The Best Medicine.

J. O. WILSON, Contractor
Builder, Sulphur Springs, N. S.,
thus speaks of Ayer's Pills:

"Ayer's Pills are the best medicine I ever used; and, in my judgment, no better general remedy could be devised. I have used them in my family and employed for more than twenty years. To my certain knowledge, many cases of the following complaints have been completely and by the use of Ayer's Pills: Third day chills, dumb ague, bilious fever, sick headache, rheumatism, flux, dyspepsia, constipation, and heart colds. I know that a moderate use of Ayer's Pills, continued for a few days or weeks, as the nature of the complaint required, would be found an absolute cure for the disorders I have named above."

Permanently Cured

"I have been selling medicine for eight years, and I can safely say that Ayer's Pills give better satisfaction than any other Pills I ever sold."

POETRY.

Ambition.

She stands by the wayside,
And pointing with jewelled hand,
She tells of glories waiting
Afar in the radiant land.

At the sound of her voice, the plodder
Goes on with courage renewed,
Genuis gives ear to her chanting,
And is with new talent endued.

The multitude hears her in passing,
And each tells himself that she only
Is singing for him her sweet song,
That he, of them all, is chosen

To win her at last to his breast,
That sometime, or where, he will conquer.
If he follows the Siren's behest,
For her sake men forget heaven.

They heed not the passing years,
They trample the hearts of women,
They scoff at the orphan's tears,
They live for one thing only—
To make for themselves a name—
And in bold letters inscribe it
High upon the Temple of Fame.

Oh, fools, who toil and who struggle,
Oh, fools, who enter the strife,
Who are lured by the song of a Siren,
To squander the treasure of life.
The prize for all your enduring
Is that of the meaneast slave,
When at last you would clasp her
Triumphant
You tumble into a grave.

SELECT STORY.

The Strike at Shane's.

CHAPTER XI.
John Shane's neighbors came promptly to his assistance, as they always do in farming communities. They came with their teams and tools, prepared to put in the corn, and the work of plowing up the ground and replanting the corn went merrily on.

The birds came and did their share of the work. They followed the plow all day long and caught every worm that came to view. The men plowed the ground and harrowed it and stirred it all they could, so that the birds might eat the worms. Shane's horses went to the work with a will, and did as much as any team on the farm. It was a glorious day, and a jollier crowd of men never got together than these same farmers. They felt happy because they were doing a generous deed, and they worked with a will until noon.

The dinner bell rang and they went to the house to meet a fresh surprise. Every man's wife and daughter was there, and they had spread a long table under the trees, and put on it a feast that would tempt the appetite of an epicure.

They had placed Mr. Shane in a chair and had gotten him at the window where he could see it; and Mrs. Shane sat by his side, husband and wife, happier than they had been in many years. What a great feast that was there under the trees. What appetites the men had, and how eager the women were to satisfy them. They laughed and joked and ate, and there never was such a jolly time as they had on the Shane farm.

They worked all day and came back the next day, and worked until every hill of corn was planted again. The next day the rain fell and moistened the ground, and the sun came out and warmed it, and the corn sprouted and grew, and there was a great prospect for the future. "The true worms took some of it, but they had put an extra grain in each hill for the worms."

The birds could not get all the worms, but they got most of them. The Shane farm was getting in accord with the plan of the universe, and prosperity was smiling on it.

Shane felt that he was in the right path now, and he studiously followed it. During the time he was confined to the house with his broken limb, Edith had induced him to read the books loaned her by Mrs. Tracy, which treat of animals and birds and their uses.

In a few more weeks Shane recovered so much that he could walk about the farm on crutches. He could not help but mark the difference in the appearance of things. There was a look of content about everything.

The first time he went to the barn, Dick came up to him, and putting out his nose touched Shane's hand.

"I certainly believe the horse is trying to ask my pardon," said Shane. "It would be more proper for me to ask his pardon for mistreating him so long."

He patted Dick's neck and said, "I think we understand each other now, old fellow."

"I tell you, Mister Shane, I never see horses work better than these same horses of yours," said Mike. "I think we'll have 'em prancing' around again pretty soon."

"Poor old fellow, I'm afraid he'll not get much more enjoyment out of life, but he shall have an easy time of it as long as he lives."

