rain.

The relatives and friends of Michael Slack, Wilstead, were shocked and grieved to hear that he had passed way at an early hour on Wednesday evening, Aug. 27th. He had been in his usual good health until Monday. when he complained of a pain around his heart. Becoming worse, the doctor was summoned but his services proved futile and he quietly passed away at the above mentioned hour. He was 62 years old and was born at Charleston, removing to Long Point with his parents when a little boy. When he grew to manhood he entered the employ of T. G. Stevens and the late S. J. Stevens, of Athens, where he learned the trade of cabinet maker. He then went to Gananoque where he acquired the knowledge of boat building and carpenter work, following those successfully. About five years ago he purchased a farm at Wilstead, where the family now reside. Besides his wife, who was Miss Margaret Davis, of Gananoque, he is survived by six sons and one daughter, viz.: Daniel, of Rochester: Thomas of Kingston; John, Brockville; David, Belleville; Augustine, Leo, and Maud, at home. He also leaves three brothers and two sisters: Walter, of Brockville; Arthur, Delta; Frank, Lyn; Mrs. T. Laffan, Rochester, and Mrs. P. C. Yates, Toledo. The funeral, which was very largely attended, was held from his late residence, Wilstead, to St. Patrick's church, Lansdowne, where a solemn requiem Mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Kehoe, after which the remains were interred in the cemetery adjoining.

FRANKVILLE FAIR ANNOUNCEMENT

To our Members and Friends .-

Ladies and Gentlemen,-For four years in succession -1915, 1916, 1917 and 1918-Frankville Fair has been up against adverse weather conditions. In 1917 these conditions were so unfavorable that the Society's gate receipts were only $2.90. Notwithstanding the financial loss occasioned by these four years of hard luck, the Directors from year to year, by the strictest economy and careful financing together with generous contributions from friends and well-wishers of the Fair, have weathered the vicissitudes of fortune and the Board of Directors for 1919 are pleased to be able to announce that the Society is financially in the best of health and able to "carry on" for another year. No doubt those members and friends of the Fair who began to despair and prophesy its early demise, will be gratified to learn that there is no ground for pessimism. On the contrary, it should and will be a source of consolation and satisfaction to every loyal British subject to know that the old Fair at Frankville has at least outlived the German Empire, and will be doing business this year at the old stand, on Thursday and Friday, September 25th and 26th. We believe that that people appreciate the honest efforts and square dealing characteristic of the management of our Fair, and we have confidence that they will manifest their appreciation this year by attending th eFair in large numbers, if weather conditions and other circumstances over which they have no control do not prevent their attendance.

In concluding this announcement we desire to say that the same considerate and courteous treatment accorded to the public in the past will be forthcoming in the future.

TIMELY RECIPES. A DISH OF PINEAPPLE

A DISH OF PINEAPPLE.

Pineapples are coming into market, and by the middle of the month the small strawberry pines will be plentiful, of good quality and not expensive; the larger variety is not likely to appear in quantity before June. In using this fruit as a dessert it must be remembered that in combination with gelatine pineaple must always be cooked. The fruit contains a powerful ferment which, like pepsin, will digest and liquefy gelatine and other nitrogenous products. A very pretty way to serve the fresh fruit is here illustrated. After brushing, washing and drying, the pineapple, rind and all, is cut out, leaving the rind intact; each since after eyeing is carefully slipped back into the rind and all put together on a serving dish, so that apparently it has only been halved, the central portion of the crown, when in position, adding the finishing realistic touch.

Survey of Industrials by Dominion Bureau.

At the request of the Honorary Advisory Council for Scientific and Industrial Research, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics has completed a special survey and directory of Canadian chemical industries. The chemist in charge was Mr. S. J. Cook, B. A., A. I. charge was Mr. S. J. Cook, B. A., A. I. C., who has introduced the report with a summary of war-time enterprise and accomplishment which must rank as a proud chapter in the development of Canadian industry. Mr. Cook refers to the construction of Shawinigan Falls, Quebec, of one of the largest power reservoirs in the world, second only to the great dam at Gatum. A city with great industries has grown up at Shawinigan and tries has grown up at Shawinigan and there the world's largest glacial acc-tic acid plant was built for war pur-

New disinfectants, closely resembling former German products, are appearing from Canadian factories. Mr. Cook enumerates a large number of other chemicals which are now being produced in Canada for the first time in commercial quantities. He also tells of the expansion in lines of production which, before the war, were comparatively undeveloped.

But public support is essential if this progress is to be maintained. War demands built up in Canada a number of large industries employing thou-sands of workers and unless many of these factories can find peace-time uses for their products much of the advantage will be lost. Already many of the plants operated by the Imperial Munitions Board have been closed and, in some instances, dismantled, but there remain many plants in the chemical field which are still operating and there is room for others. Mr. Cook points out that "in every land where an industry of national importance is to be built up, the people must be educated to its importance and

If it is necessary to keep beef for a time immerse it in sour milk.

When mixing thickening for gravies tomatoes or soups, beat it with a fork instead of a spoon. It will take only about one-third of the time and the thickening will be much smoother.

Keep a clean scrub brush on hand, and after using baking board put it under faucet and scrub it, also the roll-ing pin. Takes less time and is much pagier than the old way.

For salad, croquettes, souffle or loaf, a veal forequarter and neck are cheaper than and fully as good as the hindquarter used for roasts and cutleas. A meat pie of rump steak and other inexpensive portions of beef is more juicy than if made of the drier

Dry ends will be left from roasts, steaks and chops. These, however juiceless, may be made into deliclous mixtures with the use of savory sauce and a few slices of ham, bologna or tongue, or a slice or two of each Novel Method of Hustling Land Agent to Force a Sale.

America is known as the hor the enterprising land agent, and prob-ably no feat performed elsewhere in the line of selling lots has been equaled by the exploit of one Los Angeles man. A Horse's Devotion.

A touching story of a horse's devotion to its master comes from a Bedordshire correspondent.

