Employes Excursion Train Collides With a Freight Near Salem, Michigan.

TRAINS MEET ON PERFECTLY LEVEL BIT OF TRACK

Scores of Women and Children, Bent on Holiday at Detroit, Crushed to Death or Fatally Maimed-Superintendent Says Employe Disobeyed Orders.

Salem, Mich., July 20 .- A Pere Marquette excursion train, bound from Iona to Detroit, was wrecked about 10 o'clock this morning two miles east of here. It is reported that between thirty and forty persons were killed.

Detroit, July 20 .- A telephone report from the scene of the wreck at 11 o'clock, states that from fifteen to twenty people are dead, and a great many injured. There were eleven coaches in the train, which collided headon with a freight.

A special train of doctors and nurses has just left for the scene of the Detroit, July 20.-General Counsel Stevens of the Pere Marquette, said

"All that we know about the wreck at Salem is that a local freight train collided there at about 10 o'clock with an excursion train from long, bearing employes from the shops to Detroit for their annual excursion. We hear it is a very bad wreck, and that is absolutely all we know about it."

Salem, Mich., July 20 .- At noon there had been twenty bodies taken from the wreck, and there were probably fifteen more.

Five cars of the eleven, of which the train was made up escaped destruction. There are scores of injured.

There were about 800 people on the train.

Salem, Mich., July 20 .- From 30 to 40 persons were killed and about 100 more injured today, when a Pere Marquette express, of eleven coaches from Ionia, carrying the families of the company's shop workmen there on their annual excursion to Detroit, collided with a westbound freight train two miles east of this village at Washburn crossing. At 12 o'clock, 22 bodies had been taken from the wreckage, and there were many more known to General Superintendent Truman of the Pere Marquette says that the responsibility for the wreck rests with some employ who failed to obey or-There were 800 passengers crowded in the eleven coaches of the train, many of them women and children, all bound for a holiday in Detroit. They left their homes in Ionia at 6 o'clock this morning. The wreck occurred on a perfectly straight, level piece of track. The heavy freight and passenger trains came together with great force, and six of the eleven

When the uninjured passengers recovered from the shock and crawled from the wreckage, they at once began extricating the dead and injured. Messengers were rushed to this village and to Plymouth and all the docters from this place and neighboring villages were hurried to the scene. Farmers who heard the crash came to the rescue also.

A Premonition of Danger

Very strange indeed is the story told by Miss Lena Hance, of 400 St. James street, who was employed as stenographer at Reid's Crystal Hall, and who was caught in the wreck, but escaped serious injury.

"There was a cloud hanging over me all Tuesday morning," said Miss Hance today.

"At noon when I'was walking home to lunch, I was depressed and when I started for the office again. I was saddened over something I knew not what.

"As I came through the park on my way downtown. I was so impressed that something terrible was going to happen that I prayed for strength to bear I know I was warned, but I did not see my danger. But my escape proves that my prayers were heard."

BY TRAIN TO CUBA.

Uncle Sam may not exactly have in contemplation the hoisting of the stars and stripes over Cuba, but he is determined to have and to hold the lion's share of the trade of that island, if the shortening of the time distance between the two countries can do it. A great railroad project is mooted, which, when carried out, will make it possible for a person to board a train in a gigantic one, the cost will be enor- not destroy them. mous, and there are natural difficulties to overcome which seem insurmountable; but the men at the back of the Florida East Coast Railway, as the road will be known, believe that not by good luck than good management, only is it feasible, but that it will and the failure to take advantage of prove remunerative to the promoters, the present unique opportunity to in-For seventy miles the railway to Key stall a high-pressure service might be West will be over concrete arches or soon bitterly regretted. embankments where now are sheets of water, and for fifty miles the road will run through swamps or small islands. With Cuba a few hours distant, the promoters look for a tightening of the bond between the island and the republic. It is in hours rather than in miles that the distance between Key West and Havana is to be reckoned, and this distance will be still further reduced by the adoption of turbine exhibition of partizanship, indeed! steamships. In general, transportation by water costs less than by rail, but time is money, and so large has United States' trade with Capa become that the hours saved will more than compensate for the higher rate charged, if, indeed, it is higher. An important saving will be effected, if the ferry scheme proves successful, through the avoidance of charges for unloading and reloading. It is well known that in trade between America and Europe, on certain classes of freight the bulk of the cost is incurred in getting the goods from the car to the boat, and this is probably true of trade between the United States and Cuba. The enterprise is a stupendous one, but in this age there seems to be no limit to what money and engineering skill can accomplish

Words Appear in Schedule to Bill Passed by the Lords.

