CHAPTER I.
IN THE SUNLIGHT.

"Last night!" echoed Lord Edgar, seating himself on the table, so near the previous volume lying open upon it that Mr. Temple hastened to shut it up and put it in its place on the shelves.

"So you think I am altered, do you? I suppose I am. I wish I could say that for the Abbey! By Jove! This morning as I walked around the place I almost fancied I had been asleep and dreaming, and that I was a youngster again; it was all so like I remember it—so unchanged. And how have you been?"

"I?—oh, quite well, my lord," murmured Mr. Temple, drawing some papers from out of reach of the St. Bernard's tail that wagged against them; "quite well."

"That's all right," responded Lord Edgar, heartily. "And you still live here, and spend your time among these dusty books—no, beg your pardon; of course they aren't dusty, not while you have charge of them."

The old man's face flushed at the frank, good-natured compliment.

"You are very kind, my lord. Yes, I spend most of my time here."

"And my father spends all his time boxed in his rooms upstairs. Why, you are like a couple of State prisoners, each in his separate cell."

"Four walls do not a prison make, my lord," murmured Mr. Temple, half unconsciously.

"Don't they?" retorted Lord Edgar, with a smile that lighted up his handsome face in a marked manner. "Don't they? I think they do. Anyhow, it would be a pretty good imitation for me. A great deal too near the reality. What nonsense the poets talk! How many walls do you want to make a prison? And, by Jove! the place is like a prison. I don't feel as if I could breathe in it! I've just been down to the stables. Not a bad lot of horses, take 'em all around. There's one, a chestnut with white stockings, but—with a short laugh and a flick of the whip—"of course you don't know. Don't suppose you ever saw 'em. You wouldn't know a chestnut from a roan. I suppose you would though! But, I say, I ought to beg your pardon for breaking in up-

"Oh, lord!" murmured the bookworm, involuntarily.

Lord Edgar laughed.

"Look here, Mr. Temple, don't you trouble. I'll go and find some of the girls. You hold this little wretch till I come back."

And he held out the quivering black-and-tan.

With something like a shudder of alarm, the old man shook his head and retreated toward the door.

"I'd—I'd rather fetch the needle, my lord—I would, indeed. I will not be a minute." He paused, and looked back at the St. Bernard wistfully.

And the Worst is Yet to Come--

"Er—er—my lord?"

"Well, Mr. Temple?" asked Lord Edgar, breaking off in a tone which he had commenced to whistle.

"You will be so good as to—to take care of the dogs? I—I mean not to let them get at the books or papers. Dogs are—rather destructive. There's that hound sniffing at one of the 'Ancient Fathers' already!"

"All right," assented Lord Edgar, cheerfully. "Come here Pompey—let that 'Ancient Father' alone. Come here, sir!" and he emphasized his command with a loud crack of the whip which sent Mr. Temple scurrying like a startled rabbit on his errand.

Left alone, Lord Edgar resumed his whistling, keeping time by knocking the handle of his whip against his heel, as he sat upon the table, and breaking off occasionally to call one of the dogs away from a too close examination of the books and prints scattered about the floor.

Five minutes passed; he grew tired of whistling, and took up one of the books and turned the leaves idly; but it was a treatise in Latin, of which language, though he had had it flogged into him at Eton, my lord did not remember more than half a dozen words, so he put the volume down, not too gently, and fidgeted with the antique paper-cutter; he managed to break this, swore at himself for his clumsiness, and, getting up, sauntered around the room, the dogs following him and gazing wistfully toward the door as if they pined for the fresh air and were as much out of place as their master in this abode of books and learning.

Suddenly the fox-hound, who had been sniffing about, discovered the little anteroom, and, catching sight of the motionless figure in the cream-colored dress, stuck its front legs stiffly forward and uttered a suspicious whine.

"Hello! What's the matter, Ranger?" inquired Lord Edgar, without looking around from his contemplation of a series of Hogarth's prints, original and rare. "What's the matter, old lady, rats or cats?"

The hound growled and uttered a little yelp in response, and Lord Edgar turned his head over his shoulder.

"What is it, old lady? Not rats, eh? More likely to be mice. Perhaps it's a cat. Mr. Temple's just the sort of old party to keep any number of cats. Come away; let her alone. Here Ranger!"

But the hound was not at all satisfied. He didn't quite know what it was; it didn't smell like a fox, it was true, but it didn't look like a rat, and cats, so far as his experience went, didn't go clothed in cream dresses or wear black satin shoes—which was all he could see of the animal; so he growled out loud this time, and then barked.

Lord Edgar left the picture and came sauntering toward the entrance of the china-room, the thong of the whip dragging behind him, the great St. Bernard very much interested, the black-and-tan wriggling under his arm in intense excitement; he came to the entrance carelessly, and indifferently pushed aside the curtain, and then stood rother to the spot.

It was neither rat, nor cat, nor mouse, but a young girl, standing as still as a statue against the background of tapestry, a faint flush on her cheek, her eyes downcast, her hands holding back her skirt so that she might occupy as little space as possible. The vision was so unexpected, so lovely, that Lord Edgar's heart seemed to leap with a sudden bound, then stand stock-still, as still as the girl herself. For a moment he stood thus, ashamed and dumb-stricken, then, being, like most of his kind since Hercules himself, one of the most bashful of men in the presence of ladies, he instantly resolved to turn and fly.