But ere another year had gone by old Dobbin found a resting place beneath the sod, and the question was again asked, "Who knoweth that the spirit of man goeth upward and the spirit of the beast goeth downward?"

God created him and made him subject to the will of man, and in the end God took him. The part that was mortal went back to the earth. If there was any immortal element in him God took it and knows what to do with it.

The work went on merrily on the Shane farm, and everything prospered. The birds did their duty nobly, and the crops were looking splendidly. Shane completely recovered from his broken limb, and people remarked that Shane didn't seem like the same man he used to be. He had learned that the birds were his friends; he had watched them in their work during the summer, and noticed how diligent they were in searching for insects. They took a few cherries and berries, it is true, but when he came to estimate the value of the fruit taken he saw that its value was greatly overbalanced by the benefits he received.

He had been accustomed to employing men to work for him, and he estimated the wages he would have to pay these men in comparison with the profits he would make out of their labor. If the balance was on his side of the account he employed them, and if not he didn't. He estimated the same way in regard to the birds.

The corn crop destroyed by the worms in the spring, and the second crop planted, which he believed now was saved by the birds, was worth all the fruit he would raise in several years. So he reasoned the matter with Edith.

"But, papa," she said, "isn't there something grander and nobler in this question than the mere money side of it?"

"Oh! yes, Edie; I see that side of the question, too. I recognize now that they are God's creatures, sent for our benefit, and that as he has given them to us he can take them away."

"And isn't there something more than that?" asked Edith.

"Yes; I appreciate their sweet songs now as I never did before. There are a great many beauties in nature that I never saw before. I begin to appreciate the gentleness and docility of our domestic animals. I don't blame Dick for running away with me; he only retaliated for the ill-usage I had given him. I do not intend that any dumb animal shall ever be mistreated on this farm again."

"Faith, an' I don't think there's any body on the farm now that wants to mistreat 'em, Mister Shane," said Mike, who had come in with Tom.

"I can trust you, Mike, for you always was opposed to mistreating the animals, but I didn't know but what Tom might have some of the old ideas yet," said Shane.

"Niver ye fear for that by, Mister Shane. Bogorra, he's a bigger crank than Mister Tracy himself, an' I think it's a young laddy of that name that's having a dale of influence wid' 'im on them points, eh?" and he gave Tom a vigorous poke in the ribs.

"Oh! shut up," said Tom, "that rattle-clap tongue of yours is always clattering about something."

"All right, me bye, 'tis Michael McCarty knows a thing or two, an' he has the tongue to tell ye of it. I'd arrah, I've been kapin' me two eyes open meself, this summer, an' I've changed the song I sung ye in the spring like this—"

Tom Shane's lily of some good sense—He's goin' to use it all,
An' from the looks of things just now,
Bedad he'll marry this fall,
Bedad he'll marry this fall,
An' from the looks of things just now,
Bedad he'll marry this fall.

That is, ye know, if he can get his father's consent."

The laugh was at Tom's expense, and they retired in good humor.

"Mike's surmise was correct, for hundreds in a single fold, but this should be so large that all and each can get at the feed at the same time.

Cattle, especially the milky mothers of the herd, should have a full share of the farmer's care and attention. They cannot be hearded together in a fold like sheep. They can, however, be made comfortable in stalls without extra partitions.

In fixed stanchions, which are still in use in most dairies, the cow puts her head through a Y-shaped stanchion, the right-hand upright of which fastens at the top and the whole assumes the shape of the Roman II when the head is in. I have favored a single pole with a cattle tie adjustable to the size of the neck.

Recently I have seen what may be called an improvement on either of the given methods. The stanchion consists of two round, upright poles of even size and smoothly rounded, fixed on a round disk made of plank above and below, which allows the whole stanchion to turn or revolve at the will of the cow; that is to say she can turn her head by her side—the general natural position—while lying down or while standing, turn either way to lick herself or rid herself of a fly. With the old stanchions she could not do so, which was and is the principal objection.

Warmth, more or less, is needed by all animal life, more directly by warm-blooded creatures. When it comes to health and thrift or growth it is produced by food, which is as fuel to a furnace or stove, and consumed by warm stables.

Cattle, horses and sheep will consume (and need it, also) from one-third to one-half more of feed during winter under open sheds or with no shelter overhead, than live stock well housed in barns and stables.

