"PROGRESS" DAILY EDITION IN MACHINERY HALL.

How the Special Edition is Getting Along—A Twelve Thousand Pound Shipment of Paper—No Trouble to Get Advertisements for Such an Edition.

It would hardly be possible for any newspaper to meet with greater success in seeking patronage for a special edition than PROGRESS has this past week.

The general opinion among merchants and all others who have understood the plan as proposed by PROGRESS is that the idea is well conceived and they have sufficient confidence in the paper to depend that it will be carried out all right.

It is a strange fact that it is far easier to get and obtain orders for advertisements than it is to procure the copy for the same. The same prejudice against writing advertisements extends to all classes.

The merchant who does not object to paying $100 for a page advertisement will look worried to death when asked for the copy. There is one way this can be arranged without much trouble and promptness and good work will be then assured.

There are two or three people around PROGRESS office who understand the arrangement of type, phrases and all that goes to make an attractive announcement, who will be glad to assist any patron of PROGRESS in such a difficulty.

The assistance costs nothing and will perhaps be more satisfactory to the business man in the end. There seems to be a decided inclination to contract for large spaces and all the energies of PROGRESS Engraving Bureau are being taxed to draw and engrave the portraits and building work in time for the edition.

Those who wish photographs and engravings of buildings cannot delay any longer for dull weather sometimes prevents cameras from working and engravings cannot be had conveniently without photographs.

Something else is needed for the immense edition. That is paper. To supply the demand a shipment of twelve thousand pounds of special white paper made especially for PROGRESS is already on the rail and perchance has arrived here before this is printed.

In the list of chairmen of committees—whose portraits will appear in PROGRESS—which was printed last week, the name of Mr. James Estey was accidentally omitted, and Mr. H. J. Thorne was made chairman of the geology committee instead of the Educational exhibit. Since that time Messrs. W. M. Jarvis and A. L. Law, who were not seen before, have been added to the list.

Advertisers and all others should bear this fact in mind that orders for papers cannot be in too soon. Upon application printed wrappers will be furnished them for addressing purposes and expert boys in this office will, if they please, save them the trouble and work of wrapping up the papers. The paper will be printed on Friday, the 19th, and as many as possible, if not all, sent away that day and evening so that the people through New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and the island may read every article and advertisement between Saturday morning and the following Wednesday.

The advantage of such a paper for advertisers, published and circulated at such a time and filled with splendid illustrations of the exhibition building, the interior and exterior, and particularly of the exhibition chairmen, with a bird's eye view of the city, as well as interesting descriptive letter press, cannot be overestimated.

PROGRESS' sole aim will be to deserve the generous patronage of the merchants, and to that end no means or expense will be spared.

Some additions to the list of advertisers in the special edition are printed today. They will all be well represented in the paper.

The preparations for the daily PROGRESS to be printed in the machinery hall of the exhibition building are going forward splendidly. Mr. Cranston writes us that he will do all in his power to make the exhibit a complete success. It is quite possible that the press can be placed upon the cars at the manufactory and run right into the machinery hall, within 10 feet of where it will be running during exhibition week.

Our idea is to print two editions daily in the machinery hall. One in the afternoon and one in the evening. A complete newspaper printing office will be placed in our space with a Cranston press and a folder that will be attached to the press, take the papers as they are printed and fold and cut them ready for the people in the building where they can be sold by permission of the directors.

The edition is certain to be a good one since a majority of the visitors will not leave without such a memento of their visit to the exhibition.

There have been many applications already for space and nearly two pages of contract advertisements for 10 days have been made. The rate is $3 an inch for the time the exhibition is open—10 days.

OLD "BRUNSWICK NUMBER ONE."

The Fire Engine which is the Chief Decoration of Mr. Lantulum's Junk Yard.

In the Free Museum of Mechanical Arts, otherwise known as Lantulum's junk yard, on the corporation wharf below the Custom House, is an old fire engine. Exposed as it has been to wind and weather for so long there is nothing very attractive about it to the younger generation, but some of the old-timers from the North End lean over Pettungell's rails now and then, to talk of the days when they were young and frisky and "ran with the machine."

One of the pieces of tarnished brass of which the engine has not been stripped, bears the word "Brunswick." It is old No. 1, of the Portland department.

It was a handsome engine in its day with its polished piano box and burnished brasses. The polish is off the wood now, the lion couchant no longer ornaments the air vessel and everything which the hands of the volunteers delighted to keep shining is dull, tarnished, and battered.

"Brunswick No. 1" was a presentation engine from the people of what was then the parish of Portland, to the volunteer company. It was built by H. H. Jones of St. John, and was the first engine in Portland. Before that there had been a hose company.

The new engine was presented to the company in March, 1853, and the firemen had a parade in honor of the occasion. The engine house was in the old market building which stood on the spot now occupied by the Mission church. The programme included an elaborate supper to be served in the evening, in the big room up stairs.

The company returned to the house at dusk, and had just housed the new engine when one of the men looked out of a back window and saw a bright light.

"Hello, boys, there's a big fire on Pond street," he shouted, and away went the crowd and the new engine, with a rush. It was a big fire, and a hot one, for it was the night that Heber's sausage factory and another building were burned. Cora Linn, No. 3, had its quarters on Union street, a little above Dock, and there was a race between it and No. 1 to get "first water," and win the five pounds cash which the corporation allowed as a prize. No. 3 had its hose stretched first, but No. 1 "got there" by uncoupling it and taking advantage of the resulting delay.

It was a bitterly cold night, which the old timers remember to this day, when the water froze as fast as it fell. The supper spread for No. 1, with its abundance of hot coffee, did duty in a far different way from that expected.

And such was the beginning of the long and useful career of "Brunswick No. 1."

The Fall Sports. The Amateur Athletic Club's fall sports come off September 16th. They are always the event of the year among the athletes, of whom a large number are in training. There are 16 events on the programme, and enough good athletes in the provinces to make every one of them worth seeing. The sports always draw a large crowd, and the increasing number of athletes and athletic clubs make them of greater interest every year.

A Close Bit of Figuring. The financial antics of a table boarder of a popular city house has caused considerable amusement this week. During the week his family were rusticated he arranged for table board by the week and at the end of the time deducted the meals he missed and tried to settle the account in that way. Hence these tears!

Change of Time and Agents. The Weymouth S. S. Company has changed the hour of the sailing of its steamers which now departs from the Custom House wharf. Owing to the latter change it was not convenient for Messrs. Baird and Peters to act as agents any longer and Mr. Frank Rowan has been appointed in their stead.

FIVE OF THEM WILL GO.

THE FIRE COMMITTEE DECIDE TO HAVE THE JUNKET.

And the City will Foot the Bills—The Motion Sailed Through Secret Session, with Boss Chesley as a Pilot—A Suggestion for the Aldermen.

The public safety department have decided that the junketing party must go. Five of the city aldermen can pack their grips at any moment now and start for Boston and suburbs at the expense of the taxpayer.

That is the conclusion arrived at on motion of Alderman Chesley in a secret session of the public safety committee this week.

