THE GREAT WRECK OF THE ELBE

Believed that Only the One Boat Survived the Gale—Names of the Steerage Passengers—The Steamer that Did the Damage.

London, Jan. 31.—The 21 survivors of the Elbe catastrophe tell a terrible tale. The few hours of the voyage before the disaster were uneventful. At 4 o'clock the boat was blown up by a tremendous sea was running. The morning was unusually dark. Numerous lights were seen in directions, showing that many vessels were near by. The captain, therefore, thought that the Elbe was in danger, and the Elbe was some 50 miles off Lowestoft, when the lookout sighted the steamer of the North German Lloyd, and gave the word, and as a precaution, the Elbe was ordered to stop. The Elbe was sent up at short intervals. The warning was without effect. The steamer came within uncheckered speed and before the Elbe could change her course she was struck. The Elbe was a terrific strake. The Elbe was hit about her engine room. When the steamer was struck, a tremendous hole was left in the Elbe's side. The water poured in like a cataract. The entire room filled almost instantly. The Elbe was sinking rapidly. The passengers were in bed. The Elbe was sinking rapidly. The passengers were in bed. The Elbe was sinking rapidly. The passengers were in bed.

For a few moments they went among the terror-stricken groups, trying to quiet them and encourage them to hope that the vessel might be saved. It was soon a scene of confusion. The Elbe was settling steadily. The officers were con- sidered that she was about to founder and gave orders for the boats to be lowered. A short time three boats were got along side. The Elbe was breaking over her bow. The Elbe was breaking over her bow. The Elbe was breaking over her bow. The Elbe was breaking over her bow.