London, July 19.—The British North America bill has passed the House of ords. It has been amended by the addition of a schedule which includes all the resolutions of the Ottawa conference. The words "final and unalterable" find a place in this schedule, but not in the act itself. The new act will be law as from July 1.

The Chronicle (Liberal) has a special article on the all-red route, showing the pledges of the British ministers, and advantages of the scheme compared with the preference proposals of the tariff reformers, its soundness from a free trade point of view and the danger of defection in carrying out the Government's policy. The Chronicle concludes: "We can imagine nothing more damaging to the good faith and good name of the Liberal Government, and few things more unfortunate for the maintenance of inter-imperial relations on a good footing than the repudiation of pledges seriously given 4158-A PRACTICAL FROCK.

The small boy who has not yet seached the age of knickers wears onepiece frocks of great simplicity, and not alone for him is the dress shown suitable but for his sister also. The only elaboration consists of two box pleats front and back, which are stitched to waist depth and girdled with a belt of the material or leather. The broad, becoming collar of sailor style, may be omitted if not desired though it adds greatly to the attractiveness of the whole. As suggested in the sketch, this and the belt may be of a contrasting material. Such a freck will endure a vast amount of wear and fulfills every demand upon garments of this kind, Bloomers or knickers may be worn with it, and the small girl wears these too. Madras is a favorite for this style of dress. while chambray and crash are also much used. The medium size calls for 11/2 yards of 44-inch material. 4158-1, 2, 3, 4 years.

SUNFIELD TELLS STARTLING STORY

Hamilton Pole Accused of Murder Says Dead Man's Wife Shot.

Hamilton, Ont., July 19. - Jacob here with the Korean emperor, the charge of murdering Andrew Rodzyk a coroner's jury having last night returned a verdict connecting him with the shooting, made a rather startling he was being taken back to the jail after the inquest. He acuesed Mrs.Rodzvk of having done the shooting. His story was that on the afternoon of the shooting Mrs. Rodzyk doped her distributed, giving rise to a forlorn husband and himself, and then shot that someone else did the shooting. She then shot herself through the right breast, but held the gun in such a position that there was no danger of her being fatally wounded. Sunfield says that he was in such a dazed condition that he cannot remember clearly all that happened, but he thinks that the woman put the gun into his pocket, and Broglie, whose marriage a year ago in then ran out of the house and called Chicago with Miss Estelle Alexander, for assistance. The small boy who has not reached the age of knickers wears onepiece frocks of great simplicity, and not alone for him is the dress shown suitable but for his sister also. The only elaboration consists of two box pleats front and back, which are stitched to waist depth and girdled with a belt of the material or leather The broad, becoming collar of sailor style, may be omitted if not desired. though it adds greatly to the attractiveness of the whole. As suggested in the sketch, this and the belt may be of a contrasting material. Such a freck will endure a vast amount of wear and fulfills every demand upon garments of this kind, Bloomers or knickers may be worn with it, and the small girl wears these too. Madras is a favorite for this style of dress. while chambray and crash are also much used. The medium size calls for 11/2 yards of 44-inch material. 4158-1, 2, 3, 4 years.

Hamilton Pole Accused of Murder Says Dead Man's Wife Shot.

Hamilton, Ont., July 19. - Jacob a coroner's jury having last night returned a verdict connecting him with thereafter the relations between Japan statement to Constable Brennan when he was being taken back to the jail after the inquest. He acuesed Mrs.Rodzyk of having done the shooting. His story was that on the afternoon of husband and himself and then shot Rodzyk in order to make it appear that someone else did the shooting. She then shot herself through the right breast, but held the gun in such a position that there was no danger of her being fatally wounded. Sunfield says that he was in such a dazed condition that he cannot remember clearly all that happened but he thinks that the woman put the gun into his pocket, and Broglie, whose marriage a year ago in then ran out of the house and called Chicago with Miss Estelle Alexander, for assistance. He does not deny that an American, was yesterday declared the gun belonged to him, but says that the members of the provincial board of follows: bealth visited the proposed hospital elte shown in plan submitted, as suitable upon which to erect an isolation hospital, as provided for in section 53, chapter 23, of Edward VII.

