NEW EQUIPMENT FOR BATTERY.

New Twelve Pound Guns Will be Taken Over at Sussex

RIGHT UP-TO-DATE

Lieut. C. W. Anslow, Will be in Charge of Detachment to Take These Over.

The 12th Newcastle Field Battery is to receive its new equipment of guns and harness on June 22nd at Sussex.

For years the commanding officer and his subordinates have been working to procure up-to-date equipment for the 12th Field Battery and do away with the old muzzle loaders.

With the old guns men were placed at a great disadvantage as all their instructions were for breech loading twelve pound guns while they were working on time pound muzzle loaders, and in the annual competitions they were unable to adapt themselves quickly to the change and thus did not make as good a showing as others who were used to handling breech loaders.

The new guns are expected to arrive at Sussex on Friday, June 22nd, and a detachment in command of Lt. C. W. Anslow, will be there on that date to take them over from the officer of the department.

The guns and harness are new, right out of stores and with this equipment we feel sure the men of 12th Battery will win new honors.

Major Lawrie is delighted with the change and is more enthusiastic than ever, and will spare no effort to put this battery as near the top of the list as possible.

The Battery will leave here Monday evening, June 25th instead of Tuesday morning as formerly announced.

EXTEND LIGHTS TO BRIDGETOWN.

Residents Ask Town Council to Extend Lighting System.

About a year ago the residents living outside the Police and Fire District of the Town of Newcastle, living along the road to Bridgetown petitioned the Council to extend the lighting system to that place, which is part of the town. The matter was referred to a committee but owing to delays nothing could be done last fall. This spring the matter was again brought up and was again referred to a committee. It is probable that a report will be made at the next meeting of the Council.

What that committee has done we are not in a position to state, but we trust that they have gone fully into the matter and have decided to extend the system as we feel sure this line will be self sustaining from the start.

Mr. T. W. Hay has commenced the wiring of the Edward Sinclair Lumber Co's property at Bridgetown, and we understand that if the town will not meet the wishes of the ratepayers, then an independent plant will be installed by the above company to generate light for its own use. This company is perfectly willing and ready to do the right thing and would much prefer to have the town do the lighting, but light must be had, and the owner, Mr. John McKernan will have it at any cost.

The government has also approached the town with reference to placing a light on the draw of the Northwest bridge and a number of other residents would install the lights.

Without going fully into the details of cost and maintenance it looks as if this extension would eventually be a paying investment to the town, but complete information will no doubt be laid before the Council by its committee.

NEW AND IMPORTANT FIND NEAR COBALT

Cobalt, June 9.—A very rich find of pure silver has just come to light. The find was made by a party sent out by a Lucky Barber of Cobalt, and was located about thirty miles south of this town. The vein is eight inches wide, and has been traced over 700 feet. The samples brought in are about the richest and finest seen. The new find will mean that a large area of new and good mining lands will be prospected over.

DR. MACNAUGHTON IS HOUSE SURGEON

Appointed to Montreal General Hospital From Among Twenty Applicants.

Dr. G. K. MacNaughton, B. A. of the graduating class of Medicine at McGill University, has been appointed house surgeon at the Montreal General Hospital, to succeed Dr. Harris. Dr. MacNaughton, who will take up practice at Montreal, N. B.

Dr. MacNaughton belongs to Chatham, N. B., and is a son of the late Captain William MacNaughton. He was educated at Chatham High School and won the Governor General's Medal. Entering the University of New Brunswick, he obtained in his first year the Northumberland County Scholarship. During his career at the University of New Brunswick, of which he is a B. A., Dr. MacNaughton was captain of the college football team, joint editor of the college paper, president of the undergraduates' literary and debating society, and finally class valedictorian.

At McGill University, Dr. MacNaughton had a splendid career. He was a prominent member of the Y. M. C. A., and a member of the Alpha Kappa Kappa Fraternity. Last year he was president of his class and a member of the committee which has set on foot a movement to establish a Dominion Medical Council.

There were twenty-five applicants for the position of house surgeon at the General Hospital, a fact that makes Dr. MacNaughton's appointment all the more noteworthy. Dr. MacNaughton was the eldest principal of the H. K. A. Association four years ago and the President of the Y. M. C. A. in New Brunswick. It was largely owing to his interest in the young men that it was started.

The Advocate extends its hearty congratulations to Dr. MacNaughton in his success and predicts for him a brilliant future in his profession.

BICYCLE RIDER SERIOUSLY HURT

Was run into by Horse Near Ferry Landing Chatham Head.

Mr. Samuel McKernan was riding a bicycle in Chatham Head Thursday when he was run into by a young chatham man driving one of Mr. Groat's horses.

Mr. McKernan was hurrying to catch the Newcastle ferry which had just come in. Three teams came on the boat and started briskly up the ferry roadway, but Mr. McKernan was keeping well to his own side of the road and anticipated no trouble. Suddenly the last team containing a commercial traveller and driven by an attendant of Groat's stable of Chatham, shot out to one side and started past the other teams. It crashed heavily into Mr. McKernan and he was flung violently to the ground. He was seen to be badly hurt and the team drew up.

While conscious, Mr. McKernan was unable to move, as he had received severe injuries in the back, the shaft also striking him on the temple. He was taken to a nearby house and medical aid was summoned from Newcastle. On Friday he was removed to his home. The wheel was badly wrecked as a result of the collision.

McKernan was greatly improved yesterday and expects to be about as usual by the end of the week if no complications set in.

Rev. T. H. Cuthbert will preach in St. Peter's Church, Darby, Sunday the 17th at 2.30.

DOMININN PULP MILL AT CHATHAM

Operations Resumed After a Shut-down of Nearly Five Months
An Interesting Process.

CHATHAM, N. B. June 7.—The Dominion pulp mill concern, after a shutdown of nearly five months, caused by the destruction of the acid producing plant on January 14th last, has resumed full operations, and as a result employment has been furnished directly to over one hundred men, and many more will indirectly feel the benefit accruing from the operation of the big plant at Millbank, opposite Chatham. The mill is now under the management of R. B. Horton, who is a capable and genial head of this thriving concern. With him as superintendent is John Hanton. It will be remembered that on January 14th a serious fire broke out in the Dominion pulp mill, and before the conflagration was extinguished the acid plant in connection with the mill was totally destroyed. Since that time a large three story acid plant building has been built by the Chatham contractors, John McDonald & Co. This was finished in time for the acid making to begin on May 23rd, and the cooking on the following Tuesday. The operations in pulp making extend over a period of nearly three days before any finished product is turned out, but by this date the mill is in full operation and is turning out its normal amount of 130 tons of pulp each week.

