The twelve rounds of the fight are vividly protrayed, showing the knock downs of Ketchel in the second round and again in the sixth. The pictures continue to revolve round after round and every one is on tip-toe of excite-ment for the final inning. Ketchel has been trying to land his famous shift, a blow that Bog Fitzsimmons made famous. His opportunity comes in the tweitth round when he floors Johnson with a hard right to the side of the head. The wonderful negro puglilist goes quickly to the floor, rolls over in full view of the audience, rises slowly to his feet and waits the on-coming Ketchel with a volley of blows that drops him to the mat, where he is counted out. The force of Johnson's punch is deliverd with such impetus that he falls over the prostrate form of his adversary.

of his adversary. No more sensational finish has ever marked the close of a prize fight. The pictures will be shown all this week at the Star Theatre, Toronto.

LACK OF DISPLAY. The King left St. James' Palace on his return to Mariborough House at 5 o'clock, having been absent for the ceremony just one hour. The marked lack of display in the conduct of the new monarch was striking. A single carriage, occupied by the Sovereign, and attended by two royal equerries, was driven to and from St. James' Palace. There was no mili-tary escort and the only decoration which the Monarch wore was the Order of the further.

In fact, the lord mayor and the city aldermen furnished the most spectacular element of the ceremony. While his father was signing the procla-mation the young Prince of Wales stood on a temporary scaffolding behind the wall at Marlborough House and eagerly watched such of the proceedings as came into his view., Owing to the late hour at which the formalities were completed by the privy council and the impossibility of distributing the proclamation to the various centres in time to permit simultaneous proclaiming ceremonies, the

Dr. John Noble said to The Sundey World that he was emphatically op-posed to the present methods at the isolation hospital. Not only should there be separate buildings, each with its own staff, but there should also he a detention ward for doubtful cases. Detention wards would net be a new thing. They were already in operation in a number of hospitals elsewhere. Dr. Noble also said that the use of the same ambulance for scanlet fever and diptheria cases was attremely dangerous and the addition of a mea-sles wing and would make it worse. The same driver, he said, carried to the ambulance a child ill with scarlet fever, and half an hour afterwards one ill with diptheria. It was im-possible, in his opinion, for a driver to be properly disinfected in so short a time.

Had Three Diseases. A young man who had the good fortune to survive, entered the hos-pital with diphtheria and contracted scarlet fever and measles before he became convalescent. Speaking to The Sunday World this youth said that he had noticed a printed rule on the wall which provided for a visit by the medical health officer twice a week, but, tho in the hospital seve-ral weeks, he did not see that officer make his appearance there once. It is stated to be customary at the Isolation Hospital for a member of the staff to visit the different wards and the hospital office without disinfect-ing or changing the clothing, and that the furses from the two warde sleep over the scarlet fever ward.

There is no truer tribute to departed worth than the spontaneous, sincere and general grief. Over King Edward to-day an empire mourns-the world laments his loss. For he who has been a real peacemaker lays every nation under bonds of sympathy. It is not now as it was in days of yore. The achievements of science have anninilated distance and drawn peoples of varying race and tongue together. Nothing happens that does not instantaneously circle the globe. And when the man who has passed was a goodly king, wise in statesmanship, animated by high ideals, faithful in work, kindly and courtcous with a dignity that enriched the courtesy, even to those who knew but his name and his deeds, he seemed a friend as indeed Edward the Seventh was friend to all man-

A letter of historic interest with a remarkable career is in the possession of Alexander Nasmyth of 610 Collegestreet. It was written over half a century ago by the late Hon. Wm. Lyon MacKenzie to Mr. Nasmyth's father who was his intimate personal friend and devoted supporter. The letter was received at Goderich by the late Alex. Nasmyth who was a merchant there at the time. It was preserved by him and subsequently taken to Alpena, Mich., to which place he removed a few years later. His house at Alpena. was burned down and the W. L. Mac-Kenzie letter narrowly escaped the flames, by which it was scorched and shrivelled At the time it was written Mr. Mac-Kenzle's friends were raising a fund to purchase a house and homestead for him. As was shown in the article on historic tablets in the last issue of The Sunday Works in the last issue of The Sunday World the movement resulted in the house now known as 82 Bond-street being purchased for and presented to Mr. MacKenzie. The letter now in the possession of Alexander Nasmyth was written b his father, who was also named Alex ander, at Toronto, on May 4, 1857. The letter while dealing with other business matters says: "Losing all as 1 Areas matters says: "Losing all as 1 did—struggling along as I have done— I feel grateful to those who desire to aid the homestead. W. L. MacKenzie. Wy father was a red-hot MacKenzie man," said Mr. Nasmyth to The Sun-day World when exhibiting the foregoing letter, which he treasures as a heir loom. He died at my sister's at Prince Albert, who was on the royal Goderich, aged 87 years and 9 months, yacht.

