Thoughts From W. E. Gladstone

A will residing within us, and made free to choose the better part, forgets its iron chains link by link in again and again choosing the worse.

All our most faculties may indeed enlarge, multiply and vary their powers by vigorous and judicious exercise, or may stunt and finally lose them by disuse.

I hold that a man, to be a hero, must pursue ends upon himself—must pursue them by legitimate means, and pursue them as a man, and not as a dreamer.

Every act we do is full of the power of reproduction; we are tracked and hunted by our deeds; and after we have lost them from view and from memory, they reappear and claim as of right the mastery over our fate.

In the contrast between the mind of man and such a subject as the being of God, the best men are not like the poppies in Herodotus, towering far above the grain; they are but as blades of grass of which no one is greatly taller than his nearest fellows.

Where there is a brave and gallant spirit in man, it commonly, and in the absence of extraordinary trials, manages to save something of time, thought, of energy, from the urgent demands of his outer life and his bodily wants. There is the blessed rest of Sunday, a standing and a speaking witness of the truth that man does not live by bread alone.

It is the effort to win, rather than the victory, which has real value. For while the victory in a competition may be the means of laying the mind asleep, and inducing it to rest upon what it has done, the effort, the truth, honest manful effort, whether it be successful or not, will have left you more competent and more vigorous for the discharge of every other duty, and better disposed to face and to grapple with the difficulties which in one shape or another must be your lot in life.

250 Good Stories

The Youth's Companion abounds in stirring stories of adventure and heroism. One may describe an escape from accidental peril, another a strange encounter with wild creatures—man or beast.

Many of these stories are true as to facts, and only disguised as to names and places. A score or more of such stories will be published during 1910 in addition to nearly 200 others—250 good stories in all, and no two alike. And this is not counting the serial stories, which it is believed will be considered by old Companion readers as the best The Companion has ever published.

Every new Canadian subscriber will find it of special advantage to send at once the $2.00 for the new 1910 Volume. Not only does he get the beautiful "Venetian" Calendar for 1910, lithographed in thirteen colors and gold, but all the issues of The Companion for the remaining weeks of 1909 from the time the subscription is received.

Famous Tea Drinkers

Napoleon, like Johnson, was a hardened tea drinker, and so, a century later, was Mr. Gladstone, who confessed that "he drank more tea between midnight and 4 in the morning than any other member of the House of Commons, and that the strongest brew of it never interfered with his sleep."

The dish of tea was one of the most important factors in Johnson's life. Proficiency in the gentle art of tea brewing was regarded by him as an essential attribute of the perfect woman, and there can be no doubt that his female friends (and their name was legion) did their best to gratify his amiable weakness.

Richard Cumberland tells us, says the Gentlewoman, that his inordinate demands for his favorite beverage were occasionally difficult to comply with. On Sir Joshua Reynolds reminding him that he had already consumed eleven cups he replied: "Sir, I do not count your glasses of wine; why, should you number my cups of tea?" added laughingly and in perfect good humor: "Sir, I should have released our hostess from any further trouble, but you have reminded me that I want one more cup to make up the dozen, and I must request Mrs. Cumberland to round up my score."

When he saw the complacency with which the lady of the house obeyed his behests he said cheerily: "Madame, I must tell you for your comfort, you have escaped much better than a certain lady did a while ago, upon whose patience I intruded greatly more than I have yours. She asked me for no other purpose than to make a zany of me and set me gabbling to a parcel of people I knew nothing of; so, madam, I had my revenge on her, for I swallowed five and twenty cups of her tea."

Cumberland declared that his wife would gladly have made tea for Johnson "as long as the New River could have supplied her with water," for it was then and then only, he was seen at his happiest moments.

On his Scottish tour his inexorable demands for tea sorely tried the patience of Lady Macleod of Dunvegan, who after giving him his sixteenth cup suggested that supplies in a small basin might be agreeable to him. "I wonder, madam," he answered roughly, "why all the ladies ask me such questions. It is to save yourself trouble madam, and not me."

