WELCOME.

The report that the Grand Bond bridge was badly damaged by the fire at the hotel on Monday, turns out to be exaggerated. The bridge was saved by the exertions of the residents, and is but slightly damaged. It was insured by the county authorities, and no loss will fall to the expense.

The monthly meeting of the School Board was held on Monday evening, C. Crabb, Esq., in the chair. With the exception of the principal's report and the reception of the plan for the alteration of the doors in the Central school, in conformity with the act of parliament, there was nothing before the board.

POOR FELLOWS.—In the course of a discourse at Portage la Prairie the other night, Rev. Mr. Robertson, superintendent of Presbyterian missions for the Northwest, said that there were over nineteen hundred young unmarried men in the Beautiful Plains district. Yet people enquire "what shall we do with our girls?"

F. H. Howard, the talented young preacher who has taken charge of North St. Methodist church congregation for a time, pending Rev. J. Wakefield's restoration to health, has received intimation that he has passed his final examination very creditably at Montreal Theological College, and gained a first-class certificate. Mr. Howard is a member of our common power for so young a man, and has proven an able and popular substitute for the esteemed pastor of North street church.

FOR GODE-RICH.—Mr. E. I. Brown, who was for many years chief clerk in the post office at Gode-rich, on Tuesday morning, Mr. Brown has disposed of his property on South Water street—the house and lot to Mr. Peter Dickson, of Beverly, for $1,750, and the vacant lot to Mr. Thos. Bryan for $600—and in company with Mr. James Bond purpose engaging in the manufacture of soap in Gode-rich. The many friends of the illustrious will have a larger tarantula both gentlemen will be pleased to learn of their success. (Galt Reformer)

ORGAN RECITAL.—The managers of the Knox church, Gode-rich, offer an excellent programme at the Organ Recital to be held in the church this (Friday) evening, Dr. Verinder, of London, assisted by Miss Nettie Segmiller, will preside at the organ, and a number of local vocalists will render appropriate solos. The choir has a number of choice selections to sing, and the entire programme is of a most suitable character. We hope the friends of the church, and all admirers of good music, will turn out largely at the opening of the new organ this evening.

Prof. E. Hall, a clever young illusionist and ventriloquist, gave an interesting entertainment in Victoria hall on Wednesday evening. His tricks were all neatly performed, and his feats in ventriloquism were exceedingly good. The entertainment is one that could be given in the most refined parlors and we hope the illusionist will have a larger number of ladies and gentlemen at his next exhibition to be held here on Friday evening next, May 18th. We can heartily commend the entertainment to our citizens as one which any one can attend with propriety.

Housekeeping now; whitewash your ceilings; paper your walls; take down the parlor stove; clean the chimney; remove the mountains of ashes and garbage from the back yards; and if that cross husband of yours declines to assist you or pay someone else to do the work, just take hold of the broom and brush him down with it and he will see you as the small end of it, too. Then remind him if he desires to do so, he may attend to that important business affair or go off on a fishing excursion down the river until you get ready to cook his meals for him again.—Ex.

The Seal-trail Show is informed that Dr. Stewart has received the appointment of Professor of Materia Medica, McGill College, Montreal. Dr. Wright, the late occupant of the chair, resigned lately, and this taken in connection with the fact of Dr. Stewart's well known ability and the fact that the Doctor graduated at McGill, would lead us to believe that the information may turn out to be correct. Certainly the authorities of the College would feel more disposed to give the chair to one of their own graduates, especially as he was deserving of it, rather than to one from another college. The people of Brucefield will be happy to learn of the Doctor's success, though of course they would be happy to see the Doctor's genial face once more amongst them. We believe, however, that it was a foregone conclusion that the Dr. would return no more to that village.

LECTURE.—The lecture on "Faction," which was delivered by Mr. T. McGillivuddy in the Methodist church on Monday evening last, under the auspices of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, was largely attended. The lecture was occupied by Rev. Dr. G. E. Hall, who lectured on the subject of the attention of the audience for about an hour, at times throwing considerable feeling into his remarks. The lecture throughout was a plea for the cultivation of judgment, nerve, pluck, patience and perseverance, and seemed to be appreciated by the listeners. At the close a vote of thanks was moved to the lecturer by Ven. Archdeacon Elwood, who said he could not speak too highly of the lecture. The motion was seconded by Rev. Mr. Howard. After votes of thanks to the chairman, and to the choir for its excellent service, the meeting was brought to a close by the singing of the doxology, and the pronouncing of the benediction by Ven. Archdeacon Elwood.

TALL HORSE TALK.

The sports Excited on the Trotting Station Question—Challenges Issued on Both Sides.

As we intimated in our report of the spring show, a keen rivalry exists between the owners of the trotting stations Archy Bourbon and Trotting. There was a lot of talk on show day between J. P. Fisher and Johnny Beacom, the respective owners of the horses, and the discussion culminated on Saturday afternoon when Johnny wrote the challenge given below and handed it in to THE SIGNAL:

Mr. J. P. Fisher.
DEAR SIR.—I am informed that you have publicly stated in different places and at different times that your stallion "Archy Bourbon" could beat my stallion "Trotting" and that you would like to match him to a race. Now, I will match your horse to trot a race of mile heats, best of five to harness, for $500 a side, to be trotted the last week in September, and I have this day deposited with A. M. Polley, my attorney, a challenge which will allow you two weeks to put up or shut up.

Yours,
JOHN BEACOM.
Gode-rich, May 3, 1883.

Immediately upon his heels came the owner of Archy Bourbon with the following challenge, which speak for itself:—

Mr. John Beacom, Clinton.
SIR.—As I deem it best that the public should know before the season closes which is the better horse, I hereby challenge you to trot your stallion "Trotting" against my stallion "Archy Bourbon" for $100 a side, mile heats, best of 3 in 5. The race to take place on either Gode-rich or Clinton track on either the 8th of May or July 2nd. I have to-day deposited $50 in the hands of A. M. Polley, Gode-rich, as a forfeit, the balance of the money will remain open for 12 days. Put up or shut up.

Yours,
J. P. FISHER.
Gode-rich, May 3, 1883.

Both the horses are handsome animals, and each of them have many admirers in the section. The stallions are full of go, and a pretty race may be expected if they come together. When the owners fix upon a time and place, we will announce the race. In the meantime opinion is divided as to the speed of the horses.

The Fields-Everett Wedding.

The following interesting account of the wedding of Mr. W. H. Fields, son of our town, to Miss Emma Jane Everett, daughter from the Jamestown, Da., Alert:—

It is our pleasure to-day to chronicle one of those pleasant social events—which is always looked forward to with so much interest and never fails to cause a flutter of excitement in social circles—we refer to the nuptials of Mr. William Henry Fields to Miss Emma Jane Everett, both of this city. The ceremony took place at 6 o'clock last evening at the residence of the bride's parents on Fourth Avenue Rev. Demorest of the Methodist church officiating. In the darkened parlor well filled with the immediate friends and relatives of the contracting parties the solemn marriage rites were pronounced, and the blessings of God invoked for their happiness through life. The bride was dressed in a well fitting dress of white cashmere cut panier, en traine and heavily trimmed with white French lace. She wore no ornaments save white satin bows at the throat and waist. The groom was attired in the conventional black dress suit. The bridesmaids were Misses Belle Everett and Eliza Griffin, attired in white dotted Swiss dresses with flower ornaments. The groomsmen were Messrs. Thomas B. French and Thomas Fields. After the happy pair were congratulated the guests took seats at a wedding supper and around the mammoth bride's cake which reared its lofty sugar-crowned head above the surrounding of the other delicacies with which the tables were burdened, an hour of jollity and mirth ensued. Mr. Fields is well known in this community as an industrious, honest man who counts his friends by the hundreds, and of the bride, what words can express the love, admiration and respect for her numerous sterling qualities which has endeared her to the hearts of many since her residence among us. Mr. and Mrs. Fields have the congratulations of a large and growing circle of friends, who wish them well as they sail life's tempestuous matrimonial sea. There were a large number of beautiful and useful presents received by the bride and groom, of which the following is a partial list:

LIST OF PRESENTS.
Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Wallace, silver breakfast castor; Mr. and Mrs. M. Fox, silver butter dish; Mr. Chas. Bunting, set silver table spoons; Mr. L. B. Miner, set silver tea spoons; Mr. and Mrs. L. Lyon, two silver mounted salts; Mr. Geo. Bruce, silver and glass berry dish; Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Webster, lamp; Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Vennum, crystal salts; Fields & Co., ebony clock; Mr. and Mrs. A. Klaus, silver dinner corks; Mr. F. L. Turner, silver pickle; Mr. and Mrs. M. McClure, crystal berry dish; Mr. and Mrs. L. Duboussin, damask towels and toilet set; Miss Sadie Davidson, toilet set; Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Bush, damask table cover; Miss Clara A. Bannan, vases; Mr. and Mrs. G. H. ## A CANADIAN'S LUCK.

