For Her Sake; —OR— The Murder in Furness Wood.

CHAPTER XXV

It happened that some few mornings after this conversation Sir Royal came over to Ferness for luncheon. Contrary to his expectations, Lady Cameron was very gracious to him. Lord Clanronald appeared to be sincere in the attentions he paid Evadne; no one seemed particularly attracted by Thea, and her ladyship thought the master of Westwater would make a good husband for her. So she welcomed him, and invited him continually, and smiled at his fondness for Diana.

This morning he was walking up and down the terrace with Diana. She was telling him, but not in a spirit of complaint, how different everything was. Yet there was a touch of humor in what she described—how puzzled the servants were when they came for orders, how they looked from Lady Cameron to her, and, if by chance there was a collision between them, how her father immediately went out of the way.

"John Brown is the most stanch of all my adherents," said Diana, laughing. "Nothing will bribe him. Her ladyship tries him with chicken and sponge cake; he does nothing but growl at her. Captain Langley is not half so faithful; he goes out with Thea."

"I always trust the instinct of a dog," remarked Sir Royal. "If Captain Langley likes Thea, depend upon it she is the best."

"She has an open, honest countenance," said Diana. Then, looking at Sir Royal's face, she was struck with its pallor. "Are you ill, Royal?" she asked, anxiously.

He raised his hand to his head, and she saw that the grave, kindly eyes were darkened with pain.

"No, I am not ill; but my head pains me; it has troubled me very much lately. I never told of an injury I once received, because I wanted to forget all about it; but I will do so now, Dian. I had a great ambition some years ago to be a leading politician; but in consequence of this injury I had to give up every idea and hope of leading a public life, and be content to live quietly, thankful that matters were no worse. One night I had been dining with some friends at Hampstead, and, returning to London late on foot, I heard cries of distress. It was a lonely spot, and I burried across the road in time to see a stalwart man in the act of maltreating a young and pretty woman, who clung to him with passionate cries. I did as any other man would do—rushed to the rescue. The ruffian was much stronger than I, and mad with drink; but I managed to drag the woman from him. Then he struck me on the head, and I fell, stunned with the blow. Happily the poor woman was saved, for the police on the beat heard the struggle and hastened to us. The woman was protected, the man was taken to the police-station, and I was conveyed to the nearest hospital. There I lay for many weeks unconscious.

"My poor Royal, my brave Royal!" cried Diana, flushing with emotion as she bent her head and kissed his hands. "I never dreamed that you had suffered so."

"No; no one here knows it. I have always been afraid to mention it," he said; "you will see why. I lay for some weeks at the point of death, and when I in some measure recovered my strength, I was in great danger of losing my reason. That was why I kept silent, Diana. The fear, however, is always gnawing at my heart. Sometimes for months together I feel no pain; then again I am hardly master of myself, so great is my anguish. All the doctors I consulted gave me the same advice—to give up all idea of a public life, to live on my estate, and avoid all excitement; and I knew what that meant."

"Oh, Royal," she cried, "you have this cloud darkening your life, and have never named it to me before!"

"I wanted to forget it," he said.

"Why have you told me now?" asked Diana, anxiously.

"Because I have been alarmed lately. The other day, after a severe headache, I lost my memory for some hours, and could not even recollect my own name, or where I was. Then, too, I have such strange sensations. They last only a few minutes; but they are horrible while they remain. The past and the future, right and wrong, are so inextricably mixed that I cannot distinguish them."

"Why do you not consult a physician?" said Diana.

"I have consulted many; but it is useless. You will not tell any one, Dian?—for I have a dread of any one knowing."

"I will not mention it to any living soul," she answered; "but, oh, Royal, how I wish that you lived with us always, that I might take care of you! Show me where you were hurt," she added.

And Sir Royal, parting the cluster of dark hair just above the temple showed her a deep scar. Diana raised her face and kissed it.

"That scar is more honorable than one gained in battle," she said. "A soldier often fights from a false notion of honor and justice; but you fought to save a woman's life. You were not thanked; you went unrewarded. Were I Queen, there should be a Victoria Cross for such heroism."

"I am more than rewarded now," he replied. "To hear such words, to win a kiss from you, I should hold my life cheap. Dian, were I to give my life for you, a kiss in my dying moments from the one I love would well reward me."

There were tears in his eyes as he spoke.

Richard's careless, merry voice roused them from their somewhat gloomy conversation. He had come in search of Sir Royal.

"Cousin Diana," he said, "you did not tell us of the grand arrivals expected to-morrow."

"I know of none," she replied.

Richard looked up in surprise, then suddenly seemed to recollect himself. "I had forgotten," he said, "with some little confusion. Miss Scarsdale has been telling me that Sir Leslie Scarsdale and Lord Clanronald are expected."

Diana's face flushed, then grew cold and pale. Sir Royal knew by the tremor that passed over the beautiful figure that one of the two names mentioned was the name of the man she loved.

"To-morrow!" repeated Diana.

Either she was very vexed or very pleased—Richard could not decide which; but Sir Royal knew. Love's instinct decides very quickly.

"Shall I be considered indiscreet," Richard continued, "if I tell you that on the day after the arrival of our guests, there is to be a dinner party at which an event long looked for by some, but dreaded by other, will take place?"

"What it is, Rich?" asked Diana.

"The Duke and Duchess of Stone, who arrived at Stonedale yesterday, have promised to dine here on the auspicious occasion."

"The Duke and Duchess at last!" cried Sir Royal.

"I need hardly add," said Rich, "that Mr. Cameron is in the highest spirits, and is said to be most grateful to 'mamma,' who has brought about the desire of his heart."

Sir Royal saw how Diana's lovely face had paled.

"I knew they were coming," said Diana, "but I was not informed as to the day. It matters little, however. And, as my dear father married more to secure the acquaintance of the Duke and Duchess than anything else, I am glad that he has succeeded."

She spoke proudly. She was not willing that even these friends who loved her so dearly should fathom the depth and bitterness of the pain she felt.

Then Sir Royal, after receiving from Lady Cameron a pressing invitation to meet the Duke and Duchess, rode away, and Diana was left to her own thoughts.

She was much happier at Ferness than she had been in London. True, the freedom of the old life was gone, for wherever she went one or another of the new-comers was to be found. They all liked the terrace and the conservatory, so that Diana seldom had either of her favorite haunts to herself. But the house was large, and she could always escape from the society of Lady Cameron and her daughters if she so wished. Besides, she had her own suite of rooms, into which no one sought admission. She was more dearly worshiped than ever by the whole household, who resented, so far as they dared, their master's second marriage as a wrong done to her. But perhaps she suffered more keenly at Ferness than she had suffered in London. At Ferness hitherto she had held absolute sway, and now she had not the least share in the management; she was politely but decidedly set aside. She had not been told of the new arrivals, nor had she been consulted about the dinner party; and she was angry at heart. She could not endure the thought of the Duke and Duchess coming when she remembered how distinctly they had declined to know her father, how frigidly they had avoided her. Now that her father had married one of their set, they were ready to take him by the hand and patronize him. All Diana's pride was roused at the thought of this humiliation. She knew how elated and triumphant Lady Cameron and her daughters would be—that they would talk about the "dear Duchess" until her heart would almost rise in open rebellion. No duke or duchess should patronize her. She could not absent herself from the dinner—such a proceeding would make her father exceedingly angry—but she could trust herself to show her Grace of Stone that the patronage so long withheld would not now be accepted.

Then Diana began to think of more pleasant things. He was coming—the man who had filled her world with light and brightness, who had changed the aspect of her whole life! She hated all the Scarsdales; but then he was something more than a Scarsdale. He had come to her with the face of a knight of the olden time, and had touched her heart without her knowing it.

How should she receive him—with coldness and hauteur, because he was a Scarsdale, or with warmth and kindness, because he differed from the rest of the world?

The girl's heart beat with conflicting emotions as she paced the terrace. How she longed for courage to hate him, or humility to love him!

"Was there ever one so weak, so miserable, so wretched?" she cried to herself. "I love, yet I hate; I do not know my own heart! If he had been knightly and noble as he is—a poor private soldier, I should have been proud of his love; but a Scarsdale, head of the house, her ladyship's beloved, relative, a friend, probably, of the Duke—I cannot like him! If he had been any one else on earth except the man he is, I could not help loving him!"

So Diana walked in the sunshine amid the flowers, with her heart perplexed and torn between love and dislike. Nor had she quite made up her mind how to receive Sir Leslie when the morning came and brought him.

Held for $150,000 Ransom--U. S. Senate and Peace Treaty--Kaiser and Crown Prince Intriguing With German Royalists.

BRITISH MUNITIONS.

VLADIVOSTOK, Oct. 17. General Knox, chief of the British Military mission, in a statement to the Russian Telegraph agency at Omsk, says Great Britain has furnished the Siberians and General Denikin with great quantities of munitions, hundreds of thousands of rifles, hundreds of millions of cartridges, hundreds of big guns and thousands of machine guns, as well as several hundred thousand sets of uniforms and equipment. Each cartridge fired this year by these Russian soldiers was made in England by English workmen from English material, the supplies being shipped to Russia on English steamers.

INTRIGUING FOR REINSTATEMENT.

LONDON, Oct. 22. The former German Emperor and Crown Prince are concerned in the intrigues of the German Royalists, the political correspondent of the Daily Mail asserts. The ex-Emperor, says the writer, is far from leading a life of detachment from German affairs. He has recently seen a number of mysterious visitors from Germany, and is receiving many telegrams. He is constantly in communication with some place in Germany by telephone, a private line having been attached to his residence across the frontier. The communications are with German Royalists. The former Crown Prince is also known to be intriguing with German Royalists and receiving many suspicious visitors. Inquiries on this matter will be made in the House of Commons this week.

REVISED RESERVATIONS ADOPTED.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22. Four revised reservations to the Peace Treaty were adopted to-day by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, with the administration leaders voting solidly against them. The committee also adopted a preamble to the reservations providing that the treaty should not become effective until three of its principal and Allied Associated Powers had agreed to the Senate's reservations. This too was opposed by the administration senators.

HIGH COMMISSIONER AT VIENNA.

LONDON, Oct. 22. Frank Oswald Lindley, son of Lord Lindley, has been appointed British High Commissioner at Vienna to look after British affairs until an ambassador is named and regular diplomatic relations are resumed. This announcement was made officially to the Associated Press to-night. Francis Lindley served as Counsellor of the Embassy at Petrograd.