The idea of the junket was exposed in PROGRESS some time ago but the open disapproval of the people prevented them from carrying the plan into execution. The council threw the whole weight of the matter upon the safety committee. They had not the nerve to vote it down for fear that some of them might be in a position similar to that of the fire committee now, and be retaliated upon. So absolute power to deal with the question was given to the safety committee and they have shown their regard for the interests of the city by voting for a free holiday trip.

Not all of them, however, but a majority and that was all that was wanted. There was a discussion too warm for a hot summer day on the motion of "Boss" Chesley, but it was carried in the end.

The fire committee are the chosen few—five of them to see about a fire alarm system. Not one of them as PROGRESS has pointed out has any practical knowledge of the business they are sent on. Their report if it is ever made will be interesting reading.

The methods of old Portland are gradually creeping into the present united city. This junketing trip is a sample of them, and its origin in the fertile brain of Ald. Chesley seems to be perfectly appropriate. This gentleman seems to have lost none of those generous qualities which so distinguished him when he was head and tail of the civic government of misgoverned Portland. He delighted there to show the taxpayers how perfectly familiar he was with funds and some of his warm supporters and friends were also pleased with his financing. He distributed contracts with perfect freedom and gave them to whom he pleased.

This vacation trip of the fire committee can easily cost the city $500. The aldermen will no doubt wait the cooler weather and take all the enjoyment out of the junket possible. They say that September is a perfect month in Boston, the month for excursion parties of all kinds. Our junketing firemen had better then postpone their trip for a time—it would be better to postpone it forever—and be in the fashion.

If the aldermen want to have some idea of how the people like to have these additional and unnecessary expenditures forced upon them, especially when the assessments are so large as at present, they could easily get permission to deliver the tax bills of their constituents. They would probably hear something to their advantage, and before the job was done find it necessary to have policemen accompany them on their rounds. "Every little helps" to make the tax bills larger, and it will be generally conceded that if they keep on growing they will be too large for most people to handle.

The line should be drawn somewhere. Fun that All Did Not Enjoy. There were indications of a frolic on Jeffrey's hill Tuesday night. Most of the doorways along the street were strewn with hay, and two large boxes were suspended from the railing at the corner of Sewell street. Early in the evening they were in front of a grocery filled with hay. What happened at some time of the night was quite apparent.

On the River. A large number of people are taking advantage of the excursion rates offered by the managers of the river steamers this summer, and among the most popular boats on the river is the May Queen. The sail up the river is always delightful and there is no better way to escape the bustle and excitement of the city, and get genuine rest.

Too Much Mud for Anyone. A citizen writes about the absence of the crossings at the junction of Germain and Wellington Row. PROGRESS should have a kickers' column. But, seriously, the street superintendent should remember that two crossings up at the same time inconvenience people.

The Odd Fellows Walk. Next? It was the Odd Fellows' turn to have a parade this week, and they made a fine showing. The new uniforms of Canton La Tour looked very fine, and the music of the visitors band was of a very high order.

FUN IN THE EVENING.

The Crowds of People who go to see the Ingenious Japs.

The Japanese village seems to be growing in popularity. Every evening sees a large crowd of visitors, and other attractions in the city seem to have no effect on the number who attend. There is considerable to see, from the potter to the candy man. There are always eager and interested crowds at every booth, and indeed such workmanship as is done by the Jap who cuts out all the silver or gold from a coin, leaving simply the head and lettering, or the painter who with one brush and many different colored paints, makes the most beautiful designs on satin, is quite a revelation to ordinary people. But there are only a few of the things one sees "done while you wait." The lettering on glass is well done, and any visitor can have a drawing of himself made, if he likes to believe it resembles him. Excellent lemonade and egg shakes can be had at one corner of the village, and people who are smart enough and have a habit of looking well ahead of them, can see and hear a first-class stage performance; for past experience has shown that the "reserved seats" are too few and if one don't get there early he cannot get within hearing distance. The Shaffers are first-class artists, good musicians and Mr. Shaffer an excellent ventriloquist. The Punch and Judy show is far ahead of the ordinary entertainment of that time, and has not that antiquated appearance so common to many of them.

The Japanese Village is a grand bazaar with all the objectionable (?) features of the local entertainment left out—hosts of pretty and persuasive girls who will make one buy innumerable things that has no earthly use for.

WHAT MR. ELLIS SAW. The Small Boys Who Had a New Club Room Escape. Mr. Ellis, of the Gas company learned, last week, that a number of boys were making a club room out of the old electric light station on Paradise Row, and reported the matter to the chief of police.

A searching party was organized, Saturday, composed of Mr. Ellis, Mr. Mount, the electrician, Officer Baxter and Captain Rawlings, the latter in command. When the station was reached, the captain placed Mr. Ellis on duty at the gate, with instructions to capture the offenders if they tried to escape in that direction, and Mr. Ellis, like a good soldier, obeyed orders, stayed at his post and kept his eyes open. And he saw something. First a pair of legs appeared out of a window, followed by a boyish body. Then another, and another dropped to the ground, and disappeared around the building. But Mr. Ellis, believing that all points were as well guarded as the gate, never left his post and awaited developments. At last he got tired waiting, and entering the building he walked up stairs. There he found the two police officers and the electrician holding a consultation. They had all entered the building together to effect the arrest, and when Mr. Ellis had seen them escaping from the window, the gallant captain wanted to know why in—he didn't arrest them.

Mr. Ellis was puzzled to know what the others intended doing.

A QUICK WITTED NOVA SCOTIAN. His Ready Interpretation of Three Suspicious Initials. Some time ago one of the principal dealers in the apple districts of Nova Scotia sailed, and among his creditors were a few St. John wholesale houses who did not relish being left in the lurch. They suspected, too, that there was some crooked business in the suspension, and kept a sharp lookout for their debtor. This same debtor had a parent who was as shrewd as Nova Scotians usually are, and more quick witted than the majority of them. His son, still in the way of business, shipped a large quantity of apples to St. John with his initials A. W. P. on the barrels, and his father came along to handle the shipment. The creditors in this city learning of the shipment sent a constable to get at the facts and if possible make a seizure.

The constable met the old gentleman in charge and asked if Mr. So and So did not own those apples.

"Oh no, these apples belong to me," was the prompt response.

"How does it happen then that his initials A. W. P. are marked on the barrels?"

"His initials! God bless you those don't stand for any name. A. W. P. means All Wallopin Pippins."

Can't Help Seeing Them. The new letter boxes present a very imposing appearance, and if they are kept as attractively painted as at present, the collector who will skip them and yet retains a clear conscience, is entirely unfit for service. Every box has on it the time at which the mail will be taken out.

THE WINNER?

Now for a Great Finish for the Favorite.

PUSHOR AND DONOVAN IN IT.

The St. Johns' Backstop Increases His Lead.

FREDERICTON HOLDS VOTES FOR CAPTAIN DONOVAN.

The Last Ballot Printed Today—Voting Closes at Sharp Four Next Thursday—Orders Taken until Tuesday Morning at Ten O'clock.

Now for the finish. The last ballot is printed in today's PROGRESS and the ballot boxes close at sharp four o'clock next Thursday.

The vote today shows a gain for Pushor of about 300 votes. Donovan is making the race most exciting, however, and many believe has a reserve strength that will surprise the friends of the St. John's man.

A Fredericton letter to PROGRESS gives some interesting pointers on this subject. It would seem that the Celestials are holding their ballots. If they had not, the result might have been a good deal closer.

