LOCAL BALL TEAM DEFEATS MIDDLETOWN 8 TO 5.

The local ball team defeated Middletown 8 to 5 here on Wednesday evening in a game which for the first six innings was rather one sided and all in the Bridgetown boys favor. They got away to a good start with three runs in the first innings and kept adding a bit through most of the other innings till it began to look like a shut out for the visitors. The latter made a rally in the seventh and secured a run. During the last part of the game darkness had nearly shut in and in the eighth the visitors walloped the ball out for four runs. There was a good deal of hitting and long flies to outfield. The Middletown boys had a pretty extensive list of errors in their credit and in fielding were not up to the usual mark.

CAMP MEETING NOTES

Good weather, large attendance, eloquent preaching, and inspiring music, is making the Camp Meeting at Berwick one of the most successful ever held. It has the unique distinction of being the first Camp Meeting held by the New United Church of Canada. Last Sunday was a great day in the Grove. Over 5000 people were present, and the very best of over prevailed. Dr. Chappell of Memphis, Tennessee, the special preacher has a marvellous gift of eloquence, and the Lotus Male Quartette of Boston, which sings at the afternoon and evening services, is one of the best ever heard in the Valley. Every member is an artist.

Next Sunday Dr. Chappell and Rev. Clarence MacKinnon, D. D., of Halifax, will be the preachers. Monday, August 16th, will be a red letter day. At 3 p.m. there will be a big Patriotic Rally, with addresses by Dr. MacKinnon and Rev. F. W. Patterson, D. D., President of Acadia University, and music by the Lotus Male Quartette. At 7.30 the Quartette will give a concert which should be a rich feast to music lovers.

WHY LIVING IS COSTLY

It is the custom to-day, says the Quebec Telegraph, to complain of the scarcity of money and the high cost of living, but we do not often stop to reflect that, in the final analysis, the level of living costs is established by our own standard of living.

Of course, the prices of commodities are an important factor but not nearly so much so as we like to believe. Were our purchases limited to necessities and were real thrift generally practised, the burden of the household budget, would be found to have eased itself in a surprising way.

Canadians are not yet as extravagant as are the citizens of the United States, but in this, as in too many other things, there is a tendency to imitate them, and it may be instructive to scan over their last year's bill for luxuries, as compiled by government accountants.

Tobacco	$1,847,000,000
Non-alcoholic beverages	820,000,000
Theatres, movies, etc.	934,000,000
Candy	658,000,000
Jewellery	453,000,000
Musical instruments	440,000,000
Sporting goods	431,000,000
Perfumes and cosmetics	261,000,000
Chewing gum	87,000,000
Toilet soaps (half since soaps are 2 1/2 oz. essential)	76,000,000
Furs (half since some are essentials)	176,000,000
Radio's	150,000,000
U. S. tourists abroad	600,000,000
U. S. tourists at home	1,000,000,000
Total	$8,031,000,000

The foregoing represent only what the modern generation regards as luxuries. But how many of its supposed necessities would not have been classed as luxuries by the generation which preceded it? How many of them are not really luxuries in disguise? We have outgrown the age of the market basket and patched clothing is a rarity. We sit in the office, at home or in the hotel and telephone for service. Gone is the day of personal shopping, of small profits and quick returns, or prices based upon prompt, if not cash payments. It is useless to sigh for the old cost of living as long as we purchase expensive commodities without selecting, or even seeing them, as long as we have them charged to our accounts and delivered by auto service.

There used to be a kitchen garden and the head of the house did many small repairs about the house. We lived on plainer and better and more wholesome, if less picturesquely wrapped, food. In the days of cheaper living none of the family were ashamed of journeying by foot a long way to the store with the good old open-faced market basket. Now most of us do as little as possible round the house and seldom know home pleasures or home produce. The automobile is king and we are mostly too occupied to even do much personal shopping. Gardening and home labor are abandoned wherever possible to get out in the car. Food is bought in costly cans and nicely colored boxes and printed wrappers. Prepared foods are in demand and the automobile has re-established the delicatessen business. On the top of these added costs of the upkeep and the overhead expenses of the family we have added to-day—actually tabulated as a necessity—the automobile itself. We have now raised the standard of living up to the balloon trestle pitch and each one of us is still trying to keep up with the Jones.

"UP AGAINST IT"

Louisville Courier-Journal: Politics as a livelihood is seldom profitable. To honest men, not independent in money, the rewards of public office are often insufficient to make both ends meet. To dishonest men the scanty compensation of political place in an ever-present temptation to be oblique and even corrupt. By and large, however, the most corrupt men in public office have not been those of scant financial means. Corruption more frequently has been practised by law-makers of ample means and not in frequently of ample fortune.

PALESTINE, TRANSJORDANIA AND MESOPOTAMIA

London Daily Express: If these three Oriental milstones were not hanging round our necks there would be no increase in the Air Estimates. The millions now wasted on providing security for Palestine, Transjordan and Mesopotamian taxgatherers might be used to provide security for England. Every pound poured into the sands of the East is a pound taken from the air service at home. Let us bring back our squadrons from the Jordan and the Tigris, and spend our money on our own vital needs, not on Zionist dreams and Mesopotamian mirages.

YOU MIGHT MEET A FOOL

On a road at the foot of the Rockies is a sign that reads:—"Danger, Sharp Curve—You Might Meet a Fool." Such a sign is calculated to make a driver sit up and take notice. The latter sees at almost every sharp turn a notice to proceed with caution or to blow his horn, and comes to be a little impressed by them. He has confidence in his ability to avoid running into another car. But if there is a fool in the other car the efforts of the most skillful driver to escape may be futile. There would be far fewer automobile mishaps if every driver would bear constantly in mind the possibility that there may be a fool ahead, not only on sharp curves, but on stretches of straight road. It is unwise to assume that each car on the highway is in charge of an experienced driver who knows the traffic rules and will obey them. You may think that inasmuch as you are keeping on your side of the road there is no danger in running your car at a high rate of speed. But you might meet a fool who will not stick to his side of the road.

CHINESE DEMOBILIZATION

Hong Kong Press: The need for a great reduction of China's military forces is clearly recognized by Chinese statesmen. "Disbandment of superfluous troops" was the great aim and object of General Li Yuan Hung when he consented to become President of the Republic of China a second time, but, once in office, he found the support which he had been promised for the effort entirely lacking, and today there are greater numbers of men under arms in China than ever before. Yet, demobilization on a large scale in China seems a perfectly feasible undertaking if the powers-that-be made an honest effort to achieve it. At the coming national conference this problem must necessarily be discussed and solved. There can be no hope of peace in China until that is done. A year or two ago in some of the provinces "disbandment of superfluous troops" was attempted, but by entirely wrong methods. The men were simply demobilized and left practically without means to tend for themselves. The result was the growth of brigandage on a great scale.