LIBAU SURROUNDED.

LIBAU, Oct. 22. The Germans have surrounded the town, and nothing is allowed to pass through their line. The bread ration has been cut.

ASHAMED OF HIS FACE.

BERLIN, Oct. 21. Former Emperor William has commissioned Attorney Siebert, of Berlin, to institute a suit against the actor Frederick Bonn, who prepared what are known as the "Kaiser films," which were barred in Berlin but were permitted to be exhibited elsewhere. The emperor charges insult and the misuse of his portrait and ask for the impression of the films. The Bonn film referred to in the foregoing was to have been produced in Berlin on Oct. 10, but was suppressed by Government order on the date the title of the pictures was announced as "Wilhelm's good fortune and bad finish." The Government announcement said the suppression grew out of a desire to prevent the film being made a cause for political combats at a time when party feeling already was at a high pitch.

LOOKING AFTER THE COLONIES.

LONDON, Oct. 22. Speaking here to-day Viscount Milner, Secretary of State for the Colonies, observed that some of the Dominions were becoming interested in the colonies nearest them and thought the tendency was worthy of encouragement. He said he intended to get all the money possible for the development of the colonies although there were difficulties in these days of rampant economy.

MUST HAVE WIRELESS.

OTTAWA, Oct. 22. All Canadian ships sailing for ports in the United Kingdom will be obliged in future to carry a wireless installation and wireless operators in order to conform to the requirements of an act passed by the British Parliament.

ORGANIZED LABOR WITHDRAWS.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22. Organized labor to-night through its leader, Samuel Gompers, announced its withdrawal from the national industrial conference, which had been in conference here since Oct. 6th to establish a new relationship between capital and labor.

Only One of a Kind.

Oh, remarked Lady Duplicate, where can I secure a Cloak, a Dress, a Suit, a Scarf like Lady Wise has? She will "scour" the entire universe and will even review New York at St. John's at the L. Then again Lady Copy duplicates Lady Duplicate's tour and decides on the same course as she did. Hundreds of particular individuals and up-to-date dressers are wearing the apparel at the LONDON, NEW YORK & PARIS ASSOCIATION OF FASHION, Grace Building, 288 Water St., St. John's. oct23,31

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

GILT EDGED INVESTMENT.

Here is a little scene that I witnessed the other day. A new table had arrived at the small boy's house one rainy afternoon and his mother had told him that he might open it. That might not sound at first like a privilege, but if you had seen how elaborately it was done up and what fascinating slashing with scissors getting through all that paper and string meant, you would have readily realized that it would appeal to that desire to slash and pull apart which seems to be an instinct in the average boy.

And He Had Been So Interested.

When he came to take the wrapping off the top he found that it was tightly nailed down on the under side, and appealed to his mother who sent for the screw driver and then showed him how to insert it in over the paper in such a way that it couldn't mark the table, he reached for it with eyes alight. "No, I guess I'd better do this myself," she said, refusing his reaching hand, and the light went out. He had been so interested and now when there was something a little different for him to master, the chance was taken away from him.

True, he might not have been able to do it. But he could not have hurt the table, and chances of his hurting himself were infinitely small (much smaller than when he goes to school across two busy auto-filled streets) and it would not have done the slightest harm to let him try.

I think this is a mistake we often make with our children. We don't let them try new things, and thus we reduce the tasks that we ask of them to a hated monotony.

One Reason They Hated Housework. I know another mother who is always telling how her little girls hate housework because it is so hard to get them to do the dishes and make the beds, which are their daily tasks. I asked one if they disliked cooking, too. "Oh, they are crazy to cook," she said, "because I don't care about having them do that."

"Why not?" I asked.

"Oh, it's too much work to have them messing around."

Of course, it is more bother to teach a child something than to have him do the same simple task over and over. But I didn't wonder so much that the little girls didn't like housework, since housework means nothing to them but a few monotonous tasks.

Much Life Saving Money.

Of course, I know how busy mothers are, and I don't wonder that many of them shrink from this sort of bother. But taking or making the time to teach and train a child is much like saving money—it comes hard at the moment, it means deferred enjoyment; but when it begins to pay interest, the sacrifice seems well worth while.

And every bit of time invested in careful training of a child, in teaching him to help himself and in teaching him to know you mean what you say, in teaching him self-discipline, will pay interest just as surely as money invested in liberty bonds.

STORIES OF DELIRIOUS PLUNGES ON WALL STREET.

"Uncle Sam," his pockets stuffed with his war profits, is celebrating Peace by an orgy of Stock Exchange gambling. He is rich beyond the dreams of avarice. "He talks no more of millions," we are told. "It's billions all the time."

Men who already had more gold than they knew what to do with, are adding a million more dollars to their pile between breakfast and luncheon; and those who have never before had a thousand dollars in their pockets are making fortunes in a few days of delirious speculation.

"Everybody's Doing It!"

We read of a costermonger making enough in a week to keep him in luxury the rest of his life; of a poor clerk blossoming in a month into a landowner, with three motor cars of his own; of a Turkish bath-attendant putting $20,000 into his pocket as the result of a few days' lucky gambling; of "manicurists, bootblacks, bartenders, and paper boys" who are poor one week and rich the next.

But in the land of the "Almighty Dollar," such dramatic turns of fortune's wheel are too common to excite attention. There are many men living to-day who have left Wall Street or one of the "Pits" hundreds of thousands of dollars richer than when they entered it a few hours earlier.

It is not long since we were reading that a "sensational rise in the price of cotton has enabled Mr. Joseph Hoadley to make $200,000 in five minutes on the New York Exchange"; and, only four months earlier, the same lucky speculator had been credited with winning four million dollars ($4,000,000) between breakfast and dinner. In a few crowded hours he had actually made nearly six tons of gold—a sum sufficient to yield a perpetual income of from $30,000 to $40,000 a year.

During a panic on the Cotton Exchange, caused by a report that there was a shortage of cotton, Mr. Theodore Price once cleared $100,000 in five minutes; and, later, in the day, we are told he "more than doubled his winnings."

Wild Scenes on 'Change.

The annals of the New York Stock Exchange are equally rich in such stories of rapidly won fortunes. During the slump in Northern Pacifics, Mr. James R. Keene, known to fame as "King of the Bears," once made a profit of $600,000 in a couple of days; and on other occasions he has netted $800,000 from one deal in American tobacco shares, and $300,000 in a single day's gambling in Brooklyn Rapid Transit Stock.

But even such colossal sums as these have been eclipsed many a time, and when Commodore Vanderbilt once cleared a round million pounds by a deal in Harlem Railway Stock; and when Joy Gould, on one memorable occasion, made $800,000 at the rate of $160,000 a minute.

During a recent boom on the New York stock Exchange, inaugurated by the surprising and utterly unexpected dividends of the Union Pacific Railways, many men made fortunes ranging from $100,000 to $500,000 in a single day's operations.

The scene in the Exchange is described as one of "frenzied and almost indescribable excitement." The scene from the galleries, which were crowded with speculators, was of "pandemonium let loose." Costless, hatless men tore from one end of the Market to the other, snapping up bargains. When a broker was seen to be selling in large quantities, men literally fought one another to get near him. Everyone bought wildly, and sold as rapidly when reaction set in.

The Porter's Profits.

Everyone wanted to be in the boom. The craze spread to small office-boys, who mortgaged their month's salary of $5 or $6, and then pooled to take risks in stocks. Girl typists in brokers' offices advised their parents and sweethearts to buy, and risked all their own savings.

Extraordinary stories are told of the men who made fortunes. Mr. Harriman is said to have made $400,000 in a few minutes; John W. Gates, H. H. Rodgers, and many others cleared sums ranging up to $500,000; and Mr. Abraham White, a well-known broker, as the result of a few hours' gambling, was able to make a birthday present to his wife of a palatial country house, near Long Branch, which cost its owner $200,000; while a porter in the Harriman offices, is said to have cleared what to him was the stupendous fortune of $100,000.

Tell-tale Tactics.

The low-down game played by the Opposition press lately, tells a tale of despair and vain determination to yet delude the country ere November 3rd. All the available cries of ordinary political campaigns have been used, but the confederation cry, the sectarian cry and the taxation cry, has each in its turn failed in its purpose to make the people stampede in favor of the Squires-Coaker combination, and so there is no resource left to the Opposition except of falling back upon the writers of years ago, as witness the attempt by yesterday's Post to bolster up the cause of Squireism by the publicity of extracts taken from ancient history. "Where and oh where is the Opposition gone" when it has to use such tactics as a last possible chance of winning the Government. Where are all the proofs that the Cashin Government is a Reid Government, and a confederation gang, that were going to be produced by Squires. Has the mail gone astray that all the documentary evidence (?) should be so tardy in making its appearance, or is the Opposition so fearful of the known dealings of Squires and Coaker on this question that it deems it wise to say little on the matter. It seemeth so. Verily this opinion is strengthened by the fact that the Opposition press growth more proficient and more and more profuse in its abusive personalities, signifying thereby its knowledge of the fact that the Opposition manifesto is far beneath that of the Government team, and consequently they cringe under a sense of defeat, even before the actual battle of the ballots, and try to find solace in empty vapourings and wholesale publication of by-gone writings.

There is another significant change in the writings of the Opposition press as well, viz., that doubt is expressed at times as to whether the Government members will be defeated. This was noticeable yesterday when the Post, as good as stated that it was possible that Cashin might be defeated in Ferryland District. Truly a veritable difference from the opinions formerly expressed. Hitherto Messrs. English, the author of the to be celebrated book entitled "Invincible Ignorance," and Hartery were the sure winners, but suddenly the doubt presents itself in the writings of the Opposition editor. Straws show how the wind blows. Does the change of writing express to the reading public that Hartery and English are losers? If so the Opposition is doing remarkably well in admitting some truths of the actual polling results of election day, for the Advocate has admitted that Morine will get 1,500 votes, with an ascendancy over his opponents, and now the Post admits the victory of Sir M. P. Cashin and his colleague P. F. Moore. The voters are convincing even the Opposition writers that the Squires-Coaker combination is not the choice of the electorate, and the writers, in dismay, unwittingly acknowledge themselves defeated.