A. M. Ross was colonel. He came to Canada from Heddingtonshire, Scotland, when 13 years of age." Further enquiries elicited that Mr. Nasmyth's grandfather, also named Alexander, was a man of patriotic pub lic spirit. He was in the militia which was called out when the Napoleoni invasion was threatened. He was converted by the preaching of a Methodist drum major and himself became a lo al preacher. When a settler in the backwoods of Oxford County he combined the preaching of the gospel m. Sundays with the drilling of the volunteer company in the sheds of a local distillery. His son, the friend of Wm. Lyon MacKenzie, and his grand-son of 610 College-street, therefore came from sturdy stock. The latter is one of the oldest inhabitants of that portion of the city. When he incated there thirty-five years ago he had to remove an old zig-zag farm fence to open up the street line. He is an athlete of prowess and has won five foot races on Labor days since passing his fiftieth birthday. He olds a card of membership in the carpenters union. His property on College-street has enhanced in value rom a few dollars to over a hundred dollars a foot.

Also do we claim that the cutters and finishers designing the suits we make in our own workrooms here, are artists in their particular lines, and the best that money can procure for us.

We have grown into an enormous business, but we have kept pace with the development, and to-day so large is the staff that every suit, of the thousands we make, has lavished upon it particular and individual attention.

Very true. Stevenson himself, like Caesar, received the death he wished for, and, whether in reason or in pas-sion, every soul among us would agree that death in the midst of life is the most desirable end. And yet—and yet— we hardly know how it is, but, as a matter of fact, we do not seek it, and when the thing comes our way, we pre-fer, if possible, to walk in the opposite direction. The Territorial may sing himself hoarse with his prayer to fall like a soldier, but when the bullets begin to wall around him, it is a thou-sand to one that he will duck his head. A man may be reasonably convinced that, since he must die some day, and his reprieve cannot be extended long, it is best to die in battle and shoot full-blooded into the spiritual land; nevertheless, if the shadow of a rock gives some shelter from the guns, he will crawl behind it. A few years ago there was a great Oxford philosopher who, after lecturing all morning on the beauty of being absorbed by death into the absolute and eternal, was granted the opportunity of being wrecked on a lake in the afternoon, but displayed no satisfaction at the immediate prospect of such absorption. Bloodthirsty Clinging to Life. The same way, despite our nural and reasonable desires for a death like Mr. Tomkinson's, we still continue to speak, not only of sleeping in our beds, but of dying in them, as one of the chief objects of a virtuous and happy existence. The longest and most de-votional part of the Anglican Common Prayer contains a special petition en-trading that we may be delivered from the sudden death which we have all agreed is so excellent a piece of fortune. That we are not set free from too much love of living is shown by what Matthew Arnold called a bloodthirsty clinging to life at a mo-ment of crisis. The present writer does not forget the green terror on the faces of all the men in a railway car-riage when he accidentally set fire to the train, nor would any of us find it really appetising to suspect even the quickest poison in the soup. Instead very true. Stevenson himself Caesar, received the death he for, and, whether in reason or in pas of leaping gallantly into death while the trumpets are still blowing, nearly every civilized man deliberately plots out his existence so as to die. the sick rooms of old age. Mind and Bodily Will. Are our praises of death in victory, then, all cant, and are all the eloquent rhapsodies of poets and essayists a sham? Montaigne seems to have thought so, for, writing of those who talk fine of dying bravely, he says: "It happeneth that most men set a stern countenance on the matter, look big and speak stouth, these here big, and speak stoutly, thereby to ac-quire reputation, which, if they chance to live, they hope to enjoy." to live, they hope to enjoy. The case of our eloquent rhapsod-ists is evidently more favorable still, since they have every chance of living for a time, and so of enjoying a repufor a time, and so of enjoying a repu-tation for bravery without much risk. But rather than accuse mankind of purposely dissembling terror in the hope of braggart fame, we would lay the charge upon a queer divergence be-tween the mind and the bodily will. No matter what the mind may say in commendation of swift and glorious death, the bodily will continues to maintain its life to the utmost, and is the last and savagest enemy that the mind can overcome. So it is that no one should reckon beforehand upons courageous behavior when the supreme courageous behavior when the suprem summons for courage comes, and only those are faultlessly brave who have never known peril. In reason everyone is convinced that all mankind is mortal, and we hear with vague sympathy of the hosts of dead whose skulls went of the hosts of dead whose skulls went to the pyramids of Tamerlane, or of the thousands that the sea engulfs and earthquakes shatter. But few realize that the life of each among those thousands was as dear to him as our life is, and, tho we congratu-late heroes upon the opportunity of their death, the moment when that opportunity would be most happy for ourselves never seems exactly to aropportunity would be most happy for ourselves never seems exactly to ar-rive. Hardly anyone seems to think he will die, or is persuaded that the limit of his nature has now come. But it is in realizing the incalculable crav-ing of this bodily will to survive that men who have the meselves known dan-ger will nay the greater means the sector of the sector sector. ger will pay the greater reverence to who, conscious of mortal fears and throbbing with the fulness of exaxioms that all mankind is agreed upistence, none the less in the calm ecstasy of their devotion commit themon. Death and Victory in Steeplechase Come Together to Jas. Tomkinson, M. P.

