Madrid, Oct. 11.—A story of bandit outrage and terrorism in Corunna and vicinity is published today which surpasses in ferocity anything of the kind that has occurred before in Spain.

PREPARING FOR THE FINAL ROUND.

DAMAGE DONE BY GUSHER

Government Preparing to Begin Work on Capping it Monday—Adjacent Miners Pleased That the Water Will be Saved to Work Properties.

Dominion Mining Engineer A. J. Beaudette was hard at work this morning getting out the specifications for the capping of the "gusher" on 3a Eldorado, and he hopes to have the work begun on Monday morning.

The flow still continues at about three sluiceways, with no sign of diminishing, and Mining Inspector Robinson with a day and a night shift of about twenty-five men each, is doing his best to keep a ditch open to protect the town of Bonanza and the claims below.

TOWN COMMITTEE

Matters at the Ross Headquarters in Fine Shape. The secretaries of the town committee at the Ross headquarters have been working sixteen hours a day for the last week and they say now that the city has been thoroughly canvassed, that all the local organizations have worked well, and that the outlook for next Tuesday is more promising than even the most enthusiastic Ross supporter expects.

CHEAP SALE OF CHATELLETS

Opportunity for a Neat Speculation Lost. Goods to the Value of $5,000 Only Bring $475 at an Enforced Sale.

Several thousand men missed the opportunity of making several thousand dollars when they failed to attend the sale by the sheriff of the personal belongings of Miller & Ames the former owners and operators of the Five Fingers coal mines.

SEVEN TO ONE

Whitehorse, Nov. 29.—Whitehorse people are confident that the southern end of the Yukon will be not less than seven to one for Ross and may be largely. Business interests are enthusiastically for him and the laboring classes realize that their interests are in common with the rest of the community.

AGAINST CONCESSIONS.

I shall advocate the thorough investigation of the charges of fraud made in respect to the manner in which certain concessions are alleged to have been obtained, and if such fraud is established, the immediate commencement of such proceedings as may be required to vacate the grants, and the enforcement of strict compliance with the conditions embodied in all crown grants in the Yukon.—James Hamilton Ross.

FROST AT CARIBOU.

The opposition party had the temerity to hold a meeting at 33 below lower on Dominion last night, and a few hours later they wished they hadn't. It was a very large meeting and it proved to be overwhelmingly in favor of Ross.

JUDGMENT GIVEN.

Mr. Justice Macanlay yesterday afternoon gave judgment in the case of Baker vs. the Dawson Stock Yards and Abattoir Company in the sum of $510. The plaintiff claimed $800 while the defendants admitted but $380 which they deposited in court.

DUNCAN CREEK

Properties to be Sold at Auction by the Sheriff. Duncan creek has recently been enjoying its first season of litigation. Chester H. Newgate brought suit against Wm. Clarke has cast a doubt upon their moral responsibility which they are determined shall be absolutely and eternally removed.

NO DOUBT OF RESULT.

Every report that now comes from the mining districts brings the very best of evidence that the creeks will come forward with a substantial Ross majority.

Sulphur creek, which has been heard of and near as the banner Clarke creek of the district, is now certain to give a fair margin to Mr. Ross and it would not be one whit surprising should the latter poll 65 per cent. of all votes cast on that creek.

The same story comes from other districts which have been claimed by the Clarke men. Bonanza will sustain Mr. Ross by a handsome majority and in the early days of the campaign Clarke was accustomed to say that Mr. Ross would not poll 20 per cent. of the votes on that creek.

Whitehorse, so lustily advertised as a Clarke stronghold, is sold for Mr. Ross, and if Clarke polls 20 per cent. of the votes cast in that district he will do better than his own supporters there think will be the case.

From the Fortymile country comes a similar story. The miners in that district will have none of Joseph's specious sophistries and are preparing to turn the unworthy instrument down with an exceedingly dull and sickening thud.

So it is throughout the district. The noisy clamor which is invariably heard where two or more Clarke men are congregated together, is absolutely no indication of the condition of public sentiment.

The sound, thinking majority of electors have seen through the thin coating of respectability that his supporters have sought to throw around Clarke and none of them are deceived.

When the ballots are counted it will be found that Clarke's hopes have vanished into thin air and that his unparalleled impudence has been given a crushing rebuke.

REVIEW OF THE SITUATION

Summary of the Arguments Used and the Campaign Tactics Employed by Supporters of Mr. Ross and Those of the Opposition—The Results.