It is very a-mewsing to read the Advocate. It states in big lettering that the election is won, and yet at the same time warns the voters to beware of the Government, and also heralds forth that a meeting will be held by the Liberal Reform (?) committee on special business. Truly the election sentiment is setting in in favor of the Government candidates, and the Squiresites and Coakerites are in despair over the doom awaiting them. The Advocate is just now publishing what it does not believe, and is trying to bluff the voters by its assumed victory for the Opposition party. Nothing definite is said of what Coaker intends to do if put in power. There is no foreshadowing of any good to come from the Squires-Coaker factions, nor is anything at all said relative to the repayment to the Canadian capitalists of the sums expended upon the Opposition campaign. Judging by the signs of the times there is fear too in the Opposition that the Canadian bankers, being disappointed by the Government's election, will publish a few of the things that Squires is so secretive about. Another tell-tale of the desperate condition of the Coaker candidates is the efforts of Abbott and R. Winsor to fool the people of Bonavista Bay with the news that Coaker came to St. John's to rise the price of fish for them. Why, may we ask, is it necessary to come to town to interview merchants, etc., if, as hitherto stated, Coaker could command the price of fish at will. The fishermen know how Coaker has attempted to buy fish at Port Union at less than market prices in St. John's, and are not so easily misled by the statements given out by the Coaker teams. Will Coaker also deny that he had any other purpose in view when he came to St. John's? Is it correct that he has paid emissaries going around the wharves, trying to induce the fishermen, here in schooners, to vote for him and his mad schemes, promising thereby to guarantee the price of fish, and making other promises equally absurd and equally dangerous and ruinous were they fulfilled?

Another instance of the despicable tactics pursued by the Coakerite faction, is that of Hon. John Stone being unallowed to talk to the people of Elliston. Is there British fairplay in such treatment, if correct? This is an example of Coakerism and all that it stands for, for we have heard it stated that Coaker has told his Union-followers not to listen to those opposing him, and through letters have commanded his unionists to disallow the hearing of the other side, with the intent, of course, of blindfolding the people in the merits of the case. The Advocate, by its heading yesterday, gloats over the fact that Elliston, as stated, did not give Stone a chance to speak. So unreliable is the Advocate, however, that we would not be surprised to find that Stone has 50 per cent. of the Elliston voters as his supporters. The voters as yet remember how Morine was, according to the Advocate, not allowed to land at St. Brendan's, and yet we have it on the authority of the residents of that place that Morine and colleagues will poll a majority vote there. Such messages are indicative of cowardice and defeat, and of the contemptible fighting nature of the Opposition, and this type of political campaigning is more than despicable and is spurned by all intelligent voters. "How fearful is that fear which seeks refuge in lying"? The Advocate and Star have established records in this country for prophesying things that never came true. May it not be so again? Of one thing we are sure, that if the sentiment of St. John's is representative of that of the whole country, then there can be no doubt of the election results, for on polling day the ballots will disclose, to the confusion of the Opposition, that the voters in their present prosperity have willful for a continuation of the same, and have elected the Liberal Progressive candidates.

In the Supreme Court this morning the Chief Justice handed down the decision of the Tribunal on the application by Mr. L. E. Emerson of Messrs. Blackwood and Emerson, heard yesterday, for the punishment of the "Morning Post" and the "Daily Star" newspapers and the Editor thereof, Dr. Mosdell, for alleged contempt of Court for comments on the Crosbie libel suit.

The decision of the Court, with regard to the defendant Mosdell, was that he be fined $200 for contempt, for publishing the articles in these papers on the 17th and 18th instant, and the Court invited Mr. Emerson to furnish authorities supporting his claim that the papers be sequestered in regard to the same offence.

It appears that the procedure in regard to a newspaper publishing company, which is a corporation, is somewhat different from that which applies to an Editor or individual. On the furnishing of the authorities the Court will then decide what action it will take in regard to the papers themselves. We understand that these authorities will be put in the hands of the Court very shortly.

"Slacker" Scammell.

A QUESTION FOR PRESIDENT COAKER.

Mr. Coaker has sent young John Scammell to contest the District of St. John's in the interests of the F.P.U. Considerable indignation has been aroused amongst patriotic people over the selection of Scammell, and it has been pointed out that, although unmarried, and of military age, he never offered for enlistment while the war was on, but shielded himself behind his more patriotic fellow countrymen and allowed them to fight his battles for him. He is now jumping into the fray when there are no Germans around, and when the fight is a bloodless one. He evidently thinks that the people have forgotten there was a war, or that he failed to do his bit when the opportunity offered, but slunk away into obscurity. Now that the war is over, and there is fighting of a political nature to be done, where there is no chance of his coming to any harm, he is one of the first to jump into the political arena. Another question people are asking each other is why President Coaker, who became a patriot overnight when he joined the National Government, and who bravely boasted that he would lead thousands of Naval Reservists to the war (when he thought it would only last a few months) tolerates a slacker like Scammell in his employ; and how he explains his conduct in keeping on his payroll a man who refused to help his country in its hour of need. Why didn't he make Scammell enlist or cut him off his payroll? Instead of doing so, he is trying to get him into the House of Assembly and into the Government of the country which he was too cowardly to defend. The people want no such men as he in power, and in the battle of the ballots he will get such a beating up that it will give him a severe case of shell-shock for the rest of his life.

A Puzzle.

If Sir Robert Bond, with a strong party behind him, and all his political experience to guide him, was unable to keep Coaker in control, and had to retire from public life on account of Coaker's double dealing and deception, how in the name of all that is peculiar and mysterious is Squires going to keep the "wordy" President in check, recognizing that Coaker will have a strong party of his own picked men behind him, while Squires can only hope for a fog-end following, in the unlikely event of their attaining power. The first person who is able to satisfactorily solve this puzzle will be allowed to have a blind-folded grab out of the Squires' barrel, which, according to all reports, now appears to have attained the dimensions of a puncheon.

Motor Accident.

This morning a Ford car being driven west by a young man named Goldstone, struck the curb, near the Crosbie Hotel, with the result that the front wheel was put out of action. The impact caused the driver to lose control and the car shot to the other side of the street and hitting the curb there broke the other wheel.

What Did Jethro Say?

In politics I never mix.
Save when I write a lay
About the current topic
Of the swift, passing day.

In following this simple rule
Along life's dreary way,
My conscience urges me to ask
Now, what did Jethro say?

Says he, "Sir, I said nuthin'!"
(As the boy along the way).
But begin' his dear pardon,
Now WHAT did Jethro say?

He said naught of Ecclesiastics.
Of course it's not his way;
But by way of provocation
Now WHAT DID JETHRO SAY?

Poor Jethro! In the years to come
Not water'll wash away
The QUIZ from off the people's mind.
Now WHAT DID JETHRO SAY?
—SIT LUX.

Brigus, C.B., Oct. 22nd, 1919.

Four on the Ticket.

The Coaker-Guppy-Squires party in St. John's East, have four men on their ticket, so that their followers will have a wide assortment to choose from a regular job lot, as Hon. John Anderson would say, or a large and varied selection displayed in the most fantastic garbs, offering to the Tory-Squires customers a rare and unique opportunity to come in and vote how you like. Some of the Tory-Squires supporters will vote for only one out of the quilt-patch lot, others say they will accept only two, others still will pick any old three at all, whilst the great majority of the sparse Tory-Guppy following will vote for all four. The supporters of that side are certainly to be envied in having such a wide choice, unique in the annals of politics, more particularly in that they have the privilege of voting for the whole four, Carter, Curtin, Bartlett and Murphy. Squires has thus made every other district jealous, as he only put sufficient men to comply with the ordinary requirements. What do you think of the sleek trick of his to get four men on the one ticket when every other party would be quite satisfied with three. It is up to all the supporters of Squires now in St. John's East to show their gratitude to him by voting for the whole four of his men. Don't split your votes, gentlemen of the Opposition; Don't mark for one, or two, or three, because Mr. Squires won't thank you for that, but vote the straight ticket sure for all four. It doesn't matter much about them being defeated, for that is a foregone conclusion, but you will show Mr. Squires you appreciate his kindness. Considering that Higgins, Vinnicombe and Fox are expected to poll about 4,000 votes each, showing that 4,000 voters are behind them, there ought to be nearly 500 of you Squires-Coaker-Guppy men in St. John's East, so that if you don't split, but vote for all of your four men they will get 500 votes each. That they will be all the more grateful to you in the end, and will show you treated all alike. Vote the whole four, remember, and don't split.

Nothing Doing.

Although the Squires' "barrel" appears to be inexhaustible in other respects, they have not a dollar apparently to offer as a wager on the general result of the poll. In all other elections during the past twenty years, it was easy to obtain wagers on the general result, but it is almost impossible to do so during the present election. Perhaps no better proof can be offered than that the Government are going to sweep the country, than the fact that it is not possible to find anyone prepared to stake money on the Opposition's chances.

She's Just From the States.

You will casually note, when you admire her clothes, and wish you had made them. Then have others repeat what you say of your admirable friend. Of course, now that New York's removed to the Grace Building, St. John's, it will not be quite necessary for you to go elsewhere to bedeck yourself with clothes that others and you, your father, brother, sisters and friends will admire as they have her who has just returned from foreign countries. Over 3,000 garments in LADIES' SUITS, SWEATERS, DRESSES, WINTER COATS are here in galore for your selection and at prices to suit you of small as well as large means. NOT MUCH DAMAGE DONE.
At 12 o'clock to-day a fire broke out in the factory of C. L. March Co., on Springdale and Water Streets, and a call brought the fire companies to the scene. The fire is supposed to have originated on the second flat, just above the boiler, and burned upward to the third flat. Not much damage was done, only wood stock being stored in the place. This was covered by insurance. This is the second fire to occur in this building within a few months.

Liberals of the Outports.

Your Compatriots in St. John's Are United Against the Squires-Coaker Combine.

