MOUNTED CANADIANS

Six Hundred Will be Recruited for Imperial Service.

Preliminary Preparations for Filling a Force for Service Already Begun.

OTTAWA, Nov. 21. — It seems to be taken for granted by the government that the war office will go ahead this time with Canada's offer to recruit and officer a Canadian mounted regiment, for all the branches of the militia department interested in fitting troops for service are this morning hard at work making the necessary arrangements to get the recruiting done and the regiment armed, clothed and sent off in good shape and quick time. Up to the hour of writing, no further cables have been received from the war office, and no definite arrangements are expected before Saturday.

The Colonial Secretary's recent despatch simply asked whether the offer of last spring to raise a Canadian mounted force of 600 men was still open, and it is understood the Dominion government has replied in the affirmative. There seems no reason to doubt that if Canada's offer is accepted immediately, six hundred men can be recruited, provided with outfits and equipment, and ready to start in about a month from now. These men would not all be recruited in the west, but a proportion would be taken from each province, according to population, preference being given to those who have already served in South Africa and are physically and otherwise qualified to take the field.

Just what the British authorities intend doing, is not known by the department or the government any more than by the public. It will take a few days to get a reply from Mr. Chamberlain.

Major Merritt, of Toronto, was in the city to-day. He had an interview with the Premier, and there is no doubt that he is anxious to command a mounted corps, if it should go to South Africa. There are those who think that Major Merritt, being the first to offer for this kind of service, deserves some consideration.

Major Hughes made a similar offer and, but for his being thrown down by General Hutton, would have been second in command of the first contingent.

DISASTER

Over Takes a Maple City Youth White Visiting in Blenheim.

A good story is going the rounds at the expense of a well known Stanley avenue young man who is in the habit of making frequent visits to Blenheim. Not long since he happened to be on one of these visits when a very severe rain storm came on, and the landlord, who, by the way, had taken quite kindly to the young man, invited him to remain over night. Now our friend is rather a bashful young fellow, but he finally decided that it would perhaps be advisable, so accordingly accepted the very kind invitation. All went well until the next morning at the breakfast table, when the young man suddenly noticed in a glass just opposite to where he sat, that in his anxiety to be prompt he had overlooked the combing of his hair. This somewhat upset the would-be son-in-law, and he was quite apparently nervous. He was very much embarrassed and still more so when he noticed what he thought to be his pocket handkerchief, projecting beneath the lip of his pocket. Quite unnoticed, he replaced it, and all went well until the meal was finished and the family arose from the table, when it was found that the young aspirant had in his excitement quite stored away a corner of the table cloth instead of his handkerchief. There was a smash of breaking glassware, a pile of eatables on the floor, and a sheepish-looking young fellow who was so bewildered that he was struck dumb for a moment. Then he attempted an apology, which only made things worse.

A friend of his told this morning that you couldn't get him any further than Charing Cross, even in an ice wagon, since that memorable occasion.

OPERA HOUSE BURNED.

Detroit, Nov. 21.—Fire, originating, it is thought, from a gas jet, in the engine room of the basement, damaged the Whitney opera house building on Griswold street, to the extent of about $12,000, occurred at about 11 o'clock this forenoon. The chief damage was done by smoke and water, while the flames were by the fireman's good work confined for the most part to the basement and floor of the dress circle. The building and scenery are owned by Stephen A. Baldwin.

CANADA'S FUTURE

Reciprocity Convention States American Factories Will Have to Close if Separated From Canadian Market.

Washington, Nov. 20.—The national reciprocity convention, which began here yesterday, finished its work to-night and adjourned sine die. Several important resolutions embodying the views of the convention on reciprocity and other matters were adopted. They provide as follows:

"Resolved: That this convention recommends to congress the maintenance of the principle of protection for the home market, and to open up by reciprocity opportunities for increased foreign trade by special modifications of tariff, in special cases, but only when it can be done without injury to any of our home interests of manufacturing, commerce.

"That in order to ascertain the influence of any proposed treaty on our home interests this convention recommends to congress the establishment of a reciprocity commission, which shall be charged with the duty of investigating the condition of any industry and reporting the same to the executive and to congress for guidance in negotiating reciprocal trade agreements.

"This convention recommends to and requests of congress that a new department, to be called 'the department of commerce and industries,' the head of which shall be a member of the president's cabinet.

"That a reciprocity commission be created as a bureau of this new department.

A BOSTON VIEW.

The views of the Boston chamber of commerce on the subject of reciprocity with Canada were presented in a paper by George H. Coppins. There was, he said, from the conclusion that Canada should be included in any general scheme for reciprocal treaties, no logical escape. Our interests were more nearly touched by the future of that country than by the future of the South American states. Canadians last year had bought from us at the unparalleled rate of $20 per capita, if an impassable trade barrier was raised between the two countries Canada could face the changed conditions with comparative ease, for her foreign markets are now established elsewhere, but with us a stoppage of trade would mean the closing down for want of orders of thousands of American factories and workshops. We should cultivate such a good customer and not incur his hostility.

Hon. John Charlton, a member of the Canadian parliament, spoke earnestly in favor of some reasonable concessions in trade relations to meet the liberal treatment accorded the United States by Canada. Canada, he said, wanted reciprocity and free trade in the natural products of both countries. If the United States wanted to retain the trade with Canada it now holds she must give Canada some adequate and fair concessions for the privilege she now enjoys. Canada could not permit existing conditions to continue.

DOWSELY FACTORY

Will Soon be in Operation and Will Employ About 50 Men.

"We are progressing fairly well," said F. Dowsley, when queried by a Planet scribe. "We are being delayed at present by the non-arrival of some of the very important machinery coming from Cleveland.

"We will employ about 50 men the first year, and of course more will be added as the business increases. We have a large number of orders ahead from Ontario and Quebec and will turn out from seventy-five to one hundred sets a day. Ten cars of steel have arrived, and the switch is now all completed. The Company intend making gears when in good working order."

FRIDAY, NOV. 22.

EX-WARDEN JOHN DAVIDSON.

The Liberal-Conservatives of East Kent are to be congratulated on their choice of ex-Warden John Davidson as their standard-bearer at the coming Provincial elections. A stronger man could not have been selected. His strength lies not alone in his winning and magnetic personality, in his business ability nor in his intellectual power, but in all these combined. Both in his private and public life he has made friends—friends who will stay with him in the coming campaign; friends such as only a great man can have.

As County Councillor, Warden, and President of the Liberal-Conservative Association of East Kent, Mr. Davidson has been long in the public eye, and the looks directed towards him have always been those of approval. His canny, sound judgment has served him well, and he has ever been on the side of right and justice.

Again, the Liberal-Conservatives of East Kent must be congratulated on their harmonious choice of such a strong candidate as ex-Warden Davidson. But it must not be forgotten that one man alone, no matter how great, cannot redeem the riding of East Kent, and that each and every one must do whatever their hands find to do. Let the watchword be "To the work. To the work!" and at the closing of the polls on election day all will receive their reward in the return of John Davidson as member of the Provincial Legislature and the redemption of the riding.

West Kent Liberal-Conservatives shake hands across the imaginary line that divides the two ridings and express their approval.

DEER VS. TIGER HUNTING.

Depend ever upon the American to find something new. In our younger days a man was not recognized as having graduated until he had killed his tiger on foot.

We do not go tiger hunting to-day, but the venturesome have discovered a sport far more perilous, a branch of the chase which makes the jungle excursions of old look tame by comparison. The new peril is deer hunting. The mortality among those following the deer exceeds that in any other branch of amusement thus far recorded.

Do you doubt it? There is no room for doubt. Since the beginning of the open season for deer in Wisconsin, a few days ago, eight hunters have been killed and fifteen wounded, while in Maine five have been killed and twelve wounded.

The pursuit has all the charm of novelty and surprise. Men armed with rifles using smokeless powder, and having an effective range of a mile or more, through the woods. Many wear hunting coats the color of which resembles that of the deer.

Not infrequently it happens that some careless man kills a deer, which is lamentable because the deer grow fewer. But men are very numerous. The forest paths are choked with them. There is a continual tingle of excitement about the sport which stamps it as far superior to tiger hunting. For, while the tiger struck down a few beaters occasionally, and sometimes ran off with one in his jaws, there never was in the jungle the chance of being shot from any or all points of the compass.

RECIPROCITY THAT WILL NOT DO.

Mail-Emper.

In Washington and throughout the United States the question of reciprocity is now under discussion. The subject has been forced to the front by the circumstances that our neighbors have about reached the limit of their export trade, and by the further fact that they want new customers. McKinley, in his Buffalo speech, gave the idea a decided boom. He said reciprocity would be a good thing "if reciprocity" he added, "some of our tariffs are no longer needed for revenue, or to encourage and protect our industries at home, why should they not be employed to extend and promote our markets abroad?"

This view has been enlarged upon by many public men. One of these is Senator Hoar, who says the kind of reciprocity that is needed "is that which gives us foreign markets and admits to this country those articles of commerce which we cannot produce." Another gentleman, Senator Burrows, of Michigan, observes: "As to reciprocity in general, what the Republican party believes in is reciprocity on the lines of the national platform, which declared in favor of opening our markets on favorable terms for what we do not ourselves produce, in return for free foreign markets." Apparently the United States principle of reciprocity is a scheme under which the Republic shall admit free, or at reduced duties, articles it cannot produce in return for freedom or reduced duties in another country for articles the Republic can produce, no matter whether the other country can produce them or not. This is a jug-handled idea, and it is very certain that the people of Canada will not consent to it. But while one body of thought favors this one-sided reciprocity, another is opposed to any reciprocity at all with Canada under present circumstances. Senator Gallinger puts the case thus: "We sell three times as much to Canada as the Dominion sells to us. Why should we make concessions? In my opinion there will be no reciprocity with Canada."

Mr. Gallinger has evidently been studying the situation as exposed by Mr. Charlton in his recent speeches. Speaking in New York not long since, Mr. Charlton pointed out that owing to the fact that the American duties are twice as high as ours, we bought last year $70,988,000 more products from the United States than that country bought from us during the same period. Of agricultural products we sold $78,000,000 worth to Britain, but only $8,864,000 worth to the United States, and we bought of manufactured articles and of farm products some $120,000,000 worth from our neighbors. The people next door have the best end of the bargain. They have our market as a result of our low duties and of our free importations. At the same time they keep us out of their market by their exceedingly high duties. Senator Gallinger may then well be satisfied. It is a case of reciprocity—with Canada giving everything and securing nothing in return. This situation is largely the result of the Fielding tariff. It is but fair to Mr. Charlton to say that he warned the Government when the tariff was going through that it was so arranging matters as to render the securing of any sort of terms with the United States impossible.

Speaking of the proposal to place Indian corn on the free list he said: "In giving to the Americans free corn we are giving them something that is in their estimation an important concession, and we are giving them that concession without a quid pro quo. We ought not to give to those people single concession which they might deem of value without receiving something in return." He then pointed out that with corn, on the dutiable list we could get reduced duties on farm products for our own farmers; while with that product on the free list we would be powerless. Matters have turned out exactly as Mr. Charlton predicted. The Fielding tariff is highly satisfactory to the Americans, and they see no reason why they should reduce their wall against us in the slightest degree. It is a trifle curious that the politicians who came to office bent upon securing better markets in the States, should have furnished the tariff that prevents this result. But that has nothing to do with the policy as to the failure.