In attempting to make a rapid review of the campaign which closes Monday night, of the issues which have been fought out and the people who fought them, some consideration should first be given to the peculiar conditions which surround the contest, and this takes us back to the first convention, commonly called the Clarke convention for the reason that it was notoriously packed for that candidate.

That convention practically disenfranchised a large part of the most intelligent of the electorate, men who have large business interests to protect or good salaries positions which depended on the present prosperity of the country being maintained.

This does not include only the men who on the outside would vote for the Conservative candidate as a matter of principle, for very properly the campaign has not been run on federal party lines at all.

Further, nearly all of the leading Conservatives declared that if Mr. Ross would accept the nomination he would command their votes.

In the first place they had every confidence in Mr. Ross, and in his desire and ability to do the best that could be done for the territory; and in the second they believe it to be good politics, in a by-election such as this one is, and that the interests of the constituency would be best served by having a member in touch with the government rather than seated in the cold shades of the opposition.

Therefore, for the out and out Conservatives to decide upon their votes was easy. It would be a vote against their political principles, but they had a number of precedents for this in similar cases, and notably the vote for a Liberal by Sir John A. Macdonald himself in an Ottawa city election.

But there were a large number of others who by the nomination of Joseph Andrew Clarke were placed in a quandary. They were honest and ardently opposed to a department of the government, and particularly to the head of it, to whom they properly attributed the many abuses and woeful mismanagement of Yukon affairs of the past; and they were as honestly and ardently opposed to the idea of sending to Ottawa as a representative of the territory Joseph Andrew Clarke.

This newspaper, which since those early days of misrule has always been the champion of popular rights and the protector of the mining industry, shared in this dilemma, but for a very brief space only. To it the return of Joe Clarke to Ottawa was something not to be thought of for a moment. It meant more misrepresentation than we had ever suffered from. It meant a practical disenfranchisement of the constituency for his term of three years. It was a relief when an honest and consistent statesman such as Mr. Ross was announced as a candidate.

Those who felt themselves disenfranchised because they could not vote for Clarke and did not wish to vote for a government man, remained, however, in a state of doubt for some time. The course of the campaign, and the result of the joint debates that have been held, have removed these doubts entirely and they are now enthusiastically for Mr. Ross.

The principal information which has worked to this end is that gained from a review of the career of the candidate himself. He has never been a strict party man. At his home in the Northwest territories he was selected by the head of the local government, himself a conservative, as the minister of public works, and under a Conservative government he held that position until he was selected to administer the affairs of the Yukon.

And it came out, too, in connection with this appointment, that Mr. Ross was not the selection of Mr. Sifton but of Mr. Mulock, the postmaster-general. The latter is sometimes referred to as the "populist" member of the Dominion cabinet, as he believes in government control of all monopolies, in the government ownership of railroads, telegraphs, water supply and so on.

When the affairs of the Yukon were being discussed prior to the selection of Mr. Ross, the cabinet appreciated the fact that this country had suffered much from misgovernment. Yet the government had the satisfaction of believing that it had acted to the best of its ability and had exercised its best judgment in the selection of the executive it had sent here.

It had selected Major Walsh because of his great record as an executive officer at the head of the Mounted Police. What better selection could have been made to meet the conditions of those early days? As a peace officer Major Walsh was everything expected of him; but to administer the affairs of a rapidly growing commonwealth was beyond the bounds of his experience and he proved a failure. Then formulate such necessary legislation is extremely doubtful. In all his talks he has never even hinted at a single measure which he hopes to introduce.

But all this, and much, very much more, is known of the opposition candidate, and thinking people will recall it next Tuesday morning early, when the duty confronts them of putting an end to the career of one who has done nothing for himself and nothing for the community since he came here, except to be a public nuisance and a menace to every good citizen who has a reputation to lose.

When the train pulled into McArdes a pretty, fair-haired girl got off the pullman with her arms full of bundles and looked eagerly up and down the platform. Then she went into the "ladies waiting-room," bestowed her luggage and was out, again, nervously scanning the rough men about her as the train groaned slowly toward the south.

"Lookin' for somebod', miss?" asked a rotund, elderly man, with a long beard.

"Yes, sir." She saw he was a native, for he carried a thick cane; wore no collar and seemed at home on the end of the depot track.

"Yes, I'm looking for Dennis Mather, my uncle. I intend to spend a day in Kansas City with my aunt, but nobody was there to meet me and so I came on. My uncle doesn't expect me until tomorrow, but I thought he might be here. How far does he live from here?"

"'Bout fourteen mile, miss," said the stranger, wiping the tobacco juice from his chin and scanning the fashionable garments of the little visitor.