Nothing looks more pitiful than to see the side of a rail fence in a snowstorm. A man who will subject his animals to such treatment is not a farmer, for he does not even study his own best interests. There may be some readers who would be profited by these hints if they would put them to a practical test.

Romanco no More in Farming.
The cutting of a field of grain to day presents a very different spectacle from what it did then. They are not yet seen on every farm, but they are sufficiently numerous to be looked upon as the first process of harvest—"American respect and binders" have usurped the places of men and women. But a few years ago a harvest field was a scene of animated human happiness; it is now little better than a dull, uninteresting spectacle of the latest mechanical appliances. "The Reaper and Binder" is dragged from side to side of a field; and in a few hours the grain has been cut and in a few hours bound, and left in the most formal of rows without human hand ever having touched it. No wonder the people are leaving the rural hamlets and villages; they are not needed. Formerly all hands, those of young as well as those of the old, were needed most in time of harvest; in a year or two they will everywhere be then required least. It is pleasant, amidst all this want of life, to recall how in the poem the soldier on duty in a far distant land in the slumbers of the night, dreamed that returning home, he had reached his ancestral property, and among the pleasant things that greeted his ears were these:
"I heard my mountain goats bleating aloft,
I knew the sweet strains that the corn reaper's sang."

THE END.

Tom Shane and Mrs. Tracy were married the next winter, and it was her influence which had worked a change in Tom's thoughts and actions towards the lower animals.

The summer wore away and the winter was coming on. Shane's corn crop was in the crib, and had yielded far beyond his expectations, and his horses were sleek and fat and happy.

He had brought the carpenters up from the village to repair the stables so that no cold blasts of winter winds would blow on his horses. He had bought blankets for his horses—something he had never done before.

The cold weather came on apace, and about the middle of November there came a snowstorm. The pitiless blasts of wind drove the snow in blinding sheets across the fields, and made the warm fireside in the Shane household seem doubly dear to all who love a home.

Edith was standing at the window watching the gusts of wind drive the snow about.

"Oh! say, papa, there is some animal down at the gate," said Edith.

"Are any of ours out?"

"I think not," he said, coming to the window. "Ah! it is that old mule that has been living in the highway all summer."

"Whom does it belong to, papa?"

"I don't know; it is a stray. It looks like a shame to let the old fellow stand out there and starve," said Shane.

"Let's take him in until the storm is over, anyhow," said Edith.

"Well, it shall be done," said Shane. "Tom, you and Mike go and put that old mule in the back stall and give him something to eat."

The mule, much to his astonishment, was driven into the stable and put in a warm stall. Corn and hay were put before him, and he ate and proceeded to fill his empty stomach without any thought of saying grace.

"How is this?" he cried to Dobbin; "there's been some change since I was here before."

"Well, I should say so," said Dobbin. "We have everything here cooked up for now."

"Well, I'm glad to hear that," said the mule, "and if I can get a job here I'm going to stay."

"I hope you will," said Dobbin, for he all felt kindly towards you for instructing us how to carry on the strike."

"Well, there's one mule thoroughly surprised," said Tom, after they had returned to the house, "I never saw an animal look so surprised as he did when we put him in the stable; an' the way he shook the snow off his old faded hide and went for that corn was a sight to see."

"Well, it won't cost much to keep him, an' I guess we'll just let him stay this winter, and the mule got the job."

"That's right, Mister Shane, an' the good God will give ye credit for it in the next world," said Mike.

"And all God fearing people will give ye credit for it in this world," said Mrs. Shane.

"The satisfaction of a good easy conscience is all the reward I want," said Shane.

Prosperity smiles on John Shane's farm; and no consideration would induce him to return to the old way of living. May the time soon come when all men will recognize the fact that the laws of God and humanity require us to be merciful to the dumb animals, and to grant the same justice and mercy to them we would ask for ourselves.

Comfort for Cattle.
Winter will soon be here. A merciful man is merciful to his beasts. With regard to live stock, the merciful man will make even his stable comfortable. Horses, cattle and sheep must not only be fed and watered, but they must be housed whether in barns or folds or stables.

Valuable horses are kept in single, rooney stalls and generally are not confined by halters. Others are tied up, sometimes in single or double stalls.

Mates of good disposition can be made comfortable in double stalls.

Brood mares should have a single stall.