Soon after the war broke out a

For two years it played its part in the great war, but apparently it never forgot the master at home. Eventually it was sent back to England, where it was re-offered for civilian purposes. Curiously enough, it was another Bedfordshire farmer who bought it. There some chord in the animal's memory seems to have been touched, and its thoughts turned toward its old master. Anyhow, the original owner was disturbed one night by a noise at the garden gate, accompanied by the stamping of hoofs.

known that the festival wo fall in the year of our visit, not to speak of the very week. Of course every lover of the East has learned that the Sacred Tooth is exhibited every five years for the adoration of the faithful, and that in the interval neither prince nor millionaire can obtain a glimpse of its venerable form. Both the official head of Budd-hism in Ceylon and the British representative would have to agree to any departure from this usage, so the rule is strictly observed. One instinctively asks why the relic is so sacred. The history of this solicitously guarded treasure, as narrated by the Shinhatreasure, as narrated by the Sninna-lese priests, may be summa-ized as follows: When Buddha's body had been burned, an Arahat took an un-consumed fragment from the ashes of the funeral pyre. This was the left cantne tooth, destined to become the most celebrated of the many wondrous relics of the founder of the faith.

After a rather peaceful existence of about eight centuries in the southern peninsula it became so famous and created such disturbance in the Brabmanic community that it was surrep-titiously carried to the Buddhist cen-

PROTECTS BIRDS.

Quebec Sets Aside Perce Rock for Them.

It is an encouraging sign when grave politicians like those who make up the Parliament of Canada and the Legislatures of Ontario and Quebec forget politics and consider the welfare of the birds of the air. The latest move on behalf of these neighbors was the passing of an act by the Legislature of Quebec, establishing Perce Rook, the bird ledges of Bonaventure Iland, and Bird Rocks, in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, as sanctuaries for the sea few that abound in that region. In 1933 the Federal Government set aside Point Felee as a national park and bird sanctuary, and in 1917 the Ontario Government set apart two Crown game preserves or bird sanctuaries, one located near Collingwood. known as Peasemarsh farm, and the other a district in Essex County, surrounding the farm of Jack Miner, who has, perhaps, the largest private sanctuary in the world. Perce Rock, which forms one of the scenic features of the Bay of Chaleur contains about six quare miles and rices to a height of over 300 feet, and upon its ledge thousands of birds nest without foar of molestation. This rock, it is believed, is the sole refuge of the herring zell and the crested cormerant. The Bird Rocks, a group of three, belong to the Bagdalene Islands, and lie 100 miles off the coast of Gaspe. On Great Bird, which contains about seven acres, is situated the lighthouse, and here the auka, the Solom rocese, and kittiwakes in great numbers have their nests. COILS ARE TIGHTENING ABOUT THE BETRAYER OF EDITH CAVELL

Serious Evidence Against Quien, Whose Friendship NOSKE RAIDS Meant Arrest by Hun.

A Paris special cablea Georges Gaston Quien, on trial here charged with communicating military informa-tion to the enemy, and having collected evidence against Edith Cavelle the English nurse who was executed by the Germans in October, 1915, was questioned by the court to-day relative to his movements in June and July, 1915.

At yesterday's session of the court, Quien traced his journey from St. Quentin to Brussels, where he arrived on June 7. After reaching the Belgian capital, Quien decided to cross the frontier into Holland. This he succeeded in doing, presenting himself at The Hague to the French military attache, who sent him back into Belgium.

He said to-day that he re-entered Belgium on the night of June 23, in company with one van Deer Smiesson. The next day he was arrested by the Germans, who accused him of travelling without a passport, and was im-prisoned in Antwerp until late in July. This testimony was questioned by the colonel acting as president of the court, who said it was "strange no trace of his imprisonment could be found at Antwerp, and that the Germans later permitted Quien to go to Bruccale " accused man admitted having seen Miss Cavell on July 26, after he had visited the home of a Madame Bodart, at which time he said that a certain Jean Maes, who, he said, wa a fellow prisoner in Antwerp, accost-ed him in the street. There was read into the record a statement showing Maes was a "suspicious character," and that he was known to have been in the pay of the Germans, being employed by German police at age to be left at the home of a Madame Machiel. Quien denied that he had examined its contents, although during his preliminary examination he admitted it contained annotated road maps for the use of persons attempting to escape from the country. It was pointed out by the prosecution to-day that one of these maps, which only Quien could have obtained, was the chief evidence against Madame Bodart, and brought about her condemnation before a German court-martial. Explaining this discrepancy in his story, Quien said he was suffering from loss of memory.

The president of the court pointed out during the hearing that almost everyone with whom Quien came in contact was immediately placed under arrest or condemned by the Germans. arrest or condemned by the Germans. Among those mentioned by the president was Father Bonsteels, who, be lieving Quien was honestly aiding allied soldiers to escape, gave him a railroad map, which showed the lates German modifications. BUILDING OF WARSHIPS ENDS

In All the Private Yards of Britain.

Commercial Building Take the Workers.

A London cable: All private ship-building yards throughout the country, numbering about twenty, are affected by the Government order that all work be stopped on war ships except those about to be launched. The Admiralty yards at Chatham, Devonport and Portsmouth will not stop, however, as they are entirely occupied with the refitting of 2,700 steamers which are about to be returned. pled with the refitting of 2,700 steamers which are about to be returned to the owners, from whom they were requisitioned for war service. Among the warships being built at private yards are cruisers, destroyers and submarines, and the work on some of these may be continued, excerding to these may be continued, according to the Mail, if it is found cheaper to complete them than to break them up. Shipbuilders must be liberally compensated in cases where contracts are broken, but although several million pounds sterling may be involved, it may prove more economical than car-may prove more economical than carrying out the building programme.

The Mail quotes an officer of the Admiralty as saying that one sound reason for stopping work on warships is that the step will clear the yards for commercial building. There is an excellent demand for new tonnage, and this work will probably absorb and this work will probably absorb the men liberated by the stoppage of work on naval vessels. According to the Glasgow Daily Record, work on forty warships, valued at 25,000,000 pounds sterling, has been stopped.

ULTRA-RADICALS

Officers of German Executive Cleared Out.

May Cause Another General Strike.

A Berlin cable: A sensational raid

A Berlin cable: A sensational raid by Gustav Noske, Secretary for Military Affairs, on the premises occupied by the Ultra Radical Executive Committee of the Workingmen's Councils of Greater Berlin threatens to precipitate another general strike.

The raid was a result of trouble between Noske and a "rump" board of the Councils dominated by Richard Mueller and other independent Communist agitators. The struggle grew out of an attempt by Mueller to Torce elections of "shop councils" in advance of the issue by the Government of a writ for the elections.

Fearing the defeat of their radical Soviet programme, the Ultra Radicals

Fearing the defeat of their radicals Soviet programme, the Ultra Radicals proceeded to make extensive arrangements for balloting in the big industrial plants, when the Government stepped in and informed the workera that the elections would be invalid, and urged them to abide by the decision of the National Assembly on the issue of the Workingmen's Parliament.

