LITTLE'S RECORD AS CIVIC SERVANT SHOWS DEFINITE AND CONSTRUCTIVE LIST OF BENEFITS FOR ALL CLASSES

First Secured Unemployment Relief—Gave Married Women Their Franchise—Urged Provincial Municipal Department—Helped Moderate Ratepayer in Distributing Paving Costs.

ALLOWED NO EXEMPTIONS ON PATRIOTIC TAX

Helped To Secure Westminster Hospital For Soldiers—As Mayor, Brought About Richter Plan of Equal Assessment—Gave Better Wages to Civic Employees.

If there is one quality that Canada needs in its public men more than another it is business capacity and honesty of purpose. The Dominion parliament is not altogether a good place for communities to experiment with men; the issues are too great. It is especially desirable to have those who have demonstrated their capacity in the field of public service. The municipal field gives a splendid opportunity to do this, and that is why the municipal record of Ex-Mayor E. S. Little deserves consideration when the people of London are determining the qualifications of the man to whom they will have to choose on Oct. 29.

Mr. Little has given his full measure of public service in the municipal field in London. In 1916 he entered council as an alderman; in 1917-18 he was vice-chairman of the board of control when London was experimenting with that form of municipal government. When the decision was arrived at to abandon that experiment, instead of dropping out of municipal service, Mr. Little went back as an alderman, and was chairman of the finance committee in 1919, and for the two years following, 1920-21 was mayor of the city.

A record such as this gives ample opportunity to look back and see whether Mr. Little was effective in public service, if he was aggressive and possessed ability of initiation and administration. It is a fair way by which to form an opinion as to his fitness to represent London in the larger area of federal administration.

A Record of Accomplishment.

In 1916, as an alderman, and chairman of the legislation, manufacturers' and reception committee, Mr. Little set up for himself a record of accomplishment that would be hard to equal, and it is doubtful if it has ever been surpassed. One of his first moves was the introduction of the plan to hold civic elections in the public schools of the city, and this move has saved the city money every year since.

2. He initiated legislation providing that married women be given the franchise by right of their husbands' qualifications. This brought him at once into the field of provincial legislation, and it was through his efforts that the measure was passed in council and carried on to the legislature, where it was recognized as sound doctrine, and later became law. Mr. Little held that a woman had just as much right to a voice in the conduct of public business as her husband, and through his efforts the franchise was extended to thousands of women who had never before had an opportunity to vote.

3. Aid Little, as he was then, was the pioneer in the movement to have reciprocal relations between United States and Canada in the matter of automobile licenses. He saw the folly of the custom of that day, which resulted in all sorts of delay and trouble in cars from one territory going to the other, and through the city council brought the matter to the attention of the government, with the result that it became law.

4. He petitioned the legislature for the establishment of a municipal department. This has never been wholly accomplished, but it will be some day, because the need is increasing. Mr. Little saw that there was need of some such central body to check and coordinate the various departments, and also to provide a check on the municipalities themselves. The loose manner in which certain items are carried without a vote of the people by being included in the "City of London Bill" is a condition today that shows the need for just such action as Mr. Little advocated the first year he was in council. To give an illustration, if there had been a municipal department, the city of London would never have been allowed to name $400,000 as the cost of its storm sewer undertakings, when every person knew that $200,000 would be nearer the amount required.

5. It was Ald. Little who first secured government assistance for unemployment work in this city. He also secured from the Dominion government a generous survey of the city, which is possibly the most complete work in the possession of any city on the continent. It is a complete work in every way, and was done with a thoroughness characteristic of Mr. Little's application to detail. It has been of very great use to engineering and surveying problems, and also to the industrial development of London.

To Help Moderate Ratepayers. 6. He advocated in council that the city should pay one-tenth of the cost of all pavements constructed in the city. The reason for this was that he found there were many in London on whom the paying of sidewalk, curb and pavement costs on a frontage basis would be a hardship. There were many residents who used the roads scarcely at all. He advocated starting a plan where one-tenth would be paid out of the general rate, and proposed to advance the proportion until the general rate would care for most of the public improvement. This would have been a real measure of relief to the ratepayer with a limited income.

7. Mr. Little's idea of levying taxation for patriotic purposes during the war was that there should be no existing exemptions recognized. He held that all should pay their share according to their ability to pay, and for that purpose he secured legislation providing that patriotic tax should be levied on the full assessment, and that no exemption from this form of taxation should be permitted. The force of the argument appealed to the legislature and they granted the request.

8. His knowledge of finance enabled him to secure for the city short term loans at a rate as low as 3.5 per cent, as against the usual 5 per cent the city would otherwise have had to pay.

9. He was interested in several other forms of legislation, one to compel motorists to cease using powerful headlights on the paved streets; another had to do with making it compulsory for heavy vehicles using the city streets to be equipped with wide tires. He also secured the extension of the double tracks on the street railway system on Dundas street, east of the fair grounds, and the extension of the Hamilton road tracks to West street.

Helped L. and P. S. Road.

The next year, as member and vice-chairman of the board of control, Mr. Little was instrumental in securing the extension of the London and Port Stanley tracks into the plants of the London Rolling Mills and the McCarty Company factory. The reason for this was that the publicly-owned road would be in a better position to handle shipments of freight from these places.

In the same year he made it his business to see that the city relief inspector had authority to make frequent tests of weight of coal and bread sold in the city.

In 1918 Controller Little was instrumental in bringing about a change in the method of notifying voters of the approach of elections, and telling them where and when to vote. Prior to that date no notice was sent out to the individual voters from the city hall, and they had to find out for themselves where to vote. As a result of Mr. Little's plan every voter is notified in advance of the date of the poll, and also where to vote. Coupled with this change he authorized the auditor's report, and in this way a synopsis of the financial standing of the city, making comparisons of expenditure with the year before, and these are also sent to the ratepayers along with the notice about voting. Mr. Little realized that very few citizens would take the trouble to read the auditor's report, and in this way give them a record of city business he had it prepared in short form.

Went Back as Alderman.

When the board of control was abolished it would have been an easy matter for Mr. Little to have dropped out. Instead of that he went back into the council again as alderman, and in 1919 was chairman of the finance committee. Some of the measures he advocated there were: 1.—He had a resolution passed that funds should be provided before any work was undertaken. The reason for this is easy to see. It used to be an easy matter before the estimates for the year were struck for aldermen from the various wards to rush through council grants for the carrying out of work in their own districts, and in this way the ward having the most aggressive aldermen secured the greatest amount of attention. When the estimates were prepared later on for work that had in view the development of the whole city, these previous commitments would have to be included. The result was that very often the most deserving and necessary work would have to be left undone because there was not sufficient money to see it through after the aldermen had looked after their wards.

2.—He called a meeting of all spending bodies for the consideration of estimates. Mr. Little held that it should be impressed upon all the spending bodies of the city that they were all drawing from the same source for their supply of money, and that by working together they could get better results than by pulling apart. What he was undoubtedly working toward at that time was the creation of an executive body, with representatives from all these spending organizations.

Secured Hospital for Soldiers. 3.—He was instrumental, working as well with the chamber of commerce, in bringing the Penman establishment to London; in this same connection it was the perseverance and definite effort of Ald. E. S. Little that secured the erection of the Westminster hospital for disabled soldiers on the outskirts of this city. Mr. Little became mayor in 1920, and members of that council, civic officials and civic employees will agree that as mayor of London E. S. Little was at all times courteous and considerate. As a presiding officer he had the council working with him all the time. Although much of his time was taken up with matters that fall to the lot of any mayor, he found time to continue the same constructive course of work.

whose record of definite benefits accomplished for London as alderman, controller and mayor proves him worthy of election as London's representative in the federal parliament.

Prior to 1920 the heating of Victoria hospital had been done in the ordinary way with a plant of its own. It was Mayor Little who carried through the idea of having the place heated with the waste heat from the incinerator plant. Heretofore all the heat from the burning had been simply vanishing in thin air, and a plan was worked out whereby this was utilized to heat the hospital, and it has meant a saving of from $3,000 to $4,000 a year. Since the inception of the plan it has meant a total saving of about $17,000 to the city of London.

Brought Even Taxation.

In the assessment department Mayor Little found it desirable to arrive at a more equitable method of assessing property, so that there would be no discrimination. For this purpose he secured the services of Mr. J. C. Richter, who brought to completion what is now known as the Richter plan of assessment, whereby all properties are valued on exactly the same basis. It eliminated to a great extent all guess work in assessing, and made certain that the load of taxation would be evenly distributed.

In 1921 he made an agreement with the University of Western Ontario that the university should come to the citizens of London for the annual grant made by the city to the university. It was his idea that there were many young people in London who would like to take advantage of the facilities at the university, but who could not do so on account of the cost. For that reason the agreement he negotiated made provision that ratepayers who were assessed at $2,500 or less should have the advantage of one year's free tuition at the university free of cost. In this way many young men and women in London have been able to secure advanced education that would not have been possible in any other way.

In this same year Mayor Little took an active part in the fight against an increase in rates by the Bell Telephone Company.

Gave Better Wages.

Under his regime the two-plateon system was introduced in the fire department, and better wages were secured for the garbage men, street cleaners, firemen and those engaged in the city works department.

Although many of the accomplishments have been set out in detail above, perhaps the greatest work of Mayor Little was in the reorganization of the city hall departments. He believed that the head of a department should be responsible for the results secured from that department, and it was his aim always to place responsibility definitely and then look for results. He never interfered with the working of any department, drew a straight line between the business of framing policies by the elected representatives of the people and the carrying of them into effect by the civic officials.

From each department head he requested a monthly report, showing the work undertaken and finished, the cost, and the remaining portion of the appropriation provided under the estimates. By his system he was able to know at any period just where the city finances stood.

Years of Aggressive Service.

His whole civic career has been emphatically that of a businessman, reasonable, yet aggressive, who took his public service very seriously. The conditions under which civic employees worked was a matter of real concern to him; the idea of equality in taxation was always to the front in his efforts. As a presiding officer he was courteous to the aldermen, considerate of their opinions, and in this way secured the best effort of which they were capable.

It is this record, six years of service to the citizens of London, that gives him good reason to appeal to the voters in his campaign for the London representation at Ottawa. His record shows his capacity for work and his ability to initiate new and helpful legislation. London needs these same qualities in its Ottawa representative, and in the larger sense the Dominion needs just this type of representative.

NO. 1 COMMITTEE OF THE CITY COUNCIL BACKS 2 BYLAWS

Charity Homes and Western Fair Would Benefit by Large Grants.

No. 1 committee of the city council decided last night by unanimous vote to recommend two money bylaws to the people at the December elections. The first bylaw asks $25,000 for the home for incurables and $50,000 for the aged people's home for construction purposes, a total of $75,000. The second motion, introduced by the mayor, calls for a $10,000 grant each year for the Western Fair.

Fire Chief Allen got into hot water with committee members, especially the mayor and Ald. McKay, who carried a motion requesting the chief to carry out orders issued by the council that all firemen work on prevention work in rotation, instead of keeping two men permanently in that branch of the service, as recommended by the fire marshal's department.

The motion regarding the home for incurables was sponsored by Ald. Ed. Brown and K. Mcintosh of the Women's Christian association, and appeared before the council, pointing out that the W. C. A. was the oldest philanthropic organization in the city, and only once in 50 years had asked for a grant. There were 40 city people in the aged people's home.

Representatives of insurance companies tendered figures on a scheme of insurance and old age pensions for city employees. It was decided to put the proposition to the city employees themselves and ask them to pass on it. The scheme will include every man and woman on the city payroll, should they so desire.

The hydro-electric commission account for $720,450 for making a valuation of the London street railway was once more filed. The valuation was made by the commission in London, England, immediately after the request of the late Sir Adam Beck, but no provision was made by the city for any payment.

Marshals' Request.

The even tenor of the evening was disturbed when the city clerk read a letter from G. F. Lewis, deputy fire marshal, stating that it would be a calamity if the firemen doing special fire prevention work were taken off the job and others substituted. This was rather a sore touch, whereby a direct benefit would be lost to the city. The firemen doing special fire prevention work were taken off the job and others substituted. This was rather a sore touch, whereby a direct benefit would be lost to the city.

On motion of Ald. Douglas, the letter will go to the city clerk for a report, the mayor and Ald. Carswell voting that it should be filed. This did not suit his worship, who came back to the council with a motion that the order already passed by the council, which is in opposition to the wishes of the fire marshal, be carried out by the council.

"He hasn't carried out the council's orders, and I'll take individual action against him if he doesn't," threatened the mayor. The mayor's motion carried, all being in favor except Ald. Douglas and Ald. Doig.

Mayor Wenig said he was grateful for the fire marshal's interest, but he thought the council was on the right track in having all the firemen get a chance at fire prevention work. There was no need for the council to change its mind in the matter.

"The council's instructions should be put into effect right away," declared Chairman Frank Kitchen, threatening the mayor with a motion that the members should act on the fire marshal's suggestion.

No Opposition.

There was no opposition to sending the mayor's motion for an annual grant to Western Fair of $10,000 each year to the people. "Are you sure you will vote for it?" asked Chairman McKay, addressing the mayor. "I hope so," replied his worship. "Well, you changed your mind on the last bylaw vote in council."

"I voted as I felt," shot back the mayor. Ald. Cliff asked the city engineer when a check-up would be made of traffic at the Quebec street crossing of the C. P. R.

"As soon as I have a man available for the job," replied Mr. Near. City Clerk McKee was requested to attend the Academy of Science convention to be held in New York on October 28.

There was no discussion regarding the sending of a bylaw to the people re the building of a new nurses' home at Victoria Hospital, as the resolution of the hospital board passed on Tuesday had not been officially received at the city clerk's office.

YOUR NEXT SUMMER'S TOUR.

Within the next few years interest in travel has been steadily increasing, and personally conducted tours have become very popular. It is generally recognized that travel is a powerful educator, and while the tours are not confined to teachers in any way, the teaching fraternities more than any other class seem to recognize their advantages.

During the season just past, Mr. A. E. Bryson, principal of Silverthorn school, Toronto, and Mr. Martin Kerr, principal of Western Canadian school, Hamilton, conducted a 6,000-mile tour across Canada by the Canadian National Railways, visiting important cities in Western Canada, Jasper National Park, and Pacific coast points, returning through the United States, visiting Yellowstone National Park, Rocky Mountain Park, Salt Lake City, Denver, etc. Those who joined in this trip were so abundantly satisfied with this matchless tour that the promoters have already decided to repeat it next year with some added attractions.

Anyone interested should make a note of this trip now, and plan to take "The Trip of a Lifetime."—A. E. b

CLOTHING TRADE SEES EXPANSION

Manager of London Store Gratiated as Business Takes Upward Swing.

After four years of gradual readjustment, the men's clothing business has now reached the point where a long period of progress may be expected with the utmost confidence. This is the opinion of Verne Wyant, manager of the London Oak Hall store, of which Walter A. McCutcheon, a former Londoner, is now proprietor, and a close follower of the trade in Canada and the United States.

Business during the last six months has been gratifyingly gratifying. Mr. Wyant told The Advertiser, and has left no doubt in the minds of retailers that the advancement in conditions is approaching a point where fluctuations will no longer be a worry.

Results Promise. "Our present expansion sale reflects to a most gratifying degree the prosperity in men's clothing and furnishings. Results of the sale to date have far exceeded our expectations, while nothing is approaching a record winter's business."

Mr. Wyant attributes the present splendid outlook to the steady advance in general industry. Prices of men's clothing are far more stable than they were three and four years ago, he declares, and a tendency to moderation in styles augurs well for continued progress.

One of the most noteworthy features of Canadian trade now is the United States, took an important part in the opinion of the Oak Hall manager.

Distinct Canadian Style.

Contrasting conditions a few years ago, when advanced styles in the United States took an important part in the opinion of the Oak Hall manager.

MURRAY CHAMPIONS NEW EAST COLLEGIATE

Trustee Had Never Been in Favor of Switch To South London.

Unfortunately, through an article published recently, the impression has gone abroad that Trustee W. G. Murray is in favor of building a collegiate institute in South London rather than in the east, as now planned.

Mr. Murray, while always advocating a cautious policy in regard to new school buildings, has been a consistent champion of the needs of East London in regard to a secondary school. At no time has he advocated a switch to the south area.

The wisdom of building a twenty-room composite school at the present time is doubted by Mr. Murray. He does not think such a large expenditure is warranted, and he is not sure that the board could carry through with its plan he will urge that it be built in London east.

NEW LEADER APPOINTED FOR MT. FOREST CITADEL

Captain Myrtle Tait Will Assume New Charge Soon.

Captain Myrtle Tait of Port Hope has been appointed to take charge of the Salvation Army citadel at Mount Forest, according to Lieut. Col. Macdonald, chief of the London division.

Captain Alex. Bunton, who has lately had charge of the Mount Forest corps, will go to the United States. Capt. Bunton would go to New York in the near future. He would be assigned to his district by the officers in charge of the corps.

ORDERS FOR STEEL RAILS BOOST OUTPUT OF MILLS

According to the Canadian Machinery and Manufacturing News, Canadian steel mills have been enabled to increase their output to an appreciable extent by reason of orders for steel rails from both of the great Canadian transcontinental roads during the past week or so.