Sheep may be put by fifties or hundreds in a single fold, but this should be so large that all and each can get at the feed at the same time.

Cattle, especially the milky mothers of the herd, should have a full share of the farmer's care and attention. They cannot be hearded together in a fold like sheep. They can, however, be made comfortable in stalls without extra partitions.

Half an hour later his friend met him again.

"Hello," he exclaimed. "I thought you were going away on the 2.50 train?"

"I was, but I missed it."

"The friend looked grave."

"Why don't you sell that horse?" he asked.

"What do I want to sell him for?" answered the owner, indignantly.

"For anything you can get."

"Oh, come now! What do you mean?"

"I mean I'd sell him. I wouldn't keep a 2.50 horse that couldn't catch a 2.50 train."

Answered.

It is not always safe to be too confident in your assertions, even to an ignorant man, for he may get the better of you in an argument. This truth was well illustrated in a story told at a recent conference in England on technical education in villages.

One speaker, referring to the prevalent ignorance about common things said that he once saw a laborer digging flats in the chalk, and asked him if he thought they grew.

"No," was the reply. "I don't think about it; I knows they do."

"Then place a flint on your chimney piece, and see how much it grows in a twelve-month."

"All right, sir, and do you do the same with a tater and see how much that grows?"

He was Feeling.

"Young man," said the aristocratic colored citizen, leaning back in his chair, "haven't I seen you before?"

"I don't know, sah," responded the colored waiter, depositing the plate of soup before him and placing the salt at Dabney Village in de Miday last summer?"

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., NOV. 30, 1894.

Hon. J. A. Ouimet and party arrived home from the Lower Provinces on the 18th. The minister of public works states the resources and industries of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick were a revelation to the Quebecers.

The Yale Princeton football game will be played on December 1st, at Manhattan field, New York. The athletic committee of the University Athletic club has accepted the offer of the New York Baseball club and will pay the rental of $5,000 demanded.

The ACADIAN thanks its many friends for contributions of news and other matter. We would like to have a newsy letter from every town and village in the county. Subscribers in town will also do us a favor by handing in any matter of public interest that may come to their notice.

A telegram to Harvard College Observatory from Lowe Observatory, California, announces the discovery of a comet by Edward Swift. The position of the comet on Nov 20, at 8 o'clock was right ascension 22 hours, 18 minutes, 26 seconds; declination south, 13 degrees, 7 minutes. It is faint with a short tail, and has a slow easterly motion.

The editors of the Acadia Athenaeum are making preparations to issue a Christmas number, the first in the history of that journal. It will have portraits of President Sawyer, Dr. Jones, the football team, the editors, the Academy staff, Miss Graves, the officers of the Y. M. C. A., Proprietor society, the College quartette, etc., and should be well received by the many friends of Acadia.

A very touching story is told of the Car. It was at the close of one of those annual visits to Denmark in which he found his chief relaxation and delight. He was saying good-bye to his favorite niece, the daughter of the Prince and Princess of Wales. "Good-bye, my dear," he said, as he kissed them, "you are going back to your happy English home, and I to my Russian prison." A sad commentary truly upon the splendors of a despotic throne.

We observe that the Liberal papers are much distressed over the fact that Sir Charles Tupper, Bart., has been trying to use his influence on behalf of the cattle trade of Canada members make a great time about the uselessness, as they allege, of the High Commissioner, but whenever he does anything for Canada they are still more distressed eyes to do or say anything on behalf of Canada. Well, that sin can scarcely be charged to the opposition. And yet Canada goes on her way.

The Boston Herald says: "A college alumnus was indignant because the newspapers do not recognize the fact that football as played under the new rules this season is a comparatively harmless game. No doubt the rigors of the game have been modified somewhat; but it will have to be allowed that three broken collar-bones, one broken leg, one splintered rib, one twisted jaw, one set of teeth knocked out, one twisted leg, prodding water on the knee, and three sprained ankles, which is the record at Harvard so far this season, indicates room for still further improvements."

A writer in a Halifax paper well says: "It matters very little whether or not the citizens of Halifax will do themselves the honor of erecting a monument in one of their public squares to the memory of this great man, for as long as each returning spring will bring its Mayflower of which he sang so sweetly; as long as the hearts of Nova Scotians, whom he loved so well" will throbb, so long will the memory of Joseph Howe be cherished and loved in his own Acadia."