The Nation of London, Eng., publisheed on April 16 the following article on the death of James Tomkin-son, M.P., who was killed while riding his own horse in a steeplechase. A week ago he was riding May Dolly, a Cheshire six-year-oid, and one of his own breeding; for just as some people think that everyonee should go to his own parish church, it was a principle with Mr. James Tomkinson that a man should ride a horse from his own county. Straight, lithe and riddy, he trotted to the starting post, and the crowd cheered him as he went, for they liked to see a bit of pluck. He modestly enjoyed their ap- and died fighting at Eleusis when plause: "I think I never saw anybody so pleased," said Mr. Justice Grantham, who was judge in the racee. It was known that the old man had passed the limit of seventy, but only up the hill to worship, and, as tho years ago he won a steepleechase | in answer to her prayer for blessings on his own, and if ever a rider ful-filled Montaigne's ideal of a life spent in the saddle, it was he. So he rode to the starting post, happy in him-self and modestly confident-the very model of what a well-to-do English countryman should wish to be-a Rugby and Balliol man, abovee susion for honesty, a busy man of affairs, a consummate horseman, a bad speaker, and a true-hearted Liberal, holding an equally unblemished record is the natural marching song of our for courage in convictions and at Territorials.

drew nearer and nearer. He was lead-ing; once over that fence and victory was his—the latest victory, always worth all the rest. He felt the mov-worth all the rest. He felt the mov-inary pursuits, the buzzing of the par-inary pursuits, the fading of the caseheard the quick beating of the hoofs. Something happened; there was a swerve, a skieways jump, a vain effort at recovery, a crashing fall too quick for thought; and before the joy of victory had died, the darkness came.

Death in Victory.

Who would not choose to plunge out of life like that? A sudden end at the moment of victory has always been the commonplace of human desire. When the antique sage was for Crewe; for Tellus the Athenian had lived a full and well-contented life, had seen fine and gentlemanly sons and many grandchildren growing up around him, had shared the honor and prosperity of his country, victory was assured. Next in hap-piness to Tellus came the two Argive on them, died in the temple that night. It has always been so. The leap of Rome's greatest treasure int othe gulf earthquake was accounted an en viable opportunity. When they asked would choose he answered, "A sudden one," and he had his wish. "Oh, happy he whon, thou in battles findest." cried Faust to death in the midst of all his learning; and "Let me like a soldier fall"

But how finer to die like Romeo with a kiss, quick as the true apothe-cary's drugs; to sink like Shelley in the blue water, with mind still full of the Greek poet whom he had tucked against his heart; to pass hot with fever, like Byron, from the height of fame, while thunder presaged to the mountaineers the loss of their great champion in freedom's war!

Shortly before the gong sounded at p.m. in the T. Eaton store on Satrday, announcing that the first halfholiday in May was in effect, a pleasing event took place in the president's private office on the first floor. There J. C. Eaton was made the recipient of a handsome presentation from the thousands of employes benefited by the holiday. The presentaion took the form of a large autograph book, richly bound in crimson morocco leather, and contained the signature of every employe of the Toronto store to whom the hliday will apply. Accompanying the autograph album was an illuminated address, the border decorations showing the different outdoor pleasures that an afternoon holiday affords. The prosentation was made on behalf of the employes by Richard Phibbs.

ENTIRE FAMILIES DEAD

PALOS, Ala., May 7 .- Rescue parties in the ill-fated mine No. 3 of the Palos Coal & Coke Company are today gradually working their way to-ward the 2300 foot level, where it is believed the largest number of bodies will be found. Thirty-four bod-ies already have been found in the mine, where between 100 and 150 lost their lives in Wednesday's explosion. All the bodies are horribly mangled and can only be identified from brass checks which they carried in their pockets.

In several instances entire families were wiped out by the explosion. Af-ter vainly waiting for her son to be rescued, one woman became insane.

nded course in life and immersed lish occupations, managing his farm so that it paid him an income. and breeding such stock as all the other farmers in England came to the London shows to see. And he was a good Briton in his love of sport, and his subjects rejoiced with him when his horses won the coveted blue ribbons of three Derbys.

And then the hour came, such a little while ago as it seems, when he ascended the throne of his ancestors, and put the robes of the King over the heart of the man, and took the sceptre and ruled. We can say of him as the laureate so beautifully said of his father:

We know him now; all narrow jealousies Are silent and we see him as he moved, How modest, kindly, all-accomplished, wise, With what sublime repression of himself And in what limits, and how tenderly: Not swaying to this faction or to that; Not making his high place the lawless perch Of wing'd ambitions, nor a vantage-ground Of pleasure.

And now he is gathered to his fathers, and his son reigns in his stead. One could wish for nothing better than that the new king should follow in the footsteps of the old, and of his father before him, and studying that "Dedication" of the "Idylls" become laborious for his people and his poor.

King George has a tremendous responsibility from which the bravest of us might well shrink. But he is young. He has a life to give. Those of us who were born in the sixties along with him will sympathize with him in his trials and his difficulties. His accession marks, as it. were, the age of young men, for the great bulk of the population is under fifty years of age. King Edward was the man of peace, and he made peace in Europe and begot peace around the world.

King George has the greatest opportunity presented to him that our recorded history knows of. What will be do with it? Untold millions in his vast possessions are praying that truth and justice, religion and piety, may reign as he reigns, and as in his father's time before him; and that above all peace, the sovereign virtue of kings, may dwell with him while he wears the crown.

Keens's Hard Luck.