THE ANGLO-SAXON PEACE

Chicago Tribune: It is our belief that a wise extension of British influence and substantial interest within the framework of the Imperial design is not only compatible with our welfare, but even in some measure conducive to it. If British policy, as we are willing to believe, aims at the peace, the development of the world's material resources, and the stimulation of international commerce, it ought not seriously to collide with our interests, but on the contrary should make peace and even a good measure of co-operation possible between the Empire and the American Republic.

AND ALL UNCHARITABLENESS

London Morning Post: There is something in the best of us that grudges success to others. It is annoying to see someone pass us in the race, someone who is young, white we are getting old, someone who is greeted with smiles and applause, while we with wry face take our seat some talk away from the high table. We talk about our own bad luck, and if we must attribute human causes to human success, well then, we hint a little about "conspicuous checks" or "family influences" or the "spasmodic" of "good looks." The philosophy that can steel us against our own mediocrity and save us from contemplating our successful neighbors is difficult to find in these days. The result is that envy, the curse of modern civilization, stalks the land.

Mr. Walker, who resigned his charge some weeks ago, will take his departure on Wednesday for Middleton, where he will take the pulpit in the United Church. There was a large congregation present on Sunday morning in St. Stephen's Church. Mr. Walker, during his sermon, made mention of his work in Amherst since his arrival nearly eight years ago. VIKINGS ROW TO LONDON

Covered 1,600 Miles From Copenhagen in Open Boat.
London.—Two young Danish oarsmen rowed to the landing of the London Rowing Club on the Thames Friday afternoon, having rowed all the way from Copenhagen, a distance of 1,600 miles in an ordinary row boat, 21 feet long. It was hardly distinguishable from countless rowboats in which London couples paddle around on Sundays.

FOR JOY OF GOOD HEALTH

Manitoba Woman Thanks Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Crandall, Manitoba.—"When I was a young girl at home and working I had terrible pains, almost more than I could bear, and I was not regular. These troubles kept me so tired all the time that I had no strength and no ambition to join in with my friends and have a good time. I was just tired and miserable always and life just seemed as if it wasn't worth living. I saw so much in the papers about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and then I had a friend who had taken it and told me about it, so I got some. Every month after taking it I got stronger and I soon did not suffer every month. It stopped the pains and helped me other ways. Then when my babies were coming I was tired and worn out the first three months and ached badly. I took the Vegetable Compound right along and must say it made a new woman of me and able to do my work, and it helped me through confinement. You see I am a farmer's wife with a big house to look after, and three babies now. I have told ever so many women about your medicine. Just last week I got a letter from my old chum in the East. Her baby was born fifteen days before mine and she told me she was not feeling very well, her back aches so much, and that she is going to take the same medicine I took. You can use my letter and I hope some one will be helped by it."—Mrs. Jos. H. Kidd, Box 56, Crandall, Manitoba, C.

FRANCE UNABLE TO BORROW IN BRITAIN

British Investors Suffered Severe Losses on War Loans.
London.—The strong statement that it will be quite impossible for France to borrow successfully in Britain again because of losses sustained by British investors in French war loans, is made by the financial editor of the London Times. The statement is considered to accurately represent the views of the London money market, and in view of rumors of new foreign loans to help France to stabilize the franc it is of more than ordinary importance.

SAYS FEAR CAUSES EUROPE TO ARM

Tells Institute of Politics, Europe is Anxious to Avert War.
Wilmington, Mass.—Fear is the predominant cause of the great armaments of Europe, Sir Frederick Maurice of London said at the Institute of Politics today. France is fearful of the Germany of tomorrow and the nations created by the peace treaty are fearful of maintaining excessive armaments largely due to their suspicion of Russia.

Since all fashionable women in London are wearing skirts a fraction below the knee-cap, two of the garters are intended for the public eye.

With the advent of registration for poultry, the standard was raised from 150 to 200 two-ounce eggs as a minimum for qualification, and the bird must also conform closely to certain standard characters laid down for the breed.

The standard for the mall is still more severe. It must be bred from a dam and grand dam that have each laid in a contest at least 200 two-ounce eggs and be free from standard disqualifications. To breed such a male is an achievement worthy of an official record and a number of such males will be procurable this year, with authentic pedigree and tattooed with the breeders' registered mark and carrying all the identification marks guaranteeing their breeding.

The number will be limited this year, but the supply will increase as the number of daughters of registered dams that qualify in the contest increases.

In breeding up to the excellent standard demanded in registered stock there is certain to be surplus stock of lesser lineage not qualified for registration. Many of these are of good breeding, but not tested to the same extent as registered stock. These birds are available in large numbers from breeders of registered stock.

LOBSTER PACK IN PROVINCE HEAVY

A Large Shipment Made to European Market Through Port of Halifax.
Nova Scotia will have a larger lobster pack this year than last, according to information given the Halifax Herald last evening by one of the leading shippers.

The total pack in this Province, and in New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, will be 140,000 cases, which is the usual amount in a normal year.

Recently the shipments of lobsters from Halifax to European ports has been fairly heavy, some of the ships taking as many as 10,000 cases. The Swedish market continues to take a large supply of Maritime lobsters, mostly the P. E. I. variety, and only a few days ago 2500 cases were shipped from this port. These lobsters were valued at $78,000, which gives some idea of the actual value of the lobster industry to the Maritime Provinces.

Most of the lobsters from Nova Scotia are shipped to the Liverpool market. Shippers here state that all Europe is using less lobsters than a few years ago but yet the shipments through the port of Halifax to Sweden, France and Great Britain continue fairly heavy. (Halifax Herald.)

Champlain Memorial

April 24, 1615, was a great day in the lives of the townsfolk of the little seaport of Honiton, Somerset, for on that day, Sieur Samuël Champlain, whose earlier voyages and discoveries in the New World had stirred the imagination of French Court and of the merchants of the North and Breton seaports, set sail in the little ship St. Etienne, with a party of four Recollet brothers, Christianize the Indians. After a stormy voyage, the little ship sailed up the St. Lawrence to that city, now the city of Quebec. Later Champlain went on to Montreal, where he found a large band of Hurons assembled to meet him, reminding him of the promise to assist them in their wars. Realizing this would lead to exploration and eventually to civilization, he set off to Quebec to make arrangements for the Indians sending out their scouts. Before returning from Quebec, the Indians growing impatient set out with Father Le Caron and twelve Hurons into what is now the Province of Ontario. Champlain, with two Frenchmen and ten Indians, set up the Ottawa to the Mattawa, and joined with the Hurons in a war expedition against the fierce Iroquois. SNEER AT CITY SMARTIES.

