A Tillsonburg rural mail carrier was sentenced to three years in Portsmouth penitentiary on Monday when he pleaded guilty to having taken letters containing money orders to the amount of $64.55 from mail bags in his charge. He will also be deported to the United States on the completion of his sentence.

After being robbed and thrown over the Niagara Gorge where he lay for two days with a broken spine, Albert Dunk, a Toronto electrician electrician was discovered by tourists and taken to the hospital. He was conscious and was able to tell the police, he had lost the use of his limbs and had dragged himself over half a mile by his hands. His recovery is impossible.

Since the recent undetected serious robberies in Amherstburg, business men are taking no chances of being caught with anything more than the minimum amount of money. One afternoon recently about an hour after the bank closed, one business man sought to get change for a $10.00 bill and called to eight places before securing the accommodation, being told in every place that every bit of currency had been banked up to the time of closing, so as not to have but a small amount of cash on hand at the end of the day.

Dahlias demand water, especially after the buds have begun to form. Moreover they like the feeling of moisture on the leaves. It is advisable therefore, to use the hose on dahlias freely and to allow water to run around the roots until the soil is soaked to a depth of two or three inches. When water cannot be given, moisture can be retained in the soil by mulching the ground with grass clippings, stable litter or peat moss, such as the seed stores sell. It is better to mulch the dahlias than to cultivate them from now on, as roots grow very close to the surface and are very easily injured.

For the three fall months of September, October and November, the duty of 25 per cent on grade sheep imported into Canada from the United States for breeding purposes will be removed. The reason for this step is the fact that for the past two or three years there has been a gradual decline in the sheep-breeding industry in the Dominion. It is felt that with the removal of the duty encouragement will be given to Canadian sheep breeders to improve and enlarge their flocks. Owing to the increasing profitability of the sheep-raising business the department feels warranted in taking almost any step necessary to ensure a steady supply of sheep for the growing demand. Prospects for this business are considered exceedingly bright.

Farmers in the Roman Catholic parish of Big Point, below Chatham, are praying for the extermination of the corn borer, the destructive grub which has multiplied to an alarming extent and which threatens to totally destroy the corn crop. Sunday afternoon more than 400 people, the majority farmers and their sons, followed Rev. Father Joseph Emery around the parish. At the four corners of the parish the procession was halted while the priest offered prayers. They returned to the church, where a special service of prayer was held. Basing his sermon on the text, "Ask and ye shall receive," Father Emery pointed out that the Scriptures show that the ancients appealed to God in their time of trouble. If approached in the proper spirit the same God would hear the prayers of people today, he said. Farmers left their harvest fields to attend another special service of prayer in the Big Point church on Monday.

Dogs and cats abandoned by owners away for their vacations are convinced that there is no such place as home.

Fish may yet be the backbone of agriculture. Species unfit for consumption are being converted into fertilizers.

"Vacation tan" is the prevailing summer shade. As it is not a fast color it can be acquired by brief exposure.

It is intimated that the election will be held shortly after harvest. As the self-binders go to cover the spellbinders emerge.

A list of "don'ts" for vacationists includes: "Don't stay in a hotel where there are flies in the diningroom or kitchen." Where can they eat?

A couple of Regina newly-weds are making a honeymoon trip to Halifax in a rowboat. The long voyage is evidence that they are able to paddle their own canoe.

The invention of a reversible collar for men is reported. One faced with asbestos on one side and fur on the other would meet the requirements of a variable climate.

A hot air toy balloon collapsed when it dropped on the platform where a number of spellbinders were assembled at a political picnic in Ontario.

Bathing in public is prohibited within a hundred yards of a dwelling at an Ontario beach. To avoid possible shock the marine three-mile limit might be adopted.

Enough macaroni was made in the United States last year to circle the earth six times. Stringing macaroni across Italy might result in the lines being cut.

New York hat dealers confirm the discovery made in London that men's heads are decreasing in size. In time the male of the species may be described as a "pinhead."

A men's fashion note reports the return of suspenders to popular favor. "Galluses" have a keener sense of their responsibility than belts, and nether garments are said to hang more gracefully when supported by shoulder, tackling.

