Overcoming the World.

BY CHARLES M. SHELDON.

The little woman could see that something unusual had happened at the parsonage, but her own trouble practically absorbed her feelings. She looked at Dorothy, however, with the admiration which her beauty of face often excited in what we call ordinary people.

"Oh, ma'am," she cried, "I've come to see if Mr. Kirk won't help me to get my boy home again. He's been drinking. I live in a lonesome place, at 'The Forks,' and I don't have often come to town, but I have heard of your husband, and they say people all around have gone to him for help, and I know he will do what he can for me. My boy will be twenty-one next week. I told your husband that some day your baby would grow up into a good Christian man, to comfort and bless you. That's what I hoped and prayed my boy would do. And he might, if the saloon had not tempted him."

My husband was. We lost a good farm back in Ohio on account of the drink, and then my husband died, and I took the boy and came out here. I went purposely to a lonesome place to keep my boy from the town. I may have made a mistake, but I did the best I knew, and I loved for him on account of his father. Oh, ma'am, your heart is sore, I know it, but it's not as sore as mine, for your baby never broke your heart. I would sooner see my boy in his coffin than see him as I have many a time during the past two years. There's trouble and trouble. May God help us to bear our own. But your baby's safe now. How can I tell if mine ever will be?"

She spoke the last words in such a tone of hopeless sadness that Dorothy lifted her up her head and looked at her.

"Don't say that!" she said, and the tears flowed down her face faster. They were merciful tears. Her heart, which had been fast bound within her, as if it would burst, felt the first relief she had known. God was leading her. She did not know that what Malcom had experienced had come to her also. But the lonely, stricken woman in the little study, representing so much human sorrow of a kind that neither Dorothy nor Malcom knew, had touched her. She, also, was able to say to her husband years afterwards that she felt as if the coming of that other burden into their own heavy-hearted lives was a part of the loving Father's plan for their victory in overcoming the world, the world of what might have grown to be a very selfish sorrow.

What happened, all that was said in that little study room after that, is not easy to tell. But when Mrs. Barton went out, Malcom Kirk went with her. Dorothy went into her own little room and prayed, and there was that in her prayer that revealed to her the loving Father. For the first time she saw her baby surrounded by the Infinite love, and when she came back to her work in the kitchen there was hope, immortal hope, and a large measure of the peace of Christ in her heart.

Malcom Kirk got into the farm wagon with Mrs. Barton and they drove to the main business street of Courad.

"Now, Mrs. Barton," Malcom had said, "if you will wait outside, I'll go into the saloons and see if I can find your boy. While I'm looking, you might question passers-by, and ask them if they have seen the hay wagon and horses anywhere."

She thanked him gratefully, and he noted that even in the burning sun her thin, sorrowful figure trembled and shivered and her lips quivered as if she were cold. His compassion for her motherhood increased every moment.

"God help her," he said, as he stepped down out of the wagon. "This boy is one of the lost ones in this town that Dorothy and I pledged ourselves three years ago to rescue. Heaven give me strength and wisdom to make that promise good."

He had never been inside of a saloon in his life. He shrank from the ordeal before him, with all the shuddering of a highly sensitive spirit in the presence of an ugly, repulsive, hideous evil. But he went at once into the first saloon on the main street and stopped inside near the door and looked around him.

It was not yet ten o'clock in the morning, but there were a dozen men and boys in the room, which was quite large, seated with stools, and furnished with small, round tables.

At first his entrance attracted no attention. A few of the men were lounging at the bar. The rest were seated at the tables. But as he remained by the door, two or three of those nearest him turned and looked at him. One of the men was a laborer who had several times been employed by Malcom in odd jobs about the house.

Instantly Kirk walked over to him and held out his hand. "Carver, do you know Mrs. Barton's boy? Philip is his name. She is looking for him. He left home Saturday, and she is sure he is in one of the saloons somewhere."