What we have to consider is the situation as we find it. As the case stands the Americans have our market and we have little or no market with them. They refuse to deal more liberally with us on the ground that our own folly has placed them in a position with which they are well satisfied. Our policy ought to be to give the Americans reciprocity in tariffs and to move towards closer trade relations within the Empire. Self-defence and a British arrangement, including a preference on Canadian products, will do infinitely more for Canada than reciprocity with the United States can ever accomplish.

Emperor William will not allow any of his army officers to talk or write for publication. A similar restriction would have saved General Buller much recent annoyance.

Essex is now in revolt against the Ross Government because, while pretending to stop the exportation of natural gas, the Ministers allow the exportation to go on. In this case the War Horse cannot plead that Mr. Carscallen is his councillor, his legislator and his guide.

Theatrical

A laughing treat is in store for Chatham audiences on Monday, Nov. 25th, when Mr. R. W. Reed, who brings his celebrated London and New York success to the Grand Opera House.

It is sometimes a wonderful convenience to own a relative who is like one that even one's parents cannot tell which is which. At least Mr. Alfred Partridge found it so when flying from a writserver and arriving in a hurry and penniless in his cousin's inn, where his cousin Arthur—his double—is staying and courting the inn-keeper's daughter. He eats Arthur's breakfast, kisses Arthur's girl, gets dunned by Arthur's rustic rick and is carried off to town by Arthur's parents, who fondly believe they are saving their son from a designing country girl. Arrived in town Alfred has to interview his cousin's relatives, whom Arthur is supposed to be engaged to. By the terms of her father's will she must marry a Wallerton Partridge or lose her fortune. The situation is somewhat difficult for Alfred, who is expected to make love to a girl whose name he does not even know, much less the fact that the girl believes him to be her fiancé. Gradually, however, the situation dawned upon him, and a very desirable situation, that of the heiress's future husband, would seem to him to be. Just, however, as he is in the act of signing his cousin's name to the marriage settlement, a letter arrives from the real Arthur announcing his final determination to wed none but the inn-keeper's daughter. The impostor takes flight, with the heiress, the writ-server, and Arthur's parents close on his heels, at the country inn, where his unsuspected presence keeps everybody in a whirl of bewilderment to the very fall of the curtain.

The annual meeting of the William St. Baptist church was held Wednesday night when a large gathering of the members assembled to consider the reports of the last year's work. The membership roll showed an increase of 86, of which number 51 had been baptized during the past three years $2,500 above the regular expenses of the church had been raised and that this had all come as ordinary offerings from the people. On the church mortgage $1,000 had been paid off, and all floating debt. A balance still remains in the treasury of $256. The officers of the church remain the same with the exception that David Moore is appointed church clerk in the place of W. G. Merritt. A strong committee composed of the church trustees, was appointed to look into church improvements. The congregation intend to spend $1,000 in this work.

AN UNCANNY IMPULSE.

The Strange Desire Many Persons Feel to Court Death.

Much has been written concerning the almost uncontrollable impulse to jump off which many persons experience when standing at a high place. Akin to this impulse is that which seems absolutely to force people to touch a dangerous object. In many cigar stores there are little automatic cutters provided for taking the tip off the cigar by simply pressing the end into a small round opening about the size of the end of one's finger. It is surprising how many men will poke their fingers deliberately into these cutters, although they are perfectly aware that they will have a piece of the flesh nipped off. Any cigar man who has one of these cutters on his case will tell you stories of such people that will surprise you. This seems to be a strong tendency in the human race to "monkey with the buzz-saw."

A phase of this subconscious idiosyncrasy—as it might be called for want of a better name—has been developed by the use of electricity as a mechanical force. Many people have a desire which they hardly can control to touch electric machinery or wires, even when they know that the wires are charged with a deadly current and that to touch the machine means instant death.

An electrical engineer in speaking of this strange impulse says: "I have known instances where electricians actually had to turn and run from a machine to prevent giving way to this peculiar influence. Not long ago a man who was employed to sit and watch a steam boiler at one of the London dynamo shops fell a victim to the influence. As he felt the desire growing stronger he moved his chair back from the boiler. Instead of getting used to the desire, he became more afraid of it. Each day the desire to walk up and touch one of those switchboards grew stronger. At the end of two weeks the young man resigned his place. He could not stand the strain any longer. He quired all his will power to restrain him while on duty, and at night his nervous system was so upset that he could not sleep. He realized that to touch any one of the switches before him meant instant death, and his only safety lay in getting away from the board altogether.

"I have no doubt that many deaths from electric shock are brought about in this way. In an idle moment a person will catch sight of a switch, a wire or some other heavily charged bit of apparatus, and a strange desire to touch it will come over him. In a moment of weakness he gives way to it and the result is instant death. We frequently read of accidental deaths from electric shock when there is no apparent reason why the victim should have touched a live wire. I believe that such cases are attributable directly to this influence."

Mr. Whitney Sounds Clarion of Victory

The Coming Premier Opens His Campaign With Visit to Kent County

HOLDS A MAGNIFICENT MEETING AT RIDGETOWN

Other Prominent Political Gentlemen Present and Deliver Eloquent Addresses.

JOHN DAVIDSON GIVEN EAST KENT NOMINATION.

Grand Gathering of Enthusiastic Liberal-Conservatives--Effort to Win East Kent--Mr. Whitney's Splendid Address--Unanimity of the Convention.

Leader Sends Special Message to the People of Kent.

Hon. J. P. Whitney.

Thursday, November 21st, 1901, can be put down in scarlet ink as an epoch in the Liberal-Conservative annals of East Kent. It witnessed the largest and most enthusiastic convention in the history of the riding and the initial visit of the able and eloquent leader, J. P. Whitney, to the constituency.

Ridgetown was the scene of the gathering and the good old town did the grand. Everything was eminently successful. From the dawn of a delightful late Indian summer day, which signaled the commencement of the arduous work of the reception and decorating committees, until the last rousing cheers of the evening meeting upon adjournment at midnight, all was life, activity and enthusiasm. And if the feeling of the constituency can in any way be gauged by Ridgetown's magnificent assembly and vigorous vitality East Kent Conservatives will be heard from in the winning columns of the general election results.

The afternoon meeting with its convention duties was both impressive and encouraging. The gathering of delegates was the largest and most representative since the days of Confederation. There were the old men—the stalwarts of the party—with bronzed faces and hoary heads; there were the men of middle age—campaigners of no mean calibre—with bright, earnest countenances and active personality; there were the young men—the promise of the Province and the party—with eager and expectant look and evidences of energetic enthusiasm. They were all there with one aim, one purpose and one ambition. It was indeed an impressive sight—one that will be remembered.

The large opera house was filled when ex-Warden John Davidson, President of the East Kent Liberal-Conservative Association took his place upon the platform and called the gathering to order.

"I cannot tell you how pleased I am to see such a large, representative and enthusiastic gathering," he declared. "An early convention of this character augurs well. It is six years since a meeting was held in this district, but I see the men of East Kent are perhaps, more alive and earnest than ever before. We are here to choose a candidate—and we will do it first."

The following gentlemen were called to the platform amid much applause:—James Clancy, M. P.; F. G. Macdiarmid, M. P.; West Elgin; Mayor W. B. Graham, Ridgetown; A. B. Mason, Camden; J. S. Fraser, Conservative candidate for West Kent; J. W. Sharp, Dresden; A. Leverton, Zone; B. W. Willson, Ridgetown; Jno. Vester, Harwich; Henry Buller, Howard; J. Mayhew, Thamesville.

THE HALL

Magnificent Decorations Grace the Platform—The Band Present.

The convention opened at two o'clock, but long before the proceedings commenced the hall was well packed with interested and enthusiastic delegates who came with the purpose of entering heartily into the business of the hour and to help on to victory the man who was to be the choice of the convention. No one was disappointed and the results of the meeting were entirely satisfactory to everyone present. The sight which met the eye as one entered the hall was a most gorgeous one. The Conservatives of Ridgetown showed that they were wide-awake and up-to-date. The platform was most tastefully bedecked with union jacks, flowers and rugs. At the rear was a large union jack extending from side to side and from floor to ceiling. In front of this were two other large flags hanging from the sides, and in front of this again were two more flags tastefully draped on either side.

On the left side of the platform were arranged large photos of the King and the late Sir John A. Macdonald, while on the right were Sir selves in their work and are to be highly complimented.

DAVIDSON

Kent's Ex-Warden Chosen a Candidate of Convention on Close Vote.

After the credentials of all the delegates had been duly examined and credited the following names were submitted in nomination:—
J. W. Sharpe, Dresden.
P. H. Bowyer, Ridgetown.
John Vester, Harwich.
Neil Watson, Mull.

FINDLAY G. MACDIARMID, M. P. P.

The man who successfully coped with the monstrosities of the machine in West Elgin.

Ralph Meredith and Sir Chas. Tupper. A large engraving of the late beloved Queen was placed at the rear directly in front of the large flag.

In front of the table and facing the audience was a large, fancy rug, on which was woven that popular picture of a bull-dog standing on a union jack, illustrating the motto of the Conservatives during the coming campaign. "What we have we'll hold and what we haven't got we'll get."

At the top of the stage and directly in front was placed a large motto, "Whitney and Victory."

The credit of these decorations is due to messrs. W. E. Maxwell, of the Northway & Co., and E. Duke, of Craig's, both of the town of Ridgetown. They certainly outdid them-

John Davidson, Thamesville.
Arthur Leverton, Zone.
W. B. Graham, Ridgetown.
Francis Gifford, Camden.
B. W. Willson, Ridgetown.
Jas. B. Carscallen, Dresden.
T. P. Watson, Ridgetown.
Henry Buller, Ridgetown.
Dr. McRitchie, McKay's Corners.
W. R. Hickey, Bothwell.

This closed the list of names placed before the convention and the nominees were asked to the platform.

A letter was read from W. R. Hickey, stating that under no circumstances could he accept the nomination, but pledging himself to support the choice of the convention.—Applause.

Henry Buller said there was more enthusiasm exhibited in the Conservative party than he had witnessed for many a long day. He was sorry, he could not serve the convention, but he was prepared heartily to work for its choice. He believed this time East Kent would enroll itself in the ranks of Mr. Whitney.—Applause.

T. P. Watson also withdrew his name, but assured the delegates that there was lots of vim in him for their choice and had no doubt of victory.—Cheers.

J. B. Carscallen was not a candidate, but was prepared to do his utmost to secure the election of whoever was chosen.—Applause.

B. W. Willson withdrew his name but spoke many encouraging words. "We are out to win this time," he declared amid applause.

Frank Gifford declined the nomination but contributed a splendid and spirited speech, which called forth repeated cheers.

W. B. Graham said he was not a candidate but was out to help elect the winner.—Applause.

Arthur Leverton in withdrawing his name assured the gathering that he would be heart and soul with the man selected.—Cheers.

John Davidson said he knew Kent could be redeemed. He was present to abide by the decision of the delegates. He thought prospects never looked brighter. If chosen, he was ready to take off hat and coat and work on every sidewalk and concession.—Applause.

Neil Watson withdrew his name. He said it would have been a great pleasure to accept did circumstances permit it. He was sure success would crown the party efforts.—Applause.

John Vester also withdrew. He was prepared to heartily support the nomination.—Applause.

