CHAPTER XI.
A STORY OF SHAME.
"Ricardo! I shall make a new will!" Mr. Barrington and Lord Clarence exchanged glances; the signor stood blandly, smoothly regarding them with an innocent sadness in his swarthy face.

Mr. Barrington silently regarded the handkerchief for a moment, then he said: "I believe Mr. Knighton was an old friend of yours, Signor Ricardo; you have known him for a long time?" "A very old friend! Yes, I have known him for a very long time!" assented Ricardo.

"I make the remark," said Mr. Barrington, "because he seems to have confided in you more than he had done in his friend here, Lord Montacute."

Ricardo bowed to Lord Clarence. "That is natural," he said, with a little gesture. "It is not the first time Godfrey Knighton has confided in me."

Mr. Barrington frowned gravely. "Then you think that Mr. Knighton, intending to make a new will, may have destroyed the old one?" he asked.

The signor shrugged his shoulders. "I cannot say! He may have done so already; he may have done so the night he died—I cannot say!"

"It is most extraordinary!" remarked the lawyer.

The signor looked from one to the other.

"But surely it does not matter?" he said, innocently. "Miss Iris, the poor young lady, will inherit the whole of my friend's property?"

"Certainly!" said Mr. Barrington. "That is all right! That is the law of England, is it not?"

"Yes," said Mr. Barrington; "the lawful child or children inherit where there is no will."

Signor Ricardo gave a little start and a click of the teeth.

"What do you mean by lawful?" he inquired.

Mr. Barrington looked at him with surprise.

"What do I mean by lawful, Signor Ricardo? I mean children born in wedlock, of course."

"In wedlock—you mean when the father and mother are married, is that so?"

"Exactly," assented Mr. Barrington. The signor started up from the chair in which he had seated himself, with a hasty ejaculation of dismay, then fell back again, and stared from one to the other with a disturbed and agitated countenance.

Mr. Barrington looked at him with surprise and inquiry.

"What is the matter, Signor Ricardo?" he asked.

The signor's agitation seemed to increase.

"Peste!" he exclaimed between his teeth. "That is the law, is it? The father and mother must be married by a clergyman in accordance with your statutes, is it so?"

"Certainly!" assented Mr. Barrington. "But what has that to do with Miss Iris?"

The signor rose from his chair and began to pace the room, apparently in a whirl of dismay and indecision.

The two gentlemen watched him, surprised and vaguely alarmed; the man's manner was perplexing and extraordinary in the extreme.

"I—I beg your ten thousand pardons!" he said at last, wiping his brow and gesticulating with his hands. "I—I am much disturbed—and upset! This information causes me much uneasiness!"

"But why?" demanded Mr. Barrington, watching him closely.

"At this moment Iris was coming slowly down the stairs for the first time since her father's death.

By a great effort she had nerved herself to see and speak with Mr. Barrington. And this was her object. Many and many a time in the dark hours which had swept over her she had thought of Heron Coverdale. If her father had lived, she would have pleaded the young man's cause, have done her utmost to heal the feud between them. But her father was dead now, and she was the possessor of the immense wealth he had left behind. Half of that wealth she determined should go to Heron Coverdale.

She would see Mr. Barrington and give him to understand that this was her irrevocable resolution, that he must make over just one-half of all she possessed to the young lord who needed money so much more than she did, and Mr. Barrington must do this, if possible, without Lord Heron being able to ascertain that it was a gift. Perhaps this one idea, this one hope, had kept her heart from breaking, and the thought that it should be from her hand that Lord Heron should receive the money brought her a consolation which was as strange and curious as it was sweet.

At the library door she paused, and turned away. Adjoining the library was a small room divided from it by a curtain, in which the signor had kept his guns and fishing tackle. Trembling a little, she thought she would go in there and rest a moment or two, and gain strength and composure for the interview; and she entered this little anteroom just as the signor began to pace up and down the library and wipe his brow in his well-simulated agitation. Every word that was said could be heard by Iris, but for a few moments she paid no attention.

"What have I said that has upset you, signor?" asked Mr. Barrington, gravely. "Surely you know that this is the law of England?"

"No, no! I did not!" returned Ricardo, in a troubled voice. "I did not! I—I—your pardon, gentlemen! I do not know what to say. I am in great distress; I am in a position of great trouble. I do not know what to do, what to say. My poor, poor friend!" and he put his hand to his eyes.

Clarence Montacute flinched with his feet, and looked at the signor impatiently.

"Can't you speak out, sir?" he exclaimed; but Mr. Barrington motioned to him to be patient.

"Pray calm yourself, Signor Ricardo," he said, in his grave, composed manner. "You appear to know something about my late client, Mr. Knighton, which distracts and distresses you. Is that so?"

"That is so," assented the signor; "but whatever it is, gentlemen, it shall remain buried in this breast," and he struck his chest emphatically.

Mr. Barrington smiled grimly.

"Of course, if that is your determination, there is nothing more to be said," he remarked. "But as Miss Knighton's legal adviser, I think it my duty to remind you that if you are concealing anything that should be known to me because you consider it may injure her, you may be, by that concealment, injuring her far more effectually than you would do if you confided in me. I merely put this to you for my own satisfaction. I am, personally, not at all curious, and I am sure Lord Montacute here is not."

"No, no!" said Clarence eagerly. "I do not want to know anything—not! I will go."

"Stay, my lord!" said Ricardo, stretching out his hand. "Stay, my lord! If I have to tell what I know, I would wish that you, as well as this good gentleman, the lawyer, should hear it. I beg you to remain."

Clarence Montacute went back to the window, and Ricardo, sinking into a chair, held up his forefinger impressively.

"Gentlemen, I have decided to tell you!" he said.

"One moment, Signor Ricardo," broke in Mr. Barrington, gravely. "You never had any objection to my taking notes? If this that you are about to disclose is of the importance your manner suggests, one cannot be too careful."

The signor waved his hand with quiet dignity.

"Take what notes you please, sir," he said. "I have a plain story to tell—I tell it because I think it is my duty to do so, and Baptiste Ricardo, gentleman, has always followed the dictates of duty, and he laid his hand upon his heart. 'Yes, however painful it is, Baptiste Ricardo will do his duty. Gentlemen, what I have to say concerns my dear young friend, the beautiful young lady who is Mr. Godfrey Knighton's daughter.'"

Clarence drew a breath of relief; a horrible idea had sat upon him that this man, coming from no one knew where, was going to say that she was not Godfrey Knighton's daughter!

"Gentlemen, as I have said, I am an old friend of Godfrey Knighton's; we met first in Italy."

Mr. Barrington, with his face set in something like grim incredulity and suspicion, drew a sheet of paper to ward him, and began to make notes.

"In Italy," repeated the signor, with the air of one speaking reluctantly, and against his will. "He was an Englishman, staying at Naples for the benefit of his health, or for his amusement; both, perhaps! He was rich, and young, and handsome, but—"

The signor shrugged his shoulders. "He was, what you call it—reserved! Had no friends or acquaintance, and kept to himself. People said that he was suffering from a love disappointment! It does not matter! There he was—rich, alone, and at Naples. And there I met him. You will say, what is I doing there? Well, I was amusing myself by courting a young lady; her name was Floretta Corsini."

Mr. Barrington made a note. Clarence, with folded arms, stood and listened attentively, his eyes fixed upon Ricardo's black, shining ones.

"Floretta Corsini! She was—"

The signor paused, and made a gesture of despair with his white, clawlike hands. (To be continued.)

DRESSES WE HAVE LOVED.

It is said that practically every adult person every adult person could write one good story if he wrote the story of the things that has meant the most in his life, because practically every person has had some great moment in his life, and when we write straight from the heart and experience we write something worth reading.

So true is this that the editor of a big magazine once told me that he never had any great faith in a new author until he had written several stories because the first two or three might be his writing out of his own personal experience, and until he had proved he could do more than that he had not proved himself a writer.

That second paragraph wanders a bit from what I started to say, namely that I feel sure every woman could write something worth reading on "Dresses I have loved."

"You Love Your Mother and Like Your Food?"

My old great aunt used to be very much displeased when I said, "I love coffee ice cream." "You love your mother and like your food," she would assure me frigidly.

I suppose she would be equally shocked—perhaps even more so—for she was of Puritan stock—to hear me speak of loving dresses, and yet I insist on that verb.

For when a group of us women (note that, please, you unknown Let-

No Work at Aquathuna.

"Whatever is worth doing at all is worth being well," is an adage that is evidently believed in and applied to the art of lying, as well as to works of a meritorious character, judging from an item that appeared in the Trade Review of a recent issue and later in the Western Star in a modified form, in which it was stated that some six hundred and odd men were employed in the Limestone Quarries at Port au Port.

Everyone interested in the labour situation in this country knows very well that there is not a man employed in the limestone quarries to-day, and that they were not in operation this summer more than three months altogether, and furthermore it is doubtful if they ever employed as many as six hundred men even when working to their fullest capacity. This story was apparently circulated for a purpose, but it is so silly and absurd that it carries its own refutation. Whatever ulterior object may have been aimed at in circulating this story of abundance of labour and consequently defeated by the stamp of "absurdity" so plainly marked thereon.—O.M.

NEWLY RICH.

Charles Chessman walked for many years along a path obscure; he humbly whacked a span of steers, for he was heavily poor. One day Fortune watched him as he heaved and plowed and dug his ditch, and in a vain freakish mood she made him beastly rich. Our hero straightway started in to paint the country red, to sample every brand of sin, and knock the statues dead. If any course seemed safe and sane, he dodged it right away, and pikers followed in his train, and cheered him night and day. The meanest trick Dame Fortune knew she sprung upon this guy; the starkest man among his foes no such a trick would try. It is as though you took a swine from some cheap hoglot; near, and placed on it some antlers fine, and christened it a deer. And if the pig, inspired by hope of endless run and fame, believes itself an antelope, Dame Fortune is to blame. And Charles Chessman lapped up ate, and waded deep in slime, until one day he went to fall, charged with a horrible crime. Now all the moralists advance and take him for a text, explaining that his name is Pance in this world and the next. They swat this votary of fun, they rear, from coast to coast; but old Dame Fortune is the one who ought to get the roast.

Bluenose Wins Back Cup Trophy.

Challenger Defeated Elsie in Great Race--Ex-Imperial Couple Taken Prisoners--Allies Opposed to Hapsburg Restoration--Railway Strike Will be Limited in Numbers.

EMPEROR AND HIS CONSORT CAPTURED.

BUDAPEST, Oct. 24.—The Emperor Charles and ex-Empress Elza were captured to-day near Sopron, and are now confined in the castle at Tara Tavoros, guarded by companies of Government troops. Oostenburg's troops covering the retreat of the former rulers were ordered to surrender and are prisoners.

HAPSBURGS BARRED.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—The Allied Governments remain firmly opposed to the restoration to the Hapsburg dynasty, declared Prime Minister Lloyd George in the House of Commons to-day. He added that necessary steps would be taken to insure the Emperor Charles' removal from the country.

