

GUESTS OF CANADA.

Arrival of Duke and Duchess of York at Quebec,

Where They Were Given a Most Enthusiastic Welcome by Thirty Thousand People.

Triumphal March Through the City—Grand Military Pageant—The Scene at the Parliament Buildings and Laval University—Addresses Presented—Receptions at Quebec and Montreal Declined by the Duke on Account of President McKinley's Death.

QUEBEC, Sept. 16.—At 9.30 this morning the royal yacht Ophir rounded Levis Point, and as her white prow showed past the point a plume of smoke shot out from the citadel which crowns Cape Diamond and the report boomed over the water. Then the big guns boomed out, and as the Quebec spoke other boats joined in the roaring chorus. The French cruiser Desaix was wreathed in smoke, from which flashes of flame joined and sharp reports were heard. The full twenty-one gun tribute to the royal party was paid by five cruisers and the fortress. When the smoke of firing had lifted it was seen that the salutes had been busy on board, for the ships from stem to stern were draped with flags. Then there was a flutter on the escorting cruisers, and in an instant they too were alive with shaking hulling. The crews of the cruisers stood to quarters, and on every deck there was a dark blue mass, relieved here and there by the scarlet of the marines. The scene as the five boats swept on to the anchorage of the citadel was a brilliant one. The only touch of sadness which marred the spectacle was the appearance of the Stars and Stripes on each of the boats, the royal yacht included, suspended at half-mast, in token of the sorrow shared by other nations for the United States in that country's bereavement. In the most business-like fashion the royal yacht and the cruisers took the stations assigned them, and at half-past ten a salute of fourteen guns from the ships and the shore announced that Lord Minto was on his way to carry Canada's greetings to the Duke.

At 11.45 the governor general landed, and at 12.30 fresh salutes of 21 guns announced that the Duke and Duchess were landing. They came ashore in their launch with their suite, landing on the special pontoon at King's wharf, where guards of honor from H. M. S. Crescent had been drawn up to receive them.

THE DECORATIONS WERE SUPPLIED.

As soon as their Royal Highnesses had entered their carriages the royal procession got under way for Parliament House. Three mounted policemen led the way, followed at intervals of twenty-five yards by the advance guard of the escort, consisting of three troopers and one sergeant, the sergeant scene was one never to be forgotten. All approaches to the buildings and the spacious grounds were filled with one great surging mass of humanity, and the brilliant play of colors in the sunlight was truly beautiful. It is estimated that at least 30,000 people were congregated around the buildings, and the contrast between the more sober dress of the civilians and the flashing accoutrements of the military was exceedingly striking. All approaches to the buildings and especially the drive leading through the handsome government arch to the main entrance on Parliament House, were lined with troops, who kept the eager crowds in the wide and open spaces over 1,000 school children occupied the immense stand to the right of the inside arches and saluted their Royal Highnesses with the strains of the national anthem as the carriages, with their postillions and outriders, and those of their suite swept up to the entrance. The royal party were received at the door by his honor the lieutenant governor and the mayor of Quebec, who conducted them, accompanied by their brilliant staff, that of the governor general, to the legislative council chamber. In the latter were gathered all the invited guests, including public notabilities, the beauty and fashion of the city and elite local society. Among other distinguished persons present were: The Archbishop of Quebec, Mgr. Begin, sitting side by side with the Anglican Bishop of Quebec, the Roman Catholic Bishop of Nicolet, St. Hyacinthe, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. Patterson, Tarte, Davies, Scott, Sifton, and other federal ministers, members of the Quebec city council, the provincial minister, foreign consuls, commander and officers of the French frigate, the admiral and officers of the British fleet, Lady Minto, Lady Jette and Miss Jette, Lady Borden, Lady Borden, the Duke and Duchess of York, the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York, Lady Mary Lygon, Lady Catherine Coke, Honorable Mrs. Derek Keppel, Lt. BATHURST. The Woods Alive With Moose, Caribou and Deer.

Many Summer Visitors—County Has Suffered Greatly from the Protracted Dry Weather—Names of Some Prominent American Seekers After Big Game.