Now that the election contest is nearing the finish, we wish to again inform the Liberals of the outports that their fellow Liberals in St. John's are united to a man against the Squires-Coaker combine. The Telegram gives them this assurance knowing full well that, as this paper has always been the leading exponent of the sentiments of all true Liberals, so our outport Liberal friends will rely upon its assurance and vote accordingly. St. John's to-day, we tell our friends in all sincerity, is strongly opposed to those usurpers of Liberalism, Coaker and Squires, and that not one of the candidates whom they have put in the field will be returned at the polls. In St. John's East there is an overwhelming popular sentiment which will bear down and smother the four Tory-Squires candidates, whilst in St. John's West, Squires himself will go down to defeat burying with him his own two candidates. Whatever noise he made at the outset has again subsided, for the popular vote there which always stood by Sir Edward Morris, is not alone unshaken but is even further strengthened by that large body of Liberal voters who formerly stood apart from Sir Edward Morris to support the candidates of Sir Robert Bond. Now, then, all true, genuine Liberals of the outports, in your thousands, rally, as your compatriots here are doing, to the standard of the real Liberal cause, as represented by the candidates opposed to Squires and Coaker, and show by your strength that Liberals everywhere are again united for the defense and maintenance of their principles. Remember that a vote cast for a Tory-Coaker-Squires candidate is a vote to clog the wheels of progress and prosperity; to muzzle the independence of the people by the hands of Coaker, for the gratification of encompassing his own sinister purposes, and for giving the arch-Tory Squires a joint control with him in the piratical work of ruining the Colony's interests and thereby your own. From all over Conception Bay the joyful news is coming in daily that there will be a clean sweep of the Tory-Squires-Coaker candidates, whilst from the South and West the same glorious tidings are being sent in over the wires. To the North, in the supposed strongholds of Coakerism, the barricades of the latter have been shattered and uprooted, creating a shivering fear amongst Coaker and his henchmen that Stone and his two men will outclass them in the race in Trinity, and that Morine and Mackay will leave them behind in Bonavista and Twillingate. The victory then, on the whole, will be much greater than anticipated, but in the meantime there must be no let up to outwit the plans and schemes that Coaker and Squires in the desperation of the defeat which stares them, will try to spring upon you every moment and hour from now till polling day. It is up to the outport Liberals now to do their duty, to stand fast to their guns, to march shoulder to shoulder to the polls and to everywhere fight straight and sure for the candidates opposed to Coaker and Squires. That's what the free, the manly, the noble, the self-respecting voter of St. John's is now determined to do and that's what he is going to do, sure, on the third day of November. St. John's Liberals can't be swayed from that course, as they are strongly cemented for that purpose; they are enthusiastic in their determination; their colors are nailed to the mast and onward they will go on polling day in one solid, overwhelming, popular, Liberal mass, to mark down in their thousands on the ballot papers the names of

VICTORY MESSAGES.

GREAT MEETING AT FRESH-WATER, B. D. V.

(Special to Evening Telegram.)
FRESHWATER, Oct. 22. A very successful meeting was held here on Tuesday night by Hons. Hickman and Whiteway, candidates for the Liberal-Progressive Party, and their explanations of the policy of the party led by Sir Michael Cashin, were well received and very much appreciated. A large majority of the voters in Freshwater and adjoining settlements, will cast their votes for Hickman and Whiteway.

WHITEWAY AND HICKMAN WILL HAVE LARGE MAJORITY.

(Special to Evening Telegram.)
FRESHWATER, Oct. 22. We have canvassed Salmon Cove, Perry's Cove, Freshwater, Blow Me Down and Otterbury. We have been received well everywhere. The upper part of the district is exceptionally good. A large majority is assured.

A. E. HICKMAN,
JESSE WHITEWAY.

STONE CONFIDENT.

(Special to Evening Telegram.)
CATALINA, Oct. 22. Have visited twenty-nine large and small settlements to date. Have met no opposition in any place worth noticing, except Elliston, where a crowd of hooligans, were spurred on by the usual strife to do the dirty work at the expense of the decent and respectable citizens of that important settlement. Several of the intelligent, strong Union men of that section were disgusted and walked out, fully determined to crush Bolshevism forever. We are satisfied when polling day comes, Elliston will resent the action of the hoodlams, and give the Liberal-Progressives better support than before.

GRAND BANK, FORTUNE AND MARYSTOWN, JOIN HANDS FOR RETURN OF CURRIE AND BARTLETT.

(Special to Evening Telegram.)
MARYSTOWN, Oct. 22. A very prominent and reliable citizen of Grand Bank, whose word is his bond, sent the following message to-day to a prominent man here: "Currie and Bartlett will poll a big vote here; Fortune sold for them. Well done, friends. Marystown joins hands with you in giving a solid vote for them. Their election is sure by a large majority. We understand St. Lawrence, Larn and Lamaline are with us solid. Now, then, Burin and Flat Islands, fall into line. Burin district stands first in the production of the main resources of this Dominion. Let us be united, and no doubt the Cashin Government who stands for progress, will assist us in other matters of importance for the welfare of the district."

M. T. FLYNN.

COAKERISM UNMASKED.

(Special to Evening Telegram.)
TWILLINGATE, Oct. 22. The Liberal-Progressive candidates held large meeting in the Orange Hall last night. An organized attempt to prevent the speakers from being heard was led by Sam. Wells, chairman of P.P.U. Council here, and Martin Phillips, ex-chairman and now Chairman of the Road Board. The meeting was ably presided over by Mr. Arthur Ashbourne. It was plainly seen the mob, numbering about forty, were there for trouble. This was the first real interruption of the campaign, as the only other suggestion was at Pileys Island, where the disturbers numbered five, so that the total Bolshevism census so far does not exceed fifty. There were from 350 to 400 voters present, of whom a large number were members of the P.P.U. Many expressed their disgust at the display of ignorance, and will show their disapproval by voting for the Government.

MACKAY.

A TISSUE OF FALSEHOODS.

Morine, Winsor and Forbes States That the Message in "Advocate" of Monday Was a Tissue of Falsehoods Defamatory of Places Mentioned.

(Special to Evening Telegram.)
LETHBRIDGE, To-day. A message from Newtown, published in the "Advocate" on Monday, over the names of several persons, but evidently written by Coaker, is a tissue of falsehoods. The statement that Morine was handled badly at Salvage Bay and barely escaped injury at Gooseberry Islands is grossly defamatory of those places, and only reflects Coaker's cowardly wishes. All such reports are placing an unmerited stain upon an intelligent and self-respecting people. The truth is that almost everywhere the audience act as become Christian people.

No place desires or deserves a bad name. His statement that he abused Morine at Newtown is, however, probably correct, for he is very astute and careful to avoid us. The allegation that Abbott was offered a huge bribe by his opponents, is a lie without a shadow of excuse. No bribe of any sort has been offered him or would be. Mr. Abbott should give names and facts or withdraw the slanderous statement.

ALFRED B. MORINE,
WILLIAM C. WINSOR,
C. A. FORBES.

GREAT MEETING AT LETHBRIDGE.

(Special to Evening Telegram.)
LETHBRIDGE, Oct. 22. Great meeting held here last night by Government candidates, the hall was not able to contain the audience. The speakers were listened to with rapt attention and cheered on every opportunity; flags were flying all day and salutes of guns were fired at night. The candidates were cheered in the meeting and afterwards all along the march homewards. It is freely said that no such meeting was ever held here, and nothing equal to it has been held in this bay by the Opposition. A record vote will be polled as interest is very deep.

ALBERT LETHBRIDGE,
Chairman.

FOGO FOR THE GOVERNMENT.

(Special to Evening Telegram.)
CHANGE ISLANDS, Oct. 23. Hibbs disgusted with poor reception given him at Fogo and has to admit that his chances are very bad. Fogo will vote solid for Liberal-Progressive candidates.

LIBERAL-PROGRESSIVE COM.

Editor Evening Telegram
Dear Sir,—
As a returned soldier, I wish in the public columns of the Press to pledge my support, as I am sure all others who follow my occupation, to uphold Mr. Mulally, and those associated with him, in the coming elections. My great appreciation of Mr. Mulally comes from the fact that in spite of almost unanimous opposition in the city council, he upheld his proposal and had carried that all returned soldiers and sailors, who chose an occupation of following public vehicles and conveyances, should receive free licenses from the council to carry out these endeavours. This action of Mr. Mulally has been greatly appreciated, and without doubt a man who would assist him in this way can use his influence to a greater extent in the present Government that is surely coming into power again.

Thanking you sir, to place the foregoing in your esteemed paper.

Yours very truly,
EX-SERGEANT DELACEY.

THE LATE BISHOP'S WILL.
TORONTO, Oct. 22. Rt. Rev. L. Jones, late Bishop of Newfoundland, whose will was probated in the Surrogate Court here yesterday, an estate valued at $120,606. Legacies of $250 were left to the Clergy Widows and Orphans' Fund, Clergy Retirement and Clergy Sustentation Fund of the Diocese of Newfoundland and Church of England Orphanage, and the Widows' Fund of Bermuda and Church Society, on condition that he left with the next successor. The Bishop left the greater part of his Church insignia to his successor in office.

THE LABOR GROUP'S WITHDRAWAL.

WASHINGTON, Thursday. In announcing the withdrawal of the Labor group from the National Industrial Conference last night, after its final effort to obtain adoption of the collective bargaining resolution had been defeated by a vote of the majority of the capital group, Samuel Compers, President of the American Federation of Labor, in a dramatic speech, declared that the resolution had been rejected "without right of reason; rejected on ground so flimsy that men sitting in employers' group will have difficulty in explaining their action to their fellows in work. You have defeated the labor group in its declaration, but we will meet you again in conference and when we do meet you will be glad to talk collective bargaining."

Prize Winners

IN NATIONAL LITERARY CONTEST NAMED.

First an Open Prize Won by E. S. V. Hughes, of Montreal, While Open Poetry Prize Was Divided. Results in Other Classes.

Announcement was made of the prize winners and readings given of the winning compositions in the annual National Literary competition, which has become one of the most important features of the activities of the Arts and Letters Club of Ottawa, in the Carnegie Library recently at the opening meeting of the club. This year the competition assumed national importance in that it had attracted wide attention, contestants having entered from all parts of the Dominion.

Some seven hundred manuscripts from all classes were presented for consideration. The address of the prize winners and those who received honorable mention range from Prince Edward Island to Victoria, B.C. The city of Ottawa received Honorable mention and the second and third prizes in two classes. Manuscripts were received from St. John's, Newfoundland; Charlottetown, P. E. I.; Halifax; Truro; Pictou, St. Agathe, Montreal, Three Rivers, Montreal, Halleybury, Cobalt, Kingston, Toronto, London, Bradford, Galt, Windsor, Winnipeg, Calgary, Edmonton, Vancouver, Victoria, Esquimaux and other places.