(Winchester Press)

One frequently sees in the city newspapers, under big head lines how a "dumb" man from the country town had into the seductive ways of the city and lost his pocket money. ... sneeringly by the editor of the city daily, warning the inexperienced who come to the city, to beware of the society vultures who hang about seeking whom they may devour. But how is this for a "dumb" man from the city? His home is in Cleveland, Ohio. He is a society man with plenty of cash, but is troubled with a pain in his side. He goes to the country for a "rest cure" and where he is stopping is a band of gypsies, among them being two attractive damsels who have the gift to cure disease. The city young man falls to their talk and smiles, and under instructions he hands out in crisp $10 bills $650 to be placed in a cloth bag. He sees the bills sewed up in a cloth bag. He is instructed to wear that bag over the spot where the pain is for five days, while the gypsy maids pray for his cure. At the end of the five days this city man was not relieved of his pain, but of something else, for on opening the bag he found one $10 bill, the other 64 having departed with the gypsy maids. My, how the city papers would feature such an episode had the victim been a young man from the country.

LESS FROTH PLEASE

In the summer time the enjoyment of the Radio broadcasting is difficult on account of much interference in the air. In summer time we all like good music and enjoy band concerts on our Radio when we get them.

In summer time there is much heat in New York and in the large cities. Concert piano players and singers feel it and are suffering. Why not drop them in hot weather? Roxy started a lot of Pre-Concert talk going. I think a little to the extreme. Other announcers of large stations imitated him and went one better, in fact now make me sick. Perhaps Darwin after all was right.

I am thinking of old times in New York. "When we said without fear, 'Less froth, more beer.'"

COM

ANY SOLDIER TO HIS SON

(The following poem is said to have been picked up by an officer in France who forwarded it to friends in England.) It was eventually published in a Home paper as one of the truest and most vivid descriptions of a soldier's war experiences and feelings ever written, even though it is written in light-hearted vein. The Author has never been discovered—possibly he "went West".

WHAT DID YOU DO, DADDY, IN THE GREAT WORLD WAR?

Well, I learned to peel potatoes and to scrub the barrack floor. I learned to use a shovel, a barrow and a pick. I learned to get a "jerk on" and I learned to "make 'em click." I learned the road to Folkestone and to look my last at Home. As I heaved my beans and bacon to the fishes and the foam.

Then the Blighty boats went by us and the harbor hove in sight. And they disembarked and sorted us and marched us "by the right. Quick March" along the cobbles, by the kids who ran along shouting "Apo—Spartan—Shokoli" through dingy old Boulogne. And the widows and the nurses and the niggers and Chinese and the gangs of smiling Fritzles, as saucy as you please.

I learned to ride, as soldiers ride, from "Etap" to "the line." For days and nights in cattle trucks packed in like droves of swine. I learned to curse and "hop it" in a foot of muddy dirt. And to envy cows and horses that had beds of "beauchop" straw; I learned to wash in shell-holes, and to shave myself in tea while the fragments of a mirror dink a balance on my knee.

I learned to dodge the whizz-bangs and the flying lumps of lead and to keep a foot of earth between the snipers and my head. I learned to keep my haversack well filled with "buckshot" food. To take the army issue and to "pinch" what else I could; I learned to cook Maconochie with candle ends and string. With "four by two" and sardine oil and any darned old thing.

I learned to use the bayonet, according as you please. For a bread-knife, or a chopper, or a prong for toasting cheese. I learned to gather souvenirs that home I hoped to send. To "hump" them round for months and months and "dump" them in the end; I learned to hunt for vermin in the lining of my shirt. To crack them on my finger-nails and feel the beggars spurt.

I learned to sleep by snatches on the firestep of a trench. To eat my breakfast mixed with mud and Fritz's heavy stench; I learned to pray for "Blighty ones" and lie and squirm with fear when Jerry started "straining" and the "Blighty ones" went near; I learned to write home cheerful with my heart a lump of lead. With the thought of you and Mother when she read that I was dead.

The only thing like pleasure "over there" I ever knew was to hear my pals come shouting "There's a parcel, mate, for you." That's what I did, but now for what I did not do my son. Well, I never kissed a French girl and I never killed a Hun. I never missed an issue of tobacco, pay or rum. I never made a friend and yet I never lacked a chum.

I never used to grumble after breakfast in "the line" That the eggs were cooked to lightly or the bacon cut too fine. I never told the Sergeant just exactly what I thought. I never did a pack drill for I never quite got caught. I never stopped a whizz-bang, though I've stopped a lot of mud. For the one that Fritz sent over with my name on was a "dad."

I never played the hero or walked about "the top." I kept inside my "funk-hole" when the shells began to drop—Well, Tommy Jones' father must be made of different stuff—I never asked for trouble; the issue was enough. So I learned to live and "lump" it in the lovely land of War. Where the face of Nature seemed to be a monstrous septic sore.

Where the bowels of earth hung open like those of something slain. Where the rot and wreck of everything was churned and churned again.

Where all was done in darkness and all was still in day. Where living men were buried and the dead unburied lay; Where men inhabited holes like rats, and only rats lived there. Where cottage food and castle once in days before "la guerre."

Where endless files of "duckboards" wound through endless walls of clay. Where life was one hard labor and the men were heard to say That the only chance a soldier had of ever getting rest Was when they laid him "westward" with a puncture in his chest.

And I read the Blighty papers where the "warriors of the pen" Told of "Christmas in the Trenches" and "the Spirit of Our Men."

And I saved the choicest morsels and I read them to my chum. And he muttered as he cracked a louse and wiped it off his thumb "May a thousand 'chats' from Belgium, crawl o'er them as they write. May they dream they're not exempted till they die of mental fright. May the fattest rats from Dickbeusch race over them in their beds; May the lice they've written choke them, like a gas cloud till they're dead.

May the horrors and the tortures of the things they never tell (For they only write to order) be reserved for them in Hell."

You'd like to be a soldier, and go to War some day? By all the dead in Delville Wood, by all the nights I lay Between our "line" and Fritz's before they got me in; By this old word and leather stamp that once was flesh and skin. By all the lads who crossed with me but never crossed back again; By all the prayers their mothers and their sweethearts prayed in vain. Before the things that destroy those days should evermore befall. May God, in common pity, destroy us—one and all.

ANOTHER ROLE FOR THE PHONOGRAPH

We are ever hearing of new and beneficial uses to which the phonograph and records are being put.

A clipping from the Westminster Gazette of London, England, gives the latest, perhaps, it reads:

"Disease Put on Record"—Phonograph Work in Medicine. Dr. W. E. Scripture, Professor of Experimental Phonetics in the University of Vienna lecturing at King's College, London, recently, said phonographic records were playing an increasingly important part in the diagnosis of nervous diseases.

"A special laboratory for this purpose had been established at the West End Hospital, Welbeck Street, and although it was the first of its kind in the world, he felt sure it would not be the last.

"What was the particular value of the records, or in what way they played an important part in the diagnosis of nervous diseases, is not reported, but his statement indicates that their value is recognized by the medical profession. Dr. Scripture then goes on to point out another distinct value which records can give. He says: 'During the war Germany's prison camps were filled with men representing almost every shade and variety of language. The Germans obtained records on phonograph discs of these different dialects, and there were now 3,000 of them in the State library in Berlin.