The Radicals immediately accepted the challenge of the Government and proceeded to perfect a plan for elec-tions to be held under their direction. This resulted in Noske's ordering the raid on the executive offices of the Councils. A minute search of the premises was made and Noske is still guarding the place.

The documents seized included much material which is said to prove that the Communists were planning an extensive political upheaval.

Austria Still Treated as Enemy Country.

Paris Cable — The Supreme Council at this afternoon's meeting discussed Rouman ...'s ettitude in the Hungarian situation, and sent Rou-mania another note saying that the Council impatiently awaited a reply to the note ent on Saturday concerning reparations.

The Council Giscussed the response to the Austrians at length, but did not complete the text of the reply, and will consider it again to-morrow. Some changes are being made in the treaty in compliance with the Austrians' request. Austria will be treated simply as an enemy country, despite the fact that the Government is new. It will be required to bear reparation alone, but the pre-war debt and the war expenses will be apportioned among the new countries which have grown out of Austrian territory in accordance with he income of their territory before the war.

Allege Systematic Plans for Invasion.

A Kattowitz, Silesia, cable: The Polish mining population of Upper Silesia continues to flee over the Polish border to avoid being involved in shooting frays. The search for arms is still being car-ried on by the Upper Silesian au-thorities with much success, though many difficulties are encountered in scouring the woods for hiding places and searching hostile Polish quarters.

On account of some unwritten law most women seem to think that ice cream or sherbet is the only dessert to be served as refreshments at any afternoon or evening party.. But it is time to break away from that old custom and see what can be made without ice that will be "just as good." There is a macaroon dainty that is delicious, and so easily and quickly made that it is an ideal emergency recipe. Whip a quart of heavy cream to a stiff froth and stir into it a pound of macaroons that have been rolled to make rather coarse crumbs. Sweet-en to taste, add a small bottle of marachino cherries, cut into pieces and serve ice cold in sherbet glass topped with a whole cherry.

The English hostess serves trifle as often as we do ice cream for refreshments. A caramel trifle is novel. Make a soft caramel custard in the Make a soft caramel custard in the usual way. Melt a quarter of a cup of sugar, suffrring until it is dark brown. Beat three eggs slightly, pour the sugar into a pint of scalded milk, stirring until the sugar has melted, then add the eggs, a pinch of salt and half a teaspoonful of vanilla. Cook in a double boiler until thick. Put four lady fingers in each sherhet glass fill lady fingers in each sherbet glass, fill with the custard when it is cold, top with whipped cream and garnish with blanched almonds.

A very simple refreshment that everyone will like is a Mocha pudding. Beat the yolks of two eggs with a cup of of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of cocoa and four of flour. Add two tablespoonfuls of water. When this is a smooth paste, stir into it three cups of boiling hot coffee. Cook until thick. With the single exception of the flax, the creat is made 90 per cent. with the single exception of the flax, the crop is made 90 per cent, of the three principal cereals are cut and in stock, and about 20 per cent. is threshed. The one thing now to fear is frost and with the exception of a very small percentage of late oats and the flax, of which crop the major portion is late, frost now could do very little damage.

Already threshing returns show better yields than were anticipated in many districts, a few, especially in districts where rust developed, yields districts where rust developed, yields are less than the stand of straw wanted, adds the report, and it remains to be seen if improved yields will balance the depreciated ones. The wheat crop as a whole will be low grade, due partly to heat and partly to rust. Percentage of No. 1 northern will be relatively small, in fact it will in all propability be necessary to resort to the "special" commercial grades in-troduced in 1916, adds the report. DUBLIN SHOEBLACKS.

Those of 1780 and Their Tools of Trade.

Among the populace of Dublin in 1780 the shoeblacks were a numerous and formidable body. The polish they used was lampblack and eggs, for used was lampblack and eggs, for which they purchased all that were rotten in the markets. Their implements consisted of a three-legged stool, a basket containing a blunt knife, called a spudd, a painter's brush and an old wig.

A gentleman usually went out in the morning with dirty boots or shoes, sure to find a shoeblack sitting on his street of that a supportance secting on his steel at the corner of the street. The gentleman put his foot in the lap of the shoeblack without ceremony, and the artist scraped it with his spudd, wiped it with his wig and then laid on his composition as thick as black pant with his painter's brush.

The stuff dried with a rich polish, requiring no friction, and little inferior to the elaborated moder nfluids. haled from eggs in a high state of putridity, and which filled any house which was entered before the comof position was quite dry, and sometimes even tainted the air of fashionable drawing rooms.—University Magazine.

Miller's Worm Powders prove their value. They do not cause any vio-lent disturbances in the stomach, any pain or griping, but do their work quietly and painlessly, so that the destruction of the worms is imper-ceptible. Yet they are thorough, and from the first dose there is an provement in the condition of the sufferer and an entire cessation of manifestations of internal trouble.

Whatever Mirabeau may have been or may not have failed to be-one great testimony to his character mains unshaken—the high opinion his British friends formed and kept of it. British friends formed and kept of it.

Sir Gilbert Elliott, whose distinguished listory is a voucher for his character, and his character is a voucher for the moral value of his judgment, found Mirabeau, when he resumed his acquaintance in England, "... an ardent friend and I believe a girperne". lieve a sincere one." ... When Mirabeau returned to London, he found himself partly, at least through his friendship with the Elliotts more or less a persoa gratis in Londonn society.

Presently, some time during this winter of 1784-85, Mirabeau went to stay with Edmund Burke at Beaconsfield. The two parted swearing eternal friendship, quite unconscious of the "Reflections on the French Revolution" the one was to write, and the "fierce philippic" against it the other was to deliver from the tribune, because the "Reflections" reflected upon the wisdom and utility of the National Assembly.... On Jan. 25, 1785 the wisdom and utility of the National Assembly.... On Jan. 25, 1785, Mirabeau was present at the opening of Parliament and saw William Pitt, the younger, at six-and-twenty years old, "debating as a master with his rivis the affairs of the world." He also saw there Lady Warren Hastings much over-dressed, which reminded him of a passage in Pliny against the extravagance of the wives of magistrates! He quoted it to Burke, who used it later in one of his speeches against Hastings against Hastings.