Manager Horton states that during the time the mill was shut down the whole plant was gone over and alterations and improvements made, so that the company is now in a position to turn out the best brand of sulphite fibre that can be manufactured. In the acid plant are fifteen tanks of various sizes for the manufacture of the acid, and the two chief products required here, lime and sulphur, are brought to the Miramichi from St. John and New York, the winter port furnishing practically the entire amount of the former. The acid is then taken into another department of the mill, where, mixing with the wood fibre in the digestors, of which there are four, the product goes through the process of cooking. From this stage it shortly emerges in the form of sulphite fibre or pulp.

The material used in the manufacture of pulp is wholly black spruce, which is obtained on the Northwest Miramichi, and above and below the mill site by private lumbermen and by parties working directly for the Dominion Pulp Co. This is rafted in the usual way and is constantly fed into the barking mill. In order to keep the mill in operation the year round the logs for winter use are piled up on the shore in piles reaching thirty and forty feet in height. The barking mill and the main part of the pulp mill are practically one immense building, and in this way expense is saved in the handling of the raw material. About three miles back from the river the company controls a splendid head of water, and this is brought by a sluice to the mill.

The companies has a wharf close to the deep water channel, which at this point in the river swings in under the northern bank, and the pulp is shipped from this landing in scows to the opposite side of the river and loaded from the Canada dock on to cars or steamers as convenience in shipping may dictate, as the company's product is sent to many different markets.

THE WAR ON THE MEAT PACKERS.

Defence Entered by President of Stock Association.

SITUATION AT LIVERPOOL.

Inspection There Said to be Satisfactory—No Cause for Alarm They Declare.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, June 7.—The Herald today publishes a letter from President Frank J. Hagenbarth, of the National Live Stock Association, which says in part:

"The President has seen fit to ignore urgent requests from official representatives of the live stock industry requesting him to withhold any radical message or reports to Congress bearing on the abuses of the packing industry, for the reason that such message, if heralded over the world, would work an irreparable loss, both at home and abroad, to the producers of live stock."

"It must be presumed that the President of the United States is too big and broad a man to feel charged because of the fact that Commissioner Garfield's report exonerated the packers from certain imputed delinquencies, and it cannot be thought that he harbors revenge because Judge Humphrey's decision was a measure of defeat for the government. Nor can it be presumed that, because he failed on these two former occasions, that the President, anxious to make a record or win out, chose the present method of doing so."

Mr. Hagenbarth urges that all existing abuses could be corrected under the laws now in force, and declares that the Neill-Reynolds report concerns principally particular occurrences and not general conditions. He says the stock growers have suffered for three years because of the beef trust agitation, and concludes: "To sum up the entire subject in a few words, the President, over the heads of packers, has hit a hard blow at the live stock industry."

LIVERPOOL, June 7.—Reassuring statements regarding American canned goods were made by both the chairman and the medical officer at today's meeting of the Liverpool health committee. The chairman emphasized the carefulness of the inspection here, and said a very large number of tins were examined yearly, and all of them had been found to be quite good. Consumers, therefore, need not be alarmed, as the committee was closely watching over their interests.

Medical Officer Hope declared that the great bulk of tinned meat arrived at Liverpool in a very excellent condition. There had not been a single instance of harm from such meat brought to light as far as he knew. Perhaps three hundred to four hundred tons of tinned meat were destroyed yearly because the tins were 'blown' owing to defective fastening. But this was a small percentage, and the great bulk was in first-class condition. Continuing, Mr. Hope said: "Against these facts we have to set the statement of the President of the United States, and while the latter gives the immense weight of his authority to the existence of abominable conditions in Chicago I advise the people to refrain from buying anything coming from Chicago as long as these conditions exist."

THE ECONOMIC VALUE OF A MAN

Maine Physician Deals With Interesting Topic.

BOSTON, June 7.—Dr. Erastus Holt, of Portland, Me., yesterday, at the Optamology session of the American Medical Association, which is in session here, in an elaborate paper on "Physical Economics," contended that the economic value of a laboring man decreases after his twenty-fifth year, and that the value of a professional man wanes after the fortieth year. Dr. Holt presented elaborate tables showing that a man's money value can actually be determined by taking into consideration his occupation and age.

In his table showing the value of individuals of the American laboring class he states that at ten years age, on a 3 1-2 per cent. discount basis, a boy is worth $2,061.62; at 25 he is worth $5,488.03, and from that time on his value decreases until at 70 he is worth but $17.13, and at 80 years of age he is a drawback on the community to the extent of $872.84. The professional man at 25 years of age has an economic value of $23,893.94, and his highest value is at 40 years of age, when he is worth $29,344.68.

Dr. Holt says that all damages to a person through accident should be assessed by a jury in a systematic manner and not in a haphazard way as is done at present. The tables which he has used in determining the value of a man are taken from those of the famous Dr. Farr, but he has amplified these tables in such a way that he can determine the percentage of loss due to a specific accident, such as the loss of an eye, a leg or an arm, or any diminution of the person's value short of total disability. He advocates the plan of having every man and woman procure for himself and herself an economic rating.

THIRTY CARS OF RAILS.

Campbellton, June 6.—Thirty cars of rails arrived last Tuesday afternoon for the International railway and were taken out that line on the following day.

What Does It Mean?

Dr. Hamilton Gives a Full Satisfactory Explanation.

Look at your tongue! Sometimes it's heavily coated sometimes it's clean and red. Study this out and you'll find some interference with the functional activity of the body. This means the bowels are not regular, the liver is sluggish and the blood is contaminated.