Toronto, July 17, 1907. Dear Sir,-On motion of Dr. Robinwrite as follows:

We are of the opinion the site is mitable, provided that a portion of Waterloo street, extending 66 feet west of the limit of the lot shown in the said dan submitted, and being the easterly half of Waterloo street, from Ottaway In said grounds for the use of said yours sincerely, hospital, and constituting part of said site, and provided that said site is in-general public, and communication betwen inmates and employes of the general hospital and isolation hospital buildings, and that the inclosure shall extend to the river bank immediately south of the hospital site, and the said isolation hospital be not placed nearer than 30 feet from the line of adjacent street on the westerly limit.

We are further of the opinion that same will afford ample space required to protect the public against possible danger of infection from the same when properly inclosed and operated.

This site includes a part of the hos-

Heiress, Finds Snag in Path.

Chicago, July 19.-Without denying the bald fact that some sort of an engagement exists, relatives of Miss Elsie Ellwood, daughter of W. S. Ellwood, of De Kalb, yesterday determined that she should not become the bride of Said Kalil Haick, the Syrian dragoman who wooed her in the desert, followed her to New York, and now claims her for his bride.

While Miss Ellwood's relatives, headed by Col. Isaac Ellwood, her grandfather, whose millions will back their flight, are organizing to crush the hopes of Said Kalil, that hopeful young Syrian is in New York busying himself with preparations for the wedding, which he still is positive will take place according to schedule next Wednesday.

All the wealth of Col. Isaac Ellwood, capitalist, Wall street factor, and one of the organizers of the steel trust, is ready for use in this great family emergency. The ambition of Said Kalii, who, Miss Ellwood's relatives declares, is nothing but a stableman, will be thwarted if it is found necessary to shanghat him and ship him back to his wild desert home.

This much was gathered yesterday from talks with such members of the family as would allow themselves to be seen or interviewed. As to the truth of the love affair between Miss Ellwood and Said Haick, there was nothing said. Not even a denial was forthcoming. The Ellwood mansion on the hilltop remained silent all day except for the constant ring of the telephone bell. Friends of Miss Ellwood who sent frantic appeals to the house were told that Mrs. Ellwood and her daughter desired seclusion.

Those who caught sight of the girl told of a changed, white face, sad and tear stained. Mrs. Ellwood was interviewed after repeated attempts From 1904 to 1905 It Advanced Rock Island Trainmen Have at Tears streamed down the older woman's face as she said:

RAIN, RAIN STAY AWAY

For our Friend, Mr. Farmer, Would Get in His Way.

The possibility of rain within the next day or so is not being regarded with any great favor by the farmers. These last few days have been almost ideal for hay-making, and much will be injured if the rain comes. All the fruits and wheat would be benefited by a shower, but the farmers are hoping that it will not come for a few days so that they may get their hay safely

The Imperial Conference. "This conference," he proceeded. was undountedly a historic event, unique in the world's history-a page of history which has not yet been written. In that old historic city of London we met as the representatives of the governments of independent states forming part of the British Empire, united to discuss matters of mutual interest. Such a spectacle had never before been witnessed. First among these states was Canada, the ancient French colony, while the latest was not without its dangers, and he had felt on going there that his first duty was to fix its character by declaring that it was a conference between government and government, and that all the representatives met on terms of perfect equality with the Imperial Government. (Applause.)

The second step to make was to direct the discussion and the resolutions along the line he had just traced—the fidelity to their duties as British subjects, and fidelity to their rights as citizens of Canada and the other component parts of the empire.

