LADY LAURA'S RELEASE

THE STORY OF A SPOILED BEAUTY.

CHAPTER XXVII.

One thing, however, Lady Laura Laura did not know—she had no idea that Gladys Rane had written to the captain to say that Lady Kinloch would insist on going to Brighton for a month, as some friends of hers were going thither, and how it would relieve the monotony, how it would brighten her life, if he were going thither at the same time.

One morning the captain was in an unusually bright humor. He said to his wife that he thought it was time they left Switzerland, and asked her whether she would like to go. Her answer was "Rood." To her there was no place like home; and for a short time he seemed to agree with her. For a few hours the subject was not renewed; then suddenly the captain took occasion to refer to it again.

"We will not go straight to Rood Laura," he said. "It is some time since I have been to Bourneouth; would you like to go there, dear?" His manner was so much kinder than usual that her heart was filled with delight. How she loved him, in spite of all the wrong he had done her! The trusting, loving woman caught his hand and kissed it.

"I will go wherever you please, Vance," she replied.

Now was his opportunity and he utilized it.

"I did think of Brighton," he said, slowly. "I like Brighton."

"We will go there, then, if you prefer it," returned his wife.

"You look much better to-day, Laura," he observed.

"I am always better when you are kind to me, Vance," she said.

"And I am always kind, except when you are jealous," he remarked, with a kindly smile; and for a few hours a faint gleam of happiness came to her.

They reached Brighton safely, and found the queen of water-cure-places comparatively gay. The captain had engaged a suite of rooms at the Grand Hotel; and in a short time Lady Laura seemed to benefit from the change.

One morning mother and daughter sat at one of the windows of the hotel watching the sea and the visitors moving to and fro on the parade.

"Angel," said her ladyship, suddenly, "I may be mistaken, but I really do believe that Vance is beginning to care for me; he is kinder, and seems to think more about me. Do you think it is possible that, even if he did marry me without love, he might learn to love me now?"

"Quite possible, mamma," she answered, but in her heart she did not believe that he would ever do so. She had hardly finished speaking when the captain entered the room.

"Laura," he said, "will you not come out on to the pier? The morning is charming; the sun is warm, and the air is fresh. The band is playing and there are some charming faces to be seen. Will you come, Angela?"

She was looking at the sea and listening to the wash of the waves, when suddenly the captain stopped before a little group—stopped with a cry of pleasure that he hoped sounded as if he were surprised. Looking up, her ladyship saw before her the dark, fascinating face of Gladys Rane, flushed with delight, her dark eyes shining like stars. Lady Laura turned pale, her heart seemed to stop beating.

Her husband introduced her to the friends who were with Miss Rane, and she acknowledged the introduction with a formal bow. She could not speak. She saw as in a blinding glare the smiling face and shining eyes that were riveted on her husband's face; she heard as in a dream arrangements being made for driving that afternoon. She heard her own name mentioned, but she did not know who uttered it.

So this was the secret of her husband's desire to see Brighton, of his kindness to her! He wished to keep on good terms with her that he might the better enjoy the society of her rival.

Gladys Rane, withdrawing just a little from the group, held out her daintily gloved hand and smiled a fascinating, triumphant smile, as she said:

"What a charming surprise, Lady Laura! How much better you are looking! When did you come?"

Angela, seeing the agitation under which her mother labored, hastened to the rescue.

"My mother is not so well as we could wish her," she replied. "We came on Tuesday, but we shall not make a long stay. Dear mamma," she added, turning to her mother, "you must not stand in this hot sun; it will not do you any good."

"Walk on to the end of the pier, Laura," put in the captain, in what he intended to be a careless, good humored voice. "I will join you directly," and, with a bow to his wife, he followed Miss Rane in the opposite direction.

"Angel," gasped Lady Laura, "I think my heart will break under this! Let us sit down; I cannot walk." They sat for some minutes in silence; then she turned to her daughter.

"He knew she was here, Angel."

"I am afraid so, mamma," replied the girl, full of pity for the suffering she saw in her mother's face.

When they had rested some time, Lady Laura said:

"They are out of sight, Angel. I shall not wait for the captain; I must go home."

Two hours later the captain returned to the hotel, full of good-humor and high spirits. Hastily and somewhat noisily he entered his wife's room.

"So many invitations, Laura!" he began, but the words died on his lips. His wife stood before him, tall and stately, proud and defiant, as he had never seen her before, her face unnaturally pale and her blue eyes flashing fire.

"You knew that woman was coming here," she broke in.

"What woman?" he asked.

"Gladys Rane," she replied. "You knew that she was coming, and you came here to meet her!"

He winced for a moment under the straightforward charge, then laughed, contemptuously.

"What if I did?" he retorted. "In marrying you I did not renounce my freedom. I can surely go where I like and meet whom I will!"

"You have no right to meet a woman who does her best to take your heart from me!"

"Heart!" sneered the captain. "What nonsense! I have no heart."

"That is indeed true," said her ladyship; "and that is why you care so little how cruelly you wound the hearts of others. You cannot deny it, Vance, that you came to Brighton on purpose to meet Miss Rane. All that you said about liking the place, all your show of kindness to me, was an excuse—a piece of hypocrisy from beginning to end."

Comparatively few people realize to what extent Gillett's Lye can be used to advantage in every home. For instance, with one can of Gillett's Lye and five and a half pounds of lard or grease, ten pounds of good hard soap can be made. Use one tablespoon Gillett's Lye in gallon of water for cleaning and disinfecting refrigerators, sinks, garbage cans, tiled floors, baths and toilets.

GILLETT'S LYE

Useful for over 500 purposes.

Notes on Poultry Raising.

The farm is the natural place for poultry raising. Open range, cheap food, low cost of labor and equipment, conditions which are found only on the farm, make this the most natural place for the poultry industry as a side-line. Here fowls can be kept in large numbers at the lowest expense, while the farmer can secure as large production, maintain as high a standard and market his produce in competition with anyone. The income which some farmer's wives realize from the poultry flock is almost equal to the income derived from most of the other farm operations. Poultry will do much damage, but only on the farm, make this the most natural place for the poultry industry as a side-line.

An Ancient Roman Festival.

Liberalia—an ancient Roman festival—was celebrated on March 17, in honour of the Roman deity Liber, who was identified by the Romans of classical times with the Greek Dionysus, the god of wine. But wine was placed by the ancient Romans under the special protection of Jupiter, the god of the atmosphere and weather; they had no special god of wine, and Liber, as the name indicates, was associated with the idea of freedom. On this day the boy who had reached his twentieth age—usually seventeen—was formally admitted to manhood. He laid aside his boyish toga with purple border—toga praetexta—and assumed that of a man, the plain robe of unbleached wool—toga virilis; the bulla, or ornament worn about the neck of the child, was consecrated to the lares, or household gods, after which the young man was conducted by his father or guardian to the Forum, where he appeared as a citizen. The day ended with a sacrifice and a banquet, and now for the first time he bore a name of his own. This was the celebration of the day for the young man coming into his manhood. The citizens at large offered on this day little sweet cakes to Liber, which were sold in the streets by old women crowned with ivy, who had with them portable hearths or altars for the use of the votaries.

Just Folks.

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

Red of cheek and bright of eye. Shoulders square and head up high. Ten years old, when blood is warm, Making mockery of the storm, Laughing at the lightning that blow. Fairly wallowing in the snow—Age may find the storm-king grim, But a boy can play with him.

Coat wide open at the throat. Like the loose sail of a boat. Bare of knees and bare of hands, Like the gale that blows. Sturdy, rugged, staunch and true. Out of doors the whole day through. Giving us a roguish grin. When the blizzard drives us in.

Age sits at the window pane. Washing spring would come again; we are prisoners of the gale. And we hear his lusty shout, but we dare not venture out. Youth may have the biting cold—Age can never be so bold.

WHAT MADE ME HAPPY

"I was congratulating myself that I had passed the winter without catching a cold, when I got one at the beginning of last May. It was because I was run down. Being run down I had some trouble in getting rid of this cold. I was a nervous wreck. I would wake up regularly mornings feeling that some terrible calamity would take place. Although we were comfortably off, I felt sure my husband was going to lose everything. The children worried me. If they made the least noise, I would get into a terrible temper. I could scold them so that I am sure they hated me. I would be mad with myself after it was over and make up my mind never to let it happen again. I would go to bed at night and begin to think and picture dreadful things which might happen to me and my family. I would lay awake for hours, sometimes until daylight, until I was so weak that I could scarcely raise my head. I would waken next day just as tired as when I laid down. After a while I got so that I didn't care what happened. The children annoyed me and I wouldn't have cared if they had left me for good. I felt that it was only a matter of time before I would lose my mind. I knew that my symptoms were due to a run down condition and that if I could only get something to build me up, I might be all right. I knew that there must be some good tonic but most of them made such foolish claims that I was afraid of them. Happening one day to run across a leaflet about Carnot, I was impressed with the moderate way this preparation was described, so I made up my mind I would try it. I did and today I am the happiest and healthiest woman living. I haven't a care in the world. Instead of running away from me, my children are now with me all the time. My husband tells me that my disposition is as near an angel's as any human being's can be, but of course he is prejudiced. I don't believe I have a nerve in my body now."

Fads and Fashions.

Printed crepe dresses often show fingerie collars. Dull beige and sand are noted as good daytime hues. Short, straight coats of leather will be worn for spring. Several skirts feature the circular side panel at one side only. Even with sports clothes fancy high-heeled shoes are worn. All shades of green are favored for spring, especially almond. Long-sleeved pulchre sweaters of white silk are tied at the back. Embroidery of wool tapestry is used on evening gowns of moire. Orchid and pink chiffon are a delightful and much-used combination. The beaded gown is in great favor at both the afternoon and evening wear. A new waistline for spring is low at the back and raised at the front. Alpaca and plain and printed crepes are favored for afternoon wear. Lawn green and tints de negre are especially good for sports clothes. The waistline has been raised quite noticeably in many spring models. Spring frocks feature appliques of flat crepe as a prominent trimming feature. Pleated crepe capes have fitted yokes, and are collared with white or gray fur.

Britain Begins Fulfillment of Her Obligations.

The Million Pounds Paid United States on Account—Germany Has Apparently Come to Her Senses—S. S. Albania Reports Thrilling and Unique Experience.

GERMANY WEAKENING.

LONDON, March 15. While evidence of perceptible weakening in Germany's resistance to France and Belgium has come to the notice of Downing Street, British officials decline to comment on various reports that the Berlin Government is about to adopt a new attitude towards the Allies. The hope expressed tonight, however, that Germany has "come to her senses" is ready to make direct proposals to France. It is learned that negotiations, through diplomatic channels, were initiated during the past few days with disappointing results to the German emissary, who was bluntly informed that Great Britain would not act as postman or broker for any proposal intended for France and Belgium.