There were three hundred and even competitors in the open poetry class and about one hundred and seventy-five in the open prose class. The veterans' class had about sixty entries in prose and forty-five in poetry. The students were represented with entries from thirty-nine in the students' class.

Mr. T. A. Browne, who has directed the competition, was in the chair in the absence of Dr. E. Sapir, the president, who was unable to attend on account of illness. After the regular business had been disposed of the announcements in the various classes were made with readings of the winning manuscripts, which task was performed by members of the club. The readers were: Mr. Harry Sproule, Mr. Gordon Rogers, Mr. Ward Fisher and Mr. George Bousefield.

The Prize Winners.

Veterans' class (prose)—The Governor-General's prize: Education in the West, by C. Bernard Reynolds, Victoria, B.C.; 2nd prize, donated by McClelland and Stewart, publishers, Nomads of the North, by Diamond Jenness, Ottawa.

Veterans' class (poetry) — Donated by Governor-General, Canada's Fallen, by Arthur S. Bourinot, Toronto; 2. Donated by Arts and Letters Club, The King's Harper, by John F. Waddington, Ottawa.

Honourable Mention.

Veterans' class (poetry) — Lieut. Jack Turner, St. John's, Nfld.; T. J. Wren, St. Andrew's, N.B.; George E. Clough, Verdun, Man.

Hair! Hair!

FACTS AND FIGURES WHICH WILL SURPRISE YOU.

Persians shave themselves as a sign of mourning. Hair grows much faster in summer than in winter.

Squirrel's hair makes a fine quality artist's brush.

The longest beard recorded is 12 feet. The longest hair growing on a female head was 8 feet.

In India a native barber can shave a person while asleep without awakening him, so gentle is his touch.

Red hair is regarded as beautiful in Turkey, and consequently many women dye their hair that shade.

Hairless dogs exist in China and Japan. They have webbed feet, and are amongst the smallest variety of dogs known.

Beards were unpopular in the fourteenth century, when close shaving became fashionable with young men. Old men wore forked beards.

Shaving the head when an infant is one month old is a Chinese custom among the male population. A banquet is often part of the ceremony.

Wig-wearing was at its height about 150 years back, when every boy four of five years of age had their heads shaved in readiness to wear a wig.

Hair dye being at one time considered detrimental to long life, a certain Continental insurance company is said to have refused to insure persons who used it.

Tons of hair at one time were used for packing between the plates of a certain part of our war vessels. Hair, being very elastic, offered a good backing to metal.

Bald-headed folk, said a physician once need never worry about having consumption. He observed that "there seems to be some connection with bald heads and sound lungs."

Shaving off whiskers is a sign of mourning among the Hindus. Some wear moustaches and beards, but all wear whiskers, which are shaved off when an adult relation dies.

"The Society of the Pointed Beards" existed in New York some twenty-five years ago, so-called because each member's beard had to be trimmed to a point—that being the rule of the club.

Wigs originated in France by Louis XIII, in the seventeenth century. They were used more as ornaments, and the French king started the fashion to conceal his premature baldness.

Human eyelashes are said to exist on the marble statue, the Sleeping Ariadne, one of the gems of the Vatican, which was found in 1563. It is the only statue of the human figure with eyelashes known.

Dark-haired people, so says an authority, get married sooner than fair-haired individuals. He has shown by statistics that an overwhelming majority of those women who live and spinners have fair hair.

Fair oil was used in the times of the Egyptians, 400 B.C. Authorities say that the first medicinal recipe was a hair tonic for an Egyptian Queen, which was as follows: "Dogs' paws, asses' hoofs, boiled in oil with dates."

Human hair is said to have been the most profitable crop known. 30 years ago even five tons or more were annually imported into London, the "harvest" in Paris at that time yielded $50,000 yearly.

Ancient Hebrews were mostly fair-haired, but now they are dark-haired. Fair-haired people generally are becoming less numerous than in the olden days. Irish people, for instance, two hundred years ago never had many dark-haired individuals in their race.

Harbor Main Solid for Cashin.

ALSO REPORTS APPEARING IN OPPOSITION PAPERS EXPOSED WOODFORD AND JONES VICARIOUS ALL ALONG THE LINE—BUMPER MEETINGS AT HARBOR MAIN, HOLYROOD, COLLIERS AND SEAL COVE—DISTRICT IS SOLID FOR LIBERAL PROGRESSIVE CANDIDATES.

social to Evening Telegram.
HARBOR MAIN, Oct. 21.
Hon. W. Woodford, Minister of the Works, and his colleague, Dr. E. Jones, the popular candidates of the Liberal Progressive Party in Harbor Main District, have been busy the past few days canvassing a district and have received the sole-hearted endorsement of the section visited by them. They are also assured that an enthusiastic welcome awaits them in those places they have not yet reached, and as they proceed it is becoming more and more apparent that the next will result in a record victory for them. Attempts have been made by the Opposition journals to discredit the overflow meetings of the Liberal Government candidates, and they have resorted to every means of their power to deceive the public in this regard but their efforts have been fruitless for their lying reports are only served to show the people at little regard for truth the publishers of these journals have and as papers only indicate the general interests of the Party they are supporting and advertising they have further served to show the people how unreliable are the persons from whom reports have emanated and it is rightly realized that those who would be guilty of such misrepresentations are capable of greater misdeeds if entrusted with the handling of public affairs.
The hall at Harbor Main was filled to overflowing and the meeting was one of the best attended ever held in that thriving town, exceeding in fact those that took place in 1889 when Mr. Woodford and Judge Morris were colleagues and when the district went solid for them returning them with a record majority. Mr. Patrick Hannon was elected chairman of the meeting and expressed his satisfaction at the keen attention given the speaker's and at the enthusiastic manner in which all present responded to the calls for their support in the coming election. Even the most pessimistic had to admit that the whole town is solid for Woodford and Jones and the Liberal Progressive Party and that another record straight ticket vote will be recorded there on polling day.

At Colliers the meeting was a most enthusiastic one and was attended by all within reach of the meeting place, some of those present coming quite a distance to assure the Government representatives of their support and to add their voices to the hearty acclamations. The meeting unanimously elected Mr. Charles Poole, chairman, and thus added further strength to the Government cause at the same time driving a nail in the Opposition coffin because Mr. J. T. Meaney and his supporters had been working overtime in an endeavour to induce Mr. Poole to support them. But Mr. Poole, who is much respected and highly esteemed teacher of Colliers, would have nothing to do with them, firmly adhering to his decision to support the Liberal-Progressive candidates for the best interests of the district and the country. Here, too, the speaker was greeted with burst of cheering and had no difficulty in convincing the intelligent listeners that in Sir Michael Cashin they have a man in whom they can place the fullest trust and that those associated with him constitute and represent the best elements in our public life at the present time. Colliers has always been one of Mr. Woodford's strongholds and practically every resident took the opportunity to assure him and Dr. Jones that there is no change of sentiment there and they can count on a solid vote from this important section.

Another wonderful meeting was held at Seal Cove and the enthusiasm displayed by all who attended was a very pleasant surprise to the leader of the team as many of the people residing there were opposed to him at the last election. The sentiment of this section, however, has completely changed and the entire vote there will go in support of the Government candidates. Both speakers were greeted with prolonged outbursts of cheering and clapping and received the greatest attention when delivering their addresses. There could be no mistaking the determination of the meeting and the declarations of all present made it clear that the self-styled reformers will receive short shift at their hands.
At Holyrood on Monday night Messrs. Woodford and Jones held a meeting which for attendance and enthusiasm will not be equalled throughout the entire country. It has been thoroughly recognized all along that for six or seven years Mr. Woodford decided to vote the entire population was strong for the Liberal Progressive candidates and hence the fact that the spacious hall could not hold all those who were desirous of attending occasioned no very great surprise. Mr. Michael Dunphy was elected chairman to the great satisfaction and with the hearty support of all. Mr. Woodford spoke for over an hour, and dealt exhaustively with the many issues of the day. He paid particular attention to the conscription issue and said that Mr. Meaney, the leader of the Opposition team, was endeavoring to make capital out of this by denouncing him throughout the district for supporting the measure, but he explained clearly the reasons which induced the Government to pass a Conscription Act, and so logical and convincing were his statements that the entire audience loud and long. There were many present whose sons had gone overseas to fight their Empire's battles for right and justice and who were proud of the fact and these deplored the introduction by Mr. Meaney of this most important matter into the fight for personal political purposes. Mr. Woodford also dealt with the various other public questions in a manner that earned the approval of all. Concluding he was cheered to the echo and it must have been very gratifying to him to have his whole political career endorsed in this enthusiastic and unmistakable manner and to be assured that he retains in such great measure the high regard and esteem of all. The oration of Dr. Jones who immediately followed his leader afforded the greatest pleasure to all who were fortunate enough to be present and who had an opportunity of hearing an able address in the initial stage of the campaign from one who is destined before long to make his mark in our Legislative halls. Dr. Jones spoke at length with an ease and grace that is all his own and he delighted his hearers by the comprehensive and logical manner in which he dealt with the many important public questions. He took the opportunity of refuting the charge made by his opponents that he had "kissed" Mr. George Kennedy. He explained that he had assurances before entering the field from Mr. Kennedy himself that he (Mr. Kennedy) was not anxious to contest the district and intended to retire, and in making this statement he settled another of the empty falsehoods preferred by the opposition candidates. An interesting development was the statement by Dr. Jones that he had had three visits from Mr. Squires who was desperately anxious to secure his support and who offered him an Executive seat and his refusal of this is regarded by all as a proof of his honest endeavour to forward the interests of his constituents no matter in what capacity he may be placed. He also spoke on other matters of local and national importance and concluded with a pointed review of the manifesto of Sir Michael Cashin indicating his concurrence in the plans of the Liberal-Progressive Party for the betterment of the country and its people. He was also approved by an outburst of cheering by the entire audience who were delighted with his graceful and forceful address and with the statesmanlike manner in which he delivered his remarks.
There can be no doubt about the outcome in the district of Harbor Main. A solid ticket vote is now assured from the entire section from Seal Cove to Turks Gut and there is every indication that Mr. Woodford and Dr. Jones are going to establish a record that will live forever in the district. The self-styled reformers may rave on, they may continue their desperate efforts to attract attention, but they cannot win the support or regard of the intelligent and right-minded hearers of this important district who have already placed a correct valuation on the vain glorious and unscrupulous adventurers who compose the political agitation which they have stoked the Liberal Reform Party.