The man looked very much embarrassed. He shuffled his feet nervously in the dirty sawdust under the table. "I saw him yesterday. He was in Valmer's place in the next block."

"Thank you," said Malcom, slowly. "Can any of you gentlemen tell me anything about him? Has anyone seen him to-day?"

No one answered, and there was a painful silence. The bar-keeper, who had been eyeing Kirk, suddenly broke the silence by saying with a short laugh:

"You won't find him here. I won't say he hasn't been here. He knows a good thing when he sees it. Won't you step up and take a glass of ice beer this morning? We keep the best in the town on tap for preachers."

There was a laugh from one or two of the men nearest the speaker, but Malcom simply looked him in the face, without a word. He then laid his hand on Carver's shoulder and said softly:

"I'm sorry to see you here, Carver. You promised me you would quit it."

The man writhed in his seat, but did not say a word. Kirk looked at him sorrowfully.

"Come, Carver, come out of this. I'll give you something to do. Don't lose your soul in this place."

"Say," said the barkeeper, who had been leaning with his elbows on the bar listening, as had also every other man in the saloon, "you leave my customers alone, will you, and mind your own business."

"That's just what I am doing," replied Kirk, earnestly, and as he spoke his pale blue eyes filled with a high, white light. "It's my business to destroy your business. Man, do you know that just outside that door is a mother's broken heart that you have helped to break? And here is only one out of thousands all over the world. Mind my own business! It is exactly what I intend to do, until every hell like this is wiped out of this town."

He spoke very quietly, almost softly, his voice did not declaim, but the unusual quality of it thrilled everybody there. He looked into their faces a moment, and with a last appealing look at Carver, he turned and went out.

"Whew!" said the barkeeper. "First sermon ever delivered here. Score one for Parson Kirk!"

The other men did not respond with much enthusiasm. Carver had risen from the table.

"Better have one before you go," said the barkeeper.

"I won't drink again to-day," Carver retorted with an oath that was a curse. He staggered to the door and went out into the glare of the hot, withering sun. Down the street he could see Kirk just entering Valmer's place.

"I'm half a mind to help Mr. Kirk hunt for the boy," Carver muttered. He hesitated for a moment, and then went on down the street, following the minister.

That forenoon Malcom Kirk went into every saloon in Courad, but he failed to get any trace of the missing boy. Always behind him, unknown to him, Carver staggered. In two or three saloons this man was unable to resist the invitation to drink. But he managed to buy just beer enough to know where Kirk was and to follow him.

The saloons that greeted Malcom in the saloons were never forgotten by him. He was astonished to see the number of men and boys gathered in the saloons. Many of the faces he knew, and his entrance invariably created a distinct embarrassment through the company. The majesty of customers, however, seemed, from their dress and talk, to be composed of farmers, young men from the ranches, outlying Courad. Malcom was simply appalled when he thought of what such a fact meant.

He said to himself every time he came out and faced the dumbly appealing face in the farm wagon, "And yet we, Christian people, license these enemies of the race and allow them to continue their devilish work, although we know well enough how devilish it is. May God help us as a state to declare against it by statute as well as by prayers and sermons." He lived as did every temperance man in Kansas at that time, in the great hope that the day was not far off when the saloon would be declared outlaw, but how near that day was not even he was able to predict.

It was nearly noon when he finished his tour of the saloons, and as he came out near the lower end of the main street there was a large group of men standing there looking off across the prairie and talking eagerly together. The wind had risen and was blowing almost a gale, carrying great clouds of dust through the town, and off as far as men could see there was a column of smoke spreading out with great rapidity.

"The prairie fire has started early," Kirk thought, but it was only when one of the ranchmen in the street spoke that he realized what the fire might mean.

"If this wind keeps up, this town will have its hands full in about an hour."

The speaker ran to his horse, jumped on it and was soon galloping out of the town towards one of the ranches in the direction of "The Forks."