Strong cathartic pills act so destructively on the intestines as to provoke deadly sickness; this often frightens people from taking medicine when they badly need it. To the multitude of dangerous purgatives now on the market, Dr. Hamilton's Pills are a notable exception, they neither gripe, cause sickly feeling or headache, yet they cleanse and purify the entire system in one night. No other laxative acts with such mildness and certainty. Giving proper stimulus to the liver and kidneys, strengthening the stomach and tending valuable aid to digestion, it's small wonder that such marvelous results accompany Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Mr. Geo. O'Hoperty of Amherst, N. S., writes: "Last winter I worked in a lumber camp and neglected my health. I was dreadfully constipated and had a headache that fairly made me reel at times. I was sick and miserable and hadn't the slightest ambition to work or stir around. I felt heavy and dull and had a bad taste in my mouth. I sent into the city for Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which I knew were good for my condition. They fixed me up very quickly and have kept me in good condition ever since. There are other men in the camp that use Dr. Hamilton's Pills also. They say they wouldn't be without the pills for ten times their price."

Every dealer in the land has Dr. Hamilton's Pills—25c. per box or five boxes for $1.00. By mail from N. C. Pilson & Co., Hatfield, Conn., U. S. A., and Kingston, Ont.

When the conditions of confinement of the winter are over and the activities of spring are renewed, something is necessary to remove the impurities which have been accumulating in the system. On this account nearly every one takes a few doses of a

LONDON, June 7.—The assembly
this forenoon took up a motion, notice of which was given yesterday, bearing upon the exemption clauses of the Sunday bill now before parliament.
The Assembly unanimously commended the action of the government for the general excellence of the bill submitted by the Minister of Justice, but ordered a telephone to be sent to the House at once signifying the Assembly's strong disapproval of the clause which looks in the direction of exempting Jews, Adventists and possibly others from the operation of the statute which is to govern the observance of the day of rest. The motion was moved by Dr. McMullen, seconded by Hon. John Charlton, and was supported by numerous delegates. It was passed by standing vote of the Assembly.

Body of The Madrid Bomb Thrower Buried.

MADRID, June 4.—The body of Morales, the man who threw the bomb at King Alfonso and Queen Victoria last Thursday, was buried today, after a post-mortem examination.

The body was on exhibition yesterday at the Buen Tuceso Hospital, but the authorities were obliged to close the building on account of the assembling of an angry crowd. The crowd demanded that it be permitted to carry the body to the building in Mayor Street from which the bomb was thrown at the royal wedding procession and there tear it to pieces.
Many compromising documents were found in the assassin's lodgings in Barcelona. The police possesses a letter which arrived from Lisbon addressed to him. It contained many mysterious signs, which the police believe indicate a widespread international plot.

The total number of persons killed or injured by the bomb was 103.
One of the victims has become insane.
The King and Queen today reviewed 40,000 troops at Carabanchel, five miles from Madrid. The spectacle was a striking one. It was originally intended that the King and Queen should ride together to the reviewing ground, but after last Thursday's events it was decided to change this plan. Consequently, the King rode his favorite gray charger, and was accompanied by his staff. Queen Victoria rode in a carriage drawn by four black mules. Both the King and Queen were given a wildly enthusiastic reception. Employment of the display was marred by clouds of dust, which, despite the elaborate waterings of the roads and parade ground, covered everybody until they looked like millers. At the same time the sun was extremely hot. In the march past the Wad Ras Regiment, to which several of the victims of the Morales' bomb belonged, had the head of the line.

Preparing For the
St. John Exhibition

Ladies Brass Band Will Probably be Engaged—Other Matters.

Band music at the coming Exhibition will probably be furnished by the Ladies Guards Band, of Boston, one of the few high-class ladies' bands in America. The decision to secure this musical attraction for the fair was reached at a meeting of the Exhibition Association executive on Wednesday evening, and president A. O.
Skinner was authorized to complete arrangements for the band's appearance. As the band has held the fair dates open, availing word from the Association, there is no doubt that the arrangements will be completed in a day or so. The band is reported to be one well worth hearing. Among the engagements recently filled by it was that of providing music at the Boston automobile show.

The executive also dealt with a number of other matters connected with the fair. Many of these were matters of routine only. Others were of considerable public interest. The advisability of holding the proposed dog show in connection with the fair was taken up and favorably considered. Manager Milligan was instructed to look into the matter of a premium list for such a show, and if it is found that a list satisfactory to intending exhibitors and the Association alike can be provided the show will be held.
The prospects of the dog show taking place have aroused a good deal of interest throughout the province, and indeed elsewhere. Manager Milligan has received many inquiries regarding the proposed show. Another matter taken up by the executive was the offer the Empire Booking Company to give the Association the choice of sixty-five vaudeville turns for Amusement Hall. The offer will be further considered on the return of Mr. F. G.
Spencer, who has some amusement propositions to lay before the executive.

Manager Milligan and President
Skinner were appointed to confer with Mrs. R. C. Skinner, in reference to the list of premiums to be offered for exhibits of women's work at the fair. The outlook, Manager Milligan tells the Globe, is that the display of women's work will be especially good this year. The exhibit of school children's work also promises to be above the average, the manual training work exhibit especially especially so.

Applications for space at the fair
are now coming in well.

A MILLION DOLLARS
SQUANDERED.

It is estimated this sum was wasted last year by people trying to find a cure for catarrh. Fools! For sufferers to experiment when it is so well known that "Catarrh-one" is the only remedy that cures permanently. Other treatments only relieve, but Catarrh-one cures and prevents the disease from ever returning. "I had Catarrh in the worst form," writes G. F.
Fadden of R. van, Que., "I was so bad that ordinary medicine didn't even relieve but Catarrh-one cured positively." No chance of disappointment with Catarrh-one—it's certain as death to cure your Catarrh—just try it.

finest medicine in the world for women.

As a mild and gentle laxative—as a positive and speedy cure for Constipation weak and irritated kidneys and especially for "back pain in the back"—as a positive cure for headaches—and as a general tonic to build up and invigorate

In cases of irritated Ovaries, Ovarian Pain, Venereal Catarrh, Rheumatic and Sciatic Affections, Urinary Troubles,
Bleeding from the Uterus, and all those troubles pertaining to women—

Fruit-a-tives

have the most remarkable effect.
Ninety-nine cases out of a hundred of female troubles are cured by Fruita-tives. Do not let me say it—Fruita-tives—when neglected—and the patients of the doctor, which should be carried off by these important organs, are taken up by the blood, carried to the female organs and poison them, thus starting up a train of female troubles.

FRUIT-A-TIVES are made from fruit and by the most scientific method on hand. They are mild and pleasant and the system is invigorated, purity is maintained and new blood is supplied.
Now, if you are suffering from any of the above troubles, send for a box of Fruit-a-tives

LABOR QUESTION.