But at that instant Lela raised her eyes and looked at him. They were wonderful eyes, large and dark and somewhat dreamy; the glance—it was more than a glance, a fixed, waiting look—was that of a pure, young soul, innocent and unafraid, yet full of maidenly timidity.

The look chained him to the spot; it seemed to go straight to his heart; it was like in its effects the first "straight-from-the-shoulder" blow he had received in his first school fight; it overwhelmed and confused him. But he felt in that moment that flight was impossible. He was conscious for the first time that his boots were thick and muddy, that the place was

Try Making Your Own Cough Remedy

You can save about 50c and have a better remedy than the ready-made kind. Ready does not mean better.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple, home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is 16 ounces of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made, and save easily 50c. Tastes Pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right to the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nearly choked tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really a child's medicine.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norwegian pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2 1/2 ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded.

The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

peculiarly quiet and subdued, that his suit of rough riding cords was out of place and "stably," and that he had been making "a row" that must have seemed heathenish to this pure, sweet, young creature who stood looking at him with the mildness of an angel, a saint, a Roman vestal.

My Lord Edgar, the next Marquis of Farintosh, colored and hung his head like a school-boy—very much like a school-boy who had been detected in some juvenile crime; the black-and-tan nearly slipped from under his arm—he would have given worlds if he and his dogs could have slipped through the carpet, and his fingers clutched and unclutched the whip with an awkward, spasmodic movement.

And still Lela stood, not awkwardly like himself, but with sweet, graceful ease and quietude, as if waiting for him to speak or to go.

Again he almost resolved to bow and depart, but the St. Bernard, who was not really so afraid of a beautiful girl as his master, recognized Lela, went up to her and pushed his great nose against her hand.

Then, finding that he had to speak to a dog and not to a lovely girl descended apparently from heavenly regions, Lord Edgar found his tongue.

"Come here, Pompey! Come here, sir!" he said to the dog, and "Don't be afraid; he won't hurt you, indeed he won't!" to Lela.

Lela let her hand fall as softly as a snow-flake on the dog's big head, and looked down at him, then raised her eyes to Lord Edgar.

"I am not afraid of him. It is Pompey, the St. Bernard; we know each other very well."

Lord Edgar listened like one spell-bound. Lela's voice was musical; it was also soft and low in modulation, the result of her companionship with the old student whose nerves would have been shocked by a hard voice.

It sounded to Lord Edgar like a strain of music that he had heard in some opera—he could not remember where, and he felt afraid to answer her, his own voice sounded so loud and rough after hers.

How They Can Find Relief From Periodic Sufferings.

Nashua, N. H.—"I am nineteen years old and every month for two years I had such pains that I would often faint and have to leave school. I had such pain I did not know what to do with myself and tried so many remedies that were of no use. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the newspapers and decided to try it, and that is how I found relief from pain and feel so much better than I use to. When I hear of any girl suffering as I did I tell them how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped me."—DELINA MARTIN, 29 Bowers St., Nashua, N. H.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, therefore is perfectly safe remedy to give your daughter, who suffers from such painful periods as did Miss Martin.

The reason so many girls write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for advice, is because from their 40 years experience they have a store of knowledge which is invariably helpful.

Insurrection Rife in

Reinforcements to be sent to Allied Missions Under Arrest Spreading Over Europe

Egypt in Insurrection.
LONDON, March 25. Defending the Military Service Bill in the House of Commons today, Winston Spencer Churchill, Secretary for War, declared that the whole of Egypt was in a virtual state of insurrection. The position was so dangerous, he added, that the Government had to appeal to men on the point of demobilization to return and save their comrades from being murdered.

INTERNED IN BUDAPEST.
VIENNA, March 25. All members of the Allied missions in Budapest have been interned, including General Vix, the chief of the French mission, according to travellers arriving here by automobile from the Hungarian capital. Except for official messages, there is no communication by telephone between Budapest and Vienna.

PANIC IN BUDAPEST.
COPENHAGEN, March 25. The claims of the Hungarian Soviet Government to power as set forth in its wireless communications are largely untrue, according to a Vienna despatch. A panic prevails in Budapest, but the country, it is declared, has not yet resolved upon a Soviet republic.

INTERNAL AND EXTERNAL CAUSES.
PARIS, March 24. In official circles here the fall of the Karolyi Government in Hungary is ascribed to both internal and external causes. Internally it is known that the extremists have been steadily increasing in power from the day of the armistice. On the other hand with regard to external questions, the early hope of Hungary for rapprochement with the Allies had not been realized until recently. The events likewise occurred in which the Allies had to have direct bearings on the crisis. The first was the order by the Allies that the Hungarians withdraw from the Rumanian territory used by the Rumanian army in 1916.

MARTIAL LAW IN MADRID.
MADRID, March 25. Martial law was proclaimed at five o'clock this morning. It is understood that Constitutional guarantees may be suspended forthwith throughout Spain.

REVISION OF TARIFF LAWS.
MELBOURNE, Aus., March 25. Australia intends to undertake a revision of the tariff laws as soon as practicable with the object of developing her industries, according to an announcement by acting Premier Curtin today. The revision of the tariff laws will proceed with the following consideration in view of the necessity of preserving these industries brought into existence through the war; encouragement of contemplated new industries and extension and diversification of existing enterprises.