Keene's Hard Luck. NEW YORK, May 7.-The Herald to-day says: Hard luck has befallen the strong stable of James R. Keene. In-fluenza, brought on supposedly by the quick changes in the variable weather of the past few weeks has run thru about the entire lot of two-year-olds in the breeding farm, in raining, and the effect of the sudden stekness that has swept thru the young horses is likely to be a serious handicapi to the stable, as their training must, of course, be interfered with at a time that may keep them out of many valuable engagements soon to be met at Belmont Park. With the older horses, Mr. Keene's establishment was more fortunate, as the stekness has been confined so far to the sickness has been taken to remove

Tubes Necessary for Toronto

All cities of any size, whether in Europe or America, are turning to tubes as the best available means of meeting the public need of cheap and rapid transportation from centre to suburbs. Tubes have become this thru the development of electric traction and the consequent ease with which the confined atmosphere can be kept cool and pure. In the days when steam was the only source of locomotive energy underground railways were veritable infernos, yet even under the most unpleasant conditions systems like the Metropolitan of London were very extensively used. Now tube transportation has many advantages both direct and indirect. It conveys passengers with speed and in comfort-it relieves the surface lines in the districts where they are most liable to congestionit enables citizens of moderate means to live in pleasant locations and in this way aids in the elimination of slums and in the improvement of the public health.

Without the trouble caused by the present street railway franchise Toronto would before very long have had to construct a tube system. The necessity of providing transportation facilities to the recently annexed districts has only accelerated the provision of rapid underground lines. These could not but become necessary, now they are urgently wanted and if the opportunity is taken the city will materially benefit and will occupy a strong tactical position when the time comes to resume the street franchise. The more the situation is studied the more clearly is it seen that tubes are an integral part of any effective solution of the transportation problem. Toronto is already big enough for them; were construction work begun now, before they can be put in operation the population of the city and its environs will be well up to and even exceed the half million. Tubes will pay from the start. Far from being a burden they will be a source of profit. Futhermore, they will be of great increasing value, not only as passenger but as goods carriers.

Tubes also will enable the city to deal properly with the entrance of the radials and have the advantage of securing the citizens in their control of their territory. This of itself is no small gain. If the chance to maintain their rights intact is not taken now, there will certainly be other attempts on the part of outside systems to force an entrance, and the fact, if fact it be, that nothing has been done or is intended to be done, will prove a serious factor in the case they will set up. For Toronto has at its own request been given power to construct tubes and in this way to preserve its rights from aggression. Failure to protect itself and to remove all ground for complaint on the part of up-country passengers will inevitably end in independent authority being given the radial lines to make their own passage ways and thus complicate a position which to-day is in the hands of the citizens. Every consideration thus points to tube construction without delay and the city council will incur a grave responsibility if by neglect they leave the citadel open to invasion by street railway systems which once established will seriously compromise Toronto's liberties. Tubes in Toronto offer no great constructural difficulty and can be built now at a minimum of cost. There are none of the considerable physical obstacles which have been found in other cities and have necessitated the expenditure of vast sums to overcome. But this favorable condition will not continue indefinitely. If the opportunity is not embraced, each year that passes will render the undertaking more expensive in the long run and make the situation harder to relieve. Even were an initial loss in operation a reasonable assumption, tubes would still be a prudential move. But the probability is all the other way. Tubes will be a productive enterprize. They can be made to pay for themselves and when the other advantages that will be derived from them are taken into account, the argument in favor of immediate construction becomes irresistible. But the city must have the best possible advice from experts who know their business, who can size up the special circumstances and furnish a comprehensive plan both for the present necessity and for the time when the whole transportation system, both surface and underground. shall be owned, operated and controlled for the public benefit.

> (From a Staff Correspondent.) BERLIN, May 6 .- Since Wilhelm Voigt, ex-shoemaker and jailbird, raided the town hall of Koepenick, dressed as a captain in the Kaiser's army, no man has so greatly captured the imagination of Germany as the 70-year-old millionaire, novelist, missionary-and bandit, Dr. Karl May of Dresden.

Dr. Karl May lives in a pretty villa not far from the sluggish Elbe. The windows are smothered in roses in summer, and in winter, when the roseushes are bare, curious townspeople who pass by see a tall and venerable scholar poring over the proofs of some edifying romance for children, or some pious missionary tract destined to be translated into Mongol ideographs and used for converting the Heathen Chinee. Dr. May is a well-known resident of Dresden; he is a man of arge wealth, a millionaire in fact-in German marks, value 25 cents eachand his learning is reputed to be boundless, for the he disdained to ac-quire such vulgar tongues as English and French, he was reputed to speak Hungarian, Russian, Turkish, Finnish, Hindustani, Arabic and no less than seven other languages, all so remote that no resident of Dresden could put his knowledge to the test. Notorious Bandit. And now this millionaire, author, missionary, public-spirited Dresden citizen, whose name as romancer is cherished by Germany's youth, is proved to be none other than a notori-ous handit, thief and highwayman who terrorized the Erzgebirge Moun-tains thirty years ago, whose exploits were so tremendous that a whole bat-takin of soldlers was sent to suppress him. His joyless life has driven him to drink and smoke more than is good for him and his hand driven him to drink and smoke more than is good for him, and his hand often shakes as he digs ditches. He has not the strength to work as the others can, in fact, as Hamblin Smith has said, 'A can do more work in one hour than C in four?' "The first time that I ever say these men was one evening after a regatta. They had all been rowing in it, and it had transpired that A could row as much in one hour as B in two, or C in four. B and C had come in dead fagged and C was coughing badly. 'Never mind, old fellow,' I heard B say, 'I'll fix you up on a sofa and get you some hot tea.' Just then A Just then A came blustering in and shouted, I say, you fellows, Hamblin Smith has shown me three cisterns in his garden, and he says we can pump them until to-morrow night. Come on.