In a recent issue of the Advocate we treated of the labor question. Since then the state of affairs here has grown so noticeably worse that it is now at fever heat. Never before in the history of the town was there known such a crowd of strangers here, men brought hither to work on the ships and in the mills while the towns-men are allowed to walk the streets in idleness. Men with large families, and paying heavy taxes and who have been paying them for years past, sit in their houses and look out the windows at the vast crowd of immigrant passing who, like locusts in a wheat field, have come to monopolize the labor and eat down the wages. No license is exacted of these men, and like the locusts, they go away when have satisfied their appetites, leaving the citizens who have been shut out of employment penniless, and the town treasury none the richer for their coming. Very recently the natives of South Africa have been driven into open rebellion owing to the importation into that part of the British Empire, of a vast number of laborers who live on mere nothing and are thus enabled to work for a very small wage. We are fortunate that affairs have not reached this critical stage here, but unless some change for the better is forthcoming it may not be very remote from us even at the present. It is up to the Town Council to remedy this evil. This summer promised to be the banner one here and yet there were more idle men walking the streets than ever before. But there is a remedy and it should be adopted. Enforce the license law against these men and the Town Treasury at least will be benefited thereby. That done fix a standard wage for laborers as was done in Toronto not so very long since. Employers will then not be able to say "I'm not going to pay $2.50 per day when I can bring men here to work for $1.00. They will have to pay a wage that a man can live at, a small increase on starvation wages, and a wage which the state of market at the present will warrant without them being considered losers. There is no reason why the laborer should not receive at least half a chance when Capital has held power so long.

BAND CONCERTS.

It is about time that an effort was being made towards reviving the band. Warm July will be here in a few weeks and it is really too bad to allow its beautiful evenings and those of the succeeding months to go by without some sort of musical entertainment. Last year the band was about the only free amusement that we had, and that it was appreciated was shown by the large number who gathered round the band stand each night when the band was expected to make its appearance. Scores, too, in vehicles lingered near to listen to the inspiring strains of the music, the lively hacks often filled to overflowing, joined in the chariot parade. Young and old alike joined in the wish to hear "the band play" and their wishes were gratified.

It has been stated that this is to be considered as a thing of the past—that the band will not be out this summer at all for the very good reason that there is no band. This state of affairs is not what it should be in a town which can boast of being one of the most beautiful and up to date in the Maritime Provinces; but lacking a band we are at once thrown into the shade by other towns which has not one half the natural resources and no better musical talent. There is enough musical talent amongst us to have a band which would be second to none with any in the province if it had the proper organization and the people took the proper interest in it. But our bands seemed to be doomed to disunion. Our people do not seem to take the same interest in that which in other towns is prized so highly. Disunion and discord, first amongst creeds and classes and then having done its work, then internal disorders in the sub-divisions have left us with nothing but a church bell to beat a funeral march. This state of affairs might easily be remedied by the organization of a Citizen's Band. The remnants of the C. M. B. A. and Orange bands might well be brought together and under a competent leader, such as it should be very little difficulty in procuring around here, could be made a credit to the town and its people, and the long summer evenings might then be glorified by the blast of the bugle and the roll of the drum. At any rate, let us have music for the summer or else sell the band stand.

MARKET DAYS RATES ON I. C. R.

A new departure on the I. C. R. looking towards the encouragement of market day trips is contemplated and will go into effect within a fortnight or so, or as soon as the tickets can be prepared and issued. There will be issued what is called a second class market ticket. These tickets will only be issued on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday of each week and good to return on the same or following day; but in the case of Saturday good to return on that day or on Monday.

The tickets will only be issued from points within a specified radius for each market town to outside points within radius. The market day rate for second class tickets will be two second class fares less twenty five per cent.

For the purposes of this concession the I. C. R. recognizes as market towns the following places within the Maritime provinces:—Campbellton, Newcastle, Chatham, Bathurst, Fredericton, Moncton, Amherst, Truro, Pictou, New Glasgow, Antigonish and Sydney. The market day rate into these towns on the days specified will cover a radius of 50 miles in either direction includes the entire Point du Chene branch; inclusive of Sackville and intervening points of the Halifax division; inclusive of Harcourt on the northern division and inclusive of Penobscot on the St. John branch. Moncton benefits in radius by being the centre of three divisions and a branch line.

St. John and Halifax being terminal points have a radius of 130 miles allotted to them; and the market tickets are issued every day into those points. The effect of this extended radius is to make Amherst a common point of issue into the two cities, and its people may choose whether they will market in St. John or Halifax. The market tickets are not good for stop over and can only be used for a continuous journey to the point of destination.—Transcript.

ALCOHOL AS A FUEL.

Gasoline is rising steadily in price, and that price is and promises to be very much higher in Canada than in the United States. The immense consumption of the fluid for fuel in motors puts up the price. The most available substitute for it is alcohol, which can be made of almost anything at a very small cost, but the Government tax shuts it out. The United States Congress has removed the tax on alcohol that has been denatured, or rendered unfit to drink, and a hundred branches of manufacturers will be stimulated by this change in the law.

A New Brunswick member of Parliament was recently asked to move in this matter at Ottawa, but he has not done so. He has probably asked the Government if it is inclined to carry out this reform and been answered in the negative; so he keeps his mouth shut and says nothing, being unwilling to advocate anything that the Government is not willing to grant. This is a degrading position for a public man to place himself in, but it is precisely the position that most of the Government supporters hold. A self respecting man with convictions had better be a dog, and bay at the moon than a member of Parliament without the courage to open his mouth before getting permission from the Government to do so.—World

JAPAN SEEKS A RELIGION.

There is now sitting at Tokio a somewhat peculiar kind of a religious congress or commission. The commission was constituted by the Mikado of Japan for the purpose of searching for the "true religion." It originated some years ago, but its proceedings were superseded or interrupted by the war with Russia. Peace being restored, the work can go on. Subsidiary to the main question is the finding of a religion best adapted to become the state religion of Japan. The despatches say that all the leading religious creeds of the world will be represented in some fashion. The Sultan of Turkey, in his capacity as the head of the Moslems, has delegated three learned followers of orthodox Mohammedanism to be present. An interesting delegate will be the Englishman Mr. A. B. Thomson, at one time an active Christian representative of some of the societies which do certain work in evangelism, who afterwards became an energetic advocate of Islamism in India. The hope may be reasonably ventured that the commission will not invent a new religion.