"Bar and small product mills are also reporting increases in orders, largely in the shape of coverage by buyers for fourth quarters needs."

"While current demand, from diversified industries, continues to be for actual business, which manufacturing buyers have on hand or in sight, some firms in the metal working industry report bookings ahead of shipments."

SIX CANCER SUFFERERS BEING TREATED WITH ISSIN

New Research Laboratory Under Construction at Byron Now Nearly Completed. MANY APPLICATIONS

"Issin," the possible cure for cancer, discovered by Dr. W. T. Galbraith and associates of this city, is at present being tested on six cancer subjects, according to one in close touch with experiments. The new laboratory at Byron for research to find better means of procuring the serum, is nearly completed, and only a lack of funds to procure expensive technical equipment is delaying the completion of the work.

Soon after the public announcement of the discovery, which Dr. Galbraith deprecates as being premature, those engaged in the work were besieged with appeals from those afflicted with the dread disease, who offered themselves as subjects for a test of the serum. The difficulty of procuring "issin" prevented any general acceptance of these offers. Several local physicians, it is said, have also offered their aid, while leading pathologists in London, England, immediately offered any help he might be able to give.

WESTERN ALUMNI BOOST CENTENNIAL

Large Representation From Societies Expected at Meeting Called For Tonight.

The Alumni association of the University of Western Ontario is solidly behind London's centennial celebration next summer. Col. Walter J. Brown, has informed City Clerk Baker.

"I look for a large turnout of London societies and organizations at tonight's meeting in the city hall to go ahead with plans for the celebration," declared the city clerk this afternoon. "I have received a number of letters from organizations, and it is most encouraging to note the interest being taken by the women's organizations."

"We want to get things under way as quickly as possible. Committees should be appointed immediately, as there is a lot of hard work to be done, and there is nothing like getting at it."

DELAWARE SCHOOL FAIR EXHIBITS HIGH CLASS

Margaret Fowler Wins First in Public Speaking Contest—Gordon Hottem Second.

Nearly 2,000 people attended the Delaware school fair yesterday. The exhibits were of a high order and reflected much credit upon the scholars and teachers, according to officials of the department of agriculture.

Margaret Fowler was first in the public speaking contest, with Gordon Hottem, second and Jeanette Turnbull third.

Marion Charlton, Hilda Charlton, Jack Exley and Arthur Exley were the winners in the sheep contest. Twelve dollars in prize money was awarded to the winners.

The following officers were elected at a meeting of the men's committee held last night. The committee decided to rearrange the social room. Games will be appointed a committee to appoint key to be added to those already there.

B. A. Swaze and W. F. Sherwin were men from the Sunday schools of the city to direct strangers to the church.

It was decided to make the minstrel show, which will be staged in November, a purely Y. M. C. A. affair. New members will be introduced on that occasion.

Among those present were Dr. K. P. R. Neville, Dr. LeRoy Hiles, W. F. Sherwin, B. A. Swaze and others.

MILITIA STAFF COURSE STARTS HERE NOV. 1

The royal school of infantry here will operate a militia staff course in theoretical work here beginning Nov. 1, and closing May 1, according to Col. F. Gilman.

As yet no list of the probable candidates is available. The study covers strategy, organization, map reading and training for war.

Following the theoretical portion a period of study in practical work will be taken up by the successful candidates. It is not known where the maneuvers will take place. Last year they were held at Lennoxville, Que.

P. J. ARTHUR CARDIN, Liberal minister of marine, during the present campaign has been often styled as the greatest political orator in Canada. He has made an especially strong appeal to the youth of Quebec.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL ARRIVES IN LONDON

Vice-President of War Graves Commission Inspects Two Local Plots.

Brig.-General Sir Fabian Ware, vice-president of the imperial war graves commission, accompanied by Col. H. C. Osborne, secretary of the imperial war graves commission, arrived in the city at 2:15 p.m. today.

Brig.-General W. B. King, C.M.G., D.S.O., general officer commanding military district No. 1, and Lieut.-Col. Francis B. Ware, assistant adjutant, met the distinguished officer, who arrived on the Guelph train.

During the afternoon Sir Fabian visited the soldier plots in Mount Pleasant cemetery and St. Peter's cemetery. While in London Sir Fabian will be the guest of General King and the Hon. Mrs. Shuttlesworth King at Wolsey barracks. Col. Osborne will be the guest of Col. and Mrs. Ware.

FORMER NOVA SCOTIA SECRETARY ARRESTED

W. B. McCoy, K.C., Allowed Out on Two Sureties of $3,500 Each.

Canadian Press Despatch. Halifax, N. S., Oct. 15.—W. B. McCoy, K.C., former secretary of industries and immigration in the provincial secretary's department of the Nova Scotia government, reported at the police station yesterday and submitted to arrest on a charge laid by the attorney-general in connection with shortages in Mr. McCoy's office accounts. Bail was furnished in the form of two sureties for $3,500 each, and the accused was remanded for hearing. The arrest of Mr. McCoy followed discoveries made by the independent audit of the provincial accounts now being conducted, and is the fourth arrest of public servants since the audit commenced some weeks ago. In addition to Mr. McCoy, the accountants at the Nova Scotia sanatorium, Kentville, and the college farm, Truro, and a minor official of the provincial secretary's office are at liberty on bail awaiting trial on charges connected with shortages in their accounts.

MILITIA CAPTAINS' COURSE TO START HERE MONDAY

A course for qualifying captains in the Canadian militia becomes operative here on Monday, when officers in Western Ontario will take further study along military lines. The period of study will last until November 14, according to Col. F. Gilman.

The following officers have been enrolled to date: Lieut. E. B. Thurlow, Elgin Regiment, St. Thomas; Lieut. G. O. Toward, Kent Regiment, Chatham; Lieut. C. Collop, Kent Regiment, Chatham.

BUILDING NEW WALKS. A sidewalk is being laid on the east side of Richmond street from the bridge at Broughdale to that point where the old sidewalk ends, by the township of London. A walk is also being laid on the south side of Bernard avenue. These are being done under the local improvement plan.

EULER'S BACKERS ACTIVE IN RIDING

North Waterloo Liberals Are Confident of Outcome of Election.

W. ELLIOTT IS BUSY

Although absolutely certain as to the outcome the supporters of W. D. Euler, independent Liberal candidate in North Waterloo, are putting on an aggressive campaign. A series of meetings to cover the entire riding has been arranged to be addressed by the candidate and other prominent men as follows: Oct. 16, Elmira; Oct. 17, Wellesley; Oct. 19, Crosshill and Heidelberg; Oct. 21, Crosshill and Linwood; Oct. 22, Winterbourne and New Germany. There will be other meetings also.

An energetic campaign is being waged on behalf of William Elliott, the Liberal-Progressive-Labor candidate in South Waterloo. Mr. Elliott is meeting with great encouragement and is being actively supported by K. K. Homuth, Labor member in the legislature for the riding. Meetings have been arranged as follows: Oct. 15, Galt (smoker); Oct. 16, St. Agatha; Oct. 17, Haysville; Oct. 19, Baden; Oct. 20, Branchton; Oct. 21, Phillipsburg; Oct. 22, New Hamburg; Oct. 23, Ayr; Oct. 24, Petersburg; Oct. 26, Hespeler; Oct. 27, Preston; Oct. 28, Galt.

The word being received from Norfolk-Elgin is that George Sewell, the Liberal-Progressive candidate, is having splendid success in his campaign. Meetings on his behalf have been arranged as follows: Oct. 19, Courtland; Oct. 20, Langton and Delhi; Oct. 21, Port Rowan and Victoria; Oct. 22, Vienna; Oct. 23, Burnt Land; Oct. 24, Aylmer.

The Conservatives are just as busy as the Liberals. A K. K. Homuth is holding a meeting at Lucan tonight with George Elliott, M. P., and Wilfrid Haney, M. P., as the speakers. On Friday Mr. Homuth will hold a meeting at Harrietsville and a meeting of the women of Dorchester will be held Saturday.

TOWER CONSIDERED SAFETY FIRST MOVE

Public Utilities Commission Considers Purchasing New Equipment for Repair Work.

The public utilities commission meeting this afternoon will probably order the purchase of a tower and hoist to be used for repair work on the higher street lights. The cost will be in the neighborhood of $1,400, and the tower will be one of the best "Safety First" devices ever purchased by the commission. Manager E. V. Buchanan states.

The parks board will recommend that 200 new benches be made at Springbank during the winter months for Springbank park. The city's playground was never more popular than it has been this summer, picnic parties came from all over Western Ontario, and as far east and north as Galt, Guelph and Fergus.

The parks board also recommends an additional baseball diamond at Thames park, and several new softball diamonds.

EXTENSION DEPARTMENT PLANS LECTURE A MONTH

At least one lecture each month will be given by the University of Western Ontario, extension department at the Y. M. C. A. This was decided at a meeting held in the red triangle building last night.

The lectures will start the third week in November. There will be a series of five.

Mr. Little Has Proved His Worth.

Mr. E. S. Little in his public service in London showed many of the traits that go toward making a desirable federal representative. An analysis of the things accomplished during his six years of municipal service brings out the fact that he had the capacity to initiate new ideas and also the organizing ability to see them through. As alderman for two years, member of the board of control for a similar term and mayor for another two years, he left a record that can be safely reviewed today in seeking to determine his fitness to represent London in the dominion parliament.

As alderman he initiated legislation to give to married women the right to vote in municipal elections on the property qualifications of their husbands. He pioneered the movement to secure government assistance to assist the city in giving work to the unemployed. He brought out the idea of the city absorbing a share of the cost of local improvements instead of having it all assessed against property on a frontage basis. When the war was on he secured legislation that made the patriotic tax apply to all on the basis of assessment, and not on any special exemption rate that might have been granted for other taxation purposes.

These are but a few instances and are mentioned here because they all show that his aim was to think in terms of all the people of London. He was doing this during his public life in London when he had no intention of running for any other office, and it is exactly the mental attitude that is needed in Canada today—one that thinks and acts in terms of all the people.

During his term as mayor he exhibited an aptitude for good management and executive ability. He was never domineering in his methods, but placed responsibility where it belonged, on the heads of departments, and in return for this confidence made it plain that he expected results.

He was interested in the working conditions of all the civic employees, and it was in his time that the two-rotation system was introduced in the fire department and fairer wages secured for employees of the garbage department, street cleaners and those in the public works department.

It is on account of this record of public service that Londoners today consider Mr. Little the man to represent this city at Ottawa. He understands the situation here, and is well qualified to give helpful advice at Ottawa when anything affecting the interests of London comes under consideration.

The Truth About Nickel.

A strange spectacle is presented by Conservative orators in Ontario denouncing the Mackenzie King government for not laying an embargo upon the exportation of nickel ore. They say that "Canada is the storehouse of the nickel of the world." They do not stress the point that this "storehouse" is located entirely within the boundaries of Ontario. They do not mention that the Ontario government, by high export duties, could practically place an embargo upon all export of nickel.

The Conservatives are in power at Queen's Park, Toronto. They can, if they wish, prevent any nickel ore being taken out of the province. They can, if they wish, make regulations that will compel any manufacturer desiring to refine Canadian nickel to erect his plant in Ontario.

But if federal action be necessary to make the embargo complete, why was nothing done or attempted between 1911 and 1921? The Conservatives were in complete control of the Ottawa government during those ten years and for eight out of these ten years they were simultaneously in control of the Ontario government.

Under a charter granted by the dominion parliament during the premiership of Sir John A. Macdonald, the Canadian Copper Company, controlling nickel deposits near Sudbury, began shipping copper-nickel matte in large quantities for refining to the International Nickel Company at Perth Amboy, N.J. The ore was merely roasted in the company's plant at Copper Cliff, Ont. (near Sudbury) and the sulphur fumes distributed throughout the neighborhood, blighting all vegetation. Later on Herr Ludwig Mond, a naturalized British subject of German birth, acquired nickel-bearing lands in Ontario and shipped the matte in large quantities for refining to Swansea, Wales. Canada enjoyed the poor privilege of mining the ore and the province of Ontario received a paltry tax amounting to about $50,000 a year. This condition prevailed from 1905 until 1911, with the Whitney government in power at Toronto, nor was it changed in 1911 when the Conservatives were in possession of both the dominion and provincial governments.

No nickel refinery existed in Canada and federal and provincial governments alike turned down all appeals for a more national, more patriotic policy in respect to Ontario nickel. Finally popular indignation spurred the government of Sir William Hearst to appoint a nickel commission.

The report of this commission led to back taxes aggregating millions of dollars being collected from the nickel companies, and also led to the International Nickel Company erecting a refinery at Welland, Ont. Another refinery was the British American Nickel Company, built by Canadian capital at Dechene on the Quebec side of the Ottawa river near Ottawa, under a contract by which the British government agreed to take the entire output for ten years at the market price.

The price of nickel slumped so after the war that the refinery erected near Ottawa went into liquidation. Its promoters found to their consternation that the market price was below the cost of production. Nickel matte is still being exported to the International Nickel Company of New Jersey and the Mond Company of Wales.

The Conservatives say that the dominion government should place an embargo upon the export of nickel ore. But why appeal to the dominion government? The nickel ore is all in Ontario and the Ferguson government can stop its export by export duties. Why do not the Conservative orators turn their batteries upon Premier Ferguson?

His Sword Is Rusting.

The Brantford Expositor announces that it "will content itself at this time with a frank and untrammelled discussion of public issues, leaving the electors, in the light of this impartial treatment, to exercise their judgment and choose between particular candidates."

Anyone who knows Mr. T. H. Preston will not accuse him of being like another famous neutral at a critical period in his nation's history, "too proud to fight." It must be a relief to this veteran of many a stern contest, now having no "esteemed contemporary" to measure with, to be able to sit back and watch the battle from a reserved seat. But one wonders if he is altogether happy to see his sword grow dim through lack of use. And one wonders if life in Brantford and a score of other Ontario cities is quite as interesting and zestful as it was when there was in each of them a pair of journalistic gladiators for every contest.

The Expositor's announcement calls attention to the fact that west of Toronto and Hamilton the only Ontario city that now boasts two daily papers is London.

Controversy Not the Solution.

The holding of a public debate on the standing of the London & Port Stanley Railway, as suggested by the mayor and Mr. Pocock, would be helpful only in so far as it brought out facts in connection with that property. The trouble is that very often in the heat of an argument it is not possible for the audience to have these firmly fixed in their mind.

After all, controversy is not the solution of the L. & P. S. problem. London has a very large investment in that road; it was well built in the first place and has been kept in a good state of repair since. Since it was constructed there has been a marked change in the method of travel, and also in the way of handling express packages and freight. The good road system and the increase in automobiles has set up a formidable competition that has made a noticeable inroad into the earning power of the L. & P. S.

The peculiar situation arises that a deficit now comes from operation instead of a profit, and no person is to blame. The management of the property has made every possible reduction in expense that could be made without affecting the efficiency of the service, and it is not possible to go much farther in the direction of curtailing costs. Even were a more drastic policy followed it would not be possible to balance receipts and expenses by further curtailing the latter.

That brings up the immediate problem of what is to be done. The L. & P. S. is the property of London, and the solution of the present difficulty can only be arrived at by all our public officials coming together with one idea only—to make the best possible move on behalf of the people who own the property. We doubt very much if such a move will find its birthplace in a public debate. It is far more likely to come through helpful co-operation by all our public men, from a pooling of wise suggestions and the selection of what appears to be the best. The city has too much at stake to risk the issue being decided on a quick decision or in the hurried analysis that might find its way into public debate. If a private concern had a question of this importance to decide it would be done by conference, and decision would be arrived at on the basis of facts and figures and a thorough survey of the entire field. The only motive would be to arrive at a wise decision. The L. & P. S. is entitled to this sort of fair treatment.

Note and Comment.

The small boy's desire to grow up is so his mother will no longer scrub the back of his neck and dig out his ears with a hairpin.

One of the brightest flashes of the campaign to date is Karl Homuth's comparison of Mr. McEwen's promises to "that Conservative 44 beer."

Newest styles in ladies' stockings are embroidered at the ankle and decked there with an imitation diamond. Men's socks are cut the same as formerly and end half way up the shank.

Two stock brokers in Chicago had a fight over $200 and a couple of hours were needed to extract bullets from one. This is more deadly than the old fight between the bears and the bulls in the stock market.

We don't know about the Thorold girls but we are quite sure that Editor John Thompson of the Thorold Post could not stop the girls of London from bobbing their hair by quoting First Corinthians, vi:15, at them.

The city engineer says Ridout street bridge might be safe enough for vehicles if motorists observed the regulations imposed there for speed and the weight of load. The restrictions were made to protect the very people who insist on disregarding them.

The Speckled Hens

An expert scoffed about my coop. I reared a new one, fresh and new, but now the hens ain't makin' eggs like what they always used to do.

An expert poultryman he come and gazed upon my chicken pen, and said it wasn't fit to cage a decent and a speckled hen. It was not up-to-date at all, he named it as a shameful shack, he scoffed at holes upon the roof and scorned each blistered, open crack.

For keepin' up a place like that he'd ride me on a hemlock rail, he'd have me up before the beak and park me in the village jail.

Well, I had made that pen myself from packin'-cases at the store, and reckoned when I got it done I'd turned a neat and tidy chore. But after what the expert said I thought I'd build a better pen, and gather up nine eggs a week from each and every speckled hen.