"Mrs. Barton, it is possible that your boy has gone home since you left."

"Yes, yes," cried the woman, snatching at any hope. "I will go back. If the fire should come into 'The Forks' I ought to be there to see that my other boy has help in getting the stock behind the fire guards. We ploughed ours early this year on account of the dry weather. We lost all our hay-stacks one September from fire."

He was just starting home, after asking several men if there was really any immediate danger to the town from the fire, when through the dust, racing in from the prairie, came a team of powerful farm horses drawing an empty hay wagon. The lines were trailing on the ground and the harness was broken, and as they rushed by someone shouted, "That's Phil Barton's team."

A little farther down the street the horses were caught and stopped.

Kirk ran up with a crowd of other men.

"No sign of Phil Barton," said one of the men who had helped catch the team.

"He's probably been thrown out somewhere."

"Dunkan men never get killed."

"I wouldn't give much for his chances if he fell off in the gully grass over there," said another, pointing towards the district from which the horse had come into the town.

Malcom's mind was in a whirl.

"He may be near by. We ought not to leave him without looking for him."

As he spoke, he heard the boy's mother saying as she faced Dorothy in the study, "My boy may never be saved."

"We've got our hands full looking after the town. We might as well face that fact. No rain for two months; water all out of cisterns and low in wells, and that fire coming down on us forty miles an hour," said one of the business men.

How to Dress Well.

By Using the Never Fading Diamond Dyes any Woman Can Have Two or More Dresses of the Newest Colors at Trifling Cost.

Women who desire to dress neatly and well find the Diamond Dyes to be their best and truest helpers. One or two packages (according to weight of dress) will recreate any faded or discolored dress or skirt that has been cast aside as useless, and the cost will not exceed 10 or 20 cents.

Instead of having to depend upon one dress for street and church wear, any thrifty and handy woman with the help of Diamond Dyes can have two or more dresses in stylish colors always ready for service.

Do not risk your dresses with imitation or adulterated dyes; see that your dealer gives you the Diamond Dyes when you ask for them.

Words from the Family Oracle.

Never play a part.

Be what you are and do not be ashamed of it.

If Heaven made you this or that or the other you are that and nothing else. You are only a plain person. Very well; it is good to be a plain person.

You have no "grand aspirations," no "yearning after lofty things" so don't pretend that you have.

Out with your opinions. If you think a thing is wrong, say so, don't wink at it because it is fashionable.

Take the common sense which God has given you and use it.

"Do you think it proper," said the man who was trying to keep his temper, "to laugh at a man who slips on a banana peel by accident?"

"Well," replied the spectator, apologetically, "I laughed by accident, too. I didn't think of such a thing until I saw you."

A little girl ran into a chemist's shop, and asked for a pennyworth of pills. "Antibillious?" said the chemist.

"No," said the child; "uncle's bilious."

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., APRIL 21, 1899.

A New Town Building.

Before the public meeting, advertised for the 25th inst., there will come a question of considerable importance.

It is quite evident that some change must be made in the locality of the fire station. If nothing else, the fact that the present situation is not satisfactory to the firemen, and that an efficiently organized service has never been supplied since the change in the location of the department has been made, argues convincingly that the present arrangement cannot endure.

On the other hand neither of the schemes which are suggested in the Town Clerk's notice are perhaps an entirely satisfactory solution to the problem.

The fire department is not the only part of the town building that is not satisfactory. The building as a whole is altogether unfit for the use to which it is now devoted.

The location also is extremely unfortunate. The most of the arrests made in the town are made on Main street, and in such cases the policeman has to drag his struggling victim for a quarter of a mile or so before he reaches the friendly security of the lock-up.

What we want, therefore, is not the removal of the old town building, which is never worth the expenditure; nor the erection and expense of maintaining a separate building for the purposes, which must ultimately become a white elephant on our hands; but a new Town Hall built on a site in the business part of the town, a building which would be a credit to the town and a convenience to all concerned.