Romance of the Strong Room.

ASTONISHING FACTS ABOUT THE MODERN SAFE DEPOSIT AND ITS DEFIANCE OF THE BURGLARS' ART.

In a Devonshire church visitors are shown a rough, oak chest bound with clamps of iron, which is not less than six hundred years old, and which was originally made to hold the communion plate.
It is a curious evidence of how slowly invention moved during the Middle Ages, to find that the Bank of England a similar chest which was the only safe possessed by the Bank when it was incorporated in 1694. A seventeenth century burglar could have opened any safe of the day with a saw and a chisel, while such a thing as a fire-proof safe was not heard of until the year 1801.
It was a very long time before the iron-bound chest was superseded, but during the eighteenth century some of the more up-to-date banks—for instance, that of Mr. Thomas Coutts—built strong rooms of a kind.
These were constructed of brick. They were in fact, nothing but cellars built with stout red brick walls.
Finding that thieves were able to tunnel into these, blue Staffordshire bricks were used and were set in cement. The doors were made of cast-iron. These, though a vast improvement on their predecessors, were not burglar-proof, so then came rooms made entirely of iron.
In 1840 Mr. Milner, who was an inventor very much ahead of his time, patented a safe which was really fire-proof. The safe had double sides, and between them a layer of sawdust in which were embedded small tubes filled with alkaline salt. If a fire occurred the heat burst the tubes and the sawdust was soaked with moisture, while a heat resisting crust was formed on the inner plate.
Guarded by Water and Steam.
This principle holds good to-day.
The safe that succeeded the cast-iron arrangement was made of steel. Special steel plates were employed, as tough and as hard as those used for armouring battleships.
No money was spared. Take for example, the Bank of England strong-room, which is one of the largest and strongest in the world. Its foundations are nearly seventy feet below the level of the street, and its bed of concrete is no less than twenty feet in thickness. Above this lies seven feet of deep, so that anyone who did succeed in tunnelling through the concrete would infallibly be drowned. Next come tremendous plates of wrought-iron. Above, the protection is the same—concrete and water. The doors are incredibly massive, each weighing four tons. They are made of a compound of flint and iron, and no tool has been invented that could cut them.
The vault beneath one of the big New York banks goes a step or two farther in the matter of defence, for here the ingenuity of the inventor has placed the strong-room itself upon concrete piers. A passage runs around three sides, and along it are mirrors so cleverly arranged that the watchman on duty can see every part of the vast safe—back, sides, and bottom—at once.
If an attack should take place, he has but to turn a tap, and jets of super-heated steam would make life impossible for the assailants.
This particular strong-room weighs 300 tons, its walls are of five different layers of steel, while it has double doors of which the outer weighs 12,000 pounds, and is opened and closed by hydraulic power.
In England electric alarms have been brought to a very high pitch of perfection, and are so arranged that the intending burglar cannot tell where the wires are, and indeed cannot possibly get at them to cut them.
Some Daring Raids.
To read the newspapers, one might well imagine that the United States was the home of the only criminal daring and scientific enough to attempt to burgle a strong-room.
This is by no means the case, and, as a matter of fact, one of the boldest yet most skillfully engineered of bank raids ever carried out in New York was the work of an European gang, under the leadership of Harry Raymond, notorious for the theft of the famous Gainsborough picture.
The gang purchased a small tobacco-shop next the bank, and with the aid of miners' drills cut a shaft twelve feet square through the cement floor of the shop, and thence opened a tunnel under the bank. They could only work at night, and they had to carry away all the debris in handbaskets.
After two months' toil they reached the steel wall of the strong-room, spent all one Sunday drilling through it, and got away with £260,000 in notes, bullion, and jewels.
In May, 1906, a bank in St. James' Street, London, was tackled in similar fashion and similar success.
As an example of the patience of the modern crackmen, it would be difficult to beat the robbery committed at the Caps of Good Hope Bank at Kimberley.
The bank vault was built of stone and cement. The walls were three feet thick, and outside them were an outer wall 2 feet thick, and no few-

The Road to Health is Smooth and Clear If You Use Nujol

THE real Road to Health is an intestinal highway 30 feet long. When Constipation clogs this road, it's the same as when landslide blocks a highway. Constipation not only blocks the way, but breeds poisons which menace health.
The obstruction in the mountain pass can be blown out with dynamite, and the obstructions in the intestines CAN be blown out with powerful drugs—but any drug powerful enough to do this is bound to harm the body.
There is only one way to relieve Constipation without the least insurance endangering the delicate mechanism of the human system.
That is the NUJOL way.
NUJOL is a purely vegetable. It is NOT a drug. Not a particle of it is assimilated by the body. All it does is to soften the mass in the colon and lubricate the way to normal expulsion. NUJOL does this without causing any pain or discomfort. It does not in any way interfere with the digestive processes. It has no more effect on the delicate membranes and tissues than to smooth and soothe them.
It's a healing force which gently but effectively removes the intestinal obstruction, and performs this great service to health without in any way lessening Nature's provisions for protection. Its sole province is to help Nature help herself.
Nearly everyone is subject to Constipation at some time or other. Nearly everyone has proved the worthlessness of ordinary "remedies" in its lasting results. Now try Nujol—and find that there is a lasting relief for this curse.
For valuable health booklet—"Thirty Feet of Danger"—Free, write Nujol Laboratories, Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey) 50 Broadway, N.Y.
Warning: Nujol is sold only in sealed bottles bearing the Nujol Trade Mark. All cheap imitations are Nujol's enemies. Buy only from reliable sources.

DEWS OF EVE

No More Gentle Than "Cascarets" for the Liver, Bowels
It is just as needless as it is dangerous to take violent or nasty cathartics. Nature provides no shock-absorbers for your liver and bowels against calomel, harsh pills, sickening oil and salts. Cascarets give quick relief without injury from Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion, Gases and Sick Headache. Cascarets work while you sleep, removing the toxins, poisons and sour, indigestible waste without griping or inconvenience. Cascarets regulate by strengthening the bowel muscles. They cost so little too.

LORD BERESFORD'S PREDICTION.

As I watched Lord Beresford's funeral service at St. Paul's there flashed across my mind a prediction he made long ago. He happened to leave the Central Hall, Westminster, after the great meeting of the Unionists and Liberals at which Lloyd George launched the Coalition on its General Election voyage, at the same time as I did. "Yes," said the old sea dog, in his throaty voice; "very fine indeed; but there was one man on the platform there who'll spoil the whole thing within a year. You mark my words. after three visits to Italy sold a million yards of linen. Originally the stock comprised 68 widths and qualities, and all but 20 have been sold out. "It is a sure success, and I can see the end," said Martin. "I had the greatest confidence in the venture from the beginning because it meant putting high grade stuff on the market at a price less than the cost of manufacture. The wisecracks told me it would be a dismal failure, yet I am getting rid of the material surprisingly fast." It was suggested that there might be other fields to conquer in connection with Government motor vehicles, timber, grain, and other foodstuffs alleged to be going to waste in the hands of the bureaucracy. "In a few weeks time I will be looking for a job" was the quick response.

FRANCE TO SCRAP DREAD-NOUGHTS.

The French naval authorities have a good deal more reason to scrap their five Dreadnoughts of the Normandie class than the British Admiralty had to cancel the contracts for many of their projected ships. All the British units which have been broken up were the latest things of their kind. The Normandies were to be 21-knot ships, with no hull protection thicker than 12 inches and armed with twelve 13.4 inch guns mounted in three four-gun turrets and twenty-four 5.5 inch guns. If the Allies are really of a mind to build large armoured ships they will obviously have to do considerably better than that.

PICKPOCKETS AND RAILWAY PASSENGERS.

There is a resurgence of pocket picking in London at this moment against which innocent visitors from the country need especially to be put on their guard, as it is so rampant at the railway stations. Those of the Underground Railway are the chief gathering places of the thieves, and the method is simplicity itself. Two well dressed men, a little "frat" in face but not specially noticeable in figure, usually work together. They seem eager to board the incoming train—so eager, indeed, that one pushes ahead the moment it stops and momentarily blocks unobtrusively, but effectively, the progress of passengers, while the other is so anxious to join his friend that he proves an equal hindrance to (ingress). Between the two everyone has to squeeze out or in, and deft fingers thus are given every chance to do their work, and usually with such neatness that the victims go on their way unsuspecting. They may be struck, however, by the fact that two such intelligent-looking men should prove so stupid as to have mistaken their train, which they consequently leave before it starts, their chief victims thus being whizzed away before the thief can be discovered and an alarm given. This trick is being worked all over London at crowded stations in these times, and those with experience of the method would be inclined to give into custody at sight any two well dressed men who "fozzled" their entrance into a railway carriage in this fashion just now.

THE SHIP AND THE TURTLE.

Something of the changing habits of the London City man is apparent in the sale of the Ship and Turtle Restaurant in Leadenhall Street, where most of the large shipping companies have offices, while the closing of Baker's Chop House and the City Arms, it cut away a big part of the old resorts of the shipping trade. You could usually see ships' officers and shipping clerks at the City Arms, shipping underwriters and shipping agents at Baker's, and the heads of shipping businesses at the Ship and Turtle, where many shipping deals have been sealed in the past by a bottle of wine. The Ship hotelery dates back to Richard the Second's time; the Turtle only entered the title last century, when the house was rebuilt, the ground land, the lord is still, I believe, the trustee and warden of Rochester Bridge, to whom it was bequeathed in mediæval times by two City merchants for the building and upkeep of a stone bridge over the river Medway. The old India House stood opposite the restaurant and its record as a shipping trade rendezvous goes very far back. The proprietors owned Crosby Hall and much of the plate and glass came from there and from other old City places.

GLUTTONS FOR EXERCISE.

Military service and route marching do not seem to have lessened the young Londoner's keenness for athletics. Running and cycling meetings in town this summer draw big fields, the cross country running clubs are getting ready for the winter, and the Surrey Walking Club has 93 entries for a walking race from Westminster to Brighton. I wonder how many young Americans or Frenchmen would be keen, shortly after demobilization, to walk 62 miles at top speed on a hilly road and under a hot September sun.

CLEANING UP LONDON.