Discovery of a Fine Strata of Rock Salt at Warsaw, N. Y.
Buffalo, N. Y., May 8.—W. C. Gouinlock, of Seneca, was one of the first to recognize in Warsaw, N. Y., salt-wells a good field for investment. His foresight is rewarded to-day when it became apparent that Warsaw was really a rich field for salt operations. Tests of the wells show the Gouinlock well has 60 feet of pure salt, and another well close by shows 84 feet. The town of Warsaw is in a ferment of excitement over the discovery of a fine strata of rock salt on the West Hill. The Webster syndicate have been digging for two weeks, and notwithstanding the chaff of the East Hill salt men, kept on and on Saturday night about 3 o'clock ran on to a fine strata of 20 feet, and kept on digging and yesterday reached 90 feet, finding a beautiful quality of rock salt. The East Hill men are wild at the discovery, and people from every direction flocked there in hundreds. Hon. Augustus Frank, ex-Governor, and Hon. W. J. Humphrey were on the scene, handling the salt. This well is east the Erie depot, and kills the plan to run a road from Le Roy to Gainesville, in order to reach the East Hill salt wells, as now proposed. This is the richest deposit so far exposed in the West. It is expected that the Webster syndicate will be greatly benefited by the discovery.

The Poet's Corner.

I cannot be a flirt. Don't talk to me of coquetry. And bid me not exert. More of my woman's witschery. I cannot be a flirt. Oh! say not that the men are new. All supine and inert. And that the only way to "catch," Is desperately to flirt. Say not the world is sadly changed. And all the girls are pert; For Emma if I never "take," I can't descend to flirt. I cannot faint at proper times. Or scream if on my skirt. A wasp or grasshopper appears. In truth, I cannot be a flirt. Then say no more, my charming friend. And bid me not exert. My arm confidingly in theirs. I really cannot flirt. I cannot firmly hold their hands. Pretending I am hurt. Or started, press upon their arms. As others do who flirt. I cannot speak in accents low. And then my head avert. While they stoop down most tenderly. Rejoicing in a flirt. Than Emma if you love me, pray Never again revert. To arts that from my soul I hate. I will not be a flirt.

TERRIBLE TRAGEDY.

An Agonizing Death—Frightful Mistake—Mrs. Theodore Reed the Victim—Five grains of Strichnine Taken—Mistaken for a Bitters Powder—Saddest Ending of a Peaceful Life—The Waste Community Mourning with the Family.

From the Bad Axe (Mich.) Tribune. About ten o'clock Monday evening those residing near the residence of Theodore Reed became cognizant of the existence of something sudden, violent and tragic. Those who had not retired and who were already unrobed hastily dressed, being aroused and alarmed by the shrieks of agony which had almost immediately issued forth upon the quiet air of the peaceful night. But a moment sufficed and scarce a question was requisite to reveal the full and dread particulars, and while the awe-stricken neighbors were yet gathering the end had come. Mrs. Anne Reed, wife of Theodore Reed, of Bad Axe, had died suddenly from the effects of a large dose of strichnine taken in mistake for a powder which had been prescribed and given her by her physician at a previous time and which was to overcome a bilious condition of the system. From the time of taking the poison until death ensued about fifty-five minutes elapsed, terrible agony adding to the painfulness of the occasion.

The actual circumstance as it transpired proved to be as stated at the outset, a frightful mistake, and while pregnant with pointed warning seems to indicate no individual responsibility. It appears that Mrs. Reed, about 9:30 o'clock, feeling somewhat unwell, went to her work basket for the purpose of obtaining a powder which had been prescribed for her by Dr. David. She took from the receptacle what she supposed was the desired powder, remarking almost instantly that she feared she had made a mistake and her daughter, Mrs. Beals, proceeded upstairs to the apartments of Dr. David, who resides in the same dwelling, taking with her the paper which had contained the powder taken by her mother, and which she submitted to the inspection of the doctor. The doctor tasted the particles still adhering to the paper and expressed a fear of its being strichnine, and with Mrs. Beals hastened to the apartments below where the victim was already found in spasms. All antidotes at hand were at once brought into requisition and messengers dispatched for further medical assistance and additional remedies. After the administering of the more powerful antidotes the spasms ceased, only to recur again in a few minutes, and within an hour of the time of taking the powder death came to the relief of the sufferer.

Investigation shows that some three months since Mrs. Reed purchased strichnine at a drug store for the purpose of killing mice, but it had been supposed that all the poison had been destroyed, but by some mischance it had found its way to her work-basket to be mistaken in the end for a simple remedy. Mrs. Reed, whose maiden name was Anne Young, was born in Peterfield, near Manchester, England, Oct. 19, 1821 and moved to Canada with her parents at an early period in her life and settling at Goderich, Ont., where she was married to Theodore Reed in 1847. She leaves a husband, a daughter, Mrs. Beals, of this village, a son, Fred. Reed, of Midland City, and a brother.

Mrs. Reed was one of the earliest and most esteemed residents of this place, and the suddenness and painfulness of her death tendered to intensify the regard and sympathy. The deceased had been for many years an honored and active member of the Protestant Episcopal church and was one of the foremost in bringing about the establishment of the Episcopal mission here. After years of hard work consequent upon an ailment into this section and which possessed all the accessories of pioneer life, the labors of herself and husband had resulted in securing a competence and with a fine new village residence for their comfort, the aged couple were about to experience the full fruits of their life dream when in a moment event occurred which in a moment dissipated the happiest dreams, but the deceased was a good woman and not unprepared for death in any form however sudden might be the dread appearance.

The funeral took place yesterday at 1 o'clock from the Episcopal church, the services being conducted by Rev. Mr. Smythe, of Port Austin, and was attended by nearly the entire adult population of this vicinity. Ayer's Hair Vigor restores the original color, by its stimulating action at the roots, produces a vigorous growth, and gives the hair that beautiful lustre which results only from a strong, healthy condition.

Goderich Township.

COW KILLED.—Mr. E. Rumball, of the 14th con., had one of his best cows run over at the crossing, by the Friday night train.

SOMETHING LIKE A QUILT.—Miss Anna Sterling, of the 7th con., completed a patchwork quilt this winter, which contains 7,500 pieces.

FARM RENTED.—Mr. Jas. Gallaher, of Galt, has rented his farm of 80 acres, on the 7th con., to the Hudis Bros, for one year, for the sum of $100.

Wingham.

CHANGED HANDS.—The Queen's hotel here has changed hands this week, Mr. Johnston having sold out to Mr. Alfred Roe, who for the past three years has been proprietor of the Queen's at Brussels. During his residence in Brussels Mr. Roe made many friends, and acquired a reputation for keeping the best regulated and most orderly hotel in that place.

The members of the late Fire Brigade entertained themselves to a supper in Merrifields Hotel last night. After supper a good time was spent in songs, &c. Mr. Harry Clark then presented Chief Manuel with a trumpet in recognition of the services rendered the Company by the chief. We have heard that the new Company challenges the old organization to a Hose Race year any time. Come along boys let us see some of your Brantford muscle.—(Times).

Clinton.

CASE SETTLED.—Our readers will remember that the wife of Mr. J. R. Murray, of this place, was badly injured in a collision at Hensall last winter. Mr. Murray entered a suit against the company, claiming $2,000 damages, but it was settled last week by the Railway company paying $1,500 and medical expenses.

Dr. J. E. Reeve, writing from Moose Jaw, N.W.T., last week, states that the capital of the west should have been fixed there, instead of Regina. Every morning flat cars, carrying large tanks of water, leave Moose Jaw for Regina, where it is sold to supply the wants of the people there, the river at Regina being so low that a person could step across it anywhere.

THE TOWN AUDIT.—Messrs. Farran and Racey, auditors of the town accounts, have completed their work, and their report will be presented to the council at its next meeting. From it we learn that the total expenditures of the last year were $11,246.17. Of this sum $3,714 was for the Public School, $900 for the High School, $1,489 for street and sidewalks, $856 for salaries, and the remainder made up by outlays for different purposes.—(New Era).

Hullett.

IMPORTATION.—A few days since Mr. John Mason received from Scotland a splendid heavy draught colt, which he purposed travelling this year. It appears to have stood its voyage well, and is a good addition to the improved stock of the county.

HORSE NOTES.—Mr. John Brown, of the 12th con., sold a fine colt, coming 3 to a person from Constance, at $180. At Mrs. Brigham's sale last week, a span of colts coming one year old, was sold at $210. Messrs. Murphy lately sold a heavy span for $380, and have several $225 horses left yet.

A BAD LOSS.—Mr. Jas. Barr, who lives on the boundary, has been so unfortunate as to lose three splendid horses, all within a short time. Noticing that they were sick, he called in a veterinary surgeon, but he was unable to determine what was wrong, as they had none of the symptoms of any ailment common to horses. Some have attributed their death to impure water, but it is doubtful if this, if itself, would cause their death.