It seems impossible to kill the hy-dra-headed legend that Grieg borrow-ed his ravishing melodies from the treasures of Norwegian folksong. Victreasures of Norwegian folksong. Vic-tor Herbert, for instance, declares in The Sunday Magazine that "there would not be any Grieg, for instance, if it was not for the Scandinavian folksongs that he had to draw upon. The peasants of his country could sing many a little melody which found its way into his sonatas melodies its way into his sonatas, melodies which sprang from the hearts of their ancestors and have lived ever since." Mr. Herbert ought to know, says H. T. Finch in The New York Evening Post, that the only folk-tunes borrow ed by Grieg are those contained in several volumes specially marked as such. All the melodies in his sonotas, in his multitudinous plano pieces and songs, are his own, absolutely. To accuse him of borrowing them is as unjust, as libellous, as to accuse any honest man of stealing the food he lives on, or the clothes he wears. lives on, or the clothes he wears. There is no excuse for such assertions on the part of a musician of Victor Herbert's prominence. The facts are set forth in books accessible to all. Mr. Herbert is the man referred to in a footnote in "Grieg and his music," as having once asserted that Grieg had all his orchestration done for him. In truth, the great Norwegian was one of the most individual and delightful of all orchestrators. The next time Mr. Herbert goes to Leipzig, he should call at the store of Peters and ask to see the Grieg orchestral scores. Why professional musicians should be so eager to belittle one of the most inspired of all composers is a mystery. PARSIFAL AT $7.

Incidentally the reader is cautioned to make a practice of shutting the main gasoline valve after every run. Carbureter float valves are notoriously prone to leak. While the engine ly prone to leak. While the engine runs, the gasoline consumption takes care of the leakage, but over night the leakage may not only flood the carbureter so as to render starting difficult, but waste gasoline seriously as well. If the engine balks owing to flooding, shut the main gasoline valve and turn the crank vigorously several turns to pump out the saturated air; when the engine starts, turn on the gasoline. In extreme cases it may be well to open the float chamber drip cock and draw off some gasoline to lower the level. This, however, is seldom necessary except with puddle type carbureters, of which mention will be made in the next article. Now let us consider carbureter derangements and their symptoms. Of these the following are most common: Clogged gasoline pipe or passage, dirt in spray nozzle, water in gasolino, lesky float valve, loosening of threaded adjustment in float valve, gaso-line-filled float, sticking air valve.

gasoline, and given two coats of shellac. A hollow metal float sometimes receives a invisible puncture, which causes it to fill gradually with gaso-line and act like a saturated cork float. By warming it the gasoline will be ex-pelled as vapor. Plunging the cold float into warm water will cause bubbles to issue, showing the location of the leak. When dried out and cold the leak should be carefully soldered up, using no more solder than necessary in order not to increase the weight of the float. Dirt may cause the auxiliary valve

Any one who has had experienc knows that sunlight has a deteriorating effect upon tires says Automobile. With a similar type of carbu-reter it may happen that altho the throttle is partially closed, so that only partial charges go to the cylind-ers, the quality of the charges will be so much better than that of the full charge that better all around result charge that better all around results are obtained.

Just what setting of the throttle is Just what setting of the throttle is best under any conditions can only be learned for a given machine by ex-periment, and the realization of this fact will go quite a little way toward making one a good driver. In some machines fitted with either fixed or automatically advanced spark it may happen that the timing of the spark is too far advanced at low motor speeds for full charges under such a condition even with a correctiv procondition, even with a correctly pro-portioned mixture, the motor may be working against itself. In this case better results may be obtained with a partially closed throttle than with a fully opened one.

AUTO SALES FOR MARCH.

More automobiles were sold in the United States during the 31 days of United States during the 31 days of the month of March than in any cor-responding period in the history of the automobile industry, according to re-ports received from many factories now working overtime. This has em-phasized the certainty of enormous sales of automobiles that will follow during the next three or four months. Sales have far exceeded the expecta-tions of the makers, the demand for Sales have far exceeded the expecta-tions of the makers, the demand for cars of the better class, as well as for those of lower price, being so large that even those factories working overtime can not produce enough to supply the horse to hauling merchandise. The radius of operation of a horse has been conservatively estimated as fifteen miles a day. This distance, then, is the limit of horse efficiency, whereas the automobile runabout tra-vels a hundred and more miles in the same time, and at the end of the journey is ready immediately to go out on a trip of similar length. The selection and purchase of an automobile should be carefully done. Having beea behind the scenes in au-tomobile matters for some years, I feel that I am competent to give ad-vice to intending purchasers. Motorists Are Looking for Results From Recent Good Roads Convention Fair Treatment For the Car

If we take the mechanical side of the question, a vast field of thought is laid bare for investigation, and it is certainly a moot point as to whether many drivers, from the most scrupulously careful to the most egregiously negligent, ever give very much thought as to what is actually taking place in the various working details of the mechanical anatomy of the machine they are driving. Modern engineering genius has brought the motor car of to-day to such a high degree of efficiency that, to all intents and surposes, it is hard to conceive any very great improvement in its general. construction, says an English magazine. In most of the high-grade cars now on the market, there is also a very high degree of excellence observable in constructive details, so that, really, a driver has practically nothing to do except steer and actuate the throttle, and it is undoubtedly this ultra. simplification of the personal attention requisite for the well-being of the mechanism, that tends to alienate the driver's thoughts from supervising the operation of his machine.