"Hidden away in various parts of England were records of the various country dialects, and it would be a good thing if the British Museum authorities systematized the registration of these country dialects.

"To obtain and tabulate records of the different dialects and accents used in the various parts of the United Kingdom, and also of the multiple languages spoken in in the various far-flung parts of the British Empire would be a great work. Its value for teaching, for historical purposes, for musical purposes would be immense, apart from the fascinating interest contained in such a subject. Truly, the phonograph can do what no other instrument or institution in the world can do, and its early name of talking machine, although not an exceedingly pretty one, may not have been such a misnomer after all."

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

In a certain home the family stock of umbrellas, six in all, being out of repair, the wife prevailed upon the master of the house to take them with him one rainy morning for the purpose of leaving them at a shop down town to be mended.

It must have been that he had umbrellas on his mind that day, for at lunch, after having disposed temporarily of his stock of umbrellas, he attempted to walk out with one belonging to a lady at a neighboring table. She asserted her ownership of the umbrella, whereat he contumaciously begged her pardon.

Later in the day he recovered the umbrellas left to be repaired and on his way home in the street car that night encountered the same lady of the lunch table episode. Much to his embarrassment, she looked him over frigidly, remarking, "Well, you must certainly have had a good day!"

Champlain Memorial Marks Advent of White Race

April 24, 1615, was a great day in the lives of the townsfolk of the little seaport of Honfleur in Northern France, for on that day, Sieur Samuel de Champlain, whose earlier voyages and discoveries in the New World had stirred the imagination of the French Court and of the merchants of the Norman and Breton seaports, set sail in the little ship, the St. Etienne, with a party of four Recollet brothers and Christianize the Indians. After a stormy voyage the little ship sailed up the St. Lawrence to that natural citadel, now the city of Quebec. Later Champlain went on to Montreal, where he found a large band of Indians assembled to meet him, reminding him of his promise to assist them in their wars. Realizing that this would lead to exploration and eventually to colonization, he set off to Quebec to make arrangements, returned from Quebec, the Indians growing impatient with Father Le Caron and twelve Frenchmen into what is now the Province of Ontario. Champlain, with two Frenchmen and ten Indians started up the Ottawa to the Mattawa, and joined with the Hurons in a war expedition against the fierce Iroquois, by means of which Champlain, who was as enthusiastic an explorer as a soldier, discovered Lake Ontario. Returning from the wars, Champlain spent Christmas, 1615, with his friend, Chief Darontal at Cahigue, near where now stands the town of Orillia on Lake Simcoe. The gallant gentleman returned to Montreal in June, 1616, where he found his friends, the Recollets, had given up hope of seeing him again. Champlain's work as an explorer was now done, but his voyages into Ontario opened up the path to the west to the missionary and the trader.

and ten years later sailed from Cherbourg by the same route to the Canadian Gibraltar. On board the "Montroyal" was Vernon March, the famous English sculptor who designed and executed the monument recently erected at Orillia, to the memory of the gallant soldier missionary and explorer, Samuel de Champlain, near the site of Cahigue, from which little settlement, Champlain started out with his Indian friends on the disastrous expedition against the Iroquois and where he returned with his discouraged allies. The bronzes for the monument are colossal in size, the figure of Champlain himself being twelve feet high, of astounding action and vigor. In addition to this main figure are two groups, one, "Christianity" representing a Recollet father holding aloft the Crucifix to the savages (No. 1). The other is "Commerce" and shows the voyageur with a similar pair of Indians (No. 2). The total weight of the bronzes is more than nine tons. It is mounted on a pedestal of Benedict stone, 30 feet square and 15 feet high, giving the monument a total height of 30 feet (No. 2).

Mr. Vernon March (No. 4), the sculptor, is an interesting figure. He is one of a family of seven brothers and one sister, all of whom are artists and sculptors. At their studio and workshop, in Farnborough, Kent, which formerly was an old post house, they do their own casting as well as designing. Mr. Vernon March's work, particularly that for war memorials, has won the highest recognition in all parts of the Empire and the memorial at Orillia in both conception and execution is one of the finest examples of his art. Mr. Sydney March, a younger brother, crossed on the "Montroyal," and will assist his brother in the erection of the bronzes.

The late Lord Strathcona was one of the original promoters of the monument and made the initial contribution to the fund, while the Canadian Pacific Railway also contributed to the erection of the monument.

FARMERS' HOPE LIES IN CO-OPERATION

Example of Canadian Wheat Producers Cited at Philadelphia Gathering.

Philadelphia.—Co-operation as a world wide movement growing in strength and permanent in nature was the view presented to today's session of the American Institute of Co-operation today by Professor C. R. Fay, of Toronto University.

Professor Fay challenged critics who aver the co-operative movement is of short duration, and presented a bird's-eye view of the development of this idea in many lands. He said it would be a permanent institution in the United States because it is the outcome of "economic evolution and combines sound business practices and inspiring ethical standards."

Professor Fay traced the development of co-operation among farmers in various parts of the world and added: "For the last 25 years the new world has come in line with the old and with such brilliant examples as the Canadian wheat producers and the California Fruit Growers to its credit is leading the way along the new co-operative paths.

"For rich as the new world is, and indeed just because it is so rich industrially, there is need for a counter-pressure from the side of agriculture. One day conceivably we may have giant corporation farms, but this is very doubtful, and if they come the nation will lose the rock of social stability which a prosperous community of comparatively small farmers provides.

"But there is no stability in rural life if agriculture does not pay. Acting in isolation the farmer is his own enemy. Science shows him how to increase production, but co-operative action by himself with his fellows is needed in order to bring distribution into line with production. The unorganized wage-earner cannot secure the full reward of his effort and neither can the unorganized farmer."

BROOK TROUT FISHING WILL SOON BE LOST NEW BRUNSWICK SWICK SPORT

Fishing Public Do Not Pay Heed to the Fishing Regulations

DOMINION EXPERT GIVES HIS VIEWS

Automobile Has So Greatly Increased the Number of Anglers That Even Restocking Can Keep Up the Supply Only If There is Co-operation by the Fishermen Themselves

James Catt, the expert at the trout hatchery at Silver Falls, in a recent letter to T. A. Linton, Secretary of the Saint John Branch of the New Brunswick Fish and Game Protective Association, expressed some views and opinions of interest alike to our fishermen and to the larger number, who are beginning to take an interest in our tourist problems. Mr. Catt wrote:

It is my opinion that unless the fishing public will better observe those laws regarding the close season and the bag limits set on brook trout, the days of this species of fish are numbered.