JUNE WEDDING

Bathurst, N. B. June 5.—A very fashionable wedding took place here last evening at Elmwood, the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Norman Desbriay, when their eldest daughter, Miss Annie Swayne, one of Bathurst's most popular young ladies, was united in marriage to Frank W. Walker, C. F. of Montreal Rev. James Wheeler, pastor of St. Luke's Church, Bathurst, assisted by Rev. Lestock Desbriay, rector of St. Agatha's, uncle of the bride officiated. The ceremony was performed in the spacious drawing room under a large arch of greenery erected for the occasion and banked with potted plants. The bride entered the room on the arm of her father, preceded by her bridesmaid, Miss Isabelle Desbriay, and flower girl, Miss Winnifred Fowler of Sussex. The bride's gown was of white silk crepe, made in princess style, with bolero of real lace worn with veil and orange blossoms. The bridesmaid's dress was of white point d'esprit over silk mull with bouquet of marmalade roses. The little flower maid wore a dainty pink frock of accordion pleated silk, and carried a sheaf of white roses. The groom's gift to his bride was a gold watch and pearl chain, with pearl brooch and ring to the bride and flower maid, and silver cigarette case to his groomsmen, Arthur Walker of Montreal. Among the guests from other places were H. W. Walker, general auditor of the Grand Trunk railway Montreal and Mrs. Walker of Montreal father and mother of the groom; Mrs. Wilton, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. George Fowler of Sussex. The bridal party left in the Grand Trunk private car "Manfield" for Montreal, attached to the Maritime express, this morning.

Death of Miss Snowball.

The death occurred at Government House, Fredericton, Tuesday morning of Miss Annie Hutton Snowball, the youngest daughter of the Lieutenant Governor and Mr. Snowball, after a lingering illness of consumption, contracted while in Switzerland at school.

While her death does not come altogether unexpectedly, it comes nevertheless as a severe blow to the family, as she was thought to have been improving slightly, and is especially owing to her father being in Ontario on a business trip and unable to get home before his daughter passed away. Miss Snowball, who was 21 years old, had received most careful attention for some time past and spent some months at Saratoga Lake, New York, in search of better health, but without avail.

Besides her parents, deceased is survived by two brothers, Mr. W. B. Snowball, and Mr. R. A. Snowball, of Chatham, and three sisters, Misses Frances, Laura and Lillian, at home.

The most sincere sympathy of the entire community is felt for the bereaved family. The Snowball Co's mill was shut down all day Thursday, and most of the men attended the funeral. There was a very long procession of teams (about 100) and pedestrians. There were services at Wellington Villa, conducted by Rev. James Strothard, Rev. D. Henderson and Rev. J. M. McLean, part of St. Luke's choir singing appropriate hymns. The casket was covered with flowers and the hearse was followed by a barouche full of floral offerings. Among them was a wreath from the staff of the Snowball dry goods store and an anchor from the clerks in the office. The pallbearers were Col. McKenzie and Messrs. Geo. E. Fisher, Polman Winslow, Jos. Tweedie, Alex. Thompson (Fredericton) and Fred Black (Sackville). Mr. John McDonald was the undertaker in charge. A large number of prominent gentlemen from Newcastle, Nelson and Derby were in attendance.—World.

NO JAPANESE IN NAVY.

Secretary Bonaparte Finds They are too Inquisitive.—One Caught Making Plans.

New York, June 7.—All Japanese are to be excluded from the American navy on July 1st unless they produce citizenship papers or a signed declaration that they intend to take out the same. In the future no Japanese will be allowed in the navy unless he renounces the Mikado in favor of the Stars and Stripes. Orders to drop the names of all alien Japanese from the papers of every warship in this country have been issued by Secretary of the Navy Bonaparte. He further directs that the places of Japanese who have been employed as stewards and servants are to be filled by American negroes.

Officers of the navy yard in Brooklyn say that it has been discovered that the Japanese government has been able through its subjects on board American ships to learn altogether too much about the Yankee service, not only as to the personnel, but also as to plans for future defence. Hence Secretary Bonaparte's order.

The story is told by officers of the American battleships now at anchor in the North River that less than a month ago a midshipman discovered a Japanese steward making plans of the business section of the turrets of one of the latest types of warships. His personal effects were searched by order of the commander of the ship. It was discovered that he had been working for weeks on plans of the ship, and that he was a remarkably fine draughtsman. The matter was reported to Washington, and was doubtless one of the things which caused the order issued against Japanese.

Matter up Before Government Last Week and Steps Taken.

London, June 9.—John Burns, President of the Local Government Board, has requested the Foreign office to communicate with the State department at Washington and ascertain to what extent reliance can be placed on the system of meat inspection undertaken by the bureau of industry. His announcement that he had taken this action was in reply to a question put in the House of Commons today by William Field, nationalist member of the St. Patrick's Division of Dublin, and president of the Irish cattle traders and stock owners' association. Mr. Burns added that he had ascertained that a quantity of boneless beef and pork is imported into this country from America and converted into sausages, which are sold as English produce. He admitted that there were serious difficulties in the way of efficient British inspection of some of these imported foods, but said the local government board had taken action to see that the local authorities exercised their powers to the full extent.

OBITUARY.

MRS. NEIL GORDON.

It is with sorrow that we record the death of Mrs. Neil Gordon who passed peacefully to her rest May the 27th at her late residence, Strathadam. She was born in Douglastown July 22nd 1823, and was in the 83rd year of her age. She was the oldest of a family of thirteen only two of whom survive her. In 1853, she married Mr. Neil Gordon, six children were born to them, all of whom are living. She was a devoted wife and mother and a woman of sterling christian character. She died as she lived, trusting in her Saviour. The spirit of faithfulness, without which all other virtues are valueless was one of the most striking features of her character. She was one of the oldest members of St. James' church, Newcastle, having become a member in 1847, and was a constant attendant until prevented by failing health. She will be greatly missed in the home circle, more especially by her aged partner, but we know their loss is her gain, and that she has gone to be with Jesus whom she faithfully served and loved even from childhood.

MISS MARGARET JOHNSTONE.