"So you're Marshal Mather's niece? Well, you'd better get over to Queque soon's you kin. This year is a rough settlement an' some of the boys is apt to steal yer, miss."

She flushed at this, but the old fellow's manner was one of fatherly admiration, so she plucked up her failing courage and smiled.

Boot Jack Washington.

whirl of the wheels through the sand.

"Are there—Mr. Washington," she hesitated, trembling a little, "are there any—er—Indians near here?"

"Yes, Miss, there is one," and he smiled grimly at her.

"You don't mean—"

"Yes, indeed; I'm an Indian all right. I think I'm a good Indian. At any rate, I'm a Chickasaw."

"Oh," she murmured, glancing at his well-fitting corduroys and the neat blue flannel shirt that covered his broad breast; "why I thought all the Indians—"

"Wore feathers and bows and arrows?" There was a hint of sarcasm on his handsome face as he said this, and for a few moments they were both silent.

Then a queer thing happened. He stopped his team, walked up a declivity that was scarred by recent hoof prints, scanned them earnestly, and coming back to the wagon, resumed his drive.

When they had reached what seemed to the girl the loquacious and most desolate part of the road the big fellow beside her stopped his team, laid down the lines and pulled out a big revolver, which he carefully laid across his knees.

"Miss Mather, give me your watch and those rings and whatever money you have quick." His grey eyes looked bright black as he glared at her.

"You!" she murmured, and would have said more, but he growled "Quick," looking back as if afraid somebody would catch him at his rascality.

But the girl was too frightened to speak. She gave him her little gold watch, pulled the rings from her slender fingers and handed him her purse.

He opened it and quickly counted the money. There was $52 in it.

"You can keep the change," he said, handing her back the pocket-book and calmly pocketing the rest of the booty.

"And now," said he, "on your life you must promise not to tell Marshal Mather anything about what has or may happen on this trip. He is fingering his pistol."

"Only take me to him," she whispered between white lips, "I'll swear to say nothing."

"Then don't get scared," he said more cheerfully, picking up the reins and replacing his wicked-looking gun.

In another minute they heard the clatter of horses' hoofs behind them, and, looking back, saw two horsemen with leveled Winchesters hard in their wake.

"Hands up!" shouted the foremost, as Washington stopped his team and got out. Miss Mather, very much scared, clambered down into the sand and followed her driver's example, for that worthy, coward-like, seemed to be trying to touch the sky with his finger tips.

In a jiffy the robbers had found the girl's pocket-book, and stranger still, her pocket. They took the $5 and change that her companion had left her and cursed loudly that it was no more. But whether frightened at the sound of approaching wheels or knowing that Boot Jack had nothing they then remounted their horses and galloped into the dust toward McArdes.

The tall Indian and his frightened charge then jumped back into the buggy and fairly raced toward Queque, which they could now see like a painted village outlined against the reddening western sky.

When they had reached the last sand hill that rose at the eastern entrance to the scattering town the Indian driver stopped again. This time his revolver did not appear, but he pulled out the little watch, her money and her rings, and handing them to her, looked laughingly in her astonished blue eyes as he said almost tenderly—

"Take them, Miss Mather. I know you thought I'd rob you, but I would not." His fingers, yet clinging to her watch chain, touched her hands and lingered an instant as he resumed: "But you must not forget your promise. You won't say a word to Mather?"

"No-oo?" But Mr. Boo-Washington, she blushed at her mean suspicion of him, seeing now that he had "held her up" to save her little property from the highwaymen, "but why didn't those hateful robbers rob you?"

MIGHT COME TO DAWSON

American Institute of Mining Engineers

Will Visit Skagway Next Autumn—Smelter Question at Whitehorse.

Mr. W. M. Brewer, a mining expert who visited Whitehorse a year ago and thoroughly examined the country and afterward made an exhaustive report of the same through the columns of the New York Mining and Engineering Journal, arrived the fore part of the week as a representative of the Crofton, B.C. smelter and with authority to offer inducements to the mine owners in the vicinity of Whitehorse to ship their ores to this company for treatment.

The Crofton smelter is an immense establishment, capable of smelting and converting into blister copper 700 tons of ore per day, and so arranged that its capacity can be increased when necessary to an almost unlimited extent.

It now has two furnaces, two smelters, four converters, a sampling mill of 1000 tons per day capacity, three 200-horse power boilers, a dust chamber 200 feet long 12 feet high and 10 feet wide, and an expansion chamber 40 feet long, 20 feet high and 30 feet wide. It is equipped with a circular smokestack 125 feet high with an interior measurement of 12 feet in diameter.

