The two lectures given in the Presbyterian church, by the Rev. A. A. Holzer, pastor of the Baptist Church, Forest, on Thursday and Friday evenings of last week, were well attended and much enjoyed by those who had the privilege of listening to them. The illustrations were enlightening and the Jewish table spread attracted the attention of all. Rev. J. C. Forster presided on Thursday evening and

Rev. R. Stevenson on Friday evening. Being a converted Jew, Rev. Mr. Holzer is thoroughly conversant with the needs of the Jewish international mission. The following is the address which shows the high esteem in which Miss Logan is held by her pupils:—

TO OUR DEAR TEACHER:— Surely you will believe us when we say that this is the most trying and heart rending time of our young lives. Just to think of the many, many, happy hours that we spent together, under your firm but gentle rule, true there might have been some dark days, some of us no doubt gave you a lot of worry and trouble, but you always bore it with a Christian spirit. The sun would throw her light through the clouds and banish the darkness because you, dear teacher, were always too good to be unkind. Now in order to show our good wishes toward you, we ask you to kindly accept this small token of lasting friendship, and we trust and know that we will not soon be forgotten. We know not where your fields of labour may be in the future, but we do know that wherever your lot is cast you may rest assured that you have our sympathy and best wishes. In behalf of the pupils of S. S. No. 11, Brooke.

Mrs. Baker So Weak—Could Not Do Her Work—Found Relief in Novel Way.

Adrian, Mich.—"I suffered terribly with female weakness and backache and got so weak that I could hardly do my work. When I washed my dishes I had to sit down and when I would sweep the floor I would get so weak that I would have to get a drink every few minutes, and before I did my dusting I would have to lie down. I got so poorly that my folks thought I was going into consumption. One day I found a piece of paper blowing around the yard and I picked it up and read it. It said 'Saved from the Grave,' and told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for women. I showed it to my husband and he said, 'Why don't you try it?' So I did, and after I had taken two bottles I felt better and I said to my husband, 'I don't need any more,' and he said 'You had better take it a little longer anyway.' So I took it for three months and got well and strong."—Mrs. ALONZO E. BAKER, 9 Tecumseh St., Adrian, Mich.

Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It promotes that vigor which makes work easy. The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

A Despotism Edict

Mr. Pelletier, the Postmaster-General, is aggravated. He announces in a letter sent out to publishers that because the Senate refused to pass his bill giving him the power to increase the rate of postage on newspapers up to one cent and a half a pound in bulk, and to recognize the zone system, he is now going to raise the rate himself to one cent for each copy of a newspaper where that paper is delivered by a carrier, and to one-quarter of a cent for each copy of a paper where the paper is called for at the post-office. There is probably no business in Canada in which there is keener competition than in the publication of periodicals. Competition has been so keen and periodicals, daily, weekly or monthly are to-day sold in Canada at so low a price, that there is no possibility of the publishers being able on any business principle to pay this increased postal rate. It simply means that the subscribers to papers will have to pay fifty cents a year more on all weekly publications, and three dollars a year more for their daily papers, where they live on rural delivery routes, or where they live in towns having a postal delivery. It also means that those who call for their own mail at the post-office in places where there is no delivery will have to pay the difference between the present bulk rate and twelve cents a year for their weekly paper, and eighty cents a year for their daily paper.

It will be noted that, even though the ever increasing size of newspapers is given as the reason for the increase of postage, this arrangement makes no difference as to the size of the paper, the extra charge will be placed on every single copy handled by the post-office no matter how small the paper. This announcement is openly made in resentment at the way in which the press sustained the Senate in vetoing an act which the party majority in the Commons had passed, giving the Postmaster-General automatic power over newspaper postal rates. Mr. Pelletier says the law already gives him power to do this, and he is going to do it, to meet the increasing demands of the railways. Its ruinous effect upon the cheaper papers, at least on those that look to their readers for support, will be obvious to the readers of our publications. As the charge is to be as big, on the smallest paper, as on the heaviest, its effect will be to crush all real journals in favor of those which are dominated by advertising, and to give political omnipotence to papers the least worthy of it. If the Government wants to be at the dictation of one or two papers this is the way to have it so. A more daringly despotism edict was never issued by any Canadian minister. All who value those papers which belong to the people and which the people pay for, will hasten to protest against this wild proposal of the Postmaster-General, and will immediately write to the Premier, the Right Hon. Sir Robert Borden, at Ottawa, to let him know the mind of the country upon it. We have never believed in subsidizing the press through the post-office, but a general edict of massacre is the politics of King Herod.—Witness.

This is Where we do Not Shine

Urging for a revival of interest in good literature and a wide cultivation of the habit of study a contemporary makes the assertion that the average working man in England is better read in politics, history, science and other lines than the average man in any class in Canada. This is a rather severe indictment, but without doubt correct. It must be admitted, whatever may be the reason, we are not a studious, reading people. We read all right, but not as reading is understood in its best sense. Possibly there is no people more given to newspaper scanning than Canadians and Americans. Also it is unlikely there is another people that surpasses us when it comes to the devouring of right literature. We scan the newspaper because we want to know what our neighbors are doing; we devour the short-story magazine or the cheap popular novel because we want to be amused or have our fagged mentalities stimulated. Of real reading and genuine studying, however, we do very little as a people.

Sooner or later we are going to be sorry for this condition of affairs. What it means is that after a while a very few people will be doing the thinking for the multitude, for it is only the well-read men and students who can really be depended upon in time of crisis or emergency. If truth were told the reading, studying habit of the average Englishman has much to do with the success of Great Britain in maintaining first place among the nations, commercially, industrially and in point of power. Intelligence is bound to come to the top, but there can be no genuine intelligence when the opinions one holds are of the "canned" variety, put up by someone else, and absorbed by us just as we would use, for the sake of saving effort, some pre-digested breakfast food.