IRISH CONFERENCE CONTINUES.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—The conference between the British Government representatives and Sinn Féin leaders, which was resumed this afternoon, adjourned at 7.25 this evening. The length of the session was meant to mean that a serious effort is being made to compose the differences arising out of the recent message of Sinn Féin De Valera to Pope Benedict. The Government is understood to have decided clearly before the Sinn Féin delegates its ultimatum or declaration, that Great Britain will deal with Sinn Féin only as part of the British Empire, and not with representatives of an independent Republic. The Prime Minister made the Government's policy clear to the House of Commons before he walked over to the Irish conference at his official residence in Downing Street. He said, Mr. De Valera's message was "a grave challenge"; that the Government's position on that question (meaning independence) had been made abundantly clear; and that the conference could not proceed upon any other basis.

BLUENOSE WINS THE TROPHY.

HALIFAX, Oct. 24.—Canada captured the fishermen's blue ribbon of the seas, off Halifax harbor to-day, when the fishing schooner Bluenose, of Lunenburg, Captain Angus Walters, defeated the fishing schooner Elsie, Captain Marty Welch, by nine minutes and thirty seconds, in the second race for a forty-mile guin, under a light to moderate N.W.W. wind and smooth sea. It was a clear-cut decisive victory, proving that "the big fish" as some jesting fishermen labeled the Bluenose when she was under construction last winter, is just as much a success on wind in light weather as she was on Saturday when stormy winds did blow. Once again it was windward work that told the tale. The Elsie had much the better of the start, and in the reaches of the first three legs of the course, all of more than twenty-seven miles, the Yankee schooner maintained the lead. The Bluenose was close on her heels. The boats, however, had been on the wind only a few seconds, when it was seen that the Bluenose had established herself in the weather position, and the distance between the two vessels became apparent. The Bluenose steered into the wind, pointing higher than the defender. The course to-day called for a reach of six miles due south to the inner automatic buoy of Chebucto Head; broad off of eleven and a quarter miles south by west to Sambro Lightship; gybe around this mark; close haul of nine and half miles, north east by east to south automatic buoy; dead beat to windward of six and a half miles north west to inner ward work to the finish line, six miles away due north. The official finishing time of the Bluenose was 2.21.41 and Elsie 2.31.12. The Boston schooner Mayflower, under four lowers, met the contestants off the harbor this morning, but was left behind by both vessels when rough water was struck.

STRIKE PROSPECTS LESSENING.

CHICAGO, Oct. 24.—The threatened railroad strike, if it takes place as scheduled, will be limited to 475,000 train service employees, switchmen and telegraphers. This became certain to-day when the signmen followed the example of nine other "standard" unions and voted to remain at work. Approximately 1,525,000 railroad employees are now on record against the strike.

U.S. USURERS.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—An amendment to the Foreign Debt Refunding Bill, providing that the rate of interest to be paid the United States by the Allies should average five per cent, was defeated, to-day by 138 to 68.

SNOW IN ENGLAND.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—Severe weather prevailed in the British Isles. Snow has been reported in places as far apart as Caithness and Brighton. There have been heavy falls around the Coast.

WAR INSURANCE.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—Insurance against outbreak of war between the United States and Japan on or before December 31st, 1922 was effected in the London market to-day at the rate equivalent to odds of about 19 to 1 against the risk, according to the London Times.

STORM IN CUBA.

HAVANA, Oct. 24.—A tropical storm raged over the province of Pinar Del Rio and to-night was reported in press despatches as heading toward Florida. Owing to stormy weather in the Gulf sailings between Havana and Florida ports have been temporarily cancelled. Vessels destined for Mexican Gulf ports are also being held in harbor.

A Political Tragedy.

OR THE MINISTER'S QUANDARY. (In Two Short Acts and Four Shorter Scenes.)

Author's Note.—This is a short dramatic offering with a moral which should effectually prevent others from going in for politics.

ACT I. SCENE I.

A cosy study in a house (We hope so—Editor) in a rising city, presumably Port Union. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries discovered seated in a deep arm chair with his head in his hands and his feet on the coal scuttle. He is dressed with scrupulous care, and in his button hole there rests an enormous peony. He looks worried and now and then a scarcely suppressed sigh leaves his lips. He removes his face from his hands and speaks.

"Oh, what a life is mine, oh, what a life. Must I forever dwell amidst ceaseless strife And never know the peace of calm content. But always find existence trouble-pent. Must I forever live to be despised, I, who have held the power many prizes. To be a thing of scorn and frequent jeers. I, who did once inspire many fears. In men? And now they look at me with scorn. And like the maiden I am left forlorn. They want me to resign, but shall I do it? If I do that I wonder if I'll rue it. (He sighs mournfully and releases into silence. A knock is heard and Mr. Scammell enters. He wears a cherubic smile and an excellently fitting suit. ("That's what I want. Who's his tailor?"—Editor.) He beams on Mr. Coaker and says. "My gallant chief, cheer up I pray. It is not meet to look so sad on such a very perfect day. Now cheer up please, and do look glad."

Mr. Coaker.
"Tis well for thee my good friend Jack. To be as cheerful as you are. The troubles that are mine, you lack. No trials are there your smile to mar."

Mr. Scammell (sympathetically).
"What are your troubles, noble chief. What can there be to cause such grief as I see written on your face?"

Mr. Coaker.
"I fear me Jack, I've lost the place that once within the sun I held. The mice at last the cat have belled. My former greatness is no more. And that is what I now deplore. (An outburst of sobbing on the part of the audience would be very appropriate at this juncture. We would suggest that all should come provided with onions and two large pillow slips in case natural tears cannot be evinced.)"

Mr. Scammell.
"Oh, come now sir, don't give up hope. We may yet with this trouble cope. There is one man whose name is law. He'll help us out. Get Collishaw. Mr. Coaker jumps to his feet, upsetting his chair in his excitement. He dances about stinging at the top of his voice.

SCENE II.
A private car on the Bonavista "flor." A gentleman who looks like Mr. Collishaw discovered seated. He is reading a letter aloud.
"Dear Super-six, I need your aid. If I'm not from the scene to fade; So come at once, I am no croaker. But need you badly, yours Bill Coaker."

Speaks to himself:
"The Union wants me once again. From Coaker's letter that is plain. He knew I could not well forget him. I go to see what trials beset him."

ACT II. SCENE I.
Same as Act I. Scene I.
Enter (r) Messrs. Coaker and Collishaw in earnest conversation.

Mr. Collishaw.
"It is a difficult position."

Mr. Coaker.
"Oh, come now, don't make that admission."

Mr. Collishaw.
"It is you know. You can't deny it. There's no use trying to pass by it. You've made a mess of all you've done. Your race, I fear, is almost run. But I shall see what I can do. To make your outlook seem less blue." He sits down and produces a cigar which he lights and soon he is lost in the volume of smoke which he makes. Mr. Coaker resumes his melancholy attitude in the big chair before the fire in which unsold Government pit props blaze merrily. Both he and Mr. Collishaw are thinking furiously, although it is difficult to perceive owing to the latter's smoke screen. Suddenly Mr. Collishaw jumps to his feet. He cries: "I've got it, I've got it! of schemes, I'm a great weaver."

Mr. Coaker (interrupting).
"What have you got, I hope it's not measles or a fever?"

Mr. Collishaw (excitedly).
"A plan, a plan—but someone comes, hush, hush." Enter a servant.

To Mr. Coaker.
"A telegram for you, sir, and I see that it's marked rush." (Exit servant.)

Mr. Coaker tears open the message and reads aloud.

All its worries, all its strife. Yes, at last I find I'm free To write the Union's history." CURTAIN.

Nfld. Poultry Association.
Last night's meeting presided over by Henry W. LeMesurier, Esq., C.M.G., and Secretary White, was a great success. The principal business was finalising arrangements for the annual Poultry Show to be held from November 30th to December 2nd in the C.L.R. Armoury. The Old Commodore's Lodge, C.L.R., have applied for permission to sell teas and private refreshments in aid of the Brigade funds and the Poultry Club have given their consent. Judge Laundry cannot come and award the prizes, but is arranging to send another judge to do the work. He is also sending some lantern slides to aid in the publicity propaganda now being organized by Con- venger A. J. Bayly, of the Board of Agriculture, who will likely give a series of lectures at Middle Bight—Kelligrows, in the school house on Thursday night, on the invitation of the Rev. Hugh Fahey. It is hoped to visit other nearby settlements at the invitation of any clergyman or society that will provide a hall free of cost to the Nfld. Poultry Association, who, on application, send lecturers at their own expense in order to try and boost poultry culture in the colony. Another Silver Cup has been offered for competition this year. The flower show section will be larger than ever. The Florist representatives Messrs. Alex. Brown and Burley have finalized matters as follows: (1) Silver Cup to the competitor winning the most number of points on the following classes: (2) Table of plants any special flowering or foliage; (2) Out Chrysanthemums only; (3) A bouquet of flowers; (4) Vase of Cut flowers. For second section or private parties not in competition with florists, (1) Flowering plant; (2) Foliage plant. Points to count as follows: first prize counts three points, second counts 2 points and third counts one in the florists or first section of the flower exhibit. The third section will be the vegetables confined only to florists and members of the Poultry Association on account of shortage of space. (1). Prizes for best collection of vegetables—three ribbons. The Judge for flowers, etc., will be Mr. Otto Ruch assisted by a lady to be selected later by the Association. Secretary White claims the show is going to be better than ever, having had already notice of birds from Chancey's famous Barré Plymouth Rock yards at Grand Falls; from Crabbe's Station three crates of Buff Orpingtons and R. L. Reds, to be shipped by Mr. James Pike; a big shipment will also come from Bell Island Poultry Association as the Wabana men are ambitious and want to knock down one or two of the big cups. A feature of this year's show will be a model poultry house containing a pen of thorough-bred White Leghorns.

German Fish in Oporto.
A cable from Oporto, dated October 24th, gives the following fish stocks at that port:
British . . . . . 31,657
Consumption . . . . . 6,867
German . . . . . 2,285
Judging by the latter it appears that a new competitive element has arisen in the Portuguese market, Germany being now a shipper there. The following vessels are advised as having entered: Gordon M. Hollett, Port Union, General Ironsides.

Evening Telegram

W. J. HERDER, Proprietor; C. T. JAMES, Editor

Tuesday, October 25, 1921.

Capt. Angus Walters - Marine Sportsman.