MAURICE'S OPINION.
WASHINGTON, March 25. General Sir Frederick Maurice, former Director of British military operations, who is here on a lecture tour, declared today that while he thought peace should be completed

Insurrection Rife in Egypt.

Reinforcements to be Sent Troops --- Allied Missions in Budapest Under Arrest --- Bolshevism Spreading Over Europe.

EGYPT IN INSURRECTION.
LONDON, March 25. The House of Commons to-day, in a debate on the Egyptian situation, was informed that the Egyptian Government has declared that the whole of Egypt is in a virtual state of insurrection. The position was so dangerous, it is added, that the Government has appealed to men on the point of mobilization to return and save their comrades from being murdered.

INTERNED IN BUDAPEST.
VIENNA, March 25. All members of the Allied missions in Budapest have been interned, including General Vix, the chief of the French mission, according to travel reports arriving here by automobile from the Hungarian capital. Except for special messages, there is no communication by telephone between Budapest and Vienna.

PANIC IN BUDAPEST.
COPENHAGEN, March 25. The claims of the Hungarian Soviet Government to power as set forth in its wireless communications are being largely untrue, according to a Vienna dispatch. A panic prevails in Budapest, but the country, it is declared, has not yet resolved upon a Soviet republic.

INTERNAL AND EXTERNAL CAUSES.
PARIS, March 24. Official circles here the fall of the Karolyi Government in Hungary ascribed to both internal and external causes. Internally it is known that the extremists have been steadily increasing in power from the day of the armistice. On the other hand, the hope of Hungary for re-attachment with the Allies had not been realized until recently. The news likewise occurred which are said to have direct bearings on the crisis. The first was the order by the Hungarians to withdraw from the Roumanian boundary fixed by the Roumanian treaty of 1915.

MAURICE'S OPINION.
WASHINGTON, March 25. General Sir Frederick Maurice, former Director of British military operations, who is here on a lecture tour, declared to-day that while he thought peace should be completed speedily, he did not believe extensive military operations would result from the Bolshevik movement in Hungary and elsewhere. Europe, he said, is so exhausted that a war of any magnitude within the next ten years is impossible. The Hungarian situation, in the opinion of General Maurice, is "a movement of despair dictated by hunger at present and uncertainty for the future."

STRIKE IN BARCELONA.
MADRID, March 25. A general strike has broken out in Barcelona. Premier Romanones, who had intended to resign, has declared that he considers it his duty to remain in office.

AMENDMENT ADOPTED.
PARIS, March 25. An American amendment to protect nations against the influx of foreign labor, was adopted to-day by the League of Nations' Commission. It affirmed the right of any country in the League to control matters solely within domestic jurisdiction.

WAITING TO REPORT.
PARIS, March 25. Virtually all the commissions and sub-commissions of the Peace Conference are waiting for instructions from the Supreme Council in order to close and submit their reports.

AIR FLIGHT.
LONDON, March 25. The British airship D-34 returned to her base on the Clyde at noon today, after a flight which kept her in the air continually for 19 hours. The itinerary included a flight to Dublin, the circling of the Isle of Man, and home by way of Liverpool and the Midlands. It was intended to remain in the air 24 hours and circle Ireland. The Evening Standard says that the next flight of the ship will be over the ocean to make certain tests. An attempt will be made to cross the Atlantic.

INDISPOSED.
LONDON, March 25. There have been many rumors lately regarding the health of Viscount Northcliffe, the newspaper owner and former head of the British mission to the United States. A bulletin issued by his physicians at Mentone, France, says he went there two months ago suffering from a protracted bronchial and laryngeal catarrh, resulting from an attack of influenza last year. He has made rapid progress as the result of the more favorable climatic conditions and rest. The statement says that it is essential that he does not return to England at present.

NO RENUNCIATION.
BASLE, March 25. Vienna newspapers received here declare that former Emperor Charles left Austria without making any renunciation of the throne for himself or his family, which had been demanded. The Reichstag asserts that four Archdukes resident in German Austria, have renounced the throne and all their privileges, claiming the rights of only ordinary citizens.

No Appointment Likely.

The report that has been in circulation on the street for a few days past to the effect that Charles Fergie, President of the International Coal Company, would probably take over the office of general manager of the Dominion Steel Corporation, is without foundation. It is stated, however, that Mr. Fergie has been acting in capacity of consulting engineer for a short period. The position of general manager of the corporation has remained vacant since the resignation of Mr. D. H. McDougall, who went to the Nova Scotia Steel & Coal Company.

PATRICK FORTUNE.
On Friday, March 21st, the Angel of Death appeared in this settlement, and brought away from this vale of tears to the better land, Patrick, only surviving son of John and Margaret Fortune, a young man, beloved and regretted. He died at the age of 20, after a protracted illness. Loving parents and kind friends nursed him tenderly. They would have wished to prolong the time of his sojourn, but God willed otherwise, and His will is best. We grieve, indeed, to check our grief is but to hide our love. But we must bow to God's eternal decree. He has taken him to Himself, to that home where sorrow is unknown, where we shall meet again never more to part. He has gone fortified by all the rites and helps with which Holy Church sweetens the passing of those who are faithful unto death. His remains now lie resting in the sombre cemetery, near the home, amidst the friends and the scenes that he loved faithfully and well. He has left us to mourn, and as our faith teaches, it needs be, to befriend. Let us pray, let us sorrow not repine till we shall meet again. May he rest in peace.—Cor. Tor's Cove, March 25th, '19.