DEATH.—It is our painful duty to record another blank in the pioneer settlers of this township, by the death of Mr. S. Shetler of the 13 con., who died on Saturday. He has been afflicted with rheumatism for a long time; lately dropping in which caused his death, at the age of 73 years; being a quiet and retiring disposition, he has never taken a forward part. By his sterling worth and industrious habits he was a model for the rising generation to imitate. He was a consistent member of the Presbyterian church to which he was greatly attached.

SUDDEN DEATH.—Mr. Thos. Emerson, of the 2nd con. of Hullett, died unexpectedly on Friday night last, at the age of 83 years. He has been ailing more or less for some time, but his death was not expected. He has been ailing more or less for some time, but his death was not expected. He had only lived here a few years, having moved from the county of Hastings. His body was taken to Belleville for interment on Saturday. A report was telegraphed west that his elder brother, Mr. John Emerson, P. L. S., one of the oldest residents of Hastings, died on Friday, but we learn that the report is incorrect, although he is in a very low condition, and may not last long.—(New Era).

Now that there is a reliable remedy for kidney troubles, half the terrors attached to these complaints have been removed. For this let all be thankful, and to Dr. Van Buren's Kidney Cure award all praise for having thus removed a hitherto considered fatal disease from our path. It was never known to fail. Sold by J. Wilson.

CINGALESE.—A name well known in connection with the Hair Renewer, which restores grey hair to its natural color by a few weeks use. Sold at 50 cents per bottle by James Wilson.

A REWARD.—Of one dozen "TEABERRY" to any one sending the best four line rhyme on "TEABERRY," the remarkable little gem for the Teeth and Bath. Ask your druggist or address.

AFFAIRS AT OTTAWA.

Government Extravagance—The Tory Party Very Weak Without Sir John Macdonald.

Ottawa letter of Dundas Banner.

During the discussions which have taken place on the Estimates, in the course of which Ministers were called upon to explain the enormous increases which are continually being made in the controllable expenditure, it was made quite apparent that it is no part of the policy of the Government to reduce the burdens of the people by practicing economy in the management of the public service. In every department year by year the increase continues, and it taxed the abilities of the members of the Government to the utmost extent to furnish some plausible excuse for the extravagance indulged in. Indeed in many cases this was not attempted, and the items were forced through committee without any explanation whatever being offered. Everywhere about the House and in the departments one is struck with the large number of employees who are lounging about with apparently no duty to perform. In and about the Commons lobbies the members sometimes find it difficult to push their way about without stumbling over doorknockers, clerks and messengers, and in all the departmental buildings the same system of appointing favorites to positions at handsome salaries, where half the number would suffice, is but too apparent. The Lords, too, are in fact, the leaders in all sorts of extravagant expenditures, and while the estimates were being discussed their Speaker, the Hon. Mr. Macpherson, happened in the gallery, and frowned down upon the Opposition as they dilated upon a number of the items which came up for discussion. But it is next to useless for the Opposition to expect to bring about a different state of affairs so long as Sir John has his subservient majority at his back. Without Sir John, however, the

GOVERNMENT IS AT SEA.

As was clearly perceptible the other day when in his absence, Sir Leonard Tilley tried his hand as leader. His utter incapacity in this respect was so painfully apparent in a very few minutes that he was forced to succumb to the shots fired at him by the Opposition, and Sir Hector Langevin had to come to his rescue and straighten out the tangle into which he had worked himself. Without Sir John's guiding hand, and in the absence of Sir Charles Tupper, the Government would soon prove to be a rope of sand in the hands of the leader of the Opposition who is undoubtedly gaining strength and popularity among the members every day, it being freely admitted by Reformers and Tories alike that his accession to the first place in the House is only a question of time. In the perfecting of legislation, both public and private, Mr. Blake takes a far more prominent part than any member of the Government, and one has only to be in the House a very short time to discover that the supporters of the Government admire his great abilities and his indubitable perseverance, and are ever ready to bid for his assistance in perfecting any measure brought under the consideration of the House. So much is this the case, and so constantly does it occur, that very many of Mr. Blake's friends are often inclined to find fault with him for the great good nature he displays in looking so closely after legislation for which the Government is responsible.

Well Rewarded.

Suicide of a Well-known Stratford Man.

Stratford, May 2.—Jas. Wright, who for many years has occupied the position of store-keeper for the Grand Trunk here, and who was generally respected, shot himself through the head, the ball entering just behind the right ear and passing through the brain. The rash act was committed about 7 a.m. to-day, in the parlor of his own house. Cause not known. He has a large family, who are much sympathized with in their sad affliction. He was much pressed with work, and was very despondent for the past few months, but he had a good position, and was in a well-to-do state. A corner's inquest will be held.

Says Dryden

"She knows her man and when you rant and swear, Can draw you to her with a single hair." But it must be beautiful hair to have such power; and beautiful hair can be ensured by the use of CINGALESE HAIR RESTORER. Sold at 50 cents by J. Wilson.

Thousands are being cured of Catarrh every year with Hall's Catarrh Cure, that he doctors had given up and said could not be cured. 75 cents a bottle. Sold by George R. Wilson, sole agent for Goderich.

Headache, Biliousness, Dyspepsia and Constipation promptly relieved and cured by the use of Dr. Carson's Stomach and Constipation Bitters. As a family medicine they are far superior to pills. In large bottles 50 cents.

Pope Leo XIII.

After his mass, which he says early, Leo XIII. gives audience to Cardinal Jacobini, secretary of state, and formerly Nuncio at Vienna, whose political leaning is rare even in those of his official position. His place is then taken by the cardinal secretary of ecclesiastical affairs and by the congregation of cardinals, each of which has its fixed day.

The several councils generally occupy the whole morning until one hour after midday. The Pope's dinner: a potage, soup, a dish of meat and some cheese; a few minutes suffice for its consumption. While he takes the air in the afternoon—generally in his carriage—he usually reads bishops' reports, all of which come direct into his own hands, the dispatches from the nuncios, and especially particularly near his heart. For it is there that he himself was nuncio from 1843 to 1846, and there that he studied at close quarters a great politician, Leopold I. Toward four o'clock the Pope gives his private and public audiences, and the evening hours are devoted to the reception of bishops. This long day over Leo XIII. regains the solitude of his own closet. Then at last he is able to begin work.

Tall, thin, spare, with his pale and deeply-lined face, the Pope usually has delicate health, of which he takes small care. His austerity is extreme. The spiritual sovereign of 200,000,000 Catholics does not spend 100 francs a month for his table. The energy of a strongly developed nervous system alone enables him to resist the fatigue of his labour and vast responsibility.

He is always grave, or rather solemn; always the Pope. The Italians call his manners and surroundings ceremonious. Gravity is inherent to his nature, as those aver who have known him from his earliest youth. He might be thought stern did he not temper his severity by the patient attention with which he listens—without interruption—to all who speak to him. His audiences are far less frequent than were those of Pius IX., but for that very reason they take up more time. He has not the brilliant side so noticeable in his predecessor, the gentle ease, the fine good humor which endured, notwithstanding the surprising vicissitudes of the last pontificate, nor the frank, bold and genial speech full of witty and happy words, thrown off in that sonorous voice which Pius IX. retained in his extreme old age. Leo XIII. is as slow of speech as the Archbishop of Paris.

The pastorals in which the archbishop of Perugia (this was Cardinal Pecci's office before his election as Pope) was wont to demonstrate the harmony of faith and reason, of religion and civilization, "growing like the flower and fruit from the root of Christianity," were much noticed by Italian publicists. The priest loved to treat the question of the day and of modern society. The illustrious Boughi said to him that he was "one of the most finely balanced and vigorous of characters," that he was "a man who had realized the ideal of a cardinal such as St. Bernard conceived it." Since the eighteenth century since the time of Benedict XIV. and Clement XIV., Rome has not seen a Pope of so cultivated a mind, so accomplished in Latin and Tuscan verse, so familiar at once with classic and with contemporary letters. At the present time the two qualities which Leo XIII. most prizes, and aims most constantly in securing in his writings, are simplicity and moderation. His letters, his encyclicals, all are submitted to the sacred college. Nothing is more admirable than the manner in which he elicits opinions and weighs objections. He has been known to completely rewrite, after grave debates, encyclicals which he had already completed. As he suffers from sleeplessness, it is generally in the night hours that he composes his most immortal works.—(Catholic Review).

THE MILL BONDS.

The proposition of Messrs. Hart & Price to the town council, stating that they would erect a flouring and gristing mill in town, capable of manufacturing one hundred barrels per diem, on condition that they be granted a bonus of $7,500, has been withdrawn, we understand, owing to the fact that it was thought a difficulty would be experienced in passing a by-law for that amount, and a less sum would not suit the projectors of the proposed mill.

A TARDY VOTE OF THANKS.