BATHURST, Sept. 16.—Bathurst is better known as a summer resort, and the number of people from American and Canadian cities who enjoyed the cool breezes of the Bay Chaleur this season has been greater than ever before. It is to be regretted that an outbreak of scarletina among some of the children at one of the families during the latter part of the season was the cause of the shutting up of the pleasant resort. The Duke and Duchess of York, who had been in the city for some time, had to return to their homes. An extension of accommodation at "The Point" might be in order, in fact, there are always more applicants for board and lodging than the accommodations, which is in a foot to build a new hotel on the eastern point, and having ready before the season next year, large enough to take in any reasonable number of guests.

STRIKE IS OVER, BUT MANY AMALGAMATED WORKERS ARE VERY ANGRY.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 16.—It was a turbulent day for President Shaffer and the general officers of the Amalgamated Association. The headquarters of the organization were crowded from morning until evening with strikers and representatives of lodged where the mills are idle, and workers were awaiting word from the leader regarding the settlement of the strike. President Shaffer arrived in his office early in the day and remained until 10 o'clock tonight. He arranged to see individual delegations from each lodge under the promise that what they learned from him was to remain secret except when the subject was brought up in the lodge, and he was willing to respect the order calling the strike, until they were given full particulars of the settlement.

JOHANN MOST Let Out on Small Bail to Await Trial.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Johann Most, the anarchist, who is under arrest charged with a violation of the penal code in publishing an article tending to disturb the public peace, was brought before Magistrate Olmstead for examination today. Most pleaded in his own behalf that the article upon which the complaint was based was a reprint of an article published by him 15 years ago and was a quotation from a book printed in Milwaukee forty years previously.

THE PRESIDENT

(Daily Sun, Sept. 14.)

President McKinley, one of the best loved of all who held that high office, is dead. Hopeful messages from the bedside, cheerful, even confident, bulletins from the group of surgeons about him, were all vain words. The man was dying when the people were rejoicing over his escape. The nation failed to kill his assassin a week of illusion that the wretched creature has done his work too well. If the murderer in his cell has been told what his shot has accomplished this is his day of triumph. All that the resources of the commonwealth, the love of a devoted people, the best surgical skill in America could do, all that the desires and prayers of good people throughout the world might effect; whatever force there was in the strength, courage and determination of the President himself, were matched against the achievement of one miserable man in one fatal moment. The anarchist has won, and he will probably go to the chair of execution existing in his victory.

Some days ago this journal pointed out that the bulletins sent out by Dr. Bailey and his associates bore a painfully exact resemblance to those first issued by Dr. Bliss and his fellow surgeons from the sick room of President Garfield. In this case the change and the end has come more suddenly than in the other, and the shock will be greater. No doubt there will be criticism of the doctors, as there was of the surgeons who attended Guiteau's victim. By the critics it may perhaps be charged that the doctors did too little to ascertain the nature and extent of the injury as before it was charged that they did too much. But when the time for a judgment comes it will probably be found that these eminent surgeons followed the course that with the information available was the best known to the science of which they are among the masters. It is at least fair to assume that much now even with the delusive bulletins before us.

Mr. McKinley may not be classed in history as one of the great presidents. He has not been such an imposing personality as George Washington, who was regarded with veneration rather than love. He had not the keen and philosophical intellect of Jefferson, but neither had he the Jeffersonian duplicity. The rude, half-barbaric force of Jackson would be foreign to the last president. In the nature of things President McKinley cannot fill so large a place in history as Lincoln, the war president, with his unique character and singular appropriateness for the work he had to do. But if fortune has not cast the lot of President McKinley amid such memorable events as those which Washington and Lincoln saw, he was not chosen for an altogether unimportant part. In his presidency the United States has entered upon a career of expansion such as Washington or Lincoln never dreamed of, and the republic has for good or evil taken her place among the great powers. No longer isolated, unconcerned what the nations of the old world do, free from the restraints and amenities which hamper the European powers, she has come out in company. She has given hostages to the eastern seas, and on her own coasts. She has greatly extended her accessible frontier. Accepting these international responsibilities and commitments, the president has sent his soldiers to fight beside European armies in China, and his plenipotentiaries to sit with European diplomats in laying down the law for Pekin. Under this last president the United States has become the third or fourth naval power in the world, and before long she will be the second. He organized a standing army several times larger than was ever known before in time of peace. All this has been done, not without opposition at home, but with little effective opposition. The president was a large part of these developments, and yet he did not make himself personally conspicuous. He through it all maintained in an extraordinary degree the respect of foreign countries, and to a still more striking extent the affection of his own countrymen. His popularity as president came from his skill and success, and from the belief that he was sincere and upright. The personal hold he had on the people was due to his own hearty, genuine, social nature and his exceeding amiability. His domestic life presents an ideal picture, which appeals strongly to a people essentially domestic and home loving.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT AND HIS POSITION

(Daily Sun, Sept. 14.)