During the last few months I have asked more than forty anglers if they know the close season and bag limits for trout. Of these forty the majority knew the close season but only two knew the bag limit—many of them did not know there was any limit. The significance of this is that the thirty-eight who did not know the limit would probably exceed it if the opportunity occurred.

For many reasons the brook trout is difficult to protect. It is migratory and its numbers are therefore roughly limited to a maximum set by the food supply of the waters which it inhabits. Its presence in these waters, unlike the anadromous varieties, is constant and it may therefore be caught at all times of the year and at all stages of its life. It is distributed so widely that it would be impossible for the Department's officers to guard and patrol the major part of its habitat, except at a prohibitive expenditure. As it has no commercial value it is sought almost entirely by anglers—except in the case of poachers, who may employ nets or dynamite—and it is the anglers who should act as its guardians.

The automobile has not only greatly increased the number of anglers but permits them to fish the less accessible waters more frequently. This causes a heavy drain on the producing capacity of the waters. Within limits this can be offset by restocking from the hatcheries, but the number of trout taken out of any water must be kept within such limits as will prevent depletion after the natural production has been augmented by stocking.

As an example of this let me point out some of the famous European trout streams. The stock in the Test, Heben and Fenner, South of England, has been maintained and increased so far as angling is concerned. The requirements of the waters were closely studied and a system of protection and stocking was devised, it being realized that it was useless to protect waters that contained no stock as it was to stock waters that were unprotected. If my memory serves me correctly the bag limit on these waters is roughly eight fish per diem, all fishes less than one pound being returned. Thus only mature fish could be taken. The limit of eight fish in these waters merely means that only eight fish may be killed—the angler may catch and return as many as he can in excess of this number. This one day in 1917 a certain doctor, on the Kennet in Wiltshire, took out and returned seventy-four trout, and kept one of 3½ pounds weight.

Of course, the limit of one pound weight would not suit the majority of European waters any more than it could be applied to this province. The existing limits have been arrived at after a very careful consideration and study of the province's requirements, based on the supposition that the angling public will observe the law.

Infringements of this law are largely responsible for the decrease in the stock of trout and for the fact that waters once affording excellent fishing may now be termed barren. Nearly all fishermen who can recall New Brunswick streams of twenty years ago will remember an abundance of trout within a reasonable distance of the cities and larger towns. They will probably recall many occasions on which individuals took dozens and even hundreds of trout in excess of the present limit. What of these waters today? They have been fished out. To re-establish and maintain them the Fisheries Act must be observed.

Yours very truly, JAMES CATT.

The remarks above are so applicable to the situation in Nova Scotia that we have no hesitation in reproducing them in this paper. Ed. Monitor.

FEDERAL AID TO PROVINCIAL ROADS

(From "Natural Resources") Under the Canadian Highways Act, the federal legislation intended to encourage the building of highways, agreements have been entered into for the construction of approximately 8,000 miles of good roads in the different provinces, and at the close of the working season of 1924, nearly 4,000 miles had been completed. By the terms of the above-mentioned act there was appropriated from the consolidated revenue fund of Canada the sum of $20,000,000 to encourage the building of highways, this amount being divided among the provinces in proportion to population. The aid has gone towards the making of the best highways possible with local materials upon main trunk arteries. Under this plan, the Dominion Government has paid 40 per cent, and the Province concerned 60 per cent. The total length of the road systems to which this contribution has applied is 35,000 miles. The mileage in each province completed with Federal aid is as follows:

Province	Miles
Alberta	17,700
British Columbia	2,371
Manitoba	95,250
New Brunswick	350,000
Nova Scotia	474,78
Ontario	574,88
Prince Edward Island	670,50
Quebec	954,66
Saskatchewan	1,551,20
Total	5,964,93

In the above table it will be noted that some of the more populous provinces have a smaller mileage than less populous provinces. This is due to the fact that roads which are satisfactory for the light traffic of, say, Prince Edward Island can be built for $3,000 or $5,000 per mile, whereas roads to carry the heavy traffic in parts of Ontario and Quebec cost from $25,000 to $75,000 per mile.

All of the Provinces, except Alberta which was the last Province to enter upon this highway work, have now under agreement enough highway construction to take up the bulk of their allotments under the act. There remain in the aggregate in the different Provinces, however, about 2,000 miles under agreement that must be carried forward to completion before the necessary certificates can be issued by the highways division of the Federal Department of Railways and Canals, that the work has been done at a reasonable cost and in accordance with the plans and specifications. For this reason the period during which the total Federal grant may be taken up has been extended to March 31st, 1925. By this time all roads must be completed and under maintenance patrol.

In regard to highways two things have to be considered: their use by our own citizens, and by visitors from abroad. The tremendous increase in the use of motor vehicles in Canada in the past few years is scarcely realized. In 1914 the number of motor vehicles registered in Canada was 69,547; in 1924 it was 659,231—nearly ten times as great. The increase in 1924 over 1923 was 75,152. On the other hand there was the motor traffic from the United States. Looking merely at the total number of tourists' motor cars entering Canada, there is a decrease from 1,936,400 in 1923 to 1,898,559 in 1924, but this decrease is entirely in the number of cars entering Canada for twenty-four hours. The number of cars brought into Canada for one to six months rose from 1,956 to 2,344, and those brought in for ten to thirty days increased from 272,441 to 303,759. It will thus be seen that the aggregate number of cars present by tourists in the country was increased greatly in 1924. This resulted in a growth in the estimated revenue from tourists from $12,000,000 in 1923 to $14,500,000 in 1924. Great as this sum is the direct and indirect benefits to Canada from increased transportation facilities for its own citizens and in the way of improved international relations are even greater.

2 MILLION BARRELS IN 1925 APPLE CROP

The apple crop in the Annapolis Valley will be about 2,000,000 barrels this year, said George E. Graham, general manager of the D. A. R. to The Halifax Herald, last evening.

This yield will be from 15 to 20 per cent greater than last year, so Mr. Graham declared. The weather during the last few weeks has been very beneficial to the apple crop while the hay crop in the Annapolis Valley also is exceptionally good. It is expected, too, that the potato production this year will be in advance of normal seasons in the Valley. (Halifax Herald.)

NEW HEALTH FOR SUFFERING WOMEN

Aching Backs and Tired Limbs Need Not be Endured.

Too many women endure suffering that casts a shadow over half her existence. An aching back, tired limbs, attacks of faintness, splitting headaches need not be a part of woman's life. Such trials indicate plainly that the sufferer needs the help of a real tonic such as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Suffering women who have used this medicine speak of it in the highest terms. Among those who have been thus helped is Mrs. Ada L. Harman, Virden, Man., who writes: "Following the birth of a still-born child a few years ago, I had a very serious time. I was so weak for months that I could not walk across the room without a feeling of faintness. I had scarcely strength enough to stand up, and when dressing would have to sit down two or three times. My face and lips were colorless, I had no appetite, and life did not seem worth living. A friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I got six boxes. Before they were all gone I felt improved. My appetite was returning, color was coming into my face, and I was visibly stronger. I continued taking the pills and fully regained my former good health. I consider Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a blessing to weak women, and hope my experience will induce some other sufferer to try them."