At the last meeting of the town council deputy-revee Deltor found fault with THE SIGNAL for taking the council to task for its discourteous treatment of Capt. Dancy, on his resignation as chief of the fire department. Mr. Deltor contended that it was impossible for the council to thank Capt. Dancy for his past services, owing to the fact that the resignation, which had been referred to the fire committee, had not been reported upon, and consequently the resignation had not been accepted by the council. If deputy-revee Deltor's opinion in this respect be correct, it reflects discredit upon the fire committee. It is now in the fifth month since Capt. Dancy submitted his resignation to the council, and the fact that no report has been rendered goes far to show that the committee to whom the matter was referred, has been derelict in its duty, and has dilly-dallied when the public interest was at stake. There is not one man of the committee who would act in a similar fashion in a matter pertaining to his private business, and why the committee as a whole should trifle with the matter for over four months is something beyond all reason. The most decorous funeral ever solemnized would be a clear case of rapid transit if contrasted with the slow-coach action of the fire committee of the council. And from what we learn, the committee will not become more expeditious body until such time as some of the members learn to leave their personal animosities outside of the council chamber when they undertake to do the work for which they were elected by the ratepayers. But we are pleased to learn from the minutes of the council that although deputy-revee Deltor took umbrage at the strictures of THE SIGNAL early in the evening, his better judgment came to his relief before the meeting closed, and that he duly signed a resolution moved by councillor Seager, thanking Capt. Dancy, on behalf of the council, for his services as chief of the fire department for the past nine years. And this, too, despite the fact that the slow-paced fire committee has not yet reported on the resignation of Capt. Dancy. The conversion of deputy-revee Deltor to our way of thinking was sudden, we are inclined to admit, but we believe it to be the best genuine one that we have seen.

THE HALIFAX SCARE.

Brady, the principal of the Phoenix Park murderers, will expiate his offence against society on Monday next. It was when he made the nest, underground, at Caraghish and Burke, and after the victims were stricken down, turned back and met Brady's thrust. No doubt can arise in the mind of any thinking person concerning Brady's guilt, and yet we were told that the dynamites so deeply sympathetic with him that they have decided to give manifestations of their sympathy on the 14th inst.—the day upon which he will suffer the last dread penalty of the law. The manifestations, we understand, are to take the form of a series of dynamite and other explosions at certain well-known military positions throughout the Dominion. When the alarm was first given, a terrific panic seized the public, and it was not until the result, but afterwards it was thought by the matter public mind that the possibility of the thing to be accomplished was so remote, and so impracticable, that the chief concern was to be the way to be taken to prevent the thing from being done. The chief concern was to be the way to be taken to prevent the thing from being done. The chief concern was to be the way to be taken to prevent the thing from being done.

How Liquor is Sold in Maine.

Liquor-sellers in Maine are put to strange devices in order to conceal their contraband wares. On a recent police raid in that State, in one house the bottles were found in the well, tightly corked and with strings around their necks for convenience in raising. In another the bottles were under the cooling range in the ash pit. One liquor-seller, a woman, had two fat bottles hooked to a belt which she wore under her overskirt, and another dealer concealed his illicit article beneath a pile of hay in a stable.

What a Scare!

We observe that Mr. Macdonell says that shivered places in the Northwest are subject to early frosts. The whole secret of early frosts is presence of moisture at a great distance from the surface. Land with watery sub-soil is always frosty. On this continent summer frosts have been known to extend as far south as the Gulf States. Where the humidity is roughly drained there can be no summer frosts. But where there is a certain spring subsoil the heat of the sun makes an impression beyond the surface, and the little heat that is accumulated during the day will on a clear night be given off by radiation long before the night is wholly gone, and the temperature of the surface rapidly falls to the freezing point. It is no uncommon thing to see fields of grain in which all the wet places have been cut off by frost, while the drier portions of the field are unharmed. We know of districts which were at one time annually subject to summer frosts where summer frosts are now wholly unknown.

An attempt was made on Saturday to purchase the post-office at Huntington, one. Eight dollars were stolen in the morning, and the post-office was closed.

SHERIDAN'S EXTRADITION

And the Difficulties to be Experienced in According to the Request of the British Government.

New York, May 7.—A Herald's Washington special says: It is understood that Minister West has fully represented to the British Government the embarrassing position in which he is placed by the failure to bring forward evidence necessary for the preliminary hearing in Sheridan's case. It is said that the reasons now alleged for the delay on the part of the home government do not decrease his mortification. Had the accusation never been made against Sheridan the information now in the British office would probably have issued by the demand for the warrant issued by the State Department on the 23rd of February. In Sheridan's case the evidence on which the Dublin Grand Jury may find indictments, while it might be sufficient to convict the accused under a special court of three judges created by the Irish Crimes Act, would not warrant their surrender by this government under the treaty issued by a series of broken precedents. The evidence must establish the commission of murder or assault with intent to murder. Even if the indictment and evidence should appear on presentation to establish their guilt, still the United States would demand a jury to be sworn, according to the criminal law in the case of assassination or murder. It is now well understood that our Government does not recognize such a crime as a political offence.

DYNAMITE SCARE.

Great Excitement at Halifax, N.S.—Is It a Big Boon?

Halifax, N. S., May 7.—A startling letter has been received by Lieut. Governor Archibald warning him of the expected visit to Halifax of two suspicious American vessels, and cautioning him to have precautions taken for the safety of life and property in and about the city. The letter contained information which at once started the military and naval authorities into action, and steps are being taken to have everything in readiness should reason of severe measures be required. Col. Clarke on Sunday communicated to the officers at the barracks information, said to be from Sir John Macdonald, that two suspicious vessels, named, it was believed, by Fenians, and carrying a quantity of torpedoes and other dangerous explosives, had sailed from Boston a few days ago, and were thought intended to make Halifax their destination. On arriving here it was ascertained the torpedoes with which the vessels were laden would be laid, as opportunity offered, beneath water of the harbor, with the intention of blowing up shipping entering or leaving. Particular mention was made of an extraordinary watch to be kept on the 14th inst., the day on which Brady, one of the Phoenix Park murderers is to be executed. Sentries stationed at various points in the city have been instructed to be careful whom they allow to enter the gates at which they watch.

MACDONELL'S LITTLE BILL.

Six Hundred Dollars for Nine Days' Work.

Ottawa, May 5.—In the committee on public accounts this morning, Mr. Ross inquired respecting an account of J. A. Macdonell, of Toronto, for looking into the title of the land purchased for the Hamilton custom house. He drew attention to the fact that $93.90 were paid him for this service. He was allured $20 per day during a stay of nine days in Hamilton and his expenses. Besides, some of the items are rather peculiar. For instance, the sum of $1 is charged for calling to see Mr. McInnes, who was not in; $2 is charged for a cab, and another dollar when Mr. McInnes was again not in. An item of 1 per cent on the value of the property is charged, making a sum of $550. In passing the title. Many other items bring up the sum to the total first stated.

The Printing Job.

The Chatham Herald is disposed to take a topographical view of the recent printing scandal. It says: "What price were paid for the work can be seen by any person, but what price we paid was a private matter of our own. The loss to the Government, much less of important proprietors of Grit sheets."

Cementing Jail Delivery.

Six prisoners escaped from St. Paul, Minn., jail Friday evening. They sawed the lock of one cell and they slipped to the night watchman that a prisoner was hanging himself. The watchman entered the cell and was knocked down, and his keys taken away and then the other cells were unlocked.

A Senator's Domestic Difficulties.

San Francisco, May 8.—Complaint was filed in the First Judicial District, Nevada, last Wednesday, by Theresa Fairbank T. G. Fair, charging adultery on the part of defendant. The affidavit revealed an association of some of the standing of the defendant and the great wealth of Fair. The resulting opinion is the Senator was able the settlement of property as determined by his counsel. Godfrey's bill, pending amount is agreed upon. The bill in cash and a million and a half in real estate. The case was closed in 1882.

Abundant.

Our farmers have at last got started at their seedling. Some are done. Mr. Mitchell, of Blyth, heads a starting a harness shop here in a few days.

"UNCLE TOM"

Death of the Veteran Teacher, Josiah Benson.

A telegram received Sunday morning by Mr. William Barry, of this city, announces the death of the late Mr. Josiah Benson. He was born in the State of Maryland in June, 1788, and had consequently reached the great age of ninety-four years. Forty-two years of his life were spent in slavery, and the fact that he was a man of far more than ordinary ability, coupled with the admission of Mrs. Benson that she was that she was the original of her condition for a number of years, and that she was not of so dark a complexion as those of her race, and so far as the general appearance of the late teacher, Mrs. Benson's statement is entirely correct. The story of his early life, however, is a thrilling one, and the more so by the fact that by extraordinary efforts and violence he brought his wife and family to Canada with him. It was on the morning of October 28, 1830, that Josiah Benson crossed the river from Canada and landed in Canada, where he was housed in a barn, and the school rolled in the sand, soiled hands of it and kissed them, and jumped about so wildly that the spectators thought he was mad. "Uncle Tom" finally settled in Bothwell, at intervals taking lecturing tours throughout the country, and on one occasion visited England, where he was invited to Windsor Castle and treated with marked respect by the Queen. In politics he was a consistent Liberal. Two sons and a daughter survive him.