"This," said Sir Wilfrid, "was the guide of my conduct from first to last, and if I understand aright the feelings of the Canadian people it was the conduct which I should have followed in order to express their wishes. Of all we had to do, our first duty was the formation of an imperial conference, which will meet every four years, and which will supply a lack that now exists in the relations between the colreception tendered this evening to Sir onial office and the colonies.". The city was lavishly to the people, and he was glad to say

The Preference. "The second question," proceeded Sir Wilfrid, "was that of the preference betwen the different states of the empire and the United Kingdom. Ten years ago the Government of which I am the chief introduced this new policy. It was often criticised, but never seriously attacked. Our opponents in Parliament spoke against it, but they never challenged a vote. And you see the fruit of that policy is an era of prosperity without precedent in Canada. (Applause.) So in cookery perfect work in Preparation may sometimes be spoiled by the eccentricities of the oven or the fluctuations of the fire.

Barring such accidents as these. however, one may be fairly sure of good effects, if one goes about the task in the right way. A few things even the "born cook" must know to start with, or there will be a failure.

Of course, the ideal method of learning cookery is by the practical direction of a skilful teachernot by attendance at a cooking school, but by work in a kitchen, where, in the good old style inculcated by the immortal Mr. Squeers, we "spell it first and then go and do it."

In other words, if one have a good cook book, and a competent cook at one's elbow to give a few needed directions and corrections, one can learn more quickly by experience than in any other way.

DETAILS ARE IMPORTANT

If this cannot be attained, and if there is no motherly soul at hand to give counsel, the cooking school may be resorted to. I have known persons who declared they had derived great good from cooking lessons, but my observation inclines me to think that the gain was made when the pupils had had some preliminary instruction.

If one understands the rudiments, the "frills" can be acquired at a cooking lesson; but unless one enters a class for beginners at a regular cooking school, it is hard to attain familiarity with the first things of the kitchen.

The tyro in cookery who must make her own way with little or no aid except that which she can derive from a cook book should resolve from the first not to despise the day of small things.

There should be no high-flying atfempts at elaborate dishes; and I may add that this advice is worth heeding even by those who know a little something of the outlines of cookery. When a familiarity with simple dishes is once gained the more involved processes will follow more or less as a matter of course, but they should be avoided for a good while.

A man once said that if a woman knew how to sweep a floor, to broil a beefsteak, and to make a loaf of bread, she would have no difficulty in getting a husband. He might have added, "or in keeping

Even with this high aim in view, however, it is not well for the be-

When I had daughters of my own who had to-learn to cook, I gave them instruction in cookery and kitchen economy as I would have done in a language or a science.

THE RUDIMENTS

They were taught how to broil steak and chops, how to mix bread and biscuit. They were enlightened as to the difference between the consistency of dough for bread, for cake, or batter for griddle cakes and waffles. They were taught that there were two kinds of frying-one, the process conducted in shallow fat, which is described by the French as to "saute" (pronounced so-tay), and is employed in frying sausage, pan fish, cutlets and the like; the other, the frying in deep fat, in which the object is immersed, and which is suitable for doughnuts, crullers, croquettes, fritters, potatoes and so forth. They learned that the heat in the latter case must be such that a bit of bread dropped into the fat would brown in a minute, and that food cooked in this mode was a different thing from articles left to soak in lukewarm grease.

Also they learned that bread to rise to the correct degree must increase to double its bulk; that if eggs and milk were cooked together more than just the right length of time they would curdle; that to make a white sauce—the model of nearly all sauces—a tablespoonful each of butter and flour must be allowed to half a pint of milk; that the oven for roasting meat must be kept at a high temperature for ten or fifteen minutes after the roast goes in, so that the outside may be seared and the juices retained; that soups must always cook slowly; that the toughest meat can be made tender by long, deliberate cookery, and a score of other things which, while they were not sufficient to produce experienced cooks, were yet a foundation upon which a good superstructure could be reared. I would advise every woman with daughters at home to go and do likewise.

"GO SLOW"

But there are housekeepers who have already homes of their own, or who are entering upon them, and are unequipped with the rudiments. If they have to learn these for themselves, I can only repeat the advice I gave a few minutes back-"Go slow!" Provide yourself with a good cook book, and begin with simple dishes.