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer, or by mail at 50 cents a box direct from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BRITISH FOOTWEAR IMPORTS GROWING

U. S. Ousted as Chief Competitor of Canadian Manufacturer in Home Market.

Ottawa.—Competition with our domestic footwear manufacturers is steadily growing through imports chiefly from Great Britain. Since the increase in the British preference over the dangerous competitor in the home market is Great Britain, and not, as formerly, the United States. Increased costs of production in the United States has removed that country as the chief source of our footwear imports, but the removal of 600,000 Canadians across the international boundary has given the United States shoe manufacturers a Canadian market in their own country.

For the twelve months ending June 30th, 1925, we imported 1,222,505 pairs of shoes valued at $2,143,925. For the corresponding previous year, the importations of footwear were 1,170,021, valued at $1,972,760. For June there was imported from Great Britain 60,847 pairs and from the United States 39,240. From the United States come mostly women's shoes. While we are importing more than a million pairs of shoes, we exported only 137,695 or equal to about ten per cent of our imports.

The recent report of the bureau of statistics on the footwear industry shows the effect of this competition on Canadian footwear production. Establishments for manufacturing footwear have decreased from 186 in 1923 to 181 in 1924, and the decrease in employment furnished was much greater. In 1923 we manufactured 18,125,594 pairs of boots, shoes and slippers, while in 1924 we produced but 17,194,209. The value of the 1923 product was $45,596,012, and that of last year $41,075,720.

MODERN WOMAN IS RAVED OVER COALS IN RAPER DIVORCE

Chaperone Rapidly Becoming Extinct as Dodo, Lawyer Remarks

CRAZE FOR EXCITEMENT

Bench and Bar Indulge in Philosophical Reflections on Morals of Present Age.

London.—The chaperone is rapidly becoming as extinct as the dodo, remarked a British lawyer at today's session of London's current court sensation—the divorce case of Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin Raper, which is daily packing the court room with various spectators of both sexes.

The lawyer made the remark during one of those informal chats so often enlivening British trials, which invariably remind Americans of American court procedure, because they are so different.

The judge joined in the lawyer's reflections, remarking that he did not know anything about last modern life because he never had spent one hour in London unless forced to go so.

"Then you are unqualified to do justice in this case," objected Mrs. Raper's counsel.

Today's session included testimony by noted London neurologists, who also contributed philosophical reflections on modern life. One, Sir William Arbuthnot Hale, described the typical modern female as "highly strung, nervous, suffering from the overstrain of looking for pleasure and excitement."

Another, Dr. Bellfrage, remarked: "In these days, when we have so many unhappy marriages, one's whole time would be taken up with matrimonial disputes if one got mixed up with the relations of husband and wife. I endeavor to skate over the subject as lightly as possible, and I do not take sides one way or the other. I think that is the policy every busy doctor adopts."

Propos of his statement that the man and woman in the case were not suited to each other, the doctor said: "I think everybody forms his own opinion on that at a wedding. It is one of the most interesting points in a wedding."

That raised loud laughter in the court room. Mr. Justice Hill, the judge trying the case, carefully sought to give the impression that he did not belong to any such jovial set as that of Mr. and Mrs. Raper, announcing that all he knew about the pranks of such circles he derived from evidence which he was forced to hear in divorce cases. It was at this point that the judge announced he had never spent sixty consecutive minutes in London except under compulsion. Then Mrs. Raper's counsel resumed his philosophical reflections.

"I should doubt that there is more immorality now than in the days of our ancestors," he said. "What I do think is that it is more easily found out. You have got a great deal creeping into this country from the United States and other countries. You have the frank companionship of man and woman which in the end leans toward immorality. The chaperone has almost disappeared and can be classed with the dodo."

The judge adjourned the trial over the week-end.

SAD PLIGHT OF CHICAGO BEGGARS

Receive Only from $5 to $11 Dollars Daily—"Business" Falling Off.

Chicago.—Chicago beggars receive from $5 to more than $11 a day, and the mendicants are complaining because "business" is falling off owing to competition.

The figures were made public to night by R. H. Freund, who conducted an investigation for the social service administration of the University of Chicago.

The incomes ran as high as $20 a day. Freund observed ten Chicago beggars for a total of 647 minutes, and saw them receive 420 contributions. He estimated the average contribution at 7 cents, and found them to be receiving $2.42 cents an hour.

For an eight-hour day he estimated this group receive $11.46 each.

Forty-three beggars interviewed showed an average of $219 to $254 a day for the group. "Old-timers," however, indignantly asserted that beggars from other cities are usurping the field and that receipts two years ago were much larger.

ESKIMOS BECOMING REAL PROBLEM

Native Providence Reported to be Giving Way to Improvidence

Regina.—That the Eskimos in far Northern Canada were becoming a real problem, was the word of Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior here, yesterday. The incursion of the white man into those territories was partly blamed for the falling from grace of the aborigines, the minister declared that the native providence of the Eskimo was giving away to improvidence. The plains Indians, the minister further declared, were less troublesome to his department than the bush Indians of the Northern territories and generally were in better circumstances.

MISS McPHAIL SKETCHES A FARMERS UTOPIA

Calls Two-Party System a Cat-and-Dog Fight.

Miss Agnes McPhail has stepped forward and told the population of the United States what she thinks of Canadian politics. She has spoken quite bluntly and frankly and her terms can in no way be considered highly complimentary.

Miss McPhail herself needs no introduction. Since she became the dominion's first woman M. P., she has been consistently and continually active. As a member of the ginger group in the House of Commons she is prepared to criticize anything or support anything she acts somewhat as a political free agent.

It was through the medium of the New York Times that Miss McPhail presented her outspoken views to the great public. In a lengthy interview, she declares, among other things, that the two-party system of government is practically a cat-and-dog fight.

She begins by promptly pointing out that she is not sitting in parliament as a representative of Canadian women. "I do not represent women, I represent farmers," she says. "That is the most important fact I can state concerning my presence in the House."

But she qualifies her assertion: "Although I was elected as a direct representative of the United Farmers of Ontario, I must needs, I think, represent them in my peculiar woman's way."

"I mean by that just this—whereas men in politics place business values first, women place the emphasis upon human values. So I wish to push human values to the forefront in politics, with human welfare as the goal. I believe that this is to be the fundamental effect the larger and more useful result, of the political enfranchisement of women. But eventually this result will not be limited to women. Has not woman's most difficult task, since the race began, been to humanize man in order to make civilized living with him possible? So our work in this generation is not new, it is only a new aspect of a job which is very, very old."

And having dealt the male or the species a well-directed body blow, the doughty warrior in their behalf proceeds to analyze the agricultural situation. And that is where she proceeds to cress the two-party political system with a broad-axe.