Note and Comment

If our friends in Warwick and Brooke townships would like to please their town friends, they might see that their names are painted in good plain letters on their mail boxes, and painted so the letters will not come off. When the town folks travel through the country, they like to say, "There's a fine farm; I know Mr. So-and-So who owns it," or "There's where Mr. Blank lives, the man who raises the best cattle in the township,"—and so on. Of course, if a man grows weeds better than anything else, or has any other reason for concealing the identity of his farm, he would better leave his name off the mail-box; but there are not many of that kind.

The historic doors of Notre Dame cathedral, Montreal, will be closed to visitors if they persist in disregarding the rules of "dress, headgear and conduct." Church officials have become incensed over feminine tourists wandering up and down the aisles, and alcoves with uncovered bobbed heads, breeches, rolled stockings, etc. Church members seeking a quiet hour for prayer have been rudely disturbed by some loud-talking sightseers inquiring "what that there thing cost" and "what do you do with this?" The shrine of the Sacred Heart has of course aroused special interest by reason of the incalculable value of its diamonds and other precious stones. Notre Dame holds too much impressive solemnity to be ruthlessly desecrated by flamboyant tourists and Catholic and Protestant alike will support the church officials in their warning protest.

Newspapers are generally so generous in the matter of giving free publicity to this, that and the other organization, that there are many members of the public who have lost all sense of proportion in this matter says the St. Thomas Times-Journal. A man walked into our news department the other day, announced in loud tones that he had left "some advertising" downstairs and as a quid pro quo handed over a typewritten manuscript with a request that it be published in the most conspicuous place possible. Investigation disclosed that the advertisement referred to consisted of eight words; the matter to be published free was about half a column. It does not seem to dawn on some people that a newspaper lives upon the space it sells, just as a butcher, a grocer, a baker, or a shoe retailer lives upon the commodities he sells. They look upon a newspaper as a vehicle for the free publication of paragraphs about forthcoming concerts, tea-meetings, lectures, meetings, games and what not, but they never dream of entering a retail store and asking to be presented with a shoulder of lamb, a sack of sugar, a quantity of bread or a pair of shoes. Yet it would be just as logical (or illogical) for them to do so as to demand an inch or a foot of free space from a newspaper. Broadly speaking, there is usually very little "news" value in an event before it happens. After it has happened it does become "news". The object of preliminary paragraphs is to "advertise" the event so as to scare up a crowd and to keep down their expenses.

What a Crowd! 8,000 former residents of Niagara Falls, Ont., attended the Old Home Week there. Supposing all those who spent their honeymoon at the Falls had attended, what a crowd they would have made.

The sudden death of William Jennings Bryan at Dayton, Tenn., is a spectacular climax to the evolution trial, with which his name has been so intimately linked. Only a few days ago Bryan was defending, with all the oratory and the eloquence at his command, the Bible from cover to cover. His sudden death emphasizes how small, after all, are the issues between evolutionists and anti-evolutionists and between modernists and fundamentalists when we are face to face with the realities of life and death. Time alone can estimate rightly the work and character of Bryan. He had been engaged in too many controversies and made too many enemies to be fairly pictured at the present time. To many he had been the sincere and earnest leader and champion of righteousness; to others, a soap-box demagogue, the representative of narrow bigotry. Only historians of the future can paint him in his proper perspective.

Publicity has been given the fact that the Kitchener Board of Health purpose to administer minute doses of iodine to the school children of that city in order to check an epidemic of goitre. A survey recently made revealed 76 per cent. of the pupils in the schools thus affected. In such an announcement the Kingston Whig remarks, "all must frankly and gratefully recognize the widening scope of community service. We have reached that point where the health of each unit is identified with the common good, and that is sound. Goitre has become alarmingly prevalent in different parts of the country; and yet it has been established beyond doubt that iodine administered in very small doses over a considerable period, acts as a most satisfactory cure. When that truth is generally grasped, and given practical application, this troublesome and sometimes dangerous disease will be stamped out."