Delieve the words of a veteran housekeeper when I say that your John would rather have for his dinner a well-baked potato, a perfectly ginner to start too rashly upon a broiled steak and a satisfactory career as a bread maker. The broilwell as enterprise. Often I am asked concerning the utensils required for the cook, and I never hear the query without recollecting the dishes I have eaten that were prepared with the simplest utensils, and were yet good because the cook knew how to handle them. One might as well expect French to be won by the purchase of a dictionary and a phrase book as cookery to be gained by an outfit of utensils. Certain articles are, of course, indispensable. A gridiron, a frying pan, baking tins, a covered roaster, mixing bowls and spoons, a grater and a vegetable press, a skimmer and a strainer, measuring cups and flour sifters, egg beaters and paring knives—but the list of these you will find in your cook book or can obtain from any house-house-furnishing shop.

Having secured your utensils let me give you one bit of advice about them. Never begin to cook until you have gathered to you everything you are going to use in the preparation of the dish you have undertaken.

DELAYS ARE PERILOUS

The inexperienced cook wastes time and imperils the product of her hands by having to stop at critical moments to run to the pantry for this or that essential.

If you are making a batch of biscult, have ready your mixing bowl and flour sifter, your spoon, measuring cup and rolling pin, your biscuit board and tins. Bring together all the materials, too: your flour and shortening and salt and milk and baking powder.

call to mind all you have heard keeper or from a salesman in a about cookery being exact.

Remember that the famous French cooks are careful to weigh even the vegetables they use in their soup and leave nothing to chance. Presence of mind and happy guessing may be admirable in some emergencies, but they are out of place in the category of the inexperienced cook.

Be sure of your recipe, then go ahead! Follow directions and take no liberties. Nice customs may courtesy to great kings and queens, but a woman must be pretty sure of her dominion in her kitchen before she departs from the customs dictated by her superiors in knowledge and experience.

One of these days you, too, shall arrive, but, until then, "follow the man from Cook's!"

A Man's View on Cheap Living.

I should like to be awarded a little space in which to express my views on the sub-ject of cheap living, if you can spare the room. in which to express my views on the subject of cheap living, if you can spare the room.

I am "on the road" continually, yet with my family, consisting of my wife and three children. They must live while I am away, also on Sunday. I know that nothing goes to waste. Two years ago I was so situated that I could be at home from eighteen to twenty hours out of twenty-four. I saw everything that came in and that went out of the house, and I know it cost us at least eight dollars a week for table expenses.

Certainly, provisions are no cheaper now than they were then! The idea of living on four dollars a week is monstrous!
It tends to disturb the mind of a man who is disposed to be naturally quiet, and it makes unnecessary trouble between man and wife.

I'd be willing to wager that the woman who starves husband and children on that sum will buy more expensive clothes for herself than her station demands or justifies, just to be popular, and that she calls on her friends to show them off, and (incidentally) to get a cup-of tea and a biscuit to quiet her nerves—a necessary act on account of a starved stomach.

If these cheap livers tell their experiences for the good of the community at large, let them send in correct menus and the addresses of the merchants they deal with, so that others may profit by their economy.

But if it should be that they want to with, so that others may pront by their economy.

But if it should be that they want to make trouble by boasting of how little it costs to keep a family from starvation, the story would better be left untold. There is no doubt that the expense of living might be cut down considerably by buying the very cheapest meat, butter and vegetables, but such articles are not fit to feed to human creatures. It tends to hold a naturally bright child (not to speak of grown people) at a standstill in development.

There are few things more helpful and opment.

There are few things more helpful and even elevating to a child going to school, or a man going to work than a well-filled stomach. Neither can do justice to himself nor to his work when half-fed.

L. M. C. (Buffalo, N. Y.). Verily, this John speaks to the purpose, and utters forth the words of truth and soberness. Without contending for sumptuous living every day (by the way, I heard an old negro call it-and I thought with reason - "farin' presumptuously every day"), I maintain that to keep a sane mind in a sane body, the latter must be nourished with food suitable and sufficient for it. That is, being interpreted, nourishment which is a gratification when taken into the mouth and a staying comfort to the stomach when once it is there. We smile, yet we sigh, in reading how Nicholas Nickleby, the ill-paid usher in Dotheboys School, "distended his stomach with a bowl of porridge, for much the same reason that induces some savages to swallow earth - lest they should be inconveniently hungry when there is nothing to eat." The smile may get the better of the sigh on learning that the porridge was "a brown composition that resembled diluted pincushions without the covers." We sigh from heavy hearts at the picture of the "silent and sad boys" who had breakfasted daily for months upon the "composition."

