the Grand Trunk and Intercolonial railways, also, our special thanks are due for all the trouble and consideration which they devoted to providing for the part of our journey which lay over their lines, and for the efficiency and success with which all the services were performed. We hope that the public did not suffer on account of the special arrangements made for our travelling, which perhaps, necessitated some interference with the general traffic. I am especially anxious to record my appreciation of that splendid force, the North West Mounted Police. I had the pleasure of inspecting a portion of the corps at Calgary, and was much struck with the smart appearance of both men and horses, and with their general steadiness on parade. They furnished escorts throughout our stay in western Canada; frequently escorted our carriages and found the transport, all of which duties were performed with ready willingness and in a highly creditable manner.

The reviews which were held at Quebec, Toronto and Halifax, enabled me to judge of the military capacity of the Dominion, and of the splendid material at its disposal. Many of the corps showed smartness and soldier-like bearing. I was glad to find that a Field Hospital organization has recently been provided, as well as a company of Engineers.

I was interested in our visit to the Royal Military College at Kingston, to see what excellent provision the Dominion Government has made available for the preliminary military education of its militia officers. Every country now recognizes the necessity of securing the greatest military efficiency in return for its outlay on defence, and that the material at hand should not be sacrificed for the lack of adequate training, and leading which can best be insured by a fully qualified staff.

I was delighted to have the opportunity of presenting a large number of medals to officers and men for services in South Africa, and it was most gratifying to see with what enthusiasm they were welcomed by their fellow citizens. It was a great pleasure to us to be accompanied throughout our tour by the distinguished prime minister of the Dominion. As this must have been done at a great personal incoony, we are all the more grateful to Sir Wilfrid Laurier for his valuable help and companionship.

And finally to Lady Minto and myself we wish to express our most sincere thanks for the unflinching kindness and generous hospitality which we have received as your guests, and also for the great pleasure and valuable assistance that we realized in the presence of either Lady Minto, or both of Your Excellencies, during our long journey.

I am further anxious to record my best thanks to Major Maude for the efficient manner in which he and the rest of your staff dealt with the exceptionally heavy and anxious work and overcame the numerous difficulties connected with our tour, and for all that they have done to help me and my own staff. We wish it had been possible to remain longer in Canada, and, by availing ourselves of the many pressing invitations received from different centres, to have become acquainted more intimately with its various districts and their people. But we have soon enough to carry away imperishable memories of affectionate and loyal hearts; frank and independent natures; prosperous and progressive communities; boundless productive territories; glorious scenery, stupendous works of nature, a people and a country proud of its membership of the Empire, and in which the Empire finds one of its brightest offspring.

Our hearts are full at saying farewell. We feel that we have made many friends in all parts of the Dominion, and that we owe and gladly extend to its people our sincere friendship and good wishes. May the affectionate regard which all races and classes have so generously shown us, knit together the people of Canada, and strengthen the existing ties that unite the Empire. Believe me, Dear Lord Minto, Very sincerely yours,
(Signed) GEORGE.

King's Evil

That is Scrofula.
No disease is older.
No disease is really responsible for a larger mortality.
Consumption is commonly its outgrowth.
There is no excuse for neglecting it, it makes its presence known by so many signs, such as glandular tumors, cutaneous eruptions, inflamed eyelids, sore ears, rickets, catarrh, wasting and general debility.
Children of J. W. McGill, Woodstock, Ont., had scrofula sores so bad they could not attend school for three months. When different kinds of medicines had been used to no purpose whatever, these sores were cured, according to Mr. McGill's voluntary testimony, by which has effected the most wonderful, radical and permanent cures of scrofula in old and young.

The party arrived at the convent at 2.30 o'clock.
His Grace Archbishop O'Connor of Toronto, who was present, accompanied by Vicar-General McCann of Toronto, Rev. D. Bat, O. C. C. Prior of Carmelite Monastery, Falls View; Rev. Father Otto Wiedemann, O. C. C., and Father Benedict O'Neil of Niagara, Ont., all greeted the royal visitors at the portals of the convent. Inside His Grace presented Rev. Mother Superiores and the Community of Loretto.

Immediately afterwards three young ladies stepped forward, Miss Irwin, O'Connor of Saint St. Marie, Ont., and Miss Frances Lemesurier of Niagara Falls, Ont., each presenting the Duchess with a large bouquet of white roses and maple leaves, and Miss Prudence Van-Doele of Lynn, Mass., presenting the royal couple with a portfolio, containing views of the convent and surrounding scenery.

The Duke graciously thanked the young ladies, and immediately 80 pupils, dressed in white, wearing white roses and maple leaves, seated in tiers on either side of the Reception Hall, sang "God Save the King," accompanied by pianists and violinists. After a few minutes' conversation the royal party were escorted to the luncheon rooms. The tables were decorated with roses, smilax and maiden hair ferns. The party, after luncheon, visited the various parts of the Academy. Their Royal Highnesses climbed up the stairs to the cupola to enjoy the unsurpassed scenery of Niagara's cataract and river, also the beautiful surrounding country, and the woods tinted in their royal colors.

While viewing the scenery from this elevated point the royal couple received quite an ovation from the crowd of spectators, who, notwithstanding the entirely private nature of the visit, had assembled by the hundreds, no doubt, with the hope of catching a glimpse of the heir apparent and the Duchess.

When the party returned to the reception rooms the pupils again greeted them with a glorious burst of songs. "Ave Maria Loretto," the class song of the Academy, was the selection now rendered. This number seemed specially to please Their Royal Highnesses, who asked to have it repeated a second and then a third time.