Among other acquaintances formed in England, it is said that Mirabeau made that of Nelson. Nelson was certainly a friend of Sir Gilbert Elliott's, but, on the other hand, he was in England only a very short time out of Mirabeau's stay there. Mirabeau was also introduced to Hurd, literary man, court favorite, and Bishop, of Worcester. while he knew well Dr. Price, the famous non-conformist divine; Lord Shelbourne, just created Marquis of Lansdowne, and Benjamin Vaughan (the author of the English version of the pamphlet on the Scheldt) were both not only true friends to Mirabeau, but, as will be seen, to Madame de Nebra also.

The justice, the shrewdness and the sobriety to recognize and appreciate what was coed the version was supported to the seen that was coed the version of the special to the sobriety to recognize and appreciate what was coed the version of the seen that was coed the version of the seen the was coed to be a seen that was coed to be seen the was coed to be seen the was seen the support of the seen that was coed to be seen the twent the seen that was seen the seen the seen that was seen the seen the seen that was coed to be seen the seen that was seen that was seen that was seen the seen that was seen only to recipinal existent plants and the sobriety to recognize and appreciate what was good in us, to see what was bad, and to foresee the best way to make that bad good, were attributes which Mirabeau possessed as no other of our foreign critics has ever possessed them, and which he applied not only to our critical existent but to only to our criminal system, but to only to our criminal system, but to our government and to our national character. The flattering hyperboles in which Montesqueiu and Voltaire adore us are much less gratifying but far less sound and true than Mirabeau's rough, generous strictures. If, in his study of a country so much freer and happier than his own, he was betrayed for a moment into an exaggerated enthusiasm, his statesexaggerated enthusiasm, his states-man's mind was at hand to correct the impulsive heart.

Later Mirabeau told La Marck that

Later Mirabeau told La Marck that France must have a representative government as England had—"it contains every guarantee of judicious liberty." Yet though he certainly did not regard the House of Lords as "amonument of Gothic superstition," as the Abbe Sieves did, he protested against it when the question came before the National Assembly in 1798.... The most cursory acquaintance with the English political history of the latter part of the eighteenth century reveals a jobbery and corruption Mirabeau's mind could never have missed. Voltaire, indeed, seeing the pearls, forgot the mud. Mirabeau saw through the mud to the pearls below it.

Perhaps, as a whole, the most just description of his attitude to us both description of his attitude to us both as a nation and a constitution is to say that he admired us, but did not love us.—From "The Life, of Mirabeau," by S. G. Tallentyre.

It Rubs Pain Away.—There is no liniment so efficacious in overcoming pain as Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. The hand that rubs it in rubs the pain away, and on this account there is no preparation that stands so high in public esteem. The appointments of the men selected for ambassadorships, it is said, depend upon the attitude of the powers in question. If they send charges d'affaires to Berlin, Germany will take like action as to representation in the capitals of such powers.

There is no mention at present of he selection of German Ambassador to France.

to France.

Washington, Aug. 27.—No inquiry has been made of the United States as to whether Hamiel von Haimhausen, former counsellor of the Imperial German Embassy here, will be acceptable as Ambassador, but there is every indication that this Government will not receive Haimhausen or anyone else formerly connected with anyone else formerly connected with the embassy under the regime of Count von Bernstorff.

THE LAW OF SUPPLY AND DE-MAND UNDER CONTROL.

The Manchester Union says that in all this talk about maintaining wages and prices where they are "let us remember that water runs down hill. There is a somewhat forgotten law of supply and demand that is going to resume its functions one of these fine days." Quite true, water does run down hill according to the natural law. But most important streams are very much under control and are made to do the will of man while they run. It is so with the law of supply and demand. It no longer operates as a free river. It is dammed divert. ed and otherwise controlled and made to contribute to the wealth and power of those fortunate enough to "own the works" on the "water front."

He is base who receives favors and renders none. In the order of nature we cannot render benefits to those 2. from whom we receive them, or only seldom. But the benefit we receive must be rendered again, line for line, 3. deed for deed, cent for cent, to somebody. Beware of too much good staying in your hand. A MOTHER'S TRIALS

e woman at home deep in house hold duties and the cares of mother-hood, needs occasional help to keep her in good health. The demands upon a mother's health are many and severe. Her own health trials and her children's welfare exact heavy toils, while hurried meals, broken res and much indoor living tend to weak-en her constitution. No wonder that the woman at home is often indisposed through weakness, headaches, backthrough weakness, headaches, aches and nervousness. Too women have grown to accept these visitations as a part of the lot of motherhood. But many and varied as her health troubles are, the cause is simple and the cure at hand. When well, it is the woman's good blood that keeps her well; when ill she must make her blood rich to renew her health. The nursing mother more than any other woman in the world needs rich blood and plenty of it. There is always one unfailing way to get this good blood so necessary to get this good blood so necessary to perfect health, and that is through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills make new blood abundantly, and through their use thousands of weak ailing wives and mothers have been made bright, cheerful and strong. If you are ailing, easily tired or depressyou are ailing, easily tired or depress-ed, it is a duty you owe yourself and your family to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial. What this medicine has done for others it will surely do for you.

SAMOA

The German Samoan islands, for which New Zealand is to hold the which New Zealand is to hold mandate, according to preliminary summaries of the peace treaty, are described in a bulletin from the National Geographical Society, based on a communication to that body, as fol-

"Samoa, called by former geogra-phers the Navigators Islands, from the skill in navigation shown by its inhabitants, consists of four principal bits of land lying in the South bits of land lying in the South Pacific, nearly midway between New Zealand and Hawaii.

"The number of islands in the group may, by counting the smaller.

be increased to 11, or even 14, but only Savii, Upolu, Tutuila, and the hree usually included under the general term Manua, are important.

"All are verdure-clad and inhabited. and in appearance and shape resemble immenso green hats, the interior representing the crown being mountainwhile the brim or shore is cov ered with cocoanut palms, breadfruit, banara, and other tropical trees, which furnish the native food.

"At some prehistoric period the peaks of a submerged mountain chain running northeast and southwest have been lifted from the depths of the ocean by the upheaval of volcanoes now long extinct. Accumulations of soil brought by heavy rains from the mountains meet the ever-growing reef. which prevents easy approach to the land except in those places where fresh-water streams, forcing their way through, form openings in the cora barrier.

"Between reef and shore a lagoon varying in width from 200 yards to two or three miles, provides a secure highway for coast and inter-island traffic. The entire length of the group. if Rose Island be included, is little less than 300 miles, and its gross area is larger than the state of Rhode Island by 50 square miles.