All through Northern Ontario, in Thunder Bay, in Kenora, and in Rainy River, small lakes and rushing rivers abound. In many cases these are rock girt but often you see patches of soil along the shores. Shall these places ever be occupied? Shall future Canadians camp beside these still, beautiful waters or shall great stretches of road and water still separate the east from the West? These are questions which arise in the mind of the traveller. And, without thought the answer is generally "No." Still, blueberries grow in profusion, as also do strawberries, raspberries and scrub trees; so that, there must be fertility and some depth of soil into which the roots reach to feed the plants. In many older lands, people would swarm over these places and children would play in these waters, children who play in back yards in city slums and who know nothing of the entrancing life in the open. The time will come, when great cities East and West will clamor for the fruits and the game which can be procured in our waste places and hardy races will utilize this land of the north which is now passed by for prairie lands. When that day comes, Canada will be a great nation and contented multitudes will live beneath her flag.

"I would rather have six weekly newspapers than all the dailies in Canada to champion the interests of a cause," was the welcome tendered the members of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association by Mayor Ralph H. Webb, of Winnipeg, at the opening of the sixth annual convention of the organization at the Royal Alexandra Hotel. The Winnipeg Free Press in a leading editorial on the occasion of the newspapers convention said: "The editors of the weekly newspapers represent the country better than almost any other possible body of men could do, because each is so closely in touch with all phases of the life of his own community. That the greater part of the country is outside the large cities may not have occurred to some people who live in them and imagine that they largely constitute the country, while the towns and rural parts are of secondary consideration. The last few years have demonstrated rather forcefully that the cities do not stand up very well when anything happens to those other parts. The annual gathering of the weekly men, have a national significance. They should be a factor in spreading mutual under-

William Jennings Bryan Dies In City of Trial
BRILLIANT CAREER SUDDENLY ENDED AS DEATH CALLS GREAT COMMONER WHILE HE SLEPT ON SUNDAY AFTERNOON
William Jennings Bryan Is Found Dead in Bed at Home in Dayton, Tenn.—Stricken with Shocking Suddenness when Heart Gives Out—Made No Complaints of Illness
THREE TIMES PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE
Won Fame World Over With His Great Gift of Eloquence, His Struggle in the Political Field and Courageous Fights, Often Against Tremendous Odds, For His Ideals.
Dayton, Tenn., July 26.—William Jennings Bryan, three times presidential nominee of the Democratic party, and known the world over for his eloquence, died here this afternoon. The end came while the great commoner was asleep, and was attributed by physicians to apoplexy. He had retired to his room shortly after eating a heavy dinner to take a short rest. Mrs. Bryan sent the family chauffeur, Jim McCartney, to wake him about 4.30, and it was learned then that he was dead. Dr. W. F. Thomason and Dr. A. C. Broyles, who examined the body, expressed the opinion that Mr. Bryan had been dead between 30 and 45 minutes before they arrived. Funeral arrangements had not been completed late tonight but Mrs Bryan indicated interment would be in Arlington cemetery. Mr. Bryan, who was a colonel of the Third Nebraska Volunteers during the Spanish-American war, on several occasions had expressed a desire to be buried in Arlington. On Eve of Crusade Mr. Bryan's death came on the eve of another crusade he had planned to carry before the American people—a battle against modernism. He returned to Dayton this morning after having made addresses yesterday at Jasper and Winchester, Tennessee, and after having completed arrangements for the early publication of the speech he was to have made in closing the trial of John T. Scopes, who recently was found guilty of violating Tennessee anti-evolution law. Despite the strenuous program Mr. Bryan had been following as a member of the prosecution staff in the Scopes case and as leader of the fundamentalists, he appeared in excellent health. Shortly before Mr. Bryan entered his room to rest, he told his wife he had never felt better in his life, and was ready to go before the country to wage his fight in behalf of fundamentalism. About 4.30 o'clock Mrs. Bryan said she felt her husband had slept long enough, so she sent the chauffeur, who also was his personal attendant, to wake him. McCartney shook Mr. Bryan twice before he noticed the latter was not breathing. The physicians and A. B. Andrews, a neighbor, then were summoned hurriedly. Mrs. Bryan accepted the shock bravely and remained calm. "I am happy that my husband died without suffering, and in peace," she said. Famed as Politician Virtually dominant in the Democratic party for nearly 16 years, Wm. J. Bryan was three times nominated and defeated for the presidency. Then like Elijah of old, he cast his mantle upon the Elisha of Princeton and exerted a potent influence in bringing about Woodrow Wilson's first nomination for the office to which he, himself, had vainly aspired. Known in his youth as "the silver-tongued boy orator of the Platte," it was Mr. Bryan's eloquence in his famous "cross of gold" speech at the Democratic national convention in Chicago in 1896 that made him the choice of his party. He polled more than 6,500,000 votes in his first campaign. His career has been likened to that of Henry Clay, who also was three times nominated for the presidency and as many times defeated. Clay, too, became a secretary of state. Friends of Bryan insisted that, like Clay, he was too conscientious, consistent and scrupulous for a politician and that the famous Whig's declaration, "I would rather be right than be president," well described the man from Nebraska. There is no poisonous ingredient in Holloway's Corn Remover, it can be used without danger or injury. m