The lady was discreetly silent, and resumed her task.

Rheumatism
I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor turn long growths back to flesh again. That is impossible, but I can now surely kill the pain and purge of this detestable disease.
In Germany—with a Chamber in the City of Darmstadt—I found the last ingredients with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made. A perfect, dependable prescription. Without any harmful effects, it cures all cases of this horrid, much dreaded disease. These sand-like granules freely pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer without help. We sell, and in confidence recommend

When the Storm God Wakes

It is small wonder that the savage and the uneducated man should regard the power of the elements with superstitious terror, for to the most intelligent and scientific mind they are a source of awe. Much has been learned about the phenomena of storms and the cause of electrical disturbance, yet with all the knowledge that has accumulated there is no lessening of the sense of dread at the majesty of the spectacle. What must it have been to the mind of the unlettered aborigine? And what must be now to men who do not, and cannot, have any knowledge of what it really is?

From the very earliest ages the thunder and lightning, familiar to all as the most terrific manifestations of power in all the world, have been associated with man's conception of a god. In nearly every system of theology the chief god thunders.

As we read in Job: "He directeth his lightnings unto the end of the earth; after it a voice roareth: He thundereth with the voice of His excellency."

The Romans said these phenomena were caused by Jupiter Tonans, or thunders and the Greeks said the thunder was the noise caused by the car of Zeus. Athene, daughter of the great god, also sent bolts abroad. Agni, the Hindu god of fire, is also the lightning, but Indra usually sends the bolts and the bright flash.

We derive our name for the audible manifestation of these natural phenomena from the Teutonic and Scandinavian god, Thor. His name becomes Donar in German, thence thunar in Anglo Saxon. His car, hauled by two goats, sped across the sky, and the lightning-flash was the strokes of his great hammer, Mjolnir, which he hurled through the air. Perkanus was the Slavonian god of thunder.

When we say to the children that the thunder is the voice of God we are but repeating the scriptural words and many sayings in European tongues embody the same idea. German children are told "The great God is angry," or "God is out there scolding." The Letts say: "The old father has started to his feet; he chatters away." Estonians: "The old father growls," or "The Lord scolds," while in Bavaria peasants say: "The Heavenly Daddy growls." A peasant in Belgium in the sixteenth century being required to kneel while the storm passed, said: "I don't believe God is there; I heard Him thunder just now." There is a French saying: "You make so much noise you can't hear God thunder." It is, "God's thundering," in Carniola.

The saints are even accredited with the power of hurling thunderbolts and lightning-strokes. In Russian belief, St. Elias of the prophet Elias, is the thunderer, and he drives his chariot across the heavens. The Swedes say: "The old fellow is having a drive."

Savages had much the same belief. Dacotahs said a god, Wakedga, caused the noise and flash. And Istimian tribes ascribed these manifestations to Dabihah. Iroquois Indians asserted that a giant in human form produces the lightning. Hotocondos of South America say that the lightning and thunder is caused by the moon. Hurons say the thunder is caused by a mighty bird, who opens his wings with the lightning-flash. Many tribes of Indians believe in this thunder bird. It is called Hahness by the Hurons and Tapi by the Lupan Indians.

In Aryan lore the thunder is the bellowing of a mighty beast, and the lightning a serpent or fish darting zigzag across the sky. A Mexican tribe of Indians think both are caused by the spirit of a mountain. Peasants in many parts of Europe think the thunder is the sound made by dwarfs or sprites engaged like Rip Van Winkle's Dutchmen, in a game of ninepins.

During the Middle Ages sorcerers, witches, and magicians were credited with power over the elements, and could of course, cause, thunder and lightning. A treatise, written about 830 by Agobard, Bishop of Lyons, against the weather-makers recounts the popular ideas on the subject. The people were wont to say, when they heard the thunder and saw the lightning, that they were caused by tempestarii. Laws were made against them and sermons directed against them.