Our congratulations to the Bluenose and to her gallant skipper. Once more British superiority has been demonstrated on the seas, and once more British sportsmanship has been exemplified. To Captain Angus Walters, of Lunenburg, skipper of the challenger Bluenose in the second year race for the Fishing Schooner International Trophy, won by the ill-fated Esperanto last year, and this year re-captured in one of the greatest races ever sailed, there must be accorded an accolade of marine knighthood for the sportsmanlike qualities displayed by him on Saturday last, when the defender Elsie losing her foremast, Angus clewed down and furling his fore-gafftopsail, in order that there should not be any sail superiority over his rival. But few racing skippers would do this, the rule being to carry on with all possible sail until the contest was won or lost. But Walters was not made of selfish material. He wanted no long odds on extra canvas, and his action in dousing his fore-gafftopsail when the Elsie could no longer carry hers, because of her topmast going by the board, is perhaps the most worthy sporting act in the whole annals of marine racing. To Captain Angus Walters, marine sportsman then, we offer our felicitations, knowing that from the official record of the race, there can be no mariner more honored by his competitors or competitors. He is the king of sports, the acme of honor, and so long as there will be a friendly international fishing schooner race, so long will Angus Walters be the hero of the hour. Palmam qui meruit ferat. We sympathize with the gallant defender Elsie, her dashing captain, Marty Welch and his no less dashing crew. That they sailed the course according to the real traditions of the fishing marine, no one doubts. That they lost this year is no fault of their skill in sailing the Elsie, but is rather due to the extra qualities of their competitor. They sailed a great race; they received the plaudits of the multitude, but they were outmaneuvered and outtailed by the Lunenburg. In friendly rivalry both schooners have made a name for themselves, their skippers and their crews, and be the outcome of the finals next year, what they may, there will be great rejoicing and congratulations in a hundred seaports of the New England States, the Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland. The old "red duster" has been carried to victory again.

Booze Joint Raided.

Detectives recently raided a West End house where they discovered a large quantity of liquor. The booze was contained in bottles and it was taken to the Police Station. The owner will shortly have to appear before the Magistrate to answer a charge of breaking the Prohibition Act. None of the liquor found was moonshined.

Halloween Party.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, G.P.S., held a Halloween Party which proved to be one of the most enjoyable functions ever taken up in connection with the Society. In spite of counter attractions there was a full turn-out of the young people. The hall had a real, old fashioned Halloween atmosphere about it, the decorations being skulls, black cats, witches, bats, etc. A ghost very conveniently made his appearance at the right time and acted as a ghost ought to act and presented the prizes for the various competitors. The minister told a ghost story which must have kept the young people awake far into the night. Refreshments were served and a very successful party broke up with the singing of the National Anthem. Mr. Charles Oke is President of the organization and with his band of faithful helpers deserve all kinds of thanks for the way the arrangements were made and carried out.

Police Court.

(Before Judge Morris.) A drunk was fined $1.00. An old offender was charged with being drunk and disorderly in the Dominion Cafe. Judging from the amount of crockeryware he was accused of smashing he had evidently been trying to emulate the knockabout comedian in a farcical movie comedy. A constable said he was called to the cafe where he was told there was a fight. When the witness arrived he found the prisoner with his hand cut. The proprietor of the cafe gave him in charge. The accused was fined $12.

Took Horse and Truck.

Last night carman Power left his horse and truck standing outside a store door on New Gower Street while he was making a purchase. In the mean time some one took the animal and drove off. Mr. Power spent the greater part of the night looking for his outfit, but up to 10 o'clock this morning he could not locate it. If the team was taken in a joke, it was a rather serious one and has occasioned some loss to the owner who was engaged in hauling fish.

Meigle Not Heard From.

It is now a week since any report has been received from S.S. Meigle. The ship was on the Labrador Service and coming south, reported from Hopedale on Tuesday last. It is likely that the ship has encountered foggy weather, and there need scarcely be any fear for her safety as Captain Burgess, who is in command, is well acquainted with the coast.

Good Anchorage.

A large anchor, which weighs nearly 600 lbs., is now lying outside the Police Station where it will remain until claimed. The anchor was salvaged from the wrecked schooner Elsie M. Prior and was brought on here by another schooner. It was taken in charge by the police and was brought to the station. Other goods salvaged from the wrecked schooner are held at the Police Station.

Forgot Her License.

A woman was charged before Judge Morris this morning with conducting a second hand store without a license. The accused said she did not keep a second hand store. Head Constable O'Neil put in a list of people who had sold clothes to the accused. The Inspector General said that there was no fee for the license and that it was merely a precaution to make it easier to trace stolen goods. He said he had no objection to giving this woman a license. The Judge said that this was the first case of this kind to come before him, and as it was the first offense he fined the accused costs only.

Floating a Company.

A business man who is keen on having proficient clerks in his employ, required all who sought employment with him to pass a written examination on business knowledge. At one examination one of the questions was: "Who formed the first company?" "A certain bright youth was a little puzzled at this, but was not to be floored. He wrote: "Noah successfully floated a company while the rest of the world was in liquidation." He passed.

Thrown From Cab.

A cabman who evidently had celebrated not wisely, but too well, was driving along Queen's Road shortly before last night's parade when the cab overturned and he was precipitated on to the street. Fortunately, he was not hurt and within a short time with the help of some passers by the cab was righted. The driver, however, had some difficulty in climbing back to his box.

Employees Honor Employer.

PRESENTATION TO SIR JOHN C. CROSBIE.

An unique function took place this morning at the premises of Sir John Crosbie, when some sixty employees of the firm presented him with a handsome reading lamp and suitable address. The presentation was made in the main hall left and the following address was read by Mr. E. Spry: Sir John C. Crosbie, K.B.E. Dear Sir—We, the undersigned, beg to extend to you our congratulations upon your recovery and restoration to health from your recent severe illness. We hope you will excuse us for taking this way of expressing our feelings, but having had the honor of being in your employ for a long time, we cannot restrain ourselves from expressing our gratitude at your return to us once more. We have also to ask you to pardon us for wishing to further express our sentiments in hoping you will accept this electric lamp as a visible proof of our regard. Earnestly trusting you will be blessed with good health and spared for many years, to carry on your life's work, we have the honor to remain on behalf of ourselves and sixty of your employees, Yours obediently, M. J. McDONALD, Chairman. EDWARD SPRY, Secretary.

Sir John, taken completely by surprise, replied in the following words: "Mr. McDonald, Mr. Spry and my laborers. I thank you sincerely for your kind address and beautiful present, and assure you that I will treasure this gift as amongst the best in my possession. It appears to me that for laborers of a mercantile firm to make a present to their employer is indeed a unique event. I hope, however, that in your contributions towards this gift you did not deprive yourselves or your families of any necessities. "It is apparent to all that hard times are still ahead, and that the coming winter would need the best brains in the country to provide employment. I wish you to realize that only by working in harmony with your employer can the business of the country be successfully carried on. In your handling of our products you are expected to give an honest day's work for an honest day's pay. Had I consulted my personal interests, I would not be back with you to-day, as my medical advisers had told me in the consideration of my own health not to return here for the winter; but it was necessary that I spend some months in the more genial climate of the South to recuperate. I can sympathize with the laborers; I myself have gone through the mill. You and others have helped me to my present position, therefore I felt it my duty to return and do my bit to help and carry on the industry of the country and provide employment. I have realized what it is to need a helping hand, and I assure you my men that when any of you are in difficulties you may come to me with the assurance that I, as always, am ready to extend a helping hand to my fellow men. At the conclusion hearty and spontaneous cheers for Sir John were given by those assembled. The gathering then dispersed to their various duties. The present is a beautiful bronze reading lamp on which is inscribed on a silver plate the following words: "Presented to Sir John C. Crosbie, K.B.E., by Wharf Employees, 1921."

OTHER PRISONERS.

BUDAPEST, Oct. 25. The Karllet Premier Rakovsky, and Count Andrássy were captured along with King Charles and Queen Zita yesterday. Karllet forces are fleeing in all directions.

ADVENTURE WITH EAGLE.

VANDERHOOF, B.C., Oct. 25. A baldheaded eagle with a wing spread of seven feet, attempted to carry off a nine-year-old girl named Gibbs from the verandah of her home. The child and mother prevented the bird from getting away and it was beaten to death by neighbors. The girl has a number of fish wounds.

LOOSENING UP.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Oct. 25. To the surprise and chagrin of the drys, regulations permitting the manufacture and use of beer, wines and spirits for medicinal purposes have been issued by the Treasury Department. Physicians may prescribe at one time 7½ gallons beer, or quarts of wine.

IRELAND INCLUDED.

LONDON, Oct. 25. The Minister of Labor estimates that unemployed in Britain throughout the winter will total 1,500,000. The Government is sponsoring the Unemployed Dependents Bill, which, contrary to expectations, will cover Ireland.

KING MAY INTERVENE.

LONDON, Oct. 25. Great Britain awaited with anxiety the resumption of the Irish Conference, to-day, the situation being regarded as critical. There is a rumor that the King would use his influence within the limits of the constitution to harmonize the conflicting viewpoint.

McMurdo's Store News.

TUESDAY, Oct. 25. The Acme Shaving Stick is perhaps not so well known as some other shaving sticks, but those who know it and have used it, speak of it in the highest terms, and declare their intention of continuing to use it. Acme Shaving Sticks are made of the best English Shaving Soap, super-fatted, milled and thoroughly dried, and gives an abundant creamy lather, which assists the action of the razor to the full, and is absolutely unstimulating to the skin. If you are in doubt as to which shaving soap to use, get an Acme Shaving Stick. We are quite certain you will not be disappointed. Price 45 cents a stick.

Personal.

Judge Johnson, who is absent on Circuit Court, will not be able to be present at the ceremonies at the grave and monument of Miss Ethel Dickenson to-morrow. The Judge is the Chairman of the Committee.

CAPE RACE, To-day. Wind Northwest, strong, weather dull; two unknown schooners passed with 4,000 lbs. Labrador codfish, shipped by Strong & Mursall.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

A JOLT FOR JAPAN.

LONDON, Oct. 24. In the event of a clash at arms on the Pacific or elsewhere, involving United States, Great Britain without question would support United States, according to a personal opinion expressed by Lord Northcliffe in an interview, Saturday, with Japanese newspapermen, who came to Manila from Japan for the purpose of talking with him, says a despatch to the London Times from Manila. Replying to direct questions, Lord Northcliffe declared it was his belief that should such a clash occur, the whole family of British nations would stand behind United States' back, just as United States had stood by the British in the still smouldering conflagration in Europe. Lord Northcliffe added that it seemed inconceivable that any contingency might arise to seriously menace "the invincible but impregnable bonds that make the English speaking peoples one in the ultimate and supreme issues of humanity."

SEAMAN INJURED.

When the schooner John W. Miller, which arrived in port to-day was leaving Sydney, one of the crew had his arm badly hurt by getting entangled in the rigging head of the gasoline winch, as the anchors were being weighed. The injured seaman was landed and put in hospital.

Wonderful Cancer Cures

There is quite a sensation in British medical circles over the latest developments in the treatment of cancer at the West London (G. B.) Hospital. A recent announcement of a wonderful cure has caused a regular siege of the institution by sufferers from the dreadful scourge. The hospital authorities are in a somewhat peculiar position. They do not claim a cure, but the undoubted results obtained in Bavaria by Dr. Wintz, the inventor, make present experiments of the most vital interest and importance. Investigation made by the Sunday Express prove that unquestionably the treatment pursued at the West London Hospital has already alleviated suffering.