MOVING BEES

(Experimental Farm Notes)

Moving bees consists not only in transporting them to the new location, but in making them stay there. As bees range two or three miles from the hive in search of nectar, they will, if the new location is within this area, likely return to the old home; if, however, it is outside they will remain where placed.

The best time to move bees is in the spring or fall when the weather is cooler and the homing instinct weaker than in the summer.

To move in summer time to a point inside the range of flight, first move the bees to a point outside of it, or down cellar for a week, then to the ultimate location.

If the move is a short one, use a wheel barrow and bump the bees well, place an object to attract their attention in front of the entrance and change the appearance of the old location as much as possible.

The colony should be prepared for transportation in the evening of early morning to prevent loss of field bees.

The bottom-board and cover should be fastened to the hive body by staples sold for the purpose or by wooden cleats and nails.

To close the entrance and give ventilation, take a piece of wire gauze six inches wide and as long as the entrance is wide, and fold it along its longer centre line. Thrust the "V" edge into the entrance and fasten one leg of the "V" to the bottom-board and the other to the face of the hive by laths and nails.

Should the weather be hot, make a two-inch frame of dimensions similar to the hive body, and cover or roof it with wire gauze. This stapled to the hive in place of a cover gives top ventilation and clustering space.

If transportation is by wagon or automobile, place the hive so that the frames will be parallel to the axles of the vehicle; if by railroad, let them be parallel to the rails.

A. H. W. Birch, Apiarist.

IDOLATRY

What is an idol, what and where?
For many shrines will claim our prayer
What we desire! what we revere!
The idol of our soul is here
And we should know it.
For covetousness but seeks her own
Yet as an idol it is known
And draws us to the brink of ruin
And leads us from desire to doing
Let us destroy it.
It blurs our sky and makes a wreck
Destroys our peace, steals self respect
The sun but shines on us in vain

Our greatest blessings give us pain
Makes suicide.
Old Herod felt its power no doubt
In grand oration, with the shout
And great applause, he took God's place
And tumbled headlong to disgrace
In withered pride.
Materialism is our trend
And paganism is her friend
In us there seems a queer demand
To worship what we have in hand
Of form or style.
Unconscious we may be at first
With a desire to quench our thirst
It needs no genius, art, or skill

To form a god to suit our will
And self beguile.
The holiest symbols we can take
And gods of beauty from them make
And worship them with human love
And dream that they come from above

Worship of creed is pure deceit
To worship self is very sweet
But what we need is more than creeds
'Tis loving kindness that proceeds—
Out of the heart.
When the essential things depart
We hug our creeds still to our heart
The tender sympathetic tear

French Canada Celebrates Its History

June 24th of every year is the great day of the French-Canadian, in every city and every hamlet of Quebec Province and in the cities and centres of the New England States and in those parts of Ontario and the West where he has migrated. St. Jean Baptiste Day is never overlooked. It is well that it should be and it introduces into Canada an Old-World seventeenth century atmosphere that Canadians as a whole could ill afford to lose, either artistically or historically. Our pictures show some interesting features taken from floats exhibited on this occasion. There is the heroic 17th century farmer defending gun in hand his crops which his father and women folk are reaping. The children on their way to school watch the housewife baking her bread in the old-fashioned oven which is still in extensive use in Quebec Province. The making of maple sugar, an industry developed from the researches of Dr. Sarrasin in 1685, is yet another popular float which always figures in the celebrations.