Men have at all times sought for some protection against the bolts of heaven, and many animals, plants and even stones, have been fabled to possess the power of warding off the dangerous stroke.

POPULAR TRADITIONS.
Thunder in November and September is said to indicate a fertile year to come.
Many persons say that the presence of thunder and lightning over the northern lakes is an indication that

Steel Oven Heats Quicker Saves Fuel

Pandora has a sheet steel oven, because steel is more sensitive to heat—absorbs it faster—than cast iron does. Pandora oven thus heats quicker—less time required to get oven ready for the baking—which also means less fuel-expense.

In the sugar camps thunder-storms in February and March are said to betoken a poor sugar year. "Early thunder, early spring," is a well-known saying and it is believed that the first thunder heard in the spring indicates the character of the season. If it is in the south the summer will be a wet one; if it is in the north it will be a dry one. If there is much thunder in May, there will be little in August and September. Thunder and lightning early in winter or late in the fall indicate warm weather, and in the fall, a mild and open winter.

Prognostications are also drawn from the direction in which thunder is heard or lightning seen. It is said that lightning in the north will bring rain within twenty-four hours, and is also a sign of heat in summer. Thunder in the north indicates cold weather and rain from the west. A north-west thunder storm is usually a clearing one, but one from the northeast brings unsettled weather with it. Lightning on the southern horizon is thought in the Western States to indicate warm weather. Southerly thunder generally indicates foul weather.

Thunder in the evening is said to foretell much rainy weather, while a proverb says: "When it thunders in the morning it will rain before night." The first thunder-storm of the season shows the direction from which succeeding storms will come, and the first of the year wakes the hibernating animals from their winter sleep. As thunder was supposed to bring cold, so lightning is popularly supposed to bring heat with it. Lightning without thunder, after a fair day, indicates continued clear weather, and

FORKED LIGHTNING AT NIGHT

THE NEXT DAY CLEAR AND BRIGHT
An old authority on the weather says that pale flashes of lightning show that the air is full of waterish meteors; if they are red and brilliant they foreshow winds and tempests. Sheet lightning in a clear sky in spring, summer and autumn evenings is said to indicate heavy rains.

The cause of death by lightning is the sudden absorption of the electric current. When a thunder-cloud which is highly charged with positive electricity hangs over any certain place, the earth beneath it becomes abnormally charged with the negative electric current, and a man, animal or other object standing or lying directly beneath also partakes of the last-mentioned influence.

If, while the man, animal, or other object is in this condition, a discharge takes place from the cloud above, the restoration of the equilibrium will be sudden and violent; or, in language that we can all understand, the negative current from the earth will rush up to join the positive cloud-current, and in passing through the object which separates the two currents, if it be an animate thing, will do so with such force as to almost invariably produce instant death.

According to the above, which seems a tenable hypothesis, to say the least, a person is really "struck" by the ground-current, and not by the forked fury from above at all.

It is pretty well known, by this time, that a tree is not a safe lurking-place during a thunder-storm; but that there is a difference in the degree of danger in different varieties of trees is not so commonly understood.

While no record of the kind of trees most often struck by lightning has ever been kept in the United States, the lightning rod conference held in England in 1851 reported that in the United Kingdom the trees most often struck were the elm, oak, ash and poplar. It also said that the beech, birch, and maple were seldom struck by lightning.

For a period of eleven years, in the principality of Lippe-Deimold, exhaustive records were kept of all trees struck by lightning. These showed that trees standing near water seemed to be the most likely to be hit, and gave this table of comparative danger: Oaks, 100; elms, 77; pines, 33; firs, 10; fir-trees in general, 27; oaks, by far the safest of all forest trees, 2. The safety of the beech, however, is not equal to the open field, where comparatively few persons are ever harmed by lightning. According to the reports in the Weather Bureau, most of those killed or injured by a bolt have been the ones who sought shelter either under trees, in the doorways of barns, or near chimneys.