Such an undertaking would mean but a small expenditure to the ratepayer, if any at all. The lot upon which the town building is at present would be very desirable for residences and would doubtless bring a good price.

Undoubtedly the time will come shortly when a new building of this kind will become a necessity. What will we gain, therefore, by putting off the matter for a few years and in the meantime putting up with unsuitable accommodations and making expenditures which will prove useless in a short time.

Wolfville Board of Trade.

The meeting of the Board of Trade on Tuesday evening was not nearly so well attended as it should have been, but an interesting and profitable session was had.

"Candidates for Teachers' Licenses who wish to be examined on subjects on which they fell below 83 per cent., have the option of two courses."

(1) To take the regular examination on the said subjects in the said grade, which can be done without taking any other of the subjects of the grade, and without the payment of any fee. (2) To take the supplementary (equivalent) papers on Saturday afternoon, for which a fee is required."

4. FORMS.

Forms of Notices of Annual Meeting for June 25th, which must be posted five days previously, form of minutes of said meetings which must be sent to the Inspector within one week after the meeting, and numerous other forms are published in the Journal.

Prohibition Resolution.

At the regular meeting of Wolfville Division on Monday evening last the following resolution was unanimously passed and ordered to be sent to the secretary of the Dominion Alliance for presentation to parliament:

Whereas the plebiscite vote taken upon the prohibition question on Sept. 29th, 1898, recorded a substantial majority of the electors of the Dominion in favor of prohibitory legislation, including large majorities in all the different provinces, save one, and

Resolved that this society, learns with the deepest regret of the failure of the Government to introduce prohibitory legislation into Parliament and respectfully and earnestly calls upon Parliament to enact such legislation as the vote of the people has warranted.

Borden-Knowles Wedding.

On Wednesday evening, April 13th, the residence of Mr. F. W. Ferguson, Main street, was the scene of an interesting event, when Miss Alice J. Knowles, daughter of Mr. George N. Knowles, of Wolfville, N. S., and sister of Mrs. W. F. Ferguson, was married to Mr. Arthur B. Borden, also of Wolfville.

The People's Forum.

To the Editor of the Acadian. MR. EDITOR.—Being one of the many citizens who read with approval the article on "Town Meetings" in your issue of 31st March, I beg to add a few remarks on the subject.

I may say in beginning that I was especially pleased with that portion of your article which the Mayor in his reply saw fit to style "this unfortunate paragraph." I will take the Mayor's advice and not venture any opinion as to the law on the subject, but from the standpoint of public interest I must say I think you were entirely correct. I go further, and say, Mr. Editor, that if you meant that the chairman in such a meeting should not call on certain councillors to take charge of the discussion, you were again right.

The trouble at the bottom of all this is in allowing the Town Council to assume control of a citizens' meeting. The Mayor may permissibly claim this control as a legal right, but it is none the less a public wrong. The citizens have from experience found it necessary to attend all public meetings and to stay until their adjournment in order to safeguard their interests. And why? Because the majority of such meetings are apparently called to allow certain councillors to advocate certain cherished schemes of one sort or another. These councillors coming to such a meeting governed by their own officials are forthwith allowed to assume control with the result that they talk on the subject or away from it, engage in personalities or otherwise as they see fit, and keep the citizens on guard until after wearied waiting someone has a chance to move an adjournment. Surely common sense should dictate that these councillors be asked to take a back seat, listen to the wishes of the citizens and then go to the Council and carry out those wishes. There would be a better chance of getting a citizens' verdict and that with it as waste of time.

Yours truly, C. ZYEN.

Messrs W. C. and E. E. Arch began this morning with a crew of the planting of 3,000 trees on their Williams property. Several tons of nursery stock will also be set this spring.

The meetings of Crystal Band of Kentville, has been notified by the Board of that town that his services not be required after the present. A Kentville paper hints that this is in consequence of the active taken by Mr. McLeod to enforce temperance liquor selling. Thus a step of the county council is indicated. How long shall prohibition be allowed to rule?