The weekly budget of food that cost $7.73 in January, 1914, cost $13.78 last January, says the Labor Gazette.

In 1914, says the Brandford (Ont.) Exporter, city day labourers received 17 1/2 cents an hour. To-day they receive 45 cents an hour.

The Detroit police took 5,200 bottles of imported beer from the home of August Marxhausen in a raid, but they returned them all, by order of the court.

Once more the Labor Gazette announces that wholesale prices have fallen, while retail prices have increased. This is a matter that demands explanation.

The Senate and House conferees in Washington have completed their preliminary review of the proposed Revenue Bill by agreeing to restore the pre-war postage rules on first-class mail matter after July next. The agreement on postal rates will mean a return to the use of the two-cent stamp for letter postage and the one-cent postal card rate. In Canada to have its pre-war postal rates restored, or are to be handicapped as compared with the United States.

Bad news killed two fathers on Monday, and in each case the son also is dead. Charles E. Van Loan, the short-story writer, died near Philadelphia, and the news was fatal to his father in Los Angeles. In Detroit, Solomon Moscovitz, aged 80, was stricken when he learned his son, Samuel Moscovitz, was alleged to have swindled his companions in the Navy at Chicago, and did not survive the shock. Shortly afterward the son committed suicide.

In presenting Canada with two submarines, the British Admiralty says the gift is made "as some recognition of the great contribution made to the defence of the Empire by the Canadian naval force." "If the

The report of a special lunacy commission of Poughkeepsie, declaring Mrs. Antoinette E. Galwin, of Cornwall, N.Y., owner of $1,000,000 worth of property, insane and incompetent, was filed at New York on Monday. Supreme Court Justice Noronhauser will be asked to appoint a committee of the State. Mrs. Galwin, who is only 38 years old, is now confined in Dr. Brooks' cottage, at Rye, N.Y., in care of three trained nurses. Dr. Dana, of New York, testified that she is suffering from dementia precox. Among her peculiarities is that she swallows buttons and her diamond earrings every time she gets a chance, and she insists on sleeping under the bed. Testimony also showed that she says the name of one of her nurses is "Hallucination." Mrs. Galwin comes from a prominent family. Her husband, Chas. F. Galwin, testified that his wife has been suffering from mental trouble for nearly two years. The couple, who have three children, at one time resided at the Anacnia Hotel, New York city.

Will Try Voyage Across Atlantic.
SPRINGFIELD, March 12.—Bert J. Perry, a naval aviator, announced here to-day that he has been ordered to report shortly, at Cape May, N.J., to act as chief engineer of a dirigible balloon with which it is planned to attempt a trip across the Atlantic Ocean, under Government direction. He is here on a brief furlough.

Perry said the start would be made from Newfoundland some time next month, with the destination Queens-town. Endurance tests have demonstrated the practicability of the transatlantic voyage. Perry said he believed, and the principal difficulty will be to pick up gasoline and other supplies from the convoy while both the dirigible and the supply boats are in motion.

AVIATION.

The Evolution of Aircraft.

ARTICLE II.
(Specially Written for the Telegram.)

The first record of actual flying contained in Greek Mythology— that it is nothing more than myth— is that of Icarus, son of the great winged god, who, with his wings of wax and feathers, jumped off a cliff and flew to the Greek Archipelago. Higher and higher until he reached the sun. There, the story goes, the heat melted the wax and the wings were attached to his body, and the gallant young aviator fell into the sea. When it is known that the higher one goes the hotter it gets, it will be seen that Icarus was not very wise. The same was true of the first man to attempt to fly— even supposing, in the first place, that the flying could be done. The next recognized attempt at flying was made in France in the 18th century. The article used was a spherical balloon, with an open mouth at the bottom. The idea was to have the air rise into the open mouth of the balloon, and as this air would be lighter than that outside, it would lift the balloon. Various efforts with this type of "flier" were made until the 19th century, when hydrogen gas was used in spherical balloons. At the latter end of the 18th century a Frenchman conceived the idea of flying with a heavier-than-air machine, and offered a prize to anybody who could accomplish the flight. The prize was won by a French trick-flier. He attached a sort of wings to the bicycle, and pedalling along the ground at a great rate, jumped the bicycle several inches in the air. However, this constituted no flight whatever. The wings were mere apparatuses and it was a perfectly simple thing for any trickster to jump the bicycle like this.

The first real effort at the mastery of the air was made by the Wright brothers of America. These were Orville, since deceased and Orville. They built a glider of the biplane type, which machine was run down a steep hill on rails, in order to gain sufficient momentum for the rise. However, the primitive controls they used did not enable the machine to fly at all. Nothing daunted the brothers took the flier to the top of a dune, and essayed another effort, being bodily pushed off the edge of a sheer precipice. This time the machine actually glided into the air, and landed safely on the ground below. This is the first recorded effort of true flight which met with any measure of success. The next effort was again on rails, a primitive engine being installed, and a platform and wheels used. Finally success was achieved.