A BOON TO STOCK-RAISERS

To know how to cure Colic, Distemper, Colds, Swellings, Etc.—Saves Thousands Each Year

It is a matter of vital importance to every farmer, horse-owner and stock-raiser to know exactly what to do when one of his animals is taken suddenly sick.

The story of Mr. Frank R. Fullerton, which we print below gives information of inestimable value, and tells of his experience in curing ailing stock during the last thirty-eight years:

Several years ago when my horses took colic I used to give them Cayenne Pepper in hot milk, but in a few cases only did it help, and because I had no proper means at hand I lost several valuable animals. Some one told me of the success Mr. Wendling of Brockville, Ont., had in his racing stables with "Nerviline" so I laid in a supply. It wasn't very long before Nerviline saved the life of a valuable stallion of mine, which was worth at least $1,000.00. This horse was taken with colic, and would have died, had it not been for Nerviline. I have used Nerviline for reducing swellings, for taking out distemper lumps, and easing a bad cold, and always found it worked well. I recommend every man who owns horses or cattle to keep Nerviline on hand.

Mr. Fullerton is one of the best known residents of St. George, and his recommendation as an experienced and practical horse man proved beyond question how valuable Nerviline really is. Give Nerviline a trial. It's good for man or beast, internally or externally, 25c. per bottle or five for $1.00. At all dealers or The Cattaraugus Co., Kingston, Ont.

NEWSPAPER SPACE

Every line in the newspaper costs its publisher something. If it is to benefit some individual, he may fairly expect to pay something. You do not go into a grocery and ask the proprietor for ten pounds of sugar for nothing, even though the grocer may be a personal friend and even though the gift may not be a large one.

EVERYTHING DEPENDS

A correspondent in last issue has a fling at the school board in reference to the proposed establishment of a domestic science department in the schools. Without discussing the wisdom, or necessity, of this branch of education, it is hardly fair to condemn the board in advance of any action taken. While it is true that nearly one half the assessment is for school purposes, we must all admit that the expenditure is for a good purpose. The school board will not take any hasty action in this matter, and will be guided by public opinion in any move they may make. Careful investigation might bring about more economy in some departments of the town government, in which case this new system could be established without adding further burdens to the people.

By the new telepost system it is said that messages are transmitted at the enormous speed of a thousand yards a minute over one wire. The increase in speed means a decrease in cost. Twenty-five words are sent for twenty-five cents for any distance within the United States. There is also a new service by which fifty word messages are carried for twenty-five cents and delivered at their destination through the United States mail. A ten-word message, known as a Telecard, is treated in the same way, and delivered on a post card for ten cents. It would be worth while, the Toronto Star suggests, for Canadians to inquire into this system, and if it is what it is represented to be it ought to be introduced into Canada. The Government of Canada in the case of wireless telegraphy showed its interest in inventions for improving and cheapening communication, and the Telepost is worthy, of the attention of the Postmaster-General, who is an alert and broad-minded Minister.

HABITUAL CRIMINALS

There are in all human aggregations, civilized and barbaric, men and women whose acts are best described by the phrases wilful persistence in the deliberately acquired habitualism of crime. The more civilized the community is in which they exist and prey upon society the more difficult the task of dealing with them after the rough, simple methods of earlier times. In ruder communities and among aboriginal folk there is short shrift for such. Swift death is decreed once society becomes convinced of other chronic evil. One of London's greatest police administrators said not long since that if the habitual criminals of the British metropolis could be permanently imprisoned crime in the city would be reduced three-fourths. But in obedience to a sentimental ideal of liberty society has permitted such social offenders to go forth to commit new crime and breed their kind. However there are signs of a changed attitude. Ideals of ceremony, social thrift and same dealing with problems hitherto dealt with too sentimentally are beginning to find expression in law. Men are even suggesting that there are limits to the right of individuals to bring others of their type into the world, and penologists are persuading legislators that the habitual criminal may be justly limited in his area of action. Thus the British Parliament has amended the penal code so that prison administration may exercise what is called "preventive detention." After the punitive and reformatory aspects of prison discipline have had their chance, but without effect, on the criminal, and after his sentence has expired, he may be detained at his majesty's pleasure, but not over ten years. This latter provision is a concession to the time-honored principle of the British code, which guards the liberty of the individual against the possibility that administrators of law may err or be unduly severe.