It is a Liver Pill.—Many of the ailments that man has to contend with have their origin in a disordered liver, which is a delicate organ, peculiarly susceptible to the disturbances that come from irregular habits or lack of care in eating and drinking. This accounts for the great many liver regulators now pressed on the attention of sufferers. Of these there is none superior to Farnell's Vegetable Pills. Their operation though gentle is effective, and the most delicate can use them.

Short Ship Races

MICHIGAN Short Ship races will be held over the half mile track in Port Huron July 7, 8, 9, and 10 at which time purses in the sum of $9,000 will be distributed. As is pretty generally known the Short Ship circuit is foremost of the half mile track organizations and Port Huron boasts of one of the fastest two lap ovals out of doors. A big feature of the forthcoming meeting is the $1,000 stakes which have attracted a class of horses which will be holding their own on the grand circuit later in the season. Four of these stakes are to be decided at the Port Huron meeting, which is underlined for four afternoons. In addition there will be two or three late closing $500 events daily, so that the program for the meeting will be one of the greatest ever given on a half mile track. The outlook is for more and better horses than have ever raced on a 1/2 mile track in Michigan, and the Port Huron Driving Park & Agricultural association, under whose management the meeting is given, will conduct racing on the same conservative plan which has characterized the meetings held for years. The Short Ship circuit opened with an early start this year and the Port Huron meeting should find the horses in prime condition and not worked to a frazzle in training.

Concrete Roads Exceed Farmer's Expectations

THIS LETTER FROM MR. GEO. W. BURT, of Redford, Wayne County, Michigan, shows how well satisfied the farmers of that section are with concrete roads. Nearly one hundred miles have been built in Wayne County.

"Mr. Edward N. Hines, Board of County Road Commissioners, Wayne County, Detroit, Mich.

Dear Sir:—

Our concrete roads are far ahead of the expectations of the majority of us farmers. Where we used to be two days marketing fifty bushels of produce, we now market twice as much in one day, and can go to the city anytime we want to. We do not have to wait till the roads are good so we can go. Also, our horses and waggons will last twice as long.

Hoping you will keep right on building these roads, and that the county will stand back of this movement, I remain,

Yours truly,
(Sgd.) Geo. W. Burt
Redford, Wayne County, Mich.

Concrete Roads

are the best, cheapest and most satisfactory roads that can be built. Best, because they permit bigger loads, increase land values and improve conditions generally. Cheapest, because they are permanent and require practically no repairs, which permits road taxes to be spent in building more good roads. Most satisfactory, because they are open to traffic every day in the year, lower cost of marketing and cost of living and increase the farmer's profits.

Good Roads literature telling all about concrete roads will be sent, free, to everyone interested. Write to

GRADE LAMBS FOR FALL FATTENING

To buy lambs soon after weaning and turn them out to graze on stubbles and pastures and eventually into the cornfields is a good practice and should prove profitable, writes John Pickering Ross in Farm and Fireside. At all events, it is the cheapest and best way to get rid of the weeds and to improve the land.

Success will greatly depend on the lambs bought. Some one may say, "Of course mine are just 'grades,' good, bad and indifferent," and it is just at this point that danger seems to threaten. Of course you will buy none but grades of one of the mutton and wool breeds—Shropshire, Hampshire or Southdowns—and the nearer you can come to buying all of one type and breed the surer you will be of getting their full market value, for the buyers always pay most attention to the even looking lots. It is well to bear in mind that a few poor lambs in a bunch of good ones is always used as a pretext to pull down the price, while a few good ones in a poor lot have no power to raise the price of the whole. It is therefore far better to have nothing to do with "indifferent or bad ones," though you should have to pay from 50 cents to $1 more per head for a nice, even lot, all docked and the bucks altered. A few long, dirty tails or uncastrated bucks will often spoil the sale of an otherwise nice bunch of lambs.

Shropshire sheep are popular in this country as well as in England, and they are one of the best breeds known for mutton production. In appearance the sheep is well proportioned and built on symmetrical lines, being compact in form. The wool is close and longer than that of many other breeds. Specimens of this breed have been made to weigh 22 for the male and 17 for the female, and the meat is of excellent flavor. As a bearer of lambs few sheep surpass the Shropshire.

It is desirable to find out if the lambs have already been used to a grain ration. If they have it will pay to continue it for a short time, gradually reducing it from, say, a half pound per day and resuming it a month before you propose to ship them. If you grow oats you can put them to no better use than to feed them to your lambs with a little bran or oilmeal. You do not want lambs to run over seventy-five to eighty pounds by November, and they should be fat and well finished at those weights by then.

FEEDING THE PIGS.

When Youngsters Begin to Eat Provide a Separate Trough.

Thrifty, growing pigs will at the end of three weeks begin to try to eat shorts slop with the mother. Then a separate pen or creep where the sow cannot reach their trough should be provided for them, says H. I. Cottle in the Kansas Farmer. Here they can be fed twice a day, feeding only such amount as they will clean up. The troughs must not get sour from accumulated feeds. The troughs must be shallow. Young pigs climbing over a six inch side to get feed from the trough are in danger of rupture.

Pigs correctly cared for are ready to be weaned at eight or ten weeks of age. They thrive better when separated into bunches of fifteen or twenty, and the feeder can more easily observe each individual. Crowd the pig in his growth and at nine months he will top the scale at 275 to 300 pounds or better.

Exclusive corn diet produces fat, ungainly and ill developed hogs. Along with corn should go shorts slop and alfalfa. I feed wood ashes, charcoal and salt also. These are preventives of disease and promoters of health. About twice a week I feed the government hog tonic. This is an excellent tonic and keeps the hog free from his greatest enemy—worms. Beware of the majority of remedies and stock foods. Mix brains with the hog feed.