Child Welfare Meeting.

The Child Welfare Association held a meeting yesterday afternoon in the Grenfell Hall when Miss Southcott gave an address on the results of the Convention of Nurses at Quebec and her visits to various child welfare centres in Canadian and American cities. The large gathering greatly appreciated Miss Southcott's interesting and instructive address. The work accomplished by the Child Welfare Association has been productive of much real good and it is unfortunate that lack of funds should prevent this good work from being carried on to a greater extent. More members are urgently needed and there should be a ready response as the subscription is very small. The objective of the Association is 1,000 members. The motto of the Association is: "I pledge to be the baby's friend, and everybody tell Clean air, clean clothes and cleaner food. He needs to keep him well." If the coming generation is to accomplish anything, if the country is to make progress, then the children of to-day should receive necessary attention or how else can they become good citizens?

work." Dr. Wintz himself gave details of twenty-four cases of cancer of the uterus treated by this new X rays. Some could have been operated on and some were inoperable. Entirely hopeless cases are not included in this number. He says: "Considering that observation only extended over a short period of two or three years it is evident we must not speak of permanent results. We could only say that they are clinically cured. By that we mean that the cancer has disappeared from sight and could not be felt and no cancer cells could be detected by the minutest microscopical examination. In addition, the patients feel well, look well, there is gain in weight; and they have returned to work." Of the twenty-four serious cases, twenty-two are still alive two having died. ## The Portuguese Agreement.

Mr. Morine Exposes Its Fallacy.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—My thanks are due and hereby tendered to you for publishing my recent letters, and my apologies are due and tendered to your readers for inflicting so many upon them. I am confident, however, the grave importance of the subjects I have been writing about, certain that both you and your readers are willing to suffer in a good cause. I am often asked what good I expect to accomplish by argument, in opposition to the reckless assertions upon which the enemy rely, and my constant reply is, that despite all this has happened in recent contests, I believe in the ultimate triumph of common sense and right conscience. I believe, in short, in the people and their sound judgment eventually.

The Advocate, on Saturday last, made as near an approach to an apology for its grossly abusive attack upon me the day before as one could expect from such a source, and I welcomed it as a sign of a dawning perception by it that there is a degree of intelligence on the part of its readers which cannot be wholly ignored. It said that my "main intention" in writing about the Portuguese agreement was to "wound" Mr. Coaker, by insinuating fraud, and that consequently I deserved all the scurrilous personal references made to me in an editorial in the Advocate on Friday. I would have given great opportunities for fraud by Coaker, Arundo and the Fishery Commissioner in Portugal for the time being. This was not abuse, but sound, legitimate and justifiable criticism. There has been no justification whatever in anything I have said in these letters for repeating the stale and exploded scandals published against me in my nearly forty years of life in this Colony, and this, too, by a man who was instrumental in recalling me to this country, and restoring me to its public life, only a few years ago.

I have only to point out, in reply, that it was not I, but the Advocate, which began the debate, by blatant eulogy of the agreement, and that I have not once accused Mr. Coaker of fraud, or intention to defraud, in this connection, but very properly pointed out that the agreement, if adopted, would have given great opportunities for fraud by Coaker, Arundo and the Fishery Commissioner in Portugal for the time being. This was not abuse, but sound, legitimate and justifiable criticism. There has been no justification whatever in anything I have said in these letters for repeating the stale and exploded scandals published against me in my nearly forty years of life in this Colony, and this, too, by a man who was instrumental in recalling me to this country, and restoring me to its public life, only a few years ago.

The Advocate says (1) that I am "coached by the enemies of Coaker," (2) that these same enemies hired the C.C.C. Hall for the fishermen's meeting held there last Fall, (3) that Coaker, in the same hall, on the following night, held an enthusiastic meeting, and convinced and satisfied the fishermen, and (4) Coaker saved the situation and spoiled the Tory game, by keeping up the price of Labrador fish. Let me briefly reply to all this: (1) Nobody coaches me, but I thank the Advocate for the implied compliment to the quality of my letters; (2) the Advocate's lie that the fishermen who held the meeting did not pay for the C.C.C. Hall has already been publicly and convincingly refuted by the fishermen, and (3) Coaker saved the situation, and spoiled the Tory game, by keeping up the price of Labrador fish. Let me briefly reply to all this: (1) Nobody coaches me, but I thank the Advocate for the implied compliment to the quality of my letters; (2) the Advocate's lie that the fishermen who held the meeting did not pay for the C.C.C. Hall has already been publicly and convincingly refuted by the fishermen, and (3) Coaker saved the situation, and spoiled the Tory game, by keeping up the price of Labrador fish.

Hall has already been publicly and convincingly refuted by the fishermen, and (3) Coaker saved the situation, and spoiled the Tory game, by keeping up the price of Labrador fish.

The Advocate further says: (1) Coaker spoiled the game of the Tories by keeping up the price of fish last Fall; (2) the Tories have been looking for low prices for fish; (3) the Tories killed the Regulations; (4) Toryism is the bane of this country. Now I am sick of the constant untruthful malicious talk of Coaker and his organ about "Tories," so called, and propose to deal specifically with these misstatements for I am proud of my long membership of the party which Coaker seeks to defame by calling it "Tory." I wish to point out to him that Bonavista Bay was for long years the backbone of the "Tory" party, and amongst his strongest supporters are "Tories" who rejoice in the name, as a sign of their political faith through long years. He owes much to the "Tories" of Bonavista Bay.

Nobody's "game" was spoiled last Fall by Coaker's purchase of Labrador fish with public money, unless it was the "game" of the whole people of the Colony, who paid for the wasteful gamble. The "Graballs" of Water St., as Coaker loved, once upon a time, to call the Fish Merchants, had purchased all and even more than they wanted before Coaker temporarily lost his senses, and they ought to be sincerely thankful, as individuals, that he deprived them of temptation to buy further stocks, to sell at a loss. The cash Coaker extracted from the public, then largely went into the pockets of Water Street, to pay accounts, and for supplies, and several of the "Graballs" profitably handled the fish Coaker purchased. (2) If by saying the "Tories" want low prices, the "Tories" killed the Regulations, and "Toryism" is the bane of the country, it is meant that the Fish Merchants are all Tories, or that only those known as opponents to the present Government opposed the Regulations—the "Tories" as he incorrectly calls them—are responsible for the present low price of fish, especially Labrador, and that this price is kept unnecessarily low through the greed and profiteering of "Tory" merchants. The insinuation is a falsehood. It is directly opposed to facts. The only merchants in this colony closely identified with the Opposition are not buying Labrador fish just now at any price, holding the belief that the prevailing price here is higher than is warranted by the condition and prospects of foreign markets; but for there fish these Tory merchants are paying the highest current prices. Coaker pays no more. No supporter of the Government is paying more.

The Advocate—with calculated, designing unmitigated falsehood—says that "the Tories killed the Regulations, and low prices have only come since the Regulations were killed." Coaker agreed to sell fish in Oporto at 40 shillings per qtl.—in January last—when the Regulation price was 77½ per qtl. Coaker allowed thirty-two (32) cargoes of unsold fish to accumulate in vessels in the River Douro in January last, in breach of the spirit of the Regulations, which required "outright sales" before shipment. Coaker's policy destroyed the Italian market for Labrador fish last year, and the accumulation of such fish here and abroad this year is almost the sole reason for the present low price of Labrador. His old Labrador has destroyed the market in Greece. The Advocate publishes a notice that Greece refuses now to receive on consignment—chiefly due, no doubt, to the Nystirades' cargo, shipped by Coaker. To him more than to any other man, or any other single cause is due the destitution which threatens the fishermen of this Colony the approaching winter.

Coaker—through the Advocate, and otherwise—seeks desperately to create and spread the belief that the Opposition party—the "Tories" as he incorrectly calls them—are responsible for the present low price of fish, especially Labrador, and that this price is kept unnecessarily low through the greed and profiteering of "Tory" merchants. The insinuation is a falsehood. It is directly opposed to facts. The only merchants in this colony closely identified with the Opposition are not buying Labrador fish just now at any price, holding the belief that the prevailing price here is higher than is warranted by the condition and prospects of foreign markets; but for there fish these Tory merchants are paying the highest current prices. Coaker pays no more. No supporter of the Government is paying more.

If the repeal of the Regulations, and the defeat of the Portuguese agreement, are the causes of prevailing low prices of fish; if, as the Advocate asserts, "low prices have only come since the Tories killed the Regulations, the responsibility primarily and chiefly upon Coaker himself?" He made, he controlled, and he repealed the Regulations. He was put in power by the fishermen, not by Tory merchants. He has power by permission of the fishermen, not of the Graballs. His fault and duty are towards the fishermen, not to the Tory merchants. These merchants have no political power today; but it is in his hand, and his alone. If he cannot have his way in the Government, and if his way is right, for the good of the fishermen, whom he professes to love and serve, why does he not resign, compel his Union colleagues to follow, and appeal to the people at a general election to support his policy? He should get out or shut up. Out of his own mouth he stands convicted of treachery to the men who supported him. He presents to-day in office the lamentable spectacle of an exploded great noise, too cowardly to break with a Government he cannot control, too weak to resign, too vain to acknowledge his failure, only waiting a shove to fall into the limbo of one who "has been."

Yours truly,

Marriage Customs In Other Lands.

Marriage in some form obtains in all lands, but the marriage ceremony has many variations. In no land does the bride present a more gay appearance than in China, where bright colours fairly run riot in the dress of the people. Red is the nuptial colour in China.

At a betrothal the bridegroom to be sends the object of his affections a pair of bracelets tied together with red twine.

At the time of the marriage the young couple exchange pairs of wine cups tied together with red. The bride wears red, and her veil is red. Cord of red silk tie the bride pair together.

In the north of China the gorgeous bridal sedan chair is covered with red cloth. The men who carry it wear red. The bride's chair is gorgeously beaded and has red draperies if the bride is from a home of prosperity. The poorer class use red wicker chairs. Regulations, the Advocate is well aware of the falsehood. A very large majority of the merchants of the Colony supported the Squires-Coaker party in 1919. Prominent amongst them were the men most active finally in demanding the Repeal of the Regulations, and in opposing the Portuguese Agreement. Harvey, Job, Bowring, Baird, Bishop, Harris—these are not the names of Tories; these men were Tories; these men were supporters of the Squires-Coaker party; some of them were, at one time, at least, favorably inclined towards the Regulations; yet all agreed in demanding their repeal, and all opposed the Portuguese Agreement.

A Red Wedding.
Men in red carry nuptial banners, and red is the dominant colour throughout. A Chinese bride must not walk across her father's threshold. Her father carries her and puts her in the bridal chair. It is often called the "flowery chair." Every Chinese bride wears a crown of some kind, and it and its adornments are gaudy to the European eye.