But it is close enough to satisfy anybody. PROGRESS has inquiries from many places about the latest hour orders will be taken for papers. Send them in as early as possible and not later than Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. Orders from a distance should be wired.

Captain Donovan appears to have lost some ground in certain quarters and gained in others. It is possible that the very same cause that changed the opinion of some people had a contrary effect upon others.

The tellers, Messrs. Ferguson, Jennings and Moran were very weary before they finished counting the ballots Thursday. They began early and ended late, the only excitement to vary the monotony being the closeness of the vote. Counting the total vote polled and allowing a liberal discount for ballots that will never be polled there must be a tremendous reserve vote some where. For whom it is held will be known next week.

The most surprising result is the intense increasing interest manifested in the contest throughout the province. In places where base ball is merely the echo of the game, the orders for extra papers are surprising. This is no fictitious sale either. The agents report new customers, and in the majority of cases they will always remain customers. Thus the circulation will have a permanent and gratifying boom.

There was at any time a doubt of the success and popularity of the vote for the favorite ball player it was thoroughly dispelled last week. Long before the paper went to press the orders for extra papers from newsdealers far exceeded any previous demands.

This warranted the printing of thousands of extra copies and it was evident before the office closed Friday evening that even the liberal supply would not be sufficient for the demand. The press and folder of PROGRESS were steadily at work from noon Friday until midnight and but for the perfect order of the machinery and the uninterrupted run a large part of the edition would have been delayed until Saturday morning. Telegrams began to arrive early in the evening from Fredericton ordering papers by the three and four hundreds until when the last bundle was marked more than 1000 copies had gone to the capital alone.

But the newsboys made the great demand Saturday, and they were splendidly backed up by the city newsdealers. Notwithstanding the driving rain storm the papers were gone before 8 o'clock in the morning, and the press began its work again, continuing until noon, when a grand total of 13,000 copies had been printed and sold.

A large number of ballots came in envelopes to the editor. Some of them could not be traced aside from the post mark on the envelope, but all were alike placed in the heap of votes.

DEAR FRIEND PROGRESS: I send you one-half dozen votes for Billy Donovan, as I think he is the best and most gentlemanly catcher and all-round player in the provinces, and I hope he will win. I see by your paper that there have been no votes sent from Maine yet, but I sent you one last week, and I hope you will acknowledge this half-dozen. There is a great admirer of Pushor working for him in this town, but as the papers are limited every week we can't do a great pile, but every one counts.

Houlton, Maine, August 18, '90. DALTON.

DEAR SIR: Will you please to hand to the tellers the enclosed votes (9), to be placed to the credit of Capt. Frank White, the local slugger, and much obliged. Sackville, Aug. 18th.

TO THE EDITOR OF PROGRESS: Kindly deposit the enclosed for me. Sorry I can't send more, but only had the paper sent by me. White is the man to win. W. R., (a St. John Boy.) Cambridgeport, Mass., August 21st.

TO THE EDITOR OF PROGRESS: You will please find enclosed a small quantity of ballots for Wm. Donovan, which you will be good enough to hand to committee, and oblige. W. S. Fredericton, N. B., Aug. 25, '90.

DEAR SIR: Would you please hand in these votes (for Billy Pushor) (15) to the tellers and much obliged. AN ADMIRER OF BILLY PUSHOR. Sackville, N. B., Aug. 25th.

EDITOR PROGRESS: I enclose a few ballots for Pushor. Will have more Monday or before poll closes. Welford Station, Aug. 27.

PUBLISHER OF PROGRESS: Enclosed please find four votes for Billy Pushor, with my best wishes that he will win. W. A. P. Boston, Aug. 27.

EDITOR PROGRESS: Please find enclosed several ballots for W. Pushor. Frank White is our favorite but as he appears to be out of the fight we would like to see Pushor win. We wrote two for White which you can credit him with—Yours to a cinder, Fredericton, N. B., Aug. 25, 1890. WASHINGTON.

TO EDITOR OF PROGRESS: Please find enclosed two ballots for Wm. Pushor. I am a New Brunswick boy and receive your paper every week; I enjoy it very much. Here's luck to Pushor. W. C. STEVENS. Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 19, 1890.

EDITOR OF PROGRESS: Please place these to the credit of Frank White to aid him in getting the $50 he deserves if he only sticks to his crowd through the season. ONE OF HIS ST. STEPHEN ADMIRERS. St. Stephen, Aug. 16, '90.

TO THE EDITOR OF PROGRESS: Enclosed please find 45 votes for William Pushor of the St. John. A. A. Association base ball side. Please place these to his credit and let us know through your paper that you have received them. TWO OF HIS HALIFAX ADMIRERS. P. S. He has lots more here. Halifax, Aug. 26.

NOT ON THE PROGRAMME.

A Little Event Which Drew a Big Crowd of Orangemen.

The local Orangemen gave their upper province brethren a generous send off from Minister Bowell down to the delegate from Muskoka, but not one of them could have felt much happier than Alderman Bell, of Toronto, the mover of the famous Bell resolutions at the Grand Lodge last year.

Those who read PROGRESS know that some of the shining examples of good and perfect Orangemen in this town were not in sympathy with Mr. Bell's resolution and spent some time later explaining why they were not in favor of it. Still there were a large number of good members of the order who disagreed with them and were quite certain of their course. These independent spirits could not see Ald. Bell come and go from the city without giving some expression of their views, and they surprised themselves as well as him by the goodly gathering that assembled in the market building. They presented a gold-headed cane to their equal rights leader, and talked until the air was blue. The New Brunswick grand master was not present—perhaps it was just as well, for the little presentation was not on the programme, nor indeed would he have cared to hear local grievances aired so freely and fearlessly.

Party politics and Orange politicians received righteous send offs before the crowd adjourned, but Ald. Bell received the heartiest send off of all when he boarded the C. P. R. train for home.

Where He Should Have Gone. Mr. Adam Brown, M. P., is reported to have said that St. John was the cleanest city he ever saw. It is quite evident that Mr. Brown did not take a car to Portland, stand on the rear platform and imagine what would happen if he was unfortunate enough to fall off anywhere on Portland bridge or Paradise row. If he did, Mr. Brown must have visited some very interesting cities.

They Surprised the Audience. There was a little excitement among the crowd who were listening to the Odd Fellows' band at the rink Thursday evening, when they were playing the Comic Tattoo. When the drum major remonstrated with the musicians, which is a part of the piece, many in the audience did not know what to make of it, and rushed in on the band. The incident caused considerable amusement.

THESE ARE MY JEWELS.

THE NAME A ROMAN MATRON CALLED HER CHILDREN.

Rev. Arthur John Lockhart Discusses Their Relation to the Church—Its Important Part in Forming Their Character—The Responsibilities of Mothers.

"These are my jewels," said the Roman matron, Cornelia, directing the attention of a vainer mind than her own to her noble children. Lies your pride in the possession of pearls, or do you contemplate a gem with pleasure; then much more to me are my children—in a motherly eye, pearls of greater price and gems of purer lustre. Her saying is greatly significant, and not inappropriate on the lips of a modern Christian mother. My jewels! Yet not mine only; these are for God and for mankind. To me have they been entrusted; they are mine that, if I may, I may cause them to be His who gave them; so I must care for them most religiously. Yes, may the wife say to her husband,

My love, my life's best ornament, these are our jewels, and chief adornment, our mutual hope and joy; ours of god and polish and beauty, to set in a true love's crown; these will we elevate to a fairer destiny than ever befall those precious sparklers in oriental crowns, while faith reveals their divine election in the sentence: "They shall be mine in that day when I make up my jewels."