On the other hand, if we take the number of drivers who always treat their machines with thoro consideration, and who can honestly say they are never guilty of unnecessarily harsh treatment, it is doubtful whether the number would reach to a very large percentage.

For example, how many people draw up their cars in, say, 20 feet, when there is no earthly reason why they should not utilize 40? Here. is a case in point, frequently occurring. Assume a man to be driving in city traffic and to see a "block" at the corner which he is approaching. What are his actions? Does he at once slow down, and gently glide up to his position at the rear of the other vehicles, or does he go merrily on, only arresting his progress in the last few yards by a more or less vigorous application of his brake, whereas, as likely as not, his momentum, when he first noticed that the traffic was arrested, would have just sufficed to take him to his position, with possibly the merest touch of the brake to finish up with? A similar lack of consideration for the car is also frequently shown when driving into garages, etc., tho it must be admitted that the chief delinquents in this case are the professional drivers. It is hard to explain exactly what it is, but there seems to be a degree of self-laudatory exultation in the triumph of mind over matter, and the driver, instead of allowing the glory to the designer and manufacturer of the car, seems to have an inherent inclination to make it patent, both to the car itself and anyone who may happen to be near, that he, and he only, controls its every movement. When he says "go" it has to go, and when he says For it has to stop, even the its very frame may shiver and tremble with the injustice of the unreasonable demands so suddenly and thoughtlessly

Arrangements are already being made for the eleventh annual automo-bile show in Grand Central Palace, New York, from New Year's eve, 1910, to January 7, 1911.

Retreaded tires should be placed on the front wheels, where they have less strain to bear, making the cover last longer. The same is true of repaired inner tubes. As a rule, they will give more mileage on the front wheels than the rear.

It is good practice to learn to judge distances accurately, so as to be able to slow down and stop at the righ to slow nown and stop at the right spot, without having recourse to the brakes. This is the ideal method of driving, not only enhancing the enjoy-ment, but increasing the life of the tires and the power plant generally. The brakes are only intended for emergency anyway.

When side brakes are actuated by a flexible cable, it is well to watch whether they are chafed at the bends. When one or two strands are broken the entire cable is liable to go, and, as fate has it, invariably in some tick-lish position or some serious emerg-

Misfiring is sometimes caused by a loose switch. If it is very loose in all probability the motor will stop en-tirely. This is one of the little de-tails which should be looked after when the regular inspection takes place.

Secretary of the Interior Ballinger recently issued an order barring auto-mobiles from the use of the highways in Yellowstone Park. It is said that the order was issued because the mo-tor cars frighten horses being driven over steep and dangerous roads.

Should Brake and Clutch Be Connected?

The control systems in present use on gasoline cars offer three methods of brake connection: (1) Service brake so connected as to throw out clutch when applied, emergency brake inde-pendent; (2) emergency brake con-nected to throw out clutch when ap-plied, service independent: and (3) both independent. Each of these sys-tems has advantages, and, while each represents the best thought of many well known manufacturers, none can be called pre-eminently satisfactory. Chief among the faults to be found with (1) is that at times it is conveni-ent and advisable to apply the service brake while the clutch is engaged and when it would not be as convenient Automobile Legislation Passes the OTTAWA, May 7 .- Two bills relatwere passed this week. JOY RIDING DOOMED

Joy riding has been made a criminal offence, and it's a good thing.

The spectacle of a big car flying thru the city parks at night in charge of a couple of irresponsible chauffeurs and their "lady friends" doesn't help the automobile business.

If a chauffeur takes your car out without permission and smashes up somebody else's property, he doesn't have to settle; it's up to you.

Any way you look at it, joy riding is the rottenest proposition in the motoring game.

Now that they have the federal law to back them, it's up to every owner, every garage manager and every self-respecting chauffeur to help to bring joy riding to a sudden and permanent finish.

The official figures from the company for shipment of cars during a recent week show that 1035 complet-ed machines were built and shipped out during the five and one-half days from April 18 to 23—Saturday being a half day at the Ford factory. This gives an actual average figure of 188 cars shipped per day, which is a record that will be hard to beat. Before the moving of the Ford com-

Before the moving of the Ford com-pany to their new factory the record shipment was 110 cars in a single day from the old plant at Piquette and Beaubis-streets, the output being hindered only by the lack of space for the men to work. But now that the new factory is in full operation, with its unlimited possibilities, the Ford Motor Company put no limit on their output of cars, and fully expect to ship 250 a day in the near future.

hence, a well known London motorist predicts some interesting things. By that time, he thinks, the horse will be forbidden in the streets, which will be paved with something like artificial rubber, so that motor cars met use rubber, so that motor cars may run with iron tires, the cost of running thus being reduced to a little more than the price of fuel and lubricating oil. At the same time, he prophesies that motor cars to carry three or four people would be sold for something like $250, and as everybody would use

You want selective transmission-the RUSSELL has it

You want metal-to-metal clutch with cork inserts-you want a rear axle of the full floating type-you want extreme strength with lightness and extreme power with economy of operation. The RUSSELL has them all.