President Roosevelt is the youngest man who has yet held that office, and he comes to the position, without having served in either branch of the federal congress, except as speaker of the senate for the short time that he has been vice-president. But if he has not yet forty-three years of age he has had twenty years of experience since his first election to the legislature of New York. During that period he has almost continually held responsible public positions, and no one can say of him that he failed to accept any responsibilities the law allowed. Mr. Roosevelt was six years a state representative of an important committee, six years a United States civil service commissioner, and the most conspicuous member of that board; two years an effective and exceedingly disturbing president of the New York board of police commissioners; one year assistant secretary of the navy; several months a governor in Cuba; and two years governor of New York. It is suggested that there may be danger in his natural impulsiveness and a quality sometimes called "bluntness." Yet there is nothing in the public career of the president to indicate that he lacks self-control and even self-repression when circumstances call for it. It cannot be expected that he would enjoy at the beginning the confidence of the nation in the same degree as the late president possessed it at the end of his first term. While Mr. McKinley was not a man of remarkable genius he possessed in a wonderful degree the qualities which beget public trust. President Roosevelt may never so impress the country with his strength and sagacity, and may never be rewarded with a second term of office. But there seems to be no reason to fear that he will be unequal to the work before him.

The new president starts out with the policy of the nation well established. Expansion is no longer an open question. The United States are in the Philippine Islands, Porto Rico, and Cuba to stay. While protests and criticisms are heard, and dismal forebodings are occasionally expressed, the body of public opinion which would favor the abandonment of these properties may safely be neglected by practical statesmen. Mr. Roosevelt is not more nor less an expansionist than Mr. McKinley was. There is not today a serious division on tariff questions. The republicans stand for protection and the democrats dare not say that they are against it. Populists and sixteen to one are almost dead issues.

The president has no cabinet. He may appoint Mr. McKinley's ministers or create a new administration for himself. There is precedent for both courses. President Garfield, like President McKinley, was shot in the first year of his term. When Vice-President Arthur became president he formed a new cabinet, but retained two secretaries of minor importance for a few months, and Robert Lincoln as secretary of war for the whole term. He at once appointed his heads for the state and treasury departments, a new postmaster general and attorney general. In Arthur's case the cabinet for a change were perhaps stronger than they are now. The trouble between "Honest" and "Shrewd" was then at a critical stage. In fact, the feeling about New York appointments and the quarrel between Blaine and Conkling, is usually associated with the murder of the president. Had President Arthur retained Blaine as his chief advisor he would have fallen heir to the long standing dispute. Going back further, we find that when President Lincoln was killed his successor, Mr. Johnson, reappointed Seward, Stanton and the other war ministers. They did not all remain with him, and one at least who did stay remained as an enemy in the camp. But these disagreements grew out of the subsequent action of the president and the incidents which culminated in the impeachment of the president.

Twice in the history of the country before the war was a vice-president called to fill out the presidential term. Millard Fillmore, who became president on the death of General Taylor in 1850, formed a new cabinet, with Daniel Webster in the chief place, and John J. Crittenden as attorney general. On the other hand, when John Tyler succeeded General Harrison nine years before, he retained the Harrison cabinet, in which also Daniel Webster was secretary of state.

No just cause of offence will therefore be given by the adoption of either course, and we would rather expect from the strong individuality and pronounced views of Mr. Roosevelt that he will construct a cabinet for himself. With one possible exception none of the late ministers is a man of such eminence or conspicuous ability that he cannot be easily replaced.