"There was none of the noise and clamor of a schoolroom; none of its boisterous play and hearty mirth. The children sat crouching and shivering together, and seemed to lack the spirit to move about."

Where was the spirit to come from? The human machine is like other bits of mechanism. It must be fed, and the skilful engineer adapts the fuel to the capacity and needs and make of his furnace. In a single phrase, he feeds it with food convenient for Oh, clever Agur, the son of Jakeh! Since writing down as much of his pedigree as is known to Bible readers, I have looked up the marginal translation of the phrase I have quoted, and I find it "food of my allowance." In other words, the man whose sayings are said to be "a prophecy" prayed for his due allowance of nourishing food-in fact, his rations. That government is short-sighted that defrauds its fighting men by winking at a parsimonious commissariat.

Some Things Which Have Helped Me.

1. If in cooking oatmeal, rice, jam, etc., it should begin to stick on the bottom of the kettle, remove from the fire for a moment, keeping it covered, and the steam from itself will soften the contents of the kettle so that they may be loosened and cooking resumed without burning.

2. If mothers whose little ones call upon them to help them on with their stockings (and just when the mothers are busy getting breakfast) would sew bands of soft tape on the bottom of the underdrawers, they will hinder the drawers from slipping up when the stockings go over them. It tried it, and my 14-year-old boy still wants the tapes on his drawers.

3. Often when a hard-coal fire gets so low that it seems to be almost out it may be revived by the use of common salt sprinkled on occasionally. So long as it snaps and crackles when salt is added to it, have hopes of bringing it up. This has saved me the trouble of clearing out a stove and lay-ing a new fire many a time. Now, can anybody send me the short poem beginning.

From far-off but ever-friendly Holland we have a reply to my doubt anent mushroom soup. Our exchange is growing into an international institution, what with our regular English contributor, and occasional communications from other lands beyond the sea.

I am sending the mushroom recipes asked for by a correspondent. This will reach you a month later than it should. I should not have thought of answering the query had you not said: "I find no recipe for mushroom soups in any cook book to which I have access." I have culled the inclosed from four different manuals of cookery. I hope they will be of use to some one.

1. Pibzgemuse (A German Recipe). Select one pound of large "flap" mushrooms, such as grow in the meadows in the autumn; cut each into four pleces, after scraping off the skin and the hard part of the stalk. Heat a cupful of vinegar with one of water; stir in a handful of salt; pour this hot over the mushrooms and let them stand thus on the kitchen table for half an hour. Then drain and wash them well in cold water, letting it run from the faucet on them to cleanse the mushrooms and to dislodge the grit.
Now put them over the fire in a pan, with salt and pepper at discretion and a generous lump of butter, with from a half pint to two pints of water. Cook from three-quarters of an hour to an hour,
When they are thoroughly done, threken with browned flour, browned onion and two tablespoonfuls of chopped parsley.
Instead of water you may use broth or stock in part or altogether.

2. Mushroom Soup (An American Recipe).

Peel three-quarters of a pound of mushrooms; wash them thoroughly and cut them into dice. Stew them in half a pint of veal or chicken broth. Add to this one quart of good, well-seasoned stock; thicken with one tablespoonful of flour rubbed into one of butter. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

3. Mushroom Soup (American Recipe).

Recipe).

Wash six ounces of white haricot beans and soak them overnight. Next day put into an enameled saucepan with a quart and a pint of cold water; one Spanish onlon peeled and cut into dice, one stalk of celery, half a teaspoonful of sugar and a pinch of cooking soda. Boil gently for two hours and a half, adding more water if the beans absorb too much moisture. Cut four ounces of "flap" mushrooms into small pieces (having first prepared them as in recipe No. 1). Add them to the soup and cook slowly one hour longer. Then press through a sieve, return to the saucepan; stir in a teaspoonful of red currant jelly; boil up once; take off the scum and salt to taste. Serve with it fried croutons on a separate dish.