"The native inhabitants of the islands are of Polynesian stock and are clearly related to the natives of both Hawaii and New Zealand. For both Hawaii and New Zealand. both Hawaii and New Zealand. For practical purposes these natives may be divided into four classes. At the head stand the chiefs, who are fiereditary in the sense that they must belong to certain families, but elective in that they exercise authority by virtue of titles conferred on them.

"The Tulafale, talking-man, is their executive officer, who phrases their thoughts in eloquent language, and is frequently the central figure in the district and the source of authority. Below him and above the lowest class. Below him and above the lowest class, composed of what are known as the 'common people,' are the native teachers and catechists, who wear more clothes and do less fighting than the rest of the population.

"There is nothing in the dress or bearing of a high chief which enables a foreigner to distinguish him, but he is isolated from the rest of the reon's by a system of rigid etiquette.

people by a system of rigid etiquette. No one may hold up an umbrella or do certain kinds of work in his presence, and a special vocabulary is set apart in which to address him. The common names for food, an ax, a pig, little boy."

etc., are tabooed in his presence. His face, his anger, and other attributes are described in an entirely different set of words from those used for or-set of words from those used for ordinary men.

"Hedged about as he is, the chief, in his intercourse with persons not of his rank, has come to depend largely on his 'talking man' who, like his chief, is elected from certain families in which the office is hereditary. As a rule no one is elected who has not a gift for oratory, which is a common talent in Samea.

"The powers and duties of the 'talking men' are considerable. They are ing men' are considerable. They are men of much dignity of carriage, and as they stand leaning upon a staff. 'f office with a 'fue,' or fly-trap cast over one shoulder, with which occasionally to emphasize their remarks, they compare favorably in appearance with the orators of a nation more civilised that themselves."

WEDDING QUEUES.

322 Civil Marriages in Glasgow Last Month.

Glasgow Fairs is always a popular time for marriages, but never before have there been so many holiday marriages as during last week. This statement applies particularly to "irregular" marriages, or what are more correctly described as civil marriages. So great was the number of wedding parties at the county build-ings that they literally formed up in queues for registration. On Fair Friday Sheriff Lyell registered 76 of these marriages. This easily consti-tutes a "record" for a single day.

Since the end of June 322 civil wed dings have taken place in the county buildings—a daily average of over 20. Up till ne end of last week there been 2,373 such marriages this number of civil marriages exceeded 1,000 in a year was in 1900, during the South African war, and then the total was 1,064. During succeeding In 1914 when the war broke out the total suddenly jumped up to 2,657, and in 1915 the highest number yet re-corded for a single year was reached —namely, 3,676. Peace year, however, promises to exceed even that number

He Understood Girls.

Donald, aged six, has made a very good beginning on understanding the eternal feminine. He was playing with little Eleanor recently, when his mother heard him teasing the girl unmercifully. She said: "Dongirl unmercifully. She said: "Donald, I want you to stop feasing that little girl. Aren't you ashamed of yourself?" "Well, I've got to tease somebody," replied the boy." "What an idea!" said the mother. "Well, that's so," said Donald, "an' she wants to be teased. If I quit teasin' her she'll go play with some other little boy."

AFGHANISTAN

The reported assassination Habibullah, amir of Afghanistan, a reminder that not even that remote and obscure land of Middle Asia es caped the effects of the world war. Now that there is any evidence as yet that the monarch's murder was inspired by growing antipathy autocrats, but the collapse of Rus left Afghanistan free from an influ ence that often caused her consider able embarrassment.

Habibullah is credited with observ ing scrupulously the policy laid down by his father, a noteworthy ruler, that of consulting Britain about matters of foreign policy, but brooking no interference from bsolute monarchy.

Habibullah's father it was who comparatively among the meterogeneous tribes of Afghanistan—tribes which formerly pounced upon each other at the slightest provocation. Frequently they submitted their disputes to arbitration and the custom of the los awarding several of its marriageable women to the rival tribe was one factor in eliminating any clear-cut distinctions between the tribal units of the land.

To the stranger the Afghan displays a sort of specious and decep-tive Oriental courtesy. In fact a national proverb is that "The man who shuts his door to a stranger is no Afghan." But the stranger also would do well to know a saying eur-rent among the Hindoos, "God shield you from vengeance of the elephant the cobra and the Afghan." For many strangers have found that, upon provocation, to which the Afghan is extremely sensitive, his disposition is vengeful, cruel and erafty. His desire for pillage, theft and decepgering, proud, but withal prepossessing sort of man, every inch the war-rior while he keeps his turban on, but giving a faint suggestion of a bewigged jurist of old English days when he removes it to disclose a head

So far as barring private munitions makers is concerned, Abdur Rahman, long before his death in 1901, might have subscribed to the proposed League of Nations, for he had his own factories at his capital, Kabul. eral guns a week.

But neighboring states never had much fear of any pan-Afghan aspirations on the part of the Kabul war lord. The arms were most varied and picturesque, and the cartridges are said to have been excellent save that they seldom fitted many of the rifles.

Though he may know not efficiency the Afghan is a "first-class fighting man," as the British learned in the two Afghan wars. It was at the close of the second, in 1879, that Gen. Roberts made his famous march to Kandahar to reinforce Gen. Burrows, who had been defeated by the Afghans, a feat which was rewarded with the peerage and the title, "Lord Roberts of Kandahar."

Persia, Turkestan, Baluchistan and India surround this island monarchy with an estimated area of 245,000 square miles and a population, also estimated, of 5,000,000. Afghan historians date their people's beginning to King Saul, and refer to them as Children of Israel, a theory that may have stained nounter accentiones. have gained popular acceptance because of the Afghans' Semitic appear cause of the Arganas' semitic appearance, but it is not generally credited by ethnologists. Afghan literature is rich in poetry, mostly war epics and love lyrics. All but the mountain Kaffirs are Mohammedan, and they cling to a pagan belief in which are blended faint suggestions of old mythologies and ancient religious.

HABANA.

Cuban Capital's Long Name Has Dwindled.