Charged with the theft of gravel from Canadian waters, Capt. James Marcero, of the gravel sucker, Marysville, owned by the Wills-St. Clair Company of Marysville, Mich., was released on bail of $500 on Monday. He was arrested while in the act of taking gravel from the Canadian channel of the St. Clair by Provincial Officer William Scott, in the presence of federal customs officers. It is alleged that the Marysville has been receiving gravel from the Canadian side all summer without permit and without reporting to the Canadian customs department.

Parkhill Gazette—"The 'Holy Rollers' encamped above the village of Sylvan on the sand hills all last week and they drew a large crowd to their meetings each evening and won many converts. The getting of 'The Glory' was the chief feature of these meetings and those who got it lay stiff on the straw floor of the tent, unconscious of all that went on about them and were declared to be 'speaking with tongues.' The old time fervor of the camp-meeting and the Halleujah Band came into full force and seemed to touch the people of today as much as the people of yesterday. The Rollers were encamped under 20 tents and were a small village in themselves. The meetings ended last Wednesday evening."

History of ICINE

development centuries Emery's discovery relation of the Ypd. Wickett, M.D. Hamilton

Note:—The following will be published in four sections from the pen of Dr. Wickett, now of Hamilton, Ontario, who has practised medicine in Ontario from 1898 until 1903. In his time, some eight centuries before Christ, medicine had all the "History and a System of Treatment" and besides these, the "Duties and Status of Physicians" were fully defined and generally made known.

The Father of Medicine of enduring fame and genuine worth was "Hippocrates", who lived 420 B.C. He is the "Pater Familias" of all orthodox medicine, known through the centuries and up to the present time.

The "Hippocratic Oath" is still treasured by the profession of medicine at the present day.

This forerunner of medicine labored zealously to have a clear conception of the diseases of the body and skillfully directed the attention and care which the patient ought to receive.

Hippocrates perceived early the part Nature played in disease and health, and his absorbing thought was to assist Nature to heal and cure diseases of whatever form.

Broadly, his chief theory was: The body contained Four Humors:— 1, Blood; 2, Phlegm; 3, Yellow Bile; 4, Black Bile.

Now, when these were mixed in rightful proportions in the body, such constituted health. When improper proportions of Humors prevailed, together with irregular distribution of these Humors, disease followed.

The many works of Hippocrates formed the foundation of medical science and research for centuries.

Herophilus, 235 to 280 B.C., was a pupil of the schools of Cos and Cnidus, Greek schools of medicine.

This great physician made profound researches in Anatomy, and in the knowledge and practice of medicine, he was equally renowned. His writings place him second only to Hippocrates.

Erasistratus, died only about 280 B.C.; He was a contemporary of Herophilus and a student of Alexandria, a Hippocratic school of medicine, a foremost college for hundreds of years.

Strange to relate, Erasistratus deprecated Hippocrates. He was independent in thought and his foremost contribution to medicine was the first rational, though inadequate, theory of inflammation. A marked advance in medicine.

The Roman School of Medicine Turning back a century or two it cannot be said that a school of medicine was developed in Rome. Pliny, the great philosopher, had boasted, it is worthy of note, "The Roman People had gotten on for centuries without physicians", but it is likely the statement is an exaggeration of the truth.

Now, the most eminent physician Rome had was Asclepiades, who was born in Prusa, Bithynia, B.C., 124. The theory of disease which he advanced was quite opposed to that taught by Hippocrates. The cause of all disease, he maintained, depended upon the alterations, size, number and arrangement, or movement, of Atoms of which the body consisted.

These Atoms were united into passages, through which the juices of the body were conveyed. This, all will at once concede, was a theory quite distinct and opposed to the "Humoral Pathology" taught by Hippocrates.