WOLFVILLE, N. S., APRIL 21, 1899.

Local and Provincial.

Mr. C. A. Patriquin is preparing the foundation for another cottage on Gasperau avenue.

Quite a snow-storm occurred on Monday. On the South Mountain sleighs were brought into use again.

Mr. G. W. Munro caught a handsome 3 1/2 lb trout in the millpond at White Rock on Thursday last week.

Lot 7.—A bunch of Keys. Finder will be rewarded at Union Bank.

Wolfville Division has been invited to go to Cambridge next Thursday evening to assist the Division there in celebrating its anniversary.

The April session of the Municipal Council of Kings county will be held in the Court House, Kentville, on Tuesday next, opening at 10 o'clock.

On our fourth page, in the column entitled by the Wolfville W. O. T. U., is concluded this week an excellent article on bread-making, by Mrs. Sears.

Kentville papers report a carnival of drunkenness at that town last Saturday night and Sunday morning. Surely the crusade against the drink traffic in this town is not without reason.

Ladies! Call and see the Wheels we are selling for $20 and $40. Both fully guaranteed. Wolfville Druggists.

Mrs. W. C. and E. E. Archibald began this morning with a crew of men the planting of 3,000 trees on their Port Williams property. Several thousand of nursery stock will also be sent there this spring.

The meetings of Crystal Band of Hope continue to be of a very interesting character and are well attended. At the meeting on Friday afternoon last Mrs. B. G. Bishop presented a well-rendered reading, and Mrs. Hingley gave an interesting talk to the young people on "Sights in London."

The Wineshop is another Wheel that has been carefully tested and tried before leaving the factory. Agency at the Danvers.

There will no doubt be a good attendance of Wolfville people at the performance of the opera "Patience" at the Kentville Hall, Kentville, this evening. Special trains will be provided to bring back those who attend at the close. The opera is one of the best of its kind and will no doubt be very attractive and interesting.

Principal McLeod, of Kentville Academy, has been notified by the School Board of that town that his services will not be required after the present year. A Kentville paper hints that the action is in consequence of the active stand taken by Mr. McLeod to enforce the law against liquor selling. Thus are the affairs of the county academy administered. How long shall such a sentiment be allowed to rule?

$5000 to loan on Real Estate. 18 AVARD Y. PRINCE, Barrister, Wolfville.

A treat is promised to the people of Wolfville and vicinity next Monday evening in the appearance of Mr. Owen A. Smiley, character actor and musical entertainer, in College Hall, under the auspices of the Acadia Athenaeum society. Mr. Smiley is not a stranger in Wolfville, having been here a few years ago, and all who heard him then will be glad of an opportunity of doing so again. This time he will be accompanied by Miss Hilda Davis, violinist; Miss May Hopkins, pianist; and Miss Theresa Flanagan, soprano, all of whom are artists in their respective lines. We speak a full house.

The Ball.

The ball given by the "bachelors and benedictes" of Wolfville, in Chambers' Block last Friday evening, was a brilliant occasion, and passed off most successfully. The hall presented a very pretty appearance, skillful hands and artistic minds having combined to work a veritable transformation. Drapery of orange, blue and red bunting, potted plants, flags and pictures were so arranged as to produce a very charming effect. Reception and dressing rooms on the second floor were also prettily furnished and arranged. Nearly 200 guests were present from Kentville, Windsor, Halifax, Canning, Port Williams, Wolfville and elsewhere, being cordially received by the chaperons—Mrs. C. R. Burgess, Mrs. E. S. Crawley and Mrs. C. H. Borden. Excellent music was rendered by the De Stevens Italian Orchestra, of Halifax, at the sweet strains of which the guests tripped the light fantastic until early morning. The costumes of the ladies were only exceeded in beauty by the waltzers, and the scene presented was like a glimpse of fairyland. Messrs. Borden, Crawley, Archibald, Thomson, Leavitt, Gillmore, Rhodes and Smith, the committee who had the affair in charge, deserve great credit for the skillful manner in which all arrangements were conceived and carried out.