And so we've got a place like that, it's painted green and pink and blue, and everything about the place is up-to-date and shinin' new.

But one thing worries me just now, the hens ain't layin' as they were, each week I chalk the record down, I'm gettin' now just two eggs per.

The trouble is, it seems to me, the place is fixed up far too fine, the hens they go a-struttin' round, and waste a lot of precious time. It's so durned swell in there just now, least that's the reason I expound, that they are spendin' of their days just livin' there and lookin' 'round.

It's just the same with lots of folks who used to have a mighty axe, and they were humble in their ways and wrapped plain homespun on their backs. But when they get a bolted shirt on and hang their homespun on the wall, you find as far as workin' goes why they ain't then no use at all.—ARK.

To the Editor

Can't Understand It.

Farmer Says He Can't See How Higher Tax From Tariff Is Going To Make Him Better Off.

Editor of The Advertiser:
Sir—Have just been wondering why some people who do not want a tariff want to be against some of the floundering that is flowing in a veritable stream from high protectionist headquarters.

Conditions agriculturally have improved during the last two years and what we farmers are interested in just now is: Are the big interests, who are supposed to be ruined by the present regime, but who still seem to have a good deal of money, are they by virtue of that money going to advertise like the popular brand of gum in every paper and on every billboard until they can cut off the farmers and get their hands on the farmer's money and make him pay for this flood of propaganda?

I don't think the farmers ought to be considered selfish in wishing their prosperity to continue, as the prosperity of all other groups and classes depends fundamentally on the prosperity of the man behind the plow.

To make the bald statement that higher tariff will lower taxes, and try to hold up the U. S. farmer as an example, is a mean and a joke, but it's no joke to the U. S. farmer. I was over on a visit this summer and before I went over I thought our taxes were high (and I still think so), but I made inquiry and found that theirs were almost twice as high as ours. I saw a 40-acre farm 12 miles from town, with a poor frame house, a shed, but no barn, taxed $92, and it wouldn't bring that much to rent.

I found that the Fordney tariff had not raised the price of wheat to the American farmer. I saw a car being loaded with potatoes at 40 cents per bag and I was told that the month before 30 cents was the prevailing price, and I could go on. Milk, cheese, butter, pork—our prices were equal and in some cases a little better. Where they do have a great advantage over us is in the cost of their implements of production. The Ford car costs $150 or thereabouts less than ours, and other things in proportion.

And how can this high tariff enrich us unless we go over and buy our implements and bring them in duty free? I don't see how it can. It will naturally flow to the dominion treasury instead of to the men who are flooding the country with their propaganda. But then where do the workmen come in? Will these men support them until the tariff comes down again? Not much. Their next move is likely waving the flag, buy goods made in Canada, and that is what every Canadian wants to do, but not if the tariff goes too high.

It is not necessary to take our brand of loyalty from the Prosperity League, and if they are to continue to feed the farmers and workmen of this country, who are taxed now on everything, alarm clocks to waken us, beds to sleep on, blankets, pyjamas, trousers, shoes, soap, etc., and tell us that by raising the amount they take from us it makes our taxes lower, I feel that it is the nearest thing to food for fools that I've seen in a long time. "NICK."

ERECT CENOTAPH IN SHORT PERIOD

I. O. D. E. Would Lay Cornerstone at Old Boys' Centenary Celebration.

The scheme of a cenotaph for London received still stronger backing at a meeting of the Municipal chapter, held yesterday afternoon in Cronyn Hall. The special enlarged cenotaph committee reported progress toward securing a site and selecting designs for the monument, through the convenor, Mrs. George MacDonald.

Although the original plan was to erect the cenotaph in time for the great Old Boys' centenary celebration next summer, the feeling of the I. O. D. E. members just now is that the money necessary for a fitting memorial could not be raised in that time. Perhaps the corner-stone might be unveiled then, with the possibility that London Old Boys would contribute toward the fund.

Mrs. E. B. Smith voiced objection to the original proposal that the cenotaph be erected by next summer. Unemployment was still prevalent in the community, and she felt that as long as this was the case people should not be asked for large contributions toward a cenotaph. She believed, however, that the cenotaph should be erected within the coming few years, and that it should be of the type of which London would be proud.

Mrs. A. E. Miller, regent of the Municipal chapter, was named delegate to the provincial chapter meeting, which is being held on October 22 and 23. Final plans were made for the lecture of Sir Fabian Ware of the Imperial war graves commission, which is to be held in the Metropolitan church hall tonight at 8 o'clock.

It was decided to assist the Orient club in a sale of tickets for the Orient club minstrels, with Mrs. Jack Murray as convenor. The immigration committee, convened by Mrs. Murray, is arranging an immigration tea to be held on November 12.

Mrs. A. E. Miller reported the forming of a new chapter, the Sir Adam Beck chapter, which was organized during the past month. Mrs. Ross Thomas, on behalf of the Child Welfare association, expressed thanks for donations of shoes, and made an appeal for further contributions of this nature, which were so badly needed.

Mrs. Jeffery Hale was made a life member of the Municipal chapter. Votes of thanks were extended to the convenors of Marcheta, recently presented.

Mrs. A. E. Miller presided over the meeting, during which reports were heard from the C. E. F. and Harriet Boomer chapters.

Mrs. John Rose Speaks On Politeness—Members Are Planning Bazaar.

Mrs. John Rose, of the board of education, was the speaker at the regular meeting of the Empress avenue mothers' club held on Tuesday evening, over which Mrs. Fred Grigg presided.

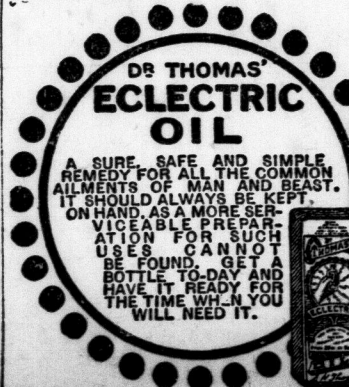

Mrs. Rose congratulated the club members on their fine school building, and paid a tribute to the president's method of conducting the meeting. The topic of her address was "Politeness," which, she declared,

WORKING GIRL'S EXPERIENCE

Read how She Found Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Arnprior, Ontario.—"I must write and tell you my experience with your medicine. I was working at the factory for three years and became so run-down that I used to take weak spells and would be at home at least one day each week. I was treated by the doctors for anemia, but it didn't seem to do me any good. I was told to take a rest, but was unable to, and kept on getting worse. I was troubled mostly with my periods. I would sometimes pass three months, and when it came it would last around two weeks, and I would have such pains at times in my right side, that I could hardly walk. I am only 19 years of age and weigh 118 pounds now, and before taking the Vegetable Compound I was only 108 pounds. I was sickly for two years and some of my friends told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and when I had taken a bottle of it I felt a change. My mother has been taking it for a different ailment and has found it very satisfactory. I am willing to tell friends about the medicine and to answer letters asking about it."—Miss HAZEL BERNETT, Box 700, Arnprior, Ontario.

A day out each week shows in the pay envelope. If you are troubled with some weakness, indicated by a run-down condition, tired feelings, pains and irregularity, let Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound help you.

should be taught in the home as well as in the school. Politeness, she thought, was something of a lost art in these busy days, when everyone is in a hurry. The business that meets the public through courteous clerks is the most successful.

The speaker also emphasized to the members respect and politeness to officers. She deplored the tendency to criticize and belittle those in public positions.

Plans were made at this meeting for the club bazaar to be held on the next meeting night. An attractive program was greatly enjoyed during the evening, and included piano numbers by Miss Wildstut, and vocal solos by Harold Wildstut. Light refreshments were served, and a social half-hour afforded the members an opportunity to become better acquainted.

MRS. R. PERCY TAYLOR HEADS WRIGHT UNION

New President Is Unanimously Elected—Adjutant Spooner Gives Short Talk.

Mrs. R. Percy Taylor of Windsor avenue was unanimously elected to the presidency of the Wright W. C. T. U. at the regular meeting held yesterday afternoon in Knox church. The members rose to receive the new head of the organization.

An excellent Bible lesson was given by Adjutant Spooner, who spoke inspiringly on the fighting of a good fight against sin as it was in the world today. The breaking of the temperance laws he considered the most serious, and greatly encouraged the women to carry on their splendid work. He also stated that people were too much aloof to sin, and said that if they wished to do something they could do that something besides sinning.

Mrs. Spooner sang very sweetly, accompanied by Adjutant Spooner. Mrs. Gregory ably presided over the session.

EDWARD JOHNSON.

distinguished tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York city, and a native of Guelph, Ontario, who is appearing in the city on Monday evening, Oct. 19, in a concert for the benefit of work among underprivileged boys. This performance is sponsored by the Kiwanis club.

JOHNSON GOT START IN ANGLICAN CHURCH

When in Knickers He Became Member of Guelph Choir.

STUDIED IN ITALY

Famous Lombardo Was Master For Years of Diligent Work.

The career of Edward Johnson, the brilliant tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and who has been received with wild acclaim with that organization, is one of romantic interest. Edward Johnson was born in Guelph, and when still in knickers he became a choirster in one of the city's Anglican churches.

Mr. Johnson then sang in college, and by this time came to the realization that he could really sing, and that he would amount to something in the musical world if he could find it possible to cultivate his voice. And so young Johnson came to New York, to study and at the same time to earn money. Because of the beauty of his natural high lyric voice, a type of voice which is difficult to find, he soon obtained a position in a noted choir, and received real money for his singing.

More money was necessary for advanced study and he finally obtained a leading role in a light opera, which was setting Broadway ablaze. Having a definite goal in mind, and being a sensible young man, young Johnson conserved his funds, and when he thought he had enough he departed for Florence, Italy, and began studying under the famous Lombardo.

Mr. Johnson spent several years of intense study with Lombardo, and by earnest and diligent plodding, always retaining his definite goal in mind, he soon made his debut in the Verdi theatre, Padua, Italy, creating a tremendous success which brought him a much coveted engagement with the La Scala Opera Company in Milan.

Since then Mr. Johnson has sung in every famous opera house in the world, and has appeared as soloist with the greatest of American symphony orchestras always being received with sincere enthusiasm. As a concert singer he is supreme.

Elaborate Tomb For Nikolai Lenin

Associated Press Despatch. Moscow, Oct. 14.—Nikolai Lenin, father of bolshevism, is to be given one of the most elaborate tombs in the world. Plans for the erection of a marble mausoleum to replace the temporary wooden structure in which his body now rests have been announced today by the soviet government. The plans provide for a great central hall, where the casket will be placed, with a number of auxiliary halls of museum character. The top of the tomb will take the form of a tribune from which revolutionary speakers will address the crowds in the square on bolshevik fete days.

INTELLECT USED TO TEMPER ART

Johnson's Conception of Pinkerton Wins Praise From Famous Critic.

How intelligence may enter into the art of singing sometimes puzzles the layman, but a particularly interesting example of how Edward Johnson has brought his mind to work upon an important operatic role is illustrated by Stark Young, a dramatic critic, writer and director associated with the Provincetown and Theatre Guild organizations. Writing in the New Republic regarding Edward Johnson, Mr. Young says: "When Mr. Johnson conceived the part of Pinkerton he chose the right direction. The character has never been popular with audiences. They have never liked this picture of a young naval officer who betrays the woman he loves, and then sails away and deserts her. What could an artist do, I fancy Mr. Johnson reflected, to make this part less repellent and more tragic and moving? What profoundly human—and so more easily forgivable or at least understandable—motives might there conceivably be that would account for such an action and such callousness of heart? Mr. Johnson ended by creating a young man lifted and carried away by the glamor of the east, its romance and exotic horrors. Into this world of his imagination the woman came; through it he saw her, and her love for him may have grown to meet this excitement this glow, this tender intensity in him. He as well as she was a victim of the forces stronger than himself. So that this cruelty was one of the defects of his excellence.

This conception of the part was permissible enough, and as true, for that matter, as any other. It has the advantage over the usual conception of Puccini's hero, the betrayer of the passing of a whim of a man theme, because it brings into action more of life, it includes more of what we are or may be. It is not so easy as the average conception, which settles the matter very simply; but it is more persuasive and moving, because it is more beautiful. It is darker and more distressing in the end, because it covers more of life, and is, therefore, more indicative, less incidental, or individual, and more fatally expressive. It carries further and is more tragic because, by depicting them as working upon all the characters, it leaves more exposed the forces that are at work. And as a development of a role for an artist it all rests on a deeper and more significant method."

THREE-CORNERED FIGHT LOOMING IN PONTIAC

Canadian Press Despatch. Hull, Que., Oct. 14.—Pontiac county is to witness a three-cornered political fight on Oct. 28 as a result of the expressed intention of Arthur LePage of Senneterre, Abitibi, to run as an independent Liberal. Mr. LePage was defeated at the Liberal convention held at O'Brien recently, when Frank S. Cahill, member of the last house, was renominated. Lucien

By consent the suit of John Minihinnick against the Parisian Laundry has been adjourned to the next sitting of the division court. Mr. Minihinnick is suing the laundry company for $120, the contract price for some advertising on the curtain at the Grand Opera House.

JOHNSON FOUND NAME HANDICAP

"Inski" on the End of Name Was Essential to Singer.

Edward Johnson, the noted Canadian tenor, who will appear here on Monday evening at the Arena, has had to begin all over again at least once in his career. After making a tremendous success in Italy under the name of Edouardo Di Giovanni, he had to return to his own country and make his own name famous in its English version.

"When I came back here, however, my ten years' experience was as nothing," he declared, "my prestige was entirely gone. They couldn't believe that a fellow who hadn't 'inski' or 'uski' tacked on his name could deliver the goods."

"Then through good fortune came the contract from the Metropolitan Opera company and they asked me if I could sing 'Faust' in French, and 'Tannhauser' in German and so on. I was ready to sing anything. I'd have sung in Yiddish to show them I could deliver the goods."

"Little by little," he continued, "artists are proving to the world that they are regular fellows, selling their goods just as you are. The only difference is when you send out your goods your job is done. With our goods we have to be there when they are delivered."

"The agents peddle us around, we are, so to speak, the 'cheese' in Latin countries the goods have to be as per order or there is a whistle which means 'watch out!' something heavy is coming your way. In Anglo-Saxon countries there is a bit more leniency. 'Publicity is as great a feature in our business as yours. They say Mary Garden, after Roosevelt, is the most widely advertised person in the world, and she said to me once, 'I don't care what the papers of the people say about me as long as they say it.'"

So Edward Johnson has continued to deliver the goods. He looks like a business man, of medium build, speaks with a cultured tone which betrays the knowledge of many languages and literatures, and accompanies his talk with a delightfully friendly smile.

Kiwanians Invite Citizens To Hear Canadian Artist

Last Chance Given to Londoners at Most Popular Prices.

SUPPORT BRILLIANT

The following letter is addressed by John J. McHale, president of the Kiwanis club, to the citizens of London: "Anyone who has ever heard Edward Johnson—the foremost tenor in the world—a Canadian artist who has brought the highest honors of the musical world to Canada—will want to hear him again.

"Anyone who has never heard this wonderful singer will be glad of the opportunity placed before the people of this community by the Kiwanis club on Monday, Oct. 19, at the London Arena. "This is the first time that Mr. Johnson has been presented at popular prices. It will possibly be the last. Heretofore extremely high admission charges have prevailed—and justly so—for this world-famous singer. The Kiwanis club of London, however, wished to give everybody the chance of hearing him, and has arranged that for this once seat prices would be so graded that the humblest citizen would be able to enjoy the treat of listening to the best the world affords.

"Mr. Johnson has risen to the occasion, and will render for the tremendous audience that is sure to be there a carefully selected program of unusual appeal. Mr. Paul de Marky, the assisting artist, is a young pianist of brilliant attainments, whose performance will add greatly to the pleasure of an evening that is sure to set a record in the musical annals of London.

"The seat sale opens on Monday, Oct. 12, at the Heintzman piano store, 242 Dundas street. Prices are $1 (not reserved), $1.50 (reserved), $2 (box seats). "We invite the citizens of the community to assist our club in making the effort an outstanding success, as the net proceeds are to be used in helping under-privileged boys."

Gets Acclamation For Third Term—Other Officers Are Named.

Harry Wray was last night elected by acclamation to serve his third consecutive year as president of the London branch, G. W. V. A., at the election of officers held at the dug-out. Others who were appointed to office were:

First vice-president, D. Finlayson; second vice-president, G. Brydges; treasurer, Thomas Holmes; executive, H. Clements, M. Noble, N. O'Neill and E. Bates.

The year's work of the association was reviewed by the president, Col. Coles installed the officers, and spoke on the ideals of amalgamation. An interesting ceremony followed the announcement that Commodore G. J. Wood is leaving tonight for England, when Mr. Wood was presented with a club bag by Colonel Coles on behalf of the command.

ARTIST DECLARES DREAMER IS GONE

Type of Singer Has Changed—Business Acumen Is Essential.

The dreamer type of operatic and concert artist is a thing of the past, according to Edward Johnson, the noted American tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who will be heard here on Monday evening at the Arena.