It is with the deepest sorrow that we record the death of her only surviving sister Miss Margaret Johnstone, who was called to see her when she was taken so suddenly ill; and was at her bedside when she died. She took ill on Tuesday 29th following Mrs. Gordon's death, and passed away Thursday June 7th. She was an exemplary christian loved and respected by all who knew her. Ever thoughtful of others, she will be greatly missed in the home, and by her large circle of friends.

She took a great interest in everything pertaining to that which was good and will be greatly missed in the church in which she was an active member. We tender our heartfelt sympathy to all the sorrowing friends.

METHODIST CHURCH ANNUAL REPORT.

Rev. H. Johnston Read Report of Years Work at Congregational Meeting.

A largely attended congregational meeting of the members and adherents of the Newcastle Methodist church was held in the Sunday school room last Wednesday evening. After the usual devotional service, Rev. H. Johnston, who is severing his connection with this congregation read a report of the work of the past year and gave a short review of the three years in which he acted as pastor. The reports showed a marked increase in both the number of members and the finances of the church. The past year was an exceptionally good one financially and a substantial decrease has been made in the church debt. After the business was transacted refreshments were served and a pleasant social hour spent.

THE REVENUE STILL INCREASING

The returns show that during the eleven months the customs collections increased $1,289,000 over 1905, the excise collections, $1,385,000; the post office receipts, $896,000, and the receipts from public works and railways, $679,000.

By H. B. MARRIOTT WATSON

CHAPTER I.

It was in August of the year 188— that I turned the corner, as it were, into the strange history I am now to relate. The Welsh marches had been entirely unknown to me until at a point in an idle tour of the west of England I fell upon the little town of Raymond and brought up at 7 in the evening at the Swan hostelry that occupies a corner of the irregular triangle constituting the market place. The country in that part is full of swelling hills and valleys, soft and exhilarating of air and clothed with a great verdure of wood. The great Gwent, as the forest across the little river Ray is called in the countryside, rolls westward across the country, broken by tracts of fertile fields lying under grain and pasture, and descends upon the black hills of the mining district beyond. At Raymond, which stands upon the higher side of the river, we are yet in England proper and upon the margin of a more open country. The town itself is small and neat and wears its air of respectable antiquity very handsomely.

The inn, which was itself among the most venerable buildings in the small town, was comfortably served by a very brisk landlord of middle age. It had kept, so to speak, a precarious continuity with antiquity and in the main scheme had changed but little during the 300 years which had passed since its erection.

The hostelry was much too large for its present uses, but for all that there was no air of neglect in the inhabited chambers. My own rooms were marked by homely comfort, and I was waited upon like a prince of the blood. After a rude and wholesome country dinner I sought distraction in the taproom with my pipe and a heterogeneous company of townsfolk. The landlord was in some kind a president at this symposium, which consisted for the main part of a few of the smaller shopkeepers. There was Mr. Jones, for example, whose name I had noticed upon a shop front as I rode through the High street. This man fixed upon me early in the evening, and poured his confidence into my ear. He was a lay merchant, and he had no dearer ambition than to establish his business in Bristol. He found Raymond too mean for his aspiring temper, and the Mecca of his prayers was Bristol. I confess that I found him something of a bore, and was glad to exchange commonplaces with my other neighbor. The landlord himself kept his seat before the long table, smoking his long pipe with the peace of a man whose business is ended for the day, and now and then discharging a glance in my direction. He was, I discovered, a traveled man for those parts, and had the reputation of a smart fellow. Indeed, he compared well with the duller rustics who surrounded him. The placid air of the taproom was in some ways little more diverting than the solitude of my chamber, but that was soon to pass. Presently there came a great noise, followed by a heavy tramp of feet approaching from the outer bar, and I started a tall young fellow, with his hat upon one side, and a jaunty air of one who knows his own worth and despises his neighbors.

"Come in," says the innkeeper, very friendly, but with a certain air of constraint. "Plenty of room, Mr. Montgomery, sir, and a good evening to you."

"Oh, hang your ceremonies," says the newcomer, but with no touch of ill humor, "and give your best attention to my order, Wendover!" And, clapping his hat more firmly on his head, he rapped loudly upon the table.

He drank the glass of whisky which the barman served and then fell into a seat and stared without any trepidation, but rather with a savage air of curiosity, at myself. He was of a ruddy color and quite young, and something in his bearing rather than in his dress marked him out from the rest of the company. But above all his great size and muscular appearance were noticeable.

"Who is that?" I asked as soon as Montgomery's eyes had wandered from me. "He's no better than he should be," my neighbor answered. "For all his grand airs, he's but little better than a pauper. And that's where your blood comes in the end."

The landlord was close by me, noting my interrogation with a busy eye, leaned forward and supplemented this disparaging information in a whisper. "One of the best families in the Gwent, sir," he murmured, "though his name is not there in a noble's name."

"Well, Mr. Jones," said he, "and how's hay?"

"How's crops, my young gentleman?" says Jones in his surly fashion. "Crops," said Montgomery in a bawl, "crops is as they should be—seasonable. Here's to crops, gentlemen, and also to hay," and he fell into his chair laughing abominably.

I could not say if this was part of an elaborate jest, conceived by a maudlin brain, or whether he had really been taken with an unreasonable fit of anger; but, whether of accident or of purpose, he filled up his glass forward between his fingers, and the dregs flew out and splattered the hay merchant's face.

"Gentlemen!" cried the landlord, in some alarm. Montgomery stood, his red face somewhat vacant, and grinning broadly, while his sallow faced victim, who had got upon his feet, gesticulated and stuttered under his nose with a show of passion that was not quite English, and at this moment, when it seemed as if some retaliation was to be expected and a fracas precipitated, an impulse took me, and I myself intervened.

"I think, sir," said I, addressing Montgomery, "you will admit that you have used this worthy gentleman very ill, and if I were you, sir, with your youth and spirit at my back, I would ask his pardon at once."

On that he stared at me for some seconds, and then, plumping the empty glass on the table, he broke into a sheepish laugh.

"All right," he said, "very sorry. I beg his pardon," and, muttering some indistinct apologies he resumed his seat, sitting somewhat silent for a good time afterward.

But that was my introduction to the lad, an introduction none too favorable, of which he began at once to make use, for he crept close to me, moving from chair to chair, when a chance served him, and, being emboldened by the liquor he had drunk, struck up a lively conversation with me. In the end he was exceedingly merry, and was shaking me heartily by the hand, and invited me to drive out to his farm in the Gwent, a good deal of an unusual warmth and reverence, but I managed at last to make my escape, and that without giving him offense.