P. H. Bowyer congratulated the party on the splendid convention. It was the best he had known, and if it were true, as he had been told that the Conservative party in East Kent were dead, it provided the liveliest corpse he ever had seen. "We are going to win," declared Mr. Bowyer enthusiastically. Proceeding he paid high eulogy to the sterling personality of the late Robert Ferguson, and added, "Candidly, I have no great desire for this nomination. Personally I don't wish it, but if it is deemed that I can serve my friends and our party, if the nomination is given to me I will do the best I can. If I am not nominated I will heartily support whoever the choice may fall upon."—Applause.

J. W. Sharpe withdrew his name and pledged himself to do all in his power to secure the election of the nominee of the convention.—Cheers.

A ballot was then taken, the names of Messrs. Davidson and Bowyer being submitted. It resulted as follows:—
Davidson—70.
Bowyer—68.

Mr. Bowyer at once moved that the nomination be made unanimous. Mr. Buller, the mover of Mr. Bowyer's name, seconded the motion.

The motion was carried on a standing vote, amid three hearty cheers.

HE ACCEPTS

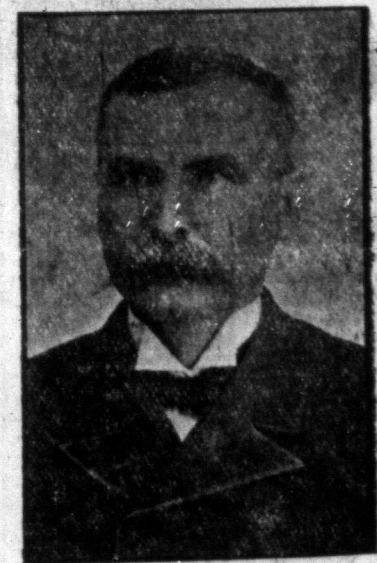

Mr. Davidson Takes the Nomination and Will do all he can to Win.

Mr. Davidson, the chosen candidate, upon arising to his feet was greeted with three long cheers.

He thanked his mover and seconded very kindly for bringing his name before the convention, and also the electors upon appointing him their chosen candidate to carry the banner of the Conservative party through the contest of East Kent.

"If you had not appointed me as your choice," said he, "I would not have been in the least disappointed, but I would have entered the fight earnestly and helped along to his election the man who might have been your choice. However, I am indeed happy to think that you have so much confidence in me and my work and I can assure you that I will do everything in my power to redeem the riding. I would ask you to give me your most hearty and undivided support in the greatest and if you do this I feel that we will be sure to win. I hope to be able to get through the riding soon and see you all personally, but all I would ask is your earnest co-operation. The strength of the men who have won the riding in the past is unlimited capital. This, however, they cannot have for the coming election. Ridgetown, when we will transact important business, and at that time I will be in a better position to address you."

The Vice-President of the Association, Major Graham, of Ridgetown, then took the chair. He complimented the convention on their choice and hoped that his election as candidate would eventually result in success for the party. He assured Mr. Davidson that he would have the undivided support of the party.

CHEERED CLANCY

Member For Bothwell Given Royal Reception—His Eloquent Address.

The chairman then called on James Clancy, M. P., for an address.

Mr. Clancy, who is evidently a favorite in Ridgetown, was greeted with round upon round of applause.

"I do not think," said Mr. Clancy, "that this convention is in a mood to listen to an address for a moment, but I am indeed impressed with the splendid meeting. It has rarely been the good fortune of any constituency to have such a representative and gentlemanly gathering as this one here today. I take it that you have not come here to go through a mere form but you have come here bent on doing important business and I may say that you have done it and done it well."

"To speak plainly I was nervous when I came to this convention—nervous, not nervous for the success of the riding, not for a moment, but when I saw the long list of gentlemen nominated, any one of which I feel sure could enter upon the campaign as the Conservative candidate and be successful, I was rather nervous to know which would be the fortunate gentleman. You have chosen one of the very best men in the party. Another good feature of the campaign is that the young men have fought honestly and well. East Kent is a riding which can be won by the Conservatives. What we need most is a united party and a clean policy and we have both. There is an element who are going in this time on the side of right and good government. They are not coming in alarming numbers but the change is sure. There was a time when East Kent took part in the party but I am sure to see the riding from being lost by default but that time has passed. The spirit of this fight is victory. No matter who is the candidate he is bound to meet with untold success."

"At a Liberal convention lately held here a resolution was passed which was literally a confession and an apology, literally begging the question as to how the Liberal could be clean and upright men. The resolution was moved by Jno. Couates, of Thamesville, and seconded by James Brown, that the Liberals of East Kent deplore the fact that frequent violations of the sanctity of the ballot box have been made by irresponsible persons under the pretense of aiding Liberal candidates to their election. Those same persons will be in the riding in the coming election. It is the duty of the officers of the Liberal association to put in reliable officials to act in a fair manner. Were these persons punished by being suspended from office and the most of them accepted. This is what I call a vulgar kind of hypocrisy. Do not be deceived. They have not retired and will continue to use these foul means. That same convention might just as well have said, Look out, we will do it again. Why were not these men prosecuted? Why, because they would have succeeded on the men who hired them to do the business and that is exactly what the Ross Government did not want—cheers. What did the Attorney-General do towards prosecuting the offenders? Nothing. Captain Sullivan will probably be needed again."

"West Huron is now giving the greatest condemnation to such offenders and the well-deserved punishment that can be imposed upon them. Instead of receiving such punishment Sullivan and his gang of workers got off free and were rewarded for their work by an office. If the Liberal party have to depend on their purity and justice during the next campaign they are doomed. Remember I am speaking of the Liberal leaders and not the individual members of the party for there are as many great and intelligent men in the Liberal party as there are among the Conservatives. We will have a very easy race if the Liberals depend upon their purity for their election. For ourselves, during this next campaign we will have a free people as far as the ballot is concerned."

"We have arrived for a secret ballot for over a quarter of a century. Before all the voting was done openly. And you can easily see what great influence might be brought to bear upon a man when his vote was an open one. We have a party which will give safeguard in the case of the ballot. The votes of the people should not be bought and sold as merchandise. The ballot is the instrument of the government and as such it ought to be the voice of the people."

"This is a most gratifying convention. The East Kent Conservatives have the greatest reason to be proud of the grand representation here today. In it we have a general expression of unity in the Conservative party of the constituency. Our main object is to win East Kent and we will do it. East and West Lambton, and East and West Kent and West Elgin are sure to run Conservative. You have not gone through an empty form here to-day. The value of electing a strong man must be backed by the people. You have each to carry a personal responsibility, but I am sure that you realize it. I join with you in hoping that you will enter the fight with a spirit which will not be tinged with a doubt as to the result and if you enter enthusiastically into the spirit of the occasion your success is assured."

Mr. Clancy took his seat amid rounds of applause.

MAN FOR KENT

John S. Fraser, Choice of West Riding, Makes a Vigorous and Telling Address.

Mr. Fraser, the Conservative candidate for West Kent, was the next speaker.

"I have come here," said he, amid applause, "to congratulate the gentleman and brother Scott who has won the Conservative nomination in East Kent. Everyone who is acquainted with his career in public life, as a warden and county councillor, may safely assure that he will serve the Constituency of East Kent in government as well as he served the county of Kent, as warden. This fact should be encouraged, well spread abroad. Mr.

J. J. FOYLE, K. C., M. P. P.
Mr. Whitney's Earnest and Able Lieutenant who will Shortly Visit Kent.

Clancy gives us a good example of what a Conservative candidate can do in East Kent. During every Dominion election he literally wins with hands down, and has turned a majority of 200 in his favor. The other Conservative candidates in Western Ontario are confident of success and well they may be. Why has this great change come over the people? The reason is very plain. Among the Conservatives and all of the struggling-minded Reformers there is a growing feeling against the present government. Why is the feeling so strong that the Conservatives will be elected? I will tell you. A few years ago the Reform leaders were well known men and were respected and honored by both parties alike. When we speak of McKenzie, Blake, Farlee and Fraser, we think of great men. When they were first elected to power the principles of these leaders was all that could possibly be desired from any party. Their government was straightforward and honest and progressive, and they became popular through their reform principles. In the virtue of this feeling the Liberal party became strong so long as these men were alive and remained in power. But when they passed away they left nothing. There were no men to step into their places. Ross and Gibson then stepped in and these men traded on the reputation of the Reform party and managed to keep in power. Later they have found that their power is slipping away from them. A few years ago they resorted to trickery and foul means in order to secure members for the house. Just suppose that before Mr. Macdormid was elected for the last time, that there had been a cabinet meeting and Blake and Mowatt could have seen there, what would have been Blake's attitude toward the schemes which were undoubtedly talked about and brought up at this meeting. In his indignation at this meeting, he would have kicked the man out of the party forever. What would McKenzie have said, "I'll have none of it." All of that, however has passed away and we see what we have left. A mere shell, nothing else. We have men now at the head of the Reform party in the Provincial house, men who are willing to trade with the name of Reform in order to hold their seats. Intelligent men, Reformers, come to me every day, voluntarily giving me their support. I have no doubt that Mr. Davidson, your able leader, will meet with the same experiences.—Applause.

BEWARE!

Mr. Macdormid Warns the Party to be Prepared for the Machine—Talks Practical Politics.

Finlay G. Macdormid, M. P. P., for West Elgin was introduced as the man who had successfully battled with the dark and desperate hordes of the machine and received round upon round of applause as he stepped to the front of the platform. Mr. Macdormid is an earnest, eloquent young farmer, who has worthily won his spurs in the political arena. His address was one of the finest of the convention.

"I am delighted to be here," he declared, "and delighted to see the enthusiasm you good men of East Kent show. True, this has been a Liberal riding since confederation. But let me say here, freely and gladly that the Liberals were very fortunate in having the services of such a really good man as Robert Ferguson. He was a man whom I admired personally very much. He was a man highly esteemed by both political parties. The Liberals had reason to be proud of the personality of their late honored candidate."

"But now we are starting out to win. We feel it, our opponents feel it, and the feeling will increase. Public opinion is gradually changing. All are realizing it, whether they be frank to admit it or not. The government is tottering to its fall.—Applause. Strong issues have a big influence in this matter, and so they should be brought to the front. I am convinced that the main reason for the government's speedy fall are the crimes they have permitted to be perpetrated in their name and interests and liberally condoned. No true patriot, Liberal or Conservative, no man of honor and rectitude can tolerate such methods and thus it is that the people are arising in their might, people of both parties, to vindicate the honor of the Province. You have a 'Now, gentlemen, we appeal to the electors with a strong policy, ably enunciated by our leader, Mr. Whitney. Mr. Ross talks about the development of New Ontario and falsely—a strong word, perhaps, but a proper one—charges the Conservative party with impeding it. Why is it titled New Ontario? Why new? Because the government has frittered away its energies from year to year without knowledge or consideration of this great and productive part, of our Province. If Mr. Meredith had been at the helm 20 years ago, with such able man as Mr. Clancy as his lieutenant, the Province would have been no 'New' Ontario to-day. The whole Province would have been developed in union along the line.—Applause."

"Now, gentlemen, just a few words of practical politics. You are not lacking in enthusiasm. You have a big task before you. Don't underestimate the strength of your opponents, but enter the fight to win. I remember in my first campaign Mr. Clancy kindly visited me in the hall to assist me. He asked what the Liberal majority was, and I told him 200. 'Macdormid,' he declared, 'that affords possibilities for a grand fight, and a grand victory. There is the swing-point in the air and in the fight and you will carry the riding.' Mr. Clancy's prophecy proved true and I would like to earnestly repeat his every word to you to-day. I fancy I am just what a prophet—any one of your friends. Mr. Clancy—Applause."