A GERMAN DEMAND.

BERLIN, March 16. It is reliably stated to-night that a complete and unconditional evacuation of Ruhr will be designated by Germany as a prerequisite to the resumption of reparations payments and deliveries in kind under the program to be agreed upon when negotiations with the French and Belgians are resumed.

FEARED TROUBLE.

DUBLIN, March 15. Bodies of Free State troops patrolled Dublin streets in terror to-day because of apprehension by the authorities that trouble might grow out of the proclamation by the Home Minister of the Republic, last night, ordering all sports and amusements to cease for an indefinite period of national mourning. Army authorities forbade the publication of the proclamation and it did not appear to-day.

in any of the Dublin newspapers. A conference of theatre managers was held, after which it was announced that all amusements in Dublin would be closed to-night, but hoped to be reopened to-morrow. The feeling prevails that the Republicans may concentrate their efforts to prevent the Siki-McTigue fight on Saturday, but the promoters say they have no apprehension and have received no communication from the Irregulars.

RESCUED ALL THE PATIENTS.

MONTREAL, March 15. Heroic work on the part of eighty attendants and a like number of Sisters of Providence prevented loss of life and permitted the safe removal of four hundred patients to the Grey Nuns Orphanage when fire destroyed the Roman Catholic Home for incurables on Decarie Boulevard to-day.

AMUSEMENTS WILL BE RESUMED.

DUBLIN, March 15. It was officially announced to-night that all places of amusement in Dublin would be opened as usual from Friday night, and that the McTigue-Siki fight would take place on St. Patrick's Day.

He Will Never be Without Them.

JAMES MCKINNON PAYS TRIBUTE TO DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

He Suffered from Kidney Trouble for a Considerable Time and now Loses no Opportunity to Praise Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mulgrave, N.S., March 16 (Special). "I will never be without a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills in the house."

"I feel it is my duty," Mr. McKinnon continues, "to let others know how I have benefited by taking Dodd's Kidney Pills. I was in a run-down condition before taking them, having pains in my back. I got thin and pale. Rheumatism also troubled me. After taking five boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills I feel better than I ever did."

The satisfaction Dodd's Kidney Pills are giving as a remedy for kidney troubles is shown by the large number of people who keep them always on hand. They have learned that the proper way to avoid serious forms of kidney disease, such as rheumatism, diabetes, dropsy, and heart disease, is to correct the early symptoms of kidney trouble.

Dodd's Kidney Pills have built their reputation on the good work they have done. Ask your neighbors if Dodd's Kidney Pills are not the sovereign remedy for kidney trouble.

NOTES ON THE GAME.

The game was only about 15 minutes old when the ball burst, but after a few minutes delay another was procured from the "Saints" and play resumed.

The state of the ground prevented anything like accurate play, but all on the field played a most determined game.

Last year's shining "Stars" were prominent viz. E. Power, Condon, Cowan and English, whilst Kelly, in the half-back division showed that he has lost none of his old "form."

For the "Institute," W. Reid, although partially disabled, did splendidly, and was probably the best man on the field, whilst Cook put in some dashing work at half-back.

The others, who excelled, in our opinion were Carnell, Moore and Thompson, but the team did not seem to get together, and missed one or two nice chances to score.

The following are the players who took part—
Star-Gaul, goal; English and Power, backs; Marshall, Cowan and Kelly, half-backs; Ryan, Power, Condon, Graham and Kelly, forwards.

Church Institute—Noonan, goal; Thompson and Taylor, backs; Cook, Knowling and Godden, half-backs; Reid, Pever, Carnell, Goodridge and Moore, forwards.

Football Matches.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY, 25 YEARS AGO.

By ONLOOKER.

In our "Reminiscences" of football for season 1898, published by "Evening Telegram" last autumn, we confined our attention principally to League Championship work, omitting the Mercantile alliance matches, which were played off "before breakfast," and which were productive of some keen contests—the famous "Knowing Athletic Club" winning the Mercantile Championship after two play-off matches with the "Marshall and Rodger" representatives. During the season we had also some brilliant, keenly contested games between our best city teams and combinations from the warships then on the station, viz: "Cordelia," "Partridge" and "Buzard," and taken altogether this, the 3rd year of the Football League in this city was a most remarkable one—remarkable for the enthusiasm displayed by the players in playing "before breakfast," and also from the fact of the season practically opening on St. Patrick's Day, March 17th. We extract the following from the "Evening Herald" of March 18th, 1898:

YESTERDAY'S FOOTBALL.

Yesterday morning the Champion Association Team, i.e., the "Blue Saints" ushered in the popular and ever-green St. Patrick with a club breather. It was originally intended to have had a section club match, "Blue" vs. "White," but as some players did not turn up a scratch match was arranged as an enjoyable hour's play ensued. The weather was all that could be desired, in fact ideal football weather, but the ground was hard as adamant and anything like class football was impossible. At the call of time the "Whites" or Juniors were winners by 2 goals to nil. Referee Mr. Pike.

We observe that Jim Blackwood has thrown in his lot with the St. Andrew's, and he will undoubtedly help to strengthen the back division of their ranks, whilst among the Juniors there are some "hard nuts" to crack and the "Blue Brigade" will certainly have a strong league eleven on when the season opens.

"STAR" VS. "CHURCH INSTITUTE."

Whilst the above game was in progress on St. Andrew's ground, the "Stars" and "Church Institute" had a "friendly" on the Methodist Institute grounds opposite, which was witnessed by a large and enthusiastic gathering of spectators. The "Stars" put on their full strength, whilst the Institute only mustered up a very mediocre eleven, as will be observed from the list of players annexed. The ground was in fearful condition, and before half time, in some places, was a perfect quagmire, some of the players presenting a most ludicrous appearance, bespattered with mud from head to foot. Right from the start the "Stars" pressed, as they were by far the best team, being more active on the ball and playing much better together than their opponents, and when time was called the result was—"Stars" 3 goals; "Church Institute" nil. Referee, Mr. F. Maynard.

A Poultry Betrayal.

The betrayal of the country's interest by Squires and Coaker who assumed control of public affairs for place and pelf, has so aroused public opinion that a lesson will be taught these miserable politicians in the election that will not be forgotten by them, and which should serve as a warning to all time-serving politicians that their reign will be short when they attempt to use their positions for mere personal aggrandizement. Never since Responsible Govt. has the country been oppressed by such rulers as those of the present type, who will go down to defeat in this election. Coaker's intentions were well known. He made no secret of his determination to serve the interest of the Coaker strongholds at the expense and sacrifice of other's interests. To accomplish his desires he places in the Coaker districts mere pawns who are sworn to do his bidding. If Coaker determined on the destruction of St. John's, he had willing tools to aid him in his designs. If he desired the destruction of the West Coast industries, his hired men were ready to do his bidding. Now we realize why we suffer the misery and privations of the moment. Coaker laid his plans well for the accomplishment of his purpose. Still the Government organs cry out, "Let Coaker finish his work!" Is not his work of destruction about completed?

opened yesterday. The afternoon game between the Terra Nova and a city team captained by W. R. Warren was witnessed by several hundred spectators, among them many ladies. The T.N.'s played the first half with wind and sun in their favor and with a rush carried the ball through the city lines and Collins by a neat kick scored the first goal; within ten minutes another fell to them. But the city boys played up and soon P. Mars captured the ball and had it between the posts. The T.N.'s made another spurt after this, but their opponents put up a good fight and Peter once more got in between the bars. It was 15 minutes before the city scored their third goal, and until call of time nothing else was done and the game stood a draw. The boys were pretty sore after the match, for such exercise coming after the long winter is felt keenly in the first game.

Choice Reading.

(Extract from a 1918 Coaker Circular)

"Gibbs and Squires acted as traitors at the last minute. Two Black Rascals—Squires and Gibbs—you must never trust. If I die to-morrow never allow those two men to represent a district where you have any voice. Both Squires and Gibbs are no less. Both have no right in the Executive, as both are defeated candidates. All that the Devil could do was done by Squires and Gibbs and all of the anti-Union clique to down and out the Union."

WHY THE CHANGE TO-DAY?

Yes Messrs. Squires and, it is said, Mr. Gibbs, are working hand in hand with Mr. Coaker to-day, notwithstanding his absolute repudiation and condemnation of the appointments of these men in the early days of 1918. At that time, according to Mr. Coaker, neither of these men had any right in the Executive because they were not elected members or representatives of the people in the House of Assembly. The same thing applies to Hon. Dr. Campbell, Geo. Shea and Sir Marmaduke Winter, whom now Mr. Coaker tolerates in the Executive, and one in particular is holding the portfolio of Agriculture and Mines.

MAKING ROOM FOR A COUNCILOR.

Fishermen North, particularly members of the F.P.U., will remember Mr. Coaker's insincerity and inconsistency in this respect, when they review what has happened recently when he not only favored the appointment of a non-member of the House to the Executive but actually resigned himself in order to make good this appointment in the person of Sir Marmaduke Winter. Only a year or so ago when Mr. Coaker promised his dupes that the Shipping, Millitia and some other Departments were to be scrapped, he also stated in his printed speech that when the time was opportune (and that in the not far distant future) Hon. Dr. Campbell would be mainly enough to resign his Executive Councilorship and portfolio as Minister of Agriculture and Mines. Evidently the Honourable Doctor has not lived up to the high ideals Mr. Coaker cherished of him, as despite the doctor's wishes he still retains those positions, and what is more, is entrusted with the expenditure of millions of dollars for which no benefit to the Colony is in evidence. Mr. Coaker decried the Government that allowed M. P. Gibbs and R. A. Squires to hold seats in the Executive Council, because they were not representatives of the people. We have yet to learn that Hon. Geo. Shea, Campbell and Sir M. G. Winter are elected representatives of the people.

"I Now Feel Fine"

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

At all Dealers.
GERALD S. DOYLE, DISTRIBUTOR.

Mr. P. G. Murdoch, Box 433, Portage la Paire, Man., writes: "I was troubled for years with biliousness, constipation, kidney and liver troubles. I tried many different kinds of medicine, but nothing did me much good until I tried Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I now feel fine, but an ever without these pills in the house. Dr. Chase's Ointment has relieved my husband of piles, from which he used to suffer badly."