Of all people on the face of the earth the gipsies are in some respects the most peculiar. Long years ago a Moslem saint of Turkey cursed the gipsies in these words: "May you never more enter or belong to the 77½ races that people the earth, but as outcasts be scattered to the four corners of the earth, homeless, wretched, and poor; ever wandering and toiling, never realising wealth, enjoying the fruits of your labour, or acquiring the esteem of mankind."

This curse seems to rest upon the gipsies of the present day, and the son of the Romany is still a wandering, homeless, restless creature.

Of the marriage customs of the gipsies one writer says: "In most tribes of Europe the gipsies the girls use cakes as love letters. They procure a coin and bake it in a cake, which they fling at the first opportunity to their favoured lover."

All over Europe and in both the Americas, the fortune of the newly-married pair is told by the chief of the tribe—told by the fragments of a pitcher which he breaks after the bride has decked it with a garland of wild flowers.

As in our own and in other lands, the wedding in Persia is an expensive affair. Of some of the wedding customs in Persia we have this account: "On the day before the wedding, the bride took a bath, and the bridegroom sent her some henna with which after her bath her hands and feet were stained. Her eyebrows and forehead were also tinted, with a powder. The bridegroom was coloured in the same way with henna."

A Flower Ceremony.
"On the eve of the nuptials the bride's friends assembled at her house, attended by music and dancing girls. On the morning of the wedding-day the husband sent a train of maids laden with gifts to his bride; the whole being attended by numerous servants and preceded by music.

"Toward evening the bride was arrayed in a long veil of scarlet or crimson silk, placed upon a horse or mule, splendidly caparisoned, and conducted to her husband's home accompanied by all her relations and a noisy band of musicians."

Marriage in Holland is always a festive affair. The bride went to her wedding with a crown on her head, and in modern times the vehicle in which the bridal party rides is decorated with flowers.

In olden times the bride appeared on the day after the wedding with her head covered, and gave all of her guests a glass of wine or some other drink to show that she was mistress of her home. The threshold of the newly-married couple is strewn with flowers, and flowers are used in the greatest profusion at a wedding.—Tit-Bits.

Clouds Two Miles Long.

We speak of "heavy" thunderclouds, but it is difficult to realize that anything floating in the air is in actual fact heavy even when it is about to precipitate many tons of rain upon the earth.

Clouds, indeed, have weight, for all of them contain water in suspension. A big thundercloud may be two miles long and broad and three miles high. If it is a continuous mass composed of water vapour to the point of saturation, it represents 200,000 tons of water suspended in the air.

Nature's pumping engines have raised that great quantity of water from the sea and the earth, and the cloud itself contains in "energy of position" exactly the power expended in raising that water. The cloud is, in fact, a reservoir of great capacity, perhaps 5,000 feet above the ground level.

Western Notes.

Capt. John H. Pike, of Channel, who died on Tuesday, October 18, after a short illness, was buried on Thursday in the C. E. Cemetery. Mrs. Pike and family have the sympathy of the whole community.

Fishery operations are being hampered by bad weather and scarcity of bait, the squid having taken their departure and fall herring school not yet struck.

Price of our staple has improved somewhat, the rate paid at present for dry at Port aux Basques being slightly in advance of the summer figure. From the knife the old rate is being paid.

Several schooners with coal and general cargoes have entered at Channel, and the Farquhar steamer Stella Maris, makes regular trips from Halifax.

Mr. Wilson Vardy, lightkeeper and harbor master, Port aux Basques, who recently returned from the General Hospital, St. John's, is still obliged to remain indoors.

Capt. B. Tavernor is taking Capt. Stevenson's place on s.s. Kyle for a few trips, the latter having remained off the ship in consequence of the death of his child, the deceased little one being buried on Thursday, 20th inst.

Business seems to be receiving a bit of an impetus about Channel, all the stores being well stocked for the fall trade. The premises of Geo. Knowling, Ltd. (Empire Store) is being well looked after by the efficient manager, Mr. U. Tull, who has engaged in an intensive campaign of outdoor advertising, bringing good results. All newspaper men will agree that if you want to sell your wares, you must advertise them.

NEWFOUNDLAND PAINTINGS AND DRAWINGS.

The exhibition of drawings by Mr. Wilfred Wood of England opened at the Empire Hall this morning at 11 o'clock. Already quite a few have viewed the works and they are unstinted in their praise of the artist. Although Mr. Wood works mostly in water color, he does not confine himself to that medium, and he exhibits some splendid pastels, pen and ink sketches and lithograph work. Landscape seems to be his forte, and in this he has made some excellent selections from Logy Bay and Waterford Valley. Amongst his paintings are a field of grain in sheaf (Pastel), Waterford Valley looking towards the city and showing Waterford Hall (water color), Pond Petty Harbor (water color), Logy Bay showing Sugar Loaf Head (Pastel), Logy Bay showing fishing stages (water color), Syme's Bridge looking towards the city (water color), Southside Hill Autumn trees (water color), Logy Bay in pen and ink and water color wash, Headland Logy Bay evening scene, showing fish in faggots (water color), view from Waterford Bridge station (water color). In all there are some 35 pieces of local scenery besides quite a number of striking scenes from England and Spain. An exquisite atmospheric quality pervades Mr. Wood's landscapes, and he seems to be particularly happy in the management of his colors. In his trees and sky effects he shows himself to great advantage. The exhibition is well worth a visit by anyone interested in art, and all who can should avail of the opportunity which Mr. Wood has kindly placed at their disposal. It may not be generally known that the exhibition is free to the public, but any who care to may help along the cause of the S.P.C.A. Society, in whose interest the exhibition is held, by having a nice cup of tea from any of the ladies in charge.

Ten Years of Peace.

That the year 1931 will see the outbreak of a world war, which in ferocity and in the deadly engines of death will surpass the great war that broke out in 1914, is a prophecy made by Peter Wright, a councillor of the Seamen's and Firemen's Union of Great Britain, and the second outstanding figure in British labor circles. Apart from his prominence as a leader of thought in the British Isles, Mr. Wright is widely known throughout the Dominion as an advocate of sane labor principles and as a keen student of international affairs.

"At the most we have but ten years of peace ahead of us," Mr. Wright said, "and in that time we must prepare to face the worst of all wars known to history. Even now political forces are coalescing which in the end will bring Germany, Russia and Japan into a triple alliance that will inaugurate a new era of strife. I do not think that we can prevent this war, but we can be in a position to meet it and to protect ourselves when it comes. But will we? Frankly, I doubt it."

Among the many things that Mr. Wright learned during his last trip to Germany was the fact that German diplomacy is already working to make this dream alliance of the future a hard and solid fact. He does not believe that the Germans will have difficulty in accomplishing their desire. Since the days of Peter the Great German domination of the heart of Russia has been the rule rather than the exception. It was only when the last world war broke out that the latter occurred; then, Mr. Wright says, it was a political expediency rather than a natural inclination.

HART-BROWN.

On Thursday, the 29th inst. Miss Georgina Winnifred Ina, daughter of Mr. and (late) Mrs. John G. Hart was united in holy matrimony to Mr. Cator John Brown, of King's Cove, at St. James' Church, King's Cove, the Rev. S. A. Dawson officiating. The bride was dressed in navy blue silk and was attended by her sister Miss Alice Hart. Mr. John G. Hart, father of the bride, was father giver and Mr. Howard Brown assisted the groom. After the ceremony the party drove to the residence of Mr. J. O. Hart, where the wedding breakfast was partaken; toasts were given to the bride and groom, and to which the groom appropriately responded. Afterwards the happy couple drove to Trinity to spend the honeymoon. The bride was the recipient of many useful and valuable presents which show her popularity. We wish them much happiness in their future.—Com.

Birds' Eggs Worth Fortunes.

The enormous value attaching to the eggs of birds which have become extinct was recalled by an accident that befel the specimen of the great auk which constituted one of the treasures of the Scarborough Museum. Kept securely guarded in the safe, it was once placed on public exhibition. By some means or other it had become cracked, and its value had been depreciated by over £60. These eggs, which were as prolific as the ordinary chickens' eggs in the early part of the last century, are now worth small fortunes. The highest price realized for a specimen was £215, paid by an enthusiastic collector who boasts four of these eggs, representing a total value of £1,415. Valuable though the egg of the great auk is, it cannot compare with that of the aepyornis, or moa, which thrived in Madagascar some 200 years ago. The egg is about 12 inches in length, and the number known to be in existence can be counted upon the fingers. When the first specimen was brought to Europe in 1851 it aroused the greatest excitement. There is one specimen preserved in the British Museum which was obtained in quite a romantic manner. It was picked up in 1837, floating in a bay off Madagascar. Its value is incalculable, since it constitutes one of the most extraordinary relics of its type. It is impossible to estimate its marketable price, for the simple reason that an egg of this bird has not been put up to auction within recent years. Another bird which has long been rendered extinct is the aoptoris. Like the majority of these extinct classes of fowl, this member was not endowed with wings by Nature, and consequently fell an easy prey to the depredations of mankind. Its eggs thus became rare, and, as the number known to be in existence is very limited, their sale would realize fabulous prices. As a matter of fact, in order to obtain a specimen the enthusiastic collector would have to be prepared to pay any sum from £200 upwards, while, if the coloring was unusually fine, a sum far in excess of this would have to be paid.

Industrial Comparison.

Newfoundland Should Get Her Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—It took 60 years to establish the steel industry in America. Success was not apparently made by the pioneers in this industry in this country, fortunate having been aided in the appropriate circumstances, such as exist in Newfoundland to-day, and not the least encouraging fact at this time is the industrial life of the Island, is the lack of ability by our politicians to realize the potentialities of same steel industry as applied to our own country. Its pre-eminence in the life of any country cannot be gainsayed. Australia is an advance of Newfoundland in many respects, but she has made some leaps in the time she has been in 1808 marks the turning point, birth of this industry in Australia. Developments have come thick and fast. In the country coal, the called bugbear crying disfavor of manufacture in Nfld., was hauled miles as also was limestone and miles. In Queensland at the Bowen the industry is very much advanced and in this case Iron Ore is some 600 miles, and this is not even short of the haul to the States, where the haul is 700 miles, some of this ore is three times in many cases. We cite Pittsburgh as an example of progress in the industry.

In 1888 in the early days of Broken Hill district, the troubles those men of affairs were legion, speaks well for their foundation done at that time, that the Broken Hill property, an ore body, is not comparable to our own. Wiggins, a deposit, has produced $5,000,000 starting from those small beginnings and yielded to its well pleased holders the tidy sum of $11,000,000 in dividends. There is but one opinion which can beat this showing that is right in this country.

Newfoundlanders, get down to a fixed plan with the will to carry through. Engage you a competent Manager, order your machinery, get down to business. Embrace your awedding clothes and cast from you. Why not be what we are entitled to be and must be in one of the world's factors in the trade? This can be accomplished our time if you will it.