Flaxseed For Calves. Ground flaxseed meal may be fed to young calves in several ways. It is quite common to pour boiling water over it and cook it for a short time, making the mixture about the consistency of good cornmeal mush. To start with, young calves may be fed about a teaspoonful of the flaxseed meal mush, gradually increasing to about a table-spoonful. This may be mixed with milk. It is advocated by some of the best feeders that the raw flaxseed meal gives just as good results if mixed with the milk, and the danger of the flaxseed becoming sour by mixing with water is eliminated.—Hoard's Dairyman.

The Milkmaid Needs Rest. The dairy cow should be rested between lactation periods. If she refuses to dry up of her own accord use some method of getting her dry so she can have a little chance to build up for her next milking period.

DISCIPLINE AT SEA.

Penalties and Privileges Aboard Ship in Former Days.

Some remarkable advice to seafarers is given in an old Portuguese book published for the guidance of mariners. Among other things it deals with the rights of captains to assault sailors and the methods in which the attacks are to be legally met.

The sailor was advised to bear calmly any verbal abuse that an irate skipper may hurl at him, but if words passed to blows he was to run away into the bows and firmly take his stand beside the anchor chain.

Should an infuriated master armed with a belaying pin or other lethal weapon chase him to his stronghold the mariner was to slip round to the farther side of the chain. Should he still be pursued he was to call his messmates to witness that the master had broken the rules by circumventing the chain.

Then at last he was to defend himself, and let us hope he would do it well. Other little matters of discipline are set out, and they show a noble effort to make the punishment fit the crime.

The ship's clerk, a privileged person who acted as bookkeeper, purser and cargo master, was liable to be branded in the forehead, to lose his right hand and to forfeit all of his property if he made a wrong entry in the ship's book or connived at such an entry.

A seaman who fell asleep on his watch was only put on a diet of bread and water unless the offense was committed in hostile waters. In that case he must be stripped naked, flogged by his messmates and ducked thrice in the sea.

If he were an officer, however, he would only lose all food except his bread and have a pall of water hung over from the head downward.—London Tit-Bits.

Literary and Musical Pillage.

Bernard Shaw's defense of literary "pillage" was anticipated by his fellow countryman, Balfe, the composer of "The Bohemian Girl," who used to borrow generously from other people's scores. On one occasion, the London Express recalls, he was rehearsing a new opera at Drury Lane and the first fiddle, an Italian, was horrified to come upon page after page of familiar music. "Mr. Balfe, Mr. Balfe," he said in horror, "dat is Mozart." "And a capital man, too," was the Irishman's reply. "Get on with the rehearsal."—Indianapolis News.

My wife is more small."—Exchange.

HARRIS & CO. PROPRIETORS. WATFORD, JULY 10, 1914.

Ten thousand able-bodied men are walking the streets in Montreal, unable to obtain employment. The vast majority of them are Bulgarians, Russians and Austrians, comparatively recent arrivals, but there are many from England and Scotland also.

The happiest men in the land today is the successful farmer. He sits under his own vine and fig tree, undisturbed by the maddening noise of the great city. Banks fail, railroads go into the hands of receivers, booming towns collapse, all business stagnates. But the wise farmer can snap his finger at these things. He is the monarch of all he surveys on his broad acres.

The Koran, the sacred book of the Mohammedans, was until recently practically a dead book to the Turks, for the reason that it was written in Arabic, and so the Young Turk party thinking to stimulate Mohammedanism to new life, had the koran translated into the Turkish vernacular, but now, instead of helping Mohammedanism the reading of the Koran has helped to alienate the Turks from the faith, and the Ottoman Government has deemed it best to confiscate and destroy the translations.

A good many farmers have gone from the Western and far Western States of the United States into the Canadian Northwest. According to United States Consul F. C. Dillingham, stationed at Winnipeg, about 418,000 immigrants arrived in Canada in 1913, of whom 147,000 were British, 116,000 Americans and 130,000 were from continental Europe. During March, 1914, more than 5,800 experienced American farmers, all well to do, came to Western Canada to make their homes. They brought $1,776,000 in cash and $1,132,000 in settlers' effects. While the total immigration to Canada increased 23,000 in 1913 over 1912, the number of immigrants from the United States decreased nearly 25,000 in 1913, as compared with 1912.

Corunna, July 2.—About half a hundred men, women and children were thrown into the river at Stag Island last night, when a board walk leading to the dock gave way. The wildest confusion prevailed and the shrieks of those thrown into the water, mingled with the exclamations of terror of those on the shore. The water was but three feet deep and those in it were soon helped out. A few feet farther out the water would have been over their heads and the current would have carried them into the channel.

Petrolia, July 7.—Fire which broke out at 12:30 this morning in the old frame feed store of G. C. Bell on Front street, caused a loss estimated at $3,000, and for a time threatened to spread to the big livery barn adjoining. It was caught in the nick of time. The flames had made great headway before it was noticed. The fire department was on hand quickly, and by great work succeeded in keeping the flames in the rear of the store.

Blenheim, July 6.—Mrs. Willis Bell, aged 60, dropped dead to-day while about her housework. She prepared breakfast for her husband, who is engineer at the British Cannery's factory here. When he left for work she appeared in good health. Her son, Harry, who is about fourteen years old, came down stairs for breakfast sometime after his father had gone to work, and found her lying dead on the doorstep. Dr. Hanks, the coroner, was called, and pronounced death from stroke and no inquest necessary.

Should You Fall Overboard

And Cannot Swim Read Here Just What To Do

In reply to the question as to what one who cannot swim should do if he falls into the water when there is no assistance at hand, William H. Daly, champion life saver of the United States, once said: "When one falls into the water the weight of the body will force it under the water at first, but it will rise again if the mouth is kept shut. When you are under the water clasp your hands behind your back, squaring your elbows so as to balance the floating body and you will rise to the surface on your back and float until help reaches you or until you starve as long as you keep your hands in that position. The hands clasped and placed on the back of the neck is an equally good position."