"Can storied urn or animated bust Back to its mansion call the fleeting breath; Can honor's voice provoke the silent dust, Or flattery soothe the dull cold ear of death?"

The Harmonic Quartette Concert.

Many of the leading papers in the country have been loud in the praise of the Harmonic Quartette which is now billed for College Hall on Friday evening Dec. 7th. The Halifax Evening Mail says: "The Harmonic Quartette Concert last evening was a decided success in every respect. They are a team that will go a long time unmatched. They sang two pieces in Halifax last night that have never been equaled around here in point of harmony and expression."

The Halifax Herald speaks of the Quartette as follows: "The Harmonic Quartette Concert given last evening in Orpheus Hall attracted a large and fashionable audience. Nearly every seat up stairs and down was occupied. A more evenly balanced Quartette has never sung in Halifax, and their careful attention to detail called forth the most pronounced echoes of the evening. Mr Taylor was in good voice and sang "Shall I Wear a White Rose," in fine style. Mr Shute certainly is establishing a very favorable impression as a bass soloist, and has a very deep, powerful, yet sweet voice. Mr. Geo. Burgoyne sang, "The Messenger," in grand voice, his tenor is so flexible that, whether singing deep notes or those of the higher register, it is apparently no effort to him. The concert closed with the Quartette singing, "Good Night" and as a visible sign of recognition the audience actually remained seated until the last chorus was sung and then gave liberal applause, a fact seldom, if ever, seen at Concerts given in this city."

Baptist Church Notes.

A very interesting Harvest Thanksgiving Concert was given last Sunday evening by the Baptist Sunday School of this place. It was postponed from the evening of Thanksgiving Day on account of the preaching services on the Hill by Rev. Mr. Denovan. A number of beautiful hymns were sung by the school assisted by a large and well trained choir, under the leadership of Mr. Burpee Witter. Miss Ethel Johnson sang a solo, which was highly appreciated by all present. Mrs. Rockwell presided at the organ, and the effectiveness of the music was much enhanced by accompaniments on the violin by Miss John Jones. It is on the concert by Mr. Jones, that with so much musical talent in the church and congregation, there are so few who feel it a duty and privilege to assist in the choir in the ordinary Sunday services, and that so few are found to lift up their voices in the service of praise to God. A pleasing feature of the concert was the motion picture, a number of prettily dressed little girls from the primary class. Several recitations were given, with perhaps rather too much dramatic effort for the occasion. In spite of the unpleasant weather the church was filled, showing how much interest is felt in the work of the Sanglay school.

Mr. Geo. H. Wallace, the superintendent, is to be congratulated on the flourishing condition of the school at the present time. The attendance of scholars last week was 236, and the contributions to missions is upwards of $3.00 per Sunday.

The new adult class, conducted by Mr. E. W. Sawyer, has already a membership of about thirty, and it is expected that many more of the older members of the church and congregation will avail themselves of this grand opportunity for Bible study.

Dr. Jones makes his class as attractive as ever, and his class room is always filled to its utmost capacity. On Tuesday evening Rev. W. B. Boggs, D. D., gave a very interesting and instructive lecture on "The Realist; or the struggle for freedom of mind." This is the first of a course of six lectures in connection with the Christian Culture Class of the Young People's Union. Dr. Boggs has been conducting a weekly class in this society, for the study of church history, more especially considering the struggles for purity of religion and a spiritual church. The attendance at this class has been large, and much regret is felt that Dr. Boggs is compelled to give up his connection with it, having undertaken work in the States under the Foreign Mission Board. The class will be continued.

The missionary service next Sunday evening will be a "Conquest Meeting," under the auspices of the Young People's Union. An interesting programme has been prepared and some good music may be expected. Obituary. The Past Season's Crops.

In the review of this year's crops, issued from the local government's department of agriculture, we are told: "Our farmers have been able to take into their barns an exceptionally heavy crop of hay, which, as one farmer remarks, is our king of crops. It was saved in excellent condition and with unusually little labor. Only two counties, one at the western extremity of the province and the other in the Eastern Island of Cape Breton, have not quite an average; the crop in the other counties ranges from 100 to 150. The Cape Breton counties mostly show a great contrast to the poor crops of some previous years, although some districts give returns which, although higher than those of 1893, are still not equal to what used to be regarded as average crops."