Mr. Brewer's visit is in the nature of a preliminary step looking toward negotiations with the transportation companies as to rates to be charged for ores, etc., and his arrangements have not yet reached a point where he feels at liberty to make any statements for publication.

He confesses, however, that ever since his former visit he has considered Whitehorse to be the most promising copper field within his knowledge, and does not hesitate to express his opinion that it will in time become one of the greatest producers in the country.

He considers that the chief reason for its backwardness in development is because of the unsatisfactory mining laws that are in force in the Dominion and which are subject to change at any moment by an order of the governor in council.

He thinks that when mining laws are passed encouraging capital, and which can only be amended or repealed by an act of parliament, that we shall have no difficulty in inducing capitalists to invest in and develop properties.

He also believes that the granting of large concessions has had much to do with the retarding of our progress, and as an instance cited that of the B.N.A. concession which covers practically the larger portion of the Whitehorse district, and upon no part of which has there been any development worth doing.

Next August or September, Mr. Brewer says, two or three hundred members of the American Institute of Mining Engineers will come as far north as Skagway, and that if proper arrangements are made they can be induced to continue their journey as far as Whitehorse. This association has a membership of 2900, and is composed of men whose estimate of value of properties in a mining district are implicitly relied upon by men with money to invest.

In Mr. Brewer's opinion this visit will afford us one of the greatest opportunities we shall ever have to advertise our advantages, and that every effort should be made by us to prevail upon them to visit and inspect our mines.—Whitehorse Star.

The Premature Explosion

It was an odd day for Green county when Bill Ockerson became sheriff, though his first term brought no suspicion of his real villainy.

The decent citizen of Green made up a minority which the sheriff and his side partner, Judge Higgins, quickly set about reducing to a powerless and scattered handful.

If Ockerson brought in an occasional horse thief or robber, Judge Higgins never failed to soften his punishment or remit his sentence.

They drove the steer out through the house corral, and in ten minutes were scampering to cover in the cottonwood thickets of the river bottom.

STRANGE COLONY.

In a Siberian Forest Founded by an Escaped Convict. St. Petersburg, Nov. 1.—A party of Russian geographers, under Col. Pavlovski, traveling through an unknown tract of Siberian forest country, came upon a large natural clearing, where they found about a hundred wild-looking individuals clad in skins and speaking bad Russian.

The convict, whose name was Matveyeff, came upon a camp of wandering Kirghis, and, after living with them some time, married one of their women. The tribe left to wander, and Matveyeff, finding a suitable spot in the midst of a dense forest, settled there with his wife. After ten years of incredible hardship and toil they built a house and managed to fill a little soil. As the years went on the children managed to secure Kirghis wives, but as they feared to visit the Russian settlements they were obliged to lead a Robinson Crusoe sort of existence. Matveyeff died five years ago.

Sheriff Eilbeck Now Awaiting the Returns Which Shall Declare Ross' Election.

The last of the ballot boxes to be used in the election Tuesday have left the hands of Sheriff Eilbeck and are now speeding on their way for the points to which they are intended.

The White Pass stage line has delivered all the boxes entrusted to its care as far up the line as Caribou. Those for Caribou, Dalton and Tagish will be dispatched from Whitehorse by the police.

"Sowing the Wind"—Auditorium. TO PARENTS. Because credit was properly paid to Mr. Ross for the magnificent school system now being established all over the territory, the opposition party scoff at education.

WATER RIGHTS

Another Issued This Morning on Hunker.

In the Nugget of yesterday it was stated that there were many water rights being applied for, and many protests being filed against them, for rights on Gold Run.

Another protest was filed today from Adams Gulch. The plaintiff is Emil Weinheim and the defendants W. S. Hawley and Everett B. Newman.

The defendants have made application to the gold commissioner for an amendment of water grant No. 806, and for a water right on 19 pup left limit on Adams.

Another water right was this morning granted to Mrs. Annie East, on the draw on the left limit of Hunker, for use on a bench on the third tier, upper half of 67 left limit below discovery on Hunker.

SOWING THE WIND.

Makes Great Hit at the Auditorium Theatre.

The Bittner company will present "Sowing the Wind" again tonight and the same play will be given Monday and Tuesday of next week.

A large and enthusiastic audience heard the performance last evening and the company scored their best hit for many weeks.

Miss Kelson and Mr. Bittner portrayed their respective characters in a manner that was above criticism. For the remaining nights that "Sowing the Wind" is given packed houses are assured.

The Nugget's facilities for turning out first-class job work cannot be excelled this side of San Francisco.

MINERS ENCOURAGED.