The next nation to take up flying was the French, who evolved a representative type. The next notable achievement was the flying of the English Channel by Bleriot in a machine of his own design. This was a French design. The evolution of this machine had a big effect on flying, and was the first really satisfactory aircraft engine giving a reasonable amount of power for its weight. This engine was used almost exclusively until the outbreak of the war.

After Bleriot came the trick-flying of Pegoud, known as the "up-sidewalk" flier. He was the first man to be recorded as having looped the loop. About this time efforts were made by the London Daily Mail to stimulate even greater interest throughout Great Britain in aircraft. Prizes were offered for a successful flight from London to Man-

THE STORY OF GEORGE SINGER.

I. C. MORRIS.
CHAPTER IV.—SINGER'S DELUSIONS.

Men, and women too, are sometimes the victims of circumstances, but this man was the victim of his delusions, and so warped was he by them, that it did not seem possible to ever get him clear of their web. I tried hard to do so, but was not able, for the victim outstripped me every time.

As a basis for his delusions he did not believe in working. He told me that he could earn four pounds a week in London painting birds, and three pounds a week painting flowers. I reasoned with him about it, and said that if he could earn so much money why not go and do it. He stated that he could not do good work. I said that if he wanted to do good work in that extreme sense, why not go back to London, and earn his four pounds a week, and live on one pound and give the other three pounds to some good cause; or if he preferred painting flowers, why not do so, and earn the three pounds, and live on one pound, and give the other two to some good cause. To this he made one firm and unconditional reply as follows: "Oh, no! I could not serve the Lord and work."

Another time I met him on Water Street, and enquired how he was getting along; and found that he was in the same place, and that although he barely had his dinner he was still firm in his opinions about not working. I thought that I would try a little logic on him and see what effect it would have, and so I spoke to him in the following strain: "You came to this country on board a steamer, and that steamer had a crew. Somebody had to work to build that ship, and the crew had to work to get her out to Newfoundland. If nobody worked how would you have got out here, or how would you have travelled about as you have. Some one has to work to keep things going; and the world could not exist if all men adopted your policy and idled as you do." I thought that I had reasoned a little bit of his delusion out of him for a minute or two at least; but I had not: he was ready for me as soon as he saw I had finished, and in one sentence he left me without a word more to say and without a leg to stand on. He calmly looked into the shop window, and shaking his hands as in horror, said to me, "Oh, yes; that is so; but then you see the Lord fed the Israelites in the wilderness." He had beaten me, and from that day I ceased to reason with him, and gave him up to his delusions.

Another time I asked him if he could not do better by joining some church, and use his talents in co-operation with some proper organization. I saw he was getting down and out very much; and that his case would soon be a desperate one. The reply which he made to my suggestion was equally emphatic as his others. He raised his stick to his lips and said, "the established church had crucified his Lord, and therefore he could not join it." I pushed the question a little, and his further reply was blasphemous; he said that "he would rather go to hell than join the church."

This rapidly covers the evolution of aircraft from its commencement to the outbreak of the war. Since then enormous strides have been made, and in our next article we hope to show the rapidity with which aviation has marched forward from 1914 to the present day.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir—Please grant me a little space to give credit to four gentlemen of the Rifle Club who did yeoman service in the training of our Boys to use the rifle. Strange to say, no reference has been made to this matter ere this, but I suppose now that the war is over gratitude to those who helped to win it is a thing of the past.

The gentlemen whom I refer to are Messrs John Dea of Reid's, Mr. Wood of Wood & Kelly, Mr. Slatyer of Slatyers Dry Goods and Mr. Patk. J. O'Reilly, grocer of New Gower St.

I know that these patriotic citizens devoted their time and ability unselfishly to the great cause, and night after night they gave their services to the training of the Regiment.

Therefore I feel that in justice to them this little item should appear. It is poor recompense from the public that even the work of these men is not generally known.

Yours etc.

Carlton, the well-known conjuror has returned from a long period of tour with a brand-new topical story. It concerns a man, who, like a good many more of us, was greatly troubled in his mind by the present high price of gas.

"One day, however," says Carlton "he rushed home to his wife in a state of great exasperation.

"My dear," he cried, "I've discovered how to reduce our gas bills. The meter is full of little wheels and when you blow down the pipe the wheels go backwards."

So he blew down the pipe for a couple of hours. At the end of the month the gas man came and read the meter.

"I don't know how it is, sir," he said, "but as near as I can figure it out from this meter, the gas company owes you £7 13s. 8d."

The People Who Won't Tell.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

"She's the sort of person," said Molly, the little stenographer lady, "that you wouldn't be afraid to tell things for fear she might fall out with you sometime and then tell them round."

Molly was talking about a friend of whom, despite the fact that she has no very brilliant qualities, she has always been very fond. "She's so dependable," Molly had said, and then had given this illustration of her dependability.

And after that I didn't wonder that Molly found her worth counting among her list of friends.

Do you?

When Friendships Change.

