What Shall We Do For Our Crippled Soldiers?

By J. S. DENNIS, of the C.P.R.

It is interesting and gratifying to note the application of thought and skill with which Canada is undertaking the great problem of caring for those of our soldiers who have received injuries in the battles of France. Napoleon would change his opinion that "Republics are ungrateful" could the "Little Corporal" learn of the plan of action worked out for the care and retraining of our boys who are returning crippled and maimed from the trenches of France and Belgium, so that they will be able again to take their places in the ranks of self-supporting soldiers of industry.

We have only to turn back to the history of the civil war to learn the reason for Napoleon's declaration. The maimed veterans of the Union Army were received as heroes, banqueted and fêted, provided with artificial limbs, consigned to the class of public charity, and all too soon permitted to drift into the almost hopeless battle for livelihood in a world that promptly forgot their heroic deeds. Little wonder that also homes under the name of soldier homes were found necessary in every section of the country.

Canada is going about this great problem in an entirely different manner. The Military Hospitals Commission has inaugurated the principle of caring for the crippled soldier for the battles of civil life as an integral part of his military training. Vocational training even during his hospital stay has already demonstrated the wisdom of this plan. Many men who have suffered such losses as that of an arm or a leg, or the sight of an eye, have been enabled through the training received to earn a better living than before they were injured.

THE COAL SHORTAGE

THE anticipated shortage in hard coal affecting thousands of Canadian homes may become a reality, says a writer in the Halifax Herald. This is the opinion of railway men who say that while they are doing everything possible to keep the coal supply flowing, the cooperation of the consumer side is necessary to meet an undoubtedly serious situation.

Faith.

The sea was rocking at my feet, and looking out across the bay, where placid waves and heaven met, I thought me of the other side.

"Somebody's Mother."

General Goodwin sighed as he turned his back upon the little Devonshire village. The jagged rocks and the sea seemed more wonderful than ever, but his backward glance was not at either sea or rocks. Instead his glance was riveted on a tiny vine-clad cottage with roses climbing in at the casement windows and a sweet little white-haired lady dwelling within.

At least the General supposed her to be sweet. He felt sure that one whose eyes met the passerby with so free an expression could not be otherwise. Roses and birds evidently found her gentle and kind, for they haunted every available nook of her small property.

The General had found no way of meeting the little lady during her stay in Lee, and it was with heartfelt regret that he made his way back to London. But even Gen. Goodwin, in his 60th year, was not free to travel; his path in his own pleasure.

But the train went Londonward, and with it went the General's impression that he had bought the daily paper, but it was not until he had reached his own library that he saw her picture in the Sketch.

His eyes lit up with frank amazement, so curious was the coincidence. The picture was one of several. A number appeared each day in the paper, and were those picked up on the field of battle or found on the person of brave soldier laddies.

envisioned in upon you among your roses and birds I would not have known that "Somebody's Mother" was you.

"The little lady looked back at him with a charmingly frank look of happiness in her eyes."

"Somebody's mother" brought memory back to her son. His first rational words were, "Mother, mother, mother!"

"All the World at War an Accomplished Fact." A day when all the world should be at war has often been the subject of sensational fiction and those who profess to read the riddles of prophecy have often prognosticated it; but to-day it is practically an accomplished fact. It is surprising how little of the world is not involved in this stupendous conflict.

"Child Was Nervous, Irritable, Tired Out." She Had No Appetite, and Her Complexion Was Pale and Sallow. How many parents realize the strain which going to school means to the child who is naturally nervous and irritable? You see them come from the schools daily with pale faces, many with a little extra excitement, and when they get home they are irritable and nervous. If they are to grow to healthy maturity, their nervous system must have attention now. Such treatment as Dr. Cassell's Nervine Food does for children is the only one that is safe and effective. We are constantly receiving letters from grateful parents telling us that their Nervine Food has done for their children. This one is a fair sample.

"Languages of the World." How many men it asked how many languages there were in the world could give anything like an accurate answer? The average man's knowledge or ability to speak languages rarely exceeds two besides his native tongue. The Emperor Francis Joseph, when visiting a Red Cross Hospital, spoke with the patients in their languages, which showed the aged Emperor to be master of six.

House of Commons.

The Laurier referendum was defeated by a majority of 63 for selective draft. We wish to congratulate those Liberals and French Canadians who stood by the Premier in his insistence on enforcement of the brave volunteers on the firing line.

Eight out of the nine provinces are in favor of conscription without the waste of time that would be involved in the referendum or an election. Parliament never stands higher in the eyes of the people than when it sinks party differences in a great cause.