There is a great bonum in our village just now.

Mr. Andrew Beck who has been sick most all winter is getting round again. J. R. Miller, school inspector, visited the school last week, and made several pronouncements.

Mrs. H. Y. Attrill and family have got home again to the "Oaks," their beautiful residence, after an eight months' trip to Europe.

Mr. Thomas McLean, who for the past seven years has been foreman for Mr. Peter McEwan, in his saltworks, being about to remove to the North-west, was, previous to going, presented by those employed about the works with a handsome gold pin, and an address, as a mark of their esteem, to which he feelingly replied.

S. S. ENTERTAINMENT.

For some years past the younger members of the Sunday School here have been in the habit of raising money for Sunday school purposes by entertainments, consisting of songs, recitations and dialogues, and on Wednesday evening last the most successful of these came off. Long before the time for commencing the hall was well filled, and before 8 o'clock all the standing room was also occupied. Mr. Joseph Beck was called to the chair. The order throughout the evening was very good, and the various parts were gone through without any mistakes. Those taking part were—Jessie Morris, Grace Allen, Miss Annie Morris, Miss McDonald, Messrs. Charles, James and Willie Stewart, Flora McLean, Maud Guilders, Nettie Green, Annie and Martha McIntyre, Annie and Mary Fritzy, Bella J. Stewart, Lizzie Sands, Katie McDonald, Jennie Morris, Willie G. Stewart, Katie Wells, Maud Martin, Geo. McIntyre. Those taking part in the dialogues, which were excellent, were Jane Collinson, Marion Sands, Evelyn Martin, Charity Long, Willie and Hector McQuarrie, Edwin Morris, John Lasham. Two very nicely rendered duets were given by Miss Mellick and Miss L. Papst. At the conclusion a vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Moore and those who took part, for presenting such an intellectual treat.

Thomas Clark, Jr. will know trap, hunter, etc., was successful in securing six red foxes during this winter, besides a large number of skunk, coon, etc.

Mr. Thomas Garvey is erecting a large barn thirty-six by eighty feet, with some underground stables, eight feet high. Sketches are made by E. Stannard, Goderich, and carpenterwork by C. and W. Morris of Goderich.

George Bell, Mr. Nicholas Harvey had a fine catch of trout, some of which he has sold as bass, and good quality of Wells' beer. The boys made the sawing, and in the evening they set down to a splendid supper set up by the Misses Hensley.

CHALIVARD.—Jas. Barker was united in the bonds of matrimony a few days ago, and the boys demanded a keg of beer, and on his refusal they gathered at night with guns, horns, cow-bells, etc., and made the night hideous with discordant noises.

FISHING.—The creeks and streams in this neighborhood are swarmed with suckers. The well-known Buckley Creek near here is thronged by people day and night, fishing. It is a common thing for a twelve year old boy to catch a big fall in an open hour.

Mr. Donald Cunningham, the Dundee architect, erected a house for one of his citizens in the vicinity of Kilmuir, and the first not being out of the ground he put it up on temporary blocks, and then when the first would be set they might be replaced by better ones. He got the house finished on the outside on Saturday night, and when he returned on Monday, he found the house was astonished to find the building had expanded over to the ground, and he was obliged to demolish it. The architect set to work, and by the aid of his assistants, men, and Mr. Duncanson's skill, he was able to reconstruct the building in its original position, and it is now ready for occupancy.

On Monday morning, about 3 o'clock the Fountain House, kept by Joseph E. Brenner, at Grand Bend, was totally destroyed by fire. The fire originated in the stable. Three horses and one cow got burnt. A commercial traveller who stopped at the house lost a span of horses, a wagon, and all his samples. The Stable Bridge was considerably damaged. Total loss about $4,000, which is partly covered by insurance, cause of fire not known.

Joderich Township.

Mr. Thomas Cottle, one day last week while pulling out stumps with the horses, had the misfortune to get kicked by one of the animals. He was thought at first to be dangerously hurt, but is now recovering very fast.

On Saturday last while Mr. and Mrs. Alex Taylor, of the Bayfield road were driving to the Goderich railway station to proceed to Paisley, to attend the funeral of a nephew at that place, the horses ran away, and Mr. Taylor was thrown out. She sustained severe injuries to the spine, but, we understand, serious consequences are not apprehended.

It is reported that Mr. Thomas Gordon formerly of this township, who took his departure for Michigan last autumn, is dead. A telegram was received by Mr. Swallow, of Clinton, on Saturday last to that effect. His wife and family have the deep sympathy of the entire community as Mr. Gordon had made many friends by his courteous and unassuming manner.

Dunlop.

ARRIVED STILL.—Last week my Leeburn confere indulged in a little boating on the question of horseflesh, but we think he will have to take water after all. Our Yorkshireman has just refused $200 for "Cob." $100 has also been refused for a ten months old colt, and $200 for a 7 year old mare Brown Bess. These nags were raised in our town, and so was Punch, of whom Webster Brown boasts so loudly. His late owner could not get horses to suit him in Leeburn, and left that haulet and came here for Punch. Our horses can out-draw, out-trot and out-jump any nag in Leeburn that ever pulled through a collar. Let the chronicler of that clachaun give us a rest on the horse question.

Obit.—We this week announce the death of Mr. Prince Morris, who passed away at Joliet, Mich., on the 22nd inst., in his 75th year. The deceased was a native of Wiltshire, Eng., and settled in Colborne in 1834. He was for many years a county constable, and it used to be his duty during the sittings of court to wait upon the grand jury. A few years ago he removed to Michigan. Two of his sons, Charles and William are respected residents of Goderich. He was elder brother of Mr. John Morris, of Morrisdale, who is one of the few left of those who first settled on the 9th and 10th con., of Colborne, and changed the forest wilds into smiling farms.

Arthur Sullivan, the well known music composer; George Grove, editor and writer, and George A. MacFarren, Mus. Doc., have been created knights.

Mr. Justice Torrance on Monday, gave formal judgment at Montreal, annulling the Jacques Cartier (local) election with costs against Mr. Mousseau. The writ has already been issued for a new election. So far Mr. Mousseau is the only candidate.

FIRE AND SWORD:

A STORY OF THE MASSACRE OF GLENCOE.

CHAPTER XVII.

THE MAIN ON THE ROAD.

"betrayed, lads, I fear," exclaimed on jumping to his feet with the sudden resolve of a night journey. Inverary was a snow-capped hill. "The Earl, and we have been betrayed," said Barcaldine and Captain Drummond, a sacrifice of well nigh twenty years of precious time. Let us while we remain here all conspire to work together for we are at the mercy of the Jacobites, whose humanity is as the snows we are thus forced to see is indeed extreme, and the agent," said John, the Chief's son. "But, sire, you forget your own difficulty and length of the season of the year, and the of a night journey among the with to-morrow's dawn—"

"Nay, my son," hotly interrupted the old Chief, "I will not listen to counsel. You speak in your own name, but of my people, I truly know; but my people's property and lives depend on the success of the journey, and I am expiate, if need be, my fatal mistake in the matter of my son's life with my blood. If I were concerned in the issue, I would not care to see the consequences as becomes a descendant of a race of Chiefs who were never fled from death; but people, lads! my people! my people!" and overcome with strong emotions the brave and high minded old man wept copious tears.

"Courage, M'Ian, courage!" said the old man, in a firm tone of voice. "All yet lost. Come the worst there are two hundred claymores in the army of one of which will seek with a hair of M'Ian's head is in your hands. I give you a fair play we have some hope for, and little to fear. Danger, or come death, every man will stand or fall by the side of his beloved Chief!"

By Malcolm's passion, to and the old man, M'Ian threw back his long, thick flowing locks of white hair, which had fallen over his face in the collapse wrought by his grief, and gazed with admiration and pride on the glowing countenance and animated form of the brave young Highlander.

"My noble son, for I love to think you such," he said; "your words have stung my sinking heart with energy. All is, indeed, not lost, but with little of real hope remains must be tested at once by a speedy resumption of our journey to the Sheriff's chambers at Inverary. For his suspense is maddening. To our feet, lads, and let us boldly face the worst," and acting on his own suggestion, the heroic old Chief began arranging the folds of his shoulder plaid, and, seizing up his bonnet and staff, stood presently ready to go.

"To what length shall we time our journey for the night?" asked Malcolm, as he and John, the Chief's son, prepared themselves for the road.

"To Kilchurn, and beyond it," answered M'Ian. "If there is truth in Barcaldine's words—though I gravely doubt it—the Earl may be snowbound there for the night; if not, we can push on to Cladich, and refreshing there, post on to our journey's end."

"A long, hard walk," suggested John, the Chief's son.