The little ones of the academy had expressed a desire to send some souvenirs, Indian dolls, birch bark canoes, etc., to the children of the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall. When their wish was made known to the Duchess she was much pleased, and graciously accepted the proffered gifts, and gave the address to which they were to be sent.

The royal party expressed the entire satisfaction of their visit at the academy, and were highly pleased with the simplicity and homelike atmosphere that pervaded the institution. Lord Minto remarking that the ladies of Loretto had made a little home for the royal party on their visit to the Falls.

The academy was appropriately decorated in the royal colors, and the balconies were draped and festooned with bunting and royal and Canadian flags. In the interior decorations, roses and maple leaves predominated.

The day was a lovely one, and was well calculated to show Their Royal Highnesses our beautiful autumn season at its best. The view of the Falls and the surrounding country is a most charming one from the Convent windows and tower. The sun shimmering on the fascinating cataract, the fine perspective of the river stretching up towards Chippewa, the charming autumn tints of the densely wooded country all about, the enthusiastic crowds of people anxious for a glimpse of a couple, now growing familiar and dear to the people.

As the Duchess stepped forward to bid adieu to the young ladies, she could not fail to make glad and happy the hearts of the royal couple; and, judging by their happy appearance and the many expressions of thanks which they tendered to the kind and thoughtful hostesses, the good Ladies of Loretto, the Duke and Duchess were more than pleased with the visit. The Sisters had left nothing undone to make the occasion in every way worthy of the distinguished guests.

Says the Guidon: "The amount you owe for a paper or magazine is a debt as real and legitimate as that which you owe to your landlord or grocer, and is not paid by saying you do not want it any longer. To say you only subscribed for a year when you continue to take it without a word for two or three years is only a quibble. Would your landlord forgive you the rent, when occupying his house for a year, you should tell him you only hired it for a month?"

"The German Catholic Congress which recently closed its sessions at Onabrook," says Dominicans, "made a prominent feature of its discussions and resolutions the vital work of the Catholic press, as this is one of the most powerful weapons in the hands of the Church for the defence of faith and the protection of morals. The zeal of the Catholics of Germany is an admirable example to the faithful of other lands, from whatever point we view their conduct and manner of expressing their devotion and loyalty. Not the least of their achievements is the maintenance of vigorous and representative Catholic publications."

Just at this juncture the following strong paragraph from the Athenaeum is more than usually impressive: "As in Cyprus the remains of Frankish splendor point mainly to French knights (it was so in Greece also), so now in Palestine the medium of culture and good education comes largely from the devotion and persistency of the French Roman Catholic missions,—excellent institutions respected all over the world by those who know them. It has come to our knowledge lately that in the far Pacific islands the French Fathers stand out superior to the rival missions for refinement, toleration, and unselfish piety. It is very interesting that the religious Orders so harshly treated by the home government should be the mainstay of the imperial position of France in the Levant, and the only maintainers of her old and just influence."

These words from the most scholarly literary journal in the English language lose no force when one remembers that perhaps not one member of the large staff of the Athenaeum is a Catholic. Those who have heard and studiously heeded the reports about the friars in the Philippines might pause and ask themselves, Is it reasonable to suppose that there is such a difference between the Spanish Fathers and the French Fathers, after all?—Ave Maria.

About a year ago Daniel O'Connell, said to be a lineal descendant of the great Liberator, died at his home near San Francisco. Across the beautiful bay, near to the Golden Gate, he found inspiration for the poetry with which he clothed his thoughts of many years. His career was a varied one. He was a son of the University of Dublin and a commissioned officer in the English army; but his Bohemian instincts and impatient temperament made him impatient under discipline, and in the late Sixties he left the service and gave himself up to the uncertain fortunes of literature, writing with skill and a free discretion upon any subject which offered. His favorite spot for meditation was an eminence near his chosen home; and on that hill his friends are building his monument, a simple seat of granite, with approaching steps. His last poem, what has been called his "swan song," will be engraved upon the panels. "The Chamber of Sleep" he named it, with the prophetic foreboding of one who saw the shadows lengthening after a long and dreary day.—Ave Maria.

In his farewell to Canada the Duke of York refers to the Royal Military College as being provided by the government for the preliminary education of Canada's militia officers. It was a very natural error for His Highness to fall into, but as a matter of fact the militia of Canada gets very little, if any, benefit from the large amount annually expended on that otherwise excellent institution, the military college.

The Grit convention to select a candidate for the West Riding of Queen's took place in the Lyceum in this city yesterday afternoon, and resulted in the selection of Mr. Farquharson by a vote of 116 to 23 for Mr. Hazard. The choosing of the delegates for the different polls of the riding cooked Hazard's goose and he simply was not "in it," when he came to the convention.

East Queen's Election Trial.

The election court for the trial of the petition of Alexander Martin against D. A. McKinnon met in the Supreme Court Room here Monday morning. The trial judges, the Chief Justice and Justice Fitzgerald took their seats on the bench; but before opening the Court the Chief Justice stated the respondent had asked for a rule to show cause why the order of the Court annulling the time and place of trial should not be set aside on the following grounds:

(1) That the trial should not be tried outside the Electoral District. (2) That the affidavits on which the said order was made, were not based on facts, and some or one of them cannot be read. (3) That a copy of the order was not served on the respondent, his attorney or agent. (4) That notice of trial was not given sufficient time before the trial.