East Lambton Election

A report in circulation on Saturday last, which was published in the Toronto Globe and London Advertiser under a Forest date, to the effect that the returning officer for East Lambton, Mr. Karr, had declared R. J. McCormick, the Liberal candidate, elected by 11 majority, thus reversing the figures announced after the close of the polls that Dr. Martyn, the Conservative candidate, had been elected by a small majority. It was stated that an error had been discovered in the figures in one of the Plympton divisions which gave Mr. McCormick 48, when the figures should have been 62. The addition of 20 to McCormick's total would have given him a majority of 11 over Dr. Martyn.

For a brief time on Saturday it was stated that McCormick had been elected, but a closer examination of the figures was later said to have shown that the supposed 66 was in reality 46, the figure four having been made so that it was mistaken for a six by the returning officer. That being the case, the returning officer declared Dr. Martyn elected by a majority of nine.

BETTY'S ANSWER

And the Unhappiness It Caused

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Ben Finney squinted thoughtfully at the lowering sky. Although the grass of the plains was green and lush with many summer rains, the gathering clouds gave promise of more water.

"I'd hate to get these glad rags all dampened up," muttered Ben regretfully as he glanced down at his gala attire.

He made a brave figure, indeed, as he sat on his big black horse. He wore new buckskin breeches—brand new—and snow white Angora chaps, a white silk shirt with a blue silk handkerchief tucked about his strong brown throat and a fifteen dollar hat on top of his fair, curly hair.

"All on account of a girl who would not look twice at me if I was all covered with gold lace, like that army fellow that's been staying there," sighed Ben as he pricked the black horse with his silver spurred heels.

The horse bounded down the trail, and Ben Finney, riding like a centaur, turned his thoughts from the impending disaster of rain upon his best clothes and meditated upon his chances of finding Betty Dangerfield at home.

Old man Dangerfield, as he was locally known, was pointing out of the gate when Ben approached the house. "Another good for nothing cowpuncher!" snorted Dangerfield fiercely as they passed.

Ben laughed lightly. They were all accustomed to Dangerfield's insults when his rheumatism was more wrenching than usual.

But the big hearted cowboys of that country would have risked more than Dangerfield's barbs for a smile and a word from lovely Betty, his pretty daughter and keeper of his widowed household.

Betty was sitting in the front porch now, demurely sewing a seam, as a housewife should.

Wah Ching, the Chinese cook, peered from his kitchen window and, glimpsing Ben's glad attire, cackled shrilly:

"Him come, allee samee, velly fine; him go, chop-chop, velly fast, allee samee, velly mad!" he muttered.

In truth, while Ben Finney looked very fine and brave, his heart was fluttering painfully before it made one last drop into his shining boots.

To dream about Betty Dangerfield when he was a dozen miles away was one thing; to look into her changing eyes—now gray, now brown, now green—was another proposition.

He detected mirth and admiration in her first glance at his gallant form. He banished the admiration as foolish and he remembered the quickly repressed mirth, and his heart found refuge in the splendid boots.

"Good afternoon, Mr. Finney," dimpled Betty as she came forward with outstretched hand and carefully lowered lashes.

Ben dropped from the saddle and held her hand in his own big brown palm for an instant. Then the delicious second was over, and he was sitting on the steps, one knee clasped in his hands and his eyes devouring her sweet face.

He didn't know what to say. The heart that might have prompted him, having departed from its accustomed place under the pocket of his white silk shirt, was also dumb.

"Father has gone over to River Bend," volunteered Betty after they had discussed the weather.

"I met him," said Ben; then, with sudden inspiration he added, "What do you think he said, Miss Betty?"

"Something awful, I am afraid," laughed Betty. "Daddy's rheumatism is bothering him a lot just now—poor dear! What did he say, Mr. Finney?"

Ben turned brick red, but he kept on doggedly.

"He said, 'There goes another good for nothing cowpuncher!'" explained Ben.

It was Betty's turn to blush, and she did it most becomingly.

"How horrid of daddy! I must apologise for him. I am sure he is very fond of all his neighbors. You know his rheumatism is very painful!"

like to be that one!" In this manner Ben Finney's heart leaped up for a moment's heroic action and prompted his tongue to bold speech.

"Oh, Mr. Finney—Ben—I'm so sorry," began Betty in a panic stricken tone as she started up from her rocking chair, "but—"

Ben's heart went back to his heels. He arose and put out a protesting hand.

"Never mind, Miss Betty. Don't mind me. I've got a nerve to think of you, you know, with that swell army chap around, only—well, forget it, you know. I must be going. I'm afraid it's going to rain. Good afternoon!"

With the words tumbling off his lips, Ben Finney clapped on his broad brimmed hat, leaped into his saddle, plunged his spurs into the satin flanks of the black horse and tore away through the gate and out of the vicinity of the Dangerfield domain.

Betty stared after him with amazed eyes, while behind the open window in the parlor the gold laced form of the young army officer shook with silent laughter.

In the kitchen Wah Ching rattled the supper dishes and grinned cheerfully. "Him no stay supper? Golly! I see am come, I see am go skedaddle. Tea, hee!"

Ben Finney was not in a laughing mood as he dashed wildly across the green ranges in his light rain.

He was not thinking of the sopping brim of his splendid hat, nor of the soaked silk shirt which clung to his broad shoulders and showed every muscle, nor of the drooping plumage of the Angora chaps.

Poor Ben saw nothing save Betty's startled glance at his declaration of love—surprise because he dared to speak of love! He choked with resentment. Out here in the great west they believed him to be a poor cowboy, dependent upon his $30 per month, without an eye to the future, when in fact he was heir to a tidy fortune that had remained untouched in Chicago banks for three years while he reveled in the free life of the plains and earned his bread.

The storm increased. The rain beat in his face, and he was glad of the wind and the wet as he struggled against it. It was life, he told himself grimly. Only when the sun came out by and by it would be a travesty on his own life, for the sun could not shine for him without Betty Dangerfield.