4. Mushroom Soup ("Minestra Con Funghi"-Italian Recipe).

Cook two pounds of sphagetti in fast boiling water until tender. Drain off half of the water; add fried mushrooms and a fried minced onlon, a generous lump of butter and grated Parmesan cheese. Pour over all a cup of tomato sauce, to which you have added a quarter clove of garlies and half a teaspoonful of crushed Nepaul pepper. Give to the whole a good final boil. This is a nice, substantial soup.

We accept your assurance to that effect, odd as the compound seems to the native cook. The recipes are full of novelty, and consequently of interest to us. If I do not yet see cogent reasons for altering the opinion I expressed when the recipe for mushroom soup was called for-"Excuse me for saying that I do not think it can be very good"set it down to ignorance of the possibilities of beans, mushrooms and onlons, with the finishing touches of red currant jelly and fried croutons-cooked together into a broth.

It does not appeal to the American ap petite, but it may be delicious for all that. We thank you for caring enough for us to send the batch of formulas.

In this way the mystery in connection with the birth of the sixth duke and the peculiar domestic relations of the fifth duke were never brought into a court of law. The sixth duke, who lived to enjoy the family honors and estates in a state of single blessedness for 40 years, was always known as "the bachelor duke."

Everybody knows how famous the oresent duke has been for his taciturnity. But few are aware that it is a quality which he has inherited from a long line of ancestors. The Cavendishes, of which noble house he is the chief, have always been noted for their silence. Henry Cavendish, the famous chemist, is on record as having uttered fewer words during the course of his long life of fourscore years than any man, not excepting the monks of La Trappe. The duke runs him closely, and I doubt if there is any man in either of the Houses of Parliament who has chatted less with his fellow legislators than the duke. If he speaks little, he laughs less, and when he does laugh it is with a sort

There is a certain amount of analogy Letween himself and the late Charles Stewart Parnell, both in their manners and in their reserve of speech, as well as in their inborn instinct for the government of their fellow creatures. With all his odd manners, the duke has exercised an immense influence over his countrymen. This is due to his ingrained disinterestedness, which has premiership, one from motives of chivalrous loyalty to Mr. Gladstone. It via.

So she is said father's illustrious ters to throw herself on the emperor's mercy. The barbarian women with their uncouth ways caused great mirth among the fastidious Romans and Boadicea's case was laughed out of court. The idea of Nero's giving up any possessions for the sake of mere justice too absurd to be considered seriously. But Boadicea was not prudent enough to take her misfortune calmly. She flew into a rage, and by laughter to wrath. He ordered her two daughters slain, and she herself was Comes a strong indorsement from Mr

But Suetonius Paulinus, a noted Roman general, happened to be in the Isle of Man. He heard of Boadicea's revolution, and with 10,000 soldiers hurried to attack her. The two armies met near St. Albans. Paulinus drew up his 10,000 on a hill at the edge of a wood, whose trees protected the flank and rear. There he waited the onset of the Britons. At first glance the contest between 10,000 and 230,000 seemed ridiculously unequal. But the former were trained, armored warriors, drilled into a perfect fighting machine. The Britons were a wild, undisciplined, forces charged up the hill. But their arrows, rocks and other rude weapons clattered harmlessly off the huge, three-cornered shields and armor of

When the fury of the charge had spent itself Paulinus' men advanced upon the wearied, discouraged Britans, cutting through their loose, ramshackle formation, like a modern battleship through a fleet of sailboats, Then the slaughter began. Every man, woman and child-even the cattle and dogs--of the Britons that came within reach of that mighty fighting engine was slain. Eighty thousand Britons fell, while Paulinus lost but 800. This remarkable and little-known episode in his majesty's life occurred more than half a century ago, when Queen Victoria's children contributed sketches to an exhibition which was held at Burlington House in aid of a fund for the soldiers wounded in the Crimean War. The record price in the exhibition was realized by a sketch enlitled "The Battlefield," the work of the Princess Royal, which found a purchaser for the sum of 250 guineas. The Prince of Wales' sketch (he was only 13 at the time) was bought for 55 guineas; and drawings by the still younger Princes and Princesses fetched 30 guineas each.