"I think the successful artist today has a good deal of business sense," declared Mr. Johnson recently. "The dreamer type is gone. He is out of style for one thing; a misfit in the keen, active age. One will often hear the comment, 'He doesn't look like a singer (or an actor, painter, whatever it is), does he?' Whatever may be accepted as the old-fashioned standard of how he should look I am quite sure 'he' whoever he is, is glad he doesn't look that way. Art is for all of us, and so are the more practical things of life. I believe in specialization, that is on concentration upon a definite goal. But in attaining that goal, each should not overlook the fact that he is, except perhaps for a special gift in one direction, pretty much like everybody else."

Mr. Johnson, a member of his home city Rotary club, delivered an interesting speech to them on his return home.

"There has been long an abyss between the businessman and the professional man, the artist," he said. "My conception of it is this—that any man who accomplishes something worth while which requires imagination is an artist and his production a work of art. So we are all alike."

He then told his fellow Rotarians the competition he had to face in his line of business. "When a young man wins his way out of choir and quartet singing in the towns and cities," he said, "he goes to Europe for further study. "Arriving there, he is met with the Canadian Press Despatch. Montreal, Oct. 14.—Leading engineers of Canada and the United States, delegates to the convention here of the American Society of Civil Engineers, today staged an argumentative battle on the subject of exportation of Canadian water-power to the United States. The discussion followed remarks by Ira W. McConnell, vice-president of the Dwight P. ## EARLY SALE OF TICKETS PROMISES LARGE HOUSE

Londoners Prove Eagerness To Hear Great Tenor in Concert Extraordinary.

PROGRAM VARIED
Paul de Marky, London Musician, Will Be Assisting Artist.

A heavy advance sale of tickets for the Edward Johnson concert next Monday at the arena promises a packed house for the performance.

Edward Johnson, Canadian-born tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York city, is singing under the auspices of the Kiwanis club and in the interest of the underprivileged boys of London.

This, for Londoners, will be par excellence the musical treat of the season. Mr. Johnson had already made a world-wide reputation for himself in opera and is acclaimed by many critics as the successor of Caruso as the greatest tenor of the world. Mr. Johnson has an exceedingly wide range with a natural high lyric voice, a type that is, unfortunately, very rare.

He is presenting to music lovers of London a varied program divided into four groups. The first is a series of three selections in Italian, among which the Vergine tutto amor is particularly suitable for Mr. Johnson's voice. The second series is composed of five numbers, consisting of three songs in the German, notably a delightful little bit of Heine's poetry, Die Lotosblume, to one of Schumann's settings, and two English versions of continental songs, set to music by Sachnowsky and Tschakowsky. The third group is a notable array of French chansons, the gem of which is Ah! Fuyez douce image.

The last series is a five-song group sung in English, one of which is a typical Kipling poem, Kangaroo and Dingo, set to music by Edward German, who has made a name for himself with his fine piano poems.

The last of this English song group, and the concluding number on the program, is probably the premier selection of the concert, To Anthea, who may command him anything, is a little English love song of the pre-Shakespearean era and was written by Herrick, one of the early English song writers, whose verse has come down to the present day. This poem was studied last year by the English classes of the colleges of the province and is incorporated in the text-book, Shorter Poems, studied in the schools.

The recital will be enhanced by the playing of the assisting artist, Paul de Marky, pianist. The program opens with five selections from Chopin, of which the fourth, Etude G Sharp Minor, is still a subject of controversy among students of music.

His second group is a charming episode of Brahms', followed by the ever-popular Blue Danube Waltz. Two of Liszt's compositions conclude Mr. de Marky's contribution to the program.

Mr. Johnson's accompanist will be Elmer Zoller. Music lovers who attend this concert will not only be listening to possibly the finest concert of the year, but will be assisting in a charity that has universal support in Canada. The London Kiwanis club, under whose auspices Mr. Johnson is appearing in the city, has arranged this musical treat as a benefit performance for the work among underprivileged boys.

Mr. Johnson is keenly interested in everything worth while. He has the curiosity to explore life and the people who make it, the analytical gift to turn his observations into mental food for himself, the wit to transform his analysis into charming conversational journeys for his friends.

Not only does Mr. Johnson read along ordinary lines, but he has always made an effort to know men who are doing work along other lines, his own—painters, sculptors, writers—and to talk to them about their work.

There is always an element of surprise in talking with an artist high up in his own particular sphere, and finding him vitally interested in other things, and able to discuss them easily.

Mr. Johnson is much to be admired, for, despite his art, he is so human.

MUST BE NO SECTIONALISM IN CANADA, SAYS CURRIE

Canadian Press Despatch. Vancouver, Oct. 14.—"There must be no sectionalism," said Hon. Arthur Currie, principal of McGill university, who arrived here today from Montreal to take part in the opening exercises of the new university of British Columbia buildings in Point Grey, after referring to the optimism with which he looked to Canada's future. "We must all be for the whole of the dominion, and there must be a measure of give and take for the good of the nation as a whole."

FRED ROSS, chairman in charge of Kiwanis work for underprivileged boys, for the benefit of which work Edward Johnson, distinguished tenor, is singing in concert on Monday evening.

FEDERATION ASKS WASTE LESSENED

Would Lower Selling Prices and Make For Higher Wages.

Atlantic City, Oct. 14.—The convention of the American Federation of Labor went on record today as favoring a policy of wage increases and reduction of hours in proportion to the individual's increasing power of production.

A resolution adopted yesterday unanimously asks wage-earners everywhere to oppose wage reductions, and to urge upon managements the elimination of waste in production in order that selling prices may be lower and wages higher.

Explaining the new policy, William Green, federation president, said: "We are on the threshold of a great industrial era. We are living in the infancy of giant power. A new condition is here, and we must meet it."

The convention favored non-partisan support for congressional candidates favorable to trade unionism. A committee reporting on this subject said that the "newest reactionary campaign plans to overthrow the United States form of government and replace it by a supreme executive."

WEST WILL SPURN MEIGHEN, BELIEF

J. W. King Predicts Conservatives Minus Support of Quebec Also.

Special to The Advertiser by a Staff Correspondent.

Goderich, Oct. 14.—At the temperance hall, Goderich, J. W. King, Progressive member for North Huron, held an enthusiastic meeting. Arthur Roebuck, K.C., of Toronto, also spoke, and Alexander Young of Colborne township was chairman of the meeting. He introduced the local member, who was the first speaker. Mr. King, Meighen and his tariff policy, and the effects of his policy on the country. Stating that Mr. Meighen had voted for the Australian treaty J. W. King gave him the lie, and also stated that although he had issued a denial in the papers, Mr. Meighen had made no retraction. Speaking aggressively, Mr. King predicted that Mr. Meighen's party would receive no support from the Progressive west, where he expected

T. H. YULL, chairman publicly committee for the benefit concert of Edward Johnson, under Kiwanis auspices, for work among underprivileged boys.

No conservative seats, also Quebec, he felt, would spurn the leader who would not campaign the province. Defending his own record in parliament, he spoke of his service in obtaining repairs of $150,000 on the Goderich harbor, also of having two ridings for Huron in the federal redistribution.

As regards the present administration, Mr. King promised the Liberal government his support as long as they continued their progressive legislation and tariff reductions and decided any progressive combination with Conservatives and their policies. Following the federal member, Mr. Roebuck addressed eloquently a very attentive audience, touching on the record of the Progressive party in the past legislature. Turning to the present Liberal administration he offered much in praise of the prime minister, whom he termed to be a true democrat. He spoke of the balanced budget, the railroad operating surplus and the successful industrial regime under the King government.

CROWN ENDS CASE AGAINST JANISSES

Mrs. McMullin, Widow of Victim, Recounts Story of Tragic Meeting.

Special to The Advertiser.

Windsor, Oct. 14.—Mrs. Ethel McMullin, widow of the slain man, was one of the first witnesses called today when the trial of Mrs. Ruth Janisse, on the charge of shooting and killing Clayton McMullin, Windsor automobile battery dealer, opened before Justice D. Inglis Grant of Toronto, presiding in Sandwich at the fall assizes.

Mrs. Janisse appeared in court shortly after 10 o'clock wearing a long black coat, with a fur collar, and a small black hat, from which her golden hair escaped at either side. She was pale and weak, and had to be assisted to her place by a court attendant. She sat with her eyes closed until the crown prosecutor formally asked permission to proceed with the case against her.

The clerk then called upon her to rise. She did not comply, and the order was repeated. She then arose, with the assistance of a court officer. As she confronted the prospective jurors one at a time, she frequently burst into tears. The jury was completed shortly before 11, and the testimony began immediately.

Recounts Tragedy.
Seated, because she was too weak to stand, Mrs. McMullin described haltingly the happenings on the evening of Aug. 13. She and her husband, she said, left their home about 8:10 p.m. and drove to the home of Mrs. Grace Taylor, 322 Ellis avenue.

"As we were leaving our home," she said, "Mr. and Mrs. Janisse drove up, but we didn't stop. We drove to Mrs. Taylor's and parked our car in front of her house. Clayton went to the back of the house to get a drink of water, and I remained near the door. Pretty soon someone knocked at the door, and I looked over Mrs. Taylor's shoulder and saw Mr. Janisse. He asked if Mr. McMullin was in, and somebody called him I don't want him to go out, as I didn't like those people."

Asked how she knew who was outside, she said she could see them from where she was standing. "They walked over to the car on the opposite side of the street. Mrs. Janisse stood near the front of the car and my husband stood a little to the rear with one foot on the running board. I couldn't hear the conversation. Suddenly I saw a flash from the car and heard a shot. I ran to get Clayton, and there was another shot."

"She Shot Me."
"He staggered toward me and said: 'Run for your life, Ethel, she shot me.'"

Mrs. Taylor, testifying earlier, told a similar story of the shooting. When cross-examined by the defence, Mrs. McMullin testified she did not see Clayton until after the shooting. Mrs. Janisse, or with someone she believed to be Mrs. Janisse, in December last year, and on January 15.

"She said she had something she wanted to tell me, and to listen carefully until she was through," Mrs. McMullin said.

The crown prosecutor objected to this testimony, saying it was not admissible as evidence. The defence attorney said the testimony should be admitted, as it would show the mental condition of Mrs. Janisse. The jury was excused while the point was being argued.

Justice Grant informed the defence counsel that the showing of the person accused to be insane rests upon the person accused, as every person is assumed to be responsible for his acts.

Counsel stated that he did not contend that Mrs. Janisse is now insane, but that she was insane at the time of the shooting, and said it would be necessary to introduce evidence as to her condition, her general conduct and her writings to show the jury the condition of her mind prior to the time the alleged offence was committed.

Justice Grant adjourned court during this argument to allow the attorneys on both sides to look up references, concerning the admission of such testimony.

Identifies Pistol.
Edward Gignac identified as his the pistol with which McMullin was shot, and told of lending it to Mrs. Janisse for her protection earlier in the day.

The crown had 12 witnesses, and Mrs. Janisse's attorney has certified eight defence witnesses, including Mrs. Janisse's husband, Arthur J. Janisse, who is to be tried on the same charge. The trial is not expected to close before Thursday. The courtroom was crowded all day. Most of the spectators were elderly.

Eight of the 12 men who will decide the woman's fate are farmers; two are carpenters, and the other two are a merchant and a real estate operator.

The jury is composed of James Rollins, farmer; Carlisle Penner, farmer; George Stewart, carpenter; Thomas Deslip, farmer; Chester A. R. Davies, merchant; Harvey Kinmerley, farmer; Ernest Oliver, farmer; James Telford, carpenter; George Tice, farmer; John Thurst, farmer; William H. Fellows, real estate operator; and F. L. Holt, farmer.

The crown completed its case late this afternoon, and the defence will present its case early in the morning.

ESCAPING GAS FUMES TAKES TWO MORE LIVES
Toronto, Oct. 14.—William Peir, 23, and a woman whose identity has not yet been discovered, were found dead in Peir's home on Benson avenue today, death being caused by escaping gas fumes from an open tap in the kitchen. They had apparently been dead for more than 24 hours. This deadly poisoning makes six victims of gas asphyxiation in Toronto in the last eight days, and 25 to date this year.

LONDONER IS DISMISSED IN COURT AT HAMILTON
Special to The Advertiser.
Hamilton, Oct. 14.—John Stinson, London, Ont., was charged in police court today with stealing $12 from May Johnston, but when May refused to prosecute the magistrate dismissed the case. Stinson, according to the story told by the court, received some money from Miss Johnston. He then went to London and the girl believed he was leaving the town for good. Stinson proved he had no intention of cheating his friend out of the money. In fact, Miss Johnston not only decided to drop the charge, but also promised to pay all costs of the case, including the railway fares spent in bringing Stinson back to Hamilton.

Knights of K.K.K. Are Reality As Thousand Members Gather At Donnybrook For Initiation

Imperial Kleigrapp Performs Rituals To Newcomers in Pouring Rain.

KLAN IS POLITICAL

Dr. C. W. Fowler Claims Organization Votes For Man, Not Party.

Donnybrook was the scene: eight o'clock the hour, and the Invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, became an actuality. More than a thousand hooded men and women, coming from all parts of Western Ontario, strolled about the fields of Donnybrook, in Dorchester, last night, in the first open air K. K. demonstration in Canada.

It was a motley crowd that first gathered at the meeting place. Some wore white hoods, and some masks. Many were in only partial full dress costume, discarding their robes for heavy overcoats as protection against a drizzling rain and penetrating wind, but that she was insane at the time of the shooting, and said it would be necessary to introduce evidence as to her condition, her general conduct and her writings to show the jury the condition of her mind prior to the time the alleged offence was committed.

When a thousand or more people, summoned by the blast of a whistle and disregarding wind and rain, donned their regalia and formed together in military line, it was a spectacle. It was an impressive array, the white hoods and robes shimmering and the illumination of burning crosses, and an area, centred with a flag-decorated altar, flanked on all sides with knights and ladies.

Nothing Sinister.
There was nothing of the clandestine about the meeting, nothing sinister about the crowd. They had come from all parts of the district to publicly proclaim the Klan, and spectators were welcomed to witness the demonstration.

The occasion, in Klan phraseology, was the "naturalization of members." Others came from Ingersoll, Woodstock, Brantford, Hamilton, Windsor and St. Thomas. Ten thousand were expected to be on the field, but the weather was held responsible for a smaller turnout than expected.

Some Wear Masks.
Although many went about the ceremony in mask, it was not imperative that they should conceal their identity. Dr. Fowler pointed out. The Klan observes strict secrecy only in its private conclaves, he said.

Last night's demonstration, the first of its kind ever to be held in the dominion, is the forerunner of many similar events when membership classes will be initiated. There was no display other than that of color and mysticism. It was the culmination of a year of organized work, for the spirit of the Ku Klux Klan of Canada, indirectly related to the American society, was planted in the dominion last fall.

OVER 700 NAMES ADDED TO LISTS
Several Additional Polling Subdivisions Will Now Be Necessary.

More than 700 names have been added to the London voters' lists in the past week's rush. Inside of two hours last night nearly 200 voters who otherwise would have lost their franchise had their names added.

From the minute the offices of the revising officers, E. W. Flock and F. W. Gladman, were opened, there was a rush of voters. Since Thursday there have been more than 700 names added. Most of these were people who had changed their residence since the last election.

Creation of several additional polling subdivisions will now be necessary, the law setting 300 as the maximum in any one subdivision. Several divisions in the city will now exceed this.

In contrast to the rush of city voters was the apparent apathy of those citizens who reside in East London, but for voting purposes are included in the riding of East Middlesex. Since the lists were opened for revision only 28 names have been added.

It is confidently expected that hundreds of citizens residing in the east end of London will be deprived of their franchise on election day through failure to have their names placed on the list.

The indifference of candidates to this fertile field for votes is inexplicable, no efforts having been made to have any names placed on the lists.

DR. D. V. GLADMAN DIES FROM HEART TROUBLE
Brother of London Magistrate Had Lived at Niagara 15 Years.

Magistrate Gladman received word last night of the death of his brother, Dr. D. V. Gladman, of Niagara Falls, Ontario. The late Mr. Gladman was born in Peterboro in 1862, and had practiced medicine in Niagara Falls for nearly 15 years. He is survived by the widow.

Scouts Assist Drive On Fire

Special to The Advertiser.

Chatham, Oct. 14.—The local fire prevention campaign was brought to a successful conclusion with a thorough inspection conducted by local Boy Scouts, acting under the direction of Fire Chief Pritchard. Chatham has maintained its record as one of the cleanest cities in Canada, and, according to Fire Chief Pritchard's comment.

to portions of the ritual, and then gathering around the altar where the final agreement and oath was taken. As the procession continued a brass band, made up of Klan members, played sacred hymns.

Four crosses were ignited. They varied in size from a small cross to one 50 feet in height. Later in the evening, when the rain spasmodically let up they cast a brilliant reflection over the countryside, as they burned furiously.

The Imperial Kleigrapp, Dr. C. W. Fowler, editor of the American Standard, and former New Yorker, was present. He commenced the naturalization ceremony, and, speaking to the Klan members, outlined the policies and aims of the society.

The Klan is military and militant, he said. "Its three chief purposes are to keep the white race pure, to strive for the economic betterment of the Gentiles and to work for the organization of Protestants in behalf of Protestant civilization."

Klan Is Political.
Later Dr. Fowler explained that the Klan took an active part in politics. Look what we did in New Brunswick, he said. "But we cannot work for or favor any one particular party."