The country demands the most cordial co-operation between parties in the enforcement of the adoption of the selective draft. The vote was a triumph for Sir Robert Borden and for the courageous policy which he advocated upon his return from intimate consultation with the Canadians in the northern part of France and with the Imperial Government.

For a long time no one has thought less of politics, no man has been more completely absorbed in the great problem of winning the war. He offered coalition to Sir Wilfrid Laurier on the most generous terms. He still labors to have Liberals, labor men and grain growers join his administration for the period and purpose of the war.

Sir Robert Borden thus continues to be the man of the hour. The time of trial has revealed his remarkable ability. Physically, intellectually and morally he is equal to the great demands made upon him—a great Canadian leader.

Our Ottawa Letter.

Ottawa, June 28.—During the course of the debate on Compulsory Military Service Mr. Lemieux and several other Liberals made violent attacks upon the Government in regard to Quebec Province. Among other things they alleged that a Methodist clergyman, the Rev. C. A. Williams, had been appointed Chief Recruiting Officer and they ridiculed the idea of putting such a person in the position of Chief Recruiting Officer among the French speaking people.

The fact is that Mr. Lemieux and the other extremists of his party were entirely misrepresenting the matter. That is how these gentlemen make arguments. They put falsehoods on record. Later they have to withdraw them. But the falsehoods get into the official records and go abroad for truth.

The Rev. Mr. Williams was not Chief Recruiting Officer for Quebec. He was appointed a Chief Recruiting Officer for the English speaking people in that province.

Sir Edward Kemp, Minister of Militia, put this matter very clearly during his speech the other day. He said:

'My honorable friend from Rouville, (Mr. Lemieux), referred to a certain recruiting officer in Montreal known as the Rev. Major J. A. Williams. He thought it was unreasonable to have a Methodist clergyman recruiting amongst French Canadians in Montreal. I believe the honorable member for Rouville and this clergyman are old friends and on intimate terms. The Rev. Major C. A. Williams was not appointed for the purpose of recruiting amongst French Canadians. An attempt was made to get certain clergy of the Roman Catholic church in the province of Quebec to co-operate in recruiting, but these efforts did not meet with success. I repeat that Major Williams was not appointed for the purpose of recruiting among the French Canadians. He is a gentleman of very high standing in Montreal, and has done splendid recruiting work amongst the English speaking population there. There have always been attempts to form committees and associations to help recruiting. The last attempt, and some reference has been made to this, was made by an officer of very high repute indeed, General Lennard, accompanied by Colonel Blondin, he started a campaign for recruits in the province of Quebec. Both of them canvassed many parts of the province and their efforts were rewarded by the enlistment of 221 soldiers made up as follows:

Recruits obtained in the province of Quebec, 92; transfers from Winnipeg, Calgary and Edmonton, 90; transfers from other units, men who were left behind in hospital and afterwards discharged and transferred, 35. Total, 217.

Sad Fatality.

The many Wolfville friends of Rev. Dr. W. H. Young, and those who were students at Acadia during that period of the nineties when he was Professor of English, will be saddened to hear of the terrible accident by which his wife and younger daughter, and his sister, Miss Anna Young, were killed and he himself severely injured. Details of the fatal occurrence have been received in a letter from his daughter Eleanor to relatives in Greenwich.

On May 1st, it being his sister's birthday, they all went for a "joy ride." On approaching a railway crossing Dr. Young asked his wife to look at her watch to see if it was time for the noon passenger train, and finding it was not, they went on. A ware-house prevented them from seeing the tracks, and the train was coming silently without any signal or warning being given.

The doctor's car was demolished; his wife and sister were instantly killed and his daughter Gay and himself were taken up unconscious. The daughter was taken to a hospital in Augusta where she died the next morning, and he was taken home. His injuries were found to be not serious and he is recovering.

His daughter Eleanor was summoned from Denver, Col., where she was teaching, and arrived on the day when her mother and sister were laid to rest. Miss Anna Young's body was sent for burial to Washington, D. C., where she made her home.

Dr. Young expects to remain at his home in Thompson, McDuffee Co., Georgia, U. S. A., until October, when he will go to Denver to live with his daughter Eleanor. He has been pastor of the Baptist church at Thompson nearly two years.

As both he and his family were well known here, this account is sent with considerable detail. It was only very recently that the facts were known to anyone here.

Guard Baby's Health in Summer.

The summer months are the most dangerous to children. The complaints of that season, which are colic, infantum, colic, diarrhoea and dysentery, come on so quickly that often a little child is beyond aid before the mother realizes he is ill. The mother must be on her guard to prevent these troubles, or if they do come on suddenly to cure them. No other medicine is of such aid to mothers during the hot weather as is Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the stomach and bowels and are absolutely safe. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Honor Roll. Many hearts were made sad a few days ago when Mr. Charles A. Jordan, of Newentville, received official notice that his son, Clifford H. Jordan, had fallen in battle "somewhere in France" on Saturday, June 16th.