There are so many people to whom one is afraid (if one stops to think in time) to tell anything, one doesn't want made public property, for just that reason. Sometimes, alas, one does not stop to think and then one is in danger of doing a good deal of regretful thinking later. When friendship is changed by the chemistry of misunderstanding or of changed ideals or perhaps of better understanding, into dislike, the dislike is apt to be of a most active nature. Under these circumstances it takes very strong inhibitions of honor and justice and decency to prevent the possessor of secrets from using them to wound and hurt the object of dislike. Or if there is no real hate and actual intent to injure or wound, there may come in the course of years, a loose-tonguedness which the claims of friendship keep in restraint but which, after the passing of the friendship, makes ducks and drakes of your confidences.

Those Dangerous Confidential Moments.

I can write with a good deal of feeling on this subject because I have some of these afterthoughts myself. One of the proverbial "which I try very hard to keep in mind when I am in that dangerously confidential mood with some friend whom I have not known long enough to be sure that she has these fine inhibitions is, "Of the unspoken word thou art master, but the spoken word is master of thee."

Another thought which inevitably arises to the surface in this connection is what a fine thing it is to be oneself, the sort of person Molly describes, the person whom it is safe to say intimate things to because they have so fine a sense of honor that a broken friendship would not be regarded as any excuse for broken pledges.

A Friend of Ireland.

(From the Boston Transcript.) Sir Horace Plunkett, one of the greatest of Irishmen, and one who has no living rival in the wise and conscientious service which he has rendered to his country, came to us here in Boston somewhat unexpectedly, but all may rejoice that the Commonwealth and the city received him with due honors. There is no citizen who should not be proud to listen to the words and applaud the generous sentiments of such a man. As the president of the ill-fated Irish convention—which would not have been ill-fated if it had followed his advice—Sir Horace counselled union, and favored real Home Rule for Ireland. If he now warns his countrymen against a foolish waste of their national energy in an attempt to secure independence by rebellion at a time when no such thing is possible or even desirable, it is because not only is he a patriot in this regard but his own experience and by the whole history of recent times, but because he has too profound and holy a love for Ireland to wish to see her plunged into disaster and set far back on the road of progress. Who can doubt that the sentiment of the real lovers and sympathetic supporters of the liberty of Ireland is with Sir Horace Plunkett? It has at least been a high satisfaction for Massachusetts and for Boston to grasp the hand of this true patriot, and to listen to his unfeeling words of wisdom.

THE COURTSHIP OF A SALESMAN.

A salesman wooed a lady fair; like goods upon a shelf. Unto the maiden of his choice he sought to sell himself. And he was glib and smooth of speech, yet frank and honest, too.

"Others may promise more than I, much more may others give, I can but offer unto you my best while I live. You'll pay a greater price for me than some one else may ask. But do not judge the liquor by the labels on the cask. High hopes and young ambition now, and dreams of joys to be, are all I have to sell to you, but love I guarantee."

"I will not fall you in the test, I will not wound your pride. I will not bring you down to shame, if you become my bride. When trials come I'll bear the load, I may not bring you fame, Nor wealth nor friends of high degree, but if your love I claim I'll try to bring you happiness, whatever else may be. And here the maiden blushed and said: "You've sold yourself to me."

The Annexation Bogey.

(From the Peterboro Review.) The United States and Canada have lived at peace for over 100 years, and their relations to-day are more friendly than ever. The national creed of the Americans is against the acquisition of territory by conquest. Canada is safe from armed aggression from that quarter. Annexation could be effected only with the consent of a majority of the people on both sides of the border, and this puts it beyond the range of possibility. Even the American flag in Alaska is no menace. Canada can set its hand to its own household affairs undisturbed. The annexation bogey is simply the creature of a disordered brain. This country is comparatively secure, with at the north a pole which even American enterprise has not been able to locate to popular satisfaction, a vast ocean on either side and a friendly nation of one hundred million people to the south. Hence the slogan.

Disabled Bark at Halifax.

Halifax March 19.—Leaking and with her rudder bent the Icelandic bark Coriolanus, arrived in port yesterday afternoon and is now anchored in the stream. The Coriolanus sailed from Reykjavik on February 25th, for St. John's, Nfld., to load there. On her way to that port she encountered heavy ice which caused the vessel to leak and also bent the rudder. She is leaking in the forepeak and main hold. She will go in the dry dock here for repairs.

PIMPLES AND BLACKHEADS. The liquid green soap treatment is excellent for eliminating the most stubborn case of blackheads and pimples. Before retiring cleanse the skin thoroughly with liquid green soap and a complexion brush. Then make a paste by mixing flowers of sulphur with spirits of camphor and cover the skin with it. In the morning remove the sulphur with tepid water and a bland soap and apply to the face a lotion made of equal parts of rosewater and glycerine.

If you find that the pimples do not respond to this treatment and remain hard it will be necessary to open them and eject the secretion which causes the irritation. This requires a great deal of care, for if done hastily and improperly large pores will be the result. First soften the skin by holding cloths wet with warm water against it for at least five minutes. Next take a fine needle and sterilize it by dropping it into alcohol or boiling water. Lance each pimple with the needle and press it gently, placing a piece of antiseptic gauze over the fingers to extract the secretion. Immediately apply a drop of camphor to contract the hole and then apply a paste made of lanoline, five-eighths ounce; almond oil, five-eighths ounce; sulphur precipitate, five-eighths ounce; oxide of zinc, five-eighths ounce; violet extract, one-half dram. To mix properly, combine the sulphur and zinc with the oil in a smooth paste, melt the lanoline in a cup placed in hot water and gradually add it to the other mixture. The violet extract being added last. This should be applied at night and allowed to remain on until morning.