Dr. Fowler explained that in each county there was a Klan, divided into cells. In the forthcoming election, the local policy would be to vote for the man, acting upon no outside influence, and not the party. It was his intention to give their support to the man who stood for their principles, regardless of his party affiliations.

"Of course we shall take part in politics," he said. "How else can legislation can we successfully obtain our ends?"

"We are fighting nobody," he continued. "We are clannish regarding Gentiles, and we work to keep the white race intact, but we never take the law in our own hands."

Two King Kleagles of the Klan were present last night. They were distinguished from the lower rank by scarlet hoods. The Imperial Kleigrapp was crowned in purple with gold braids. Sixty Klan policemen were on hand to organize and control the crowd.

There were 700 representatives from London. Others came from Ingersoll, Woodstock, Brantford, Hamilton, Windsor and St. Thomas. Ten thousand were expected to be on the field, but the weather was held responsible for a smaller turnout than expected.

Some Wear Masks.

MULBERRY IS ONE OF NEW SHADES

Latest Dance Frocks Floats and Is Fashioned With Fluted Pennons.

By AILEEN LAMONT.
Special to The Advertiser.
Copyright.

New York, Oct. 12.—With silk all the rage, it is not wonderful that one of the newest popular colorings should be a mulberry tone. The shade is deeper and richer than the pearly which was so widely worn last summer. It has a blue rather than a reddish cast, and is so dark that in some lights it appears almost black. It is frequently used for dresses in conjunction with embroideries of beads, brilliants and pearls.

Like a certain brand of soap, the latest dance frock floats. The foundation is of palest pink georgette. Two fluted pennons of deep mulberry float loosely from the shoulders in the back. In front they are drawn down the tight bodice in a long V line to the waist, where they pass through a ring of embroidery and reappear as fluted draperies. The entire skirt is made of alternate flutings of cherry and pink which pass through tiny rings at the waist.

The vogue for felt hats has by no means passed despite the popularity of satin and velvet. But the newer felt models are much more elaborate in shape and trimming than has been the case. Brims are wider, but this does not add to the width of the hat since they are turned up sharply. These brims sometimes are of velvet or velveteen.

With the coming of the formal social season, gloves have taken on a less careless appearance. Many of the newer models are strapped, or belted snugly at the wrist. For this purpose straps of gold or silver, red or rose or green shagreen are used. The body of the gloves themselves usually are of white or black glace kid.

They do good by stealth. That is the way women built on the more generous lines characterize the efforts of the French designers. The plan most of the latter follow is to provide amplexity and then conceal it so as to preserve the slim appearance of the figure when it is not in motion.

CLUB NEWS

JOLLY PALS.

The energetic club of Jolly Pals decided at last night's meeting, held at the home of Miss Marion Pellow, to adopt a club at the Ronald Gray Memorial home. Though the youngsters will not be taken from the home the girls will provide clothing and other things for them.

Plans for a rubber drive on the 27th of October were also made. It is to be held at the home of Mrs. Fred Vonderberg. The girls also discussed putting on a play some time during the fall.

Following the business session, a social time was enjoyed and light refreshments were served. The next meeting will be held at the home of the president, Miss Merrill Roseer, Ottawa avenue.

STREET MISSION CLUB. The meeting of the King Street United Church, held at the manse on Wednesday evening, with a large attendance, and the president, Mrs. T. O. Robinson, in the chair. Several matters of business were discussed and a few arrangements made for the year.

Plans were made for a play, to be produced the latter part of November. Following a short social period, refreshments were served by the hostesses.

MISS VIOLET TRENCH PAYS TRIBUTE TO YOUNG PEOPLE

Niece of Noted Irish Imperialist Appeals For Higher Ideals.

GUEST IN LONDON

To meet Miss Violet Trench, niece of Sir Henry Willson, distinguished Irish imperialist, over the tea-cups at the home of her hostess—that was indeed a privilege, for it was an intimate glimpse at this talented English woman in her most effective setting, and could only have been bettered had the tea-table been laid in her own home in Chelsea, Old London.

The scene of the tea, however, was Tuellin, South London home of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Smith, with whom Miss Trench is spending a few days. In the intimate atmosphere which a cup of tea creates, Miss Trench told something of girls' work as she has seen it carried on, both on this continent and in the old land.

Miss Trench believes that the girls of today are more independent, and have a greater sense of usefulness than the girls of years ago past. But all young people, she says, need high ideals and a greater sense of responsibility.

Young People Are Good. "I am not one of those persons who decry the modern youth and maiden," she said. "I do not believe that they are bad when I say that they should have higher ideals. I do mean rather, while doing anything to make them better. I do not object to powder and paint as powder and paint, but I do stress the point, that when any improvement is to be made, it should be made from within, not by some outside which is put on the outside."

Miss Trench believes that the hope of the race lies in greater friendship between parents and children. She would like to see young girls studying the question of bringing up children, both their practical care and their education. This she believes, would make a big task of the shoulders of the first child in a family, who nearly always finds himself in the position of educating his parents, or her parents, as the case may be.

Addresses Girls. Miss Trench's biggest work among girls was with the W. A. A. C. S. during the war period in England. She is also keenly interested in girls' friendly society work, and last night addressed a rally of these girls in Cronyn hall.

While in the Southern States recently she made a study of work among the colored girls of South Carolina, and was amazed at the wonderful work which they were accomplishing.

It is four and half years since Miss Trench last visited Canada, and that for England and Ireland from Montreal on S. S. Aurania.

Mrs. Isaac Greenizen and Miss Greenizen, of Petrolia, with their guest Miss Fan Fraser, of Fredericton, N. B., are guests at the Telemachus House, coming to London for Mrs. Fred Kennedy's reception on Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. George Routledge of Lambeth and her mother, Mrs. A. J. Vandenberg, have just returned from a most enjoyable visit to Atlantic City. Mrs. Vandenberg remained in Toronto, where she will be a guest with another daughter, Mrs. W. L. Robertson, for some time.

Mrs. F. Leonard Smith, Briscoe street, entertained recently in honor of Miss Elsie Brown, a bride-elect, next week, to an evening of cards and a miscellaneous shower. Miss Brown was the recipient of a great many pretty gifts from friends and relatives.

Perth Jail Asks For New Washer

One Washer On Duty For Forty Long Years.

Special to The Advertiser.

Stratford, Oct. 14.—A communication to the Perth county council, in session here, showed that even such prosaic things as washing machines do wear out eventually. Forty years ago, according to J. A. T. Tretheway, a washing machine was purchased for the Perth county jail. This faithful implement of cleanliness has at last succumbed to old age, and the jailer has requested that after four decades, a new machine be purchased.

Special to The Advertiser.

Blyth, Oct. 14.—On the way to Brussels yesterday to attend the sports field day, one of the Blyth boys, Stewart Young, lost control of his car and collided with a telephone pole. He wrecked his car badly, and his passengers had to be taken on to Brussels by the other cars.

CANDIDATE WITHDRAWS

Gordon Elliott From Federal Contest

Canadian Press Despatch.
Ottawa, Oct. 14.—Gordon C. Edwards, Liberal, announced this evening that he had withdrawn from the election contest in Russell county, leaving the seat to be contested by Alfred Goulet in the Liberal interest and D. C. Menkes for the Conservatives. Mr. Edwards' withdrawal was prompted by the knowledge that a three-cornered fight would jeopardize the chances of the Liberal party. He was the official candidate, having won the convention at Vars, while Mr. Goulet was to have run as an independent Liberal.

EDITH CAVELL LODGE.

A splendid meeting of the Edith Cavell lodge, L. O. E. A., was held in the lodge rooms last evening. Rev. Mr. Hilbert, who recently took over the pastorate of the Wellington United church, and who is a past grand master of Ontario West, was affiliated with the lodge.

Special guests of the evening were Mr. Knowles of Toronto, provincial grand organizer, and Mrs. Vining of this city, provincial grand secretary. Guests were also present from London, Ruth L. O. B. A., Komoka, Lunenburg and Harmony lady lodges. Worthy Mistress Sister De Courcy of Medicine Hat, was also a guest of honor.

The initiation was put on, after which supper was served under the convenship of Mrs. Harold Watson, assisted by Mrs. F. Forrester, Mrs. A. Barbour and Mrs. Ings. At this time speeches were given by Mr. Hilbert, Mr. Knowles, Mrs. Vining, Mrs. T. Campbell, past mistress of Harmony lodge; Mrs. J. Armitage, mistress of Lunenburg; Mrs. M. Payne, mistress of Komoka, and others.

It is expected that the meeting of the lodge members, to be held on Wednesday, Oct. 28, will take the form of a social evening.

NUMEROUS PLANS MADE BY TRAFALGAR CLUB

Mrs. Turner and Miss Smith Address Mothers—Planning Halloween Tea.

An interesting meeting of the Trafalgar mothers' club was held last night in the school, with Mrs. Fred Barning, the president, in the chair. During the business session the members elected to office Mrs. Alfred Chavener as president, and Mrs. L. F. Harrison as first vice-president. Arrangements were made to hold a Halloween tea, with Mrs. Barning as convener, in the near future. In the interests of the Loch Lomond chapter, I. D. E., Mrs. James Hendrie, the regent, was present and announced that the chapter would present a flag to the cadets in the near future. Mrs. Charles Turner, president of the London union mothers' club, was a guest of the evening and spoke to the members on "Politeness and Revelation in Life." She also gave a short talk on co-operation and harmony among the officers, teachers and members.

Miss Bertha Smith, of the Child Welfare Association, spoke to the mothers, and asked for their co-operation in connection with the forming of the new clinic at Trafalgar school on the first Friday in November. Mrs. Chavener and Mrs. T. Whitney were appointed to be Miss Smith's assistants. A splendid program was given during the session. Vocal numbers were contributed by Miss Irene King, accompanied by Mrs. J. Steen; Ross Werner, accompanied by Miss Doris Werner; and Mrs. J. B. Geddes, accompanied by Miss Williams. An instrumental duet was rendered by the Misses Edith and Mildred Essex. Mrs. Arthur Sierden was the pianist of the evening.

A social hour concluded the evening. Mrs. T. Whitney, Mrs. J. Hendrie, Mrs. T. Cornway, Miss A. Harrop and Mrs. A. Mote were in charge.

HALE STREET MOTHERS HEAR UNION PRESIDENT

Mrs. Turner Addresses Club—Members Are Interested in Child Welfare.

Co-operation and loyalty were the themes of a timely address given by Mrs. Charles Turner, president of the London union mothers' club, before the Hale street mothers' club Tuesday evening. Mrs. R. J. Kelly presided, and the business of the meeting included plans for a shower for the Child Welfare Association at the next meeting.

Mrs. Fred Dart was named representative to the clinic of the district, which is held at the Boye Memorial school. Sewing for the child welfare was done last night and many took home garments to be completed. These will be distributed by the nurses to needy cases.

A social half-hour concluded the meeting, and piano solos by Miss Florence Talbot were much enjoyed.

IS ROMAN MEAL ADVERTISING TOO TECHNICAL FOR WOMEN?

A would-be critic said: "Roman Meal advertising is too technical for Canadian women." Like most critics he was expressing his prejudice towards, not his knowledge of, Canadian women. For two years, we have been telling mothers that refined foods like white flour, refined cereals, polished rice, while pretty to look at, are lacking in vitalizing elements, essential to young and growing bodies. We have been teaching that disease comes from "denatured," refined foods. We have been recommending more milk and eggs, leafy vegetables, fruits, and Roman Meal. Selection of proper food is the most important function of the mother or housewife. Canadian women know this and we have reason to know. Mr. Critic to the contrary, that thousands and thousands of women have learned from our "too technical" advertising that Roman Meal is the most valuable food in the larder for the family. Because of this "too technical" advertising, a new and more proper dietary is now the rule in thousands and thousands of Canadian homes to the great benefit of old and young, especially the young. Your grocer sells Roman Meal.—Adv.

VENDETTA AT MONTREAL

Rumor Comes That Stool-Pigeon Is Still in Montreal.

Special to The Advertiser. SIGNS CONTRACT FOR MOVIES.

Little Miss Doris Velmar Short, 9-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Short, 425 Dundas street, leaves the city on Tuesday for Hollywood, where she will take part in the production of a series of important moving pictures. Miss Short has but recently signed a contract with one of the most important film corporations in the west.

Little Londoner Enters Movies At Hollywood

Doris Short Becomes Film Star and Leaves For California.

BUT NINE YEARS OLD

London will have a representative in the movies at Hollywood shortly. In the person of little Miss Doris Velmar Short. She is but nine years of age, yet has recently signed a flatter contract with one of the most important picture corporations in California.

This little actress, who is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Short, 425 Dundas street, has already had an interesting career. When she was a wee tot of not four, she made her first public appearance in Buffalo at a Red Cross banquet, executing a fairy dance with remarkable skill for a child of that age.

Born in Buffalo, New York, she began her theatrical career under the able instruction of her father, who was at one time engaged in theatrical work through illness. Mr. Short was rendered unable to carry on his own work, and has put his entire energy into cultivating the talent of his small daughter. She quickly acquired the tricks of professional entertainers, and has now for several years appeared in classical dances, acrobatic tumbling, impersonations and step dances.

In Newbury Skit. She will be remembered by many Londoners as the juvenile actress who appeared at the Capitol theatre about a year ago. At that time one of her favorite skits was "The New Boy," and she appears on this page in newboy costume. So clever was the skit that it was prophesied then she would have a bright future on the stage. Three times that year she appeared at the Capitol theatre, and once in the Winter Garden at The Advertiser Santa Claus concert. This year she has been paying closer attention to school, and with the moving picture contract in view, her public appearances have been fewer.

Little Miss Short has found many small friends since coming to London, and she is loath to part with them. However, childlike, she is thrilled with the idea of finding playmates among the outstanding child actors of the movies, for such will be her happy privilege, since she will be working, as well as playing, with some of the famous child stars of the screen.

WEDDINGS

BAKER-PACK.

A very pretty autumn wedding took place at Maple Grove, Lambeth, on Wednesday afternoon, when Miss Kathleen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pack, and the late W. C. Pack, was given in marriage to Mr. Richard S. Baker, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Baker of Lambeth.

The bride entered the living-room on the arm of her brother, Mr. George Pack, looking charming in her wedding gown of ivory crepe, georgette over white satin, with flowing veil falling from a coronet of rose poling lace and orange blossoms, and wearing the groom's gift, a double rope of pearls. She carried a shower bouquet of Sun-set and Ophelia roses, valley lilies and maiden hair fern. There were no attendants.

The wedding march was played by a cousin of the bride, Miss Ruby Pack of London, who wore a smart frock of rose crepe, with orange sash, and white satin, with flowing veil falling from a coronet of rose poling lace and orange blossoms, and wearing the groom's gift, a double rope of pearls.

Immediately after the ceremony congratulations were extended to the young couple. The bride wore a handsome gown of black satin-faced crepe, with panels of cut velvet and touches of pencil blue, and a corset of Ophelia roses and lavender baby mums. Mrs. Baker, mother of the groom, wore a gown of black silk crepe, with corsage of American Beauty roses. A delicious wedding dinner was served to about forty guests. The pretty dining-room assistants were Miss Annetta Pack, in blue cut velvet and georgette; Miss Verna Vanstone, in cocoa georgette, with handkerchiefs of silver lace; Miss Olive Pack, in an embroidered gown of rust crepe, and Mrs. Harold Pack, in pencil blue satin-faced crepe, with black fur trimming.

Many beautiful gifts were received by the bride, including a number of substantial checks. For travelling the bride donned a smart frock of cinnamon georgette and sat to match, with bandings of seal, and hat to match. The honeymoon will be spent in Toronto and Niagara Falls, and on their return Mr. and Mrs. Baker will take up their residence on the groom's farm near Lambeth.

Rev. R. J. Garbutt of London performed the ceremony. ISRAEL-SHILLING-LAW. Seaforth, Oct. 13.—The Edmondville United church was the scene of a quiet wedding on Oct. 10, at 3:30 o'clock, when Agnes (Gladys) Edmond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Edmond, of Tuckersmith, was united in marriage to Mr. George W. Israel of Seaforth. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. D. McDonald in the presence of the immediate relatives.

The bride wore a handsome gown of flame cut velvet, with black lace, and carried a bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Israel left on a trip to Detroit, Windsor and Toronto, the bride traveling in a suit of navy blue, with hat to match. WILSON-MACKAY. Stratford, Oct. 13.—St. Andrew's Presbyterian church was the scene of one of the loveliest weddings of the autumn season yesterday at high noon, when Gladys Viola, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Mackay, Earl street, was married to Mr. Wilfred Alexander Wilson, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Wilson, Dufferin street. Rev. Geo. Wilson, minister of the church, officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was charmingly gowned in georgette of palest pink with silver trimmings and rosebuds. She wore a picture hat of black mirror velvet, underlined with pink, and edged with silver, and carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses and maiden hair fern. Mrs. Wilhelmine Roberts was bridesmaid. The bridegroom was accompanied by his brother, Mr. Russell Wilson, and the ushers were Mr. Vane McPherson and Mr. Bert Niles. The wedding march was played by W. B. Rothwell, and Mrs. Roy Hodgins sang very sweetly. Beloved, it is more.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Following the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson left on a wedding trip to New York, by way of Montreal and Ottawa. DEWAR-MCKAY. Ethel, Oct. 13.—A quiet wedding was solemnized on Wednesday, Oct. 14, at the United church parsonage, Ethel, Ont., when Angeline M., only daughter of Mrs. Christina McKay, and the late Mr. William McKay, of Grey township, was united in marriage to Mr. Robert Elgin, son of Mrs. Jessie Dewar and the late Jeremiah Dewar, of Elma township. The ceremony was performed by Rev. D. M. Guest, pastor of Ethel church.