It was yet early, but the taproom had lost its humors for me, and I was for bed. In my room I spent an agreeable hour, idly considering my guide-books and determining a date for my return to town. Upon the map I made out the site of Ivor castle, of which there had been talk, also of Montgomery's farm, which he had described to me. They both lay in the Gwent, at that great reach of forest in the marches is called.

CHAPTER II.

RAIN had fallen in the night, and a sweet softness of air, commingled with the summer air when I opened my door and looked forth upon the courtyard. The landlord recently deprecated the events of the previous evening, offering, as it might be to a fastidious guest, an apology for a headstrong young scapegrace.

"They're not like us of the eastern countries, sir," says he. "They're a bit Welsh hereabout. It's a contamination, to my way of thinking. But, there, all sorts of blood go to make a nation, and that's the truth."

But he volunteered a few additional particulars about Montgomery.

"Not a bad sort, sir, at heart, but he's running to seed here. He's taken a main fancy to you. That I could spy at a look. But it's a poor prospect for him, with land dwindling away to nothing, and Llanthony is a shabby house for a young gentleman as he should be."

Llanthony, it appears, was the name of Montgomery's paternal estate in the Gwent. And, in fact, it was for this Gwent that I was bound this morning. The prospect of those rolling hills attracted me with some force. I had an appetite for the wilderness of that back country, unscarred, as I learned, by the track of any railway. It was in a way virgin, at the least a property private from the world. As I struck across the Ray and directed my horse toward the long red slope of the ascent I looked back upon the little town and discovered it wrapped in mountain humors.

Llanthony, according to my host, lay at the back of the great hill, some four miles from Raymond, but as the estate was not my particular aim, and, as it had been, I had no one to guide me, I roamed indefinitely through byways over a circuit of the upper Gwent and finally drew up in the village of Llanellan about the hour of lunch. This village lay a mile or so from the more open districts of the Gwent and within the privy borders of the great forest itself. It would have been easy to throw the reins upon the horse's neck and to wander, lost in the abysses of that wilderness, for the villages were scattered at a great distance and the habitations of the settlers were at long intervals. It was somewhere about 5 in the afternoon, and as I rode down into a spacious valley a few miles from Llanellan, that the monotony of this desultory journey was broken by an event of some moment.

A pretty brook rippled through the wood and was crossed upon a rude bridge. As it chanced, my horse fell suddenly lame, and I had dismounted on the farther edge of the stream to examine his hoof when I heard sounds as of a struggle in the close brake to my left, and upon that a shrill shout as of one crying for assistance. Leaving the bay without further ado, for he was of mild mettle, I jumped into the copse and ran toward the noises, shouting as I went to encourage the wayfarer who was calling for aid.

The cries had already ceased, but a crackling and brushing in the undergrowth still directed me, and, bursting

through the furze and brier, I came out very suddenly upon the verge of the little brook and almost fell over the form of a man who lay doubled upon the earth. As I stumbled and shifted to regain my balance I had a glimpse of a lithe, lean bodied fellow vanishing precipitately into the copse. But obviously it was to the victim that I must first turn my mind rather than to any fugitive assailant. He was a man, as I guessed, of some sixty years or more, very bald of the head and under the middle stature. Across his white and shining forehead was a streak of blood, which drew from me an exclamation as I helped him to his feet.

"It is not mine," said he, with a complacent smile. "I go better prepared than my years would suggest."

"No bones broken?" I inquired. He shook his head, leaning upon my arm and breathing painfully.

"A bruise or two, and no wind in my belly—no more. I was a fool to have forgotten my pistol."

The words recalled me to the thought of the runaway, to whom I attributed this scurvy trick upon an old gentleman.

"What was the cause?" I asked. "Some highway thief?"

"Hardly that," he remarked thoughtfully, and pulling forth an ancient snuffbox with deliberation. "No, I could scarcely describe him as that."

I made a motion to withdraw, recollecting hastily that it was my duty to ascertain some tidings of the ruffian, but the old gentleman, observing my intention, put his hand upon my shoulder.

"I would not worry," said he suavely. "It is of small consequence as it happens. Now, had you come up a moment later," he continued, regarding me with a faint smile, "I could hardly have put a limit on this business, but as it is—"

"Surely," I broke in shortly, "you will have the brute arrested if you can recognize him again?"

"Recognize him?" murmured the old gentleman, snuffing gently and with an air of consideration from his fingers. "Yes, I dare say I should know him, but I am sure you will allow me to manage this affair my own way. I have stood the racket, you know, though I heartily acknowledge you have acquired a certain claim to attention. It is very good of you," he said politely, and then, "Yes, I think I should know him again—if we met—which is of course extremely improbable," he concluded, with a twinkle in his eyes.

Now, the self-possession of this old fellow, with his air of imperturbable courage, puzzled me hugely and in a manner very disconcerting. He had taken the outrage, which had evidently been committed upon his person, with such mildness, even with amiability. I could scarce credit my senses to see him discoursing there, with his snuff between his fingers, so pleasantly and broadly, of the event. He seemed quite unruffled, though his body still panted with the efforts of his struggle.

"Is your watch safe? I suppose it was robbery?" I said, feeling somehow rather mean and cast down by the unexpected situation.

"Thank you, quite safe," he replied, without troubling to ascertain. "Yes, quite safe. Certainly I must suppose it to have been robbery—yes, robbery, no doubt."

His air was so abstracted that I took leave to doubt his sanity; but, after all, it was no business of mine if he was foolishly disposed to mercy, and one needs but little imagination to conceive of a dozen deep reasons for an assault save the plain motive of theft. He turned to me presently as I was upon the point of withdrawing.

"I am at a loss to know," said he, laboring over his words and speaking very deliberately, "what devil of folly pursues men that they will hazard all on a piece of carelessness, a wanton whim or just mere indifference or idleness. I cannot say"—He paused as we emerged upon the road. "This must be your horse, then, a good, serviceable animal, that would have warmed my heart thirty years since. I cannot say," he resumed, clutching gently at my arm, "that my adventure today was due to any other cause than that of mere carelessness." He paused again, surveying my horse with apparent interest.