Asclepiades rejected the theory of the aid given by Nature to cure disease, pointing out Nature did not help but often marred the cure. Asclepiades, in his treatment of disease, attached much importance to diet, exercise, passive movements and external use of cold water. In brief, a modification of athletic training. His knowledge of disease and surgical skill were, according to Celsus and Caelius Aurelius, very considerable. It may be stated other systems of medicine grew out of the theories propounded by Asclepiades which lasted for centuries but were eventually overshadowed by the mighty Galen, to whom we shall pay our humble respects in due time.

Celsus, who lived in the first century, (a Roman Patrician), possibly not a physician, wrote a "Treatise of Medicine." He also compiled medical facts from former schools of medicine mostly Greek schools.

Now, passing over many physicians of more than ordinary note, we come to another great physician who stands on a plane with Hippocrates, a man who created an epoch in medicine, and advanced that great art and science equal to, if not surpassing, any that had gone before. His name is Galen.

Galen was born at Pergamus, A.D. 131, and is said to have died 210, A.D. Pergamus, as you well know, is in Asia Minor, a city that Paul visited on one of his great missionary journeys. Galen delved deeply into Anatomy and Physiology. He was possessed of enormous energy and industry, which was coupled with practical sagacity. Moreover, he was endowed with unbounded literary fluency and ability. Galen gave to the world a new outlook in the science of medicine. He is an anchor-point in the development of the "Healing-Art". Our own Osler seems to have been his distinguished disciple. If you will kindly permit the simile, the Elijah and Elisha of Medicine, the mantle of the former falling upon the shoulders of the latter, only centuries apart.

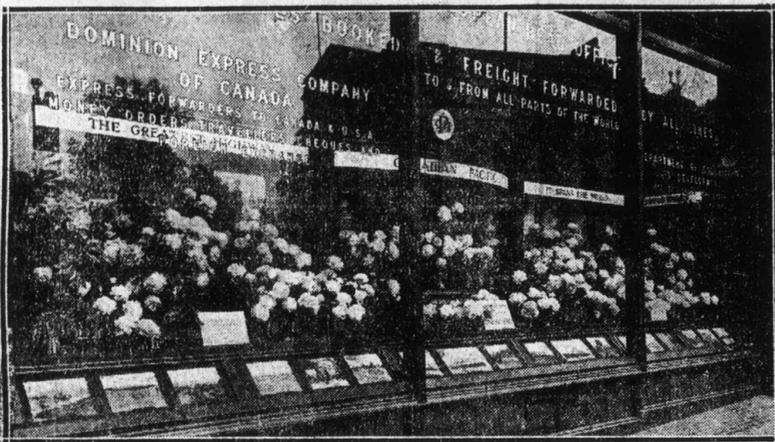

Now observe, and please bear in mind, the Medical Works written by Galen were many and became authorities in the research and practice of medicine, and continued to mould medical thought with those of Hippocrates up to Harvey's time, 1628.

After a century or more comes the Byzantine School of Medicine, 326, A.D. This school followed Galen's footsteps mainly. Her teachers spent their time in compiling medical knowledge but did little at investigating and observing the symptoms of disease in fact, added little or nothing to the knowledge of medicine.

Now, after the fall of the Roman Empire, Salerno, in Europe, became the seat of a Bishopric and the home of a Benedictine Monastery, about 475 to 1150, A.D. It was in this period that the influence of Arabian medicine made itself felt. The Monasteries, owing to wars and the decay of learning, had become the home of medicine, their great work was to save the medical works and other works of science and art from oblivion by their zealous preservation of all valuable works in the Latin language and in the vernacular in various forms. The Anglo-Saxon Leechdom, meaning Laws of Physicians, in the eleventh century, published the "Rolls" of Medical Chronicles. These illustrate most clearly how magic, superstition, and relics of science, constituted monastic medicine.