"I shall not close my eyes till it is accomplished," added M'Ian, "let us go, lads, let us go; but where's Glenbucket?—call Glenbucket to show us out."

"Glenbucket is a-bed," said a voice, "but I am here," and the door was promptly pushed up by Barcaldine, who stared at sight of his guest's thus attracted for the road—with unfeigned surprise.

"Why, my dear Glencoe," he began, "you don't surely tempt death by venturing the road to-night? It's madness, consider the risks and discomfort; no, no, my good friend, I could not allow myself to aid and abet such foolhardiness. Pray uncover yourselves, supper will be on the table in half an hour; sit down, good friends, sit down."

The countenance of the Glencoe men darkened into hate as they looked on the hard face of their host. His friendship concealed a drawn dagger, they very well knew, and the irony of fate in their case lay in the fact that their helpless circumstances forbade them resenting it. To openly doubt and quarrel with Barcaldine was to incur the resentment and malice of the Earl, whose mental slave he was. The Glencoe men, therefore, could only venture on silence and suggestive lowerings of the brows.

"You will sit to supper, M'Ian, and bed with us to-night," the Earl may yet be here," added Barcaldine, affecting real interest in his guest's distress.

"Only the glouids of heaven will, canopy my head to-night," replied the old Chief. "We cannot even wait for supper. Every passing half hour is precious—deeply so. Pray send a domestic to discover to us the way out."

"You will allow me then to share with you a deoch-an-dorris?" said Barcaldine, summoning a domestic the next moment.

"Nay, I forbid it, sir," answered M'Ian. "We have no further time to waste on social pasty; pray, sir, show us the way out."

"You will not stay—will not await the Earl's coming?" retorted Barcaldine in a sneering tone. "Then I can only say that I very much admire your great devotion to our common King, as shown in your urgency to formally 'submit' yourself to him," and moving towards the door, he proceeded to show his guests the way out, without awaiting the arrival of the domestic he had just summoned.

"God save the King!" shouted the braggart Captain over their heads as they descended the steps fronting the outer door, he having by accident arrived on the scene—"God save the King!"

"Over the water," added M'Ian, sub voce to Malcolm, whose eyes gleamed sudden fire at the words.

"God, I could claymore the red-coated scoundrel!" he ejaculated, turning half round on the throat.

"Caution, Malcolm, caution," said M'Ian putting a gently restraining hand on his shoulder. "Our heads are in the lions' mouths; discretion is here the trusty part of courage; let us be pushing yont," and emerging on the main road they wrapped their shoulders and strode vigorously forward.

"The wily old fox is ill to trap, Captain," remarked Barcaldine, as the outer door closed on the Glencoe party.

"Jacobites at heart—white-feathered Jacobites at heart," replied the Captain. "I am certain I heard the old rebel Over-the-water my toast of the King's health in an under breath as he stepped down the stairs. The devil go with them and send them as much snow and wind by the way as will pepper their rebel blood into perdition!"

"Ay, sooth, Captain, you speak rightly," rejoined Barcaldine; "rebel Jacobites at heart they are truly. The old fox has only come out of his hole among the hills at the last moment. His proffered 'submission' manifested expediency rather than loyalty, and comes so late that it has not the merit of grace and sincerity. Besides the date of mercy is past, he proffered the oath beyond acceptance. To-day the Earl left Glencoe on a journey to Sir John Dalrymple, Master of Stair, now in London, carrying with him news of the Glencoe party's non-submission, which will gladden Sir John's heart much. He will at once proceed to put the fact of M'Ian's rebellious attitude before the King, who will then formally sign a warrant of execution against the men of the Glen. Captain, the old fox, his cubs and his family of thieves are trapped at last."

"God save the King!" again shouted the braggart Captain, with whom all kinds of diplomacy were held as fair in war, "and may the rebel rascal and family and adherents be forced to live on white cockades, thistle tops and boiled heather until such times as the just wrath of the King overtakes them!"

"And that reckoning will come soon, Captain," answered Barcaldine, "meanwhile we have done the Earl a service by delaying Glencoe's audience of Sir Colin, the Sheriff. They will flounder all night among the hill snows, and at last seek the shelter of some shepherd's cot till the day break, and in this way we have stolen a twenty-four hours' march on the enemy."

"Outflanked him," said the Captain. "Outflanked him," accented Barcaldine. "But come, Captain, supper awaits us 'but the house,' as the facetious Glenbucket would phrase it. You and I shall have our curiosity satisfied in tasting a supper served up at Barcaldine's house which has not been prepared under the fussy surveyorship of the indispensable Glenbucket. He still sleeps. Requiescat in pace!"

"Pop the knave, Barcaldine; pop the mad knave!" laughingly rejoined the Captain, as the pair adjourned to the supper table.

The night had set in on the hills when the Glencoe party left Barcaldine House.

The journey they had set themselves to face was a formidable one, considering the state of the weather and the season of the year. The giant ranges of hills which lay stretched before them were covered from top to base with the recently fallen snows, which also lay deeply drifted along the uneven hill paths, and down in the hollows of the numerous ravines and intersecting gullies.

The different ranges of hills through and across which they had to pass, comprised, perhaps, as wild and desolate districts within their radius as were to be found in the whole Argyllshire Highlands; to attempt to traverse them would have been futile, if not, indeed, fatal, to any but thoroughbred mountaineers accustomed to exertion, exposure and hill-climbing daily.

"A bad night for walking," said John, the Chief's son, as the party floundered knee-deep through the drifts of snow which the wind had whirled into the hollows of the road.

"If the snow only holds we may be thankful," replied Malcolm.

"There will be more snow to-night, lads," added M'Ian; "the moon will be through in half an hour, and the snow-dusted path be as clear as daylight. Heaven favors our exertions—God be praised!"

It was M'Ian's intention, if his strength held out, to pass southwards to Ardchattan, taking the short hills paths were practicable; cross Soch Etive by the ferry emerging on the Muckkairn district; then hold south-eastwards along the wild and lonely pass of Brander, under the impending shadow of Ben Craschan; and descend thus on Loch Awe and Kilchurn. If the Earl was there, as Barcaldine had led them to believe he was, he would receive the confession of their "submission" and rest them for the night. If Barcaldine's statement was proven to have been false—the Earl not having been there—then they would push on to the little hamlet of Cladich, where a shepherd cousin of Malcolm's would provide them with rest and refreshment for a brief space before descending on Inverary.

The journey was a long and weary one. The open road, when they held it by, was rough and rocky, and when they left it, amid the snow-covered banks of furze and heather were numerous rubby morasses and wet boggy patches of ground, across which they dragged their sinking steps wearily, but with uncomplaining effort. As M'Ian had predicted, they had now advantage of a clear moonlit way, and the manifold intersections of the endless chains of hills, and dales, and glens, which surrounded them, heap upon heap, were everywhere visible for miles of country, as often as their feet surmounted some natural elevation of the road.

In little more than an hour they had come within view of Loch Etive, and rousing up the old boatman of the Loch, whom they had found asleep in his turf-habit but before a smouldering fire of peat, they expressed, in brief words, their wish to be straightway ferried across.

"A cauld night, gentlemen—a cauld night," said the old boatman, speaking in a homely Gaelic; "and may your honors be?" and, shaking the chill out of his body by a violent shrug of his massive shoulders, he approached close on M'Ian, and peered inquisitively into his plaid-muffled face—for there was no light in the hut other than what resided in the red glow of the peat fire, or was reflected from the moonlit snows outside through the open door.

"Ask no questions, Goodman, but bring your boat ashore," said M'Ian, thrusting a gratuity into the old boatman's ready hand.

"Och, yea, to be surely, sirs; I'll be ready with her in twa winks," promptly replied the old boatman. "Here, my good lad, tak' ye don the oars" (handing Malcolm a pair of long poles, with spread ends, which the lagging fancy reluctantly construed into oars). "Now, come awa, lads, come awa."

In a few minutes the party were seated in a flat bottomed coble, and John and Malcolm taking each an oar, the boat by a sheer exercise of muscle, was heavily driven through the dark waters of the Loch, which was better than a mile broad.

"She's touch a wee to pu'," remarked the old boatman, "but haud at her lads, she'll put the shiver out o' your blood. Whew! but that's a cauld blast that's sweeping doon the Loch, and there's a bit white cap on the water, too, but deil a fear o' us, lads, the boat's as steady as a safe's the Ben."

In this wise the garrulous old boatman of the Loch ran on, alternately praising the "lads'" strength and skill in handling the "oars" and in repeated assurances that she (the coble) was as "safe" as the shore, lads, and twice as comfortable, moreover, and the faintest twinkle of humor twitched the old boatman's puckered lips as he spoke.

If the comfort of the coble could be successfully disputed, there could be no rational doubt of its prevailing safety. The coble it is true, might possibly sink under a sheer dead weight, but it's deep-draughted "claucht" of the Loch water, as the old ferryman phrased it, put the capsizing of it at any time out of all rational consideration.