Hires WANTED.—Highest market prices paid for hides at the Willow-Vale Tannery, Wolfville.

D. B. Shaw, proprietor.

Gasperau Items.

Work has commenced on the foundation of the new parsonage. The site for the building, which is opposite the church, will be very convenient. It is to be finished by the first of August. The old parsonage and grounds have been purchased by Mr. James Gertridge. Our enterprising merchant, Mr. E. A. Davidson, is building a warehouse for storing flour, meal, etc., his present establishment being too small for his increasing trade.

Our beautiful river, that has been frozen over during the winter, is now open and full of swift, rushing water. Soon we may expect to see the fishermen preparing their nets to catch the salmon and gasperaux, which, ere long, will be making their way up the stream.

Last week our pastor, Rev. Mr. Spidell, paid a visit to his wife and family at Chester, Lunenburg county.

We understand that Mr. George Minet has purchased the Anand farm at Wallbrook, where he intends moving his family shortly.

JUST ARRIVED.—One Cargo Springhill Coal—First of the Season. COLDWELL & BORDEN.

Living Pictures.

The Representation of Pictures advertised last week to be given by the Society this evening, April 22nd. The entertainment will consist of single figures representing characters from history and fictions with tableaux representing different nationalities and pictures by well known artists. Among the representations are Charlotte Corday, Martha Washington, Dante, Marguerite, Beatrice Cenci, Mary Queen of Scots, Japanese, Dutch, Chinese and Gipsy Characters, with pictures by Burke Jones, Sargent, Hunt, Thomas, Boden Hansen, etc. Dr. Keirstead will introduce and explain the pictures. The programme will be varied with music. The proceeds of the entertainment will go toward paying for a china life for the school. The generous patronage of the public is solicited. The entertainment begins at 8 o'clock. Admission 25 cents. Tickets on sale at Book and Drug stores.

Athenaeum "At Home."

One of the most important events of the college year is the "at home" given by the Athenaeum society. Friday evening of last week was the date fixed for the occasion. College Hall was most tastefully arranged and presented a pretty and interesting sight. A large number of invitations were sent out and friends of the college were present from different parts of the county. A number of the students of Kings College were also present. The costumes of the ladies were charming, and the whole affair was most pleasing to the eye. The Katie Johnson Jubilee Co. were present and gave a number of their jubilee selections, which were well received. A well-rendered piano duet by Misses Beckwith and Munro was one of the pleasing features of the evening, while the vocal solos by Mr. Pidgeon, of St. John, were highly enjoyed.

To LET.—The Shop now occupied by E. B. Shaw. Possession given about May 1st. O. A. PATRIQUIN.

Owen A. Smiley.

The Owen A. Smiley recital in the Art Hall last evening, was one of the most enjoyable of its kind ever given here. Mr. Smiley is a clever, accomplished, and his selections, principally humorous in character, brought forth vigorous applause from the audience. Miss Hilda Davis, violinist, and Miss Theresa Flanagan, soprano, also succeeded in pleasing and the determined success which followed each number testified to the excellence of their performance. Miss Davis is a thoroughly accomplished violinist and her contributions to the programme proved a rich treat, too rarely placed within reach of a Sherbrooke audience. Miss Flanagan has a sweet, cultivated voice, and rivalled Miss Davis in her popularity last evening. The concert was under the auspices of the Harmonia Band, which rendered two of its choice selections during the programme.—Sherbrooke (Que.) Daily Record.

To LET.—Furnished—The cottage near the Episcopal church, recently occupied by Mr. J. A. Thomson. Apply to DE. BARRS, Wolfville, April 12, 1899.