I recognize that the whole business life of the Yukon depends upon the success of the prospector and miner, and they above all others must be encouraged. — James Hamilton Ross.

SULPHUR FOR ROSS

The Miners Are Nxt to Clarke's Schemes.

A meeting of miners was held at 32 below Sulphur last evening for the purpose of discussing the issues of the campaign.

Early in the campaign the Clarke men claimed Sulphur by all kinds of odds but the meeting of last night and others which have lately been held completely dispelled this illusion.

The miners on the creeks have seen through Joe's wily schemes and have thoroughly posted themselves upon his record.

They will aid the balance of the territory in putting the "unworthy instrument" entirely out of business.

ON NEW ROAD

Extending Last Chance Government Road Three Miles.

Engineer McPherson returned last night from Last Chance, where he had gone to put men to work on the extension of the road which it was decided to have made there.

"The Kind of Christianity Dawson Needs." The following music will be sung at the latter service. Anthem, "Sun of My Soul," Holden; soprano and alto solos, Miss Krieg, Mrs. Fysh, Messrs. McLeod and Teleson.

THE BIG COMPANIES

The Northern Commercial Company pays taxes on over two millions of stock, the N. A. T. & T. Co. on nearly a million.

Society of the Week

Society has been woefully backward this season in taking up the festivities where they were left off last spring, so much so that there has been a positive dearth of social affairs where the elect could meet and indulge in small talk, the latest gossip with a wee bit of scandal thrown in by way of spice and variety.

The dancing party they gave a week or so ago was a very enjoyable affair and it is sincerely hoped that the camp will continue them every two weeks as they did last season.

The ladies of the athletic association, those whose husbands, brothers and sweethearts are members of the club, are perfecting arrangements for a fancy dress carnival to be given some time in the near future.

Cards are out for an at home to be given Friday evening, December 5, at their new residence by Mr. Justice and Mrs. Macaulay.

On some date next week, which is yet to be decided, the Bank of Commerce will entertain a number of its friends at a skating and dancing party.

and patent leathers. Three hours were spent in tripping the light fantastic and though the large room was too crowded for comfort every one made the best of it and enjoyed themselves.

An affair that is being looked forward to with a great deal of anticipation is the first annual ball that will be given by the Odd Fellows at the A. B. hall on next Tuesday evening.

The announcement of the marriage which is to take place tonight between Mr. Chris S. Nielsen and Miss Nina Moore, bookkeeper of the Dawson Hardware Company, has been made.

Quite a number of dinner parties were given at the Regina on Thanksgiving evening. The dining rooms had been prettily decorated and showed the exquisite taste of Miss Radcliff who now has the management of the Regina.

Mr. Fred Zilly, one of the charter members of the Rubicon club and who now holds the club championship for the greatest carrying capacity, will tear himself away from his old pals, separate himself, as it were, next Thursday when he will take the stage for the outside probably never to return.

MAIL ARRIVES

Calderhead's Stage Lashes Express Letter.

The White Pass mail stage arrived at seven o'clock last evening with only seven sacks of mail and passengers.

The Merchants' line will stage today, and Mr. Calderhead says he will not send any mail on Tuesday, when he will send his mail as he does not wish to have the Ross men out of the city until they have cast their vote.

TO EVERYBODY. If you were going outside, had to leave your children in the hands of someone else, would you like Joe Clarke as your visible agent, or James Hamilton Ross? Vote accordingly.

WATER SUPPLY.

I shall secure all data, questions and opinions upon the question of adequate water supply for mining purposes and lay the whole matter before the government and parliament with a view of having a practical method of securing the same to those engaged in the mining industry at the earliest possible date, adopted as early a date as possible. — James Hamilton Ross.

known his services are naturally much sought after and only yesterday a cablegram was received from J. Pat Morgan asking for his advice on a most momentous question: Mr. Zilly has authorized a denial of the statement that he will accept the presidency of the Steel Trust.

On last Saturday night a progressive whist party was given at the apartments of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Calderhead. The evening was most delightfully spent, concluding with a dainty lunch.

Mr. Charles Macdonald, the affable clerk of the court, will leave next Thursday (B. W.) for the outside and a few months vacation with his old friends in Ontario.

BUSINESS MEN

Your credit on the outside is absolutely based upon the credit of the territory, and its aspect of permanent prosperity. This position is publishing the statement broadcast that the miners are leaving the country; that the investors have left it already.

Mr. Fred Zilly, one of the charter members of the Rubicon club and who now holds the club championship for the greatest carrying capacity, will tear himself away from his old pals, separate himself, as it were, next Thursday when he will take the stage for the outside probably never to return.