Pasturage, however, was short owing to the prolonged drought of summer and autumn. There was also a remarkably light growth of after-feed, and dairy cattle suffered where roots or field fodder were not grown.

The potato crop, although not abundant, must be regarded as fair, considering the protracted drought, beetles and autumn rot. The quality is good.

Wheat and barley are not much grown with us now that grain prices are so low, but good returns are obtained. Not so with oats which raised badly or rather blighted, the result possibly in some cases of imperfect preparation of the soil. Buckwheat suffered from the summer frost in some places.

Mangies and turnips did well wherever the land was in good condition and good seed was sown in good time. The apple crop has proved satisfactory upon the whole, the only complaint being over ripening, so that some of the fruit may not keep as well as usual.

Nappan Dairy Station.

Prof. Robertson visited the dairy station at Nappan on Friday last. At that station butter was made in May and June, after which cheese making was followed. There are on hand about 670 boxes of cheese of the finest quality. These will be shipped next week either direct to Great Britain or to Montreal. Since October butter has been made at Nappan and the factories will be run all winter. The farmers are readily and heartily joining in winter dairying, and the commissioner says that most of the factories for the manufacture of cheese and butter will shortly be run the whole twelve months of the year, as regularly as foundries, furniture factories and other manufacturing concerns are kept going.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor of THE ACADIAN Dear Sir, - "Fair Play" in reply to "Fair Play" starts out with the assertion that if the Local Government considered a person intelligent enough to fill an office he possesses sufficient intelligence to know how and where to buy to the best advantage. We were not aware that Governments always made the wisest appointments or made intelligent and worth the essential requisites. There is one office in the gift of the Local Government having such an important bearing on the intelligence of the community as to demand the highest possible intellectual culture, and the most unquestioned patriotism, conditions of which evident.

In some cases have not been complied with. Hence we are not willing to accept the assumption that because one is a government official he is best qualified to instruct and guide the public, in fact.

"Fair Play" more than intimates that the Wolfville merchants are swindlers and extortioners. To the base charge of swindling we would say that such a man making such statements is beneath the dignity of any right thinking man of this community and it is with feelings of contempt we deign to answer him. To the charge of extortory we reply that this is rendered impossible by the regulations of trade. To establish this charge it would be necessary to prove a general agreement throughout the community, and the province, which would be impossible from the unalterable laws that govern supply and demand. But to so oblige a man as "Fair Play" shows himself to be, these principles of political economy can have no weight. He is evidently ignorant of the rudiments of political economy as he makes the glaring assertion that the merchant exists for the benefit of the citizen, implying the citizen tolerated him only as he was useful, and could and should throw him overboard when desirable. The fact is they mutually exist for each other. The citizen, antiques the merchant, who is the outgrowth of our higher civilization and the imperative demands of trade. In the days of barbarism such did not exist. As people became more enlightened and led intercourse with each other it became necessary that some of their number should be educated in the ways of effecting exchange. All could not act in this capacity, as they had neither time nor ability. No principle in political economy is a just one that is not universally beneficial and applicable. How then can it be possible for the highest good of the community to be served by each individual being left to devise ways and means to exchange his commodities for those of other lands. It must be evident to all intelligent minds that it is better to employ the skill of those who have made a specialty of this line of work, and it is the "imperative duty of the citizens to deal with the local merchant" in so much as in dealing with them the citizens benefit themselves by the advantage of the skill thus employed for them. Hence merchants are a beneficial outgrowth of our civilization. Dr. Wayland, an eminent authority in political economy, says that "retail dealers are as necessary to the prosperity of a country and to the cheapness of production, as any other class of persons; and it will be found very universally that it is much more economical to employ their services, than for a man to undertake to do their business for himself."

"Fair Play" complains that the condition of our merchants is such that very few persons would desire to reside here. Surely, such unwarranted statements as his must have an injurious effect upon those contemplating a residence in Wolfville.

Letter of Condolence. At a session of Pioneer Grange held at Upper Pexaux on the 20th of Nov. the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved that we the members of Pioneer Lodge No. 21, now in session assembled will humbly bowing to the Divine Will, desire to express our deep regret for the loss Bro. D. B. Sandford has sustained, in that death has again entered his home and taken his infant daughter who died on the 20th inst. We hereby tender to him and his dear companion our sincere sympathy and condolence, and commend them to Him who alone can soothe and soften sorrow and bereavement and fill all vacant places with His Holy presence and mighty love.