The full name of the capital of Cuba is San Cristobal de la Habana. In 1634 a royal decree conferred upon the city the sounding title "Lave del Neuvo Mundo y Antemural de las Indias Octionals", which is conferred upon the city the sounding title "Lave del Neuvo Mundo y Antemural de las Indias Octionals", which is conferred to the conferred to t cidentales" which signifies "Key of the New World and Bulwark of the West Indies." In emphasis, the coat of arms of the municipality bears a symbolic key and representations of the fortresses of Morro, Punto and Habana is one of the several towns founded by the governor, Diego Ve-lasquez. He placed it upon the south coast, where the town of Batabano now stands. It was shortly removed to its present position and rapidly it grew to be the chief centre of the island and one of the most important island and one of the most important places in the new world. La Fuerza, the oldest fortification in the city, was erected near the close of the sixteenth century. Shortly afterward, Phillp the Second of Spain ordered the construction of the Punta and Morro forts, for the protection of the harbor, and at about the same time the official residence of the governor of the island was transferred from Santiago de Cuba to Habana.

In 1650, the population of Habana was hardly more than three thousand, but in the following two or three decades it doubled, owing to a large immigration of Spaniards from Jamaica. During this period, the city rose to be

During this period, the city rose to be the commercial centre of the Spanish American possessions, and the princi-American possessions, and the principal rendezvous of the royal fleets that carried on the trade monopoly between Spain and America. The walls inclosing the city were commenced in 1671 and finished 30 years later.

A map of the city at the beginning of the nineteenth century strikingly flustrates its rapid growth. Then the residences were almost all intramural, or within the walls. Large estancias and huertas occupied ground which is now intersected by paved streets and covered with substantial buildings.

The first impression made upon the visitor is of the massive character of the architecture. This characteristic is more pronounced than in any other Latin-American city. The building material generally used is a conglomerate of marine material, which hardens on exposure to the air. It is hewn into great blocks, and so used in construction. Walls are usually newn into great blocks, and so used in construction. Walls are usually covered with stucco or plaster, and colored in a variety of tins. Roofs are either flat, or built of the old Spanish tiles. The effect, which is enhanced by the presence almost everywhere of the presence almost everywhere of trees and shrubs, is pleasing in the extreme.

The most interesting portion of Habana is that which formerly lay within the walls. The houses here have for the most part been converted into business purposes, but a few persons still cling to their old homes.—

COOKIES

Good cookies are really very easy to make, once one has learned the tricks of the trace. And they are something every housekeeper should know how to bake, because they are so line for emergencies. Put into airtight tin boxes or the old-fashioned stone crocks of grandmother's day, they will keep fresh for weeks, and will tide over the hot weather, when no one wants to make cakes or despendent. no one wants to make cakes or des-serts of any kind. Fresh fruit, with sugar and cream, or stewed fruits served ice cold ,with a plate of crisp, pale gold augar cookies, or spicy, brown, nutty hermits, makes the most appetizing and health-giving desser for hot summer days that one could imagine. Pudding in History.

Pudding in its early form was made of minced meat of some sort, well seasoned and stuffed into an intestine, and then cooked by boiling. There are words in many early languages and then cooked by boiling. There are words in many early languages meaning pudding, but it seems originally to have come from some word meaning a short body or inflated skin lation of other people's ideas.

Shedding Their Bodies.

People who lose a leg or an arm feel it to be a great misfortune. But a lobster or a crab does not mind. lobster or a crab does not mind. He eimply grows another leg in its place. Even one of the lobster's big claws is no such great loss. A lizard cannot afford to lose a leg, but if you selze him by the tail he says, "Goodbye, tail?" and scurries off over the rocks, leaving it in your hand. As for the starfish, the piece broken off in a short time mends matters by growing a whole new body to fit that piece.

CHAPTER IX. "

CHAPTER IX.

Jack rowed a little way out, and followed the coastline; and, of course, rowed in eilence.

He had come to Withycombe on the impulse of the moment, and just because it occurred to him that he would like to see it again. He was not in the mood for London, for his father's death had hit him hard, and the fact that he had died in enmity with him had filled him with a regret, and caused a softening of the heart which made him long for quiet and repose. And Withycombe, he reinembered, was quiet enough.

And Withycombe, he reinembered, was quiet enough.

The fishermas's kit was adopted as much for convenience as disguise; he was fond of the sea, he had worked his passage out to Australia, and he plausibly accounted for his presence at Withycombe by telling the simple fisher folk that he was out of a job, and fancied a spell of rest. No one had recognized him. Mrs. Bunce would have done so, of course, but Mrs. Bunce was dead, and her daughter did not recognize in the good-looking young fisherman the lad who had exampered about the place in the bygone years. one years.

Jack, not having heard of the Misseos Bramleys' arrival, had no idea of the identity of the two girls who had engaged him as if he were an ordinary fisherman. He felt rather ordinary fisherman. He felt rather amused, and was not at all annoyed at their mistake; indeed, it was a tribute to the accellence of his disguise; and he considered it was rather a pleasant way of spending, the morning, far pleasanter than rowing by himself, or lounging on the beach brooding over the miserable past.

Every now and then he gianced at Clytie, who was leaning back, her eyes fixed on the small village of white cottages which climbed from the beach itself, and wound in broken line through the ravine until it was lost among the trees above. It was as beautiful a scene in its way as beautiful a scene in its way as any part of England can show, and Clytie, as she eat and gazed at surrendered to her. He listened in a kind of dream to the girls as they talked and laughed.

"Clytic, you're getting your feet fear-fully wet!" said Mollie reproachfully; but Clytie laughed almost gaily; she seemed as young, as girlish, as Mol-lie at that momnet. "Who cares?" she cried.

"That's a mistake, a popular falla-y," said Jack involuntarily. Both girls straightened themselves.

They had been bending in search of the shells—and looked at him with a scarcely veiled surprise; and Jack bit his lip and looked, in his confusion, very much as a fisherman would look who had been guilty of an involuntary presumption.

"I beg your pardon," he said—it seemed to him that he was always suing for forgiveness—but salt water is just as likely to give you cold as fresh. Why, nearly all the old people in Withycombe have rheumatism—so I'm told."

"If that's the case—and he ought to know; he's a sailor—you'd better come home as soon as possible and get your feet dry," said Mollie. "I don't your feet dry," said Mollie. "I don't want to have you laid up with a fever-ish cold or rheumatism, or whatever it is cold feet give you."
"Nonsense!" said Clytie, resuming her hunt for the shells. "You talk as if I were an old woman."

"You're worse; you're young and giddy," retorted Mollie. "We've got quite enough; let us go now; besides I'm hungry. What shall we do with the shells?"