To him who believes in the progressiveness of our race, and the upward gravitation of the ages, (for certainly this amount of optimism seems warrantable), the children coming must possess a peculiar interest as moulders and inheritors of the better time. Their lives are not to be mere repetitions of our own, nor are their deeds to be a servile imitation of the past. They are to inherit our portion, and their own, besides; they are to increase manifold. We expect to send our sons and daughters forth to a more advanced destiny, not only on the material but on the spiritual side of their being. They are not only our care, but our hope; not our responsibility alone, but our expectation. They must do and be much more than ourselves to fulfil our prayers and realise our dreams; but we feel if they are pure and true, and like the exemplar—if they have character and consecration, they will rise with events and be equal to emergencies.

Are they the nation's wards? They are more than this. In forming them the church must bear a very distinct and important part. A large proportion of the men who are to bear honorable burdens, civic and religious, in that time which shall succeed our own, will doubtless arise out of christian households; and they, it may be presumed, will largely have taken their armies from christian life and christian institutions, to which they stand in such natural and close relation. . . . They are wards of the church, for whom she must assume responsibilities, and whose persons and interests she must guard and promote.

Certainly the formative work done in the household, in the training and instruction of the children born there, must be regarded as a very important portion in the division of this labor. Useless it is to deny it, the fountain of rarest, most far-extended influence is here; and how emphatically home-training and example may be the means of knowledge. If, according to an old proverb, much in favor with Carlyle, a person finds it difficult to "go back of his jaw," (i. e., to resist prenatal influence,) and if you add to hereditary tendency, a will perverted, and wrongly inclined, how hardly shall he overcome the fierceness and viciousness amid which his childhood may have been formed? Consideration intensifies to us the importance of this subject; and though we may not deal with it greatly as it deserves, we have this conviction that, just as powerful, and just as positive as in the evil case are its appropriate instruments and influences, may be the uplifting and renewing force of Christian life, example and teaching. The church is in the house also; the dwelling is a sanctuary, even as is the body; and most blessed, priestess at this shrine, is the mother. Her influence, by the testimony of most sited and holiest lips, stands supreme. I am what she began to make me, is the grateful or awful confession of the Burkes, the Washingtons, the Wesleys, the Byrons and Nerors of mankind.

The mother in her office holds the key Of the soul; and she it is who stamps the coin Of character.

The public school is also a factor touching this wardship; for many christian persons exercise this sacred function of educator,—(and I would plead the importance of securing such teachers as can favorably impress the moral natures of children.) Our public schools ought not to be Sectarian; but should they not be Christian?—which is a far different matter. They must be christian, or anti-christian; for neutrality as to spiritual life manners and morals is anti-christianity, and of the essence of Faganism. We should do better than materialistic and Pagan Rome. If it be true that the parent who misunderstands and misleads a child under him puts an effectual bar to the more direct efforts in his favor which may be made by the church and on the Sabbath; how equally so must a multitude of immoral or spiritually indifferent teachers.

The Roman church holds the children as its wards, and provides most scrupulously for their retention within its influence. We, as Protestants, who hope for the triumph of faith in our children, and look upon as potentially its members, sometimes feel that their religious heirship is only problematical when compared with the almost certainty of the Roman church. Are we to get beyond the probability of claiming and holding our children for Christ? is a question we are sometimes asking.

We shall gain much toward our end by a right method of dealing with them. . . . We must in some sense hold them upon equality, and cultivate intimacy and mutual respect. The boy and girl is potentially the man and woman. They must not be misunderstood or ignored; their individuality and honorable pride must not be violated. Whittier's delightfully familiar poem to the bare-footed boy expresses much of the spirit with which childhood should be regarded:

Blessings on thee, little man, Barefoot boy, with cheek of tan! My boyhood's pure delight; A presence felt the live long day, A welcome far at night.

I could not sleep unless Thy hand Were underneath my head, That I might kiss it as I lay Wakeful upon my bed.

And quite alone I never felt, I knew that Thou wert near, A silence tingling in the room, A strangely pleasant fear.

With age Thou grewest more divine True more glorious than before; I feared Thee with a deeper fear, Because I loved Thee more.

AN OLD TIME JOURNAL.

Some Curious Entries Found in an Old Book of Accounts.

I came across an old business journal or record of merchandising, a few days ago, which had been kept in St. John many years ago, by whom I cannot say, as there is no evidence on this point. It is enough to say, however, that the bookkeeper, whoever he was, was a model of neatness and perfection as far as the entries go; the handwriting being of marvellous neatness and sameness all through, and the book free from blots, erasures or slams. It ranges from the month of January, 1812, to March, 1817, and many quaint and curious entries are recorded therein.

Names which are now seldom heard are met with and recall to mind the early settlers and business men of St. John. The prices of goods as compared with the present day are worthy in many particulars of attention. Among the familiar articles I find a gallon of good molasses cost four shillings and sixpence or about 90 cents. A pound of Souchong tea anywhere from six shillings to seven shillings and sixpence. How carefully they must have made the tea stand out in those days and what a bonanza it would be for Mackay if he could realize such prices now. Good coffee, however, could be had for a shilling and one and sixpence per pound. Bed ticking, I observe, cost three shillings and fourpence per yard. A pair of men's cotton stockings, seven shillings and sixpence. The washing must have been limited in those days, as a pound of soap was worth one shilling and three pence. A gallon of good, prime old rum could be had for ten shillings. What jovial hobnobbing there must have been over the good old rum punch, and judging by the numbers of entries of this article, it was in great demand, too. Rye flour was worth fifty shillings a barrel or about $10; while wheat flour ranged all the way from seventy-two shillings to eighty-five shillings. Common brown sugar was worth one shilling and three pence per pound. Canned salmon was worth two shillings and nine pence per pound. In one instance potatoes brought four shillings per bushel, and so on through the whole list of merchandise.

Many of the entries were quaint and curious in their way, and poring over them one could imagine himself in the old St. John of nearly a hundred years ago; could see the stately walk of its leading and prominent citizens, as with, perhaps, knee-breeches and the garments of that period they blandly ordered up a gallon of good old rum or spirits wherewith to entertain their guests. One entry I will quote in its original form as a curiosity:

May 14th, Goods Dr. to Sundries. To R. Robertson—3 Jack knives @ 1s. 6d., 4s. 6d.; 3 spoons @ 4d., 1s.; for the American prisoners on board the brig Reward—6s. 6d. To H. Johnston & Son—Hed for ditto and Capt. Simonds, apprentices, which is charged to their different acc'ts—£12, 6s., 6d.

Thus it would seem that St. John harbor held the brig Reward with American prisoners on board. What a chain of incidents might be unfolded if all the facts relating to these American prisoners could be made known now. What anxious hearts there must have been on board the Reward on May, 1813, as they waited and watched for liberty.