DR. J. H. MORRISON

The city loses one of its most brilliant and popular professional men by the sudden death of Dr. J. H. Morrison.

son. During his too short career in special practice here, Dr. Morrison gained a reputation and a standing in his profession throughout the maritime provinces which many would be glad to obtain in a life time. But Dr. Morrison's activities were not confined to his professional work. He was an ardent politician, well informed in public affairs, full of courage and energy, and a clever public speaker. He shrank from no toil or exposure in the interests of the party which represented his principles, and his last political service was performed as a candidate in an up-hill fight in Kings county. This splendid campaign made by Dr. Morrison and his colleagues prepared the way for the capture of the county by the conservatives in the federal election last year. Not in the political field alone, was he generous of his time and talent. Like his fellow doctors, his skill was at the command of those who could not pay. Many churches and societies remember with gratitude the freehandedness with which he helped them by his popular illustrated lectures. The distressing circumstance under which his career of activity closed has been sufficiently discussed of late. Disappointment has fallen upon those who hoped for his recovery and looked for the fulfillment of the promise of other years. But most of all the sorrow falls upon the wife and children, who have the sympathy of the whole community.

OUR ROYAL VISITORS

The British Empire is so large, and includes countries so widely separated, that the sovereign may not conveniently visit every part of it. Yet it is fitting that the head of this great nation should have seen as much as possible of the lands and people over whom he reigns. This may be accomplished by such tours as the Duke of Cornwall and York, prospective King and Emperor, is now bringing to a close by his visit to Canada. Our present King has been over the road before him, or so much of it as was open for travel, when he was younger. King Edward has seen all the more important dominions, kingdoms, commonwealths and colonies of the Empire over sea, and his son has had even wider opportunity to know the British world. His Royal Highness does not see Canada for the first or second time. On the eastern coast of the dominion he is renewing an acquaintance begun as a lad in the navy and renewed as an officer commanding a ship. But he comes now in the maturity of his manhood, and with a full appreciation of its future responsibilities, to meet and greet the people who in all probability will some day yield cheerful and proud allegiance to him as their King. He knows, and the people of Canada know, the full import of that future relationship. There is not on one side the dream that the sovereignty falls from the people the power of self-government. On the side of Canadians there is the perfect understanding that their freedom is not impaired by the honor they pay to the son of their sovereign, and the allegiance they bear to the monarch himself. The sovereign of Great Britain is the chosen head of the people much more emphatically and unanimously than a president ever was the choice of the people of the United States or France. We do not assemble every four years at the polls to say, "There are other ways of bearing testimony."

The Duke of Cornwall is nearly twice the age his father was when he visited British America. In the course of nature he is not so far from the throne as the Prince of Wales was then, but it is the hope of all that he may not for many years reach that high position. In the meantime Canada and all parts of the Empire are glad to make his acquaintance and to welcome the lady whom he has made his wife. By organized demonstrations, addresses of welcome, meetings and greetings, and the usual round of festivities the people of this dominion will entertain their visitors and find entertainment for themselves. And if the Duke and his charming wife have the gift with which they are credited of feeling and appreciating the warm and spontaneous welcome of the great body of the people, which goes out from the hillside farm, and the fisherman's cottage, from factory town and country village; from the dwelling at the pit head and the lumber camp, they will know more than all the formal addresses can tell them.

CRIMINALS STILL AT LARGE

The Montreal Times says: The Kings circuit court met at Hampton on Tuesday. Judge Hamilton presiding. The full panel of grand jurors was present, but there being no business, either criminal or civil, to be disposed of, we are told that after a few remarks by the judge, the jurors were discharged, and the court adjourned sine die. This reminds us that the individuals who manipulated the Rothery non-resident voters' list, thereby committing, as one of the judges of the supreme court of the province declared, perjury and theft as well as forgery, are still at

DEATH OF A PRIEST.

The Cork Examiner, August 30th, contains the following: "A special meeting of the general committee was summoned last evening on the occasion of the lamented death of the late Archbishop Coughlan. Rev. P. A. Roche, president of the society, in the chair. John Slak, vice-president, referring to the sad event, spoke in feeling terms of the loss the society and the city of Cork had sustained by the death of the archbishop. As a former president he had rendered valuable service; in fact, it was largely through his efforts that the large hall, when destroyed by fire some years ago, was rebuilt, since which time he has always been in touch with the society, and had established a lasting claim on its memory. John Bermingham seconded this unanimous expression of sympathy with the friends of the archbishop, and of regret on the part of the society for the loss sustained by his demise. The meeting then adjourned."