"We're like the poor millionzires, said Clytie, with a laugh. \"Embar ed by our riche "Put them in this basket," said Jack,

Like children they poured in their treasures. Then Clytle went to step into the boat. Jack jammed it against the rock and held out his brown hand; the rock and held out his brown hand; and Clytie put her white one into it. His strong fingers closed over hers, and seemed to support, to steady, her whole body. Mollie put her small paw on his shoulder and jumped in, and he arranged the impromptu cushion and pulled out of the cave. His pea-jacket lay in the bottom of the boat, and gradually he managed, as if unconsciously to drag and push as if unconsciously, to drag and pusit forward with his feet until it touch as if unco ed Clytje's; then he remarked, as if the thought had just struck him: "You might as well put this round

"Yes, put it round them!" said Mol lie. And she bent forward to take the coat; but Jack, as if he had not noticed her intention, drew the thick coat over Clytic's knees and dexter-ously turned it under her feet.

"That's first-rate—and very thoughtful of you, Douglas," said Mollie.
"They say that Jack is always the

"Yes, Jack's my name," he said. "Oh, it is? Yes. I'd forgotten; I meant a sailor, of course. Row quickly, please; I don't want my afster to sit too long."

Clytic looked at her with faint sur-

"I bet you I walk you, ewim you,

"I'll bet you I walk you, ewim you, ride you, row you, for—for a dozen pairs of zhoves—Pinet's!"

"Done!" responded Clytie, imitating the boyish challenge.

"You couldn't row from here to the pler!" declared Mollie contemptuously. "I don't believe you could get those frog's paws of yours round the oars!"

Clytie roee promptly, but Mollie pulled her back again.

"No no! You look so comfy! But I think I'll have a turn, please," she said to Jack. He glanced at her hand sideways but Mollie had the quick eyes of monkey, and caught him. "Oh, yes, my hands are large enough. They're ever so much bigger than my sister's. Look!" she said,

"Yes, they'll go round," he said, with a smile. He gave up his place, and was going to the vacant seat be-side Clytie; but, suddenly remembering himself, pretended to arrange the "How heavy it is!" remarked Mollie, after a pull or two. "Why, no wonder! The boat's all down in front Go to the stern, please, Douglas."

"The boat's all right," he returned almost sullenly, and therefore more like a fisherman than any former speech of his was. "Go and de as you're told," said Mollie, sharply.

But she had met her match. He got up and reached for the oars.
"Better let me take her in, miss," he said, in the tone which always obtain ed obedience for Jack Douglas, the tone before which Teddy's lofty spirit had bent submissive. "There's a current setting off the shore, and you may not hit the channel." Mollie looked up at him for a moment, rebellious; then Clytic said:

"Come back to your seat." Mollie's eyes fell, and she obeyed.

The tide had run out since they started, and he saw that if the giris tried to land without assistance they would have to wade He leaped to would have to wade. He leaped to shore with a painter in his hand, and pulled up the boat as far as it would go, but it was not far enough to permit them to step out dry-foot. Without a moment's hesitation, and in a matter-of-fact way, he went to the side of he boat and held out his arms.

Mollie went into them with a spring that would have knocked him over if he had been less strong, and laughing-ly clung to him as he carried her to Then he returned for Clytie She had not been carried in a fisherman's arms since she was a child, and she hesitated, standing with one foot on the gunwale of the boat, and eyeing

She was very little heavier than Mollie, but for some reason or other, Jack's heart beat fast, and he felt a strange embarrassment and awkwardness, which did not, however, discover itself, for he bore her with apparent ease—and indifference—to the beach, and did not deposit her until he could do so on absolutely dry land.

Jack tugged the boat up the beach, and, lighting a pipe, sat down beside

The cituation was a bit grotesque he thought. Here was he, Sir Wilfred Carton, a baronet, playing at fisher-man, boatman, and "waiting" on the girl who might have been his wife. It was all very well for a day, was rather amusing than otherwise; but—but had he not better take himself off? Why should he remain in England, to be harassed and worried by his proximity to the hall, and—and what might have to the nan, and—and what might have been? Out there in Parraluna a warm welcome awaited him; he had half the prospect in Silver Ridge, was not quite a beggar—in Australia; while

But he had asked if the girls would But he had asked if the girls would want him on the morrow, and had been bidden by Mollie to "keep about!" Yes, it was funny, very, he told him-self; and he smfled, but rather ruefully. Then he thought of the two sisters. He liked Mollie—a rippling little tomboy, and as quick as a needle. He had seen that in the glance he had of course, that was-Clytie, he should say—Miss Bramley—who was playing the organ. Though she had scarcely spoken twenty words to him, he left that he liked Clytie better even than he liked the younger girl. She had altered so much that it almost s to him as if he were making her acquainance for the first time. How gentle she was. And yet there was strength of character behind those gray eyes, indicated by the firm lips with their dainty curve of sadness, of wistfulness.

He swung the child on his shoulder and marched up to the cottage.

He was lodging in a little rook's nest of a place stuck half-way on the hill which commanded a view of the sea and the road that wound through the valley; his landlady was the widow of an old fisherman, with one child, the Mary Mavourneen aforesaid; and both the mother and the child had taken a great fancy to their young lodger; and both, after the pleasing way of women, had begun thus carry to domineer over him, and to regard him as one of those simple and helpless men who require careful looking after in the matter of meals and wet elothing.

If Eve had been half as good a cook as you, Mrs. Westaway, Adam wouldn't have got into trouble over his gardening. Didn't you say there was a cushion for that boat, and didn't I see a scrubbing brush lying about somewhere? I should like to give her a good clean-out."

Grand Army Button.

The Grand Army of the Republic bronze button, worn by members on the left lapel of the coat, was adopted as the result of a motion made at Minneapolis in 1884 by Chili W. Haz zard, of Pennsylvania, that the council of administration of the G. A. R. directed to adopt a design for such a button. The design was formally adopted by the council and later approved by the national encampment.

WHITE GOLD

Latest Fad is Remarkably Like Platinum.

White gold has a funny way with it. In the jeweler's show case it is white gold—nothing else. Worn by a purchaser—presto!—it often becomes platinum.

White gold is an alloy of gold and winte gott is an admixture of several other metals, and it has the silvery gray-color of platinum. When carved with elaborate ornamentation or wien its dull gray lustre is left unpolished, the recurrence an expert to tell it from it requires an expert to tell it from platinum.

It is never intended to be an imitation of platinum, but it readily passes for that metal. The fact that it costs about one-sixth as much as platinum may explain its seemingly magical transformation after it has passed into private ownership.