These old landmarks are interesting at times and it may be they will recall many memories of that distant period in the history of St. John. MAX.

THESE ARE MY JEWELS.

THE NAME A ROMAN MATRON CALLED HER CHILDREN.

Rev. Arthur John Lockhart Discusses Their Relation to the Church—Its Important Part in Forming Their Character—The Responsibilities of Mothers.

"These are my jewels," said the Roman matron, Cornelia, directing the attention of a vainer mind than her own to her noble children. Lies your pride in the possession of pearls, or do you contemplate a gem with pleasure; then much more to me are my children—in a motherly eye, pearls of greater price and gems of purer lustre. Her saying is greatly significant, and not inappropriate on the lips of a modern Christian mother. My jewels! Yet not mine only; these are for God and for mankind. To me have they been entrusted; they are mine that, if I may, I may cause them to be His who gave them; so I must care for them most religiously. Yes, may the wife say to her husband,

My love, my life's best ornament, these are our jewels, and chief adornment, our mutual hope and joy; ours of god and polish and beauty, to set in a true love's crown; these will we elevate to a fairer destiny than ever befall those precious sparklers in oriental crowns, while faith reveals their divine election in the sentence: "They shall be mine in that day when I make up my jewels."

To him who believes in the progressiveness of our race, and the upward gravitation of the ages, (for certainly this amount of optimism seems warrantable), the children coming must possess a peculiar interest as moulders and inheritors of the better time. Their lives are not to be mere repetitions of our own, nor are their deeds to be a servile imitation of the past. They are to inherit our portion, and their own, besides; they are to increase manifold. We expect to send our sons and daughters forth to a more advanced destiny, not only on the material but on the spiritual side of their being. They are not only our care, but our hope; not our responsibility alone, but our expectation. They must do and be much more than ourselves to fulfil our prayers and realise our dreams; but we feel if they are pure and true, and like the exemplar—if they have character and consecration, they will rise with events and be equal to emergencies.

Are they the nation's wards? They are more than this. In forming them the church must bear a very distinct and important part. A large proportion of the men who are to bear honorable burdens, civic and religious, in that time which shall succeed our own, will doubtless arise out of christian households; and they, it may be presumed, will largely have taken their armies from christian life and christian institutions, to which they stand in such natural and close relation. . . . They are wards of the church, for whom she must assume responsibilities, and whose persons and interests she must guard and promote.

Certainly the formative work done in the household, in the training and instruction of the children born there, must be regarded as a very important portion in the division of this labor. Useless it is to deny it, the fountain of rarest, most far-extended influence is here; and how emphatically home-training and example may be the means of knowledge. If, according to an old proverb, much in favor with Carlyle, a person finds it difficult to "go back of his jaw," (i. e., to resist prenatal influence,) and if you add to hereditary tendency, a will perverted, and wrongly inclined, how hardly shall he overcome the fierceness and viciousness amid which his childhood may have been formed? LOVE'S COMING.

Love came to me in life so late... Love came to me in life so late... Love came to me in life so late...

PHIL.

Old Timothy Barnes told the story, while we sat on the cliff overlooking the mine and the gloomy wall of the prison.

"There never was a likelier girl than Phil," he said. "My old woman and I lived alongside of Hoover, Phil's father, in a crack of Racoon Mountain.

"When she was a year old, Hoover used to take her to his place, and set her in a lot of dry leaves whilst we were cutting wood.

"At that little girl rose up like a young tiger cat, and fastened one claw in my wife's shoulder, and laid the other on Hoover's breast.

"The still was quick to come in favor. The Racoon Mountain boys fairly besieged that hole in the ground where Hoover made wild-cat whiskey.

"The time we always dreaded had come. Batey was the deputy-marshal, and he set the bloodhounds on Hoover's track. The faded and discolored beard is unity and a misfortune.

man was run down to destruction in a single night. "Such a night! It was along about midnight when we heard a rattle of the latch and some one calling, 'Tim! Tim! There's trouble to the still!'

"It was almost as bright as day, and so still that I thought Phil must have dreamed there was a raid until I came in sight of the cave. Then I saw what made me drop down and hold my breath.

"All at once something took hold of my heart, and held it till I couldn't move hand nor foot to go to her where she lay in the tall, wet grass, her face turned up to the moon, and the blood showing on her white night-gown.

"I took the little brown hand in mine. It was warm! The touch of it brought the man in me back again, and I took a baby in my arms and carried her to the still-house brook, and laid her down. Then I took the little head that had been on my knee, and ran my hand over the bare throat.

"Thank God! I said. 'She has been choked by a bloody hand, but the bird's throat is not slit.' 'All at once she opened her eyes.

"At the sound of her voice, so natural, the man in me went off again, and I crouched there by the embers and cried like a baby. And that girl just rose up and said: 'Don't stop to whisper, man! They're after father, a-runnin' of him down like a deer.

"Before I knew what she was up to, she was out like a ghost amongst the shining laurel. I started out after her, but a rifle rang out in the forest, and a man's voice said, 'Git back, else you're a dead man!'

"That one word was enough. My old woman pointed to the roof-room, and when Hoover was up she dragged away the ladder and hid it. They looked every where but in the right place; they did not think to look there, for the ladder was gone.

her father, an I'll stan' by that ole convic', Tim, till the term air expired. 'Tim, till the term air expired.'

"She was always cheering up Hoover, but his was a life sentence, and the warden said he was bound to die unless he got out of that dungeon. He was always longing for the mountain, begging even in his sleep to go back to it.

"It was but sundown when they first sighted the mountains. The sight was like medicine to Hoover; he cried like a child getting back home. Phil let him have his cry out, then she bent down and his wrists under the ring around his neck.

"I was ready to turn back when I saw Phil crouched by the gate. She was excited, and suddenly it came to me that she was tempted. There was Hoover's chance!

"The next time I saw her, looking like a flower the rain had washed whilst it was beating it, I said, 'Blessed is he that overcometh.' There was Hoover's chance!

"The system is rendered malaria-proof when the blood is kept pure and vigorous by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. At this season, all should have this admirable preparation at hand.

at all times Hoover was growing worse and worse. "One day she came to me and said, 'Tim, ye hev always been a frien' to we-un.'

"Then she told me to go to Nashville and tell the lawyer that she needed a friend. I went, and he came straight back with me. All day he and Phil sat by the bunk in the hospital where Hoover lay dying.

"It was an awful scene that the man's sin had dragged his innocent daughter into. We sat there waiting whilst one messenger was getting in ahead of the other. Hoover was sinking fast. Phil was praying aloud for the other messenger to get there, and the dog was howling like all possessed, and the little black boy was crying with fear.

"Hoover rose up in bed. 'Little Phil! said he, and fell back with a moan. 'The dog stopped howling, and the guard got up and went out. Phil bent over the face on the yellow coverlid.

"My place air here,' she said. 'The brand air on my brow, too.' 'Visited on the child, the iniquity of the father,' thought I. But the cross was too heavy. The little heart broke under it.

"I never saw her smile for three years. They couldn't coax her from the prison, either. 'My place air here,' she said. 'The brand air on my brow, too.'

THE ALDERMEN'S VACATION.

Some of the city aldermen have given further evidence of their disregard of civic expenditure. Without any reasonable excuse they have gone one step further and added another sum to the already large burden upon the taxpayers.