The following is also an excellent cream to be rubbed on the face when there is a tendency to pimples: Beta naphthol, one gram; sulphur precipitate, ten grams; potash soap, ten grams. In case this should prove irritating to the skin wipe the face with toilet vinegar to counteract the effect.

WOZZY WILLIE. We'd better watch the former Kaiser, or he'll be back on Prussia's throne; we leave him free—it might be wiser to house him in a shack of stone. Some donjon keep of ancient pattern with walls a score of cubits thick, with no one near; but some grim slattern to hand him busy bones to pick. A lot of Huns are busy plotting to see their exiled Bill recrowned, and will be till his nose is rotting in some damp dungeon underground. And Bill sits up, in waltz watching, and doubtless murmurs, "o'er and o'er." "Unless they do some bonehead botching, my friends will have me crowned once more." "I had to think what things may happen if Bill again his sceptre owns; perhaps some four years more of scraping, with ghastly toll of blood and bones. It is no dream that Huns are planning to bring the old rule back again, all corners of the emire manning with Bloody Billy's kind of men. And we permit the exile cheesy to stay where he can help them plan, I wonder why we are so easy; why don't we squelch the also ran? We need to say we'd ruthlessly punish old Bill and wipe out every debt; for all his misdeeds, base and Hunnish, he's had to pay in bloody sweat. He's in peace, the monstrous vandal, who should be fed to hungry sharks; it is a blooming shame and scandal—and why are we such easy marks?"

Bay Hospitals.

Stirring Appeal by Dr. Grenfell.

(Concluded.)

...a little bit of our coast. Goose Bay, Cape Norman, fifty thousand gallons of fish were taken this year. The fish of St. Barbe must have eight far more. Our taxes must be paid here amounting to between one and two hundred thousand dollars.

The report states "all the accidents, of the city and outports, are due to St. John's for treatment." It is reasonable to expect a man with a compound fracture, like one here, should have to go to St. John's. We have no railways, no roads and now our navigation, in the worst of ways, is completely closed. The report continues "practically the surgery in the island is done at St. John's Hospital." If that is so, must have happened to the hundreds of patients who have been operated on during twenty years in our outports for "acute surgical ailments." All must have perished miserably by the wayside, and many more yet do so unless bay hospitals are established.

Our hospitals in the outports are willing to stand by their heads as a proof that bay hospitals give as good scientific treatment as our Newfoundland Directors give me, unless a suitable grant is made towards these hospitals, to keep them up. Even then I should like to England perfectly satisfied have put in over a quarter of a century on the coast, if it has only cost that point.

The best comment on the need for hospital work in the outports is the fact that so many highly educated and women come every year just even having their travelling expenses paid for them, because they consider that the opportunity which they find to serve their fellowmen is their return.

We have just made a tour of Green Bay as far as Twillingate. The object of our trip was to make the outports longer satisfied with one hospital, continued to a place several days, often weeks, and even months distant from them and their loved ones their hour of need; any more than they would have been content when soldiers were "over there" with hospital nearer than Inverness. The help can be provided in war, certainly it can in peace. The outports are fighting for the centres of civilization when they are reaping the harvest of the war here in peace times, just as they live and die for us in time over there; and we owe ourselves, just as much now as then, to see that the modern requisites of civilization are properly provided for those who are far off, in order to gather this harvest, or for the outports who labor in any way for the betterment of the world.

This is every bit as essential as that these amenities be provided for those who are at work and trade in St. John's. The outports of industry to humanity are to be entirely different as a result of the war. The fighting with Germany, though it has been the pale into insignificance as the past unless the new adjustment of relationships between capital and labor saves the world from Bolshevism in one of its many forms.

The scientific discovery in recent years has attracted such wide-spread attention among physicians in this country and throughout Canada as the D. D. D. Prescription for Eczema.

After years of debate, medical authorities are now agreed that eczema and other skin diseases are not seated in the blood but are caused by myriads of microscopic germs gnawing the skin just below the epidermis. The skin is perfectly healthy, it is only when these germs are present that eczema, scientists are now agreed you must cure the skin through the skin. The medicine must be in solid form in order to penetrate properly. The true remedy has been discovered in D. D. D. Prescription. The instant you wash with this cleansing, soothing liquid you will find the itching gone. Simple to use, absolutely harmless to the most sensitive skin. D. D. D. Prescription is the most scientific and efficient remedy known for Eczema in all its forms. Bad Legs, Pimples, Scalp Troubles, Open Sores and Itching Rashes, Bad Rheum and Ring Worms, and all other skin troubles yield to D. D. D. The first bottle will prove it.

Stop that itch now, get a bottle of D. D. D. Prescription to-day. Sold Everywhere.

Colony in proportion to its population; the remainder to be provided by subscriptions, donations, patients' fees, and endowments. The Government beyond receiving the reports and audited accounts annually, should have no voice in the management whatever.

The Government should commission some especially qualified person to examine the methods adopted everywhere or anywhere for bringing about and maintaining the best results, and such should be put before the people and adopted.