At last he found himself in a rocky canyon miles away from home and with a bewildering sense that he had suffered a bad dream.

It was still raining and the sides of the canyon were raked with gullies of water pouring down into the narrow creek that disappeared in a smother of foam at the other end of the canyon.

"What shall I do?" asked Ben hoarsely, and there came no answer to the question of what a man must do with his life if he cannot get the woman he loves. All the fervor of life seemed gone without that evanescent hope that some day he might wake up and find that Betty Dangerfield loved him.

He told himself that he had been a fool to cherish hope so long. He ought to have spoken long ago and allowed her to put him out of his misery.

Ben Finney laughed bitterly at the thought.

"Oh, Ben, why do you laugh like that?" asked a timid voice at his elbow.

"I am dreaming," said Ben, turning his head slowly around to find that the voice was not that of a dream girl. It was the voice of Betty Dangerfield herself. She was riding her pony, and the rush of the torrents had drowned the hoof beats.

Her khaki habit was soaking wet, and raindrops clung to the red-gold tendrils of her uncovered hair. The swift ride had brought a roseate flush to her clear skin, and her changing eyes were pools of mysterious shadows.

"Miss Betty?" gasped Ben Finney, staring at her. "Something has happened to you?"

Betty shook her head.

"Daddy is all right," she said gravely, "but something has happened to me."

Ben whirled about, his hand on his holster.

eyes gazing into his hurt blue ones. "That is why I followed you here, Ben Finney, because you can help me. Will you?"

"With my life!" promised Ben grimly.

"It's about a man," began Betty, and her dimples deepened as Ben tightened his hand on his gun—"a man of whom I'm fond. Well, I—I love him, Ben." Her eyes fell, and she did not see the agony that came into the handsome face under the dripping sombrero.

"Yes," gritted Ben between his teeth, "you love him—and tell me the rest."

"He came and asked me to marry him, and then—then"—Betty faltered. "And then?" thundered Ben.

"He rode away as fast as he could," confessed Betty. "And so I ran after him."

"Well, what did he say?" demanded Ben, who was deathly white.

Betty looked up and saw the agony in his strong face.

"Oh, Ben!" she cried. "What are you going to say?"

Betty stared. "Me? You don't mean me, Betty! Is it me you love?"

"Of course, goose!" sobbed Betty as she slipped from her saddle into his arms.

"But why didn't you tell me, then? You said you were sorry, and I thought—"

There were 40 many important things to talk about.

WEIGHT OF A BODY.

How It Decreases as It Goes Above or Below the Earth's Surface.

Everybody weighs more at the surface of the earth than it can at any other point. Its weight diminishes as it is removed above the surface or below it. As it rises from the surface its weight decreases in inverse ratio to the squares of the distances from the center of the earth. As it descends below the surface its weight decreases directly as the distance from the center of the earth.

Thus a body weighing 100 pounds at the surface of the earth, which is approximately 4,000 miles from the center, would weigh only twenty-five pounds at a point 4,000 miles high. At twice the distance it has one-quarter the weight.

If we drop the same body half the distance to the center of the earth or to a point approximately 2,000 miles below the surface it will weigh fifty pounds.

The reason for this is that at 2,000 miles from the center the body is on the surface of a sphere of 2,000 miles radius.

What causes weight is the mass of matter combined with distance from the center. A globe of 2,000 miles radius contains one-eighth as much matter as a globe of 4,000 miles radius, the size of the earth; therefore only one-eighth as much matter attracts the body, which, if mass were the only factor, would at 2,000 miles from the center weigh one-eighth as much as at the surface of the earth. But it is also only half as far from the center as it was at the surface and, if distance were the only factor, would weigh four times as much as on the surface. Four times one-eighth is one-half; therefore it weighs half what it would at the surface.

Now, suppose we drop this body to the very center of the earth and see what it would weigh. All the matter of the earth is now outside it and can exercise no attraction whatever upon it; therefore it weighs nothing at all!

The Ant

Consider the ant. Picnic season's near and she is worth studying. Ants are the most intelligent of all insects. In the insect world they rank where men do higher up. Some ants seem to have some things on some men.

The main work in an ant colony is done by the females. But in antdom the working females are a specialized type.

An ant hill is like a summer hotel for the number of its guests. Ants are fond of entertaining green flies, beetles and other bugs. One naturalist has counted 1,500 species of insects living in the ant colonies. Ants, as you know, have a sweet tooth. Many of these insect guests are cherished for the saccharine secretions which they can offer to their hosts as food. But many are mere spongers, getting much and giving nothing.—Minneapolis News.

Soft corns are difficult to eradicate, but Holloway's Corn Cure will draw them out painlessly.

Father Gnam, the well-known Petrolia and Wyoming priest, has been excommunicated, latest sentence. The excommunication follows trouble between Father Gnam and Bishop Fallon, of London, arising over the dismissal of an organist in Father Gnam's church, some two or three years ago. The matter has been threshing around in the courts ever since.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Waterworth, of Glencoe, were driving home from Euphemia on Sunday evening when their horse shied at a white calf in a field adjoining the road. The horse bolted and turning suddenly upset the buggy. Mrs. Waterworth had her collarbone and two ribs broken and sustained internal injuries. Mr. Waterworth escaped with a few slight injuries.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

Perhaps this case may be similar to yours J. Wesley Tully of (Box 673), Selma, Cal., writes: Gentlemen—"It gives me much pleasure to be able to send you a testimonial, if by its reaching some sufferer your medicines will do as much for him as they have for me. At the age of fourteen I was troubled with a great deal of malaria and biliousness, accompanied with the worst sort of large boils. I was persuaded by my parents, who have always been strong believers in Dr. Pierce's remedies, to try the Golden Medical Discovery. I took one bottle and the boils all disappeared, but I did not stop at one bottle, I took three and the malaria all left me and I have had no more boils to this day, thanks to the Golden Medical Discovery for my relief.