To the Benedictines, however, the world owes the higher plane of medicine. Their translations of Hippocratic and Galenic writings and later the Greek writers in art and science preserved to a great extent all the valuable writings and works of art, and thus saving the learning of the Ages to Humanity. Prize Winning Canadian Peonies Exhibited In London

This unique picture shows the much discussed Canadian Peonies grown in Montreal by Mr. Ormiston Roy and shipped to England in cold storage in a Canadian Pacific vessel, on exhibition in the window of the Canadian Pacific offices in London, England. The Royal Horticultural Society has presented the Banksia Silver Medal to Mr. Roy and several London papers have remarked editorially upon the extraordinarily perfect condition of the blooms after their long sea voyage. An interesting feature of the picture is that in the window may be seen the reflection of the new Canadian Building which stands almost directly opposite the Canadian Pacific Offices and was recently opened by the King and Queen.

Alice Discovers New Wonderland at Wembley

"The animals went into the Ark in case it should rain." "Long John Silver was also there."

"I know what we'll do," said Alice, "let's go to Wembley for a day." "What do you want to go to Wembley for?" asked the Walrus, who was always asking foolish questions anyway. "I want to see the sailing ships and sealing-wax and cabbages and kings," replied Alice. "Ha, ha," laughed the Walrus, "you won't see any sealing-wax there, it's all at Madame Tussauds and I have my doubts about the cabbages, too." "Well, I shall see lots of sailing ships and kings," said Alice starting to cry, for she was very fond of cabbages, "and, anyway, if you go to the Exhibition alone you won't be able to get in to Treasure Island as they don't admit adults unless they are escorted by children." "Oh, all right," said the Walrus, who, being 122 years old, no longer regarded himself as a child and had secretly wanted to go to Treasure Island all the time. So away they went. When they arrived at Treasure Island they found a real train—not a very big one, it is true, but nevertheless, the real train in the world—putting like a grampus, at a little station labelled Banff, as if anxious to get on its way around Wonderland. "Look," said Alice, "there's Peter Pan." "That isn't Peter Pan," said the Walrus, whose education had been sadly neglected, "that's a Canadian Pacific engine." "I don't care," answered Alice, starting to cry again, for, like all modern children, she hated to be contradicted by her elders, "it's called Peter Pan because it goes everywhere and never gets old or tiresome." This all reference to his age effectively subdued the Walrus, who now relapsed into silence, and didn't say another word until they were seated in the little train and slowly pulling out of Banff. It would take too long to describe all the things they saw or all the wonderful people they met, but they had such an interesting time that Alice soon forgot all about her cabbages and sealing-wax.

There was Long John Silver, with his one eye and wooden leg and piratical disposition, and there were Mother Goose, Sir Francis Drake, Robinson Crusoe and Man Friday, Humpty Dumpty, Little Bo Peep, Jack and Gill and all the other fairland people Alice had read about but never met before. And they saw the animals going into the Ark which Noah had provided for them in case a rainy day should come along and wash off all their paint. Of course, they saw lots of other things, too—the Rocky Mountains, for instance, and the Golden Hind. "While we're about it," said Alice, when they had seen all there was to see at Treasure Island, "we might as well go in and see the 'Canadian Pacific Pavilion.' Everybody goes there, you know." So in they went, and saw all the good things to eat and wear and work with that they have in Canada. They were shown around the building by a big man in blue who had "C.P.R." on his epaulettes, and explained to them that the initials meant Canadian Pacific Railway, and that they had put up this building and made Treasure Island in order to let the boys and girls in England know what a fine country Canada is. But it presently began to get dark and Alice had to take the Walrus home and give him a bath before he went to bed. "Well, that's that," remarked the Walrus, when they got outside. "Of course, it is," replied Alice, "what else would it be?" "I mean it's all over now," grumbled the Walrus who had been annoyed because Alice had refused to allow him to go into the Ark with the other animals, "and you didn't see any sealing-wax or cabbages, and not many kings either." "That's quite true," replied Alice patiently, "but I've found out a lot about Canada and I've had a jolly good time, so you may grudge it much as you like—I'm quite satisfied." "That's quite true," replied Alice, "but I've found out a lot about Canada and I've had a jolly good time, so you may grudge it much as you like—And so they went home, and the funny part of it is, Alice did not wake up—for she had not been dreaming at all.

New Health for Suffering Women

Aching Backs and Tired Limbs Need Not be Endured.