"All governments, provincial as well as Federal," she states "may best do one thing for the farmer. That is to take the political and legal obstacles out of our way. But I shall return to that presently. For a moment, I want to talk about what we in Canada have called economic group representation. By this we do not mean class representation.

"Group representation does not imply that our class is always going to fight other classes in politics. It implies that the United Farmers of Canada, properly represented in parliament, are here not to fight all other groups but to co-operate with them in every possible way. For instance, there is a labor group and, under the old party names, the manufacturers' group, the railroad group and the shipping group. We can co-operate with each of these groups in so far as they are seeking the general welfare of the country. It is only when they seek privilege for special interests which are opposed to our interests as farmers that we must fight them on the floor of the House."

"Economic representation is the only natural political representation in this age. The party system is now an antiquated form of governmental organization. The single-minded purpose of the party in power is to stay in power. Likewise the sole purpose of the opposition is to break the power of the ruling party and so take its place and its loot. Our present party system makes a cat-and-dog fight of the whole task of government."

"When we have economic representation, all this will be changed. We shall conduct the public business in a business-like way and in the interest of the people we openly represent. People who make their living in the same way are naturally drawn together for mutual aid. This has to do with political life as well as other fields of social endeavor."

At this point Miss MacPhail's New York interviewer deftly attempted to discover if the first lady in politics had leaning toward Socialism. He remarked that her arguments sounded that way to him, but Miss MacPhail brushed aside Socialism with one dramatic and sweeping gesture.

"We farmers are not interested in issues of any sort," was her retort. At this point she is a library of society. I don't know what it is as its worst, and I don't much care."

So, having promptly driven this matter into the ground, Miss MacPhail advanced on the general question of policy.

"The first thing for us to do is to work toward free trade," was her all-inclusive announcement. "Protection is the greatest sham of our age. It robs the country people, supposedly to enrich the cities. In the long run, it robs everybody but a very few. The whole discussion of the Canadian tariff has been submerged in more chicanery and fraud than any other question with which we have to deal. As a matter of fact the issue in Canada is as simple as picking up potatoes. For instance, we farmers wish to trade our crops for cheaper British cloth and cheaper American farm machinery. At our point of entry stands the protectionist highwayman with a dark lantern, a bulldog and a smile. He says, 'I won't let you trade with other countries. You must buy only of me. That means that he gives to us and takes from us exactly what he pleases. What is there left for us poor farmers to do?

There is more in the same strain. Whatever one may think of Miss MacPhail's opinion on the tariff, and there is a great deal of thinking being done on this question at the moment, no one can doubt that she has certainly attacked the matter with a tremendous degree of courage and developed to an unusual degree the faculty of speaking her mind.

"We are driven to desert our farms," she continues, "and compete for wages in the factory towns. The result is that 200,000 young people have emigrated to the States in a single year. Canada is primarily a farming country. The very foundation of our economic system is agriculture. If we build our national system on the farm, we shall build solidly. By sacrificing the farmers we injure in the end our normal and useful manufacturers."

"That brings us to the next immediate economic issue—a positive issue—that of financing the farmers and the general question of credit. Our financial system today, or rather our lack of system, is a crazy jumble. The farmers should be financed by a co-operative credit system. We are beginning to pool our crops to great advantage in selling. Why not form credit unions for the purpose both of financing our seasonal overruns and our long-term loans?"

"The very last thing the farmer should ask for in politics is governmental paternalism. The greatest gift that life holds out for us is our freedom. To lose that is to lose all. The way to freedom is not slavery to the state. The way to freedom is the straight highway of voluntary cooperation. We grow strong by doing for ourselves, not by leaning on the government."

Having sifted the matter from an economical and political point of view, Miss MacPhail turns to the cultural side of things.

"The child of the farm," she comments, "feels that he is inferior because of his educational and cultural limitations. When he goes to the town high school, he is looked down upon. He is made to feel that he is awkward and intellectually backward. The development of cultural life in the rural districts is the second step. Our farmers must develop a larger, broader social outlook.

"As regards this part of our work, I am an enthusiast. Our farm community has at present no really satisfying social life. We are just beginning to develop the essential rural institutions. We still have to learn how to work and play together.

"I demand for the farmers the best schooling, the best music, the best preaching, the best books and the best homes and home life. Producing better crops and dairy products is all very well. But we farmers must get paid for them in terms of the best things life has for anybody anywhere. Then the cry 'Back to the farm' will be something more than rubbish and cant."

Here and There

Mineral production in Canada for 1924 is estimated at $208,194,000, as compared with $214,079,331 in the preceding year, according to a preliminary statement issued by the Department of Mines. Metallic minerals accounted for $96,034,000 of the total, followed by fuels and other non-metallics with $79,550,000, and structural materials and clay products with $33,330,000.

The Port of Montreal created a new world record in 1924 for the amount of grain handled by any one port in any one year, namely, 155,139,396 bushels, while from January 1 to November 30 she handled 94,365,568 bushels more than her nearest competitor and 17,332,709 bushels more than the seven next busiest ports combined.

Described as the finest coastal vessel in the world, the "Princess Kathleen," recently launched by Lady Mount Stephen, widow of the late Lord Mount Stephen, a former president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, left Glasgow on January 15 on her ten thousand mile journey through the Panama canal to join the Canadian Pacific's fleet of coastal steamships plying the seaboard of British Columbia.

A historic pageant of some proportions is being planned by the Calgary exhibition board for this year, its object being to commemorate the fifty anniversary of the founding of the city by the old North-West Mounted Police in 1875. In the period which has since elapsed, Calgary has grown to be an extremely busy, modern city, having a population of 75,000. A stampede similar to those held in Calgary in previous years is also planned for this summer.

THE QUICK AND THE DEAD

James Coleman while instructing a Sunday School class, asked the children the meaning of the "quick and the dead." This seemed to puzzle them somewhat, but suddenly one small boy piped out: "Please, sir, the man as gets out of the way of the motor car is quick, and 'im as doesn't is dead."

DEPLORES SOCIETY WOMEN'S FOIBLES

Neuro-Pathologist Criticizes Type That "Rattles Around Too Much"

London.—Criticism of a certain type of society woman who "rattles round too much and seeks refuge in stimulants" was made today by Dr. Hugh Crichton Miller, a well-known neuro-pathologist, in a divorce suit brought by Baldwin Raper, formerly an M. P., against his wife, who was the Marchioness of Conyngham before he married her. Miller told how he saw Lady Conyngham in May, 1922 just before her second marriage and found her in an excitable and uncontrollable condition.

"It was very difficult to get anything consecutive out of her," he said. "I was very much impressed by her incapacity in that condition of life seriously the realities of life. I told her she was on the way of being married, and that she had been rattling about a great deal too much and helping herself a good deal in order to get through life easily. I told her if she was contemplating marriage it was time she realized she should mend her ways."