"Following an operation for appendicitis two years ago I was troubled very much with constipation and I have been trying Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Tablets and they have rid me of the troublesome gas and I have aided me in conquering the whole trouble, thanks again for the Tablets and for the advice I have obtained from The People's Common Sense Medical Advice." ## LINCOLN'S STATEROOM.

The President Thought He Had Shrunk in Size Overnight.

In "The Everyday Life of Abraham Lincoln" Mr. F. F. Browne includes an amusing anecdote told by Admiral Porter about the president's short visit to the front in the latter part of March, 1865. Mr. Lincoln had changed his quarters from the River Queen to the Malvern, Admiral Porter's flagship, which was then lying in the James river, near City Point. Admiral Porter says:

The Malvern was a small vessel with very poor cabin accommodations and was not at all fitted to receive high personages. She was a captured blockade runner. I offered the president my bed, but he positively declined it and chose to sleep in a small stateroom outside the cabin that my secretary occupied. It was only 6 feet long by 4 1/2 feet wide, a very tiny place to hold the president of the United States, but Mr. Lincoln seemed pleased with it.

When he came to breakfast the next morning I asked how he had slept. "I slept well," he answered, "but you can't put a long sword in a short scabbard. I was too long for that berth." Then I remembered that he was over six feet four inches and that the berth was only six feet! That day while we were away from the ship all the carpenters were put to work. They took down the stateroom partitions and enlarged the room to eight feet by six and a half feet. A mattress four feet wide was put in the new berth.

Nothing was said to the president about the change in his quarters, but the next morning he came out of the room smiling and said, "A miracle happened last night. I shrank six inches in length and about a foot sideways. I got somebody else's big pillow and slept in a better bed than I had on the River Queen." He enjoyed it greatly, but I think if I had given him two fence rails to sleep on he would not have found fault. That was Abraham Lincoln in all things that related to his own comfort. He would never let you put yourself out for him under any circumstances.

A NAVAL COMEDY.

Surrender of the Spanish Gunboat Calao at Manila.

On the afternoon of the 12th (May 12, 1898) a small Spanish gunboat came steaming up Manila bay, directly toward the American fleet. The surprise of the people in the fleet was great; this little vessel seemed so confident and friendly. Finally one of our ships fired a shot across her bow. This did not seem to make any difference to her, for she kept on just the same. Then we saw an officer go alongside from the flagship. We found out that evening that this vessel was the Spanish gunboat Calao and that she had been cruising in the southern part of the Philippines for a long time and had not heard about the war, and, the time of her cruise being finished, she was now returning to Manila. The officers and men had been looking forward to this for a long time, because in Manila they were to find their wives, children, parents, friends, theaters, clubs, hotels, newspapers and all the things that make sailors look forward with happiness to getting home. They saw a great many ships in the harbor flying the American flag, but this did not give them any uneasiness, and when the first gun was fired by the American ship they did not notice that the shot came across the bow of their own ship, and thought it was simply the first gun of some salute.

But when the second shot was fired and they heard the whizzing of the shell they knew something was wrong. And when the American officer came on board and told them that every ship in the fleet was destroyed and that they themselves were prisoners of war their feelings of joyful hope went through a change that let us hope, few of us will ever know.—From Admiral Bradley A. Fiske's "War Time in Manila."

Microscopic Engraving.

Perhaps the greatest feat of microscopic engraving was accomplished by a Jewish farmer in Alberta, who prepared an address of welcome to the Duke of Connaught. The address was inscribed in Hebrew on a grain of wheat and contained no fewer than 300 letters. So fine was the lettering that a microscope was necessary to read the inscription with any ease.—Liverpool Post.

GOOD PIE CRUST.

Secret Lies In Having Pastry Cold and Oven Hot.

When making pie crust one must use the best lard, butter and sifted pastry flour. If possible have a marble slab for rolling out. Have the lard and water as cold as possible, handle as little as possible, work quickly and keep the crust cold until it goes into the oven. All crust is greatly improved if mixed and placed in a bowl directly on the ice for five or six hours before using. The true secret of good crust is to have it icy cold and the oven very hot when the pie is first put into it.

For one ordinary pie with an upper and a lower crust, use six tablespoonfuls of sifted flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one generous tablespoonful of lard and a scant tablespoonful of butter, with sufficient ice water to hold the paste together. Sift the flour and salt together, and with a double chopping knife chop in the ice cold lard and butter. Do not mix with the fingers. Chop thoroughly until the flour resembles coarse meal; then very gradually add the ice water and mix with a wooden spoon to a paste that is not crumbly, but sticks together without adhering to the sides of the bowl. Now cover with a slightly damp napkin and set on the ice for four or five hours. When ready to make the pie divide the crust exactly in two with a sharp knife, dust the board and rolling pin lightly with flour to prevent sticking, but use no more flour than is absolutely necessary. Roll the crust out quickly into a very thin sheet, always rolling away from you, and be careful when you lay the paste in the well greased pie plate not to stretch it, but see that it covers the plate loosely. Always brush the lower crust over with a little white of egg to keep the liquid from the filling from penetrating it.

Then put in the filling, wet the paste around the edge of the pie, lay on the upper crust, press the edges together with the tines of a silver fork and make several vents in the upper crust for the steam to escape. Brush over the top of the pie with a little milk (to give a good brown color), trim off the superfluous paste and bake in a very hot oven. If a lower pie crust only is to be made, as for lemon meringue pie, use half the recipe and prick the paste shell across the bottom to keep it from puffing up.

ONE BED FOR THE COURT.

It Was a Big One, Though, and Held All Its Numerous Members.

The first courthouse of Henry county, Ill., was a frame structure, eight feet by fourteen, set in the midst of an uninhabited prairie. But as little villages began to spring up in the county a lively contention for the honor of being the county seat began. Cambridge finally won, for it was nearest the center of the county.