to hold the trial, and that in consequence Charlottetown was the proper place for the court to sit. He also argued strongly against the other contentions of the respondent. Attorney-General Peters argued at length in favor of the reasons above set forth against holding the trial there and then. He produced a number of affidavits from persons at Mount Stewart, Pownal and other places affirming that hotel accommodation, as well as hall accommodation sufficient for the holding of the court and the boarding and lodging of those concerned in the trial could be had at Mount Stewart or at Pownal, both places within the riding of East Queens. The argument was continued all day and resumed at eight o'clock in the evening. At the conclusion of the Attorney-General's argument, Mr. Stewart argued in rebuttal and then the judges retired to deliberate. After a short while the judges returned and the Chief Justice announced the judgment of the court. He set forth that the law required the trial of an election petition to be held in the riding in which the election took place, unless a sufficient reason could be shown that the trial could not be conveniently held there. In this case he considered the affidavits of the Sheriff and ex-Sheriff of Queen's County, while strong as far as they went, were very general, while the affidavits adduced by the Attorney-General were more specific and particular, and consequently he considered they overwhelmingly outweighed those of the petitioner. From these affidavits it appeared that sufficient accommodation for holding the election court and boarding and lodging the judges, counsel, witnesses and other court officials could be provided at Mount Stewart. For this reason he decided the order for holding the court at Charlottetown should be rescinded. Judge Hodgson gave judgment to the same effect and Judge Fitzgerald concurred. Consequently the order was quashed. Mr. Stewart then made application to extend the time of trial and an order for a rule nisi was issued and served on respondent's agent, returnable at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. After hearing argument pro and con the judges refused the application. In consequence of this refusal the trial is off, as yesterday was the last day within the limit of time for calling on the case. We may be very sure it was not any particular desire to have the hearing within the riding of East Queens that actuated counsel for respondent in so persistently urging a change of venue. We have not space for any further comments in this issue.

The Mabee Farce.

(Ottawa Citizen)

In preparation for the coming elections the Ross government machine recently issued a pamphlet by one C. R. Mabee, "A life-long Conservative," making a scurrilous attack upon Mr. Whitney. The pamphlet was sumptuously illustrated with caricatures and was highly recommended to branches of the machine in a circular letter by Organizer Smith. When its contents were commented on in the Globe enquiries were made regarding this "life-long Conservative" and it was found that he was a literary carper bagger from Ohio who had been dabbling in campaign literature over there in the last presidential contest and who came to Toronto recently and submitted a pamphlet to Mr. Whitney and the leaders of the Conservative party in Toronto to be used as campaign literature. The contents of the pamphlet were so scurrilous and personally abusive towards the leaders of the Ross government that the Conservative literature committee refused to accept it. Mabee then went to the Ross machine and submitted a similarly disgraceful lampoon of Mr. Whitney, which was accepted and issued with a recommendation from Organizer Smith as the product of a "life-long Conservative." The supremely ridiculous position in which the Ross machine now finds itself as a result of this expose is best illustrated by an article in the Toronto World quoting alternate paragraphs from Mr. Whitney and the Mabee pamphlet accepted and issued by Mr. Ross and the machine. The World says:—Imagine Mr. Ross going to the country heralded by a nondescript of the Mabee type! Here is one of the blasts of the Mabee horn:—"The history of the Liberal party in Ontario shows them to be deserving of future trust. It stands for all that is good and progressive. They are as able and willing to grapple with social, political and administrative reforms as on the day when the people's mandate first placed them in office."

From All Quarters.

Hall Calne has been elected to represent the town of Ramsey in the Manx parliament, receiving 468 votes to 191 cast for his opponent, a local lawyer named Normodo.

Fourteen persons known to be dead and a property loss amounting to upwards of $500,000 is the awful result of a fire which occurred on Friday in the business section of Philadelphia. The number of injured is not known definitely, but fully a score of victims were treated at the various hospitals.

James F. Robertson, who bought the Parks Cotton Factory at St. John, N. B., the other day, and has been waiting before taking action to see what the city would do about tax exemption and water supply, waited upon the city on Friday. It was decided to continue to him the same generous terms allowed Parks company in the past.

The general officer commanding at Ottawa has asked district officers to report on the handling of the various militia units which participated in Quebec, Toronto and Halifax reviews. The department will gather what lessons it can from the experience gained in the mobilization of the troops.

Certain cigar manufacturers in Canada have been using the registered names of well-known brands of cigars with a view to deceiving the public, and at the same time depriving the owners of these brands of the credit and benefit justly due to them. The department at Ottawa has felt it necessary, under these circumstances, to issue a warning to manufacturers that hereafter no inland revenue stamps be placed upon cigar boxes bearing improperly the names of standard brands.

A most distressing fatality is reported from Denver, Guyborough County, N. S. Joseph Archibald, son of Howard Archibald, a young lad of fifteen, went out to look after some snares and traps, taking with him a shot gun. Not returning within a reasonable time his parents became anxious and a search party was started out to look for him.

A short distance from his home he was found lying dead in a small brook with his head almost cut off from the shoulders. The accident was caused by the discharge of his gun when the deceased was crossing a brook.

Loss of the Helen M. Gould. The Helen M. Gould, pride of the Gloucester fishing fleet, is no more. Last Friday afternoon, at North Sydney, while preparing for sea, she was discovered to be on fire, and it being allowed to go unheeded, "Sail" Jacob's famous fishing schooner became an easy victim to the flames. The vessel, lying off the customs house, having arrived in port early in the morning from Gloucester, bound for the fall mackerel fishing. Her sails were all set at the time the fire broke out, and the sight of the burning ship and shrieks underneath the gonging engine with which the vessel was provided. For the supply of this engine there was a tank containing about 400 gallons of gasoline.