"She's sair to lift, lads, sair to lift," he added, as they neared the opposite shore; "but she's naething to what I've seen her, wi' half a score of antlered stags lying in the stow end o' her, along wi' her dozen o' the Earl's gillies and there yowlin' collie dogs along wi' them, forbye as many bags an' guns as would serve a hail parish. Had ye the rowin' o' Nancy across the Loch wi' sic a load as that, lads, the devil himself wadna escape the angry ban o' your netted tongue. But here's the shore, lads; pu' saft, an' dinna grant her on the chuckies; there's, that's it clean; took the bank like a weel whappit trout."

Leaping ashore, the Glencoe party found themselves at the innermost end of a creek a little south of Bonaw. So bidding the garrulous old ferryman a kindly good-even, they presently resumed their journey by the road.

They were now in the parish of Muckkairn, and the top of Ben Craschan—the lord of the surrounding hills—was already described in the clear night air, though still distant from them several miles.

The lonely and desolate pass of Brander—its natural loneliness and desolation intensified into awe-inspiring solemnity by the time of night and season of the year—now lay stretched snake-like before them for the length of several miles. For the greater part of the way their path lay parallel with and ran close by the course of the river Awe, whose hoarse flood was heard filling the deep silence of the night, as it hurried southwards to fling itself into the waters of the Loch.

It was now nine o'clock by the stroke of a neighboring parish kirk bell, and many miles still intervened between them and Kilchurn, with the little hamlet of Cladich, beyond it. But resolutely they held on; and M'Ian footsore and weary, uttered no weak complaint, but, feeling that life or death awaited the success of his self-imposed mission, he pushed heroically on till at length the mighty shadow of the Ben lay behind them, and they once more stood within view of the district where, under different circumstances, they had the previous midsummer attended Broadalbane's conference at Glencoe.

They did not, however, turn up the road leading round by the head of Loch Awe, which now lay spread before them, but sought to be ferried across the Loch water, as before they had crossed Loch Etive.

Lights were seen gleaming about the arched roadway which gave access to the massive insular Castle, and the Glencoe men "hillo'd" lustily from the shore.

In quick response a boat put off from the Castle, and in a few minutes had approached to within hail of them. Three men were aboard, two of whom wrought the oars, while the third man, who seemed from his dress and manner to be their superior, sat at the tiller.

"What's your commands?" asked the man at the tiller, having previously ordered the gillies to cease rowing.

"If the Earl of Broadalbane's within the Castle wall," spoke M'Ian "tell him Macdonald of Glencoe urgently wishes to see him."

"The Earl is not within the walls of Kilchurn," promptly replied the other, "nor has he been with us for a month. He left Glencoe this morning for London on court business. Will you rest and refresh for the night?"

M'Ian waved his hand forbiddingly, and turned sharp away from the spot. Smitting to the heart at the discovery of Barcaldine's treachery, he staggered forward a few paces, and would have fallen but for the support lent him by his sons.

Then, suddenly recovering possession of his mind, he firmly shook himself free of the supporting arms which were round his hips, and turning once more his gaze towards the boat on the loch, he signalled its approach, and asked for a conveyance across the lake.

The request was promptly acceded to, and within a quarter of an hour the party found themselves on the east shore of Loch Awe, and were presently struggling once more forward on their journey in the direction of Cladich.

They had still half-a-score of weary miles to cover ere seeking their much needed rest for the night, and the shepherd of Cladich was roused from a deep sleep by the barking of his dogs, and a loud knocking at the door of his hut between one and two o'clock on the following morning, to admit strangers whose importunity was unceasing and demonstrative; and on opening his door he fervently ejaculated: "God be wi' us, friends, belated on the roads or what?" expressed in true terms the depth and sincerity of his astonishment.

Still greater was his amazement to find after a moment's suspension of his senses, that his cousin Malcolm and the Chief of Glencoe were his self-invited guests.

There was no time for parley, however. The party very obviously all wanted immediate rest, and within the shortest space of time a couple of rude beds had been hastily extemporized; and throwing their exhausted bodies on them, the Glencoe men were presently sunk in a brief but heavy sleep.

OUR TOWN FATHERS.

The Minutes of the Last Meeting - What was Done.

Friday, May 4th, 1883. The regular meeting of the town council was held this evening.

The members were all present with the exception of councillor Colborne, who was absent owing to illness.

The minutes of last meeting were read and approved.

THE TREASURER'S REPORT showed balance of cash on hand on April 30th to be, $1,386.81 - Filed.

THE STREET INSPECTOR'S REPORT showed an expenditure since last report of $38.75; also a statement respecting the watering streets. Referred to finance committee.

THE SEXTON'S REPORT showed the interments in Maitland cemetery since last report to be 3 adults and 2 infants - Filed.

COMMUNICATIONS. A communication was received from the secretary of the curling club, stating that 700 pounds of flour were at Nairn's store to the order of the relief committee, as a donation from the curling club to the poor of the town.

Moved by reeve Johnston, seconded by councillor Nicholson, that the council tender a vote of thanks to the curling club for their generous donation to the poor of the town - Carried.

A communication was read from Capt. J. R. Miller, conveying the thanks of No. 1 Co., 33rd Batt., to the council for the use of the council chamber for the recent military ball - Filed.

Councillor Jordan suggested that, now the sawdust was removed from the body of the hall, a strip of matting be placed in the aisle.

A communication was read from the North American Chemical Co., with reference to a railway siding. Referred to public works committee.

Als communications were received from Crystal & Black, and from W. S. McKay and others, relating to street improvements. Referred to public works committee.

A communication was read from W. S. Hart & Co., asking for a bonus of $7,500, to enable them to erect a gristing and flouring mill in the town of Goderich. Referred to special committee.

A petition was read from the fire company, asking for an increase of $150 in their grant, so that a competent fire warden could be secured.

Moved by reeve Johnston, seconded by councillor Murney, that the petition be referred to the fire committee.

Councillor Seager thought the matter was urgent, and should not be laid over, and moved, seconded by councillor Sloane, that it be considered with the fire committee's report.

Messrs. Johnston and Murney consented to the amendment.

ACCOUNTS. A number of accounts were received and referred to finance committee.

REPORT OF RELIEF COMMITTEE. From councillor Mitchell, showing expenditure for relief for St. Patrick's ward from January 18 to May to be $39.25.

From councillor Elliott for St. David's ward during April, $3.75. From councillor Seager, that he had examined carefully into the case of Mrs. Ames, an indigent person in St. Andrew's ward, and that he had given an order on the treasurer to Mr. Hucklestep for $2.00 weekly, and would recommend that it be continued until the weekly boats begin running to the South, when Mrs. Ames can then be sent to her friends - Adopted.

FINANCE COMMITTEE'S REPORT. (1) That the following accounts be paid: E. Graham, $2.81; Rich'd Bonamy, $4; D. Ferguson, $9.28; W. S. Hart & Co., $16.06; Mrs. Mitchell, $10; John Hillier, $5; George Grant, $34. (2) Respecting communication of the treasurer, we recommend that the clerk notify the treasurer to honor the orders of the following parties only, and no others: The mayor and clerk, the members of the relief committee for wood, the secretary of the school committee for school expenditure, counter-signed by the chairman. (3) We also recommend that the mayor, the chairman of finance committee and the clerk be authorized to arrange with M. C. Cameron, Esq., with respect to back taxes on part of lot 12, block A. All of which is respectfully submitted.

J. C. DETLOR, chairman.

FIRE COMMITTEE'S REPORT. 1. That we have had the communication of the secretary of the fire committee before us for an additional grant of $200. We cannot recommend the council to grant the same, but beg leave to recommend that the sum of $270 in all be granted the fire company for the year 1883 - this being $50 more than they are now receiving. (2) We would also recommend that a by-law be prepared and submitted for the consideration of the council at its next sitting, defining the duties and powers of the fire company, and giving the council some control over its management.

JOHN BUTLER, chairman. Moved by councillor Butler, seconded by councillor Elliott, that it be adopted.

Mr. Seager thought it was important that we should have an efficient fire department and head. He did not think any other man could fill the position as well as Capt. Dancy. The fire company should be under council control, and we should have a by-law to that effect.

A desultory discussion then took place. The mayor said that there were two or three by-laws on the subject, and all that was needed was revision.

Mr. Seager had been led to believe that the duties of a fire chief were merely nominal, when in reality they were of an extremely onerous nature.

The clerk stated that he had been unable to find that Captain Dancy had ever been appointed chief of the fire company.

Moved by councillor Seager, seconded by councillor Sloane, in amendment, that Capt. T. N. Dancy be appointed fire warden at a salary of $100 a year.

Mr. Johnston thought the amendment was out of order. It required a month's notice to repeal a by-law.

Mr. Murney had always understood the fire company to be a volunteer body. It now turned out they were paid; and when they were paid, they should be under control of the town council. The eleven firemen had received $20 a year, and the public should know that fact.