The grime which has accumulated during the war years is now being scraped off London's statues. The statemen in Parliament Square are being washed, the steepjacks who wreathed Nelson's Column with laurel for peace are now cleaning his statue, and the Crimean memorial in Waterloo Place is also becoming bronze again instead of black. But nothing has been done yet to the most neglected object of the Lord-Gladstone's statue at St. Clement's Danes in the Strand. No Tory orator at a Victorian by-election ever painted the Liberal leader so black as his statue now appears. The soot lies so deep on it that the features of the face are indistinct. Gardeners are returning the tree shaded turf in the corner of St. James' Park, behind the Admiralty, which had been trodden bare by the crowds which clustered on the gentle mound during processions and by the Dominion and America's soldiers, who made free with it as a lounging ground. It is about the last stretch of London turf to recover from war weariness. The laws of the Inner Temple, which were bare and brown last winter after five years' use as drill ground and as bayonet practice area, are now so green and even that one would think they had not been disturbed for centuries, but I noticed that in the gardens of Russell Square nothing but plantains and chickweed grew in the patches on which some of the "first hundred thousand" learnt to number off and form fours in August, 1914.

Cashin Will Come Back.

THE EVERLASTING NEED. If the world were all made over and the wrongs all put to right. If the changes men are seeking could be brought here over night. There would still be need for kindness and for gentle hearts and true And for brave men who are toiling for the good that they can do.

If the last reform was fashioned into laws for men to keep. Through the days of our existence there'd be times that we would weep; We shall need the hand of friendship when our skies with grief were gray And our faith in God above us, as we're needing them to-day.

We are building better pathways for the feet of men to tread, They shall look on greater splendors in the years that lie ahead, But the hand of grief shall find them, they shall feel the touch of care And shall need good friends about them in the darkness of despair. We can never make it over to a world that's so sorrow free. Despite all our brave endeavours, grief and care shall always be, And when all the laws are written that the hand of men can pen, There will still be need for kindness and for brave and helpful men.

THE BROOK.

Its pebbled margin the streamlet leaves, its frolicsome and frisky; and people come to lap its waves who used to call for whiskey. From distant springs its waters start and flow through meadows ferny; it doesn't break a human heart throughout its whole blaméd journey; by green and bosky dells it flows, where thirsty things can find it, and doesn't paint a mortal's nose, or leave a bad taste behind it. It gives refreshment, pure and clear; to tired and panting critters; and old soaks drink it, with a tear, and find it beats the bitters. From dark abandoned bars they come, and to the brook they totter; they're shut out from the Demon Rum, and so they sample water. They swear that such a drink is fierce, compared with highballs recent, but when they've drunk about a, fierce they find it pretty decent. The brook is rippling as it winds to join the distant ocean, and no cheap cloy or lemon rind disturbs its sweet communion. And poor old jaded boozey wrecks along its margin hover; they pour its waters down their necks, and self respect recover.

Dramas of Court and Castle.

THE ROMANCE OF THE WANTON DUCHESS.

(By Thornton Hall, in Tit-Bits.)

When Elizabeth Chudleigh carried her charms from her Devonshire home to the Court of George II, vowing that she "would die a Duchess," it was probably no part of her ambitious programme to qualify for the descriptions, the "wanton," "wicked," and "bigamist Duchess," by which her own and future generations were to know her.

It was not long before the country-maid had turned her beauty and her wiles to such account that she had every gallant in the Court, from the Prince of Wales to the youngest page-boy, at her pretty feet; and had but to pick and choose among the coronets that were dangled seductively before her eyes.

But to one and all she turned a disdainful shoulder until she Grace the Duke of Hamilton, the handsomest and most accomplished courtier of his day, brought the battery of his fascinations to bear on her; and after a brief and impetuous wooing, snatched the prize from his rivals.

The Secret Wedding.

Thus early had Elizabeth her Duchess's coronet within her grasp; and she brought happiness with it, for she loved her young Duke as passionately as he loved her.

But the course of her love was not long to run smoothly for her. An intriguing aunt, who had no love for the Hamiltons, set to work to dash the cup of happiness from her niece's lips. She intercepted the Duke's love-letters, and poured into Elizabeth's ears poisonous stories of his infidelities and entanglements; and when the poison had begun to work, whisked her niece off, fearful and indignant, to the country-house of her kinsman, Mr. Merrill, at Lainston, where, among her fellow-guests was a dashing naval lieutenant, the Hon. Augustus Harey, who was second heir to his father's Earldom of Bristol.

Here the inevitable quickly happened. The lieutenant lost his heart to the lovely maid of honour, and made violent love to her, with, of course, her aunt's connivance. The girl, blazing with resentment at the Duke's coldness and his apparent indifference to her beauty and his vows, lent a willing ear to the sailor's pleadings; and within a few weeks she had promised her hand to a man, whom, as she confessed, she "almost hated."

The wedding was, by mutual consent, to be secret, partly on account of the bridegroom's lack of means, and partly from fear of giving offence to his family. In the dead of an Autumn night, in 1744, the bridal party stole out from Mr. Merrill's house to a neighbouring church; and in a darkness relieved only by the light of a taper concealed in the best man's hat, the ceremony which made Elizabeth Chudleigh wife of a man for whom she had neither love nor respect, was hurriedly performed. Two days later the bridegroom had joined his ship; and the bride was left to deplore her folly and to seek forgetfulness as best she could.

A Crime at Midnight.

Within a few weeks we find her roaming over the Continent in search of distraction, leaving a train of broken hearts and languishing lovers behind her. Now she is at Berlin, with the great Frederick himself at her knees; now, at the Brussels Court, shocking the ladies by the prodigious display of her charms, and by the same arts bewitching the men. She led, we are told, "a life of shameless dissipation," had her lovers in every capital, and discarded them as lightly as so many playthings.

On her return to England, so anxious was she to obliterate that fatal episode in the dark church that she made a journey to Lainston; bribed the verger to admit her to the vestry by night; and when his back was turned, tore the fatal page out of the marriage register.

Scarcely, however, had she returned to London, proud of the midnight crime that had, she hoped, effaced the past, when to her dismay her lieutenant-husband suddenly blossomed into an earl on his father's unexpected death. She was now Countess of Bristol, but dared not claim the title, for she had destroyed with her own hands the evidence of her marriage. But though she might not call herself Countess, a still higher flight presented itself to her. Among her many slaves was the aged Duke of Kingston, a man of enormous wealth, who asked nothing better of life than to place a ducal coronet on her head. Within a month she had blossomed into "the most high and puissant Princess, the Duchess of Kingston." The ambition of her girlhood was at last realized.

Then followed four years of splendour and prodigal extravagance, before her Duke's death set her free to resume the career of pleasure she loved.

Throwing aside her widow's weeds she flung herself again—old, obese, and faded as she was—into a whirl of dissipation which shocked England that she was glad to fly to the Continent to escape the storm of censure she had brought on her head. In Paris, Vienna, and Madrid she was the ringleader in orgies which set the tongues of scandal wagging all over Europe. She gloried in her notoriety as the "wanton" and "wicked Duchess."

In Rome she was about to crown her escapades by eloping with a handsome Albanian "Prince," when she discovered that his gorgeous Highness was a low-born adventurer, son of a Trebizond ass-driver. And it was at this time that news came to her that her late husband's heirs had instituted proceedings against her for bigamy, with a view of setting aside his will in her favour.

As her exchequer was empty, the Duchess presented herself before her banker, plied in hand, and compelled him to provide her with funds to enable her to return to London, where she found all arrangements for her trial already made, and herself the object of universal derision and detestation.

The Trial of the Duchess.

Public opinion was arrayed against her. She was received everywhere with abuse, jeers, and lampoons. Foote made her the object of universal ridicule by a comedy entitled, "A Trip to Calais." But the Duchess metaphorically snapped her fingers at them all. Her splendid equipage was to be seen everywhere, with the autocratic lady, serene, smiling, contemptuous. Probably never, save Westminster Hall, been crowded with such a distinguished and excited assembly as when the Duchess made her imposing entry, followed by her retinue of serving women, her doctor, apothecary, and secretary and proceeded to her seat, in front of her bewigged counsel, with the dignified step and haughty mien of an empress.

Through the long days of the trial she maintained a proud and defiant demeanour, and only once showing signs of emotion "at the mention of her dear Duke's name." The evidence of her midnight marriage to Harey, however, was so conclusive that only one verdict was possible.

But although the Duchess was convicted of bigamy, no punishment was hers. "She was dismissed," as Walpole tells us, "with the single injunction of paying the cost of the prosecution," and the "solemn farce" was ended.

Returning to France, she purchased a palace in Paris and a stately chateau in the country, and prepared to spend her last years in the luxury and license to which, as "the most high and puissant Princess, the Duchess of Kingston," she considered herself entitled.

But her profligate career was now drawing to its close in sudden tragedy. One day while sitting at dinner she received news that a lawsuit had been decided against her. She broke out in a violent passion and burst a blood-vessel. But, dying as she was, she refused to remain in bed. She was dressed in her most costly apparel and, calling for wine, drained glass after glass of Madeira till the end.

Thus, in the sixty-ninth year of her life, died Elizabeth, Duchess of Kingston.

Cocktails.

IT MAKES ONE THIRST TO READ THIS COLUMN ON DRINKS—ICED AND OTHERWISE.

Ice, as a commercial cargo, first came to London a hundred years ago from Norway and Sweden.

Therefore, this year we ought to be celebrating the centenary of the cocktail.

Before 1819 we had little inclination in these islands for iced drinks in summer weather.

The cynic would say we had no weather answering to that description. Anyway, when there was sultry weather there was no ice.

Cocktails first came in as juleps. The common ingredient to both was ice—and plenty of it.

The recipes came from America by way of the Army, Navy, and sugar plantations.

It was only in that country of torrid summers that the making of iced cooling drinks could become an art.

So America sent us the julep, which my dictionary calls a summer drink; and then the cocktail. Why cocktail? Because of the tendency on the part of its imbibers to go round with their tails up. Before 1819, however, England was not without summer drinks.

They Suffered From Spleen!

A list of them, from an ancestral cookery-book in my possession, two hundred years old, is enough to give the reader chronic tetralism, and the drinker hob-nailed liver.

Here is a sample: To make Ebulum, strongly recommended in hot seasons (1719), all you wanted was (faith!) and

A hoghead of strong ale, a bushel of elder-berries, 1/2 lb. juniper berries, 1/2 lb. hops, 1/2 lb. ginger, 1/2 oz. cloves and mace, 1 oz. nutmeg and cinnamon, 1/2 lb. citron, orange peel, and some esingoes.