The crew realizing this deserted the vessel shortly after the fire broke out fearing an explosion. They took to their boats and standing a little distance off watched the Helen M. burn to the water's edge. The engine was placed aft of the cabin, and from this point the fire worked forward, eating its way slowly but surely until it broke out on deck and caught in the shrouds. There was very little breeze, but volumes of smoke poured out of the hatchways. The fire was discovered about a quarter to one. After the vessel had been burning for four hours a tug went out and with the aid of some of the crew the big seine, valued at $2,800 and part of another, besides two jibs, were taken off and saved. This was all that was saved. When the crew left her, they took but little of their clothing, so that they all lost some of their clothes. The schooner was equipped with supplies necessary for fall fishing, among which was 300 barrels of salt, anchors, chains, etc. No effort was made to save the vessel. Hundreds of people looked on helplessly and saw the schooner destroyed. It was about eight o'clock in the evening when the spars fell over by the side, and the schooner had.

WENT TO THE WATER'S EDGE. Shortly after she sank, and the only vestige to be seen of the Helen M. was a few charred pieces of wood floating along the shore. The flames were somewhat checked by the slight rain falling through the evening, but there was nothing that could save even the hull of the queen of the fishing fleet. The Helen M. Gould was valued at $7,000. The gasoline engine was valued at $7,000. Captain Jacobs was anxious to secure volunteers to go back to the burning schooner, but was unsuccessful until such time as assistance would be of little or no use. She had a crew of eighteen men.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE. THE PAN-AMERICAN A FAILURE. A Buffalo despatch says: The decision of the directors to close the Pan-American Exposition on the night of November 2d, enables the accountants to make a fairly accurate estimate of the loss which the Pan-American will suffer. It will exceed $4,000,000.

THAT SAME OLD STORY. Reynolds' London Weekly states that the King is suffering from cancer in the throat, and has had three operations performed since his accession for the removal of papilloma from the vocal chords. The operation is regarded as only temporary relief, says that paper, as the injured epithelium has now become a cancerous growth and serious developments are expected.

A MISSING SHIP. A Port Townsend, Washington despatch of the 28th says that according to reports from the North Bay brought by Capt. Tuttle of the United States Revenue Cutter Bear, the schooner Halcyon, which sailed from Puget Sound in 1900 on a prospecting cruise in the Behring Sea, is numbered among the missing with her captain, Charles Thomas. Five others on the vessel escaped to St. Lawrence, but Captain Thomas refused to leave the vessel which was imprisoned in an ice-pack.

THE DUKE IS NOW HOMEWARD BOUND. The Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York left St. John, N.B., for England at daylight Friday morning on board the royal yacht Ophir, with the British cruisers Niobe and Diadem forming her escort. The flagship, the first-class cruiser Crescent, accompanied the Ophir outside the port and fired a farewell salute. Before leaving St. John's the Duke conferred on Hon. Robert Bond, the Premier of Newfoundland, the honor of Knighthood, making him Knight Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George. Sir Robert Bond is the only Colonial Premier who has been so honored during the Royal tour.

GEN. BULLER'S FINISH. Sir Redvers Buller has been relieved of the command of the First Army Corps, in consequence of the speech that he made on October 10th, after the luncheon given in his honor by the King's Royal Rifles, dealing with his famous despatch to General Buller at Ladysmith. He has been placed on half pay, and General French has been appointed to succeed him. General Buller's expression was not unexpected. But the manner of it has caused a sensation. It is understood that the Government endeavored to break the fall by giving him the option of resigning, but that Buller declined to give way.

PLOT TO KILL THE SHAH. News has been received from Teheran of the discovery of a serious plot against the life of the Shah. The leaders of the conspiracy were the Shah's two brothers, Grand Vizier and Vizier Badrazam, and the Shah's son-in-law. The two brothers have been banished for life, the son-in-law sentenced to death, but on the scaffold the sentence was mitigated by the Shah's friend, to flogging until he had revealed all the names of the conspirators. The Shah's favorite gavams, who is also concerned, was pardoned on the scaffold, but died subsequently in prison. The whole revolutionary party, together with the higher priests in the plot, will all be beheaded or imprisoned for life.

WENT OVER NIAGARA FALLS. Mrs. Annie Edison Taylor, 50 years old, of Bay City, Mich., went over Niagara Falls on the Canadian side last Thursday afternoon and survived a feat never before accomplished, and indeed, never attempted except in the deliberate commission of suicide. She made the trip in a barrel. Not only did she survive, but she escaped without a broken bone, her only apparent injuries being a scalp wound 1 1/2 inches long, a slight concussion of the brain, a slight shock to her nervous system and bruises about the body. She was conscious when taken out of the barrel. The doctors in attendance upon her said that though she was somewhat hysterical her condition is not at all serious, and that she will probably be out of bed within a few days.

stands for all that is good and progressive. They are as able and willing to grapple with social, political and administrative reforms as on the day when the people's mandate first placed them in office." Just previous to blowing this blast in favour of the Ross outfit, Mabee had called on Mr. Whitney and offered to shout throughout the country at the top of his voice the following among other choice epigrams:—"This stone was erected in memory of the 'Ross machine,' which died of self-inflicted wounds in a cess-pool of iniquity. 'Calm, thinking villains whom no faith could fix of crooked counsels and dark politics!' Little wonder Mr. Whitney showed the fakir the door. What a simpleton Premier Ross must be to be taken in by a fakir who in Ross' presence says the members of his government are paragons of virtue, and, when his back is turned, shouts out to the crowd that the Ross machine died in a cess-pool of iniquity!"

The Herald's Scoop-Net.

CONDUCTED BY TOM A. HAWKE.

Dyspeptic people have a hungry look in their eyes which comes of looking for a lost appetite.

There's a hammer called opportunity, and when the moment comes to clinch success or else to fail, for each who fairly strikes the nail a hundred hit their thumbs.

A newspaper article says that pearls are becoming scarce. Yes, we notice that we have not got a very large supply on hand. We also find diamonds very hard to get hold of now-a-days.