This was in the forties of the last century. The first session of circuit court was at hand and Cambridge was on its mettle to entertain the court suitably. The difficulties to anything but pioneer courage and resourcefulness would have seemed insuperable. The village consisted of eight or ten little dwellings, a tiny general store, a blacksmith shop and a carpenter shop. The new courthouse was unfinished, but would be used, as the session fortunately fell in the summer.

Now the housewives laid their heads together to contrive how the court-officials, litigants and witnesses—should be lodged and fed. There was almost nothing that could be bought, except sugar, molasses, tea, coffee and flour. But they had an abundant supply of yellow legged chickens, home cured hams, milk, eggs, butter and cream, as well as their vegetable gardens to draw on. There was no fresh fruit, but they brought out their cherished stores of wild plum marmalade and wild crabapple preserves. Both were made with molasses, and after they had sufficient time to season were really delicious. Besides, the hillside were plink with the beautiful wildwood sorrel, the leaves of which make delicious pies in skillful hands.

The village boasted one group of forest trees, a small grove of sugar maples, half a mile away, and in their shade Mr. Atwater built a long table with sawhorses and boards. With the combined stock of table linen, crockery and cutlery possessed by the housewives the table was laid with sufficient elegance, according to pioneer standards. It was felt that the court would be properly feasted, but how about lodging? That was the real difficulty. The tiny houses and their beds were full to overflowing with their proper inmates.

But there was the loft of the carpenter shop. The store had a whole bolt of unbleached muslin. It was torn into lengths equal to the length of the loft, and sewed together by hand, of course. The lower floor was covered deep with nice clean shavings, the immense sheet laid over them and tacked to the walls all the way round. On this Broddingnagian bed the court lay in two rows. From the extra supply required for winter enough quilts were mustered to cover the sleepers. As for pillows no one gave a thought to those effeminate luxuries. The lawyers might lay their heads on their saddles, or their rolled up coats and be thankful.

Thus was the circuit court sumptuously fed and sufficiently lodged, thanks to the ingenious women of Henry county.—Youth's Companion.

Might as Well Have Seen Him.

Awakening with a bad headache the morning after a banquet, a suburban dentist mused, not unpleasantly, on his last evening's spree. But suddenly his wife appeared and, advancing to his bedside, shouted hysterically: "You wretch! What will the neighbors say at your coming home drunk last night?"

"But, my dear, nobody saw me," the dentist protested.

"Nobody saw you! What if nobody did see you? You know well enough they all heard the way I carried on when you got back."—New York Tribune.

A Lesson In Curling.

Even Worse.

"Why do they hate each other so?" "They are rivals." "Oh, both trying to marry the same girl, eh? That sort of thing certainly does arouse a man's primal passions." "In this case it is worse than that. They are both trying to marry the same fortune."—Houston Post.

Barrett's Pun.

Lawrence Barrett, though stern and dignified, could unbend a little occasionally. Once a popular low comedian proposed a combination with him, which he declined.

"It would have been an unhappy illustration," said the tragedian in relation to it, "of Grin and Barrett."

This Age is the Age of Dress

The world is all running to clothes. We are made to believe that the great thing about a woman is her clothes. But this is for the women. Men don't care a snap about what the women wear, so it is decent. The masculine eye has not been gifted with those powers that can discern the grace and delicate intricacy in the lines and folds of a gown. The man sees the woman and not the clothes, and don't you forget it—the brightness of mind, gentility of temper, the unselfishness of life, and the cordial goodwill he sees through the dress and under the millinery.

The dress may be costly and beautiful, but it does not impress him if the wearer is full of conceit and vanity. Sorry, indeed, will be the day when man makes his estimate of a woman from the clothes she has on, and fails to see those immortal qualities of mind and heart which constitute the true woman. The mere expression of vanity in a woman is not hopeful, is not prophetic of happy homes or a noble citizenship.

The marriage took place Thursday evening at the home of the bride's mother, Petrolia, of Edith Mary, daughter of Mrs. K. Knight, to Geo. Morris Lambert, of Oil Springs. The bride is one of Petrolia's most popular young ladies and the groom one of Oil Springs' best known young business men.

According to report from the Department of Agriculture, the apple crop in the County of Kent will be greatly decreased by the fire blight, which has become very prevalent in the past two months. The hot weather is greatly to blame for the spreading of this blight, which kills the young shoots, and causes them to turn black, therefore making it necessary for new shoots to grow in order to have any kind of a crop. For a radius of twelve miles from Chatham these conditions are very bad, and with the start which the blight has, nothing can be done to remedy it.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Thornicroft celebrated their silver wedding at their home London Road east, on the 12th inst. Relatives at friends to the number of 46, partook of an excellent dinner and spent the evening in social intercourse. Among those present were a number who were present at their wedding 25 years previous. The host and hostess were the recipients of a number of valuable presents, indicative of the high esteem in which they are held.

Park Family Reunion at Utah

Speaking of the fiftieth annual reunion of the Park family the Provo Herald says:—"Then followed a brief history of the Park family by Albert Jones, who introduced a map prepared through the kindness of an old pioneer still residing at Watford, showing the portions of the old farms of John and William Park, together with that of the Gardners, situated and being part of town of Watford, Ont., Canada, from where in 1846 came three Park brothers and Archibald Gardner, the noted pioneer millwright, driving their well appointed ox teams for their thousand mile trip to Winter Quarter.

The next year, 1847, they came on to Utah with the pioneer trains, John came on to Provo in 1849. William and the Gardners remained in Salt Lake county. The descendants of John now number two hundred; Williams' will no doubt number three hundred, most of whom reside in Salt Lake, Utah and Junab counties, with scattering members all the way from Canada to Arizona.

A baseball game in the afternoon with a grand ball in the evening brought the fiftieth annual anniversary gathering of the Park family to a close.