Yours truly,
NEWFOUNDLANDERS

Obituary.

JOHN H. PIKE, Master Mariner.

There passed away, at Channell Tuesday last, a well known mariner in the person of Captain John H. Pike whose acquaintances around Newfoundland are numerous. The youth Capt. Pike had followed through his best known commands being schooners Elmore, Atlanta and Helena. In 1917 having sold the latter he retired from active service and engaged in business on shore, for long was he permitted the element of being free from the care and skill bestowed upon his death supervened. All that was left of a true friend, a loyal associate, a loving husband and good father, committed to mother earth, at St. John's Cemetery on Thursday last. Left to mourn are a widow, two daughters, Mr. George Forsey, (Capt. J. White and Miss Maud), Charles, North Sydney, to all of whom the Telegram expresses deep sympathy.

Fishermen! Here's the Boot for You-"Excel"!

"EXCEL"

The Fishermen's Friend

"EXCEL" Made 'All in One Piece'

All fishermen know from experience what happens to ordinary boots when used in fishing. You've seen how salt water seems to take the life out of rubber and how the uppers crack and the soles wear through in a surprisingly short time.

The "EXCEL" is a different and better kind of boot. It has been made especially to stand up under the unusually hard use a fisherman's boot gets.

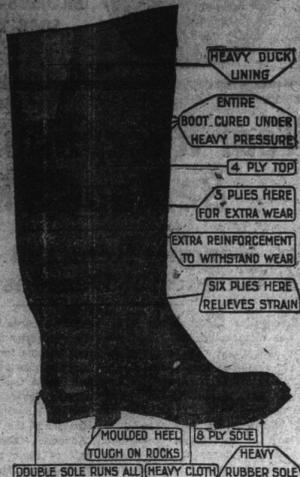

The rubber and fabric in "EXCEL" boots are of the very highest quality. But it is the special method of curing, under tremendous pressure, that makes the "EXCEL" so wear-resisting. The pressure forces the layers of rubber and fabric together so that they are actually "one-piece", without losing the least bit of the life or resiliency of the rubber. Salt water has practically no effect on "EXCEL" boots. The UPPERS remain pliable and weatherproof, and resist the drying-out action of sun, heat and extreme cold far longer than other boots. Consequently they don't crack anywhere near so quickly. The SOLES are almost wear-proof, because they are made like an Auto Tire, with 8 plies of rubber and fabric welded by tremendous pressure into a "tire-tread" sole that rivals an automobile tire for toughness and durability.

strain. There is not a single feature but what has been proved necessary and desirable by tests of severe use. Your own experience will tell you that a boot with these features simply must be a better boot.

Study this picture. Learn these features. Remember them when you compare "EXCEL" boots with ordinary boots. And remember, too, that very important point which the picture cannot show, namely, that "EXCEL" boots are cured under tremendous pressure, which leaves the rubber pliable, weatherproof and wear-resisting. It is only by the use of this tremendous pressure combined with highest quality materials that the best results are obtained.

Pliable Uppers. Weatherproof and Wear Resisting. Tough Tire Tread Soles. Made "All in One Piece."

"EXCEL" Boots are sold by all reliable dealers from Coast to Coast.

Billiard Champions.
TO SETTLE CUE SUPERLAC.
NEW YORK.—The billiard champions of two continents, Europe and this, will clash here when Edward Horeman of Belgium meets Koji Paradey of Japan in an 1800-point contest of 182 ballline billiards at the Recreation Billiard Club. They will play afternoon and evening blocks of 30 points each.
Usual interest attaches to the meeting of these two for more than one reason. As champions of their respective continents they are the premier chiefs of everywhere that balkline is played, with the single exception of the domain ruled for ten years by Willie Hopp's magic wand. Yamada was the last man to win a championship tournament game from the American title holder, and many are now predicting that Horeman will be the next one to do so. Furthermore, these two are admittedly the most skilful manipulators of spectacular cue shots in the history of billiards.
No less an authority than Charles Johnson of St. Louis, himself a star of the mass, had this to say after watching the Belgian last season:
"For this year Yamada has been considered to be the greatest masse artist among ballline players, but Horeman is clearly his superior."

Failed to Meet Hopp.
Horeman, after winning the championship of Europe from the veteran Cue of France, came to the United States last winter in an effort to meet Hopp for world honors, but failed to obtain a match. When he learned that he would try to enter the annual tournament this fall he announced through a spokesman that he would object on the ground that the competition was a national one and Horeman is not an American—a point Hopp never raised against him. However, this fall's tournament has been arranged to determine the national, but the world's championship, beginning in Chicago November 14. Horeman has demonstrated the sincerity of his statements by sending in his entry, and if Hopp does not evade the issue, the controversy will be settled with their cues.
It had been expected by most billiard fans that Yamada, too, would take part in the tournament. He did intend to, but when he learned that Horeman wanted a strong opponent for street combats to key him up to his best game the Jap volunteered. This meant he had to stay out of the title contest, for the regulations forbid any two contestants meeting beforehand.

Yamada Hard to Beat.
Horeman, with all his tremendous cue and average records, will have no easy time with Yamada, who in his present form can defeat any man in the world if he "gets the break" in a contest of the length to be played here.
The Belgian, however, is a logical fantastic because of his sensational performance when pressed.
Beginning his second American visit last week Horeman made a run of 171 in his very first inning and averaged 110 for a 400-point game in Chicago after not having played at all during the summer spent with his mother in Belgium. Since then he has gone at a pace threatening the records of his first visit, when he made the unprecedented run of 701, more than 200 the best of any one else. He had thirty runs of 200 or more from January to June, or more than twice as many of this size as any other player has made in a lifetime. One consists of running out a 400 point game from the spot, the only time this has been done. Another was an unfinished cluster of 421, beating Ora Morningstar when the latter needed only 64, and himself had just run 306.

Accidents That Made History.

CURIOUS STORIES OF CHANCE DISCOVERIES.

"A burning hayrick was responsible for starting me on my running career," So declared Alfred Shrubbs, the world-famous runner.

Apart from sport, many things of the greatest service to mankind have been discovered by accident. The rubbing of a piece of amber "evoked," in Paraday's words, "an invisible agent which has done for mankind far more wonderful things than the genie of Aladdin did or could have done for him"; the up-forcing of the lid of a kettle discovered the marvellous power of steam, and the falling of an apple demonstrated the law of natural attraction. The swinging to and fro of a suspended lamp gave birth to the application of the pendulum, to which the precision of modern astronomy owes so much.

The manufacture of gunpowder was discovered by accident. An Augustinian monk, Berthold Schwartz, having put a composition of sulphur and saltpetre in a mortar, it took fire, and the stone that covered it was blown off with great violence. The accident led the chemist to think that it might be used to advantage in attacking fortified places.

Seen in a Dream.
Leaden shot is attributed to a Bristol plumber who, in 1783, dreamed that he was out in a shower of molten lead which fell in the form of spherical drops. His curiosity being aroused, he went next day to the top of a church and poured some molten lead into a vessel of water lying below.

To his great delight, he found that the lead had gathered into globular balls, and at once he took out a patent.

One day, about three hundred years ago, a poor optician was working in his shop in the town of Middleburg, in the Netherlands, when his little girl, who was amusing herself with the objects lying about, exclaimed, "Oh, see how near the steeple comes!"

She was looking through two lenses, one held close to her eyes, the other at arm's length, one being convex, the other concave. The optician saw in this a wonderful discovery, and he set about making use of his new knowledge of lenses. In this way the telescope was invented.

The discovery of saccharine, that sweetening agent so much used as a substitute for sugar during the war, reads like a romance.

Rontgen's Rays.
Dr. Fahlberg had entered the Johns Hopkins University in America to study the chemistry of coal-tar derivatives. After some months he noticed an intensely sweet flavour upon his bread and butter. He traced the sweetness to his hands and his coat-sleeves, and it dawned upon him that it must have been derived from one of the new compounds he had succeeded in producing.

He hurried back to his laboratory and tasted the contents of every vessel with which he had been working. One of the beakers contained saccharine, a substance whose sweetness is three hundred times greater than that of cane sugar.

Professor Rontgen came upon his marvellous X-rays quite by chance. He was experimenting in the dark with a Crookes' vacuum tube, which was covered with some sort of cloth.

A strong electric current was passed through it, while close by was some prepared photographic paper, but no camera. Next day he noticed several lines on this paper. By restoring everything to exactly the same condition as on the preceding day, he was able to ascertain the real origin of these mysterious marks.

Curfew for 300 Years.

At 9 o'clock each night the curfew is rung in London.

To many a Cockney this will come as a surprise, but the fact that it has been rung nightly for the past 306 years will probably be a greater one.

This old-time custom is still a part of the duty of the chief porter of the Lincoln's Inn, and the official holding that office has with the exception of a period during the war, carried out his duty of sounding the curfew for over 30 years.

The bell which is tolled was originally brought from Calais by the ill-fated Robert Devereaux, Earl of Essex, in 1596. It is hung in the old Lincoln's Inn Chapel, erected during the reign of James I. in the building of which Ben Jonson is said to have used his trowel.

"At 8.45 each night I light my lantern and proceed to the belltry," said the chief porter—who in his modesty wishes to remain anonymous. "As soon as the last stroke of 9 has sounded I strike the bell 60 times.

"Why 60? Well, I don't know, except that it is the custom. Lincoln's Inn, you know, had a bad reputation in the days of the 'Mumpers' and 'Butlers', and perhaps, if a man was not sober, anything less than 50 strokes would be unconvincing.

"The only time the curfew has not been sounded in Lincoln's Inn during the past 300 years or so was during the war, after the bomb fell in Chancery-lane in October, 1915. I rang the bell, as usual, at 9 o'clock. The bomb fell 35 minutes later, shaking the whole place.

"Some people thought that the curfew was responsible, so it was suspended until the night of the armistice."

The King's Treasures.

Quite apart from the treasures which become the property of every British Sovereign, and which consist for the most part of gold and silver plate, weighing altogether twenty-eight tons and valued at nearly two millions sterling King George possesses a collection of curios of which little is known. The museum near the equeriest entrance at Windsor was established in 1869, when some workmen engaged in repairing the castle brought to light a number of relics dating from the Stuart period, and these with such as were personally collected by Queen Victoria, were set apart with several attendants to look after them. War mementos are there in large numbers, every campaign of recent years being represented since the Abyssinian War, at the conclusion of which Lord Roberts added the scarlet saddle edged with gold and the silver bit captured from the late Amir of Afghanistan, and Lord Kitchener presented the crimson banner of Wad Bishra taken at Pirquet. The collection of old china was got together by Queen Victoria, and is composed of 10,000 pieces, its value being put at £150,000. Every piece is tabulated in a book kept for the purpose, and against each entry is a record of what the article in question is worth, with a brief account of its history. One desert service alone represents £20,000, it being of Sevres ware of extreme beauty; while a breakfast service given to George III. on his birthday, in 1810, by his five daughters, whose initials are on every piece, is worth £10,000. Among the furniture is the writing desk given by Henry VIII. to Anne Boleyn on their wedding day; also an old Venetian chair used by the Doges and dated 1570. A solid silver table of the same period is another treasure on which the King sets great store.