A young voman went into a Chicago jewelry shop and asked to see some rings. The clerk set a tray before her.
"Are these platinum or white gold?"

she asked.
"Both," replied the clerk. The young woman studied the rings "But which is which?" she said. "I can't tell the difference."

"This one," said the clerk, "is $175.
That's platinum. This other is $20.
It is white gold."

"Oh," said the young woman,
"that's the way you tell the difference—by the price."

—by the price."
The incident illustrates the quality of white gold. It is an honest metal, but its wcarers are sometimes not so honest. If people insist on mistaking white gold jewelry for the very much -by the price more expensive platinum, it seems human nature to let the mistake go

Soldier's Appreciation.

Recently a woman well known in America, who has devoted all her time to relief work since the war be-gan, was visiting a hospital. The commanding officer had sent a military car for her. She entered the car just as an ambulance filled with wounded passed by. As she noticed the thin, pate faces, tears came into her eyes. The soldier-chauffeur asked if she was ill.

"No," she said, "these are tears of gratitude and pride."
"Madame," replied the boy, simply, "if I though that my being a soldier was worthy of but one of your tears. should feel that I had not lived in vain."-Red Cross Magazine.

Hunting the Average Man

Is there such a person as the average man? Could we pick out any individual at-home or abroad to-day and say that he or sne represented the predominating type of Britain? The answer is obviously "No." You wight as well try inating type of Britain? The answer is obviously "No." You wight as well try to strike an average between a sperrow and a peacock. There cannot be a "common mean" of humanity, is the concusion mean" of humanity, is the concusion mean" of humanity, is the concusion seen of J. D. Escasford in the Westmanster Gazette.

I was icu to this concusion by that terrible crisis—of the war that flared into a sudeen threat of disaster on the 12th of Apra. In such a time of peril there must, I fit-sught, be some great representative emotion thrilling all England; and if I could judge by my own feelinga, that emotion was one of harassed anxiety, combined with a passionate desire to heip. Whether that were so or not you may judge by my experience. It was in the morning that I spokes to the farmer. He lived 80 miles from London, and at 19 o'clock he had not yet opened his morning paper. He asked me the news over the gate, shook his head wisely at my slightly hysterione to the farmer. He lived 80 miles from London, and at 19 o'clock he had not yet opened his morning paper. He asked me the news over the gate, shook his head wisely at my slightly hysterione.

London, and at 19 o'clock he had not yet opened his morning paper. He asked me the news over the gate, shook his head wisely at my slightly hysterione. I was a "bad job." After that he turned his attention to the weather and to certain complaints about the new methods of food control.

Was he representative of Rural England, I wondered? Unimaginative—the broadest detail of stratehy, such as my amateur account of the threat to our communications, manifestly meant nothing to him. He had thought all his life ir terms of weather, crope, livestock and the market; and he could not see the owrid movement in these terms.

But I had no chance to test the rural mind further on that day, for I came up to Londor at midday, and it was there that my further researches were carried on.

mind further on that day, for I came up to London at midday, and it was there that my further researches were carried on.

At the club I got no satisfaction. I fell into the awful company of a man who seemed to think that the course of the war was less important than the fact that England was sinking into the lowest abyss of depravity which permitted the smoothing of a fox. To him that was the untimate crime. He was obsessed by the thought of it. I left him at the cub in disgust. He could not possibly be typical.

Going westward to call at a friend's house, I frowned in perplexity over the crowd of shopping women in Oxford street. They due hot represent the average, I assured my self. I thought of all the women, in munition factories, in hospitals, in offices all over the country, who were absorbed in war work; giving their best for the British Empira. This gay crowd about the milliners' windows was only the scum. It told one nothing of the steady, clear stream that flowed beneath.

Unbaypily, a was engaged at my friend's house by another visitor, a weman I had not met before. "Oh! the war, I simply can't bear to think of it." she said, in answer to my nervous opening; and, indeed, it seemed that all ane could bear to think of just then was the scandal case inat was coming up again before the magistrate the next day. I classed her with the farmer and the fox hunter. Her mind could only work on certain very restricted lines. She had no 'interests, no power of grasping anything outside of her own immediate pre-occupations.

no ::terests, no power of grasping anything outside of her own immediate preoccupations.

But I was slightly encouraged by the luculy ations of a just preceptibly intoxicated man, who addressed the inside passengers of the bus I took on my return. He was in mufti that was frankly the garments of a tramp, but he had his badge and his wooden leg to prove that he had once done his bit. He said he had once done his bit. He said he had once done his bit. He said he had been a qualified fool, and then repeated the statement with a richer adjective. He did not tell us why, though I asked him, for his major ambition was to terrify us with his own conviction that the enemy would be landing at Dover within a month. He offered to bet five shillings on that event, so certain was he of the truth of his prophecy. I could not deceive myself with the notion that he exemplified the British attitude at that mament, but he, at least, took the crisis seriously.

It was half-past eight that evening that I found my solution. I was in a tube train, and the man who sat next to me was a tired workman of 50 or so.

to me was a tired workman of 50 or so.

"Looks bad," he remarked with a glance at the heading of my evening paper. "Well, we've got to stick to it, whatever 'appens: I've been on since 7 o'clock this mornin."

And, perhaps, in a way, that mechanic did represent, if not the average. at least the mass of the men and women working at home through the criss. I thought of that steady stream of labor, of those who were sticking to their jobs through every anxiety, and meant to stick to them whatever happened. They were helping. They represented the spirit of endurance, and persoverance, the spirit of England. All those others that I had met were just exceptions.

In canned goods there are two kinds of spoilage. The first is called "flat sour" which includes all kinds of bacterial growth that develop within the food. The second type of spoilage to guard against is mould, a plant growth that is distinctly different from the bacterial growth. Moulded foods are seldom more than surface affected because air is necessary for its growth, but the "flat sour" spoilage means that the entire can must be discarded. Bulletin No. 93 of the Dominion Experimental Farms, "Preservation of Fruits and Vegetables for Home Use," which may be had on application to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, gives full information on the various methods of canning including old and valuable recipes as well as new ones which have been found valuable. Canning has become the most popular means of preserving large quantities of fruit and vegetables, and since these are plentiful during the summer months and at other times difficult to obtain, it is important to preserve quantities during the growing season for use in winter. Moreover the use of an abundant supply of fruit and green vegetables is essential to health at all seasons of the year.