Now, gentlemen, the majority of deputy returning officers are honest, straightforward men. No honest, straightforward man objects to being elected by the people. You must be prepared to prevent any repetition of the crimes upon the ballot box. Scrutinizers should be in their places before the booths open, and stay till the statement is signed and in the past at night. Honest men will fill close scrutiny."

"I ask you all to do your utmost to issue a sweeping condemnation of the farce on responsible government at the present time. Get into the ranks of the government in conducting its bye-elections when the cabinet ministers with blaze of trumpets and sound of drums form an impetuous and unscrupulous frontal attack, while over the back fence and through the darkest alleys to the rear crawl the Sullivans, the Boles and the Prestons, to steal the votes they cannot buy. Gentlemen, when you are elected, you must be prepared to prevent any repetition of the crimes upon the ballot box. Scrutinizers should be in their places before the booths open, and stay till the statement is signed and in the past at night. Honest men will fill close scrutiny."

AT NIGHT

Magnificent Demonstration in the Opera House—Immense Crowd.

The evening meeting was huge success, in fact it was one of the largest gatherings that has ever been seen in Ridgetown. Everything passed off in a style which reflected unbounded success on the Conservatives of Ridgetown who had the meeting in charge and also to the town of Ridgetown. The Ridgetown band, which was engaged for the occasion, furnished excellent music, which was enjoyed by everyone. Long before the time of opening of the meeting, the hall was well filled and many were turned away unable to secure admission. Those who were fortunate enough to secure a place in the hall were given a rare treat.

WHAT WOMEN DID.

DREARY SPOTS MADE TO BLOSSOM AS THE ROSE.

How a Village Was Improved and Made Beautiful—Mud Holes and Weed Patches Tended Into Parks—The Men Said It Couldn't Be Done.

When women seriously take a hold of a project, it is pretty safe to assume that they will succeed. But it is a village improvement that they have never been known to fail when once they started in. A case in point is the transformation of Oxford, an old town in the interior of New York.

Three parks were set apart by the pioneers originally, but after 100 years they were little regarded by the people then living within sight of them. They were overrun with weeds and brush. Trees began to grow promiscuously in one, while the lines of another were broken down, and it became a mud hole.

One afternoon two women were looking out on the plot called Lafayette square. A little stream was stagnating through its center. Drivers and pedestrians had no consideration for the struggling grass. The two talked with other women, and a meeting of women was called to devise ways and means of improving the village. A permanent organization was formed, and a president, vice president, treasurer and secretary were elected. A board of directors and an executive committee were also appointed, and a constitution and bylaws were adopted.

Organization was perfected in September, the objects of the society were made known throughout the community and the work of improving the village began at the home of each of the twenty members. The majority of the people said, "You can never accomplish anything." But the women entered enthusiastically upon their enterprise. They wrought changes in their own dooryards. They exchanged "slips" of hardy plants, purchased the roots of inexpensive but pretty shrubs. By ordering together and purchasing at wholesale they were able to save much. All orders were shipped to the president of the society, and the expressage on individual packages was saved for the purchase of more shrubs.

It was an aggressive campaign. The rubbish which had accumulated in the corners of the fences was cleared away. Old fences were replaced by new ones or repaired or removed entirely. The women made beautiful lawns about their homes and planted vines to spread over walls and fences. Ornamental shrubbery was set out. Pretty evergreen or deciduous trees were procured from the forest near by and set in rows where the crumbling fences once stood. As the village was noted for its bluestone handsome stone walks were procured cheaply. As soon as these were laid it was seen to be essential that wide gutters should be made, and with the gutters came grading the streets and removing weeds and stones. Attention was given to back dooryards that faced the railroad. Weeds and brush had overrun them, and they had become a dumping ground. Back doors and basins which had never known a coat of color were painted, and the weather beaten, tumbledown board fences were replaced by neat white pickets.

A subscription was finally started for the purpose of restoring the parks. People were asked to give anything from a cent up. A New England supper was given, and it proved to be so pleasant and successful that it has been repeated annually. The society was able to erect the contributions by the proceeds from a series of entertainments embracing concerts, theatricals and lectures, which found ready favor. These also were found so profitable in every sense that they have been continued.

The money having finally been raised, a committee of three was appointed to arrange for grading and curbing Lafayette square, the dimensions of which were 180 by 62 feet. A handsome fountain was given as a memorial to a former resident by his sons at a cost of $1,000 and was formally dedicated to the village.

Washington park was next made delightful. Graded walks were wound through it, in place of aggressive weeds lawn grass seed was sown, ground was spaded up and cultivated plants set out; mountain ash, weeping willow and balsam trees were placed here and there, and wild clematis and amplexicaules were planted that they would in time overrun the tops of these trees. Hollyhock trees were scattered, and asters, hydrangeas and wild roses were arranged in vistas. Finally fallen and decayed timber, stumps, weeds and rubbish were taken from Fort Hill park, which was covered over with rich soil and seeded with grass and now an attractive green plot of three-quarters of an acre surrounded by a fine curbing. The three parks are cared for at comparatively small expenditures.

In a forgotten cemetery on a side street near the heart of the village the few remaining slabs had been leveled by the frosts of many years. Wild apple trees grew and bore fruit, which was harvested only by the small boys. Old bushes ran wild and mingled with briars, burdocks, milkweed and goldenrod. Many old cans and pails had been thrown into the inclosure. The grass was never cut, and the grounds were fast becoming impenetrable. The women got to work, cleared the old cemetery of debris and reset the ancient shafts, removing the ashes of some of the forefathers of the hamlet to the new and handsome burial grounds on the hill across the river. The grass is now mowed regularly, the wild brambles are subdued, and the place is honored as it should be.—Eastern Gazette.

SCHOOL QUESTION

Mr. Fraser Gives an Able Address on Iniquities of Educational System.

Mr. Fraser, of Wallaceburg, was then introduced and was also well received by the audience.

"From the size of the gathering and the intelligence I see here displayed," said he, "it does not look to me as if the Conservative party were dead. From the enthusiasm displayed at the convention and the determination which marked the faces of the delegates it is quite obvious that every effort to return a Conservative candidate to the House. You have selected a good man and, judging from the various offices he has held from time to time, a better choice would be impossible. The large number of candidates in the field showed the enthusiasm and friendly rivalry among the representatives. In the election of Mr. Davidson the majority was a very small one, showing that the delegates here felt an interest in the nomination. What a difference between the nomination held here a few days ago by the Reformers. There were a large number who were anxious to win honors in Toronto. What was done? Were they given a chance to go before the convention? A man who did not seek the nomination was appointed."

There is a feeling abroad to-day that if Mr. Davidson does not win the election no Conservative can do it in East Kent. I am glad to see the ladies interested. So much so, in fact, that a large number are here to-night. Every lady in the audience, and also in the riding, knows that under the present school system an immense amount of hard and tedious and unprofitable labor has to be done as a result of a defective method practiced, in that the children are not fairly educated. The present school

LUNDY'S LANE.

U. S. Troops Appear on Canadian Soil—Friendly Interest and Assist at With Re-interment of Comrades.

A strange contrast to the famous battle at Lundy's Lane was the ceremony in which troops of the United States and of Canada participated together on Saturday, Oct. 19, 1901,—the re-interment in the historic burial ground at Lundy's Lane of the bones of nine American soldiers, members of the 9th United States Infantry, recently discovered on the field of the battle of July 25, 1814. For the first time since that date American troops marched under arms through the territory which they fought to possess.

Following the memorable battle, the field being left strewn with the dead, military necessity compelled the destruction of many of the corpses by burning them, while others were thrown indiscriminately into shallow trenches and covered with a few feet of earth. It was in what must have been one of these trenches, right in the burial ground itself, that the remains of the nine men were discovered, their identity being shown by the buttons and buckles that were among the nine skulls and the little heap of bones.

When the discovery was reported to Hon. Harlan W. Bush, United States Consul at Niagara Falls, he at first suggested "to the department at Washington that the remains be buried either at Fort Porter or Fort Niagara, but later at the request of the Lundy's Lane Historical Society, it was decided to re-inter them on the battlefield where the men had fallen, in the cemetery on Drummond Hill, side by side with the British soldiers who had fallen in the same conflict.

Soldiers of both countries met on the upper street bridge. The Canadian troops consisted of a detachment of the 44th Lincoln and Welland Regiment, and the American soldiers belonged to "K" Company, 14th Regiment, stationed at Fort Niagara, and were preceded by the 42nd Separate Company band.

Reaching the centre of the bridge, the Americans halted, faced and presented arms to the Canadian guard of honor, and the two bodies of soldiers then marched through Niagara Falls South to where the remains were confined, at an undertaking establishment. Here the funeral procession was formed.

The remains were in a black casket, each skull in a separate, small case. Behind the casket were the Union Jack and American flags, and upon it were laid the floral offerings, a wreath of Gaelic leaves and white and cream roses from United States Consul Bush, and a bouquet, a cross and a wreath from the soldiers at Fort Niagara and Fort Porter.

Just east of the Drummond Hill Presbyterian Church the grave was prepared. A few yards away is the resting place of the British soldiers who fell in the battle of Lundy's Lane, while the monument to Laura Secord faces this freshest grave. Side by side is the grave of Captain Abraham F. Hull, of the 9th United States Infantry, killed at the battle of Bridge-water on the same day that they fell at Lundy's Lane. The short services at the Church of England were read by Rev. Canon Bull, who had been requested to act by the United States Consul, assisted by Rev. Canon Houston. As the coffin was lowered Capt. Harris sprinkled a few handfuls of earth over it, the troops fired three volleys, the bugler sounded "Lights out," while "Nearer My God to Thee" was played by the band.

The visiting American troops acted as a guard while the drinking fountain, a memorial to Queen Victoria, was unveiled. The fountain was erected by residents in the neighborhood, at the foot of Lundy's Lane, marking the centre of the conflict, and the American military band played "God Save the King" at the conclusion of the ceremony.

Cheers were given with a will for King Edward VII, and the President of the United States. The American troops were escorted to the bridge by the squad from the 44th, and mutual cheers given.

Canadian Forestry Report.

The Department of the Interior has issued in neat pamphlet form the second annual report of the Canadian Forestry Association, which contains much interesting and valuable information. The paper, by Mr. John Bertram and Mr. J. C. Langelier are of general interest, as they give very much light on the lines on which the Forestry Association proposes to work. The comparison, by Mr. Langelier, of the productiveness of poor soil under timber and general agriculture should be very carefully considered by the people of Canada. The other papers deal with special subjects which will be of interest to particular provinces. Dr. C. A. Schenck of Biltmore, North Carolina, Manager of the Vanderbilt Forest at that place, a German expert of high standing, gives in his paper various valuable suggestions during the discussion his views on the forestry problem as it affects Canada.

Where Wives are Whipped.

In Russia wives are very much in subjection to their husbands. In a circulated book written by the Russian priest, Pope Sylvester, who lived in the sixteenth century, corporal punishment is advocated not only on account of its religious propriety, but also as of benefit to their health.