What right has any alderman to move that he and four of his associates shall go upon a vacation trip at the expense of the city? When this infamous junket was mooted a short time ago, its reception by the citizens seemed to indicate that it would be abandoned without further talk.

A similar project in Toronto met with such a fate. The Queen City took over the street railway system and three or four of the genial spirits about the board thought it would be a splendid chance for them to inquire into the working of corporation street railways in American cities.

They voted some $1,200 in committee and for a favored few to enjoy the trip. Like the St. John aldermen their vote was secret and it was only accidentally that some newspaper found out the scheme and exposed the whole business.

The proposal of our aldermen to spend at least $500 on this little junket should meet with even stronger disapproval at our hands. Apart from the principle of such a scheme the estimated expense, $500, is worth far more to St. John than $1,200 was to Toronto.

ONE KIND OF FREEDOM.

JOHN BURNS, the leader of the London dockmen, in a recent speech gave currency to a rumor that the ship owners were about to establish a "Pinkerton" force, similar to that employed by private corporations in America.

He declared that if this were done, the dockmen would meet them revolver to revolver. A press despatch says that his words were greeted with tumultuous applause and a London correspondent claims that his remarks were made to "rouse the feeling of the men, and stimulate their enthusiasm."

The Pinkerton system would not be tolerated in England. He adds, further, that "the necessity of employing private police does not exist there to the same extent as it seems to in the United States, for there is not the same hesitancy in calling upon the military to aid the civil authorities."

There is something in this for our friends in the neighboring republic to ponder over. From these statements it would appear that there is far from being the country of freedom. Under the governments of both England and the United States, the state should be prepared to protect the rights and liberties of all citizens alike.

But when one of two opposing parties pays for that protection, they cease to be free and equal before the law. In other words, when the private corporations of the United States hire Pinkerton men to protect their interests, a line is drawn, and the man with the most money gets the most protection.

How are the people who cannot afford to pay legalized sharpshooters going to be protected? Experience has shown that when they attempt to defend themselves against the recklessness of the capitalist hirelings they become criminals, and are treated as such. If a country cannot protect one of its citizens, it is only natural that he should endeavor to protect himself; but when he is allowed to do this, all his fellow citizens should be given the same privilege.

There should be no distinction between the man who hires his protection and the one who has to protect himself. Regarded in this light, as well as in many

WHO CAN PULL YOUR TEETH.

The Gentlemen Who Figure by Right in the Dental Profession. Up to this time it has been an open question whether the people who cannot claim natural ownership of their teeth, or indeed those who have been forced reluctantly to part with some of those very necessary and useful assistants of digestion, have been operated upon by the regularly certified graduate or the wandering quack.

The numerous applicants for public favor in this sphere recently have created a feeling of distrust among those who have grown gray in the business, and it is whispered that some of the recent outputs of the United States colleges have hinted their disapproval of the ancient methods which have been in vogue in New Brunswick.

To settle this question an act of the legislature was passed and certain gentlemen called scrutineers were appointed whose duty it was to learn whether a claimant's parchment was real or unreal or whether he had any at all.

The scrutineers met in due course and waded through the credentials submitted to them. The result of their deliberations was the following "preferred list," and PROGRESS is happy to announce that any one of the gentlemen mentioned can be guaranteed to make it entertaining for any troublesome ivory you may have:

Magazines. Mr. Lowell's "Inscription for a Memorial Bust of Fielding," though brief, is the most remarkable piece of writing in the Atlantic for September. Dr. Holmes, in his installment of "Over the Teacups," discourses on the fondness of Americans for titles, and gives a lay sermon on future punishment, and ends it, as do many preachers, with some verses. Mr. Justin Winsor considers the "Perils of Historical Narrative," and Mr. J. Franklin Jameson contributes a scholarly paper on "Modern European Historiography"; Mr. Fiske adds an article on the "Disasters of 1780," and these three papers furnish the solid reading of the number.

Hope Noton continues her amusing studies in French history, this time writing about Madame de Montespan, her sisters, and her daughters. "A Son of Spain," the chronicle of a famous horse, Mr. Quincy's bright paper on "Cranks as Social Motors," and "Mr. Brisbane's Journal," the diary of a South Carolinian, written about 1801, are among the other more notable papers. Mrs. Deland's and Miss Fanny Murfree's serials, a consideration of American and German Schools, and reviews of the "Tragic Muse" and other volumes, complete the number. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston.

The leading feature of the forthcoming September issue of the New England Magazine is an article by W. Blackburn Harle, dealing with the literary legends of Canada. The writer says: "It is an indisputable fact that we are on the eve of a great national crisis in Canada, and an intellectual revolution, which will mark an epoch in our history, is already at hand." He gives a bright, comprehensive outline of the work of more than a score of the leading men of letters, each sketch being accompanied by a fine portrait engraving. Among this number are: Professor Goldwin Smith, Sir Daniel Wilson, Archibald Lampman, William Wilfred Campbell, Miss Agnes Maule Machar, G. Mercer Adam, Miss Ethelwyn Wetherald, Miss Sara Jeannette Duncan, Dr. J. G. Burin, William Dow Lighthall, Dr. George Stewart, Jr., Dr. W. George Beers, Charles Mair, Principal Grant, of Queen's University, J. Hunter Duvar, Gerald E. Hart, Nicholas Flood Davin, James Macdonald Ouley, J. M. L. Moine, Professor Charles G. D. Roberts, Grant Allen, Sir William Dawson. In addition to this number poems by Campbell and Lampman, and an article on French-Canadian literature by George Stewart, Jr.

Good and Cheap Books. The eager reader who is always prowling around bookstores for bargains will find plenty to entertain him at present at Alfred Morrissey's, where a large number of illustrated books are being offered at unheard of prices. Among them are Dante's Inferno, illustrated by Dore; Zwargart and Paradise, Bible Scenes, Masterpieces of Dore, Bible Gallery, Fontaine's Fables and Paradise Lost. These books are handsomely bound and contain many full page illustrations. The text is large and clear. Taken all in all the books are remarkably good and cheap at $1.50.

An Equitable Settlement. It is understood that Mr. C. W. Weldon, who was called upon to arbitrate between the Firemen Relief Association and Mr. John Kerr has given his decision, and that half of Dr. Barker's fee is paid by each party.

BRIGHT TALK FOR GIRLS.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING, FASHIONS INCLUDED. The Rage for Blue to Return Again—Can a Woman be Humorous—If She Laughs She Risks Her Beauty—About an All Important Topic.

Dame Fashion seems to have a way of progressing in circles, if you only have patience to wait. Thus, a few years ago all those to whom blue was becoming, were on a pinnacle of happiness. Everything was blue; the nutbrown maid with eyes like sloes—I wonder what sloes are?—wore blue of a shade so delicate that her skin looked like a hazel nut by contrast.

The red haired daisies wore blue, generally of a brighter and more pronounced shade, which threw her fiery chevelure into high relief, and absolutely swore at it. She was under the impression that it was the only color she could wear safely, and so she clung to it with the desperate grasp of a shipwrecked mariner clinging to a hen coop, until, whenever you saw a scrap of particularly vivid blue in the landscape, you instinctively sought for a crimson head in the near vicinity.