And further resolved that a copy of the above be sent to him and also that it be sent to the local papers for publication. C. W. MCKENZIE, Secy. P. G.

The Delineator for January which is called the holiday number offers a table contents that is extremely attractive and procures well for the New Year. The Fashion is illustrated and described in the usual satisfactory manner, and there is a special article appropriate for the season on "Misses and Girls' Party Dresses." In the "Gossip Series" a new departure is made, and the description of life at the Co-Educational Institutions is begun, the first article being on Cornell, from the pen of Florence M. Hodder. A very readable paper by Alice McKenna treats of Women in Telephone Exchanges, and the Hygiene of the Eyes and Ears in the subject of an able contribution by A. B. Longstreet. A second instalment on Dressing Dolls appears in the Uses of Crepe and Tissue Papers, and in Vestment Iron Work are shown some very pretty and original designs for photograph sets to be made at home. The spirit of the time is reflected in the Display of the Shape, and Among the Holiday Books; and there is exceedingly pretty "Good Night" Drill for Children. Reasonable cooking is made more valuable to the house keeper by the addition of lists showing what fish, fowl, and vegetables are to be procured in the markets. There is advice on How to Serve Bananas, and a continuation of the articles on the Home.

There are also Around the Tea-Table and Floral Work, and New Home Designs in Knitting, Tatting, Crocheting, Lace-Making, etc. Subscription price of the Delineator, $1.00 a year, or 15c per single copy. Avoid Trouble at Home.

USE ONLY THE RELIABLE DIAMOND DYES.

It is well known that the ladies of Canada often experience trials and tribulations in the household management.

These small but irritating troubles can be avoided if a little care and common sense is exercised.

Women who go on suffering these little miseries have themselves to blame, as they suffer through their own carelessness and inexperience.

To-day, one great source of annoyance in the household is the use of poor imitation dyes for domestic dyeing.

In some sections of our land, the ladies have lifted up their voice against them in a way which cannot be misunderstood.

These imitation dyes have caused not only great loss of material and money, but anger and heartache as well.

All these domestic trials and tribulations are avoided when Diamond Dyes are used.

By their use, work is well and quickly done; results are always grand, and the colors are brilliant and lasting.

Ladies who have used Diamond Dyes for the last ten years know their great worth and always insist upon getting Diamond Dyes from your druggist or dealer.

The Thanksgiving concert in the Baptist church on Sunday evening, was very good. The little girls and boys looked well and spoke their parts nicely.

The well and spoke their parts nicely. The managers of the concert deserve the thanks of the congregation for their labors in training their children. It must have required no small amount of ability and patience. The music was especially good. Why can there not be something like that every Sunday?

Of course not the same pieces but will there not be a large choir that will include the good voices heard on Sunday evening, that will take in violins, cornets and enough musical ability to fill the church with sweet and powerful music?

Evidently the talent is in the congregation. Why is it not used? It ought to be in the choir.

Don't forget the date of The Harmonic Quartette Concerts next week. They will be in Acadia Villa School Hall on Tuesday evening Dec. 4th, and in College Hall Wolfville on the following Friday evening Dec. 7th. No one can afford to miss this musical treat.

Rev. J. Denovan preached a very able sermon to the members of the Institutions on the evening of Thanksgiving Day. Why does not some College enable us to write D. D. after Mr Denovan's name? Certainly he deserves the degree. It seems very hard not to call him Doctor.

Reconciliation. If thou wert lying cold and still and while in death's embrace, O mine enemy!

A Grateful Girl. The Experience of a Young Lady in Montreal who Expected to Die—How Her Life Was Saved.

Industry and Faith. The busy man has more leisure than the indolent man. I have never had any difficulty in arranging an interview with a man who was doing a hundred things regularly, but I have had great difficulty in fixing a man to a definite appointment who has nothing to do.

A Well Man. No more robust individual to be found in the village. Richmond, Nov. 28—Dr. A. G. McCormick, whose letter respecting his cure from Bright's disease by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills, has recently been published, is now attending his patients and is apparently as robust a man as can be found in the village.