What the women may think of it is another matter, but certainly the Russian branch of the Greek church seems to believe that if you spare the rod you spoil the wife. Until recent years a rod or whip was formed part of a bride's trousseau, and in some districts her first duty was to humbly remove her husband's boots, in one of which she found a whip.

A custom which obtained in other parts of the country was for the bridegroom to give the bride a light blow as he took her from her father's house, saying, "Now you must forget the ways of your own family and learn those of mine."—Stray Stories.

THE BAY OF THE DEAD

A Story of Piracy and a Hidden Treasure.

For years the deep and tortuous and great bays of the Labrador coast afforded a safe haven to bloodthirsty pirates and rovers of the sea, who, driven by hot pursuit from more frequented waters, repaired to this northern shore to mend their shattered vessels.

Toward the close of the eighteenth century a Scotchman named Manning set out for the Labrador coast and alone and unaided followed the rough and precarious calling of a fisherman.

At dawn the pirate sentinels saw the man-of-war sailing through the western passage and heading toward their retreat.

Quality

Quality is what we are continually looking out for. No matter how cheap an article is it must be good before it finds a place in our stock. Those figs we are selling at 5c a lb. are good. Some cheap figs we have seen this year are poor, the skin is tough and a number have black seeds, but the ones we sell are fresh and tender, and we have yet to find one black one among them. We have another shipment of last year's finest selected raisins. We are offering them at 5c a lb. A great many people are using them for pies instead of apples. To-day we expect to have in some more fine dates at 5c a lb. The last we had could scarcely be told from the new ones.

A NOVEL'S PLACE.

Prof. Alexander Indicates Its Status in Literature—Character in Novels—Advice on Reading.

The first lecture of the season before the Jewish Literary Union of Toronto was given by Prof. Alexander of Toronto University, who spoke in an entertaining manner of "Novels," which he characterized as the most entertaining form of literature, as well as the most popular form. It was the latest form of literature to develop. It is hard to define what a novel is, but it is possible to enquire what the modern novel is. It ought to be a story whose main purpose is to give pleasure. Many people try to imbue the world with the political or religious or other ideas through the medium of a novel. In so far that a book does not fail in being a novel. In spite of the fact that Dickens used the medium of his "Little Dorrit" to show the evils of imprisonment for debt, he was not able to attract for our ancestors, as it was a novel, because it fulfilled the conditions of being a novel.

In asking what is the difference between a story and a novel one might say that a story is short and a novel is long, whom we know is the genuine old-fashioned story that children like, and this is the form of literature that our ancestors knew. Such stories dealt with the marvelous, and this was their attraction for our ancestors, as it was with our children; their simple natures required that which the educated intellect does not call for.

The typical modern novel does not deal with extraordinary things. A novel is a picture of human life as it has been or as it might be. The more a novel deals with the ordinary things of life the more typical a novel it is. Looking at the work of Robert Louis Stevenson from this point of view, "Kidnapped" is more truly a novel than "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

We are interested in stories of all ordinary character when they are about people whose we know, or when these stories appeal to our sympathies or feelings. Therefore, in writing a novel, it is the work of the author to make imaginary people feel real. This cannot be done in any other way. The author must be a great deal of elaboration and characterization. A story may be condensed, a novel cannot.

The novel appeals to a developed intellect, and this is why novel appeared only two hundred years ago—Defoe's "Robinson Crusoe." The tastes administered to by the modern novel had to be satisfied in times gone by with the poem, the epic, and then the drama. People need not be reading to enjoy them. Nowadays novels take the place which the theatres occupied early in the eighteenth century.

There are internal reasons for this change. In the progress of the human mind, the reading is from big things to little ones. In the drama striking things were presented, and the actor had to intensify life in delineating what the dramatic writer implied. The subtleties and delicacy of feeling which the developed mind can understand could not be exhibited on the stage. These we find portrayed in the modern novel. Science and the modern mind have grown up side by side. The same spirit of minute observation is to be found in both.

Professor Alexander does not agree with those people who are still doubtful about the value of the novel. Now, reading is as good as seeing the world. It helps men out of their narrow experiences. Of course there are good and bad novels, and in the latter class are those which misrepresent life. There were four competitors, Highland Boy, owned by S. M. Stewart, of Ruthven, Dan and Don, owned by Dr. Campeau, of Harrow, and Toney Bee, owned by J. G. Armstrong, of Detroit.

The dogs were set down in pairs, Dan and Highland Boy, and Dan and Toney Bee being paired. The first pair was not given a chance to work on single birds, and for this reason the decision of the judges met with some dissatisfaction. Highland Boy did magnificent work, and according to many of the experts present, outclassed his three rivals. Toney Bee did finely in both his trials.

NATURAL GAS

A Company to be Formed to Put Down a Well in Chatham.

A meeting was held in the parlors of the Garner house last evening with Mayor Sulman in the chair, to consider a scheme of boring for gas in the city. Messrs. Holmes and Correll, the promoters, who have been drilling at the plant in Dresden, were present, and were anxious to put in a test well for natural gas. They said that they would require the assistance of some of the citizens in so doing. The meeting decided that this would be a good thing for the Board of Trade to deal with, and that Messrs. Holmes and Correll be introduced to the President and Secretary of the Board of Trade. The general feeling of the meeting was that natural gas could be found in paying quantities and that nothing would be more for the good of the city and boom it more than a good strike of natural gas.

Mr. Correll exhibited a map which showed the vein running through Ohio, through to Petrolia and past the outskirts of Chatham. Both the promoters are practical men who have spent most of their lives in Pennsylvania oil and gas fields and they are satisfied that with very little trouble gas can be found here. Among those present were Mayor Sulman, W. D. Sheehan, P. McNaughton, J. R. Reid, Ward Stanworth, Geo. S. Hayward, Jas. Northwood, E. B. Jones, J. D. McNab, Mr. Bloude and the promoters.

IONE: A BROKEN LOVE DREAM

BY LAURA JEAN LIBBEY

Author of "A Broken Betrothal," "Parted by Fate," "Parted at the Altar," "Heiress of Cameron Hall," "Miss Middleton's Lover," Etc., Etc.

CHAPTER XV.

A sharp convulsive shudder passed over Colonel Whitney's strong, stalwart frame.

"A week ago to-day, Ione," he repeated faintly, "I was a different man; life seemed worth the living, and now it is torture to me to see the light of each coming day."

"But to break into the subject while I have the courage," he cried, desperately, "as you recollect, I stayed all day, and all the evening, too, in town. I met a party of friends when I dropped into a cafe to dine, and upon their urgent request, joined them. The hours flew by, as hours of social pleasure will, and on leaving the cafe—I can never tell how it happened—I fell into a spirited dispute with one of the gentlemen; bitter words followed. I uttered words that, in the rash folly of the moment, sprung to my lips, and which I would have given worlds to recall. We parted in anger, and he went his way."

"A little later I started for home. It was snowing heavily, and as I stepped off the car at its destination, I buttoned my overcoat tightly around my chin; for the long tramp ahead of me to the villa, even though I cut across lots, was not very pleasant to contemplate in that storm."

"I had not traversed half the distance, when, directly across my path I stumbled upon the form of a man, almost buried in the deep drifts."

"As it was a bitterly cold night, my first impression was that the man had lost his way, sunk exhausted by the road side, and had frozen to death."

"In an instant I was kneeling beside him, intent upon rendering him every assistance in my power. I turned him over, and the light of the lantern, which I had secured at the car stable, fell upon his face. I started back with a low cry. It was the gentleman whom I had had the altercation with on the steps of the cafe; and in that same moment I saw a sight which turned the blood round my heart to ice. It was a long, thin knife buried to its hilt in his breast."

"With a horrible cry I drew it forth, the warm life-blood spurting up in my face as I did so; and as I held it in my hand in that awful moment I heard hurried steps approaching—some one stopped short in the path. There was an exclamation of horror, a heavy hand fell on my shoulder, and a voice cried hoarsely in my ear: 'For Heaven's sake, Colonel Whitney, what is this that you have done?' I raised my eyes and saw Frank Lyons."

"In a few breathless words I explained the situation. He shook his head."

"I was on the steps of the cafe, as were many others, when you two gentlemen parted company," he said. "We all heard that bitter quarrel, and now I have witnessed the result of it."

"I sprang to my feet white as death. In Heaven's name, you do not mean to insinuate that I—that I—I could not utter the words for very horror."

"This is your work," he said, coolly. "What my eyes behold as I came suddenly upon you, my heart must believe. No denial can avail you. Any law in the land will pronounce you guilty; and you can realize for yourself the end."

"In vain I expostulated, vowing my innocence; yet, as in a glass darkly, I saw for myself just how matters stood."

"I would be your friend if I could," he went on, "am sorry for you. Flight is your only hope. Go to your home now. To-morrow I will call upon you, and we will advise together. No one knows—no, one save myself could condemn you. You are safe if my lips are closed."

"Protesting my innocence vehemently, I turned away. For long hours after I reached home, I paced the floor like a man driven mad. I could see myself arraigned—the trial on circumstantial evidence, and what the verdict must be. I was a proud man, Ione; I had lived an honored, respected life, and in one brief hour all that had changed. Oh, the torture of those hours!"

"In the morning Frank Lyons came to the villa. He called for me, and was shown into this room. What conversation we had during the hour that followed I will not repeat. It was this in brief: No one knew, no one saw, no one would accuse me; save himself; and that his lips would be sealed on one condition only, and that was—oh, Ione, how shall I tell you?"

"Go on, uncle," said the girl, who knelt, white as death, before him.

"That this little hand should be given him in marriage as the price of his silence; that you should be sacrificed to save me," replied the colonel, huskily.

"He saw the lovely face blanch, and the dark eyes grow wide with terror. The words seemed to strike and smite her as lightning strikes a fair flower."

"I refused to be saved at such a price," groaned the colonel. "I could not even speak to you of it. It seemed more cruel than death. I refused."

"I will give you a week to consider the matter," he said, "and at the end of that time, if Ione is not my promised wife, the law shall take its course." The week is up to-day, Ione; this evening or to-morrow morning he will come for his answer."

A pitiful cry broke from Ione's white lips.

"Oh, uncle, uncle!" she moaned. "I could not marry that man—and my Arthur—my lover—"

"You shall not be sacrificed, my darling," cried the old soldier; "not even to save me. You shall marry the man of your choice—you shall be Arthur's bride."

The girl crept nearer to him, looking up fearfully into his face.

"Tell me what would happen to you in that case, uncle," she said.

"The worst!" he replied, desperately. "But let that pass; my life is nearly spent, yours is in its morning. Put your arms around my neck, dear; look into my face and tell me you believe in me, though the whole world denounce me, and I can bear my fate. I will meet it unflinchingly, as a soldier should."

How she clasped her white arms about him, declaring her belief in him, her unwavering confidence in his innocence amidst heart-breaking sobs.

"God bless you, Ione!" he said, huskily, putting those clinging arms from him. "You have made the worst that can happen easier to bear."

"The worst!" she repeated. "Oh, no, no, no, uncle! that must not, shall not be. I would give my life to save you," she went on, vehemently, "and I—I—can sacrifice my happiness. The temptation to save myself at your expense is past, uncle. I will purchase the man's silence by giving him my hand. I will marry Mr. Lyons, if he persists, to—to save you. That will be your answer to him when he comes. Say no more, uncle; you cannot persuade me. The path of duty is marked out plainly before me. I—"

The sentence never was finished. With a low cry she threw up her arms and sank at the distracted colonel's feet in a dead faint.

and break the news to you, Arthur? I—I dare not tell you why I have broken my betrothal with you, to marry him. You must think of me what you will, and I must suffer under the ban of silence. I must see you turn from me in indignation and anger, perhaps, too deep for words. You will go from my presence, and leave me with my heart breaking—breaking. How can I part from you, Arthur, knowing it is to be forever? and yet, how dare I even hesitate when a human life is at stake—a noble, innocent, heroic life!"