A leg of chicken that furnished dinner for a family of six was referred to as an example of the benefits of domestic science at the debate Monday evening. It was an ordinary leg, of course, but a cook somewhat out of the ordinary, even in a debate.

THE FISHERMAN—He riseth up early in the morning and disturbeth the white household for mighty are his preparations. He goeth forth full of hope. When the day is far spent, he returneth smelling of strong drink and the truth is not in him.

The installation of electric lights in the town of Shediac is an enterprise of purely local pride. The installation of five new flickering kerosene street lamps in this town, opened the flood gates of oratory in the council a few evenings ago, and was carried by a majority of one.

Without presuming to advise the members of the town council, it is only reasonable to suggest that some action be taken to provide water for the residents of Carleton street and vicinity. It is very appropriately and forcibly pointed out, that additional street lamps could be dispensed with at present, without any serious prejudice to the rights of the people, and the "assumed appropriation" be applied to water purposes.

The distribution of patronage is bound to give offence, and those who "knock" the leaders are the least independent of men. They are not fair critics, and have not any desire to strengthen a party, they are simply "knockers." All leaders are human and liable to make mistakes. Fair criticism is all right, but it is poor judgement to indulge in constant fault finding, when some personal whim is the sole reason of such an attitude.

Anyone who is disposed to be a martyr can find stake and faggots awaiting him at every cross road. Start out in the morning expecting to be abused, and you will have wounds and ill-usage before the day is done. Self-pity is a magnet that always attracts hardships and troubles; it draws to itself all that is bitter, unkind and hard in life, and makes its possessor miserable because he expects to be. We find what we look for, and it is the doors at which we knock that they are opened to us.

A woman came into the general store with a jar of butter. She desired to exchange it for another jar of butter. In churning her butter she had discovered a mouse in the churn. "It didn't injure the butter," she said to the storekeeper, "and to anyone who did not know the circumstances it would taste alright."

Taking the woman at her word, the merchant carried her jar into the back room, transferred her butter to another jar, and the gratified customer took back her mouse butter with a thousand thanks for the accommodation.

There is a great deal of needless trouble in the world on account of squeamish sentiment.

Resolved that the teaching of manual training and domestic science in our schools would be beneficial. Decided in the affirmative by the debating club Monday evening. Owing to lack of space we are unable to give a full report of this discussion, but it proved to be most interesting and one of the best debates held by the club. Dr. Taylor, G. S. Lord, H. R. Lawrence, A. C. Toy, H. McKennie and Edward McGrattan handled the Affirmative. Dr. Alexander S. L. Lynott, W. E. Seelye, A. C. Gillmor, C. H. McGee, Negative. The subject selected for next meeting.

Resolved—That it is better for Canada to build a navy of her own for imperial naval defence than to make a money contribution.

Mr. John A. McDonald of New York, President of the Donald Line of Steamers came to town last Thursday and was met at the train by Mr. Chas. Fuller, resident manager of the Pulp and Paper Co.

This visit foreshadows the disappearance of the sailing vessels from our waters. A new iron ship, with a capacity of two thousand tons will make regular trips, every two weeks between here and Newwalk next season, carrying the product of the pulp mill.

Mr. McDonald was shown the berths at the public wharf, where this big three masted schooner load, and taken down river by Mr. Fuller. He expressed the opinion that the steamer could come here and load without trouble and said his company would put on a new boat two hundred and fifteen feet long drawing fifteen feet of water. The company would ground the ship if necessary and he saw no reason to prevent them coming, as far as the navigation of the river is concerned. Doubling Thomases will see in time the benefit of dredging the harbor.