During the next few days John looked up some people from County Wexford who had settled in Trinity, and during the hours he spent with them, he learned a good deal about the place and the people, that was helpful to him in deciding upon his immediate future. He found that a "Doctor" Forsk was settled in Trinity, and that he was looking after the health of the place as best he could; but that with so many people in Trinity Bight, and the adjoining settlements there was much that no one man could do. He called on "Doctor" Forsk, and as they exchanged confidences, and each told the other the extent of his medical qualifications, they decided that there was room enough for the two of them in the settlement; and that the people would be glad to know that Mr. Lane was also a "Doctor."

TRINITY

JOHN BINGLEY GARLAND.

Of those men who lived in Trinity since the last century, and who built the structure of the welfare of the city upon the broad and deep foundations that were laid by the Lester and others of the distant past—of whom, I say, no one did more for the interests of Trinity; no name is so entitled to a place in our hallowed memories, and our grateful recollections, as that of Garland. Of those who have that honoured name in Trinity, the best known to our forefathers, were George and John Bingley. "Gentlemen all" they were, and we only to read the inscription on the beautiful mural tablet in the Morry Chapel here, to get some idea of the place that George Garland held in the affections of a loving and grateful people in Trinity, and of the greatness of the man. He died in the early days of 40. In the hundred years ago the Garland represented the family in Trinity as John Bingley. No man ever more worthily represented a worthy name than did John Bingley Garland. He was not, however, my present intention to give even the barest outlines of his history, as I have been privileged to refer to him so often in the past, and have already covered his life in this reference to him just now. It is all attention to the illustration at the head of these notes, and thus to produce to my readers, especially those of Trinity, a man, than whom there was ever more highly respected, or more deeply beloved, by our forefathers, who were privileged to know him as their friend, and to serve him as their master. The house built by him as the residence for himself or his agent, and always known to the general public as "the big house," is still, in spite of its decay, a monument to his greatness; whilst the honoured name itself—Garland, appears on the corner of the road dedicated to his memory, and on the sign-board of the Hotel that is called after him.

"Lord, all pitying, Jesu blest, Grant him Thine eternal rest."

WHO WAS WHO IN TRINITY IN 1765 JOHN LANE, SURGEON.

(Continued.) Ennisborough is on the river Stoney, and less than twenty miles from Wexford Harbour. The town of Wexford was familiar to John, so before he finally decided what to do, he arranged to spend a day or two there with friends. There he found vessels coming and going between Trinity Newfoundland, and Wexford. One day he met Captain John Jenkins of the brig "Lester," who had made several trips between Trinity and Wexford, and who knew several of the men who had left Wexford a few years before and were comfortably settled in Trinity. John mentioned his circumstances and wishes to the Captain, who invited him to make the voyage to Trinity with him, and to judge for himself as to the climate and surroundings. John accepted the invitation, and went back to Ennisborough to prepare for the voyage.

During the week that he had at his disposal, before the "Lester" would be ready to sail for Trinity, John made arrangements for the rental of the old home, and the sale of some other property that would supply him with money necessary for the voyage. He said good-bye to his many friends in Ennisborough, and spent the last evening and night with Father John. The next evening found him at Wexford, and as the "Lester" was ready for sea, he went on board. At daylight the next morning the vessel left Wexford Harbour, and when John came on deck they had passed the Tucker rock, and were going before the wind, down St. George's Channel. Sixteen days of what proved to be a favourable voyage, and on the 25th day of May 1765, John Lane found himself in the beautiful harbour of Trinity, Newfoundland, and amidst such surroundings as were as enjoyable as they were surprising.

Pro-phy-lactic Brushes

HERE is a member of the Pro-phy-lactic family known as the Pen-e-tra-tor because it brushes through the hair. It does what you want a hair brush to do. You want to feel it on your scalp. It brushes all the hair instead of going over the top. Look at the stiff, springy, widely separated bristles and you will see that this is so. Daily brushing with the Pro-phy-lactic Pen-e-tra-tor is the best hair tonic you can find.

A few years later, with health completely restored, the old home in Ennisborough kept tugging at John Lane's heart strings, till nothing could keep him from going back to it. His wife's greatest pleasure was the companying with her husband's fishes, and in the summer of 1768, John Lane, Mrs. Lane and the little boy, went back to Wexford Harbour with Captain Jenkins in the good brig "Lester"; and nothing gave John Lane so much happiness as to make the following remarks to those who had gathered to meet them: "For thirty years the honoured names of this house were Eleanor and Dennis Lane. God took them to himself. He has now enabled me to restore them. Presenting his wife he said: permit me to introduce to you Eleanor Lane. Taking the little boy from his mother's arms, he said: "Permit me to introduce to you Dennis Lane."

It was nearly all that the jump in John's throat would allow him to say and as he sealed it all by kissing his wife and child, he added, as best he could: "Thank God for having guided me by ways that I knew not, to Trinity, Newfoundland. Thank God I am home again."

HAIL TO THE SHOEMAKERS. Probably no trade has produced, or helped to produce so many men of real worth as that of shoemaking. In addition to the names of such men that have become so familiar to us in history—from St. Crispin down to Carey, the missionary, and a score of others, since—we are now told that the Hon. Lloyd George was inspired to discover himself, by the stern talks and practical advice given to him in his younger days by his shoemaker-uncle, when Lloyd George spent hours in the old man's shop, watching him as he worked, and listening to him when he talked; and he talked a good deal. Certainly no trade has been more highly honoured in connection with the things selected to immortalize great men. Lord Wellington, for instance, has been immortalized in the "Wellington boot," and General Blucher no less so in the rougher pattern of foot-wear known as the "Blucher boot." Thank God, the Master sanctified and immortalized all honest toil, and every lawful trade by His work in the carpenter's shop at Nazareth, and—"Those mighty Hands that rule the sky, No earthly toil refused: The maker of the stars on high, a humble trade pursued." Whilst the tent-makers are represented in the Calendar of Saints by St. Paul on January 25th; and the fishermen are represented by an apostle in nearly every month of the year; so the shoe-makers are represented there by St. Crispin on October 25th.

And they all lifted up their voices and cried: Great is St. Crispin of the Shoemakers!

TRINITY 150 YEARS AGO, AND TODAY.

Although in the records of the causes of death, as found in the Burial Register of St. Paul's Parish, Trinity during the first fifty years from 1768, there are several records of deaths by violence, or some other terrible results of drunkenness; yet the entries of the ten years, from 1768 to 1778 indicate the most lawless period in the history of Trinity. Following are some of the entries of that decade: "Richard Cove, murdered. Maurice Power, murdered. Child of Maurice and Elizabeth Connors, murdered and mother drunk. Hannah Barrett, murdered. John Green, murdered. Jas. Flaed, frozen to death whilst drunk. At Richard Hallouhan's funeral, instead of decency a riot, etc." Rev. James Balfour, was in charge of the parish during those years, and it is not surprising to know that he was amazed, and often discouraged at the immoral condition of Trinity. He

The weekly meeting of the Municipal Council was held yesterday afternoon. Mayor Cook presided and Councillors Outerbridge, Vincent, Collier, Ryan and Dowden were present. After the preliminary business had been gone into, the following matters were dealt with by the Board. Deputy Minister of Finance Keating acknowledged receipt of Council cheque for $59,271.73, being payment of interest city debt and contribution toward the upkeep of the Fire Department to December 31st last. Inspector General Hitchings, in reply to Council's communication re the application of Job Brothers & Company, Ltd., to store fuel oil in tanks of steel on schooner "Tamara," stated he had no objection to the request being granted, provided the schooner is anchored in the Harbour or moored at the Southside premises. The applicants are therefore given permission to moor the schooner at their Southside premises. T. B. Chitt wrote re the necessity of having drains, etc., opened up on Bonclody, Prince of Wales and Gear Streets. This was referred to the City Engineer. P. Corbett, Allandale Road, asked

THE EVENING TELEGRAM

THE EVENING TELEGRAM, LIMITED, PROPRIETORS.

St. John's, Newfoundland, Friday, March 16, 1923.

RUINING A COUNTRY.

When grim, stark tragedy stalks throughout a once prosperous land, there must be some primary cause to which this is attributable, and those who are following closely to-day the record and actions of the present Government since their accession to power in November, 1919, must see plainly that for all the disaster and depression which followed the assumption of the Squires-Coaker administration, they and they alone are responsible. No country could have been more prosperous or with better hope for the future than Newfoundland in that ill-omened latter part of 1919, when the electorate decreed a change. The change came, but unfortunately, instead of having the results anticipated by the people who were misled by the manifesto promises of the present Prime Minister, misfortune and ill luck have been the hounds dogging this country ever since. And they continue to stick close to the heels of this devoted Colony, and will pursue her destinies so long as the Government of the day are permitted the control of affairs. The once progressive and prosperous West Coast was mercilessly treated by the Squires-Coaker agglomeration, and not one representative had the native courage or inherent manliness to protest the treatment meted out to fishermen and exporters alike. The men who from immature youth to old age gave of their life to carry on the fishing industry, and build up for themselves and their heirs, comfortable homes, all went down in the financial cataclysm that came in the train of Coaker's obnoxious and injurious Fish Regulations. New fish cargoes were prohibited from being cleared for market at the Custom House, and laden carriers remained moored to the wharves day after day and week after week, until deterioration set in, and the once valuable product of the labors of the fishermen became unfit for human consumption, and consequently a direct and irremediable loss ensued to the shipper. The natural result of this was that no longer could the merchants engage in the purchase of fish, either in bulk or cured. Hence there was no sale for the produce of the sea, and fishermen were compelled to reel up their lines, to coil down their trawls, moor their skiffs and motor boats, and make an endeavor to engage in other occupations altogether unfamiliar to them. The West Coast suffers to-day because of the Fish Regulations. It suffers because of the excessive duties clapped on all fishery supplies by the Government who boasted of being the possessors of all the talents, but who prostituted their high offices at the behest of a dictator, and permitted him to work his will on a people who had done more to build up the trade and commerce of the island than any other section. But the voters of the West Coast do not forget, and given their opportunity there will be such a downfall of mediocre politicians, who were recreant to their duty, than ever was known before in the political history of Britain's Ancient and Loyal Colony.

DUTIES THEN AND NOW.