And now a plot against the life of the Shah of Persia has been discovered. Beware! Who'll believe that? They were probably only trying to frighten His Highness, just Shah-ming, you know!

The same old parties who used to be prophesying the death of Queen Victoria every year and a big European war, are now kept busy painting in large letters the story of an imaginary effusion of the throat to which King Edward is bound to succumb in these days. This is a sure sign that the King will live to be a very old man.

English newspapers are demanding of the Government that the war be ended by a few decisive blows. If the newspapers can suggest a method by which the Boers can be induced to stand together without running away, and send the plan to Kitchener, the war would be over next week.—If the plan was any good; but the plan coming from men who talk so foolishly would not be any good, so the war will still drag along.

"Beachcomber" in Halifax Chronicle says:—"An American woman announces that she has cured her cat of illness by Christian Science. Shakespear once, who was worried about his life insurance premium or something, said "throw physic to the dogs," but that wasn't half so low-down a trick as trying Christian Science on cats. Then again, most people who have read the poet would say there was nothing the matter with his mews." Wouldn't that give you a cat-leptic fit!

I have written a recipe book. It's a handy thing to have in a house, especially if you have the ingredients on hand with which to get to work. If you haven't, it can't be helped. As the recipes in my book are not intended for very wealthy families, but only for us common every-day sort of folk, I am going to give a few samples away free. If I am not feeling very well next week some people will perhaps be able to guess what is wrong. Here's the recipes, anyway, since I promised them:

ICE CREAM.—Dry a piece of ice in the sun, stir in some cold cream or vaseline, fan it till it freezes, and then serve with warmed up soup.

AN INEXPENSIVE DINE.—Buy a five cent plate.

TO DROP EGGS.—Let go of them.

CLEAR SOUP.—Take two pints of water; wash them thoroughly on both sides, pour into a dish or something, and stir around in the kitchen until tired.

SOFT BOILED EGGS.—Put a setting of eggs into a kettle of hot water at 67, let them boil until the clock strikes; serve on half shell.

TO REMOVE STAINS.—A sure way to remove stains from a tablecloth is to saturate the cloth in benzine, kerosene and coal oil; sprinkle with gunpowder; apply a lighted match.

CALVES FOOT JELLY.—Get treated for a middle-aged calf. One from the Western end of the Island if you can—they have the largest feet—cut off the calf, which can be used for making hash or chicken salad; wash the feet, flicken with gin, add some molasses, strain through a coarse-seated chair, pour it into a blue bowl with red pictures on it, set it outside the door to get tough, and then send it to someone who owes you.

CZOLGOSZ EXECUTED. Leon F. Czolgosz, the assassin of President McKinley, received the death penalty for his crime at Auburn prison yesterday morning. He was shocked to death by 1700 volts of electricity. He showed no outward sign of fear, remarking as he was strapped into the chair, "I killed the President, because he was the enemy of good working people." No hitch occurred in the execution and death was instantaneous. The physicians holding the autopsy declared the prisoner's brain was normal if not above ordinary.

Fourteen persons known to be dead and a property loss amounting to upwards of $500,000 is the awful result of a fire which occurred on Friday in the business section of Philadelphia. The number of injured is not known definitely, but fully a score of victims were treated at the various hospitals.

James F. Robertson, who bought the Parks Cotton Factory at St. John, N. B., the other day, and has been waiting before taking action to see what the city would do about tax exemption and water supply, waited upon the city on Friday. It was decided to continue to him the same generous terms allowed Parks company in the past.

Certain cigar manufacturers in Canada have been using the registered names of well-known brands of cigars with a view to deceiving the public, and at the same time depriving the owners of these brands of the credit and benefit justly due to them. The department at Ottawa has felt it necessary, under these circumstances, to issue a warning to manufacturers that hereafter no inland revenue stamps be placed upon cigar boxes bearing improperly the names of standard brands.

A most distressing fatality is reported from Denver, Guyborough County, N. S. Joseph Archibald, son of Howard Archibald, a young lad of fifteen, went out to look after some snares and traps, taking with him a shot gun. Not returning within a reasonable time his parents became anxious and a search party was started out to look for him.

A short distance from his home he was found lying dead in a small brook with his head almost cut off from the shoulders. The accident was caused by the discharge of his gun when the deceased was crossing a brook.

Loss of the Helen M. Gould. The Helen M. Gould, pride of the Gloucester fishing fleet, is no more. Last Friday afternoon, at North Sydney, while preparing for sea, she was discovered to be on fire, and it being allowed to go unheeded, "Sail" Jacob's famous fishing schooner became an easy victim to the flames. The vessel, lying off the customs house, having arrived in port early in the morning from Gloucester, bound for the fall mackerel fishing. Her sails were all set at the time the fire broke out, and the sight of the burning ship and shrieks underneath the gonging engine with which the vessel was provided. For the supply of this engine there was a tank containing about 400 gallons of gasoline.

The crew realizing this deserted the vessel shortly after the fire broke out fearing an explosion. They took to their boats and standing a little distance off watched the Helen M. burn to the water's edge. The engine was placed aft of the cabin, and from this point the fire worked forward, eating its way slowly but surely until it broke out on deck and caught in the shrouds. There was very little breeze, but volumes of smoke poured out of the hatchways. The fire was discovered about a quarter to one. After the vessel had been burning for four hours a tug went out and with the aid of some of the crew the big seine, valued at $2,800 and part of another, besides two jibs, were taken off and saved. This was all that was saved. When the crew left her, they took but little of their clothing, so that they all lost some of their clothes. The schooner was equipped with supplies necessary for fall fishing, among which was 300 barrels of salt, anchors, chains, etc. No effort was made to save the vessel. Hundreds of people looked on helplessly and saw the schooner destroyed. It was about eight o'clock in the evening when the spars fell over by the side, and the schooner had.