No words can describe what Ione suffered in the hours that followed; how at times she almost wished Heaven would let her die and end it all, the world looked so dark, and the future, which was to be spent with the man she hated so desperately—alas!—so dreary."

At length the morrow dawned bright and clear. Oh, how the sunshine mocked her! How discordant the chirping of the snow birds seemed as they twittered outside the window.

"Is it a horrible dream?" Ione muttered, as she looked out into the bright sunshine of the winter morning. Then the chill of death seemed to clutch at her heart. "Heaven help me, it is no dream," she moaned. "I have promised to give up my lover, and wed another!"

CHAPTER XVII.

It was late when Ione opened her eyes the next morning.

"Heaven forgive me!" she sobbed. "Has it come to this, that I dread to see the light of day?" and she turned her face to the wall with a piteous moan. "He is coming to-day," she mused, "and my fate will be settled."

She never remembered how the long hours of the day passed. At last one of the servants brought her Frank Lyons' card.

She went down to the drawing-room, outwardly calm, but it seemed to her that he would be sure to hear the wild beating of her heart.

He sprang forward to meet her, his dark, handsome, triumphant face all aglow.

Ione held up her hand, drawing back from him with such a gesture of scorn that he could not mistake it. Then, for half a minute, she was silent; not from want of words, but because she had so much to say that she hardly knew where to begin. He took advantage of her silence.

"Ione," he began, "you have seen Colonel Whitney; may I hope that you have a favorable answer for me?"

She drew her graceful figure to its full height, and looked at him proudly, steadily.

"I have heard all the colonel's story," she said, "and it is needless to add that I believe him guiltless; and now, let me ask, is there any way of saving him without sacrificing me?"

"No," he replied; "for in doing so I would lose my only chance of winning you. For your uncle's sake you will not let me away. That if not my great love for you, should plead for me. Will you give me one word of encouragement?"

"I cannot," she said, turning away. "I was mad to imagine that I ever loved you, Mr. Lyons. I look back to that time in wonder. I know now that it was only a girlish fancy."

"Then you decidedly refuse me?" he said, with lowering brow.

Suddenly there came to her the memory of the colonel's agony as she knelt in terror before him, listening to his story. Could she send this only chance of help far from him, and look the terrible consequence in the face?

"Stay, Mr. Lyons," she said, hurriedly, bowing her dark, curly head on her hands. She was silent so long again that he drew near to her, saying:

"If you send me from you, it will be a death blow to your uncle. All his hopes are based on this marriage."

He never forgot the stormy beauty of the girlish face raised to his. For years afterwards that picture was before him. The lovely, slender figure in the pearl-gray silk robe, that fell about her in graceful folds, the spray of scarlet blossoms at the white throat and twined in the meshes of the nut-brown curls, and the background of plush amber portieres.

"Do you think it manly to force me into a marriage because I love my uncle so dearly—because it is the only way in which I can save him?"

"It is my only chance of winning you, as I have said, Ione," he replied, "and I seize the opportunity."

As he spoke he had attempted to take the little hand that was lying on the back of the chair, to which she had been clinging for support, for she would not take the seat he placed for her.

Ione withdrew her hand as though he had suddenly touched it with fire; and then, with a strangely frank smile, she looked at him.

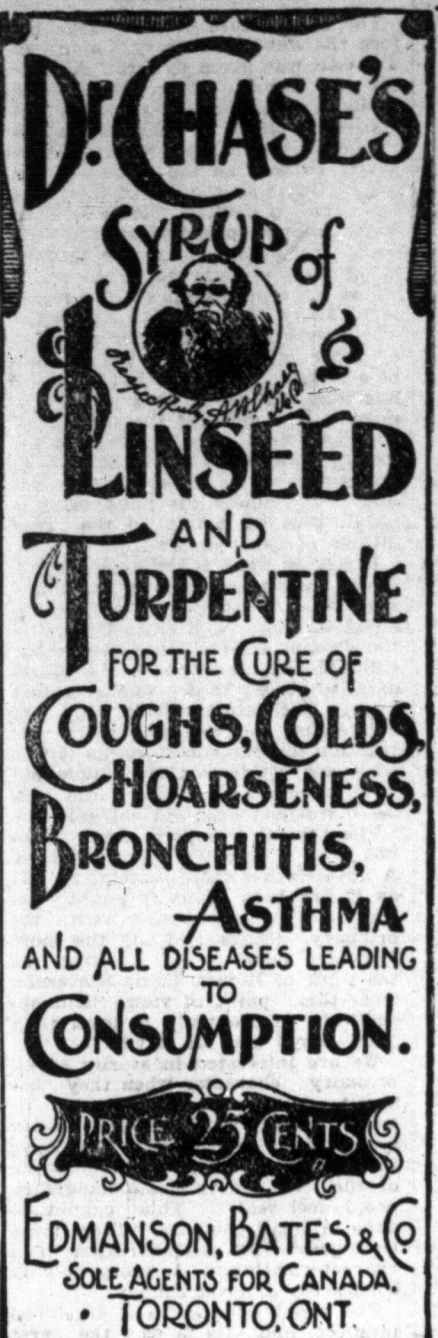

"How can you ask me to marry you when I shrink from the very touch of your hand?" she asked him with a shudder.

A CHEAP PLACE FOR BACHELORS. Bobcaygeon Independent. Toronto is to have an apartment house, in which a bachelor's modest suit of two rooms and a bath will cost him about $30 a month. Here in Bobcaygeon, resting peacefully in the lap of nature, the bachelor can have a two-room cottage and a quarter of an acre of garden for $30 a year, and the run of the municipal bath house, mirror and comb, for all for $1 a year. Strange how people will flock to cities and live in hives.

For Coughs and Colds

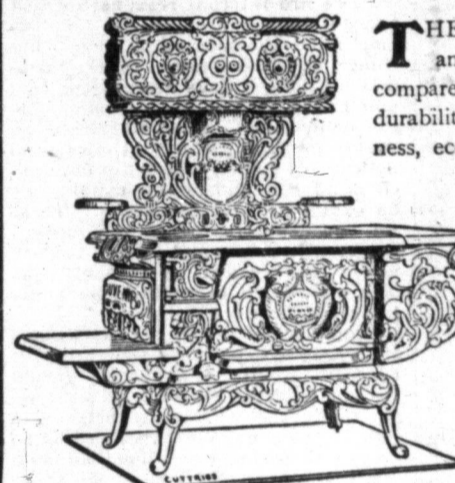

However careful people are in other medicines there is a tendency to accept any remedy for coughs and colds. And yet, when you come to think of it, there are no diseases more fatal than those which develop from simple colds. It is now well known throughout this continent that there is no preparation quite so prompt and thorough in the cure of coughs, colds, bronchitis, whooping cough, asthma, and similar ailments as Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

There are other preparations of linseed and turpentine put up in imitation of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and consequently it is necessary for you to be careful in buying. To protect you we show here a cut of wrapper bearing portrait and signature of Dr. A.W. Chase. Be certain that these appear on the bottle you buy, and do not let any druggist persuade you to take a substitute or imitation. You can be certain of beneficial results from Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, the tried and proven medicine. With other remedies it is a matter of experiment.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has for years had by far the largest sale of any remedy for throat and lung troubles. Nearly every dealer has it for sale. 25 cents a bottle, size of wrapper shown here. Family size, three times as much, 60 cents. It cannot be sent by mail. Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

ANCIENT UMBRELLAS

KEY FIGURED IN CHURCHES IN THE EARLY CHRISTIAN DAYS.

A First Adopted by the Patriarchs in 700 years ago. The umbrella is usually hung over the priest, and it is said that from this custom it became one of the attributes of cardinals appointed from basilican churches. For years the dogs of Venice carried umbrellas of state, and a 1288 Pope Alexander III. declared that these should be surmounted by golden statuettes of the annunciation.

Michael Morosini was the first Venetian layman to carry an umbrella. In 1680 an umbrella was used by a copier. Soon after the umbrella was adopted by fashionable Venetian fashions. According to Corry's "Cruditities" (1611), the Italian umbrella was a small canopy and was made of leather extended by a series of wooden hoops. He says umbrellas were used by horsemen, who, resting their legs on the thigh as they rode, bore them so that they should "minister shadow unto them for shelter against the scorching sun."

In the Harleian manuscripts, now in the British museum, there is in manuscript No. 603 a crude illustration showing the figure of a yeoman holding an umbrella over his head, which led me to infer that umbrellas were known in England even in the early Anglo-Saxon period. Beck, as quoted in the Draper's Dictionary, asserts that at the time that Stephen usurped the crown of England (twelfth century) umbrellas were in common use among the English. The first mention of the umbrella in English literature is in Florio's "World of Wonders" (1598), where it is described as a "kind of round fan or shadowing that they use to ride with in summer Italy; a little shade."

In 1650 an umbrella was exhibited in the "Museum Tradescantianum; or, Collection of Rarities Preserved at South Lambeth, Near London, by John Tradescant," which was known as "one of the wonders of the ark." In the church of Cartmel, in Lancashire, England, there was preserved until a few years ago an umbrella said to be over 300 years old, which was used chiefly to protect the host.

References to the umbrella are to be found also in Blount's "Glossographia" (1674) and Phillips' "New World of Words" (1678). In the first reference reads: "Umbrello, a fashion of round and broad fans, wherewith the Indians (and from them our great ones) preserve themselves from the heat of the sun, and hence called a little shadow, fan or other thing wherewith the women guard their faces from the sun."

The second runs: "Umbrello, a screen against the sun's heat, used chiefly by the Spaniards, among whom it is known by the name quitasole." The imaginative Dean Swift in the "Tale of a Tub" (1696) depicts Jack, an ever resourceful type, making use of an umbrella which he went to bed and an umbrella in rainy weather. Did the worthy Hanway take his cue from this or from Kersey, according to whom the umbrella was a "broad fan or screen commonly used by women to shelter them from rain?" The last reference, made in 1709, is the first mention of it as a protector from the rain. Later Bailey, who in his dictionary (1737) called it a parasol, defined it as "a sort of small canopy to keep off the rain."

Small light umbrellas came into fashion among the ladies of the French court in 1675, and these were carried by attendants. Richelet tells us that they were made of oiled or leather and had ribs of whalebone. A century later they found favor with the men, who carried red umbrellas, with edges fringed with gold lace.

The precise date when Jonas Hanway, who died in 1786, introduced the umbrella into England is not recorded in any of the encyclopedias I have at hand, but they all state that he was popularly known as its introducer.

With the Dutch, as with the Indian grandees, the umbrella was first an attribute of dignity, and it might be, for the prices paid for them at The Hague in 1650 ranged from $75 to $120 each. The Dutch colonists who settled at the Cape of Good Hope were not slow to insist on preserving the dignity of the umbrella, for Byk van Tulbagh, governor of Cape Colony in 1752, enacted that "No one less in rank than a junior merchant or those among the citizens of equal rank, and the wives and daughters only of those who are or have been members of any council shall venture to use umbrellas, and those who are less in rank than merchants shall not enter the castle in fine weather with an open umbrella."—Frank H. Vizetelly in New York Times.