The removal of the super duty tax of twenty-five per cent. on imports by the Acting Minister of Finance and Customs, Sir Richard Anderson Squires, a few weeks ago, is nothing more than the spreading of election bait, with the hope that electors will be convinced of his bona fides, and those of his Government, that he will, should he be returned to power still further lower the imports on fishery supplies and voyage necessities. Vain hope. Sir Richard Squires is responsible for the addition of the sur tax, super tax and sales tax to the regular tariff rates in effect. His removal of one of these, as noted, is not by any means sincere or born of a single thought other than to offer a bribe, and it is, to the electorate. The stroke of the pen that imposed these extra taxes could very well have wiped them off in a similar manner, but the remission of the twenty-five per cent. tax is the veriest bluff. It will be tacked on again should the Government be returned. Just by way of comparison it is thought fit to give a few figures of the duty rates in 1919, and those collected on the same articles at the moment, with the super duty tax eliminated. When Cashin was Minister of Finance and Customs, Butter was paying a duty of 3 1/2 cents per pound; under Squires the consumer is mulcted 5 1/2 cents. Cheese may be placed in the same class. Coal to the Outports was on the Free List. To-day duty is chargeable on this most necessary commodity at the rate of fifty cents a ton. Cordage, once 1 1/2 cents per pound is now about 2 3/4 cents. Flour in 1918, 25c. per barrel, is taxed by Squires at 87 cents, and so it goes on all through. Other fishery items will be compared in due course, so that fishermen may see for themselves the good wrought them by those who professed to be the saviors of the country, but three and a half years ago.

Portia Reports.

UNPRECEDENTED ICE CONDITIONS

Capt. Connors of S. S. Portia wired the Coastal Department this morning that the steamer was stuck in the ice 12 miles from Roul Point, Bay d'Espoir, since last evening. The captain further stated that it was absolutely impossible for any steamer to get through the ice in Hermitage Bay, it being a solid jam. A later message apprised the Shipping Department that the Portia got clear of the jam and expected to arrive at Pushthrough this afternoon. The Portia's present trip on the South West Coast has been a very lengthy one, having occupied, up to the present time, a period of four weeks, and it is not unlikely that she is now running short of coal.

The People say

Bennett and Better Times.

Let Coaker and Squires finish their work, shrieks the Advocate.

"Sure Mutt!" They have finished their work and in doing so they darned near finished Newfoundland.

"What we have we hold," barks Mr. Coaker. Right-o, Bill! And the people are going to see that you are not going to get any more.

Houdini got nothing on the guy who allegedly looted the desks of the Prime Minister and the Attorney General.

With a small screwdriver he upset the legislative workings of the Dominion.

And all during the official working hours of the heads and their deputies in these departments.

Should there happen to be an accidental explosion of T.N.T. in the vicinity of the "Wall" office, it is said that some Rabbits will undoubtedly be among the victims.

The Liberal-Labor-Progressive Party Committee rooms were filled to capacity again last night.

This surely is a sign of what is going to happen in this district on polling day.

When fully 700 men, all anxious to do their bit to rid St. John's of Coaker and his crew.

No notices of advertisements of this meeting were sent out or published, yet the spacious hall could not hold the crowd.

All the speakers, Vinicombe, Sir M. P. Cashin, Higgins and Sir John Crosbie called the Government's bluff on the Humber deal.

The people now know that the deal is an accomplished fact in as much as the Government have already spent over one million dollars on same.

The Opposition candidates have made themselves clear on their attitude respecting the Humber proposition.

They will support it and in doing so make the best bargain possible for this colony.

The Humber deal would be better and safer in the hands of a Bennett Government than it is with Coaker and Squires.

Bennett's Government will be a strong combination of successful business men and mechanics, and certainly a great party of genuine representatives of the people.

C. L. H.—Cashin, Linegar and Hunt stands for Clean Legislative Halls.

It was a crying shame to steal Sir Richard's signature and a greater one still to return it.

He who steals my purse steals trash but he who robs me of my good name robs me of that which no enriches him and leaves me poor indeed."

Poor Richard—with emphasis on the words good and enriches.

Coaker means Calamity, Squires stands for Stagnation.

Rally sons of Terra Nova onward to the light

Vote for Bennett who stands for the Humber Deal, if it is an honest one, and will give employment.

Vote for Bennett whose Government will do everything possible and encourage movements that will mean progress and prosperity for all the people all the time.

ALL FINISHED. THE "REFORMERS" FAREWELL

(With Acknowledgments to the Late Sir W. S. Gilbert.)

"I very much fear," said Sir Richard one day "That I'm finished, I'm finished, I'm finished. I cannot get candidates, do what I may. For I'm finished, I'm finished, I'm finished. I offer men jobs but they always say 'no.' All my cash at their feet I have offered to throw To my districts I can't get enough men to go, I'm finished, I'm finished, I'm finished."

In Port Union, poor Coaker sat tearing his hair As he thought, "Oh, I'm finished, I'm finished." Frank Boone sat beside him in woeful despair Saying also, "I'm finished, I'm finished." Quoth Coaker, "I thought that the Humber would be The thing that would cause them to re-elect me. But 'tis clear that my game voters plainly see, I'm finished, I'm finished, I'm finished."

Doc Campbell was ill. He had writer's cramp bad And he said out "I'm finished, I'm finished." If I'm asked for more 'scripts,' I will surely go mad For I'm finished, I'm finished, I'm finished. Men follow me down to my office each day, Try I ever so hard, I just can't get away, And I know that each 'script' is a vote gone astray. I'm finished, I'm finished, I'm finished."

Doctor Mosdell stopped writing his filth to declare, "I'm finished, I'm finished, I'm finished." I've written as much rotten muck as I dare And I'm finished, I'm finished, I'm finished. I've vilified men who are better than I If I keep on, in hospital soon I will lie And feeling like this, 'tis no wonder I cry, I'm finished, I'm finished, I'm finished."

So Coaker, and Campbell and Mosdell and Squires Cried out loudly "we're finished, we're finished." And they shouted again, did these base vilifiers, "We're finished, we're finished, we're finished." For from office we'll soon find ourselves thrown out, That the country is sick of us, there's not a doubt. So we're candid for once, when we painfully shout, "We're finished, we're finished, we're finished."

Sealing News.

VIKING TAKES WHITECOATS.

Capt. Bartlett of S.S. Viking reports from the Gulf the only encouraging news received from the fleet. Last night, Capt. Bartlett reported that he took 100 whitecoats of a small size, but the weather was too thick to see far. Weather or not the Viking has struck the fat is not intimated in the message received, but the next message will in all probability convey the information that the slaughter has commenced. The position of the steamers on the front remains unchanged. The Terra Nova steamed some seven miles yesterday, but saw nothing. The following messages were received last night:—

BOWING BROS., LTD.

Bowling Bros.—15 miles E. of Bonavista, ice tight, ship jammed; ice rafting but no danger.

Eagle, (Thursday)—Position at noon, 23 miles S.E. by E. half E. of Bonavista, ice tight, ship jammed. Sagona, (Thursday p.m.)—33 miles S.E. of Bonavista, ice tight, ship jammed; conditions unchanged.

Terra Nova, (Thursday)—Made 7 miles to-day; conditions unchanged.

Vikings—Took first hundred whitecoats to-day, small size, too thick to see far. Position 20 miles E. of Cape North; ice tight, blowing gale from Northwest.

JOB BROS. & CO., LTD.

Thesis—20 miles S.E. by E. Cape Bonavista, making poor progress. Neptune—20 miles S.E. by E. Cape Bonavista; ice very heavy, few ships in sight.

The Irish "Irish Night."

Those who are taking part in the Gaelic League Concert in the Methodist College Hall on St. Patrick's night, number amongst them the leading artists of St. John's. Without being invidious we may mention Mrs. Garland, Misses' Ida Howlett, Barbara Gibbs, Molly Kelly, Madeline Rossiter, and the Irish Calline; Messrs. O'Neill, Canning, Dillon, Duder, Major O'Grady and several others whose names we are asked to withhold for the present. In the programme advertised the name of the pianist, Miss Madge Meaney, the distinguished graduate in music, was inadvertently omitted. The name of Miss Madge Kelly was also, in error, printed as Miss Eileen Kiely. In this concert Mr. Charles R. Duder makes his first public appearance on the city stage. This is undoubtedly the best Irish concert ever presented to a St. John's audience. All the items are novel and have never before been presented here, including that most spectacular of all dances, "The High Ball Cup," presented by the Irish Calline.—Adv.

Here and There.

NO REPORT.—There was no report of the Senet since leaving Burn yesterday at 11 a.m.

Be sure to get your ticket for "Irish Night," at the Methodist College Hall to-day, at the Royal Stationery.—mar16,21

TEMPERATURE.—At the Valley Nurseries last night the thermometer registered 2 below zero. This morning the glass showed 22 degrees frost.

RELIEF TRAIN GONE OUT. A severe snow storm raged along the railway line from Briggs Junction West yesterday, and as a consequence the trains are held up. The Rotary plows left various sections this morning to clear the line, while a relief train with a gang of men left the depot at 10 a.m. to assist in the work.

CONCERT AT ST. JOSEPH'S. ATTRACTION TO-MORROW NIGHT. The concert at St. Joseph's Hall, Hoylstown, to-morrow night promises to be very enjoyable. A most amusing sketch has been prepared and is in the hands of a talented caste and those who attend are promised a treat. The affair will conclude with a dance. The proceeds go towards the funds of the parish.

Shipping. S.S. Sable I., which left Halifax on Sunday last had not reached St. Pierre up to early this forenoon, according to a message received to-day by the local agents.

S.S. Yodamore is due to arrive here on Tuesday from Liverpool. The Furness Withy Co. received a message this forenoon from the ship giving her position as 450 miles S.E. of Cape Race.

TRAIN NOTES.—The local east bound express is delayed at Arnold's Cove owing to the snow drifts ploughed along the track. The west bound express arrived at Port aux Basques this morning. The local train is due at 2.30 p.m.

Takes up no more room than an ordinary machine, in fact more compact than any machine. The new No. 15 Quiet Remington Typewriter is a triumph of Typewriter Construction. A. Milne Fraser, W. J. Edgar, Agent, Royal Bank Chambers.—mar14,17.

MASONIC INSTALLATION.—The Annual Installation of the Master Elect Bro. G. J. Oke, and investiture of the Wardens and officers of Lodge Tasker No. 484, S.C., will take place at high noon to-morrow. This is one of the biggest Masonic events of the year.

WEEK-END NOTES.

(I. C. MORRIS.)
CHAPTER XI.

It may be said that during the week-end the sealing fleet was at its height, and though the sailing vessels had begun to divide, the boats which were put in commission were made up for the loss sustained by the dwindling sailing ships. Up to the date most of the catch of the week-end voyage was landed on the north side of the harbour, and also manufactured there. The process of manufacturing at that time was very different from what we have at present. There was not any machinery; there were men from tanks, such as have been recently installed. The process was by rote, and was very primitive. The buildings for that purpose were known as "panns," and were constructed on a primitive manner, and consisted of a very primitive man, and consisted of strong frame work and pounds, with at the base enclosure known as the "pan." The seals being skinned the fat was hoisted to the top of the vat, and was then thrown out on the land. The process was almost the same as that of flailing, and consisted of flailing the seals on a chopper, which was fastened to a handle five feet long, the chopper itself being very sharp, and of crescent shape. As the fat was hoisted into the vat, it was hoisted along into the hatches, and fell into the pounds, where it was hoisted to the top of the vat. On the north side of the harbour there was a large vat on the premises, near where Frank's coal store now is. There were two on Tessier's premises; there was one on Stewart's premises, and one on O'Brien's premises. There was no doubt, others before that, but those were the last to be used in the manufacturing of seal oil, and they were all operated in the same manner. Legislation was passed prohibiting the manufacture of seal oil on the north side of the harbour.