Choose any RUSSELL chassis-any RUSSELL body-and you will get these qualities in your car. The RUSSELL will give you satisfaction from the day you first throw in the clutch. It is a wonderfully fine piece of machinery-a marvel of mechancial accuracy and perfect adjustment.

USSELL "30," $2,350, fully equipped, is by every standard the highest automobile value in Canada. Let us prove it.

This is the car which has made more talk among men who know automobile value than any other car that has ever been seen on the market. Everything about it bespeaks the car costing more money. It is the perfected result of years of development brought strictly up-to-date in every detail. Only its standardization makes the low price possible.

We will demonstrate this splendid car to you at our nearest branch. It costs nothing, and you're under no obligation. The car has four bodies from which to choose-regular five-passenger, toy tonneau, surrey type with removable rear seat and special roadster-a smart, fast, rakish model.

We are just as interested in their progress as we are in our own, for in the great conventions we have learned that this is an international movement and a sain in one country means a gain in every country. There has been much talk here about the differences be-tween the prominent women in con-nection with the national executive at suffrage headquarters in New York, and that Mrs. Avery and Mrs. Upton have resigned from the offices of first vice-president and treasurer seems at first sight a great calamity, but the fact that these able women resigned from these particular offices does not mean that their interest in the cause is in any way lessend. Quite the reverse. In fact, for we all know that these women are as consecrated to the cause of justice as Mrs. Catt or Dr. Shaw. DIC

ROM Paris there come to us evidences that children are receiving due consideration in the matter of millinery, and a delightful variety is offered to fond mothers who would place over the little one's curls French models that suit all occasions and the different types of childish faces.

Hand made Roses.

Showing

Would you have a closely fitted bonnet for your little girl? The shape that encircles the childish face is of pale blue straw, supple enough to be plaited in at the lower edge. A band of black velvet marks the line of junction of crown and brim, and on one side forms a bow with loops and ends. Who but a Frenchman would think of forming tiny white roses in rings and placing them at intervals on the velvet band? Then, as a final touch, a soft frill of valenciennes lace is attached to the under surface of the brim.

Lace, velvet and flowers are combined on a small shape of blue straw, sewn in the loose, overlapping way to produce a rough effect. The front alluring shown in lace rises yellow ce pleated br > edge is sharply upturned and covered with ecru lace, while the huge spider bow gives the touch of black of which the Parisienne is so fond, and, let it be added, which is so important in this season's millinery. Unusual is this model, but there is a promise of a comfortable adjustment and a fixed condition that means much to a child.

A simpler model is the mushroom shape of raffia. The natural color of the straw is carried out in the ecru lace covering of the crown, extending over the shirred band of red velvet. A huge bow of the velvet ribbon graces the side. That is simplicity that can be copied at far less than the French prices.