A Nongolfer's Opinion of Golf. Imagine a great fat creature who ought to wear a turban and a long black robe to hide his grossness whacking a little white ball for miles and miles with a perfect surgery of instruments, whacking it either with a babyish solemnity or a childish rage, as Jack may have decided, and incidentally training an innocent eyed little boy to swear and be a tyed hunting loafer. That's golf.—H. T. W. Wells in Pearson's Magazine.

To the Best of Her Knowledge. A lady was looking for her husband and inquired anxiously of a housemaid, "Do you happen to know anything of your master's whereabouts?" "I'm not sure, mum," replied the careful domestic, "but I think they're in the wash."

DOCTORS AT SEA.

Many a man has to abandon his desk because of neuralgia. The torture sometimes is almost unbearable. E. C. Dean, city editor of the Daily British Whig, Kingston, Ont., suffered with neuralgia in the head for twelve months. Six physicians failed to relieve him, but three bottles of Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure completely cured him. This cure blood purifier is put up in bottles containing ten days' treatment. Price 50 cents at all drug stores or The Dr. Hall Medicine Co., Kingston, Ont.

First Boy—It's 6 o'clock. Let's go home. Second Boy—Nip. If we go home, now we'll get larked for stayin' out so late. If we stay till 8 o'clock we'll get larked for stayin' out so late. "Michael Morosini was the first Venetian layman to carry an umbrella. In 1680 an umbrella was used by a copier. Soon after the umbrella was adopted by fashionable Venetian fashions. According to Corry's "Cruditities" (1611), the Italian umbrella was a small canopy and was made of leather extended by a series of wooden hoops. He says umbrellas were used by horsemen, who, resting their legs on the thigh as they rode, bore them so that they should "minister shadow unto them for shelter against the scorching sun."

In late years men have made fortunes out of the tailings of gold mines. The mills in which the ore is processed then in use allowed a large percentage of the precious metal to escape, and that loss amounted in some cases to a fortune. The stomach is just like a stamp mill in this respect, that when it is not in perfect health it allows the escape and waste of much of the precious nutrient contained in the food. That loss when continuous means the loss of man's greatest fortune, health. Science offers a remedy for this condition in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It corrects the "weakness" of the stomach, prevents waste and loss of nourishment, and puts the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition into a condition of health which enables them to save and assimilate all the nutrient contained in the food which is eaten. In all cases of constipation the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets will speedily and permanently cure the disease.

Professor—If a person in good health, but who imagined himself sick, should send for you, what would you do?

Medical Student—Give him some thing to make him sick, and then administer an antidote.

Professor—Don't waste any more time here. Hang out your shingle.

The True Tragedy of Life is ill-health, disappointed ambitions, usefulness destroyed. Pathetic may, tragic. Poor blood, weak nerves, a tired brain. Is there hope? Yes! Because there is a cure.

Ferrozzone Tablets make blood; not blue blood, but the fluid that strengthens the whole body. Ferrozzone does this quickly by improving digestion, stimulating assimilation and by imparting health and tone to the whole system. Messrs. McCall & Co., druggists, will tell you a great deal more about Ferrozzone. Ask them to tell you of the wonderful curative properties of Ferrozzone Tablets.

An eminent English judge says that in criminal practice in the United States there is "a straining of the law to defeat its own purpose." That is not a wild idea by any means.

Speaker's Sore Throat

Public speakers and singers know how useless and sickening are cough mixtures, sprays, lozenges, etc., for irritable sore throat, and state that the most satisfactory remedy is Catechizin, the advantage of which is that it acts quickly and is convenient to use in public places. Catechizin relieves congestion, allays inflammation, and is a protection to the membrane. As a safe guard against colds and catarrh it has no equal. Rev. Dr. McKay, Goderich, says,—"Catechizin is an excellent remedy for throat irritation arising from throat irritants." Physicians, ministers, and druggists recommend Catechizin; druggists sell it for $1. Small size 25c. By mail from Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

Never believe that a man is altogether bad because you have seen him make one misstep.

End Neuralgia's Agony

Have you failed to get permanent relief? Are you almost frantic with neuralgia pain? If so, why not use Polson's Nervine? It is the only neuralgia remedy that has never failed to cure even the worst cases, and it will surely cure you. Five times the strength of other remedies, it penetrates the tissues, and drives out the pain instantly. Quick relief, sure cure, large bottles 25c.

"Oh, fortune is a little ball— Or so the canny golfers say. Some lightly left it over all. And others foolish day by day."—Washington Star.

INWARD AND OUTWARD.

The inward effects of humors are worse than the outward. They weaken all the organs, inflame the mucous membrane, cause catarrhal troubles, and endanger the whole system. Hood's Sarsaparilla eradicates all humors and cures all their effects. It's the great alterative and tonic medicine whose merit has been everywhere established. Accept no substitute.

CHARACTER IN FEET.

Character displayed in the feet is the subject of an article in The Ladies Magazine. It is curious, says the writer, how much individuality is expressed by the feet, which are in many ways as clear an index to character as the hand. Are there not cruel feet, vulgar feet, artistic feet, honest feet and feet of every nature varying according to the disposition of their owner?

For instance, there is a broad, square toed, stout foot which always goes with a phlegmatic temperament, and there is a long, narrow, pointed foot which accompanies an artistic soul and a "sensible" foot which stamps the vegetarian. We have all met and felt sorry for the woman who wears large sizes and who cycles in a short white plique skirt and white shoes. Gouty feet accompany the gouty temper and generally "cussed" dispositions of cruel fathers-in-law, while a ponderous, white stockings and elastic sided, cloth covered foot can only belong to a certain type of charwoman.

Why do policemen always have such large feet? Why does a particularly aggressive person who generally wears side whiskers and a prosperous looking suit go about in buckled shoes? Why do we always associate genius with shabby boots? One of the most charming little bits of word painting imaginable, too, conferred upon by Sir Joshua Reynolds, whose feet we best know his patients.

Like little mice, set in and out. A large footed heroine is impossible, but out of books she is probably more common than the other kind, and the atmosphere of romance which she should have is a sad fact, because she should be a lady come up to him suddenly at a ball and said: "I heard that the Russians have made a forced march and entered Constantinople," hoping no doubt that he would be surprised into some indiscreet expression.

The Man She Should Marry. A wise woman should not only consider whether the man suits her, but whether she is going to suit the environments in which she will be placed. She should not marry a man who is going to shed tears over his sarcastic remarks on her housekeeping.

The Rainy Wedding Day. The bridegroom's "Happy is the bride that a sun shines on" is one that is unknown in many lands. A British bride takes it unhappily when the day of her wedding dawns bright and sunny. Rain on her marriage morn is held to signify that all the times are she will live with, therefore, lead a happy married life. It is said that Ezra of Simsbury called the day before the wedding day the wedding day, and the bride and her girl friends were all so happy because of the idea of getting the mourning of life done, so that only what is joyful may remain. In some countries this result is attained by sprinkling the bride with water. The Greeks think that a shower of drenching a bride will bring her lasting happiness.

King of Italy's Governor. The king of Italy's great regard for English and English customs is due, no doubt, to the fact that he was brought up in England. His governor, Mrs. Lee, who had almost entire charge of his education during his early boyhood, Mrs. Lee was always extremely well received at the Quirinal, the late King's residence, and she has the greatest regard for her. What was still more wonderful, she managed to secure the good will of the Italians about the court without in any way incuring their jealousy.

Aids to Conversation. It was said by a clever Frenchman that an amusing conversation could never begin in a room where the furniture consisted of sofas, chairs and table.

Manners. Gall Hamilton was once asked the question, "What shall be the education of a young woman?" and her reply is of a young woman's manners, and last and all the way between—good manners. Good manners imply every saving grace known under heaven among men and women. Good manners are the absolutely transparent medium of conveying to the world the benevolence of a good heart; good manners involve and include every department of the human being—body and soul and spirit, heart and mind, imagination and conscience, discrimination and judgment. The whole duty of men to man, she concludes, "is entailed in good manners."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured.

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound and imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Diplomatic. The late Lord Savile used to say, according to The Candid Friend, "that high diplomatists had always to be their guard against intriguing women, mainly Russian agents, who would use every artifice to get information. During the Russo-Turkish war, when England was always on the verge of a crisis and Russian statesmen were most anxious to know what England would do under given circumstances, a lady came up to him suddenly at a ball and said:

"I heard that the Russians have made a forced march and entered Constantinople," hoping no doubt that he would be surprised into some indiscreet expression. He merely replied: "Indeed! And I suppose the sultan has conferred on them the order of the Turkish Bath?"

MUTINY IN THE REGIMENT.

The Seaforth Highland Regiment may be surprised perhaps to learn that their renowned corps once rose in mutiny against their officers. The regiment was raised by Lord Seaforth upon his tenantry, but a large proportion of the men were not Mackenzies, as would have been expected. At some prehistoric date—history does not go far back in the Highlands—the Clan Macrae emigrated to the Mackenzie region, and became henceforth the most devoted supporters of the chief. Many of them joined the new regiment. In 1778, the men being trained and fit for service, it received orders to embark for Jersey. A rumor spread among the soldiers, few of whom spoke English, that the Government had sold them to the East India Company. The Macraes headed a protest, which was disregarded, and so, quite calmly and quietly, they marched out of Edinburgh Castle, where the regiment lay, and occupied Arthur's Seat, the crest of the mountain above. When it came to this point, nearly all the Mackenzies joined their hereditary friends. And there the honest fellows sat three days and three nights, keeping the strictest discipline. Fortunately the Scottish commander-in-chief at the time was a man of sense. Instead of attacking the innocent criminals, who meant no harm, he discussed matters with them, and finally gave them a written undertaking, that their suspicions were unfounded. The Duke of Buccleugh and the Earl of Dunmore countersigned, and the Highlanders marched down from Arthur's Seat as quietly as they marched up.—London Standard.

Sailors' Trouser. Everybody knows that British sailors wear their trousers wide at the bottom, but everybody may not know that they can either mend or wash their own clothes. Now, at one time, every sailor had sufficient cloth given out to make the articles in question, with just a bit over for future repairs. But here came the difficulty. He was not allowed to have any pockets. So, quite naturally, he kept the repairing bit in a handy place, where it could not get lost. If he wanted to mend a hole in his jumper all he had to do was to cut a piece out of his trouser ends. It will be readily seen, therefore, that by the time the trousers were altogether worn out they had become the same width of the whole of the way down, or, better still, the much desired peg-top shape. The navy is very conservative, and that is why sailors' trousers still continue to float in the breeze to-day.

Little Homemaking Hint. The coffee should be served very hot and with hot milk. The plates should be properly heated and placed before the carver. A meal should never be announced until everything is in readiness. The dining-room should be in perfect order before breakfast is served. The table should always be so kept as to be ready for a guest with but a moment's notice. A cotton flannel "silence cloth" not only makes the tablecloth look infinitely handsomer, but preserves the varnished surface from stains from hot dishes. The butter should be kept in the refrigerator until the last minute in summer, but kept where it will be soft enough to spread easily in winter.