LADIES WIN DEBATE.
In all its long history the Methodist College Literary Institute never had a more interesting or heated debate than that which took place last night. An invitation had been extended to the ladies of the Women's League to engage in a joint debate on the question of Woman Suffrage—the League taking one side and the Institute the other. The invitation was accepted with alacrity and last night the ladies rallied in such force to the support of their speakers that the Institute was unable to comfortably accommodate the large gathering that was in attendance. Lady Allardice, who was accompanied by Major Wilberforce-Bell, graciously honored the occasion with her presence. The framing of the resolution for discussion had been left to the ladies, and they very adroitly worded it so that the onus of proof rested upon the male opponents. It used as follows: "Resolved, that we disapprove any amendments to the Election Act of 1913, Newfoundland, extending franchise and right of representation to women." In the conduct of the debate Institute rules were followed as closely as possible; the leaders on both sides being granted 15, 10, and 5 minutes respectively, while 5 minutes only were granted speakers from the floor. The latter speakers as well as the speakers had been arranged for beforehand, and members from each organization spoke alternately. Mr. William Dwyer moved the resolution and was supported by Messrs. W. G. Gosling led the forces against it, and with her were Messrs. H. McNeil and A. Fraser. The other speakers were: for the Institute, Messrs. R. P. Horwood, A. Sopwood, W. White, A. E. Perkins, C. Powell, and G. Peters; for the franchise League, Messdames J. Campbell, H. V. P. Burke, J. A. W. W. McNeil, C. Hutton and Miss Cherrington. The ladies had their arguments marshalled and buttressed them with convincing facts. They spoke with confidence and with conviction, and their exception many excellent use of the time allotted to them. As a whole they outclassed their male opponents.

The duty of deciding the debate fell upon the Hon. Sir William F. Lloyd, and he kindly agreed to act as Judge increased by abolishing the old time vat; and thus it was that those old buildings were taken down, and demolished, and the entire catch of the sealing voyage, which was brought to St. John's, was landed and manufactured at the south side of the harbour. That was some ten years before the Dundee boats began their operations at the seal fishery. When the Dundee firms established branches here they also were relegated to the south side of the harbour. There was of course, a lot of seals landed at Harbour Grace, and also at Trinity, and St. John's.

MODERN MACHINERY INTRODUCED.

With the installation of machinery a new and more expeditious process of manufacturing followed, and within ten years the vats were abandoned, and finally demolished; and instead of the men chopping away in the open air, there came the grinders and the machinery; and the tanks, so that instead of a process of weeks and months, it became a matter of days and hours. For the fat was literally ground into oil, as it is at present, as may be seen by a visit to any of our south side premises. But the change in the manufacture of the seal oil has not been confined to that feature of it alone, it has also been extended to the shipping and marketing of the oil. At that time huge oak puncheons were the chief receptacles for seal oil, and a busy time of it our local coopers had in making up these staved packages. Most of this work is now done by the tanked ships, and instead of the oil being rolled to the ships side, and hoisted aboard, it is now a matter of pouring it in, and of pumping it out. The old time vat was truly a quaint structure; but like other old and quaint things, it served its purpose, and laid the foundation of better things, and prepared the way for improved facilities. Our merchant princes at that time were always ready to adopt advanced ideas, and to apply them to the trade of the country; and their successors have continued to follow in this direction. Hence it is that the operations for the manufacture of seal oil to-day are so very different from that which was a half century ago, that to look at the two processes, and to compare them one with the other, is to see that the change has been nothing more, nor less than a revolution.

and it was no surprise when, in summing up, he gave his verdict in favor of the ladies. The evening was one well spent; it was entertaining and educative, and it would be well if other such debates could be arranged.

A Sensation on Water St.

MAN WANTED TO KNOW IF HE WAS TOO LATE!
This morning a sensation was caused on Water Street, a prominent society man was seen to slip and fall on the pavement. He was picked up and brought into a drugstore where he was restored to consciousness. His first words were, "Am I too late?" People wondered what he meant by it, but it was afterwards learned that he was referring to the big card tournament that is being held in the St. Vincent de Paul's Hall on St. Patrick's afternoon and night. Tickets are only 50 cents, and the prizes are big—mar16.11

"The Irish Guard."

(P. J. KINSELLA.)

The Kingdom's massive gate was closed and fast. Sealed by its golden lock and fastenings done. St. Peter sighed relief, "Thank Heaven at last The rush is o'er, and now to take a run" For the mind grows weary with such constant worry. But yet, if some one came and he not present Reports might reach inside and in a hurry. And that, to say the least,—would be unpleasant.

Even now a stranger cometh up the way— The Saint remarking how he walked with leisure. He hummed a cheerful tune too, one of the day. A Levite, the Saint judged with displeasure. St. Peter hailed him loudly from the gate—"Get on a move young man, 'tis getting late."

"Now, Sir, you've come—your business—let's hear, Be brief—I'm off to get a little air."

"I want to know, Sir, if St. Patrick's in," the stranger said. "You see, I'm up from Dublin—He'll know me right enough. Just mention Tim."

And at that I'll need no further trouble!"

And at this crude conceit the fellow smiled— St. Peter felt quite vexed, and told him flat That if he'd keep from mischief—get from that!

"Or, hold," the Saint commanded, "Let's agree, I'll do this thing you ask, if you for me Will guard this gate an hour, and for none Dare open yonder lock—not 'e'en to see You see what lies beyond,—My son Be very careful, or I may repent. Such favor to an Irishman had lent." He passed the key, and spoke a few words more, And left the Irishman on Heaven's Door.

A short time passed—Tim felt elate, "This grand, he thought this job upon the gate."

'Tis FOINE, and bet yer socks— Superior to his one-breaking rocks, So well might Peter happy in perfection Look like a "well-placed" member after election, And so, the job was fine, but why not open And take one peep inside the golden portal?

Temptation's thought, TWAS DONE, the gate swung wide, Tim's courage waned—but yet he looked inside To behold that glorious vision grand And soul delighted by seraphic band, Saw there old friends, who'd ever think to see, McCann and Burke, and Ballahan McShea, And forlorn in a corner near the throne, "And playin', (sure as murder) "Gary Owen."

Well, well, 'twas just a glance—the vision's o'er— Remembered Tim, his job upon the door.

Remembered, now too late, the promise broken, Which he had made St. Peter—"not to open."

The Kingdom's massive gate lay open wide. Reproachful mark to mortal's promise given, Tim sought to close that door, again he tried— Not hings would turn—nor bolt 'twas surely Heaven, Must punish thus, and now 'twas plain to Tim He'd have to summon friendly aid within, With this in view, once more he peeped in there— Ah, now, he had it, now he felt quite sure— And spied ST. PATRICK sitting in his chair, St. Patrick then, would help him close that door.

There, was his faith, Tradition's oft told story, Even angels dare not stop him from his own Beloved Patrick great as God's own glory. His Ahn, Vick Machree, upon his throne, Who now will stop that Faith's restoring way As onward, Tim with steps determined take Scattering all who would prevent his way Frightening the blessed, and making angels quake, Contented, happy, saved—His goal to win. He loved his dear Saint so, and soul quite sure He whispered thus—"St. Patrick, Sir, I'm Tim For His sake, Sir, come and close the gate."

They closed the door secure, St. Patrick knew Just now that gate was worked, and then he said, "Tim, Tim, you disobeyed, now that is hard— He'll never trust an Irish hand to guard."

Tim winked—and such a wink, and then with glee Heplied "That's why You haven't got the key."

St. John's, March 16, 1923.

Why Not Melt Them?

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—In reading a late issue of the Montreal Daily Star, I noticed an item telling of the death of a young woman caused by an icicle falling on her head as she was passing a building on her way to school. It occurred to me that considering the great amount of icicles hanging out of our buildings particularly at this season of the year and the great menace they are to pedestrians that some action should be taken by the authorities to have these dangerous bumps of ice removed so as to prevent the likelihood of similar occurrences here in St. John's. Considering the great interest Inspector General Hutchings takes in the protection of life and safety of the public, I would suggest to him that at the railway cost was "that the railway next to us two million dollars to operate to make it fit for human beings to travel over." This money was the money of the taxpayers, but Squires took office on a promise to make Reids use their own money to carry out their contract and operate the railroad as they were bound to. Squires did not tell why he failed to

Squires Is Squealing.

HE SEES HIS FINISH.

Wednesday night's Advocate had a manufactured report of a speech said to have been made the previous night in the Squires-Coaker committee rooms in the West End by the Premier in regard to the Humber Deal and the question of taxation. This speech represented Squires in a new light, squealing because he is getting hurt. He knows that the people are now beginning to see through him and his tricks, and that in a few weeks he will be stung from the position he occupies by the wrath of an outraged electorate. Squires is reported to have said that "the financial genius who succeeded (preceded?) him and his administration spent as they went. They undertook many admirable works, for instance the Sanatorium and the extension of the Lunatic, and the Government had now to find money to pay for these improvements."

WASTED CASH'S SURPLUS.

The "financial genius" Sir Michael Cashin and others, were so well able to handle the country's affairs that they had a surplus every year that they were in office, and left Three and a Half Million Dollars in cash when they went out—plenty of money to carry on these institutions, if Squires and Coaker had not wasted it. Moreover, while Squires and Coaker shut down a wing in the Sanatorium on the ground that they had no money to keep it up, though they were able to spend $50,000 a year on the useless Education and Shipping Departments to buy the political allegiance of Messrs. Barnes and Cave. Squires then went on to say that $700,000 had to be found annually to pay pensions to the dependents of boys who fought and suffered in the country's cause." The Morris, Lloyd and Cashin Governments had to pay that money every year, too, and they found it out of current revenues, and yet kept the country prosperous, while Squires and Coaker with their crack-brained Fish Regulations and other schemes squandered more than that every year and had nothing whatever in return.

TAXPAYERS' MONEY FOR RAILWAY.

His next statement was "that the railway cost us two million dollars to operate to make it fit for human beings to travel over." This money was the money of the taxpayers, but Squires took office on a promise to make Reids use their own money to carry out their contract and operate the railroad as they were bound to. Squires did not tell why he failed to

Why Not Melt Them?