The bride was attended by Miss Grace Dewar, sister of the groom, and Mr. Forest McKay accompanied the groom.

The young couple will reside on the groom's farm, concession 14, Elma township.

NEW BOOKS ADDED TO ST. MARYS LIBRARY

Special to The Advertiser.

St. Marys, Oct. 14.—With the season of the year approaching when books will be in greater demand, the St. Marys public library board has added a considerable number of new volumes to the already large collection. Latest additions include two volumes of Twenty-Five Years, by Viscount Grey of Fallodon, and many other books on literature, history, geography, travel, science, art and fiction.

Mackenzie King Government Reduces the Cost of Living

By ISABEL C. ARMSTRONG.

Wouldn't a home-maker, professional or business woman feel that she had reason for satisfaction if she could say: "I am living as well as I was four years ago, and yet I am only spending $3 today for every $4 I was spending in 1921? I have stopped the leaks, cut out unnecessary expenditures, and invested to better advantage."

That is the proud position the Mackenzie King government is in today as it asks to be returned to office. The fine feature is that it shares the improved condition of affairs with every taxpayer, either man or woman, with everyone who is affected by taxes, directly or indirectly. That means everybody.

A result of the reduction of the national debt and the interest charges to that extent, of better financing and more strict economy in government is that the taxes per individual taxpayer are reduced to $3 today for $4 just four years ago. That affects every man and woman who pays taxes directly or indirectly, and everyone, whether wage-earner or not.

If there is less to pay for taxes, there is more money for boots, coats, dresses, home, home furnishings and food, and to lay by for a "rainy day."

Addressing a large gathering of Liberal women in Ottawa on June 5, 1924, the prime minister, Mr. Mackenzie King, said: "To reduce the cost of production and to lessen the cost of living is, and always has been, the policy of the Liberal party of Canada, and has been reflected in the constant endeavor to bring down to an absolute minimum the taxes on instruments of production which are used to convert the natural resources of the country into marketable form, and to avoid any tax not absolutely necessary on the necessities of life, on the food and on the clothing of the people."

Peter Visits Happy Jack Squirrel To See Him Preparing For Winter

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Do you know what it is to quiz? It is to ask questions. Peter Rabbit, as you know, has the habit of asking questions. Having found out from Striped Chipmunk how the latter was preparing for winter, Peter scampered over to the Green Forest where Happy Jack Squirrel was very hard at work. Happy Jack has no pockets in his cheeks. He has no pockets at all, so he cannot carry several nuts at a time as can his little cousin, Striped Chipmunk. Peter Rabbit watched him a few moments. He saw Happy Jack run with a big hickory nut in his teeth. He scampered off to one side of the Lone Little Tree, and with his forepaws he pulled over the leaves and dug a little hole in the earth. In this he put the nut and covered it up. Then he turned to go back for another nut and saw Peter Rabbit.

"Don't you dare tell anyone where I hid that nut!" cried Happy Jack Squirrel.

"Of course, I won't," replied Peter indignantly. "What do you take me for?"

"For a busybody poking his nose into other people's business," retorted Happy Jack. "It's no such thing!" declared Peter still more indignantly. "I'm not poking my nose into other people's business, and you have no business to say that I am. I just happened along and I couldn't very well not seeing you bury that nut unless I turned my back. Of course I won't tell anybody about it. Why should I? It isn't the first time I've seen you bury a nut. I never yet have told anybody where you buried them."

"That's true, Peter," said Happy Jack, regarding his good nature. "That wasn't kind of me. But you know I have to watch out all the time for fear that thieving cousin of mine, Chatterer the Red Squirrel, will see me burying nuts. If he does he'll steal them."

"Then why do you hide them in the ground this way?" demanded Peter. "Why don't you hide them in a storehouse?"

"For the simple reason that it would take too long to run over to my storehouse with each nut right now. If I could carry several at a time it would be different. As it is the next best thing is to hide a lot right near at hand and later take them to my storehouse. Of course I do have a storehouse."

"I'd wondered about that," said Peter. "Of course I had supposed you did. Where is it?"

Happy Jack laughed right out. "That's a personal question," said he. "It's too personal for me to answer. I am the only one who knows where that storehouse is and I hope I will always be the only one to know."

"Do you have more than one storehouse?" inquired Peter innocently. "Sometimes," replied Happy Jack. "Sometimes I have two. Then if anything happens to one I have the other. That is just good common sense."

"And do you pick up all these nuts that you are hiding now and carry them to your storehouse?" inquired Peter.

"Don't you dare tell anyone where I hid that nut," cried Happy Jack.

"Of course, I won't," replied Peter indignantly. "What do you take me for?"

"For a busybody poking his nose into other people's business," retorted Happy Jack. "It's no such thing!" declared Peter still more indignantly. # Title Hinges On Duel Today Between Johnson and Aldridge, Both Unbeaten

Third Victory For Either Pitcher Will Mean Niche In Baseball Hall of Fame As Each Has Now Chalked Up Two Wins

Johnson's Venerable Right Arm Will Enlist Support of Army of Fans Flocking To Forbes Field For Final Game of Struggle.

DELAY DISAPPOINTS VETERAN

Both Bucky Harris, Youthful Pilot of World Champion Senators, and McKechnie, Pirates' Leader, Restless Over Second Postponement in Series.

Associated Press Despatch.
PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 14.—Rain blocked the world's series program for the second time today, when a heavy down-pour, starting nearly an hour before the seventh and deciding game was scheduled at Forbes Field, drenched the ball park and forced a postponement.
The delay not only disappointed close to 50,000 fans, the largest crowd of the series, but continued steadily tonight, with prospects that it would even be impossible to resume play tomorrow.
The weathermen's forecast was for rain throughout the night and morning, with a chance of clearing in the afternoon. Even so it would be doubtful whether the diamond would be in playing condition, although tarpaulins were spread over the infield to keep as much of the field as possible from becoming a quagmire.

Hailed as Benefactor.
The delay came unexpectedly, in spite of the overcast skies and murky atmosphere of the day, but the accompanying extra day of rest was hailed as a benefit by followers of both clubs after the first feeling of disappointment had subsided.
The benefit rests chiefly among the pitching aces of the rival staffs, Walter Johnson and Victor Aldridge, who tonight were picked definitely by Managers Bill McKechnie and Bucky Harris for the final battle, in which the title now held by Washington and the aspirations entertained by Pittsburgh both will be in the balance.
These two, each victorious twice so far, and standing head and shoulders above all twirling rivals, were slated to have had it out in the final struggle today in spite of the short rest they have had.

Johnson Disappointed.
As Johnson, as a matter of fact, who also has been handicapped by a "charley horse" in his right leg, was keenly disappointed by the postponement, feeling that he was "right" for the day, but tomorrow, if the deciding game goes on, the Big Train will be able to take the hill with the benefit of three full days of rest since his performance last Sunday, when he blanked the Pirates.

This was as much rest as Johnson had between his first and second games, and should be sufficient to give him the needed stamina for a crucial tussle.
A good deal of mystery shrouded Pittsburgh's pitching choice today, with the prevailing opinion being that "Dug-burner" Johnny Morrison was to start, since as long as he was effective, and then give way to Aldridge, who pitched his last victory only on Monday. Aldridge, however, is the most rugged member of the Pirates' staff, and his mates are confident that with two days' rest he will be in top condition to make his bid for a third triumph tomorrow.
McKechnie and Harris both agreed that any advantages to be gained by postponement were about equally shared, and both were equally confident that they will pull out the victory.

DUTTON HIGH IS FIRST IN TRIPLE-EDGED MEET
West Lorne and Ridgeway School Athletes Are Losers.

Dutton, Oct. 14.—Dutton high school won the three-cornered track and field meet with West Lorne and Ridgeway here today, the boys putting up a total of 123 points, while the girls came out ahead with 69 points.
In nearly all the events the local athletes were superior, and when the meet was a half-way through the winner was decided. Ridgeway took second place, the boys with 62 points and the girls with 38, while West Lorne trailed away in the rear, boys and girls getting 19 and 38 points, respectively. The outstanding feature of the meet was the good showing of the contenders in every class. A new record was made in the pole vault, when Jack Mann of Dutton high easily outdistanced his competitors with a superb vault of 10 feet 6 inches. He also lifted the 55-pound weight 10 feet 4 inches.
The senior girls' championship went to Helen Law of Dutton, while the senior boys' title was captured by Jack Mann. Stewart of Dutton captured the 5 intermediate honors.

STAR COMES HERE SATURDAY.
Warren Snyder, mainstay of Varsity team for the past three seasons, will be among the regulars who will start with Varsity's intercollegiate team against the London Intercollegiate team at Tecumseh park Saturday afternoon.

Dr. Banghart Wins Springwood Shoot

Takes City of London Cup in Annual Events.

Dr. Percy Banghart took the city of London championship cup out for its annual airing, and after he made sure of winning it at the Springwood Club grounds yesterday, gave it another ride home. The championship shoot was included in the 100 targets shot off before the doubles wound up a good day's shooting.
Gordon Marr had long run with a 41, and Sam Vance of Tilsburg tied with Payne, also of Tilsburg, in high gun honors, and won the toss-up. It was an ideal day for shooting, despite a high wind.
Other prize-winners were Dr. Bice, Fred Kerr, W. McCance, Dr. Banghart, Dr. Dunn, A. Fulton and T. H. Baker. The scores were:
100 Targets.
Dr. Banghart, London, 94; Dr. E. Bice, London, 91; Nelson Long, Hamilton, 84; W. McCance, Dr. Banghart, 82; J. Jordan, London, 82; W. C. Vail, St. Thomas, 80; E. Dunn, St. Thomas, 78; A. Fulton, St. Thomas, 78; T. H. Baker, London, 88; T. McCracken, London, 62; W. Rupp, St. Thomas, 72; E. Kerr, Crediton, 62; S. Vance, Tilsburg, 95; G. Marr, Woodstock, 92; J. Vance, Tilsburg, 92; H. Payne, Tilsburg, 92; S. Vance, London, 95.
Banshart, 40; Long, 29; Jordan, 24; Quick, 27; S. Vance, 40; G. Marr, 33; J. Vance, 35.

WOODSTOCK SOCCER FINAL DUE SATURDAY

College Eleven and Hunting-fords To Meet For City Title.

Special to The Advertiser.
Woodstock, Oct. 14.—The soccer season will finish up here on Saturday afternoon, when the college eleven and the Huntingford team, winners of the two series in the city soccer league, will clash for the city championship. The soccer season has been much of a success this year.
Discussion in the ranks accounted for the withdrawal of one team, while a second eleven was forced to give up the fight on account of shortage of players. However, the series winners played splendid football, and the finals should furnish a fine exhibition of football.

Old Hans Smiles As Peck Boots 'Em

In 1903 Hans Rolled Up Record For Misceus.

By ROBERT T. SMALL
Special to The Advertiser.
Copyright.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 14.—Roger Peckinpaugh, officially declared the "most valuable player" to his team in the entire American League, had just made his sixth glaring error of the world series, when a gray-haired, sharp-featured man sitting in the press box at Forbes Field, turned around to the writer and grinned a grin which could only be compared to the delight which wreathes the face of a child when it beholds the stockings on Christmas morning.
The grin was on the visage of old Hans Wagner, the greatest shortstop of all time in the opinion of the best students of the national game. Now no one would have thought of old Hans Wagner growing into a vindictive old man. It is out of keeping with all his past life and does not jibe with the affection the fans of the whole country still holds for him. Yet there was that grin, vindictive, even sardonic. Then old Honus winked.

"Boy, I've been pulling for that," he whispered with his hand to the side of his mouth.
"What's the trouble between you and Peck?" asked the innocent writer, scenting the squaring possibly of some ancient grudge.
"No trouble, no trouble," grinned the grizzled veteran of the diamond. "I've just been praying all these years for some one to come along and equal or break my record. It has stood for twenty years. Fall after fall I have seen the world series come and go and no one getting near enough to give me a run until this year along comes old Peck and bobbles and bobbles and bobbles just when nobody expected him to, and at least has caught me."

All of which means that in the world series of 1903 Honus, playing the Pittsburgh short field, ran up a total of six errors in the eight games that were played. Peckinpaugh at the end of the sixth game of the present series had equaled the Wagner record.
Old Honus is not vindictive. It is just another case of misery loving company.

Walter Johnson, on the left, and Victor Aldridge, on the right, have been the only two hurlers in the series that can claim a pair of wins. They have not met yet, but today they are pitted against each other. Old Barney, who has had three days' rest, will lead the Senators in quest of their second world title in succession, while Aldridge, who is of the rugged type to break into the top of the batting ram that the Pirates will use to play into the chief laurel of baseball, which they have not had the chance of touching since 1909.

WOODSTOCK COLLEGE SCORES 42-5 VICTORY

Wagon City Gridders Winners Over Ingersoll in First Game.

Special to The Advertiser.
Woodstock, Oct. 14.—The Woodstock college rugby team in the Oxford county league had a runaway victory against Ingersoll collegiate team today, winning their first league game in this scheduled 12 games.
The first quarter was the best and produced a close struggle, the Woodstock boys being ahead 6 to 5 at this stage. In the succeeding quarters, however, the college scored almost at will, making a touchdown in the second quarter, three in the third and three in the fourth.
One of the features of the game was the clever work of Harry Chew, Chinese student, who is the captain and quarterback.
The teams lined up as follows:
College—Flying wing: Thompson; halves: Forrie, McGee and Brownell; quarter: Chew; snap: Knight; inside: Smith and Lange; middles: Chambers and Fisher; outside: James and Wilson; spares: Denike, Janzen and Tarr.
Ingersoll—Flyer: Bob Steel; halfbacks: McKee, Mabey and Clendenning; quarter: Shannon; snap: McDermott; inside: Bowman and Jennings; middles: Thomas and Bowman; outside: Mills and Jackson.
Referee—Entwistle, Woodstock.
Umpire—M. Moran, Ingersoll.

WINNERS COME FROM BEHIND AT INGERSOLL

Harry Hal and Pearl D. Take First Honors in Classes.

Ingersoll, Oct. 14.—Splendid racing, both harness events and running races, was witnessed in connection with the fair today. There were two harness events, a 218 trot or pace and a 225 trot or pace, in which each heat was a race.
The results:
225 Trot or Pace, Mile Heats.
Harry Hal, A. Bolare, Mt. Elgin, 4:11.1; Banner Boy, Field, Cayuga, 4:11.1; Sydney B., 4:11.1; Dal Ova, Saunders, Tilsburg, 4:11.1; Marion Gratton, Litt, Mitchell, 4:11.1; Darkey Rex, Kennedy, Burford, 4:11.1.
Best time, 2:01.
218 Trot or Pace, 7/8 of a Mile Heats.
Pearl D., Burns, Palmerston, 3:11.1; Oliver Rex, Litt, Mitchell, 3:11.1; Buttle Girl, McCauley, Aylmer, 4:34.3; Joe McKinley, 4:34.3.
Best time, 2:01.
Running Race, 1/2-Mile Heats.
Irish Lass, F. Marran, St. Marys, 1:11.1; Buster, F. Marran, St. Marys, 1:11.1; Clara Butt, H. E. Douglas, Woodstock, 1:11.1; Molly J., Ansonbie, Salford, 1:11.1.

WOODSTOCK SOFTBALLERS PLAY FINALS THIS WEEK

Special to The Advertiser.
Woodstock, Oct. 14.—The softball season will be brought to a close here this week when the three champions of the different city leagues will meet to decide the championship. The businessmen and industrial leagues will clash in a sudden-death fixture Thursday afternoon, and the winning team will take on the Smoke Eaters for the championship and the Rounds trophy, emblematic of the city title.

MAKE BID TODAY FOR PLACE IN HALL OF FAME.

Walter Johnson, on the left, and Victor Aldridge, on the right, have been the only two hurlers in the series that can claim a pair of wins. They have not met yet, but today they are pitted against each other. Old Barney, who has had three days' rest, will lead the Senators in quest of their second world title in succession, while Aldridge, who is of the rugged type to break into the top of the batting ram that the Pirates will use to play into the chief laurel of baseball, which they have not had the chance of touching since 1909.

One of the pitchers today will be sent to the well once too often.

THE CLIMAX.

The eternal appeal of baseball, either the individual game or the world's series, has shown its head again. Always there are the crucial angles, the elements of tragedy and comedy which makes of the game one of the most consistent in appeal.

Will Walter Johnson, after almost two decades of failure to get into a world series, win two successive decisive games two years in a row?

The weather-beaten old souphone of Johnson will be the center of all eyes today. His age, his marvelous years of service and his personality marks him as the crowd's favorite today, for sentiment is the factor that will finally sway any baseball crowd.

Aldridge is equally heroic in so far as his pitching in this series goes, but Aldridge has youth on his side and must forego the fans' support.