Turns Flank on Montreal. It was at an exclusive South side boarding school and the young women pupils in the institution were at dinner. The preceptress was a task mistress of the most rigid sort, but the manners of the young women at the table, and she compelled her pupils to obey them to the letter.

Two Remarkable Women Photographers. Much interest in women's work in photography has been aroused by the series of picture pages now appearing in The Ladies' Home Journal. But no one of them is likely to attract more interest and admiration than the page in a forthcoming issue which will be devoted to five exquisitely picturesquely reproductions of quaint village life by Frances and Mary Allen. These pictures recall with wonderful charm the simplicity and staidness of bygone days.

The Smallest Pension. The smallest pension extant is believed to be that paid to an old sailor in the Portsmouth Workhouse. It comes to fourpence a year, paid quarterly. Each quarter, therefore, he duly receives a penny stamp wherewith is enclosed a stamped envelope for the receipt. He is then granted leave of absence to convert his little Eldorado into cash. The master, it is said, invariably gives him the parting admonition to take care of the pence and the pounds will take care of themselves.

Foot Evil in Castle. Poultice the foot with bran mash for a few days to clean it, then mix one ounce of nitric acid with four ounces of tar, put the tar in a cup, then put the cup in the nitric acid, remove the cup out of the hot water and keep stirring with a piece of wood until it cools; apply a little of this to the foot once a day.

Big Rent Rells. The Duke of Norfolk's rent roll from lands in £270,000 a year, and the late Lord Bute's estates were valued at £232,000 a year.

St. Louis, Nov. 21.—Frank James is going on the stage. His first appearance will be made at Zanesville, Ohio, Monday, Nov. 25. The play is entitled "Across the Desert," and the season will last ten weeks. The company will tour Ohio and other States east of Illinois and a part of Canada. It will not appear in St. Louis.

On the billboards and the theatre programs Frank James will appear under his own name. He will portray a prosperous westerner, a Prince Albert coat, creased trousers and a "Fedora" hat. He will open the fourth act, and the curtain will go down with Frank James in the centre of the stage.

NO LONGER A TICKET TAKER.
He will be seen no more, this year at least, in his old familiar post as ticket taker at the Standard Theatre. When seen to-night, Mr. James said:

"The report is true. I have contracted to appear for a brief, and I hope, an inconspicuous part in a drama which already has made a good deal of money. I have said nothing about it here, not because I am blind to the advantages of advertising, but because the troupe does not come this far west and because advertising here would be without benefit, while it would provoke much inquiry and discussion.

"This move marks a radical change of purpose on my part, but the development of conditions has been such as to make my course a rational one. Now, without offense to public sentiment, I can do what I could not have done years ago, and I give indisputable proof by my conduct that the apprehensions of those who had no faith in me were groundless.

DOESN'T EXPECT TO BE AN ACTOR.

"I do not expect to become an actor, in the true sense of the word. I do not delude myself with the belief that I have any talent in that direction, and I do not think that any of the many men who have offered me inducements to go on the stage did so because they thought I had the ability to act. Whatever talent I may possess as a theatrical attraction comes from the limited facts and the liberal fiction woven into the published stories about Quantrell's men and the James boys. My appearance on the stage, therefore, will be merely a personal exhibition than a dramatic performance.

NO "BLOOD AND THUNDER."

"This drama is not made up of 'blood and thunder.' I will not have anything to do with a performance which idealizes law breaking and makes a hero of the law breaker. It will require no phenomenal ability to draft or revise a play so as to serve the purpose of bringing me before the audience and gratifying their curiosity without teaching an ill lesson, and I do not think that any of the many men who have offered me inducements to go on the stage did so because they thought I had the ability to act. Whatever talent I may possess as a theatrical attraction comes from the limited facts and the liberal fiction woven into the published stories about Quantrell's men and the James boys. My appearance on the stage, therefore, will be merely a personal exhibition than a dramatic performance.

HOW HE EARNED A LIVING.

"My thorough knowledge of horses fitted me for an honorable place in connection with race meetings and that enabled me to piece out my income so that I was able to live comfortably, and provide a modest education for my boy. In the past three years, when I officiated at races in the smaller cities of Ohio and Kentucky, it was plain that a large number of those who attended came for the special purpose of seeing me. It dawned upon me finally that, as much as I disliked the idea of appearing on exhibition, I really was doing it in every case where I appeared as a race rider, and I was doing it, too, without any financial benefit to myself.

PUBLICITY SHOULD BRING PROFIT.

"I reasoned this way: I am getting old and unless I build up a small surplus within the next few years I must find my way to the Confederate Home. I convinced myself that my future appearance in public ought to bring me a profit. When, a few weeks ago, a favorable offer came to me involving my appearance in one act of a clean play that was already earning good money, I was in a frame of mind to consider it favorably and finally I accepted.

"I am satisfied that my course will not be criticized by any real friends or by any one else except the limited class, whose ill-will has outlived my acquittal by the courts in the land and my nineteen years' record as an unoffending and self-respecting citizen of St. Louis."

A SENSATIONAL OCCURRENCE.

Decatur, Ala., Nov. 20.—Jas. Wynn, an Oxford blacksmith, narrowly escaped being buried alive to-day. After the funeral services the coffin was opened at the grave, when the body was seen to move. The casket was hurried back to the house of Wynn, where he revived and is now under treatment. Wynn had been pronounced dead by physicians, and he lay apparently dead for two nights and a day.

CAUSE OF DEAFNESS

The Most Common Cause Only Recently Discovered.

It has been stated on good medical authority, that nine-tenths of cases of deafness are caused from Catarrh or from sore throat trouble. The little tube which leads to the ear from the throat is lined with a sort of velvety structure called the mucous membrane. This membrane is simply a continuation of the mucous membrane lining of the throat. When disease of any sort attacks the mucous membrane of the throat it is very liable to extend into the eustachian tube and up into the ear.

The history of nearly all cases of deafness is like this: a cold is contracted and neglected, other colds are taken, the throat becomes sore and inflamed, which is aggravated by particles of dust and germs from the air. This condition causes the disease to spread into the tube that leads to the ear.

It seems a little far fetched to say that most cases of deafness are caused from catarrh, but it is certainly true, and anyone who has had a severe catarrhal cold must have noticed how the hearing was affected while the cold lasted.

With catarrh suffers this impairment of hearing becomes chronic and grows worse the longer the catarrh is neglected.

YOU CAN CURE CATARRH AND DEAFNESS

by the regular use of an excellent new preparation called Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, composed of antiseptic remedies which act both on the mucous membranes, but principally and most effectually on the blood, elimination of the catarrhal poison from the system.

THE SORTING OF EGGS.

"The work of sorting eggs is assigned to girls in Denmark, and they are said to become most expert in the process. Danish producers deliver their eggs at special depots on a cooperative plan, and the eggs must all be subjected to examination for defects, then classified and stamped with the owner's name. The force ordinarily employed at one of these depots consists of four girls, an examiner, and, with the help of the apparatus specially prepared for the purpose, they are able to pack and classify 1,440 eggs in ten minutes.

The above clipping was handed to The Planet to-day by one of the workmen at McNaughton & Walker's storehouse. He claims that this record is hardly a good second to the work done by some of the candlers of this well-known firm.

HE DID IT.

The helpfulness of a good man, when it comes to assistance in domestic affairs, is apt to be very much like that of the Mr. Barker whose exploit is narrated below:

"You must get me a cord and a picture hook," he said to his wife. "and tell the servant girl to run down cellar and bring up the step-ladder and carry it into the parlor; and where's those two little screw thing-ma-jigs that go into the back of the frame at the sides to put the cord through? Look them up for me, and I'll need the gimlet to bore a little hole for the screws."

"Somebody get the gimlet, or may-be I can drive them in with a hammer."

"I don't know, but a chair will be better than the step-ladder for me to stand on. Somebody go out into the kitchen and get me a chair. I don't want to stand on one of the parlor chairs."

"That cord? Just measure off about the right length and fasten it in those little things at the side."

"There now, there's your picture all hung up in good shape, and no fuss about it. The difference between us men and you women is that when we have something to do we go right ahead and do it, and no talk about it."

THE FRIGHT THE GHOST HAD.

During a continuation tour in the Diocese of Peterborough, the late Bishop of London put up one evening at an old manor house and slept in a room supposed to be haunted. Next morning at breakfast the bishop was asked whether he had seen the ghost. "Yes," he replied, "with great solemnity; but I have laid the spirit; it will never trouble you again." Being further questioned upon the subject, the bishop said: "The ghost instantly vanished when I asked for a subscription towards the restoration of Peterborough Cathedral."

Men's Underwear and Socks

We believe more sorts and classes of underwear are now on sale here than have been gathered together before in any store in this city.

But that's only a part of the store. The more important part is that they are all wantable kinds. We haven't catered to men and boys all these years without learning how to provide underwear.

Best of all is the light demand these goods make up on your pocket-book. Big, direct buying tells in every line of goods, and very specially in underwear. Compare our prices with others even in the staple line. We submit a random item or two from the scores of styles and prices.

Tolstoi on Death.

"I am feeling better," said Tolstoi to a recent interviewer at Moscow, "and to tell the truth I am rather sorry for it, as I love to be ill."

"Sickness and suffering destroy what is mortal in man solely to prepare him for something better." And lowering his voice, he continued: "Don't let Sophie Andreyevna [the Countess] hear us. Between you and me, I wouldn't like to get well again. If I do, I promise you to write down the thoughts on life and death—if there is such a thing as death—that have crystallized in my brain during the past weeks while I lay here prostrate, undisturbed, happy. Their upshot is that death is but an incident, an episode in our present existence, while life itself never terminates."

"Hence death has nothing terrible; it portends only an intermezzo in eternal life. As the slave looks for the liberator so I look for death—look for it any moment, would welcome it under all circumstances. And when it does come a shout of joy shall arise from my breast like that escaping the mouth of a new-born babe entering upon the phase of life which you and I are now enduring."

An anecdote of a wretched-looking tramp arrested for vagrancy the other day in Brooklyn, tells us, on the other hand, something of the hold a mother has upon her child. When the man was searched by the officers, a soiled photograph of a young woman was found in his clothing. Beggars' explanations usually find a more credulous audience outside of the police station, but the officers heard the tramp's story and believed it. He declared that the photograph was a picture of his mother.

"She's an old woman now," he said, "if she is alive. I've carried that picture for many a year. I didn't follow the road she marked out for me,—the more shame to me,—but her face has been with me in every state in the Union. I wouldn't part with it for anything in this world. Keep it for me, and let me have it when I go."

Mother love is a holy thing. Pitiful, and more than pitiful, is the baseness that will drag it in the mud. But it outlives even that indignity.

Strong Men.

The Roman soldiers, who built such wonderful roads and carried a weight of armour and luggage that would crush the average farm-hand, lived on coarse brown bread and sour wine. They were temperate in diet and regular and constant in exercise. The Spanish peasant works every day and dances half the night, yet eats only his black bread, onion and watermelon. The Smyrna porter eats only a little fruit and sour olives, yet he walks off with his load of one hundred pounds. The coolie, fed on rice, is more active and can endure more than the negro, fed on fat meat.

Sincerity.

"Our civilization demands a greater or lesser degree of mendacity," remarked of its every true. I am constantly encountering some empty phrase, some conventional remark which is absolutely devoid of sincerity."

"That's right," answered the book agent. "That's perfectly true. I am reminded of it every time I walk up to a front step where there is a doormat with the word 'welcome' on it."