The fair haired, blue-eyed maiden wore blue, and looked like one of Murillo's angels, and perhaps she didn't know it, either; oh, dear, no! Then suddenly all was changed, blue went out with the alacrity of a small boy leaving the school house, and red was the color of the day. Young and old, fair and dark, arrayed themselves in garments of blazing red. Through summer heat and winter cold, everything was red, as though fashion had put on rosy spectacles and saw everything through them.

Once more the wheel has turned and blue is to be the color this winter. Of course navy, cadet and electric blue have always held their own, but those who know, say that there will be tones of blue in everything during the coming season.

The old Marie Louise, and a lovely color it is, too, by the way, will be the lightest shades seen. Blueish grey will be one of the popular shades; blueish green, blueish blue—I have not yet heard of a blueish red, but we may see it yet before the winter comes. I have it on the best possible authority that blue will be the popular color for eyes this winter; thus does fashion bind us with her silken chains, and relegate the brown eyed sirens to the rear ranks.

Let me say a word here to the girls who have spent the summer at the seaside or in the country, and have come home healthy, happy and brown, alas too brown to look well in a pale tinted evening dress.

Here is a capital lotion for whitening those tanned cheeks and throats which possess the twofold advantage of being perfectly harmless, as well as cheap and home made.

To one ounce of lemon juice add one fourth of a drachm of powdered borax, and half a drachm of sugar. Shake well and keep in a tightly corked bottle. By the way, a teaspoonful is a drachm, but I really forget the measure for an ounce, rub the lotion on the face at night. Another excellent thing for the skin is vaseline cold cream, sold by all druggists. I haven't the slightest idea what secret those tiny white porcelain pots contain, but whatever it is it certainly does wonders in the way of keeping the complexion pure and the skin soft and peachy. Rubbed well into a smarting sun-burned face at night, it will transform the same into all its old smoothness by morning.

If you want to be beautiful forever, girls, don't laugh, I beg. Smile as much as you want to, always provided it is not too mirthful and broad a smile, but avoid laughter as you would a pestilence. It may show the dimples if you are so fortunate as to have any, but it induces wrinkles, horrid little wrinkles around the eyes. Those who know say we have no sense of humor and it is a certain fact, I which I have noticed with bitter humiliation of spirit. That you may travel from one end of the country to the other by train, without ever seeing a woman buy a comic paper. Why the newboy never offers you one. He simply passes you by, and when you make a clutch at his vanishing form, and demand Texas Siftings or Judge he gives me a startled glance to make sure I am not a man in disguise.

If this lack of the sense of humor in our sex were as universal as it is supposed to be there would be no need for my warning, we should never have a wrinkle in the world, but I am happy to say that many of the dear girls I know have plenty of laughing wrinkles around their bright eyes, and to my mind they are far from being a blemish and only make the dimples all the more noticeable.

But to return to clothes: Wear your old blouse by all means, girls, whenever you like. Is it of silk or flannel; if you think so loose and neglect a garment suitable for evening wear. Be guided by your own taste, but do not, I implore you, wear a stiff bodiced, starched shirt-front around without some semblance of a coat over it, because when you do you always make me think of a man walking around town in his shirt sleeves. Remember that except for a less degree of bagginess around the waist, the shirt you wear is just like your waist-ers, and all you need to make the resemblance complete is a pair of suspenders draped over your dear little shoulders.

THE VACUUM. "Why are you drinking this black coffee?" "Because I have the headache." "The headache? Why don't you do as those do who have the toothache? Why don't you get it filled?"—Ez.

SHE IS ALL RIGHT NOW. Effie—What possessed Nellie to marry such a fearful looking bear as that? He would scare an Indian. Maud—It was his looks that decided her. She has always been so afraid of burglars.—Ez.

HOULTON, ME.

Something rather novel in the way of entertainment occurred on Wednesday evening—A "Salmagundi party," given by Mrs. Waldo G. Brown. As the name indicates, the amusements were of a mixed character, and the party a very pleasant one.

On Monday evening Mrs. Hume entertained her friends with drive whist, followed by music and refreshments. Mrs. Waldo G. Brown and Mrs. W. C. Donnell won the ladies' prizes. Mr. Harry M. Briggs and Mr. E. J. Hayward the gentlemen's.

The summer carnival at Woodstock on Tuesday attracted a great many of our townpeople. A driving party, gotten up by Mrs. Harrison and Miss Madigan, enjoyed a lunch near the river, and was most hospitably entertained by Miss Winslow during the afternoon and evening. The beautiful scenery along the river, combined with the beauty of the night, will not soon be forgotten.

The general hospitality and courtesy of the Woodstock people contribute largely to the success of their entertainments. Hon. Lewis Powers, of Brooklyn, Mass., is spending a few days in town.

POEMS WRITTEN FOR "PROGRESS." "Newman." He sleeps beneath the quiet churchyard's breast, Unmolested by the bell or "quarry" strife, Through Jesus Christ, may we be united, Blest in the blood, from His most precious side. Cleaned in the blood, from His most precious side. "In the calm light of everlasting life." No more shall doubt assail the "childlike faith" Nor fears molest along life's "rugged path." The flickering light, the dim, uncertain way, Shall be made bright, through Christ the only star, The soul that did for living water thirst, And longed for light, that leads to perfect love, Shall join the throng of those redeemed through Christ.

With garments white, in brilliant courts above. O God, the strength of all who trust in Thee, Remove'd by those, who in Thy love confide, Through Jesus Christ, may we be united, Blest in the blood, from His most precious side.

CONSIDER SETH'S IDEA. I wish I was an editor 'till nothin' tall to do, Jes' set down on a three-leg cheer, an' smoke, an' spit, an' cheer, An' scribble down sun rittin' stuff, an' squam round on my cheer, An' draw five thousand' dukits from my boss most ev'ry year!

Jes' lay an' stretch myself in bed till after ten o'clock, A-dreamin' of the nashun's per', or drowsy buzzin' bees, The gov'ment's funny doin's, or the scented holly-hawk, An' get down to the offis' jes' as soon as I—blame ' please!

An' jaw the boys a hour or so an' keep 'em on the hop, An' then go out an' hang round sun chap's tobacco shop, Er-stroud 'till my bright silk hat a-gazin' at the girls, An' tryin' fer to keep that red mustash o' mine in curls.

The farm's all right an' thrivin' well, the boys has no complainin', An' mother? Well, you see, she's gone. She's 'spects' over to St. John, she's a-goin' on go' pain, Jes' where the ole sun's dyin' beam's spreadin' on go' pain, Well, 'p'raps they's rally nothin' fer to be complainin' on.

But 'pears to me, l'gosh, to be a blame' sight better to Jes' set down on a three-leg cheer, an' smoke, an' spit, an' cheer, An' scribble down sun rittin' stuff, an' squam round on my cheer, An' draw five thousand' dukits from my boss most ev'ry year!