This season of the year when the Horse Police are doing nothing, that they be employed for this service and in this way our "Mounted Men" will demonstrate that they are not entirely in existence for ornamental purposes, but can be used effectively also in the protection of life and property. It would not cost much to have this service effective, and I would suggest that a few Polo or Hockey sticks be procured and with the horse men sitting high in their saddles and reaching out at arm's length, would experience very little trouble, I feel, in removing the most stubborn icicle from any building in the city.

Yours truly,
SAFETY.

When Burglars Break in.

Sir Squires in anger strode right through His office suite. Full well he knew That though he'd had a burglary It had not proved the stunt that he Expected to befall. And thus he strode with lowering look And not for millions would he brook To hear his minions call.

Even on him did his servants fawn From evening hour to break of dawn But sympathized in vain. Away from me, ye henchmen three I do not seek your sympathy You all give me a pain.

Where are my documents and deeds And all the papers for my needs When Humber Deal is told. Think ye I do not know how plain This outrage has been staged in vain To break my strangle hold On all the lasses I have here And thousands waiting everywhere Whom my great efforts sold.

To gain a place among the crowd And hear their plaudits ringing loud Acclaiming me the bold.

Detectives come, your searches make, And if you find this is no fake Go to the limit fair. For I perceive some finger prints Are very plain upon the chintz That covers my armchair. So trace them up, and if you can Get right alongside that bold burglar Who made an ingress here. What though he may be faithful friend It is high time to make an end Of such professions fair.

And Herlock Sholmes he got to work His job was not an one to shirk Even though the fest was but a quick. But 'twas they searched office and desk and bureau Not a single document was there to show And the "vocs in disgust" said "it is quite plain. That our erudite Premier has us again."

Obituary.

MRS. S. G. D. GUSHEE.
Yesterday at 4 p.m. after a brief illness, Susie, beloved wife of our respected fellow citizen, Mr. George W. Gushee answered the summons of the Great Reaper and passed "to that bourne from which no traveller returns." The deceased lady, who was a member of Gower Street Methodist Church, was a daughter of the late Thomas Cramm, of Harbor Grace. Of a naturally benevolent nature, her greatest joy in life was in the unostentatious performance of acts of charity, thereby showing her appreciation of the teachers of the Great Master, who said "freely ye have received; freely give." Let to mourn, besides her husband, are her daughter, Mrs. P. H. Cowan, and brother, Mr. Raymond Cramm, of Messrs. Ayre & Sons, Ltd. The Telegram extends its sincere sympathy to the bereaved family.

Prize Day.

ST. BONAVENTURE COLLEGE HAS BRILLIANT YEAR.

Prize Day at St. Bonaventure's! An event indeed whose approach has brought with it the young and untold delight for the young and those who have passed through the College portals on to the sterner stage of life, evoking memories, buried many years deep perhaps, of past prize days when with beating pulses and flushed cheeks they gazed upon "the swelling act" that was but the prelude, to the event of the day—the prize giving. To judge from the crowded hall and the enthusiasm that prevailed, Prize Day has not lost the spirit of its former years, though confined yesterday within the limits of the Aula Maxima, and though the accommodation was taxed almost beyond its utmost, the event went off with its wonted swing, and when the function came to a close, one could honestly say that a year at St. Bonaventure's minus the Prize Day would be a sorry and an incomplete year, indeed.

The play staged by the students, "The King's Secret," was a splendid success, reflecting great credit upon the performers, and upon Brother Fennessey, who was responsible for the excellence of the elocution and finished acting that marked the production of this well-known play.

The intervals between the acts were admirably filled in by the College orchestra—a very talented group of College boys, assisted by two old boys, Mr. Thomas Fennessey and Mr. Joseph Skinner. The conductor, Mr. John Phelan, of the College staff, deserves every possible praise for the degree of excellence attained, and one could wish that further opportunities would turn up to admit of one's hearing music of so high class a character.

At the conclusion of the piece, His Excellency the Governor, accompanied by Lady Allardice and Major Wilberforce-Bell, his Grace the Archbishop, Rt. Rev. Mr. McDermott and Dr. V. F. Burke, having taken their places on the stage, the President of St. Bonaventure's, Rev. Bro. J. E. Ryan, read the annual report, a full account of which is published elsewhere. His Grace, who was accorded a very hearty reception, complimented the actors upon their performance, he welcomed the addition of the new rink to the College buildings, a step which filled a long existing need; finally, having praised the work of the Brothers and the training imparted to the boys, he particularly emphasized the necessity for the daily inculcation of religious and moral principles if proper citizenship is to exist in our midst; that such principles must be the foundation of every system of education no matter what the denomination of the school. His Excellency the Governor, pleading the length of the function and the prize-giving yet to be performed, was brief, but made it quite plain that he was thoroughly in sympathy with the views of his Grace upon the necessity of imparting to the school-room principles that teach us to live and teach us to die. Speaking as a man of very varied experience, he unhesitatingly expressed his belief that all idleness and leads to chaos when religious teaching is denied its rightful place in the school curriculum.

Dr. V. F. Burke, referring to the President's report, reiterated the point therein made that the building up of character and spirit, was the aim of the Brothers' system; the class room grind was a fine thing and so were athletics but the great objective was to train youth to be true itself to the high ideals set before it within the College walls.

The prizes having been distributed by his Grace the Archbishop, the proceedings came to a conclusion with the playing of God Save the King by the orchestra.

Mr. J. Maher, who won the old boys scholarship, felt very grateful to the Association for donating the prize.

Among those present were Rev. Fr. Pippy, Rev. Dr. Greene, Rev. Dr. Carter, Rev. Frs. Flynn and Kennedy, Rev. Brother Ahearn, Mt. St. Francis, Rev. Bros. Brennan, Walsh and Hannon, Mount Cashel, Dr. W. W. Blackall, Mr. W. Wilson, Registrar C.H.E., His Worship Major Cook, Judge Morris, W. J. Higgins, K.C. J. G. Higgins, B.L.

The orchestra consisted of John Phelan, Joe Coleman, 1st violin; M. O'Neill, A. Larkin, 2nd violin; Mr. Thomas Fennessey, clarinet; Mr. Joseph Skinner, cornet; C. Eagan, piano; W. Flinn, effects.

THE PRESIDENT'S REPORT.

On behalf of Brothers and boys of St. Bonaventure's I want to welcome their Excellencies Sir William and Lady Allardice, to our Distribution of Prizes, and to assure them that the occasion is highly honoured by their presence. Already they have taken part in a function of great moment to the College—namely the opening of the St. Bon's Rink and gymnasium. The speech made by his Excellency on the occasion will be long remembered by even the smallest boys present. These to the evening of their lives will tell of the Governor and his good lady, who excelled all their predecessors in the encouragement of many games.

We also welcome our most distinguished past pupil—his Grace the Archbishop, who to the College has been as the very apple of its eye, and of whom his Alma Mater is very proud. It was a matter of regret that illness prevented his sharing in the big college event of a few weeks ago for I am sure it would give him great joy to be present at the opening of a building, which will be of incalculable benefit to the thousands of boys who will find recreation and development within its walls.

This afternoon it gives me very sincere pleasure to be able to report progress and advancement in all the phases of St. Bonaventure's activities. In every educational establishment no matter what system is followed or methods adopted it is admitted that the literary, scientific, mathematical and physical side of the boys' upbringing must receive that attention in proportion to their importance. A strong healthy frame is one of the greatest assets to every young man starting out to fight life's battles. When the recruit joins the army he is obliged to perform various trying exercises which give him that almost superhuman endurance necessary to go through the experience of long and arduous campaigns. In like manner the ideal school will see that its pupils shall receive that bodily training which will make them almost immune from the ills to which the flesh is heir.

The literary, scientific and mathematical side of the boy's make-up must be done, and done thoroughly for with all the other qualifications equal it is mental culture which humanly speaking will place a young man below, side by side or on the plane above his fellows. Many of the schools throughout the world today are satisfied with the possession of those four main acquisitions, but there are other qualifications which do not appear on results of Exams nor on the records of football, hockey games and sports, but yet should be valued infinitely above all others. A man's mind may have all the keenness and elasticity of the well-tempered steel; his muscles may be developed to the extreme limit and yet he may have very little of manhood about him, for it is nobility of character and goodness of heart alone that are really worth while—Our boys know full well that these are the things that take premier place at St. Bonaventure's, and they also know that every opportunity to foster these qualities is availed of.

We would aim to have as motto for St. Bon's the triple accomplishments of Virtue, Scholarship and Strength, with Virtue for the top leaf of the Shamrock.

Just here I would thank His Grace, Rt. Rev. Monsignor and Priests who give our pupils every spiritual help which Mother Church places at their disposal for dispensation. Nor must I forget to say how grateful the boys feel to Dr. Greene for the very interesting Retreat he gave them. Judging by the attention and earnestness of his youthful audience the Preacher's eloquent discourses fell like good seed on rich soil bringing forth abundant harvest.

Last year when speaking of the great number of vocations to the Priesthood I said that "Newfoundland would soon be able to take her place by the side of those missionary countries in the evangelization of Pagan Nations." I am glad to find that we did not have long to wait for the realization of our anticipations as already our very dear and esteemed Father Willie McGrath has become the pioneer in vouchsafing for the Chinese Mission. He has the good wishes of all at St. Bon's, and I am sure that many of our fine boys will like him to take up the "Flery Cross" to bear it, not as a symbol of war but as an illuminating emblem of peace to give light to those who are still groping in the darkness of Paganism.

At the C.H.E. Exams of last year the College came up to our expectations. In the Senior Associate Grade, which is first year University work, ten passed in the Dominion, four of the ten being from St. Bon's. Of the four honour candidates in this grade we have half, and Master James Power went within ten marks of the Jubilee Scholarship. We were very well pleased with our Junior A.A. class as Master Patrick Shea found himself leading all the candidates in this grade. Eight others passed the exam which is equivalent to Matriculation in Dalhousie or McGill.

Our Intermediate boys were in line with those above them, they have to their credit 43 passes, 5 in the honours division and 69 distinctions. The Preliminary boys did equally well by having 35 passes with five in the Honours Division and forty-two distinctions.

From time to time we hear of the so-called chaotic condition of education in Newfoundland and yet when our boys go to Universities abroad they find most of the other fellows handicapped by not being educated here. For the amount of expenditure on the education of boys and girls of this island I do not know of any other country that gets as good value for its money.