"In the first place, I should not have been so far from home; secondly, I should not have been with out my revolver; thirdly, I should have used my stick harder when I got home, a concurrence of negligences which made my fate almost a certainty but for your arrival," he added as a polite afterthought, squeezing my arm.

"What does your physician say?" I asked, answering the deep, steady gaze of his eyes.

"I may eat anything I choose except every thing I like."

How's crops, my young gentleman?" says Jones in his surly fashion. "Crops," said Montgomery in a bawl, "crops is as they should be—seasonable. Here's to crops, gentlemen, and also to hay," and he fell into his chair laughing abominably.

I could not say if this was part of an elaborate jest, conceived by a maudlin brain, or whether he had really been taken with an unreasonable fit of anger; but, whether of accident or of purpose, he filled up his glass forward between his fingers, and the dregs flew out and splattered the hay merchant's face.

"Gentlemen!" cried the landlord, in some alarm. Montgomery stood, his red face somewhat vacant, and grinning broadly, while his sallow faced victim, who had got upon his feet, gesticulated and stuttered under his nose with a show of passion that was not quite English, and at this moment, when it seemed as if some retaliation was to be expected and a fracas precipitated, an impulse took me, and I myself intervened.

"I think, sir," said I, addressing Montgomery, "you will admit that you have used this worthy gentleman very ill, and if I were you, sir, with your youth and spirit at my back, I would ask his pardon at once."

On that he stared at me for some seconds, and then, plumping the empty glass on the table, he broke into a sheepish laugh.

"All right," he said, "very sorry. I beg his pardon," and, muttering some indistinct apologies he resumed his seat, sitting somewhat silent for a good time afterward.

But that was my introduction to the lad, an introduction none too favorable, of which he began at once to make use, for he crept close to me, moving from chair to chair, when a chance served him, and, being emboldened by the liquor he had drunk, struck up a lively conversation with me. In the end he was exceedingly merry, and was shaking me heartily by the hand, and invited me to drive out to his farm in the Gwent, a good deal of an unusual warmth and reverence, but I managed at last to make my escape, and that without giving him offense.

It was yet early, but the taproom had lost its humors for me, and I was for bed. In my room I spent an agreeable hour, idly considering my guide-books and determining a date for my return to town. Upon the map I made out the site of Ivor castle, of which there had been talk, also of Montgomery's farm, which he had described to me. They both lay in the Gwent, at that great reach of forest in the marches is called.

CHAPTER II.

RAIN had fallen in the night, and a sweet softness of air, commingled with the summer air when I opened my door and looked forth upon the courtyard. The landlord recently deprecated the events of the previous evening, offering, as it might be to a fastidious guest, an apology for a headstrong young scapegrace.

"They're not like us of the eastern countries, sir," says he. "They're a bit Welsh hereabout. It's a contamination, to my way of thinking. But, there, all sorts of blood go to make a nation, and that's the truth."

But he volunteered a few additional particulars about Montgomery.

"Not a bad sort, sir, at heart, but he's running to seed here. He's taken a main fancy to you. That I could spy at a look. But it's a poor prospect for him, with land dwindling away to nothing, and Llanthony is a shabby house for a young gentleman as he should be."

Llanthony, it appears, was the name of Montgomery's paternal estate in the Gwent. And, in fact, it was for this Gwent that I was bound this morning. The prospect of those rolling hills attracted me with some force. I had an appetite for the wilderness of that back country, unscarred, as I learned, by the track of any railway. It was in a way virgin, at the least a property private from the world. As I struck across the Ray and directed my horse toward the long red slope of the ascent I looked back upon the little town and discovered it wrapped in mountain humors.

Llanthony, according to my host, lay at the back of the great hill, some four miles from Raymond, but as the estate was not my particular aim, and, as it had been, I had no one to guide me, I roamed indefinitely through byways over a circuit of the upper Gwent and finally drew up in the village of Llanellan about the hour of lunch. This village lay a mile or so from the more open districts of the Gwent and within the privy borders of the great forest itself. It would have been easy to throw the reins upon the horse's neck and to wander, lost in the abysses of that wilderness, for the villages were scattered at a great distance and the habitations of the settlers were at long intervals. It was somewhere about 5 in the afternoon, and as I rode down into a spacious valley a few miles from Llanellan, that the monotony of this desultory journey was broken by an event of some moment.

A pretty brook rippled through the wood and was crossed upon a rude bridge. As it chanced, my horse fell suddenly lame, and I had dismounted on the farther edge of the stream to examine his hoof when I heard sounds as of a struggle in the close brake to my left, and upon that a shrill shout as of one crying for assistance. Leaving the bay without further ado, for he was of mild mettle, I jumped into the copse and ran toward the noises, shouting as I went to encourage the wayfarer who was calling for aid.

The cries had already ceased, but a crackling and brushing in the undergrowth still directed me, and, bursting

through the furze and brier, I came out very suddenly upon the verge of the little brook and almost fell over the form of a man who lay doubled upon the earth. A local newspaper is absolutely necessary to any community. It is the home paper that keeps the people of the community in touch with each other by giving them all the news of their own neighborhood and country. For that alone they are of value and worth far more than the small subscription price. They keep the local pride and progressive spirit aroused and in various ways are worth far more to a community than a community ever spends on them.

Onlooker, in the New Freeman, handed out an interesting lot of rumors. One is that there will be political picnics and probably a provincial election before next meeting of the legislature. Another is that Hon. Mr. Tweedie may go to the senate, or the supreme court bench or the governorship, and that Hon. Dr. Pugsley may become solicitor for the G. T. P. at $25,000 per year, and Hon. C. N. Robinson will become leader of the provincial government. Onlooker is nothing if not interesting in his prognostications.

A pretty bit of comedy was witnessed in one of the central streets of our town one evening recently. The setting was the doorstep of a residence. The light was furnished by the electric light from the hall, the door being wide open. The actors were the daughter of the house and a young man about town. The young people were parting. The little screams and giggles of the young lady, accompanied by such ejaculatory remarks as 'Don't! Stop! You horrid thing! Oh! etc.', attracted the attention of the passers-by on the opposite side, who, being in shadow, stopped to see the end of the little comedy. The young man apparently accomplished his desire and went home rejoicing, while the lady went in to hide her blushes in the seclusion of her room. Moral: Don't leave the door open when you say a favor.