A recent sad event in newspaper circles was the death of Mrs. Elder, widow of the late Hon. William Elder, so well known in the newspaper and political life of this country. Since his sudden death the Telegraph has been published by the estate, with Mr. John W. Gilmer, Mrs. Elder's son, as manager. However removed Mrs. Elder was from direct business connection with the paper, her influence was a known power at all times in the establishment. It was always for good. If she had had direct supervision of the paper's contents much that is worst in daily life and ever passing under the guise of news would never have found its way into print. The majority of the readers of today are women, and the influence of such a woman as Mrs. Elder over a daily newspaper is of incalculable benefit. The sympathy of the fraternity will be extended to her family, who have not only lost a fond mother but an invaluable counselor.

W. D. Taunton, of the Vindicator, was in town for the Grand Lodge meeting and a few days' vacation. Mr. and Mrs. Jos. R. McCready, of Boston, are spending their vacation in the provinces. Mr. McCready is editor of the American Protestant, which is the influential organ of American Organizers. The annual meeting and fun of the Maritime Journalists began Wednesday. Now, let the brethren arrange a scale of advertising prices—based on circulation, if you will—and stick to it.— Windsor Tribune.

As there's the rub—the sticking to rates. It is very easy to agree upon a scale of rates in the association, but will all of the members be just as certain when the next "other" comes along. We would give a good deal to see a hard and fast uniform rate based upon actual circulation, but the advertising agent seems to have too strong a grip to be shaken off so easily.

SUNDAY AROUND TOWN.

HOW THE BOYS AND GIRLS AMUSE THEMSELVES.

A Lack of Excitement—Waiting for the Boat and Gazing at Each Other—Wicked Small Boys who Play Ball and Swim on the Sabbath.

Sunday is usually spoken of as a day of rest. If the day is fine the rest taken by the average St. John man, and woman too, is a walk of from two to four miles, and often very much longer.

The street cars gave their patrons an opportunity for a little variation, in making them change cars on Mill street and then again at the transfer office.

Then the interurban arrangement of Mr. Shaw's elephant on Mill street was out of order, as it is quite frequently, and had to be dug up and fenced in an island, as it were, in a sea of mud, reached by a short plank and a few small stones.

Excitement of any kind is welcomed by the hundreds who stroll around town on a Sunday afternoon when the weather looks threatening. Reed's Point wharf proved the centre of attraction last Sunday.

SHEDDIA.

[Progress is for sale in Shediac at A. Stone's store.]

Last week a goodly number of picnics were on the bill of fare, but rain necessitated the postponement of the greater part of them.

Some more of our summer visitors are leaving us, and I hope carrying with them some kind remembrance of Shediac.

Mr. Fred. Hamilton and Mrs. Hamilton and child have been reuniting for three or four days. They were guests of the Walden House.

Mr. C. H. Cannon leaves today for Stillwater, and Mr. W. R. Wright, of Moncton, who has been visiting Master Harry Sprague, returned home on Monday.

Miss Ina Rowe, of Moncton, has been visiting her friends in Shediac. She is expected to return on Monday.

Mr. W. C. Miller, of Halifax, is visiting Mrs. Henry B. Allison. Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Ester, of Moncton, were in town on Wednesday.

Mr. J. K. Inch and Mr. C. S. Harrison went to St. John on Thursday. Miss Smith of Butochow, is visiting her sister, Miss Fannie Bliss and her family.

WHO IS YOUR FAVORITE!

Among the Players in the St. Johns and Shamrock Ball Clubs.

To explain the details of the vote: every ballot must be cut from PROGRESS, and the name of the voter's favorite player written upon it plainly. The vote can then be folded and deposited in one of the ballot boxes placed in the following centres throughout the city. The papers can be bought from any newsdealer, but as it is not possible to put a ballot box in every place where there are PROGRESS sold, the following stores have been selected.

BALLOT.—Write the Name on the line below.

MORTON HARRISON, King Street; D. J. JENNINGS, Union Street; THOS. CROCKETT, Cor. Sydney and Princess Streets; T. O'BRIEN & CO., King Street; W. G. BROWN, Indian Town; GEO. W. HOBBEN, Main Street; JAMES CRAWFORD, Main Street; CHAS. K. SHORT, Jeffery's Hill; R. W. MCCARTY, Haymarket Square; J. & A. MCMILLAN'S, Prince Wm. Street.

Secretary Clarence Ferguson, of the A. A. club; Secretary D. J. Jennings, of the Shamrocks; and Mr. H. V. Moran, of the advertising department of PROGRESS, will have charge of the ballot boxes, and will see that every man who gets a vote is credited with it in proper form. They will examine the ballot boxes, lock them and take care that they are not opened except on Thursday evening of each week, when the ballots will be counted and the result announced in PROGRESS, Saturday.

No person connected with PROGRESS office can cast a vote for any player. That this rule may be observed rigidly, there will be no ballot box in PROGRESS office. Where there are two men of the same name, as in the case of James Sullivan and Joseph Sullivan, the Christian as well as the surname of the player must be written. The players voted for must be the playing nines which include one spare man for each club.

Any ballots sent from outside of St. John can be addressed to PROGRESS, and will be handed over to the vote tellers, Messrs. Ferguson, Jennings, and Moran. These are the main rules that will govern the contest. The publisher of PROGRESS agrees to give fifty dollars to the ball player who gets the greatest number of votes. If he does not want the money he can select any article worth fifty dollars, and it will be given him.

SPORTS OF THE SEASON.
The meeting of the friends of the St. Johns Tuesday evening will have an important bearing upon the future of baseball in this city. The determination to have good, decent and square games for the remainder of this season, even at some possible financial risk to the club, meets with the warm approval of all the friends of the nine. The club will therefore go on, in the same way, playing what games can be arranged with good clubs without coming in contact with their local opponents.

There is a good deal of keen regret over the unfortunate occurrence, even among those who have nothing whatever to gain or lose from the continuance of the series. I know a number of persons who had not patronized any ball game in their lives until that day, and you can be sure that they will never go to another. First impressions have a bad effect sometimes. They were as much disgusted as some visiting strangers were surprised—they had seen warm games, but never such a scene as took place on the Shamrock grounds that day.

There does not seem to be any conclusion to come to but that the umpiring was away off, and that is the mildest possible way to express it. Manager Keeffe says the St. Johns objected to Pickering as an umpire. The comparison could not have been better. They objected to Pickering and they objected to Connolly, and the only question in their minds appears to be how much worse is one than the other?

The retirement of the St. Johns from the league leaves the pennant battle between the Shamrocks and the Monctons. The latter, I understand, at this stage of the week are inclined to play out the series, provided the games with the St. Johns and Frederictons are thrown out. This would leave the Shamrocks with five games won to four lost. Manager Keeffe declares such an idea absurd now, though I heard him express himself differently when it appeared that the Frederictons and Moncton were likely to drop out. However, the league will settle the question one way or the other some time, perhaps.

There appears to be a growing feeling against the engagement of so many professional next season. Many in the St. Johns will welcome the return of amateur ball, with, perhaps, a good coacher. It all depends upon the people. If they will be satisfied with amateur ball why let them have it, but if they will not patronize it then it will be professional ball or no ball at all.

The Shamrocks, without Capt. Donovan, are a different team than with him. The Socials found this out in the first game and gave them a drubbing with the assistance of Fitcher Burns, of Moncton. From all accounts the Socials must have a lively team. I would like to see them in St. John if the old score does not rattle too much for the St. Johns to play them.

There has been nothing eventful in sport this week—the excitement of last week will