Archbishop Coughlan was a very highly respected priest in Cork. He was about 66 years of age and leaves two brothers—T. L. and R. J. Coughlan—and one sister in St. John—Globe.

MORE BOXES OF GOLD.

And M. J. Greenblatt's.

To secure additional information directly from the people, it is proposed to send little boxes of gold and greenbacks to persons who write the most interesting, detailed, and truthful descriptions of their experience on the following topics:

- 1. How have you been affected by coffee drinking and by changing from coffee to Postum.
2. Do you know anyone who has been driven away from Postum because it came to the table weak and characterless at the first trial?
3. Did you see such a person right regarding the easy way to make Postum clear, black, and with a crisp, rich taste?
4. Have you ever found a better way to make it than to use four heaping teaspoons of the pint of water. If so, stand by stove until real boiling begins, then use the clock and allow it to continue easy boiling full 15 minutes from that time, stirring down occasionally. (A piece of butter about the size of a navy bean, placed in the pot will prevent boiling over.)
5. Give names and address of those you know to have been cured or helped in health by the diastolic coffee and the daily use of Postum Food Coffee in its place.
6. Write names and addresses of 25 friends whom you believe would be benefited by leaving off coffee. (Your name will not be divulged to the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich., writing you your name and address clearly.)
Be honest and truthful, don't write poetry or fanciful letters, just plain, truthful statements.
Decision will be made between October 20th and November 10th, 1901, by three judges, not members of the Postum Cereal Co., and a neat little box containing a $10 gold piece sent to each of the five best writers, a box containing a $5 gold piece to each of the 25 next best writers, a $2 greenback to each of the 100 next best, and a $1 greenback to each of the 500 next best writers, making cash prizes distributed to 825 persons.
Almost every one interested in pure food and drink is willing to help their name and letter appear in the papers, for such help as it may offer to the human race. However, a request to omit name will be respected.
Every friend of Postum is urged to write the facts desired, although the sender may have but small faith in winning at the time of writing.
Talk this subject over with your friends and see how many among you can win letters, and in a good honest competition and in the best kind of way. Cut this statement out for it will not appear again.

deed. No cause was assigned for the act. It appears Corrier has been a teacup in the neighborhood for years, and by threats and such like was able to extract money and other assistance from people whenever he wished. He was being waiting people for a month or more when this would occur and where it would start. The only conclusion is that he committed it to keep up the fear and dread the community felt in him. THE THIEF DISCOVERED.

Murray D. McCutcheon arrested on a charge of forgery. Admits to Chief Clark that it was he who cleared the money from the May Queen.

The saying that murder will out is as true as it is old, and it is forcibly brought to mind almost every day. Sometimes it is only a small matter, but very often some very serious wrongs are righted, and the good name of some unlucky one who has been living under a shadow is cleared.

The trial of Harry Nelson, the North End barber, who has a couple of months ago stood in the dock charged with obtaining money under false pretences from the May Queen is fresh in the memory of all. Nelson was honorably discharged from the military service, but his credit was so ruined that they never would be thoroughly satisfied until the guilty party was brought to justice.

And on Friday their wish was granted, as an unfortunate lad languishing in custody this morning on a charge of forgery, practically admitted to Chief Clark and other officers that he was the party who got the money from the May Queen.

Early this week an order, supposed to be signed by a man named Kane, a resident of Queens County, was presented to Slipp & Fleming authorizing the payment of $46.00 to be bearer. The amount was due Mr. Kane for sheep purchased, and was promptly paid. Yesterday Mr. Kane called in person for his money. The order was checked by the bank, and the matter referred to Chief Clark. Detective Ring and Sgt. Hastings were put on the case, and about 10.30 o'clock this morning arrested Murray D. McCutcheon, 29 years of age, who belongs to Lake View, Kings County. McCutcheon was arrested at Currie's Business College, where he was taking a course. He was identified by Mr. Slipp, the man to whom he paid the money. On the way to the central station the suspect admitted his guilt.

claiming he was hard up and needed the money. The officers went to the house on Mecklenburg street where the young man boarded and searched his trunk. In a sack in the bottom of the trunk $46.00 was found. In a woolen shirt pocket were found several one-dollar bills and two fives. On the prisoner's person was found $3.30, a watch, lately purchased from Sharp, the jeweller, for $20, and a valuable pair of shoes.