WENT TO THE WATER'S EDGE. Shortly after she sank, and the only vestige to be seen of the Helen M. was a few charred pieces of wood floating along the shore. The flames were somewhat checked by the slight rain falling through the evening, but there was nothing that could save even the hull of the queen of the fishing fleet. The Helen M. Gould was valued at $7,000. The gasoline engine was valued at $7,000. Captain Jacobs was anxious to secure volunteers to go back to the burning schooner, but was unsuccessful until such time as assistance would be of little or no use. She had a crew of eighteen men.

The defeat which the Abegweit met with on Saturday was the first by an Island team in five years.

Although the contract is practically let the signing will be deferred until the required amount is secured by the committee. The amount yet required is $300.

A MONTREAL despatch of the 27th says: One of the most cowardly and cruel murders ever perpetrated in this Province took place on Saturday evening at West Mount between six and seven o'clock. Samuel Marotte, the eight-year-old son of Mr. S. Marotte, of Marotte and LeBlanc, a spice dealer, was going home from his grandmother's residence on Green Avenue, when he was murdered in cold blood, and the poor little fellow's body was found near at hand. This morning a Norwegian, named Thorold Hanson, came to the Westmount police office and gave himself up, saying he had killed the boy in question. The monster paid the lad was going along rattling some cents in his pocket. He asked the boy to give them up and when Marotte refused the Norwegian killed him on the spot. There was a bad cut in his throat and he bled to death. It goes without saying that there is great excitement in Westmount over the awful tragedy.

The Halifax Herald's correspondent at Sydney is advised by a reliable authority that the steel manufacturing company, of Milton, N. E. is considering the advisability of establishing a branch at Sydney. This company manufactures the "Twentieth Century ladders" and hardware. These ladders are of Bessemer steel and are recommended for their cheapness, lightness, neatness, strength, rigidity and durability, their weight and cost being the same as that of wooden ones. The inventor of these steel ladders is J. S. Cantello, a native of Prince Edward Island who went to the States about 80 years ago without a penny. Among his many patents has been a drawing knife cut out of which he has made a little fortune. He is president of the Canadian Manufacturing Company, large portions of the stock of which is held by provincialists. Mr. Cantello thinks that by coming to Sydney he would be in a position to procure steel and labor cheaper and also that he would be enabled to ship his goods to England more advantageously than he can from the United States, Canada, Great Britain and elsewhere. There is no reason if sufficient inducement were offered why this large manufacturing concern would not establish a branch of their industry in Sydney.

READ THIS. Our big misfortune in the Sydney fire last week, our great departmental store being burnt flat to the ground with $90,000 worth of stock in a heavy blow, forces us to admit that we are badly in need of money. We know we have you in mind, and we are going to hold you again we will need every cent we can lay hands on, and we take this opportunity of asking you to help us out for one week. We don't ask for charity, but we do ask, and will esteem it a great favor if everybody who owes us any amount, be it one dollar or one hundred dollars, will make an effort to pay us at once. It's a little early we know, but we also know that our friends will stand by us now, as they have done so nobly in the past. You'll admit that in the past, so any call from the people of P. E. Island we were ever ready to put our hands into our pockets and do our share. Now we ask you to return the compliment by paying your bills at once. You'll find us selling good goods in the same old way—a little lower than others can. Hoping to see you soon, we are your true friends, FROESE BROTHERS, The Farmers' Boys and Wonderful Cheap Men.

A Red Hot Season.

Daring the hot summer season the blood gets over-heated, the drain on the system is severe and the appetite is often lost.

AT CAPHARANAUM.

I saw Him as He passed; as from within A light shined from a lamp in holy place, So shone a flame upon His noble face;

The town is full of Him. Some even say That He is God,—they speak it not aloud;

The healed youth whispered it, as from the crowd He came to-day. I shall believe it soon; I love him so,

He looked at me, into my heart straight down! He saw the evil there, but did not frown,

And I knelt low. I dared not touch His robe, as others did;

Afar off I will stand, and o'er and o'er Think of the look,—but follow evermore,

If He should bid. My very soul He saw,—its heart and core,

Its very heart and all the loathsome things That in that heart from daily hatred spring—

Yet He forbore! Love in His gesture,—love! His eyes did shine Like veiled stars; He did not for me weep;

(I should have died!) yet there was anguish deep, Deep and divine! Since He can pity me, He must be God;

He must be God since I can love Him so, For in my heart all vilest hatreds grow

As plants from sod. Can He be God? With tears my hard eyes brim,

He looked at me—He must be from above, Or there's no God. Ah, surely He is Love—

I'll follow Him. He sees me as He passes,—God! one saith;

I know He's love, and He is all for me, And I for Him. Love leads me verily, Love! Love to Faith! —Maurice Francis Egan, in Ave Maria.

land," said Blandine, "my papa's cousin. My mamma told me I would see her some day, and I must keep that name for her!"

"What an honest little Sacha it is! and who is she, this English god-mother?"

"I know only that papa chose her for my god-mother, aunt. Nothing more."

As the princess did not know Sacha's papa, and fancied that no one knew much about that gentleman, she disliked to hear him referred to.

She mentally resolved to impress this upon the child. Resolving upon anything without help, always tired her ladyship. She was tired now.

She had made an immense effort. Even pleasure soon wearied her. "Daria!" Daria appeared. "I am tired, Daria, very tired. Another cup of tea, doo-shinka (darling)? No? Then go with Daria. A revoir, cherie!"

And the lady sank back among her cushions, while Blandine followed Daria to a small room, connected with the apartments of Mademoiselle Dorez. That lady was anything but pleased when this room had been spoken of as the most suitable for the newcomer.