THAT

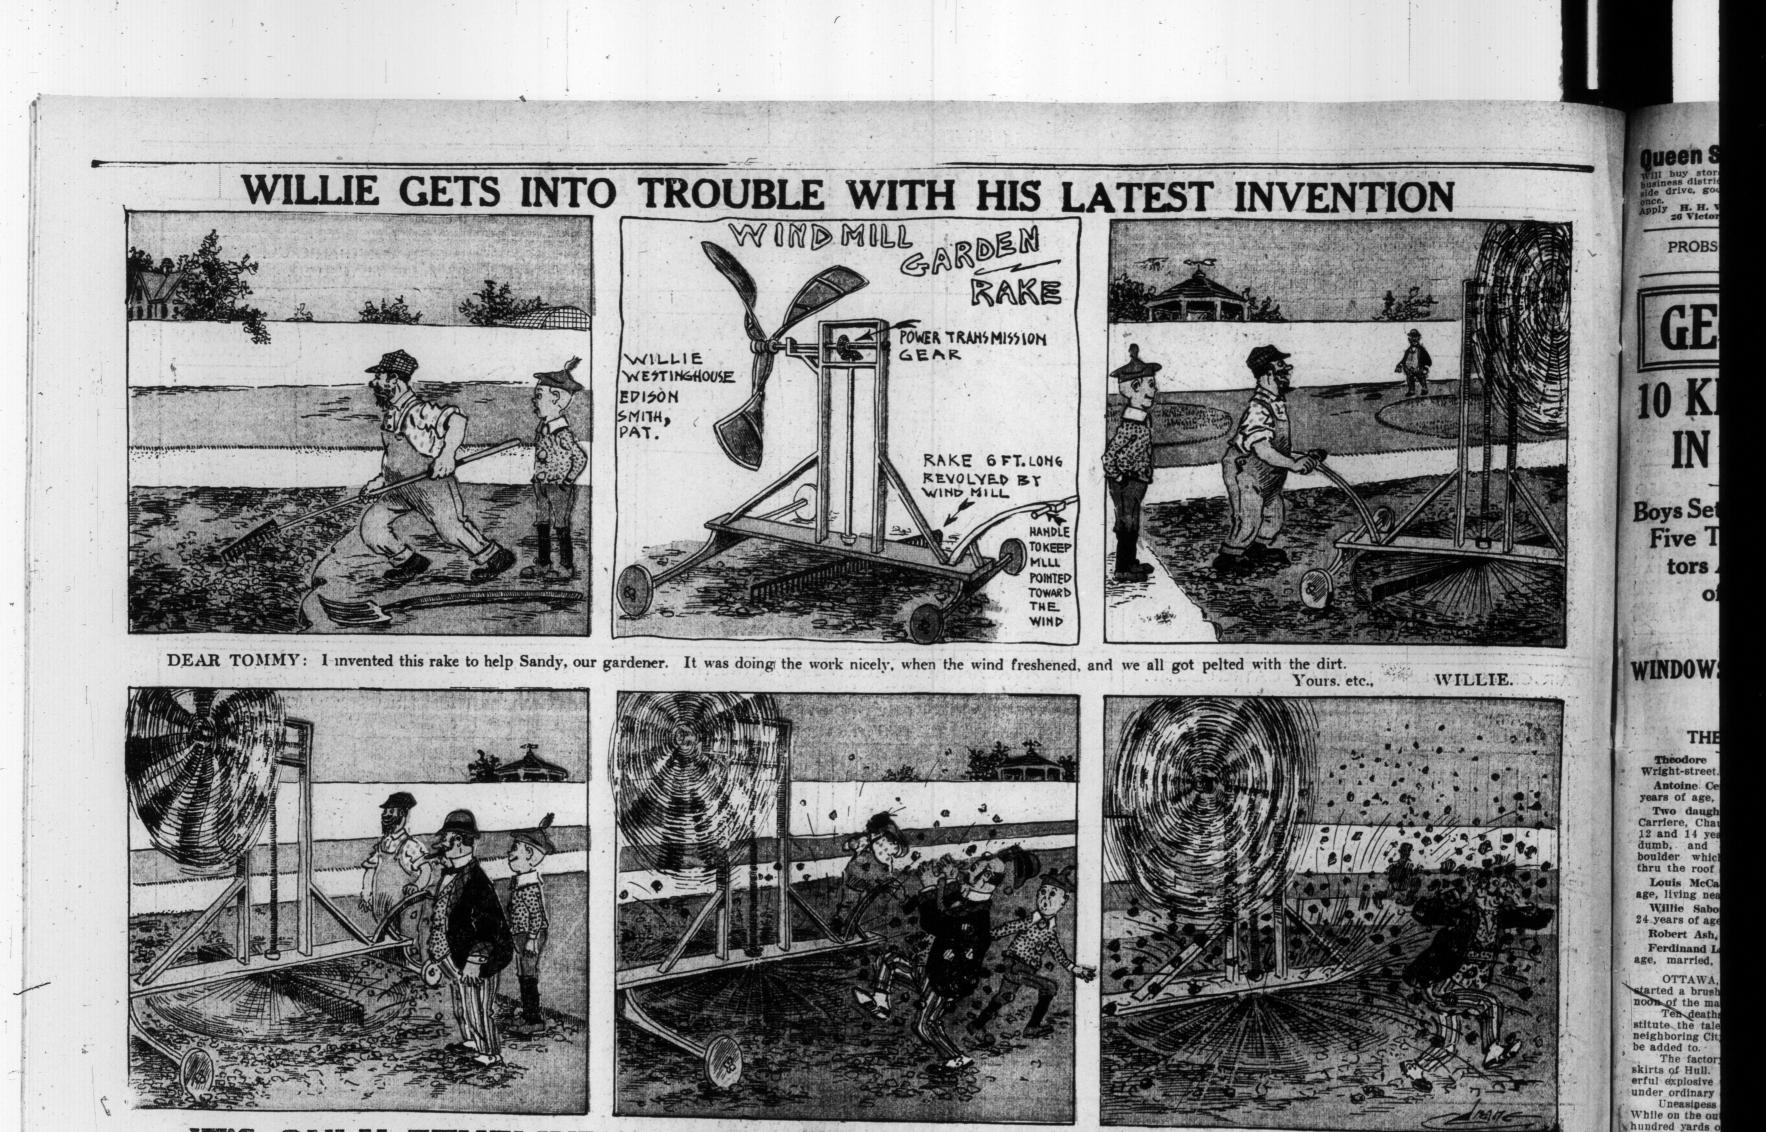

If a black straw be attractive on account of its durability, the large shape trimmed with hand-made roses shows the possibility of pink silk with a coarse straw. The facing is of silk, for there must not be any suggestion of somberness near the little head. Huge pink roses and attractive tiny buds of silk are interspersed among green leaves in a wreath around the top. There is hardly a decided crown line, the shape being quite reminiscent of the "pancake" flat of mother's days.

When lace is built over a frame there is not the unattractive scantiness and its obvious wire structure in the alluring softness of crown and pleated frill that are shown in the white lingerie hat. The ample crown of lace rises above a line of large white roses with delicate yellow centers. No effort has been made to rob the pleated brim of its delightful fulness. A veritable white flower is this becoming style. There is always in a white hat the important characteristic of a harmonizing quality and a becomingness to any type of beauty which it were well worth considering.

French models for any American children whose mothers wish to buy or to construct at home are before you. "Choose the one that you like best," in the words of a childish game, always, of course, with the little girl's face in your mind. And then be sure that the entire costume of the wearer is consistent.