Lord Morris Lectures on Newfoundland.

The London Evening News of a recent date says: "An important course of lectures of Trade and Travel, entitled 'What Our Overseas Dominions Offer,' will open in London a few days hence. These lectures will be delivered by well known experts, and contain up-to-date and accurate information of the utmost importance. The subjects to be dealt with are: Newfoundland, Tasmania, South Africa, Queensland, New Zealand, Western Australia and South Australia. The opening lecture will be delivered by Lord Morris, his subject being 'Newfoundland.'"

Great Reception For Bell and Thomas.

City Honours Returned Athlete—A Wonderful Demonstration.

The reception accorded our track team was remarkable, but it was outdone by that which was accorded John Bell, our champion long distance runner, upon his return from Halifax where he covered himself with glory by taking second place in the Halifax Herald Marathon. Bell has indeed done his share in advertising Newfoundland and the citizens of St. John's were not slow to show their appreciation. The whole town seemed to have turned out en masse to greet our returned athlete and he was given a real Newfoundland welcome, than which nothing could be warmer and more enthusiastic. Cordiality was everywhere apparent and citizens vied with one another in cheering Bell and attempting to grasp his hand. For all time he should carry with him the memory of that day for seldom has the feat of any man evinced such a demonstration of earnest appreciation and fervour. As he himself said, he did not for a moment expect such a tremendously hearty reception and he has good reason to feel proud of the honor done him.

THE LUNCHEON.

At 12.15 p.m. the National Sports Committee and Press Representatives with a few other guests, numbering 24 in all, arrived at Donovan's and proceeded to the station where they met Bell who was on the incoming express, accompanied by his manager, A. Harvey Thomas. After "Plussy" Parsons had taken several photographs of the gathering, the return to Donovan's hotel was made. An impromptu race between Mr. W. J. Higgins, K.C., and Mr. C. H. Hayward of Grand Falls was staged from the station to the hotel, but by special request, the name of the winner has to be omitted. At 1 p.m. the gathering sat down to an excellent luncheon provided by Mrs. Hughes and after all had been "sated" with their autumn feast, congratulatory addresses were made by several present at the call of Mr. Geo. W. B. Ayre, the Chairman, who has the happy knack of making things go with a swing, an appreciable quality. Mr. Ayre, exercising his prerogative, was the first speaker. He lauded the achievement of Bell and also congratulated Thomas on his efficient management. He concluded by proposing their health, a toast which was drunk with spirited enthusiasm. The next speaker was Mr. Thomas, and the gist of his speech will be found in another column. John Bell briefly thanked the gathering for the reception accorded him and said that the dust and gas from motor cars worried him considerably in the 10 mile race. A speech was also made by Sergt. T. R. Ricketts, V.C., D.C.M., C. de G., who, through a happy thought on the part of Mr. Ayre, was included amongst the guests. Mr. C. H. Hayward of Grand Falls, an old time sport, who can still run a bit as his impromptu race proved, was heartily applauded when he announced that in an attempt to revive cricket, he was putting up a cup for inter-town competition in that good old game. Mr. Ben Stafford also received a cordial reception when, with the generosity for which his name has now become famous, he offered to get McAulay down here to race Bell again, and stated that he would pay all expenses. Messrs. Galway of the "Comic Weekly," Perlin of the "Telegraph," Moakler of the "News," and Joy of the "Advocate," also spoke briefly on behalf of their respective papers. Mr. E. Goodland, Manager of the track team also spoke and the afternoon was wound up by Mr. W. J. Higgins, K.C., M.P.A., without whom, no gathering of sports would be complete. He received a great ovation. In felicitous terms he congratulated Bell and Thomas, and referred in laudatory words to the guests. He concluded by proposing the health of the chairman which was responded to with a will. Mr. Ayre in a few words, expressed his thanks after which the luncheon came to an end. The songs of Messrs. Wallace and Hall added greatly to the enjoyment of the afternoon. A motor ride was the next item and all crowded into Lester's bus which had been kindly placed at the disposal of the N.S.C. and a pleasant drive was experienced. Upon returning to Donovan's, tea was partaken of, and the return to town was then made.

BELL'S LANDING.

How Jack Bell contrived to enter the Narrows and land officially at the King's wharf is a secret which will be kept. An enormous crowd had assembled at the wharf which has seen the landing of so many distinguished persons and great excitement prevailed when the brilliantly illuminated tug was seen approaching. As Bell landed and was received by the Prime Minister, the cheering which rent the air was unprecedented in the annals of the city. Multi-coloured Greek fire, electrical effects and fireworks all combined in the making of a memorable scene, to which the Maginty-Duggan Band in their weird masks, and their football shirts, and their strange collection of instruments from which proceeded discordant sounds, added the ludicrous side. The C.L.B. Cadets and the C.C.C. formed a Guard of Honor. The parade formed up in the following order:

- C.L.B. Band.
- C.L.B. Cadets.
- Citizens.
- Bell and Thomas.

to the Majestic Theatre. All along the route a cheering multitude followed and many young followers of Bell eagerly strove to help in pulling the Victoria in which sat the hero of the hour.

OFFICIAL CONGRATULATIONS.

The Majestic Theatre was filled to overflowing by the vast crowd which, bursting the bonds of restraint, rushed into the building. Amongst those who occupied seats on the platform were Mr. Ayre and officials of the N.S.C., the Prime Minister, Mayor Morris, Brigade representatives, the Track Team and their manager, Mrs. Bell and Sergt. T. Ricketts, V.C., D.C.M., C. de G. When order and quiet were obtained, Mr. Ayre called upon Sir Richard Squires to address the gathering. Sir Richard said in part, that he was glad of the chance of being able to extend a welcome to Bell who had done splendidly. All should be justly proud of his achievement. The demonstration meant that the citizens had joined to extend a greeting to the man who had upheld our reputation in foreign parts. He regretted that owing to our scattered population, the civic spirit was not properly developed. Our boys had done their part in putting Newfoundland on the map. He said he was proud to see Sergt. Ricketts, our only V.C., on his right. He concluded by saying that the demonstration showed that the country was behind the men who went to do us honor at Halifax. Sir Richard was followed by the Mayor who extended a welcome to Bell on behalf of the city. Bell had done excellent work and his efforts could always be looked upon as honourable and fair. He played the game throughout and though he did not come back first, he should be proud of his achievement. The city had turned out in its thousands to do Bell honor. Mr. Harvey Thomas, too, had helped greatly towards Bell's success. He congratulated Mr. Ayre on the success of the demonstration and said that that gentleman was the coming man.

THE STORY OF THE RACE.

Mr. Harvey Thomas who made such an efficient manager for Jack Bell, was the next to speak and in a graphic manner he described how his charge ran in the great Road Race. After expressing his gratification at the wonderful reception which greeted their return he came by devious routes to the completion of Bell's training at "Troy" where, for some weeks, Bell had metaphorically at least, been "fired" by his wing. He had trained Bell at his brother's farm. When they went to Halifax two days before the race they made the Y.M.C.A. their headquarters. At 12.30 p.m. on Saturday, October 15th, 84 runners lined up at the starting points and were addressed by Lieut. Governor Grant, who started the race. The road ahead from the start was owing to the dense crowds which lined the sides of the street, only about fifteen feet wide and a good gateway was a necessity. Bell was luckily in the first row and got away well with the crack of the pistol. For a quarter of a mile the road was narrow and when more open country was reached McAulay was leading with Power second and Bell third. The pace from the outset was terrific and when McAulay reached the two mile post, only 10 mins. 20 secs. had elapsed. Gradually Power dropped behind and Bell took his place. McAulay seemed worried and often glanced behind. Near Dutch Village McAulay had a big lead and motor cars which had got between him and Bell caused the latter a great deal of trouble chiefly because of the gas fumes and dust which they threw up. Bell fought gamely to the end, however, and entering the Wanderer's grounds a little over two minutes after McAulay, he received a tremendous ovation from the assembled thousands.

THE PRESENTATIONS.

Mr. Thomas wished to place on record the indebtedness of himself and Bell to Mr. Frank Rice who helped them so much and also to Messrs. Skinner and Mulhally and all who sent congratulatory messages. He was content that Bell could beat McAulay. Jack Bell then expressed his thanks and cheers for him and Mrs. Bell were heartily given. Mr. Ern Goodland, manager of our Track Team, next said a few words of congratulation and then the Chairman called upon Sergt. Tommy Ricketts, V.C. to present the medals won by Bell. There were two of these, both gold, one for first place in the five mile race at the Wanderer's sports and the other for second place in the Road Race. Ricketts was received with loud cheers and briefly thanked those present for their kindness. The prizes in the big sweep stake, won by Messrs. Winter, Skirving and Hall were presented by Mr. Ayre. The last speaker was Mr. W. J. Higgins, K.C., M.P.A., who on behalf of all, expressed thanks to Messrs. O'Neill and Ousey for so kindly lending their grounds free of charge, the Bands for playing so many pleasing selections in the parade and at the theatre, the Police and all others who helped to make the demonstration a success. He also paid a deserved tribute to Mr. Ayre "The Banks of Newfoundland" and the ### Canadian Pacific Railroad Man Was Almost A Wreck From Stomach Trouble.

"When it comes to building a man up and making him feel fine I don't think there's another medicine in the world in the same class with 'Tanlac,'" said Stanley J. Smith, Lake Megantic, P.Q., with the Canadian Pacific Railroad.

"There's an old saying that when a man's stomach goes wrong everything else goes wrong with him and my experience proves it. Several months ago I began to suffer from indigestion and it wasn't long before I was on the verge of a breakdown and was so weak I could hardly board my train.

"Tanlac made me feel like a brand-new man in a short time. I never saw anything to equal the change it made in my condition and I'm strong for it."

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

Dyed Child's Coat and Her Old Skirt

"Buy 'Diamond Dyes' and follow the simple directions in every package. Don't wonder whether you can dye or tint successfully, because perfect home dyeing is guaranteed with Diamond Dyes even if you have never dyed before. Worn, faded dresses, skirts, waists, coats, sweaters, stockings, draperies, hangings, everything, become like new again. Just tell your druggist whether the material you wish to dye is wool or silk, or whether it is linen, cotton, or mixed goods. 'Diamond Dyes' never streak, spot, fade or run.

Newfoundland Lady Dies in Toronto.

News was received from Toronto, Ont., Sunday morning announcing the passing of Miss Edna Lash, after an illness of some months. Miss Lash was born in Newfoundland and was a daughter of the late M. G. Lash, New Gower Street; she, however, lived most of her life in Canada. She has a sister Mrs. Kenneth Dawes living in Montreal. She is also a niece of Mrs. Arthur Hayward, of this city. The remains were laid to rest yesterday in St. James' Cemetery, Toronto. To the relatives of the deceased the Telegram extends sympathy.