She was less so now, and resented the manner in which Daria ascribed her charge in.

When Daria ushered the little lady into her apartments and left her there without apology, Mademoiselle felt herself injured. She had consented to spare her extra boarder, though she protested that she needed it, but she would not suffer her rooms to be entered by Daria in this fashion.

She could not, would not bear it. She sent her card, with a few pencilled words, to the princess, by Fedor, the footman, who was well accustomed to carry such messages. Challenge, he called them.

The princess soon made her appearance, with the card in her hand. She looked the very image of good humor, as if she had been invited to a farce, or revel, instead of a tragedy.

Tragedy was written all over the face of Mademoiselle Dorez; but the princess pretended not to see it. She was abstractedly tearing the card into fragments, and only realized the fact when it was too late to put the pieces together. "Tiens! what have I done! was it important?"

Can we pay a few visits this afternoon, Apolline, and shop a little at the Louvre?" (Shopping at the Louvre was the delight of Mlle. Dorez.) The princess kept up her debonnaire air while imparting fragments of gossip.

"How droll you are, Apolline! You would leave the best house in Paris because a pretty little bird perches in your garden for a few days!"

"Daria has no right to intrude upon me!"

"She intrudes upon me. She is Daria, and I am only the old princess. What is to be done?"

"Change! Send her off!"

"She wouldn't go," said the princess quietly. "I assure you, Apolline, she would not. I have been telling her to go for the last twenty years. I shall finish by going myself, and you will go, too, Apolline, but Daria will remain."

"It is not to be borne!" cried the angry lady.

"I must bear it," said the princess, but if you really cannot—" This was the trump card of the princess, and one she had lately marked as a winning one. "If you really cannot, my friend—"

"I shall try once more," suddenly muttered Mlle. Dorez, in no way mollified by the turn things were taking.

Blandine was uncomfortable. It hurt her to hear remarks about people, especially if spoken in a disrespectful tone. Then she thought it was perhaps not right for Daria to speak of the smoking. Not that that shocked or surprised her. She knew the Spanish and Southern French ladies smoked, why should not Russian ladies do the same? She had never yet come in contact with cigarette smoke, but she did not fear it; all the fear was to sit; to do wrong and have no one to tell her so, or to advise her.

Daria busied herself in setting forth a dainty lunch and took immense pleasure in seeing the child eat. "You must eat all you can," she urged, "if you are going away off to the cold North. It's a long journey. I wish I could go with you! It's my own dear country, where you are going, barushnaya, and it's the best country in the world. Of everyone is so good there, so kind-hearted and so merry! There Christmas lasts three weeks, and Easter longer than that. O, wait till you see one Russian Easter, barushnaya, and you'll never ask to see France again! There they know how to keep Easter and Lent, too. Lent is Lent, there. Now Daria is curious and innocent listening. All the malice in her nature was concentrated in one vital and devoted to one object. Apart from "Mamselle," as she called Mlle. Dorez, she felt friendly to all the world. She was curious now on the subject of Blandine's beads, and found a way to obtain the information without asking a direct question, something a Russian rarely does.

"And so they are not to wear about your neck, as our maidens wear them, the string of pretty beads? Only ours are all sorts of bright colors. You can change the black ones for some pretty color, when you wear the sara-

"Do, my dear! I would, if I were you," said the princess, laughing pleasantly. Blandine was lying on a sofa, fast asleep from fatigue and grief.

"She will be in Petersburg in a week. Content yourself. If you prefer it, I will tell Daria to remove her to my side of the house. She pleases me immensely." The princess bent over the sleeping child for some seconds. "She pleases me immensely! If it were not for—"

The sentence remained unfinished. The princess went away. There was no affection in the gaze that followed her. As she passed out of sight Mademoiselle repeated the words, "If it were not for," in a malicious tone to herself. "If it were not for me, I suppose she means." And she was right for once. She looked towards the sleeping child, and her feelings were not in the least softened, even by that sight. She was vindictive, and until she felt that vengeance was hers, Mademoiselle could not take pleasure in anything.

Blandine was sleeping calmly. As beautiful as a flower she looked lying there, innocence and sweetness stamped on every feature. Never had a wilful venial sin, thus far, marred the purity of her soul.

Blandine opened her eyes after a heavy sleep. Where is she? Confused and troubled, she had much difficulty in answering the question. She missed something, someone. What she missed most, though unconsciously at that moment, was air and light. Draperies and heavy curtain-masked windows, and doors and furniture even. An unhealthy accumulation of velvets and reps, and tinsel-wrought Eastern stuffs rich to the eye, but vile to the nostril, almost choked the lungs accustomed to mountain breezes, and a sun-warmed atmosphere.

She remembers her beads. She seeks them beneath her pillow, and kneeling forgets the stuffy room and the loneliness. She recalls the words of Father St. Etienne.

"In every trouble, in every danger, call upon Our Lady of Bethsaram." She is in trouble now—the grievous trouble of separation from those she loves.

But she is not alone! Someone is looking at her, as, with arms outstretched, Lourdes fashion, she lets the grains of her beads slip slowly between her fingers. Daria is watching her, and Daria has never seen such a sight. She is wonder-struck, and stands motionless, till, with a long reverential kiss upon the crucifix of her beads, Blandine puts them away and rises from her knees.

Then the wretched comes forward, as if she had been nothing, and asks if the little barushnaya (young lady) is not lonely, and if she is not hungry? The pleasant smile, and low word of thanks, make a conquest of good Daria, who insists upon taking her back to the state apartments where she will have air and light. "Mamselle," says Daria, "lives like a rat in a hole. She needs neither light nor air; she is like a salyotka, a dried salyotka (herring)."