HOT WEATHER AILMENTS

A medicine that will keep children well is a great boon to every mother. This is just what Baby's Own Tablets do. An occasional dose keeps the little stomach and bowels right and prevents sickness. During the hot summer months stomach troubles speedily turn to fatal diarrhoea or cholera infantum and if Baby's Own Tablets are not at hand the child may die within a few hours. Wise mothers always keep the Tablets in the house and give their children an occasional dose to clear out the stomach and bowels and keep them well. Don't wait till baby is ill—the delay may cost a precious life. Get the Tablets now and you may feel reasonably safe. Every mother who uses the Tablets praises them and that is the best evidence that there is no other medicine for children so good. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Co., Brockville, Ont.

Dell-Bryson

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bryson, London Road, on Wednesday, June 17, when their second daughter, Annie Bell, was united in marriage to John T. Dell, of Plympton. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. A. Ross, of Wyoming. At four o'clock to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, played by Miss Margaret E. Bryson, the bride, leaning on the arm of her father, entered the parlor wearing a gown of white silk trimmed with shadow lace and carrying a bouquet of bridal roses and maiden hair fern. The bridal couple were unattended. The bridegroom's gift to the bride was a beautiful pendant and to the pianist a gold ring set with pearls and rubies. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful presents. The happy couple left for Clarkston, Mich., where they will visit the latter's sister. The bride's travelling suit was of navy blue serge with hat to match.

COMMUNICATIONS.

[We do not hold ourselves responsible for opinions expressed by correspondents.]

TO EDITOR GUIDE-ADVOCATE:—Dear Sir:—

Will you kindly insert the following in your paper for the benefit of the person who sent me a prayer chain. I am anxious that it should be finally broken and on receipt of the prayer put it straight in the fire. I feel quite indifferent to any "misfortune" that is threatened to follow such an action, or on the other hand, to any "pure joy" that is promised to those who copy it nine days running. It is amazing that such superstition should be supported by many who believe are earnest and religious people. Surely a little thought on the subject should convince us that the God of Love cannot wish his children to be threatened or bribed into using a particular prayer. Moreover as even the strongest natures are subject at times to the spell of superstition, I protest strongly against the presenting of this direct form of temptation, i.e., to copy the prayer, not from conviction of its merits but from dread of the consequence of failing to do so. This chain of prayer has been in existence for some time. I have received a third copy. They have been a source of distress and perplexity to many people and if each person receiving a copy would at once burn it, it should be broken.

Yours truly, E. R. KIRVELL, Warwick, July 6th, 1914.

Wedding Reception

On Thursday evening the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Sovie, Oil Springs was the scene of a happy gathering. The occasion was a reception tendered the Rev. Mr. Loveday and his young bride, on the return of the former to resume his work as pastor of the Baptist church. The event was not confined to Baptists alone. The Rev. Mr. Darling and Rev. Mr. McEachern conveyed the cordial greetings of the Methodist and Presbyterian churches respectively. Miss Emily Sovie on behalf of the Baptist people and friends presented Mr. Loveday with an envelope containing a substantial sum of money. Mr. Griffin and the local clergy made congratulatory addresses. Mrs. Loveday created a most favorable impression. A most enjoyable evening was spent in games, singing, etc. After this a dainty luncheon was served, consisting of cake, coffee and ice cream. The company broke up at 11 o'clock, each and all in their praises of the manner in which they were delightfully entertained by the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Sovie.—Petrolia Topic.

Little Girl Killed By Auto Six-year-old Daughter of Wes. Willoughby Struck by Touring Car and Dies a few Hours later motorists, and sustained internal injuries from which she died a few hours later. Evidence taken to-night at an inquiry conducted by Coroner Dr. A. S. Thompson, of this town, indicated that the fatality was purely accidental, but a further investigation is fixed for next Monday night, when the driver of the automobile will testify.

The little girl had been to the village with her brother, Gordon, and was opposite their home when the two cars approached along the road. The foremost was quite close, and according to the little boy, was proceeding slowly. Lela started to cross the road, but being warned by her brother, hesitated. Then seeing the automobile almost upon her, she darted across in front of it, receiving a glancing blow from the fender. The car immediately stopped, and one of the party summoned Dr. C. B. Eckel, who did all in his power for the little girl after she had been removed to her home.

Crown Attorney McKillop was notified and ordered Dr. Thompson, of Stratford, to call an inquiry. The party of motorists proceeded on their way, but will be asked to return for Monday's hearing. There were six in the party, all of Chicago, bound for New York. They included August Heinze, driver and owner, and Messrs. Kaeding and Sanderford, of Chicago. William Pittball, who saw the accident from a little distance, testified at the inquiry to-night that the car was traveling at a slow rate of speed, perhaps six miles an hour. He was corroborated by the boy, Gordon Willoughby, and by Lorne Patch, who was also close by.

IN MEMORIAM—Lines written in memory of Christopher Willoughby by the family.

One by one we gathered round thy bedside, father, It was hard to watch you suffer so, But we feel that now thy suffering, For ever more is past.

How we miss thee, dear old father, From thy accustomed place, Thy chair forever more is vacant, No one can ever fill thy place.

Pale withered hands That more than three score years Had wrought and toiled for others, Now still and silent lie folded on your breast.

In mute appeal they tell of labors done, And well earned rest, that came with set of sun, From thy worn brow the lines of care are swept, None know life's secret save the happy dead.

And gazing where you lay we felt, Thy chair forever more is vacant, Lord of earth, and God of Heaven, (soal again, Evermore) Thy will be done.

Sandwich, July 6.—Harry Hind, son of Rev. Duncan Hind, dived into the Detroit River tonight and saved the life of 9-year-old Johnny Flannery, who had slipped off the docks. As he was going up the street Hind noticed that a wallet in which he had $100 belonging to his employer was missing. He went back to the docks, and seeing the wallet floating out into the stream, dived again and recovered it.