Take It In Time!

Do you know that by far the larger number of the common ailments of women are not surgical ones; that they are not caused by any serious displacement, tumor, growth, or other marked change?

Do you know that these common ailments produce symptoms that are very much like those caused by the more serious surgical conditions?

Do you know that many women and young girls suffer needlessly from such ailments? More than that, they endanger their health by allowing their ailments to continue and develop into something serious.

If treated early, that is, within a reasonable time after the first warning symptoms appear, serious conditions may often be averted.

Therefore, at the first appearance of such symptoms as periodic pains, irregularities, irritability and nervousness, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should be taken. It is prepared with accuracy and cleanliness from medicinal plants. It contains no narcotics nor poisonous drugs, and can be taken with perfect safety.

The Vegetable Compound acts on the conditions which bring about these symptoms in a gentle and efficient manner. The persistent use of it shows itself in the disappearance, one after another, of the disagreeable symptoms.

In a word, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound acts as a natural restorative, relieving the present distress and preventing more serious trouble.

Why not give a fair trial to this medicine

SWEET, PURE MILK—always on hand when you want it!

If you have never used Libby's Evaporated Milk, you will be amazed to find how good, how convenient and economical it is. Many women who first tried it in some emergency now use it all ways—they find it gives such satisfactory results.

There's no waiting for the milkman—you can always keep several cans on the shelf and in summer there's no bothering with ice, and in winter the milk wagon can get stuck in a heavy drift of snow as often as it wants to!

And there's less waste—a can of Libby's Evaporated Milk will keep indefinitely before being opened—and after you have opened a can you can use just what you need; the rest, put in a cool place, will keep several days.

Libby's Milk comes from the finest dairying section of America and is processed in our own sanitary condensaries—it is not the "distributed" product of an unknown and nameless plant.

Order a tin from your grocer to-day.

Battery Trouble.

ONLY DUE TO CARELESSNESS. Most cases of battery trouble, say auto men, are due to neglect in cleaning and filling.

Refilling the storage battery every week with a hydrometer keeps the water in constant touch with the plates of this part of the car. Filling the battery filled with pure distilled water avoids the probability of destroying the battery plates by overheating.

There is no need of worrying about acid in the battery. It is the work of water in the case that should be watched. It should always cover the plates, or only the submerged parts of the plates will be active. Which means more current going into less plate surface and less current going out.

When the battery is hot, it is either unfiltered or it is overcharged. If it is found to be full, the remedy is to turn on the lights so that this extra load might be taken off the battery. The hydrometer, which registers the specific gravity of each cell, should show 1.285 or higher.

To relieve the battery of as much acid as possible in starting, the spark should be retarded and the starter button should get only a single short pressure. If the engine fails to start the button may be pressed again.

A clean and dry battery also means a long-lived battery. Every time it is filled it should be wiped clean of moisture and dust.

If the oven is too hot, a basin of water placed in the bottom will cool it. Sprinkle a little cocoonut or chopped nuts over the top of a s'meringue.

A revolving chair on casters is extremely handy in the sewing room. Roll candied carrots in coarse granulated sugar or serve them in syrup.

Physical Development. And its Bearing on Health and Strength.

By GIBB.

THE PASSIONS.

HATRED.

Nature.—This, of course, is the direct opposite to love. Among the ordinary causes are the sense of some one wrong never satisfied, the recognition of a standing disposition to cause harm, an obstructive position maintained and often mere evasions to the character, conduct or even appearance of another person.

A study of the way in which man shows hatred might prove interesting. How Hatred is Shown.—The head is thrown back and the body drawn away while the hands are brought forward, as if to defend one's self against the hated object. The eyes are partially closed, the upper lip is raised and the nose is closed. Threatening movements then follow. The individual then frowns, his eyes are wide open, he shows his teeth or he may grind his teeth and shut his jaws. He may also open the mouth and protrude the tongue, clench his fists, threaten with his hands or stamp his feet.

Other Manifestations.—He often takes deep inspirations, pants, growls and utters various cries, or repeats a word or syllable. Sudden weakness or trembling of the voice may occur, or spitting. The man may tremble, his lips and face may twitch. He may bite his fist or nails, laugh sardonically. He may turn red or pale. His nostrils may dilate widely and his hair stand up on end. All of the above may occur, though not all in the same person.

GRIEF.

Nature of Grief.—With grief there is a weakness which makes it cost an effort to perform actions usually done with ease. Lange calls it a feeling of weariness. Movements are made slowly, heavily, without strength unwillingly and with exertion, and are limited to the fewest possible.

How Grief Shows.—By this the grieving person gets his outward stamp. He walks slowly, dragging his feet and hanging his arms. His voice is weak and without resonance. He prefers to sit still, sunk in himself and silent. The neck is bent, the head hangs bowed down, the jaw drops, making the face look long and narrow. There is a feeling of weariness and heaviness, of something which weighs upon one.

Weeping.—The most regular manifestations of grief, of course, are the weeping, with its profuse secretion of tears, its swollen, reddened face, red eyes and increased secretion from the nose.

Control of Grief.—These are the natural evidences of grief. They are more or less controlled by different persons, and by some are suppressed altogether.

FEAR.

Effect of Noises.—Noises seem especially to call it forth. M. Perot believes that children between three and ten months are more often harmed by what they hear than what they see. He quotes the case of a child three and a half months old who in the midst of the turmoil of a conflagration in presence of the devouring flames and ruined walls showed neither astonishment nor fear, but smiled at the woman that was taking care of him while his parents were busy. The noise, however, of the trumpet of the firemen, who were approaching, and that of the wheels of the engine made him start and cry.

Other Effects of Noise.—The effect of noise in heightening any terror we may feel in after years is very marked, according to James. The howling of the storm, whether on sea or land, is a principal cause of our anxiety when exposed to it. A dog attacking us, he also believes, is much more dreadful by reason of the noises he makes.

Effect of Strange Things.—Strange men and strange animals, either large or small, excite fear, but especially men or animals advancing toward us in a threatening way. Certain kinds of vermin, especially spiders and snakes, seem to excite a fear usually difficult to overcome. Black things, and especially dark places, holes, caverns, and so forth, arouse a peculiarly gruesome fear. Even an adult can easily observe that an uncomfortable dimly lit place, or a lonely wood at night, although he may have the firm conviction that not the slightest danger is near.

The Supernatural.—Fear of the supernatural is one variety of fear. To bring the ghostly terror to its height there must be other dreadful elements, such as loneliness, darkness, inexplicable sounds, especially of a dismal character, moving figures, half illuminated, and so forth.

New Fear Shows.—In fear the eyes and mouth are widely opened and the eyebrows raised. The frightened man at first stands like a statue, motionless and breathless, or crouches down as if instinctively to escape observation. The heart beats quickly and violently so that it knocks against the ribs. The skin instantly becomes pale as just before fainting. Cold sweat breaks out, the hairs on the skin stand erect and the muscles shiver. The breathing is hurried, the mouth becomes dry and is often opened and shut. From this cause the voice becomes husky or indistinct, or may altogether fail.

ANGER.

Manifestations.—Anger consists in picturing in the mind the actions and impressions which would occur while inflicting some kind of pain. The destructive passion, according to Spencer, of which anger is a representative, is shown in a general tension of the muscular system, in gnashing of teeth and protrusions of the claws, in dilating eyes and nostrils and in growls.

(To be Continued.)

Another Successful Play.

Staged by the Gladys Klark Company.

"The Cave Girl." Prehistoric? Not a bit of it, though the title would imply scenes from the Stone Age. Near to Nature would appear to be more appropriate than that under which it was staged, the motif of the Cave Girl being laid in the woods of Northern Maine, where some city sports have a summer camp. Miss Margot Sangerre (Gladys Klark) takes the leading role as the Cave Girl and is ably supported by the other characters in the cast: Rogers (Mr. J. E. Balfour), Baptiste (Mr. Harry P. Ford), T. Bates (Mr. Louis Lytton), Rufus Patterson (Mr. Fred Carmel), Georgina Case (Miss Dot E. Jewell), Elsie Case (Miss Nita Pearl), Divvy Bates (Mr. Leroy H. Bailey), Professor Orlando Sperry (Mr. W. Everstone), and Keyes (Mr. Harry Stuart). The play itself is bright and laugh provoking and should draw a full house to-night. The C.L.B.C. Band, under Capt. Morris, rendered excellent music between the acts, receiving unstinted applause. To-morrow afternoon's matinee will witness a reproduction of "The Cave Girl," the regular play for to-morrow evening being that wonderful scenic drama "The Confession."

W. M. S. Convention.

The 20th annual convention of the St. John's District of the W.M.S. will be held in the Lecture Room of Cochrane St. Centennial Church, to-day and Wednesday, October 25th and 26th. The afternoon sessions open at 3 o'clock and continue with evening sessions at 7.45. Interesting programmes have been arranged. Mrs. Joseph Peters, Branch Corresponding Secretary will report on the annual meeting of the Board of Managers recently held at Toronto. The meeting to-night will be presided by Mrs. Circle and Band officers, Rev. C. H. Johnson, Pastor, being the speaker.

QUIT TOBACCO

So easy to drop Cigarette, Cigar, or Chewing habit

No-To-Bac has helped thousands to break the costly, nerve-shattering tobacco habit. Whenever you have a longing for a smoke or chew, just place a harmless No-To-Bac tablet in your mouth instead. All desire stops. Shortly the habit is completely broken, and you are better off mentally, physically, financially. It's so easy, so simple. Get a box of No-To-Bac and if it doesn't please you, from all craving for tobacco in any form, your druggist will refund your money without question.

Firemen Called Out.

The firemen were called out last evening to a house on New Gower Street, where an admirer of Bell had set some stage powder on fire. Volumes of smoke filled the house and a woman occupant attempted to jump through a window; she was, however, deterred and was lowered to the ground. During the excitement some person rang in an alarm from Queen Street. The firemen found their services were not required and returned to their stations. They were, however called again to the same residence a short while after, as it had been found that some of the stage powder had fallen to the cellar and set fire to the wood work. A few buckets of water, however, extinguished the blaze without any damage being done.

The Ladies' Fall and Winter Coats, with and without fur collars, that BISHOPS are showing this week are the most wonderful values given in St. John's this season. The prices are only Twenty-eight Dollars to Fifty-nine Dollars. It would take eighty dollars to one hundred and forty dollars to buy similar coats last season.

THE CHICAGO STRIKE!

The slogan of Wall Street from its early days has been "never sell short on a strike," which is entirely correct when the strike actually starts, but during the preliminaries the market frequently declines, a condition which is somewhat in evidence now.

If, however, a strike be actually called, whether it succeeds or fails, the market is a buy.

In similar past situations the market has always been a purchase, because all strikes must end, and they are always discounted in advance.