Unquestionably Harris has been lucky in the breaks that rain has given him. Rain came the first time when Harris' badly shaken forces needed a respite, and rain came yesterday when the odds and the dope favored the Pirates. But breaks can't go on forever.

Sentiment will perhaps favor the champions because of Johnson. The hope, which has been upset and has trickled all over the lot by the Pirates' wonderful comeback, gives the teams an even chance—an even Stephen.

THE SLOW OR FAST PACE THAT KILLS?

Walter Johnson and T. Cobb represent about the same length of service in the big show and almost extreme opposite types. The temperament of Joe Miller (Ottawa) is the more solid type, who has nerves as the first game of the series last year demonstrated, and yet conserves his nervous energy. Yet they have hard work in common. Both work equally hard but use different methods to suit the individual temperament.

It has been predicted of both—that they could not last. Cobb would burn himself out, and his fighting spirit is as strong as ever it was. Johnson, who, the records show, has worked more games each year than 90 per cent of the pitchers past and present, it was said with concern, would pitch his arm off. But his famous fast ball has lost but little of its blinding speed. Both in their different ways have given their whole thought and energy to baseball, and yet it's been the slow, lethargic pace which has killed off many of the players who started out even with these two notable of the diamond. Some copybook maxims need changing.

A TRACK NEED.

Day by day as Canadian track athletes meet in competition, old standards are sent tumbling into discard. Tuesday at the four-school meet, seven records were overshadowed by the fine performance of student stars of the cinema park. Thus the cutting down process goes on, and in time Canada should be able to boast of Olympic material such as she has never had before.

Formerly Canadian athletes have lacked the inspiration of competition in the formative age. Now with sectional meets for both public and high schools carrying on from where the playground movement leaves off, there must be steady and consistent development. The Wosca has been operating now five years, yet each year has seen a second clipped off here, an inch in the field events.

However, to get the most complete results, some method of keeping up industrial track and field meets must be devised. London's big manufacturers' meet at one time used to fill this need locally, but since this has been discontinued here, there's a broken link in the chain.

THE IMITATIVE BENT.

They are imitative even in sport. Let one nation produce a phenomenon and a flock of fellow nationals will suddenly develop the same bent. Take the Finnish long and middle distance runners. Since the success of their men, it will take a long time for the Finnish and Nurmi boogies to be killed off. In the long ago, a Britisher stepping into the ring against any other national was almost sure to be a favorite. When Bob Fitzsimmons came up from the lower under, Australia suddenly looked on as a land where they met reduced fighting men as well as mutton. The tradition still held good in Tommy Burns' day, and even to this day boys who come from the Antipodes are always given serious attention.

Wales has been noted in history as a fighting principality as well as for producing a musical race and a most unmusical language. But it was not until Jimmy Wilde flashed on the festive horizon and fought suddenly home as a land where they met reduced fighting men as well as mutton. The tradition still held good in Tommy Burns' day, and even to this day boys who come from the Antipodes are always given serious attention.

Freddie Vincent and Jackie Jones are among Canada's flock of fighters who are Welshmen. Vincent had a fine reputation when he came to Canada last year. He had fought a 20-round draw with Jim Higgins, hailed as a new flyweight phenom, capable of making Britishers forget Wilde. He has done well on this side, too, for he drew with both Ebor and Mayberry and beat the elongated Phil O'Dowd, a clever fighter, who had pounded on him. The wave of popularity which boxing enjoyed, and still enjoys, in Wales since Jimmy Wilde became prominent, sent Jackie Jones to Canada as a boy who had fought in many of the amateur tournaments which are held to the number of two and three each week in the limited confines of the principality over which the heir to the British crown nominally rules.

MAKE BID TODAY FOR PLACE IN HALL OF FAME.

Walter Johnson, on the left, and Victor Aldridge, on the right, have been the only two hurlers in the series that can claim a pair of wins. They have not met yet, but today they are pitted against each other. Old Barney, who has had three days' rest, will lead the Senators in quest of their second world title in succession, while Aldridge, who is of the rugged type to break into the top of the batting ram that the Pirates will use to play into the chief laurel of baseball, which they have not had the chance of touching since 1909.

One of the pitchers today will be sent to the well once too often.

THE CLIMAX.

The eternal appeal of baseball, either the individual game or the world's series, has shown its head again. Always there are the crucial angles, the elements of tragedy and comedy which makes of the game one of the most consistent in appeal.

Will Walter Johnson, after almost two decades of failure to get into a world series, win two successive decisive games two years in a row?

The weather-beaten old souphone of Johnson will be the center of all eyes today. His age, his marvelous years of service and his personality marks him as the crowd's favorite today, for sentiment is the factor that will finally sway any baseball crowd.

Aldridge is equally heroic in so far as his pitching in this series goes, but Aldridge has youth on his side and must forego the fans' support.

Unquestionably Harris has been lucky in the breaks that rain has given him. Rain came the first time when Harris' badly shaken forces needed a respite, and rain came yesterday when the odds and the dope favored the Pirates. But breaks can't go on forever.

Sentiment will perhaps favor the champions because of Johnson. The hope, which has been upset and has trickled all over the lot by the Pirates' wonderful comeback, gives the teams an even chance—an even Stephen.

THE SLOW OR FAST PACE THAT KILLS?

Walter Johnson and T. Cobb represent about the same length of service in the big show and almost extreme opposite types. The temperament of Joe Miller (Ottawa) is the more solid type, who has nerves as the first game of the series last year demonstrated, and yet conserves his nervous energy. Yet they have hard work in common. Both work equally hard but use different methods to suit the individual temperament.

It has been predicted of both—that they could not last. Cobb would burn himself out, and his fighting spirit is as strong as ever it was. Johnson, who, the records show, has worked more games each year than 90 per cent of the pitchers past and present, it was said with concern, would pitch his arm off. But his famous fast ball has lost but little of its blinding speed. Both in their different ways have given their whole thought and energy to baseball, and yet it's been the slow, lethargic pace which has killed off many of the players who started out even with these two notable of the diamond. Some copybook maxims need changing.

A TRACK NEED.

Day by day as Canadian track athletes meet in competition, old standards are sent tumbling into discard. Tuesday at the four-school meet, seven records were overshadowed by the fine performance of student stars of the cinema park. Thus the cutting down process goes on, and in time Canada should be able to boast of Olympic material such as she has never had before.

Formerly Canadian athletes have lacked the inspiration of competition in the formative age. Now with sectional meets for both public and high schools carrying on from where the playground movement leaves off, there must be steady and consistent development. The Wosca has been operating now five years, yet each year has seen a second clipped off here, an inch in the field events.

However, to get the most complete results, some method of keeping up industrial track and field meets must be devised. London's big manufacturers' meet at one time used to fill this need locally, but since this has been discontinued here, there's a broken link in the chain.

THE IMITATIVE BENT.

They are imitative even in sport. Let one nation produce a phenomenon and a flock of fellow nationals will suddenly develop the same bent. Take the Finnish long and middle distance runners. Since the success of their men, it will take a long time for the Finnish and Nurmi boogies to be killed off. In the long ago, a Britisher stepping into the ring against any other national was almost sure to be a favorite. When Bob Fitzsimmons came up from the lower under, Australia suddenly looked on as a land where they met reduced fighting men as well as mutton. The tradition still held good in Tommy Burns' day, and even to this day boys who come from the Antipodes are always given serious attention.

GRIZZLIES READY FOR SENIOR TEST

Put in Another Stiff Drill For Varsity Game Saturday.

SPIRIT IS BETTER

The London Grizzlies put in another stiff drill last night in preparation for the Gt. Varsity's Intercollegiate seniors, who sprang one of the biggest and most lasting surprises of the 1922 season with their unexpectedly strong stand against Queens last week.
Saturday's game takes on the glamour of a spectacle in view of the fact that in all the years London has been on the rugby map, a senior team has never before appeared here. The advent of Jo Jo Street and Huestis last year, London fans had seen few senior players in action. This year London boasts three men who have played the senior racket with the acquisition of Somerset.

Last night's drill was strenuous and the players ran through a whole bag of tricks. There is a better spirit on the team now than the two successive defeats by Sarula. There is consolation in the fact that the team is so close that breaks their way would have made a vast difference, but there is also realization of the rugby maxim that a winning team in almost any sport creates its own breaks or is able to take advantage of them when they come. The Londoners, too, are especially anxious to show by their game against Varsity that Sarula's path to another group title and a possible intermediate title is not going to be strewn with anything but thorns and nettles from now on.

Practically the team which played against Sarula last Saturday will face the blue and white clad Varsity squad led by Warren Snyder, who has been many to be the peer, considered by players developed in Canada. Somerset, who has been the team's mainstay, but is again and so is all the rest of the squad. The prospect of seeing Somerset drop-kicking was a reliance of Varsity in the past, flop one or two over the bar during the afternoon is being highly anticipated.

Varsity chose to fill this exhibition date because of a long lay-off in the intercollegiate and because they considered London would offer them as stiff a contest as many senior teams.

NEW YORK CLUB AFTER JOE MILLER FOR GOALIE

Canadian Press Despatch.
Ottawa, Oct. 14.—The New York hockey club has opened negotiations for the services of Joe Miller (Ottawa) to play goal for its team in the National hockey league during the coming season, a club official announced here this morning.
The decision of the New York club to sign Miller is due to the fact that Vernon Forbes, whom they purchased from Hamilton, has decided to leave hockey and engage in business in Toronto.

INTERCOUNTY MOGULS MEET IN GALT NEXT THURSDAY

Special to The Advertiser.

Kitchener, Oct. 14.—The annual meeting of the intercounty hockey league will be held in the chamber of commerce rooms at Galt on Thursday, Oct. 19, at 3:30, according to an announcement made here today by Secretary Jack Scott. The election of officers will take place at that time. The league is generally expected that W. H. Hees of Preston will succeed M. A. Smith of Galt, the latter having served for two years and being anxious to retire. The composition of the league next year will also likely be pretty well known then, particularly whether the Stratford, St. Thomas and London teams will continue in the intercounty loop or go back to the old southern counties league.

Bob Barnes, Former Londoner Lauded For Bout In Detroit

The Detroit Free Press lauds Bob Barnes of London, Ont., in his last fight before the fans of the Fairview club in the Elviver City. In part, the account of the fight says:
"Don Marco, of Detroit, a new arrival in Detroit's flaccid colony, outpointed Bob Barnes of London, Ont., in the main bout at the Fairview A. C., Monday night, but only after he had been conceding a weight advantage of something like eight pounds. It was a substitute for the Al Meyers-Dex Dunchard affair that was called off because of an infected arm suffered by the latter.
"Marco hit Barnes with everything he had in the early rounds but could not spill the little fellow. Marco took the first four with plenty to spare, landing with both hands almost at will, but Barnes came back in the fifth, fresher than ever, and punching cleaner than his opponent, dropping Marco to one knee with a terrific left swing.
"Barnes was much the fresher of the two in the late rounds and he took the sixth and seventh, but he had not enough left to wipe out the early advantage of Marco. It was a good bout, abounding in action."
Detroit has a lot of exciting fans, and Barnes, the London boy, went to the American city hoping to get a chance to break into the sport, he likes, has made a big hit with them. He still has his hand out for London, Ont., it will be noted from the account of this one fight. His first appearance in his home town, scheduled for Saturday night at the Arena, has aroused tremendous interest.

ELLIOTT WOULD CUT CIVIL SERVANT LIST

W. Middlesex Conservative Candidate Chief Speaker at Komoka Meeting.

Special to The Advertiser.

Komoka, Oct. 14.—Thomas Elliott, Conservative candidate in West Middlesex, was the chief speaker at a meeting held tonight in the town hall. He declared that he was in favor of reducing the number of members in the senate and in making the body responsible to the people. He said he did not favor a high tariff, but wanted a tariff which would protect Canadian farmers so they could compete with American products in Canadian markets.

He suggested that by reducing the number of civil servants there could be a reduction in annual expenditures and help to reduce the national debt. He was critical of the King government for tinkering with the tariff, and also on the question of government expenditures.

Addresses were given by George A. Elliott and Mr. Gray.

About forty attended the meeting, the number being reduced by the inclement weather.

Big Train's Charley-Horse Benefits By Postponement

JABS AND JABBER

For some months past Mickey Lewis, a little runt of a bantam-weight boxer, has been coaxing Buffalo matchmakers to give him a chance on one of the cards. No person had ever heard of Mickey doing much in the way of milt-slinking, but he was so persistent that he was given a place on the card staged by the Veldrome club last evening, and by way of giving him a real test, Mickey McGregor was selected as his opponent. Mickey evidently made the best of the opportunity given him, for he gained the decision over McGregor, having the better of every round. The Buffalo Courier has the following to say of the battle:
"The hit of the show was little Mickey Lewis, a saved-off bantam, who had been trying for weeks to get a chance. He faced Johnny McGregor, and everyone knows Johnny McGregor, a good bantam in all of the six rounds, albeit he had to stop several of Johnny's straight ones to the chin. He was staggered several times, but he came swinging back to battle, both hands going, and a heavy kick in each hand. His left hook was effective and his body punches reminded one of Mickey Walker. He outsped Mac, which is saying something, and when they got close he pelted away with both hands. All the time he made it hard for McGregor to find him by weaving in and out, from side to side, and furnishing a moving target. In the fifth and sixth rounds he had McGregor groggy from rights and lefts to the head, but Mac showed his usual gameness and generalship. It was a great bout."

Senators, Behind Old Barney. Confident of Beating Aldridge.

DRAMATIC FINISH

By STANLEY R. HARRIS.
Special to The Advertiser.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 14.—It's beyond humanity to control the weather, certainly did not want a postponement of the seventh game of the world series, and from what I have heard, Manager McKechnie of the Pirates was not particularly anxious to have his club loaf, either. But both of us had to be satisfied, and if the players are to derive any benefit from the postponement, Pittsburgh ought to be helped just as much as Washington.

Walter Johnson was ready to go against the Pirates today and he will be ready for action whenever we can play that seventh game. Of course, every day of delay means much to the big fellow's leg, that are blindingly sore last Sunday. That muscular trouble had disappeared Monday, really, and since then his right limb has been getting stronger and stronger.

Faith in Walter.

I am sure that the conditions to give the Pirates practically the same kind of a battle he did last week, and that Walter has a chance in the opening game of the series, we'll win the seventh game and the world championship. The men are brimful of confidence and eager to get the seventh game out of the way.

Had the rain held off about three hours Wednesday, the National league champions would have found him especially effective. After the opening game of the series, we'll win the seventh game and the world championship. The men are brimful of confidence and eager to get the seventh game out of the way.

NOMINEES' NUMBER BUT FEW PEACHES INCREASED BY 27 LEFT ON MARKET

Apples and Pears Continue Firm—Vegetables Are Plentiful.

A small quantity of fruits was offered on the local market this morning. The peaches are all picked, and only a few small ones remain. The apples are over the main. The plum season was over two weeks ago, but several baskets have sold in the past week. Apples and pears continue firm, with no changes in price.

Vegetables were plentiful, although asparagus is scarce. Corn is plentiful and is over, and the prices are accordingly rising.

Wheat was steady and in good demand. Oats and wheat remain firm.

SPINDRIFT

An Adventure of the Great Lakes

By HAROLD TITUS

INSTALLMENT 11.

The boats were changing their courses as they left the passage between the mainland and Little Summer Island, going out in a fan-shaped front by the arranged plan. The Three Hoppers swung a bit to the northward, the two steam tugs deployed to the southward, there to take their places, straighten out, and cruise due west again across the foot of Green Bay. The open boat was to proceed on its westerly course. Out somewhere beyond, in those twenty miles of restless water rolling between them and the other shore, two boys were clinging to a few slender posts—or the waters of the inland seas had claimed two more sacrifices.

The stress of the situation as the other searchers deployed was brought home to Goodheart, and he shook off the spell that the near presence of Janet Needham had put upon him.

"We'll pray for a break in the storm," he said to the girl.

"I have been, ever since we started," she answered, simply. "Daylight—hours of it—seems to be our only hope."

But there was no break in the heavens; there were only a few moments of precious time between them and blank darkness. Nor was their view great. Within ten minutes the Wanderer, which was to take the left flank of the searching squadron, was lost in the haze. The visible area of water was small indeed, and although John used the glass that Capt. Needham had thrust into his hands, the range of his vision was sadly limited.

He went aft and endeavored to wring more speed from the steady motor, but his efforts availed nothing, so he returned to the bow and took his stand beside the girl, straining his eyes as he searched the restless water.

Another burst of rain to hammer down the sea and shut them into a wall of gray; another cessation of the downpour and a fresh burst of weather to send the rollers mounting. In the distance, thunder muttered continuously and lightning cut through the murk at frequent intervals.

Staring out across that waste of water Goodheart felt a crawling in his vitals. Bad enough for men to be lost there, but the thought of children, little boys. . . And he had a memory of Sam Texson's face and the break in his voice when he spoke the name of his Bobby.

Janet stamped her foot and he saw she was biting her lips.

"Darkness!" she said, chokingly. "Oh, darkness!"

And darkness came shutting down abruptly, almost vengefully, it seemed, but with it the lightning increased. However, protracted flickers from the clouds gave them nothing to see.