The success of the hospital will depend most largely upon the medical officer in charge. Only those who are specially trained themselves can judge of a man's professional ability. That of course must be the very first consideration. He should hold the Fellowship of the College of Surgeons of America or England if possible. He must have had special surgical training, and must have been an interne in a really large, well known, and well recognized hospital. No politics, national, or family influence should ever for a minute be permitted to bias the choice. He must not come to learn by experience gained in our midst on our sick. Right character must of course be another primary essential. Religious affiliation and nationality should not even be asked. We have found this an excellent rule. The man is needed and employed for giving the best possible skilled help for our bodies—politics, religion, nationality, should therefore be considered as purely subsidiary and private personal matters. But there is a psychic element in healing, and the doctor who is wanted is not a man at all unless he has the love of God and his fellowmen in his heart.

Voters of Newfoundland, will you not read this through and if you love life and health, and want to improve your country and safeguard your families, will you not insist that bay hospitals be a plank in the platform of the next Government.

WILFRED T. GRENFELL, M.D.
St. Anthony, Nfld., January 20th, '19.

Child is Cross, Feverish and Sick

Look Mother! If tongue is coated, cleanse little bowels with "California Syrup of Figs."

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver, and bowels so nicely. A child simply will not stop playing, to empty the bowels and the result is they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour, then your little one becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhea. Listen Mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; children love it and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits, sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

The Caging of Germany.

(From the New York Globe.)

President Wilson, it is said, feared sight of France's scars would too much embitter him for judicial consideration of torts to be imposed on Germany. But no American can rightly judge the conditions of peace now being reported if he forgets what Germany did. Not to increase indignation, but merely to remind us of the sheer necessity of ample safeguards against recurrence of the savagery, a partial inventory of the Germans in northern France is taken from official sources:

Houses destroyed 850,000, valued with their contents at $3,000,000,000.

A million and a half head of livestock killed or stolen and half a million articles of farm machinery destroyed or stolen, valued at $1,200,000,000.

Of the great industries of northern France, turning out in 1913 94 per cent of the country's industrial production, "nothing exists—workshops, machine factories, mines, factories, everything has been destroyed or carried away by the enemy. The destruction is so complete that, in the particular case of our coal mines two years of effort will be necessary before a single ton of coal can be mined and ten years must elapse before the production of these mines can even equal that of 1913."

Railway lines rendered useless and rolling stock stolen to the value of many hundreds of millions.

Human lives lost in military action and by disease and mutilation, 2,500,000—one in every 15 of France.

There may be persons who think it is possible to impose unreasonable terms upon a nation guilty of these willful crimes. None can be so mad as to tolerate any plan that would allow it even to break loose again.

Eat More Fish.

SOME NEW DISHES.

Broiled Halibut.
Take some slices of halibut, about one inch thick. Dust over salt and pepper, cover with three tablespoonfuls butter and leave in dish for half an hour. Roll them in flour and broil over a very clear fire from twelve to fifteen minutes. Garnish with parsley and slices of lemon and serve.

Salmon Loaf.
One 25-cent can salmon, one beaten egg, one-half cup milk, one cup cracker crumbs, one-tablespoon butter, seasoning. Remove bones from salmon, then add the beaten egg, cracker crumbs, butter, seasoning and, lastly, the milk. Bake in a loaf pan from one-half to three-quarters of an hour. This makes a delicious loaf.

A Norwegian Fish Pudding.
Remove skin and bones from six pounds of fresh cod and pound in mortar until smooth; add teaspoon salt and tablespoon butter and continue working for ten minutes. Turn in large bowl and work in two egg yolks, and a cup of cream. Use potato masher and blend carefully. Add gradually another cup of cream and pinch of allspice. Beat hard and when all frothy, turn into a butter mold and steam for three hours.

Fish in Winter Sauce.
Clean the fish, remove the bones and boil until tender. White sauce—melt three tablespoonfuls of butter in one tablespoonful of cornmeal and two tablespoonfuls of flour. Stir in one cup of the stock (in which the fish was cooked) with one-half cup of milk, a bay leaf and a slice of onion, boil for five minutes. Mix well and allow the sauce to boil, then add the flaked fish and let simmer for about 10 minutes. Season to taste with salt and pepper and a few drops of lemon juice, and serve with hot biscuit.

OPENING NEW EXTENSION

Through our earnest effort to give to our patrons exclusive merchandise, courteous and competent service, our ever-increasing business has already outgrown the new buildings added in September, Nineteen Hundred and Sixteen and compelled us to take over the two adjoining buildings, and we now announce the opening of our Men's and Boys' Outfitting Department and Ladies' and Gentleman's Boot and Shoe Department in the building adjoining our Ladies' Showroom. It is our purpose to provide a Men's Furnishing Store conducted along uncommon lines, a shop that impresses you at once with its unusual arrangement, a shop that shows you at a glance the things you want, a shop manned by expert assistants where you will find an infinite variety of Men's Goods of the latest styles and patterns.

Make Fountain Broad.

(From the Kansas City Star.)

Bolshevism is the child of misery and ignorance. There is no chance for it to take root in America because, in spite of all faults, America has managed roughly to keep the door of opportunity open and to obtain a wide diffusion of the gains of civilization. The broader the foundation the more secure the edifice. It is for America to make sure that the whole population shares in a decent standard of living and that social justice prevails. Then Bolshevism will continue to find its only support in the lunatic fringe which always exists, but which is of itself powerless for mischief.