The mayor stated that the amount paid the fire company was always published in the annual financial report. There was no secrecy about the matter.

Mr. Jordan was willing to vote to Capt. Dancy all that could be given to retain his services, as he was an exceptionally good man, but did not think the town finances would stand as heavy a strain as $100. He suggested a compromise of $75.

Mr. Seager would cheerfully agree to the suggestion of Mr. Jordan, but understood Capt. Dancy would not accept less than $100.

Mr. Nicholson believed $270 a year to the fire company was as much as the town could afford. If the firemen wanted to bonus a particular captain, they should be prepared to pay him the extra amount out of their own allowance.

Mr. Butler said the fire committee had considered the matter in all its bearings. Capt. Dancy was, no doubt, a good man, but if he unfortunately died or anything happened to him, other men would be found to take his place.

At the recent fires, where he failed to appear, the company had managed to get on all right without him.

Mr. Seager - The question is whether we shall retain the services of Captain Dancy or not.

The mayor thought the town was certainly greatly indebted to Capt. Dancy for his services in connection with the fire department for a number of years. He was economically inclined, but would like to retain Capt. Dancy if the cost of that gentleman's services was not too high.

Mr. Johnston said it was only courteous to accept the report of any committee, and couldn't see why the report of the fire committee was made an exception of.

Mr. Seager understood some concession would have to be made or the fire company would become disorganized.

The mayor stated the amendment was out of order.

Mr. Bingham understood Capt. Dancy would not act for less than $100. It would be of no use to fix the rate at $100, if that sum would be refused.

Mr. Dettlor believed the report should be referred back to the fire committee, together with the new petition, so that the whole matter could be reconsidered and carefully weighed in all its bearings.

Mr. Butler was willing to withdraw the report were it not for a rumor that the fire company was at present in a disorganized state.

Mr. Dettlor didn't think the council was to be governed in its action by mere hearsay. There was no definite information before the council that the fire company was not in a thoroughly organized condition.

Mr. Bingham corroborated the statement of Mr. Butler, with reference to the rumored disorganization of the fire company.

The mayor said the present embargo was through no fault of the fire committee. The petition from the fire company was the first real statement submitted by that body to this council.

Mr. Seager did not think the firemen would become disorganized and leave the town in the lurch. He believed the members of the company were all honorable men.

Moved by councillor Seager, seconded by councillor Sloane, that the petition of the fire company and the preparation of a by-law organizing a fire company and appointing officers in accordance with law be referred to the fire committee, with instructions to communicate with Capt. Dancy, and ascertain whether he will accept the position of fire warden, and at what salary - Carried.

Mr. Elliott was not in favor of a larger increase than $50. He thought that amount would pay anyone to occupy the position.

Mr. Butler in reply to the statement of Mr. Seager concerning the honorable reputation of the men who composed the fire company, said he hoped they would act more honorably than their captain had done. That official, when he tendered his resignation, had promised to act until his successor was appointed, but had failed to fulfil his obligation. At the last two fires the captain had given no assistance of any kind, but good work was done by the company independent of his valuable services.

Mr. Seager thought it was not right for any member of the council to asperse Capt. Dancy, when that gentleman was precluded from speaking in his own behalf.

Mr. J. C. Dettlor availed himself of the opportunity to protest against the strictures of one of the town newspapers on the conduct of the town council, in not according a vote of thanks to Captain Dancy on the occasion of his retirement from the command of the fire company.

He thought the article in the paper was uncalculated for, inasmuch as Capt. Dancy's resignation had not yet been accepted by the council, no report on the subject having been rendered by the fire committee, to whom the resignation was referred.

Until the resignation was duly accepted by the council it was premature for any action to be taken to thank Capt. Dancy for his services, although the said services had been of a most valuable nature.

This reply raised another "go-as-you-please" discussion, some of the members sitting with Mr. Dettlor, and others taking exception to him.

On motion the fire committee's report was referred back to committee.

REPORT OF PUBLIC WORKS COMMITTEE. 1. We would recommend that Mr. Swaffield be paid the sum of $4, in payment for the stone claimed by him and removed from off the street near his premises, although we do not consider the council in any way liable, and we make this recommendation without prejudice, in case Mr. Swaffield refuses to accept, and thinks proper to take legal proceedings. (2) In regard to council

By E. B. at a motion referred to council and it was announced that the office of the street inspector be not abolished, but that it be understood that the street inspector perform faithfully all the duties imposed upon him by the several laws and resolutions of this council:

and that the clerk furnish the street inspector with a certified copy of the several by-laws and resolutions pertaining thereto.

E. BRIGHAM, chairman. Moved by councillor Bingham, seconded by deputy-reeve Dettlor, that the report be adopted.

Moved in amendment by councillor Butler, seconded by councillor Nicholson, that Mr. Swaffield receive the sum of $5 - Carried.

Moved by councillor Murney, seconded by councillor Nicholson, that three street lamps be placed at the harbor, at most expedient points, parties at the harbor agreeing to have lamps lighted and lights put out without expense to the town. Referred to public works committee.

Moved by councillor Jordan, seconded by deputy-reeve Dettlor, that the expediency of enlarging the town hall, so that it can be used for public entertainments, be referred to the public works committee to report on, and to suggest an expedient plan with probable cost of same.

On motion council adjourned.

A Town Council. For style, Port Hope council takes the cake. The mayor dons an official robe, while the council sports dresscoats, and the attending policemen wear a becoming uniform.

But the galling part of the programme is, that the reporters attend in ordinary dress - and everyone knows a newspaper man can't afford to be very stylish about his toggery. - [Cobourg Sentinel-Star.]

Early Closing. To whom it may concern. In 1881 the leading merchants of the town agreed to shut up at 7 p.m. except on Saturdays.

Some still hold to their agreement, while others soon neglected it, their stores being open till 8 or 9 p.m. to catch late customers, many of whom would prefer other stores.

Now, as the Golden Rule is for every one, the ladies are respectfully requested to do their shopping before tea, to remove the cause of "late hours" - and the merchant to order their stores to be closed at 7 p.m. sharp, for "all work and no play makes Jack a Dull Boy."

Benn Miller. QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY. - The Benn Miller brass band announces by a large and handsome poster that they will hold their third annual picnic at the falls on the 24th inst.

Arrangements have been made for feasting and dancing, and a string band will furnish the music for the latter. The brass band will play their choicest airs during the day.

The Benn Miller band generally do things up well, and visitors from Goderich (there will be many, we think) can count on a warm welcome and good treatment.

Conspirators for Sale. The moral in the case of men like James Stephen, the head and front of a former Fenian conspiracy, and Peter Tyrnan, the Number One of the Irish Invincibles, if it be true that the Government has accepted information at his hands, appears to be that if you go into a conspiracy at all it is better to be the biggest villain of the lot than one of the mere tools.

The fate of the mere tools, who have to do all the stabbing and run all the risk, is to be dragged to the gallows on the testimony of the big villains, whose necks are saved by the free use of their tongues.

All the talk in the world will never convince anybody that the men who took the lives of Cavendish and Burke, were patriots. We hear a deal about the unjustness of the land laws and the harshness of the landlords, but what did car-drivers, town councillors, hackmen and road-makers, care about the land laws or the landlords?

They had nothing to do with either the one or the other, and were not affected by them. Not one of the Phoenix Park gang was a tenant farmer. The truth seems to be that as long as they were prepared to take the lives of whatever persons they were instructed to, and it is plain from the evidence that Number One was well supplied with funds, although nobody seems to know where they came from.

In the case of Lord Mountmorris, and one or two other murders perpetrated by tenant farmers, it was easy to see and to appreciate at its proper value the motive which impelled them, but in the case of the Phoenix Park murders there was no motive, with which any honest man could sympathize. - [Telegram.]

Death sentence commuted. Dublin, May 8. - The Lord Lieutenant has commuted the death sentence of Patrick Delaney, who pleaded guilty to complicity in the murder of Cavendish and Burke.

John Neihoff, a centenarian, living in East New York, was born two years after the Declaration of Independence was written. He is 103 years old, a native of Holland, and a shoemaker.

His age is vouched for by his son, himself a man of 80, and his great-granddaughter, a woman of 40. Neihoff fought at Waterloo and soon afterward came to the United States. He no longer earns a living and is dependent upon his grandchildren for a livelihood and tobacco, of which he always used a very large quantity.

The latest dodge of the female book agent is somewhat novel. She learns in advance, by inquiring of neighbors, the name of the lady living in the house where she intends to operate. She then rings the door bell, asks for Mrs. So-and-so, and, in many cases, ushered into the parlor, as a formal caller. She at first gives her name and talks on general topics five or ten minutes, and then quietly draws from a large pocket, made for the purpose, the magazine or book for which she is canvassing. This novel method secures her from troublesome objections and servants who have been instructed not to allow book agents to enter the house under any circumstances.