McCutcheon worked for a few weeks early in the season on the steamer Springfield.

Mr. McCutcheon was this afternoon brought before the magistrate to face the charge against him and read and he was remanded until tomorrow morning.

WINDSOR, Sept. 9.—The old adage that love laughs at locksmiths was never more fittingly illustrated than it was yesterday, when Frank Reaume and Miss Minnie St. Louis, two well-known young people of Sandwich East, left their homes quietly and went to Detroit to be married. Reaume and his fiancée were to have been married at Tecumseh, but owing to the opposition of the groom and the bride's father to the separate school instituted at Tecumseh by the bishop of London diocese, the parish priest was ordered by Bishop McEvey not to perform the ceremony. It was stipulated, however, that if the groom would recede from the stand he had taken on the school question all would be well, but the young man was firm. Noting that the young couple journeyed from Tecumseh this morning, and by noon the knot had been tied in St. Mary's church, Detroit.

CALL TO REV. J. A. GORDON.

Wanted as Pastor and College Lecturer in Brandon, Manitoba.

A Brandon, Manitoba, letter of Sept. 6th to the Winnipeg Free Press says: "Rev. J. A. Gordon, of Montreal, formerly of St. John, has been called to the pastorate of the First Baptist church here. This was the decision reached at a meeting held recently to select a successor to Rev. Mr. McLaughlin, Dr. McDermid, president of the Brandon college, favored the call, as did also Rev. Prof. Whidden, it being the intention that besides his church duties Rev. Mr. Gordon would devote some of his time to lecturing on pastoral theology in Brandon college. The result of the church's action has been communicated to Dr. Gordon, and his reply is awaited. Rev. Mr. McLaughlin, elected former pastor, was appointed superintendent of Baptist missions, with headquarters at Portage la Prairie."

HUNTING AT GRAND FALLS.

(Woodstock Sentinel.) Hunting parties are now being formed, and many camping parties will be taking themselves to the woods as soon as the hunting season for large game opens on the 15th inst. The head waters of Salmon and Little Rivers are a better game country than the Tobique, and the fame of those localities has attracted many sportsmen. Large game is so much hunted on the Tobique every fall that the instincts of self-preservation impels the antlered tribe to seek the recesses of the wilderness adjoining the sources of those two streams to avoid the hundreds of nimrods who camp along the head waters of the Tobique River. Hitherto only a select few have visited those sporting grounds where game is so abundant; but soon the fame of those regions will spread and in a few years the Tobique will be deserted by sportsmen who will tie themselves to this favoured stamping ground for large game.

A BUNCH OF BACHELORS.

(Hamilton Herald.) Here is a statement made to the Herald by a Wentworth county man a day or two ago: "Within a radius of two miles from my farm there live eighteen old bachelors, each of whom is owner of at least a hundred acres of good land." The speaker himself is an old bachelor, and is in very comfortable circumstances. His remark is suggestive of several things. It suggests one reason for the poor showing made by Ontario in the census returns. It suggests one reason why the birth rate in Ontario is so low. It suggests the unpleasant possibility that the marriage is growing less popular than it used to be.

The head waters of Salmon and Little Rivers are a better game country than the Tobique, and the fame of those localities has attracted many sportsmen. Large game is so much hunted on the Tobique every fall that the instincts of self-preservation impels the antlered tribe to seek the recesses of the wilderness adjoining the sources of those two streams to avoid the hundreds of nimrods who camp along the head waters of the Tobique River. Hitherto only a select few have visited those sporting grounds where game is so abundant; but soon the fame of those regions will spread and in a few years the Tobique will be deserted by sportsmen who will tie themselves to this favoured stamping ground for large game.

A BUNCH OF BACHELORS.

(Hamilton Herald.) Here is a statement made to the Herald by a Wentworth county man a day or two ago: "Within a radius of two miles from my farm there live eighteen old bachelors, each of whom is owner of at least a hundred acres of good land." The speaker himself is an old bachelor, and is in very comfortable circumstances. His remark is suggestive of several things. It suggests one reason for the poor showing made by Ontario in the census returns. It suggests one reason why the birth rate in Ontario is so low. It suggests the unpleasant possibility that the marriage is growing less popular than it used to be.