Rain came again, this time in a steady, fine downpour, flecking the water, hissing as it fell, gathering the play of lightning into a greenish, diffused light.

Janet watched to starboard as she held the wheel; John kept his eyes to port, and when the intervals of darkness endured for long he could hear the girl breathing sharply, as though in physical pain.

"There! Look!"

Her one hand gripped his arm and he turned at once, but as she lifted the other hand, releasing the wheel for the moment, the flickering light died, and had it not been for the faint glow from the bimini he could not have made out her white hand protruding from the yellow sleeve of her oilskin.

"I saw something—something awash!" she said, tensely. "Off there, half hidden by the rain."

She started to change the course and bear upon it but John said sharply:

"Don't do that!"

"But—"

"You're not sure enough."

He was gone, then, leaping for the motor, throwing out the clutch, reversing for a few turns that they might hold their position.

"Watch for it when lightning comes again!" he said, thickly.

He strained over the rail, hands outspread, and waited, while they rolled sluggishly in the sea-way.

It seemed to John that the heavens would never shoot their light over the lake again. His heart seemed to pound for ages as he strained, eyes held wide open, concentrating on keeping his lids from their natural blinking that he might lose no fractional instant when light did come.

Their exclamations came as one. "See? There!"

"Ay—perhaps!"

Perhaps it had been almost as nothing—a mere blotch in the rain-shrouded lake. It might have been the Three Hoppers; it might have been a drifting snag. But something was there, off to starboard, a cable's length away—more, possibly; the rain and the vagrant light were deceptive.

John bounded forward and took the wheel. He had not taken his eyes from the direction in which they had sighted whatever it was caught their vision.

"Start her forward, slow," he said. "Very slow."

Unconsciously and naturally he had taken command of their craft. Until then Janet had wheeled, until then any one able to hold a course could have wheeled. But now adroitness was needed and that sixth sense of the mariner which permits a master to calculate his drift in a gale, which enables him to fix on direction and distance with uncanny precision.

Janet realized that she protested, but she felt plighted, had she been annoyed, it would have made no difference. This man was a born commander; he had said what he would obey, as another woman or any other man would have obeyed his terse, imperative directions.

The clutch took hold, the motor slowed as they went forward again.

John put the wheel over and the boat turned there in the darkness, swung to starboard a point, then three-hundredths of a point, a fraction of a point, and crawled on, rolling in the trough.

Again that interminable wait for light, each rigid, each waiting, each forward. The rain increased, drumming on John's sou'-wester, hissing more loudly as it met the lake and thunder crashed close above them to liberate more rain.

But with the thunder came light, a blinking second of it, and against the boom from the heavens their voices rose again.

"Full speed!"

The half-drowned bang of the exhaust picked up, the boat lurched

forward; this time there had been no mistake! Something floated ahead of them, a low blotch on the water, and some part of it or something buoyed up by it moved—moved! Goodheart's hands were gripping the small spokes of the wheel until they pained him—as he racing heart so lightly to port; he guessed at the distance travelled.

"Good! Stop!"

His voice had bite to it, and again the reversed propeller churned at the waters to settle the bow and check progress.

High above them a vein of white fire opened in the heavens. It shot forward and turned and branched, and the branches, like veins in a leaf, rent the murk and divided themselves until, their course run, they ended in the blankness from which they had originated.

But they served! They sent, first, a low flicker down upon the lake, the boat, and the object floating there not three lengths from it; the flicker grew to a sustained glare; it wavered and faltered and rose to its intense brilliance again. . . And in that blessed interval John Goodheart saw!

The thing beyond him was a raft, or what had been a raft. Beside it was one stick, just liberated, and the posts which had been so unskillfully nailed to the heavier timbers were at all angles.

Across three of these lay a slender figure, its face lifted toward the oncoming boat with an expression that was to live for ever in the memories of the two who beheld it. Hope was there, but with it the great fear of death; even as he looked up they saw him strain outward, holding to his raft with one arm crooked around a post, and grapple with the other for something below the surface. . .

That other something came above the water, thrust upward, and John heard Janet moan lowly. She did not scream. The moan was more like that of a man than the dismay of a woman, more like that which rumbled from his own deep chest as he saw that the thing which came above the surface and for which the little boy grappled was a hand—a white child's hand, with its thin wrist and white forearm. It held there a moment, fingers stretched outward stiffly, in a tense posture of desperation. . . and then the darkness came.

The girl at the motor needed no more of command, then. She knew the way forward, and her clear voice called out steadily:

"Hang on, Ted! You're safe now!"

No order was needed either, when they felt rather than heard the gentle impact of the launch against an obstruction. The propeller ceased churning. John let go the wheel. He thrust one leg over the rail and leaned low.

A frantic, feeble sobbing came to him, along with the hiss of falling rain, with the moan of the wind in his ears. He groped widely. His fingers touched cold flesh and closed on a fragile wrist. He was scarcely conscious that Janet had stumbled forward and thrown her weight against his thigh which remained inboard.

"Up you come, son!" he said, steadily. "All right; hang on!"—as clawing fingers gripped his arm.

He swung up, dragging the lad with him, hoisting him over the rail and into the boat with a show of his splendid strength.

The boy dropped at Janet's feet and his plaintive voice, hoarse from hours of futile shouting, lifted again: "Get Bobby!" he cried. "Oh, get Bobby! I hung on to him as long—I hung on as long as I could. . . Oh, please, get Bobby!"

If nothing else had impelled Goodheart to action the appeal in that voice would have started him. But he did not need words—did not need to be asked. His sou'-wester went overboard as he brushed it from his head. His oilskin rattled stiffly as he shed it and he broke the laces of his shoes rather than stop to untie the knots.

He stood there, poised on the wide thwart, one foot on the rail, when the next lightning flash let him see. . .

It let him see rolling water, let him see the ruined raft drifting away and nothing else!

"Stand by!" he said, sharply, and dove.

He plunged into thick darkness that made the gloom above the surface seem as daylight. He swam vigorously toward a point beneath the spot which he had placed in his mind as that from which that hopelessly grasping hand had disappeared.

He groped about when he believed he had gone far enough. He turned and circled and drove his body downward to greater depths. His ear drums rang with the pressure, his lungs seemed about to burst. He let part of the breath he held slip out in little spurts, fighting valiantly for time, and when he did shoot to the surface he sucked in the air with a gasp of rage against the weakness of his best strength.

Again the heavens blazed and his voice lifted in a sharp cry. He should have been down there then! He should have had that flash of light to aid him. His body curled and his feet churned the surface as he forced himself downward again.

Down and down he went until his lungs ached with the struggle. His lungs were flat to let him attain buoyancy from air he carried in his chest. With no air in his chest it was a fight to reach the surface. He circled and drove his body downward to greater depths. His ear drums rang with the pressure, his lungs seemed about to burst. He let part of the breath he held slip out in little spurts, fighting valiantly for time, and when he did shoot to the surface he sucked in the air with a gasp of rage against the weakness of his best strength.

"Why I Should Vote Conservative"

Bring Our Boys and Girls Back Home

Give them work in Canada

THE CREAM of our youth, fresh from our schools and colleges, are leaving the homes that have raised them, are forsaking the country that has educated them, and are throwing in their lot with Canada's greatest rival.

Canada educates these young men and young women at the public expense—brings along a new lot of them every year—for what? For Uncle Sam to take his pick! And the irony of it is that when he gets them, he frequently employs them at tasks that result in loss of business, loss of employment, to people in the country of their birth.

Our boys and girls should have the opportunity of getting work and of making careers for themselves in Canada. The breaking up of families and the loss of our best blood to the United States must stop.

Embrace Protection and Stop the Exodus!

VOTE CONSERVATIVE

FOR HIGHER TARIFF AND FOR LOWER TAXATION

Liberal-Conservative Victory Committee, 330 Bay Street, Toronto 5

a moment on his back, breathing swiftly, a trifle dizzy with the rush of fresh air to his lungs.

And again he went downward and scarcely beneath the waves, he saw the blackness about him glow with a phosphorescent light. It was only a feeble glimmer that penetrated the depths, but still it had the weird effect of blinding him, so great was its contrast to the Stygian blackness.

He strained to see and threatened himself about to look in all directions for air. His lungs cried out for more and more, but he denied them respite, and after the third quick breath he curled downward, praying for lightning to help him.

Once again he went down until it seemed as though the lake would burst his skull and flood his brain, and again he called as he roared and broke through the surface with no reward.

The strain was telling. He came up close beside the boat, and he had a vague idea that Janet Needham was leaning over the rail, crying encouragement, but he could spare no strength to think of that. He rested his will forced it on, drove it, goaded it; he swore aloud at the beging of his lungs for air, because taking air took time, and any instant the heavens might flare again, and he would be dead.

They did, just as he ducked, and he entered a world of pallid green in which his hands moved before him grotesquely. He twisted about deftly to see in the direction he had tried and failed to see before. Nothing!

Blood roared in his ears like catarracts. His heart seemed to be flailing his ribs, beating him upward when he wanted to go down—down! His body begged for mercy, cried out to his mind for relief for air, for relaxation, but he denied it until not a shred of will was left.

He swallowed water when he rose that time and gasped for air. He choked and shook his head by a great effort. He seemed not to have strength enough to open his eyes and did not try until the glare of lightning penetrated his life.

He opened them then, and tensed himself for another plunge downward, but Janet's voice, clear and high, checked him.

He looked over his shoulder. She was standing at the rail, little Ted's arms about her thighs, his head close against her body, her one arm outstretched, and the other uplifted, pointing.

"There, John!" she cried. "There! There! Sixty feet. . . Oh, he's gone!"

Gone was the blessed light as well. Goodheart could not have seen the patch of white shirt revealed to the girl as it rose elegantly and settled again. But he did have his direction, her guess as to distance, and he was boiling through the water, forcing his body to do the thing that was now all but impossible.

He swam with a crawl stroke, a great lunging of shoulder, a frantic, powerful movement of legs, a determined kick. . . Two strokes. . . four. . . six. . . a dozen. . .

"Now!"

He cried out the word as he lifted his face and breathing deeply, dived again.

He would stay down now! He would see! He gitted his teeth as he promised himself this. He would stay down until the heavens lighted the depths again.

He lived a lifetime waiting for that. He sent himself low and power, each foot gained downward making the rise.

His head throbbed smartly; his ears buzzed. He "sit dizzy, but he would not stop, would not let go! It was all black, all hopeless. . . Hopeless? Not hopeless in the next instant!

There, beyond him and to the left, a blob of darkness appeared through the greenish glimmer. It was only slightly above but it seemed to be far away and his body would rise. Changing direction sent him shooting upward he felt, and he fought against his own buoyancy with all the spirit left in him. He tried to angle downward as he went on, in blackness now. He could not judge the distance; he could only grope and reach and keep his breath back and fight. Ah, he fought, then, against bursting chest and outraged heart, and a sudden nausea that came upon him.

He felt his body tilting as his head spun. He was off balance, his machine was out of control! Air was slipping from his lungs against his will; his arms were losing their precision of stroke, the power was ebbing from his leg muscles. He was through, when he was most needed.

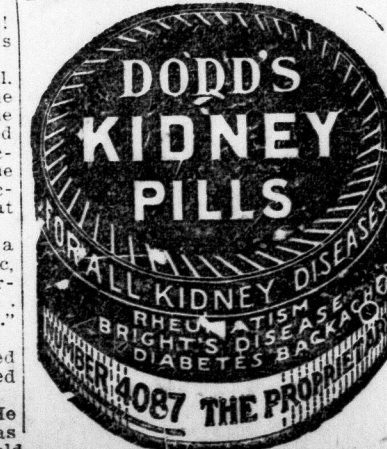

Something brushed his hip. He turned, groping with one foot as he worked about. The something touched his shin, slipped away, sinking. He threw himself over and downward, swept his legs together. . .

He was shooting upward and in his arms clasped to his breast, was the cold limp body of a boy!

Two Veteran Liberals

W. G. Raymond, Brantford; Hon. Geo. P. Graham, S. Essex

W. G. RAYMOND.

HON. GEO. P. GRAHAM.

Brantford Liberals Have Exceptional Exponent of Sane Representation—Hon. Geo. P. Graham in South Essex Has Been Lifelong Public Man.

It's a long way from Brantford to South Essex, both on the map and in the type of people. However, both ridings have members of parliament with many common characteristics. Both were represented in the last house of commons by Liberals, which is the first common characteristic of Hon. Geo. P. Graham and W. G. Raymond, members for South Essex and Brantford, respectively. Both are among the best platform speakers and house debaters in the Liberal party. Both have been seen of humor, which combined with a serious devotion to public service, makes them beloved by their friends and feared in a friendly sort of way by their political enemies. Both are bonny but fair fighters. Both inspire confidence on the floor of parliament and both believe that the moderate policy of Liberalism is best adapted for a country of such varied interests and such geographical difficulties as Canada.

Geo. Perry Graham is affectionately referred to as "George" by hundreds of men who have never seen him. His personality has gone beyond even his immediate friends and warns Canadian life from coast to coast. He is the outstanding veteran in Canadian political life, especially in Ontario, and has fought under such leaders as Laurier and Ross, and other prominent men who have passed to their reward, either in the senate or the hereafter.

Was Country Editor.
Mr. Graham started earning his own living in the precarious occupation of a country editor when subscriptions were paid in advance in honey and potatoes when they were paid at all. However, he was enough to keep him living long enough in Morrisburg to become mayor of that town and to run against the late Sir James Whitney for the legislature, when he was defeated by 156 votes. The paths of Whitney and Graham often crossed after that battle, but both held a high respect for the other, no matter on what they differed.

Mr. Graham was assistant editor of the old Ottawa Free Press for a time and later became managing director and editor of the Brockville Recorder. It was from Brockville that he was elected to the Ontario legislature in 1898, 1902 and 1905. He was made provincial secretary in the Ross government in 1904, and after the defeat of that government became leader of the Liberal opposition until 1907, when he went to the house of commons. He was a member of the Laurier government which went to defeat in 1911, being defeated in his own riding. In 1912 he was elected in a hot by-election in South Renfrew. In 1921 Mr. Graham went into the government as minister of defence, and later took over the portfolio of railways, with which he was so familiar.

Raymond Is Sound.
Old England has sent many a stalwart to the Canadian Liberal party, and it sent one of its best when William Gaudreault Raymond of Brantford arrived here in 1873 at the age of eighteen. Mr. Raymond is a product of British navy training, and that simple statement of fact speaks a volume, as any Britisher knows. He was born in Clapham, England, and educated at Eastman's Royal Naval Academy, from which he graduated as a midshipman. Shortly after he came to Canada and seeing no reason to exchange his Liberalism for anything in politics in Canada, he has continued to be a Liberal, with all the best traditions of a party that built up the British empire by allowing those who were capable to govern themselves.

The Liberalism of Gladstone and Campbell-Bannerman is the Liberalism of Mr. Raymond. It is a greater thing than a mere party cry or a mere discussion of high tariff. That kind of a Liberalism never lacks courage. It doesn't in the case of Mr. Raymond, who resigned the safe and life job of being postmaster in Brantford to take his chances in the uncertain arena of politics.

Previous to becoming postmaster in 1899, Mr. Raymond had served the city of his adoption twice as mayor and in other public capacities. In 1921 he won a political battle where few outside of Brantford expected victory. He is again in the field, and with his record of four years in parliament should make even a greater appeal to the city than he did at the last election.

Mr. Raymond married Miss Racey of Brantford in 1883, and has six children. He is a member of the Church of England.

WILL AID STRIKING MINERS IN STATES

Atlantic City Parley Accords Support To 158,000 Men in Anthracite Field.

Associated Press Despatch.
Atlantic City, N.J., Oct. 14.—Support of the American Federation of Labor was accorded the 158,000 striking miners in the anthracite field today, after President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers had addressed the delegates and stirred them to enthusiasm by his recital of conditions in the industry.

Mr. Lewis said the miners would not falter or depart from the policy laid down, and he warned the public that it was due for a "rude awakening" if it believed there was an ample supply of coal on hand. "Hundreds of thousands of homes will be without fuel and will be unable to secure fuel," he said, "until it can be produced at the mines and distributed."

Mr. Lewis also charged that the operators were extorting millions of dollars from the public by selling inferior grades of coal. Vice-President Charles G. Dawes came in for condemnation for "conducting an agitation for the purpose of abolishing the Federal Reserve in the United States senate, the only forum where closure does not exist and where members can prevent the passage of reactionary legislation."

CONSERVATIVE RALLY IS HELD AT MITCHELL

Special to The Advertiser.
Mitchell, Oct. 14.—A rally of Conservative workers was held in the headquarters here tonight. Campaign plans were discussed in detail, and afterwards a social time was enjoyed. Chief speakers at the gathering were R. S. Graham, Conservative candidate for South Perth, M. Irvine, M. L. A. for the riding, and H. B. Money, K.C. of Lethbridge. There was a good attendance of local party workers.

GOOD HARVEST IN FRANCE BRINGS BACK WHEAT FLOUR

Associated Press Despatch.
Paris, Oct. 14.—France is to return to the use of all-wheat flour, as a result of the good harvest this year, and the law which made it obligatory, because of the poor harvest last year, to add four per cent of rye flour to all the wheat flour used in France, is to be abrogated.