Blandine did not know what a salyotka meant, but she did not like Daria's tone of voice, and made no reply.

"I wanted to keep you here, see, in this pretty white chamber, near the princess; but she was afraid the cigarette smoke would make you cough. It would, would it? I open the window a dozen times a day, but ten dozen times would not let out the smoke my mistress puffs into the air."

Blandine was uncomfortable. It hurt her to hear remarks about people, especially if spoken in a disrespectful tone. Then she thought it was perhaps not right for Daria to speak of the smoking. Not that that shocked or surprised her. She knew the Spanish and Southern French ladies smoked, why should not Russian ladies do the same? fan (luncheon sleeveless gown), barushnaya."

"My beads are to help me say my prayers," said Blandine, "they are not for ornament."

"And then they must be like what our monakha and monakhnya (monks and nuns) have hanging by their side? But our barushnaya is not a nun! She does not need to wear praying beads! What does my little lady say when she holds them, so?" Daria opened her arms wide.

Blandine told her about the sorrowful mysteries and explained as she could how she used her beads, and the mysteries of the Rosary in general.

"I love Our Lady of Kazan," said Daria. "It is to the Kazanski Sabor (cathedral) that I go when I am in Petersburg, and especially on an Easter morning. When I was in Moscow I went to see the Iberki Bojs-Master (Iberian Virgin or Mother). If you saw that Virgin! black she is, you know, but all blazing with the biggest jewels, and the finest! Only the Metropolitan himself can touch that image and sometimes she takes her to a dying person: but then he has to have a troop of soldiers to guard his state coach, besides the footmen that always attend him. Come with me! I will show you the same one, only smaller."

Blandine hesitated. "You are very kind, Daria, but please do not ask me to do anything my aunt would not like."

"O, she'll like that, barushnaya! She'd want you to go there, always, to say your prayers. You are not like that barushnaya (unbeliever), Mamselle." Blandine was really shocked now.

"O, Daria," she cried, "good Daria! please do not tell me these things."

"Yes, I will! I must," insisted Daria. "It is best to know them. You must know them sooner or later. Why, everyone knows what she is!"

"O, Daria!" Daria laughed. "I'm not sorry for her," she declared. "I'm glad she's a heathen. I'm glad when she's pushed to the wall. She doesn't deserve to have the faith!"

They were now standing before a splendid shrine, within whose plate-glass doors were suspended a profusion of paintings in rich golden frames set with jewels. Among the gold and jewels appeared faces, beautiful, exquisite in outline and coloring, and hands, holding sceptres or staffs. The centre figure, the richest one of all the collection, was, no doubt, the splendid copy of the Iberian Virgin, a miraculous picture, said to work wonderful miracles. Many lamps were burning before the shrine. Daria prostrated herself and swayed backwards and forwards, touching her forehead to the floor repeatedly, beating her breast and crossing herself over and over again.

KIDNEY DISEASE FOR TEN YEARS.

A Glen Miller Man's Terrible Trial. He Found a Cure at Last in Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mr. P. M. Burk, who is a well-known resident of Glen Miller, Hastings Co., Ont., was afflicted with kidney trouble for ten years. So pleased is he at having found in Doan's Kidney Pills a cure for his ailments, which he had begun to think incurable, that he writes the following statement of his case so that others similarly afflicted may profit by his experience: "I have been afflicted with kidney trouble for about ten years and have tried several remedies but never received any real benefit until I started taking Doan's Kidney Pills. My back used to constantly ache and my urine was high colored and milky looking at times. Since I have finished the third box of Doan's Kidney Pills I am happy to state that I am not bothered with backache at all and my urine is clear as crystal. I feel confident that these pills are the best kidney specific in the country."

"Why," replied Johnny, "it's a fellow that's always lookin' for a chance to say I told you so."

The Royal Month and the Royal Disease.

Sudden changes of weather are especially trying, and probably to none more so than to the scrofulous and consumptive. The progress of scrofula during a normal October is commonly great. We never think of scrofula—its bunches, cutaneous eruptions, and wasting of the bodily substance—without thinking of the great good many sufferers from it have derived from Hood's Sarsaparilla, whose radical and permanent cures of this one disease are enough to make it the most famous medicine in the world. There is probably not a city or town where Hood's Sarsaparilla has not proved its merit in more homes than one, in arresting and completely eradicating scrofula, which is almost as serious and as much to be feared as its near relative,—consumption.

WOMEN WILL TALK.

Can't Blame them for Selling each other about MILBURN'S Heart and Nerve Pills.

It's only natural that when a woman finds a remedy which cures her of nervousness and weakness, relieves her pains and aches, puts color in her cheeks and vitality in her whole system, she should be anxious to let her suffering sisters know of it. Mrs. Hannah Holmes, St. James Street, St. John, N.B., relates her experience with this remedy as follows:—"For some years I have been troubled with fluttering of the heart and dizziness, accompanied by a smothering feeling which prevented me from resting. My appetite was gone and I was much run down and debilitated. Since I started using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, the smothering feeling has gone, my heart beat is now regular, the fluttering has disappeared, and I have been wonderfully built up through the tonic effect of the pills. I now feel stronger and better than for many years, and cannot say too much in praise of the remedy which restored my long lost health."

Kerosene OIL!

Now that the long fall evenings are here you have to light your lamps early, and if you do not have good Kerosene Oil you have very poor satisfaction. Cheap low grade oil not only smokes and darkens the Lamp Chimnies, but it also creates a very disagreeable odor in the room.

We handle only the best grade of so if you buy your oil from us you can depend on getting the best value for your money every time.

Send or bring your can to us to be re-filled, and we will give you satisfaction both in quality and price.