Miller said his descriptions would apply to a number of modern women.

"I see a number to whom it exactly applies. Very few of them are happily married, I may add. It is a statement which requires a kind of treatment."

BURGLARS RAID THREE STORES IN CANNING

Broken Into—Old Lock Folks Attempt at Millinery Shop

Canning.—Burglars made successful raids on three stores in Canning Wednesday night, and failed in their attempt to enter a fourth place. The raids were discovered in an investigation that followed, when Mr. Bowden, of the staff of the Nova Scotia Bank, on returning to his home, found the door open in the store of A. D. Payzant, merchant.

Mr. Bowden immediately telephoned Mr. Payzant, who, in company with his son, William, and H. K. Bain, of Caldwell-Yerxa, Ltd., went down and discovered that a stone, thrown through the glass in the door had made possible the opening of the lock. The thieves had got away with clothing and smaller goods, including golf stockings and his gloves were found on the street this morning.

The same thing occurred in the store of L. M. Ward, where considerable goods were taken, including jewelry and silverware. Money in the cash register was untouched.

The door of the Red Cross Pharmacy was opened in the same way. Cleats and other articles were taken. The thieves attempted to open the door of the millinery store of Miss Bessie Hennigar, but owing to the lock being of an old-fashioned type, were unable to gain an entrance.

The stores entered were at 60 Main Street, within a few yards of one another.

PRINTING SCHOOL OPENS IN SEPTEMBER

Blindery Instruction Also to Be Given Here Under Provincial Auspices

Quebec.—A school for printers will be operated in conjunction with the Montreal Technical School and a special department in the same institution will be devoted to the teaching of modern methods of blindery. It was announced Wednesday evening by Hon. Athanase Davik, provincial secretary, who added that these new series of practical courses in the already well-equipped school would inaugurate in September next.

In announcing the opening of a school for printers as he had forecast a few months ago, Hon. Mr. Davik said the curriculum had the full approval of the printing trade. He stated that the object was not solely to allow those inclined to enter the printing trade to acquire knowledge of it, but also to supply those already in the printing trade with facilities to improve their knowledge, and generally to raise the standard of the trade.

Several well-known expert typographers and printers will be available as instructors.

J. Beaudin, who two years ago was awarded a scholarship by the province for the study of blindery abroad, will return next year, and will be placed in charge of the blindery school.

CANADA'S POOR SHOWING

For 1924 the Dominion occupied seventh place among countries supplying Great Britain with butter, the values being 18,000,000 pounds from Denmark, 10,000,000 pounds from New Zealand, 4,425,000 pounds from Argentina, 4,111,000 pounds from Irish Free State, 4,400,000 pounds from Australia, 1,397,000 pounds from Finland, and 1,269,000 pound from Canada.

A great agricultural country like Canada should not look at these figures without blushing for her dairy industry. The British market is ruled on a basis of quality and Canada has been far behind other countries with no better facilities for the development of the industry—if as good—and some of them much more disadvantageously situated as regards accessibility. In the matter of quality Canada has been found wanting.

The western provinces have made considerable progress in grading dairy products and a large portion of the total above is no doubt represented by butter from the prairies. Hon. Mr. Motherwell, the federal minister of agriculture, himself a Westerner, has shown that he is alive to the situation, and he is doing something to get the Canadian product up to grade. Something is also being done in Ontario by Hon. J. S. Martin. But there is still a great deal to be done if Canada is to live up to her opportunities as these figures so emphatically indicate.—Financial Post.

AUSTRALIA'S PROBLEM

Singapore Free Press: If Australia can, or will, make no definite attempt to develop her territories for her own use, other peoples of the world have a right to consider they should be given the chance. No country can rightly keep huge territories unexploited if there are other countries suffering from lack of room which are willing to attempt the task. It is, as it always has been, Australia's duty to make heavy sacrifices for her White policy. In no other way can she justify it, and inasmuch as her imperial commitments are not very heavy she should make a deliberate long-sighted and supreme effort to deal with the question of these undeveloped areas.

MOVING BEES

(Experimental Farms Note)

Moving bees consists not only in transporting them to the new location, but in making them stay there. As bees range two to three miles from the hive in search of nectar, they will, if the new location is within this area, likely return to the old home; if, however, it is outside they will remain where placed.

The best time to move bees is in the spring or fall when the weather is cooler and the homing instinct weaker than in the summer.

To move in summer time to a point inside the range of flight, first move the bees to a point outside of it, or down cellar for a week, then to the ultimate location.

If the move is a short one, use a wheel barrow and bump the bees well, place an object to attract their attention in front of the entrance and change the appearance of the old location as much as possible.

The colony should be prepared for transportation in the evening or early morning to prevent loss of field bees.

The bottom-board and cover should be fastened to the hive body by staples solder for the purpose or by wooden cleats and nails.

To close the entrance and give ventilation, take a piece of wire gauze six inches wide and as long as the entrance is wide, and fold it along its longer centre line. Thrust the "V" edge into the entrance and fasten one leg of the "V" to the bottom-board and the other to the face of the hive body with nails.

Should the weather be hot, make a two-inch frame of dimensions similar to the hive body, and cover of roof it with wire gauze. This stapled to the hive in place of a cover gives top ventilation and clustering space.

If transportation is by wagon or automobile, place the hive so that the frames will be parallel to the axles of the vehicle; if by railroa, let them be parallel to the rails.

A. H. W. Birch, Apiarist.

MOVING BEES

(Experimental Farms Note)

Moving bees consists not only in transporting them to the new location, but in making them stay there. As bees range two to three miles from the hive in search of nectar, they will, if the new location is within this area, likely return to the old home; if, however, it is outside they will remain where placed.

The best time to move bees is in the spring or fall when the weather is cooler and the homing instinct weaker than in the summer.

To move in summer time to a point inside the range of flight, first move the bees to a point outside of it, or down cellar for a week, then to the ultimate location.

If the move is a short one, use a wheel barrow and bump the bees well, place an object to attract their attention in front of the entrance and change the appearance of the old location as much as possible.

The colony should be prepared for transportation in the evening or early morning to prevent loss of field bees.

The bottom-board and cover should be fastened to the hive body by staples solder for the purpose or by wooden cleats and nails.

To close the entrance and give ventilation, take a piece of wire gauze six inches wide and as long as the entrance is wide, and fold it along its longer centre line. Thrust the "V" edge into the entrance and fasten one leg of the "V" to the bottom-board and the other to the face of the hive body with nails.

Should the weather be hot, make a two-inch frame of dimensions similar to the hive body, and cover of roof it with wire gauze. This stapled to the hive in place of a cover gives top ventilation and clustering space.

If transportation is by wagon or automobile, place the hive so that the frames will be parallel to the axles of the vehicle; if by railroa, let them be parallel to the rails.