Too many women endure suffering that casts a shadow over half her existence. An aching back, tired limbs, attacks of faintness, splitting headaches need not be a part of woman's life. Such trials indicate plainly that the sufferer needs the help of a real tonic such as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Suffering women who have used this medicine speak of it in the highest terms. Among those who have been thus helped is Mrs. Ada L. Harman, Yrden, Man., who writes: "Following the birth of a still-born child a few years ago, I had a very serious time. I was so weak for months that I could not walk across the room without a feeling of faintness. I had scarcely strength enough to stand up, and when dressing would have to sit down two or three times. My face and lips were colorless, I had no appetite, and life did not seem worth living. A friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I got six boxes. Before they were all gone I felt improved. My appetite was returning, color was coming into my face, and I was visibly stronger. I continued taking the pills and fully regained my former good health. I consider Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a blessing to weak women, and hope my experience will induce some other sufferer to try them." You can get these pills from any medicine dealer, or by mail at 50 cents a box direct from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

An extra fine well of flowing water was struck on the farm of A. P. McDougald, near Melbourne, a few days ago. Water was secured at a depth of 104 feet and gushes up, filling a four-inch pipe. It is being used in the concrete for the paving of the provincial highway, where they are using about 100,000 gallons per day. The well is about three-quarters of a mile from the highway.

YOUNG—FULLER

A quiet wedding took place on Tuesday afternoon, July 28th, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Fuller, 2nd line, Warwick, when their eldest daughter, Leila Irene, became the happy bride of Mr. Edwin Young of Windsor, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Young, of 2nd line. The ceremony was performed by Rev. S. J. Thompson of Erie st. United church. The bride was given away by her father, and entered the room to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Winnifred Fuller, sister of the bride. The happy couple were unattended, only the immediate families of the contracting parties being present. The wedding gifts were numerous, useful and practical. Among them being a set of silver, a sugar shell and carving set, from the congregation, W. M. S. and Young Ladies Bible class of Zion United church as a token of appreciation of several years of faithful and devoted services as organist.

The guests sat down to a very dainty wedding luncheon, after which the newly wedded couple left by auto for their home in Windsor, where they will in future reside. Mr. and Mrs. Young are held in the highest respect in the 2nd line community and the best wishes of the whole community follow them.

PROTECTION AGAINST MOSQUITOES

Certain protective mixtures applied to the skin are of great value in warding off mosquitoes, black flies and similar pests, especially when the insects are very numerous. A number of formulas for such mixtures are given in a pamphlet on the methods of protection against mosquitoes and black flies, just issued by the Entomological Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. A mixture recommended by the author is composed of 3 ounces of oil of citronella, 1 of spirits of camphor, 1 of oil of tar, 1/4 ounce of oil of pennyroyal and from 4 to 5 ounces of castor oil. Another mixture consists of 2 ounces of oil of citronella, 1/2 ounce of castor oil. The castor oil is included to prevent injury to the skin. Tallow may be used instead if it is desired to have the mixture in the form of a paste.

When the insects are abundant it is necessary to apply the mixture at least once every half hour, using liberal quantities and rubbing it thoroughly over the hands and face. Care should be taken to have a sufficient quantity of a mixture when on an extended trip in the woods. At least an ounce per person per day is necessary if the flies are anyway abundant. The mixture should be carried in a small aluminum flask or screw top tin, but not in a glass bottle as it is apt to break.

Requisite on the Farm—Every farmer and stock-raiser should keep a supply of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil on hand, not only as a ready remedy for ills in the family, but because it is a horse and cattle medicine of great potency. As a substitute for sweet oil for horses and cattle affected by colic it far surpasses anything that can be administered.

Mr. John McIntyre of Saskatoon spent a few days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. McIntyre. Mrs. McIntyre, who has been spending the summer here, accompanied her husband home.

Several from here took in the Scotch picnic at Port Stanley on Wednesday and others attended the St. Andrew's and Chalmers' picnic at Springbank the same day.

The W.M.S. met at the home of Mrs. Harold Field on Wednesday, July 15th, with the usual attendance.