At our last Distribution of Prizes, little thinking of the magnitude of the work and the difficulties to be surmounted in its erection I casually observed that in the following year a rink may possibly materialize. This afternoon it gives me great pleasure indeed to tell you officially that the thought has become fact, and I am happy to say it is erected for very much less than half of its estimated value. You will be pleased to know that $3,000 of the debt is paid already. When speaking of its solidity the most competent engineering authority in the Dominion says of it: "It is there for ever." In this fine building we have a safe place of recreation and training not second to any of its kind in Canada. Each year when it ceases to be useful as a rink it will be converted into a gymnasium for which in its construction we have made provision. Its popularity has already been well established judging by the many applications for it from the Banks and Mercantile Firms who are clamorous for it irrespective of terms. The ladies who made Sports Day such a financial success are responsible for having the rink started so quickly. They, together with the many generous subscribers to the funds have our sincere thanks.

In the Inter-Collegiate games our boys have by their grit and perseverance, added two more championships to the long list already to their credit. For the tenth consecutive year they have captured the Football Cup, and eight times without a break this team brought the Hockey Trophy to the College. Those feats are all the more honourable as year after year our players meet "foemen worthy of their steel"—I heartily congratulate the other colleges on the fact that the contests tend to establish a stronger esprit de corps among the three Institutes.

The preparatory division of the College gives much hope for the future as here we have a phalanx of boys bearing the impress of great promise. Owing to the congestion of this department we were obliged during this year to open a new room which gives us much better classification.

Though we were obliged to refuse admission to many applicants during the year yet our numbers are receding.

I should like to thank the following who year after year manifest their deep interest in the welfare of the College by the donation of beautiful gold medals—His Grace, Monsignor McDermott, Reverend Fathers Pippy, McCarthy, Enright, Dinan, Murphy, Flynn and McGrath; Rev. Brother Ahearn, Messrs. George Kearney, John Barron, and the Old Boys.

To the lucky winners the value of those gold medals will be greatly enhanced by the fact that they come from great friends of St. Bon's. Here I have to announce that our very good friend Fr. Flynn, who is unceasing in his kindness to his Alma Mater has offered a $25.00 Scholarship to be competed for by the Junior A.A. of this year. For this as well as for other innumerable kind acts during the year he has the gratitude of one and all in the College.

We are equally grateful to Father O'Brien of Witless Bay who donated a $10.00 gold piece to be given on a vote to the best boarder at St. Bon's—Master George Power of Grand Falls headed the list with Master Joseph Peddie of Spaniard's Bay a good second.

The entertainment has been long and the Distribution will take time hence I shall not further delay you except to say to the parents of the boys that we appreciate to the full your kind co-operation with us in all our efforts, and to thank our pupils, Day-students and Boarders, for making our task exceedingly light, and for the pleasure they give us by their most exemplary conduct.

INNER TOMB OF EGYPTIAN KING

Gives Up Its Secrets--Seals Set on Granite Door 3,000 Years Ago. What Will Be Found?

STORY OF DISCOVERY.

It is considered to be the greatest discovery in the annals of Egyptology was made last autumn in the valley of the tombs of the kings of Egypt. Lord Carnarvon and Mr. Carter, after a long and costly search, finally discovered a tomb which had been abandoned, was very dimly lit and the tomb lies directly beneath the well known tomb of Ramesses IX. It had been explored long ago. It was only by deduction that its location was ascertained.

The valley of the tombs of the kings is a dreary plain in the hands of the Nile. It was selected by the monarchs of the earlier dynasties, because the practice of building pyramids introduced with the idea of obnoxious secure resting places for the dead.

Their hopes were in vain. The location of the buried treasures attracted hordes of robbers, who soon exacted the contents of the royal treasures. In many cases the guards were in league with the thieves. One after the other, the tombs were broken into and plundered. The despoliation has been terrific and the loss to archaeology incalculable. However, at least two tombs were known, from ancient inscriptions, to have been covered by sand and hidden from the prying marauders. One was that of Tut-Ankh-Amen and the other that of Thothmes II, one of his immediate predecessors. It is the first mention of these which has just come to light.

HOW TO FIND IT.

For many years Egyptologists have felt that there must be a very considerable body of evidence lying buried in the famous valley. The problem was how to find it.

The valley was a desolate wilderness of drifting sand and sun-baked rocks. Here and there were the mouths of rock-hewn tombs, which had been explored long since. But it was considered almost certain that there were others buried beneath the surface.

The ancient explorers—Wilkinson, Salt, Belzoni and many others—have contributed, each in his generation, to unearth the splendid tombs in this valley, and when the Service of Antiquities of Egypt opened the tombs of Amenhotep II and Thothmes III it was felt that the valley had been finally excavated.

This, however, was not the case, for Theodore Davis, whose many gifts to the department of Egyptology in the Boston Museum of Fine Arts have been inspected by so many visitors during the last few weeks, and his assistants succeeded in discovering several other royal tombs.

When Mr. Davis, according to his work on the tombs of Heremeh and Tut-Ankh-Amen, thought he had discovered the tomb of the latter, even experts thought the valley had yielded up the last of its secrets. But this was not so.

VAGUE TRADITIONS.

Mr. Carter has for many years had suspicions—in fact, more than suspicions—that other royal tombs remained unopened in the valley; and this opinion was shared by aged natives on the west bank of the Nile, who had very good reasons for holding it. A vague tradition had been handed down from father to son in these tribes, who were hereditary tomb robbers, but the exact place had been long forgotten.

It is now many years since Lord Carnarvon began to devote his time and attention and a considerable sum of money annually to the excavation of ancient sites in Egypt. He has succeeded in clearing up a considerable number of smaller archaeological points and the antiquities which he has brought to light have greatly increased our knowledge of Egyptian decorative art and literature. He has unearthed temples and tombs.

For years he has been steadily digging out the ancient portions of the Theban necropolis, where queens and princes and princesses of the second Theban empire were buried. He also discovered the tomb which had been prepared for Queen Hatsheput, with its marvelous sarcophagus of yellow crystalline limestone.

On the top of all these successes now comes the perhaps crowning discovery of the tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen and the masses of funerary furniture which it contains.

HIS REIGN SHORT.

Our knowledge of the life and deeds of this king is small. His reign cannot have lasted more than six years; but he is extremely important as showing that while he was on the throne the famous heresy of the disc or sun worshippers came to an end.

He married a daughter of Amenhotep IV, now better known as Akhenaten or Ikhnaten. This king made himself notorious by reviving the old cult of the worship of the disc of the sun. This cult conflicted very strongly with that of Amen-Ra, king of the gods at Thebes, and the opposition to this heresy was extreme.

Eventually the king had to retire to a site to the north of Assiut, which is now commonly known as Tell-el-Amarnah. Here he played the high priest of Aten, or the disc, and offered

Home-made, but Has No Equal for Coughs

Makes a family supply of really dependable cough medicine. Prepared, and saved about 2¢.

If you have a severe cough of chest cold accompanied with soreness, throat tickle, hoarseness, or difficulty breathing, or if your child wakes up during the night with croup and you want quick help, try this reliable old home-made cough remedy. Any drugstore can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey or corn syrup. Instead of sugar syrup, if desired. This recipe makes 16 ounces of really remarkable cough remedy. It tastes good, and in spite of its low cost, it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief. You can feel this takes hold of a cough in a way that means business. It loosens and raises the phlegm, stops throat tickle and soothes and heals the irritated membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes with such promptness, ease and certainty that it is really astonishing.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is probably the best known means of overcoming severe coughs, throat and chest colds. There are many worthless imitations of this mixture. To avoid disappointment, with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

up bloodless sacrifices and burnt incense, and promulgated views about the existence of Aten, which was practically monotheistic.

The whole of the powerful priesthood of Amen-Ra were his foes and as he was virtually shut off from the government of the country in his isolated city, the foreign possessions of Egypt in Syria and elsewhere were lost.

There is scarcely a more pathetic figure in ancient history than the obscure and powerless Egyptian possessions in Syria and Palestine appealing for help to this religious fanatic, who, through his unpractical ideas of government, lost his throne, but amused himself by burning incense and singing hymns to a god whom the rest of the country refused to worship, and with the care of his large family of daughters.

THROWS OFF CUL.

Tut-Ankh-Amen succeeded him to the throne of Egypt through his marriage with the daughter of Amenhotep IV, but very soon after he began to reign he saw that the cult of Aten was doomed. He promptly eliminated the name of Aten from his own title and that of his wife, and moved his capital back to Thebes.

There he proceeded at once to undo the evil which his father-in-law had perpetrated on the city. In a very short time the city of Akhenaten was deserted and fell into ruin and the old worship of Amen was set on a firmer basis than ever before, if possible, by Tut-Ankh-Amen.

Lord Carnarvon's discoveries will no doubt throw a great light upon the reign of Tut-Ankh-Amen and on the continuation of the artistic development. It is clear, from the large amount of funerary furniture that has been found that the old cult was observed in great detail, but there are many other objects mentioned which await further examination.

The two great statues are undoubtedly figures made for the King, or "double," of the deceased monarch, in which it was supposed to dwell after leaving this world. Having two, it might have lived in first one and then the other, to vary the monotony of residence in one place for 3000 years.

HUMAN TOUCH.

A curiously human touch occurs in the discovery of utensils filled with food for the refreshment of the dead king during his journey to the underworld. He was not alone in this matter, for the British Museum possesses the black wooden box containing the mummified pigeons and other birds provided for the lunch of Thothmes III in the tomb.

It is disappointing, of course, that the thieves in ancient days succeeded in carrying off much of the jewelry that was undoubtedly part of the king. But, after all, there is a great deal of jewelry in the museums at Cairo and elsewhere, and many students will rejoice more over the discovery of these funerary appliances than they would over ornaments of gold or precious stones.

Curiosity was whetted over the statement in the original report of the discovery of a box of papyrus, apparently manuscripts, which might be unrolled and deciphered. Unfortunately, however, a closer examination shows that the supposed papyrus rolls are, in reality, rolls of cloth.

The mouth of the tomb lies almost in the centre of the valley and the passages and chambers composing it are cut, as they were, obliquely into one of the low hills rising from the narrow floor of the valley to the enclosing limestone cliffs on the north side. The low tomb of Ramesses IX.

HOW TOMB IS ENTERED.

On entering the tomb, one descends first a flight of 16 steps, averaging 8¼ inches high. The angle of descent is nearly 45 degrees and the width of the stair 8¼ feet.

Beyond a wide doorway, formerly blocked up, the passage 2 feet long and 8¼ feet high, and of the same width as the stair. Then, through another doorway similar to the first, lies the first chamber, 12 by 26 feet, and 8¼ feet high. It was this chamber that the explorers first entered and found so packed with articles and material, even to the very door, that one Egyptianologist was moved to exclaim: "We never knew the ancient Egyptians before!"