A subscriber writing us from the far west is certainly a fine specimen of a hog. He says: "This is, indeed, a wonderful country. Every hamlet is a town, every town is a city, every farm a ranch, every barnyard a coral, every mound a mountain, every man a liar."

Owen Carter, youngest son of Frank N. Carter, who has a string of snares laid in some woods back of the town, met with a surprise last week when he found that one of the traps contained about as big a wild cat as a boy ever looked at. The monster weighed thirty two pounds and measured five feet two inches.

One of our correspondents has a grievance, and writes us: "Why in the deuce don't you print all I write? Is it because of no space? Don't discourage a rising young journalist, for when he looks back over the past experiences—that is, after he becomes editor of the London Times or some other big paper, he can say: "I first wrote items for a country paper." The Granite Town Greetings."

Another body from the steamer Hestia was found this morning on the beach at Bullerwell's Cove, Chegoggin Point. There was no clothing on the body except a tan boot on one foot and a leather strap about the waist. The head was badly disfigured and it could not be identified. The body was that of a full faced man, quite stoutly built, 5 feet 7 inches in height. It was carefully prepared by Undertaker Sweeney, and will be buried tomorrow at 10 o'clock beside those of the other seaman.—Yarmouth Telegram Nov. 12.

As the result of hard work the rink management are able to announce an excellent program for the entertainment Thursday evening. The Thistle quartette, D. Lawrence McLaren and T. D. Donovon are features that are sure to please, and it is expected that the largest audience ever assembled in Courts Hall will welcome these artists. The object is a worthy one and the public will undoubtedly show its appreciation by a record breaking attendance. We can have a rink if everyone will stand by the committee.

Four thousand granite cutters are out in Vermont as a result of the Granite Manufacturers Association action taken at a meeting held Monday night. The trouble commenced in Northfield where the men refused to work in a shed where a tool known as "bumper" was used, claiming that the tool in dispute was detrimental to the health of the users, on account of dust it arouses and for other reasons.

The manufacturers decided to keep their men out, until the Northfield men return to work.

A heated discussion over the menu, as arranged for Friday morning's repast between "Bingo" Henry and his brother "Rouse" culminated in a shooting affair in which "Bingo" aimed to the teeth applied some lead to his brother's leg. The youthful Jessie James was arrested in due time, and after a somewhat protracted hearing was discharged for want of evidence. The carrying of guns and rifles among the juvenile element is becoming altogether too common, and it is time the authorities put a stop to the practice.

C. H. Lynott of St. George of the secret service Department of his majesty's customs, returned yesterday from the scene of the wreck of the Donaldson liner Hestia, where he had been on departmental duty. Speaking to a representative of the Sun last evening Mr. Lynott said that as yet the Hestia showed no signs of breaking up and some of the natives of Grand Manan have expressed the opinion that she is so firmly fixed on the old Proprietor ledge that only the heaviest of gales can injure her further, and there is a possibility that she may not break up during the winter.

Speaking of the reports that the Grand Manan fishermen had taken immense quantities of Scotch whiskey from the vessel's cargo, Mr. Lynott said that the statement was greatly exaggerated. Some cases of liquor had been picked up on the Nova Scotia coast, but very little had gone ashore on Grand Manan. At present, the fishermen are engaged in getting coal out of the vessel according to Mr. Lynott.

Mr. Lynott expects to return to the scene of the wreck to keep watch on the cargo, as it is the government's intention to get the duties which the goods must pay.—Star.

The old fashioned way of dosing the stomach for stimulating the Heart or Kidneys is surely wrong! Dr. Shoop first pointed out this error. This vital truth is leading druggists everywhere to dispense and recommend Dr. Shoop's Restorative. A few days rest will surely tell! Sold by All Dealers.