You boiled all these together, fined and filtered it, and in hot weather you drank it with lumps of Double refined Sugar in the Glass.

That is an original British cocktail. They suffered, did our ancestors, from the spleen, known abroad then as the English disease. Do you wonder?

The only possible recipe in it for a summer's drink is that for barley-water, not at all a bad tipple. I suppose, for horses, but in these hot days too suggestive of skilly.

My modern cookery-book has a section devoted to summer drinks, but they are not useful.

When one thinks of cocktails—well, toast-and-water and cold tea hardly are in the picture. And the soft fruit drinks seem only devised to torment thirsty townspeople.

Lovelly to Read About: They begin nobly, generously: "Crush 2 lb. of the best ripe strawberries—"

I don't think we need go any further with that one.

"Take one 1/2 lb. each of strawberries, raspberries, and currants, one peach, one lemon, 1/2 lb. of icing-sugar, 1 quart boiling water—"

No, that won't do, either. These cookery-book compilers live in a Utopia of their own. They "take" their ingredients—and we can't even buy ours.

As for temperance drinks, though their names is legion, there is not amongst them one that is a genuine thirst quencher in hot weather. Somehow you can't conceive a teetotal cocktail. The aerated waters are either gaseous, sweet, or flat. None of the brilliantly colored stuffs sold under fancy names look poisonous, and taste like diluted furniture-polish in hot weather.

But the alcoholic drinks are little better. There is something to be said for the light beers, but not much.

Business Man Walked Floor All Night Long

Well Known Bed Manufacturer's Nerves Are Restored After Tanlac Has Built Him Up.

"I must say Tanlac has put me on my feet and I want to tell everyone in the city what a wonderful medicine I have found it to be," was the statement made by John Hanna, vice-president of the Hutchings Bed Manufacturing Company, residing at 169 Wentworth street, St. John, New Brunswick, in an interview, recently.

Mr. Hanna is the pioneer bed manufacturer of the Maritime Province, having been engaged in this line since 1858. He is not only one of St. John's oldest and best known business men, but is prominent and influential as a citizen, and his endorsement for Tanlac will be of interest throughout Canada. Continuing his statement, Mr. Hanna said:

"Tanlac has merit peculiar to itself since I used it myself. I consider it one of the greatest medicines in the world. At the time I began taking it I was just simply down and out from the effects of a spell of the 'Flu' last winter, which left me with no appetite, a bad stomach and so weak and nervous that I was barely able to walk down to the factory and back. It just seemed to be a struggle for me to get up and down. I could eat but very little and even then gas would form on my stomach and make me miserable for hours. I actually suffered so at night on account of this gas pressing on my heart and lungs that I had to get up and walk the floor for I felt like I was smothering to death. Then in this weakened condition had matters were made worse by rheumatism starting up in both arms and hands, which made life almost unbearable for me."

"I had taken a number of medicines to no avail and had begun to think nothing could help me. Then my wife went out and bought me a bottle of Tanlac and after taking it for two or three days I commenced to get an appetite, and by the end of the first bottle I was picking up right along. I now have almost too much appetite for the 'High cost of living,' and everything I eat seems to digest perfectly. At night I sleep just as sound as I ever did and the rheumatism, like my other troubles, is gone too. In fact, I am in perfect condition and even find that I have not only recovered my health and strength, but I have gained in weight, and I can now go into the factory and do as much work as I could twenty-five years ago. I am glad to give Tanlac my endorsement because it is one medicine that should be in every home."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac Representative.

Spirits are, in hot weather, almost as bad as mineral waters.

Tea, boiling hot, with a squeeze of lemon and no sugar, is a very good thirst-quencher if you can sit still and lace afterwards.

Iced coffee and cream is satisfying, but plentifully bilious.

Captain Harry's Masterpiece. So far I have not discovered anything to beat mint julep.

But, unfortunately, most of the ingredients are unobtainable these days. The secret of this precarious compound was brought to England from the States by Captain Harry, of Peter Simple fame, about 1830. Here is his recipe:

"Put into a tumbler about a dozen of the tender shoots of mint (easily done that). Upon them put a spoonful of white sugar, and equal proportions—so as to one-third fill the tumbler—of peach and ordinary brandy (that beats me). Then take a raped ice and fill up the tumbler with it (and where do I, in the name of goodness, get raped ice?) Rub the lips of the glass with a piece of fresh pineapple (the epicure) or lemon will do. (I should think so.) Then, as the mixture melts, sip through a straw."

Fate will not harm you if you can manage this daily. So far no success has attended my efforts to concoct this—the paragon of all the cocktails. The pineapple, ice, or peach-brandy have always deged me.—Answers.

Who Who's
AND WHY IN NEWFOUNDLAND AND CANADA—1919-20.

"Who's Who and Why" is designed to provide a record of the men and women who in one capacity or another are contributing to the building up of Canada and Newfoundland.

In the brief account of their career in these pages their relation is shown to the outstanding events of the history of the sister dominions, and the book, therefore, has a value for the historian quite beyond its use as a current work of reference. Included also are portraits of persons dealt with in the biographical sketches, thus adding to the permanent value of the book. Only a few copies on sale. PRICE $8.50.

Sample Line Lace Side-board Cloths, Tea Cloths & Shams

- If you want something different, something uncommon looking, you'll find it in this selection. The assortment is not as large as we would wish. Come along early, we have marked these very reasonable. from 80c. to $1.70.
- DUCHESS CURTAINS—40 pairs of pure White Lace Curtains; made in sets, inseparable, with an overhead joint; splendid for bedroom windows. The value is especially good. Reg. $2.00 pair. Friday, Saturday and Monday $1.69.
- DUCHESS SETS, 2pc.—Very dainty 4 piece Duchess Sets in fine White Linen, with double row of pretty lace insertion and lace edge. Notice the lowness of price for these. Friday, Saturday and Monday, the 29c.
- CURTAIN LACE—A couple of pieces of White Curtain Laces, 50 inches wide; strong mesh, good striking patterns, well covered. Reg. 90c. yard. Friday, Saturday and Monday 85c.

Prince of Wales

APPRECIATES COURTESIES EXTENDED.

(Copy) Royal Train, at Medicine Hat, October 23rd, 1913.

Sir,—I am desired by the Prince of Wales to ask you to convey to the members of the Independent Order of Foresters His Royal Highness's sincere thanks for the message of welcome and good wishes which they addressed to him on the occasion of his arrival in Newfoundland.

I am, Sir, Your obedient servant, GODFREY THOMAS, Private Secretary, W. E. Bradbury, Esq., Deputy Supreme Ranger for Newfoundland, Heart's Content.

(Copy) Royal Train, at Medicine Hat, October 23rd, 1913.

Sir,—The Prince of Wales desires me to express through you to the congregation of St. Mary's Church, Heart's Content, His Royal Highness's sincere appreciation of the message of welcome which was addressed to him on the occasion of his arrival in Newfoundland.

His Royal Highness will not fail to convey to Their Majesties, on his return to England, the expression of loyalty and devotion contained in your telegram of the 11th of August.

I am, Sir, Your obedient servant, GODFREY THOMAS, Private Secretary, The Rev. Canon Smart, St. Mary's Church, Heart's Content, Nfld.

(Copy) Royal Train, at Medicine Hat, October 23rd, 1913.

Sir,—I am desired by the Prince of Wales to thank you and the children of St. Mary's Sunday School for the kind message of welcome which was addressed to His Royal Highness on the occasion of his arrival in Newfoundland and for their good wishes contained in your telegram of August the 11th.

I am, Sir, Your obedient servant, GODFREY THOMAS, Private Secretary, The Superintendent, St. Mary's Sunday School, Heart's Content, Newfoundland.

Going to the Next Dance? DO and Make a Hit!

I don't know, feel sort of indifferent, could not get a proper dress, one that I feel is just right. See that black satin dress she had at the last dance? Would like something similar, she MADE SOME HIT. This is being said daily, remarked her friend. Do you realize, sayeth she, that at New York on Water Street, at the beautiful Church of the Sacred Heart, 650 Dressing, of Satins, Georgettes, Crepe de Chine, Serge and every other kind of dress made, and where she got hers, where you will get yours and make a hit, because every dress has been designed by an artist with individual ability. Archbishop Roche at Placentia.

On Sunday the Sacrament of Confirmation was administered to over two hundred candidates. Solemn High Mass was celebrated at 10.30 in the beautiful Church of the Sacred Heart. The celebrant was Rev. J. McGrath, Pastor of Bell Island, with Fathers Savin and T. Flynn as Deacon and Sub-Deacon. His Grace occupied a Throne in the Sanctuary and was assisted by Rt. Rev. Mgr. Reardon Pastor of Placentia. Before Confirmation, His Grace addressed the large congregation. He expressed the great pleasure it gave him as Archbishop to visit the good people of this centre of Catholicity in Newfoundland. It was a striking contrast to many parts of the world to-day to find such conditions prevailing here in our beloved country. It was a pleasure to note the great loyalty of the people to the Church and authority generally when we behold the world in general since the ravages of war, torn asunder by disturbances of all kinds. The people of Placentia Parish were always noted for their love of Church and solid virtues. His Grace asked a blessing upon them, and prayed that the good and holy traditions handed down for generations would continue to be kept untarnished for many years to come. The Archbishop visited the convent and boys' School on Monday and gave a holiday.

MOTORISTS!

I have just purchased the Highlanders' Armoury and have storage space for 100 cars. In order to facilitate quick repairs and the most up-to-date service, I am leaving for the United States and Canada about the 27th and while abroad will purchase the finest service station equipment obtainable, also a line of repair parts and accessories for Briscoe, Ford and Chevrolet cars, and can guarantee first-class overhauling and repair work. When you are finished with your car send it in and we will overhaul it and put it in first-class condition for next season. One part of my new equipment will be an electric drive motor test stand where engines will be thoroughly tested under their own power before being put back in the car, where oil or other leaks can be detected and rectified, thereby insuring a good and lasting job. Parties storing their cars at my garage will be supplied with a key so that they can get their car at any time; cars will be so arranged that there will be no necessity to move other cars to get any one car out.

Thanking my customers for their past patronage and assuring those and others I am doing the best possible to obtain quick repairs and prompt service.