This remarkable discovery, the most sensational of the century, is the reward of patience, perseverance and persistency. For more than 16 years Lord Carnarvon, with the assistance of Howard Carter, has been carrying out excavations on that part of the site of ancient Thebes situated on the west bank of the Nile, at Luxor.

Seven years ago, work was started in the Valley of the Tombs of the Kings. For a long time the excavators had little success. The work was exceedingly costly and Lord Carnarvon is reported, on several occasions, to have contemplated abandoning it.

But Mr. Carter was possessed of some sixth sense that insisted that somewhere, in that mound of rubbish, was the long-lost tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen. He insisted and entreated to be allowed to continue.

The search was prosecuted systematically and, at last, the dogged perseverance of Mr. Carter, his thoroughness and his faith were rewarded by the discovery which has set the scientific world in a flame.

St. Patrick's Day and Royalty.

On Saturday, March 17, 1900, being the Festival of St. Patrick, apostle and reputed patron-saint of Ireland, and noble descent, and born in Scotland; but having engaged in an inland into England of Scots and Picts—probably that of A.D. 411—he was captured and sold as a slave into Ireland. Pitying his religious condition, he afterwards returned, at his own desire, to convert its inhabitants to Christianity. It is said that the shamrock, or trifolium—each of which names signified "three-leaved"—was selected by him as a symbol of the Trinity, or God invisible in himself, or manifested, as in Christ, or operating in and around man, though unseen as the Spirit, being nevertheless one and the same. "The wearing of the green," as it is called, by soldiers had been objected to by military authorities as interfering with the uniformity of their official costume, and its prohibition had often roused irritation. But in 1900, when Queen Victoria was intending to visit her son, the Duke of Connaught, then the Commander-in-Chief of her army in Ireland, she shortly before this Saint's day, issued an order that Irish soldiers might in turn wear a sprig of shamrock in their headbands on this their national festival. Needless to say, it was celebrated in London and throughout the Empire as never before, and the soldiers to the soldiers.

Queen was the next month received in Dublin with the warmest enthusiasm. On Monday, March 17, 1902, St. Patrick's Day was celebrated by a special parade of the Irish Guards, in which each man was presented with a bunch of shamrock that had been provided by Queen Alexandra, who continues each year to provide the soldiers to the soldiers.

A great many black hats are worn at Palm Beach, in both velvet and felt. The knitted purple hatching suit and beach cape is a popular outfit at Palm Beach. The use of pleating is noticed in afternoon frocks, many of which are cut circular. Rows of roses and pleated insets characterize a Vionnet model made of black georgette. The short bathing suit is scalloped at the edge and shows the bloomers beneath.

St. Patrick and The Serpent.

Some Legends and Traditions.

There is nothing more interesting and amusing than some of the legends and traditions of Old Ireland. In fact the Irish race live in an atmosphere of legendary lore, and, of course, in almost every case the Titular Saint, the illustrious St. Patrick, takes the most prominent part. I should say that many of the younger readers of the Evening Telegram, of the Irish race, have never heard how St. Patrick banished all the toads, frogs, serpents and other "varmint" from the shores of the Emerald Isle—the land of their forefathers, and tomorrow being the festival of the Patron Saint of Ireland, I think the time opportune to tell them how the great Saint managed it. The story, as told, is full of Irish wit and humour, and the particulars as related in the legend below were immortalized in verse by the great Father Prout (Rev. Father Mahoney), but I can only think of a few lines of it at present. Father Prout was a versatile writer, and a profound Latin scholar. He died in Paris about the fifties of the past century. He took great delight in placing such old familiar songs as "Garryowen," "Charming Judy Callaghan," etc., before the world in Latin, and he also wrote the amusing legend of St. Patrick and the Serpent in verse. Here are a few lines of his poetical effusion:

In the days of good St. Patrick
 When our country yet was free;
 When her name was loved and honored
 O'er every land and sea—
 The snakes and toads in thousands
 Infested all our bogs,
 And no respite could be gotten
 From the croaking of the frogs.

Saint Patrick saw the nuisance,
 And by the Cross he swore
 To banish all the "varmint"
 From our Ireland's verdant shore—
 Then off he went to Dublin,
 And there he got a box
 Secured with twenty iron bars
 And twenty big padlocks.

I forgot the remainder except how
 The Saint induced the "serpint"
 To come out.

"He stood before the cavern,
 And loudly he did shout,
 'Come out ye dirty blackguard,
 If ye're not afraid—come out.'"

THE ANCIENT LEGEND.

But to come to the legend as told in Old Ireland in days gone by, and, I presume, is still related to the youngsters by their sires and grandires on St. Patrick's Eve. When the visitor asked the old Irish peasant: "By the bye, sir, I believe there is a story, something about a great serpent, I think—do you know anything of it?" "The serpent, is it," said Patrick in reply. "Sure everybody has heard tell of the blessed Saint Patrick, and how he drove the serpents and all manner of venomous things out of Ireland. How he bothered all the varmint, entirely. But for all that, there was one old serpent, left, who was too cunning to be talked out of the country, and made to drown himself. St. Patrick didn't well know how to manage this fellow, who was doing great havoc, till at long last he bothered himself, and got a strong iron chest made, with nine boultis upon it. So, one fine morning, he takes a walk to where the serpent used to keep; and the serpent, who didn't like the saint in the least, and small blame to him for that, began to hiss and show his teeth, at him like anything. "Oh," says St. Patrick, says he, "where's the use of making such a piece of work about a gentleman like myself coming to see you. 'Tis a nice house I have got made for you, agin the winter; for I'm going to civilize the whole country, man and baste," says he, "and you can come and look at it whenever you please, and I myself will be glad to see you." The serpent hearing such smooth words, thought that though St. Patrick had driven all the serpents into the sea, he meant no harm to himself; so the serpent walks fair and aisy up to the man and the house he was speaking about. But when the serpent saw the nine great boultis upon the chest, he thought he was souled (betrayed), and was for making off with himself as fast as ever he could.

"'Tis a warm house, you see," says St. Patrick, "and 'tis a good friend I am to you."

"I thank you kindly St. Patrick for your civility," says the serpent, "but I think it's too small it is for me"—meaning it for an excuse, and away he was going.

CATERED TO THE SERPENT'S PRIDE.

"Too small," says St. Patrick, stop, if you please," says he, "you're out in that, my boy, nayhow—I am sure

Junior Hockey.

CARIBOUS DEFEATED.

An exciting and well contested game of hockey was played at 6:30 p.m. yesterday in the Prince's Rink, when the "Yellow Hammers" defeated the "Caribous" by 5 goals to 1. For the winners Bob Sellars, Bailey and Nicholle showed up well, the former two players each scoring two goals, whilst Kelloway was instrumental in scoring one. Kennedy, Marshall and Pearcey, played a good game for the losers. It is hoped that a return match will be played next week. The line-ups were as follows:—
YELLOW HAMMERS—Goal, W. Benson; defence, R. Sellars, T. O'Neil; forwards, Kelloway, B. Adey, G. Bailey; spare, R. Rochelle.
CARIBOUS—Goal, J. Daly; defence, H. Kennedy, W. Crane; forwards, C. Pearcey, Marshall, R. Chown; spares, Burnell, Luscombe.

The Menace of Coakerism.

ARTICLE X.

Reverting to his tactics of 1919, William F. Coaker is once more working overtime, in the hope that the fishermen of the North will accept his doctrines and persuasions, that fill the columns of the Evening Advocate daily.
 Mr. Coaker, however, is well aware of the attitude of the people of Trinity Bay towards John Stone, which is anything but favorable to Mr. Coaker, and, in the hope of having the other Northern Districts believe different, letters and telegrams are published in the Coaker office by the staff and others especially employed for this purpose. Messages really submitted were worded and sent under the direction of Mr. Coaker, consequently very little credence can be given the veracity of the statements and information contained in them. To-day, he is politically, the most distrusted man in public life of the Dominion. For the gain of personal ambition and greed, he was prepared to sacrifice his staunch supporters and associates. He did so, time and again, and would do so to-morrow if it suited him personally. There was a time, and not so long ago, when the Advocate and Mr. Coaker applauded Sir John Crossbie, Sir M. P. Cashin, and Mr. Bennett. This was the time he labored unceasingly to disparage and abuse Sir Richard Squires. The W. F. Coaker who betrayed Sir Robert Bond, Lord Morris, Hon. James Kent, Sir William Lloyd and Sir Michael Cashin, would, if the present Opposition so pleased, have him so, betray Sir Richard Squires. The Menace of Coakerism is to-day more apparent than ever, but polling day will witness the first successful effort to stamp it out of Newfoundland forever. The North is awake, and even one time ardent supporters of the F.P.U. no longer suck in his vapourings. They are alive to the questions which mean something for the betterment and general welfare of Newfoundland. The Menace of Coakerism will be crushed when the Squires-Coaker Government is defeated and defeated it will be before many months are past.
BENNETT & BETTER TIMES.
 The knitted dress of light tan or gray is seen worn with a hat of matching felt at luncheon or matinee. In many parts of the country the taffeta frock is worn for afternoon and the georgette gown for evening.

Dye Old Dress or Drapery in Diamond Dyes

Buy "Diamond Dyes" and follow the simple directions in every package. Don't wonder whether you can dye or that successfully, because perfect home dyeing is guaranteed with Diamond Dyes even if you have never dyed before. Worn, faded dresses, skirts, waists, coats, sweaters, stockings, draperies, hangings, everything, become like new again. Just tell your druggist whether the material you wish to dye is wool or silk; or whether it is linen, cotton, or mixed goods. Diamond Dyes never streak, spot, fade, or run.

Water Supply Short.

SERIOUS SITUATION IMPENDING. Farmers around St. John's are reporting that their water supply is running low, and great difficulty is experienced in getting enough to cover the needs of their cattle. The shortage is also felt by the Hydro Company, which supplies light and power to the city. Unless a thaw takes place shortly, a very grave situation will be the outcome, and it is possible that a repetition of two winters ago, when the light and power supply of the city was put out of commission, may again be experienced. A notice is now being given to subscribers that the Electric Plant will be shut down from 1 a.m. Saturday to 2 p.m. Saturday, and from 1 a.m. Sunday to 5 o'clock in the evening.

Padre Nangle en Route.

From mail advices received recently it has been ascertained that Lieut. Col. T. Nangle, (C.F.) proposes leaving England to-day on route to this city. It is presumed that the object of his visit is in connection with the duties of his office as D.G.R. & E. London, as well as matters in connection with the National War Memorial in which he is so interested. The many friends of the popular "Padre" will be delighted to see him once more.