He heard his country's call and enlisted March 11th in the Wolfville detachment of the 21st Battalion of the Highland Brigade and went overseas last October. He was sent in a draft across to France last March, to reinforce the 8th, where he was nobly doing his "bit" for "home and native land," a hero at the age of 20 years.

Clifford was a quiet boy, a good son and loving brother, and leaves to mourn his early death, besides his parents, two brothers, Spurgeon and Percy, at home; two brothers settled on farms of their own; two small brothers at home and five sisters. Many friends and neighbors join in sympathy in this time of sorrow.

Does Mr. Civic Pride Live in Wolfville?

There he goes down the street, bright, alert, full of vim and optimism. HE IS MR. CIVIC PRIDE.

His step is light, his manner is easy and confident, he has that look of confidence that radiates confidence. Mr. Civic Pride is a tonic.

There are no such things as grouches in his make-up. "Haven't time for 'em," he laughingly says and bids a cheery good-morning here and waves a hearty hand there. People cheer up under the warming touch of Mr. Civic Pride, look after him and feel a glow that was not there before.

Striding down the street to work, drawing deep of the fresh morning air, life and town looks good to him. He notices neighbor Brown raking the lawn mower over his lawn and stops to congratulate him on the smooth, velvety green of it.

"That lawn of yours is the real thing, John—say, this is some town, isn't it?" Civic Pride calls in parting, and leaves Brown in a glow.

"Must drop in and see Jim," says Civic Pride to himself, and swings into the shop of Smith, the clothing merchant. In a moment he has made his selection. "It is the home town merchant for me every time, Jim. You see it is like this—if the town is good enough for me to live in and get my living out of it is good enough to get my money. That is the way I look at it and a whole lot of other people are coming around to the same view. I believe in this town and I am going to give it my best," said Civic Pride.

Down the street he went again. "Must get those shoes for the boy to-day," he said and blithely calls on Williams, the shoe man. "John," he said, "there are a lot of people who send away for everything they buy. I'm going to tell you just what I take every opportunity to tell everyone else, I have travelled a good deal but you have just as good a selection of shoes as can be found anywhere. And it is just the same with all of our merchants. They have the goods if the people will come in and ask for 'em. By the way, John, I suppose you will subscribe to the band?"

"Anything to help out the town," says Williams, marking himself for a generous amount. "That's the spirit I find among all of our merchants," says Civic Pride, "and it sure does mean a lot to the town."

Civic Pride is off again down the street, head in the air, proud to be associated with such men as Brown and Smith and Williams.

"Hold up there," he laughed to himself, "I was feeling so good I nearly forgot that chair I wanted," and he dashed into the shop of Henderson, the furniture man.

"Dan," he said, "if everybody would come in here and give you a chance they would find that you can't be beaten in either quality or price. I know that, because I visited some of the stores in the bigger cities just to find out. Of course, even if you asked a trifle more for your goods, I would buy here because I believe in keeping my money here to build up the town and because I know it is better business in the end. For spot cash Dan, they can't beat you, that's straight."

What a wonderful force is Civic Pride, always optimistic, cheery, eager to praise and advance his town! He believes in his own home town merchants, really, a town cannot prosper unless the money earned there is largely put back into it. Think it over.

Do you believe in Civic pride? Buy at home Buy from the home town merchants. Buy and Boost. This is the great BUY-AT-HOME Campaign. "BUY AT HOME."

Will Women Volunteer?
THEY MAY SERVE, IF THEY WISH, IN THE LAST LINE OF TRENCHES--THE TILLED FIELDS.
Thousands of the men who used to do the farm work in Nova Scotia are now fighting overseas. Their places must be filled. Yet the required number of men is not forthcoming. There are more jobs than there are men available.

THEREFORE WOMEN ARE ASKED TO VOLUNTEER FOR THIS WORK
We want the names and addresses of all women in this Province who are able to engage in a healthful open-air occupation. Applicants should state the date they can begin work and the length of time they can spend on the farm. Wages according to ability will be paid. We believe that the women of Nova Scotia will respond to the call of the land as promptly and as efficiently as did their sisters in the countries of our allies.
Address at once either to W. E. Porter, Kentville; H. E. Calkin, Kentville; John E. Woodworth, Berwick; Secretaries of Labor Exchange, or to the Secretary of INDUSTRIES AND IMMIGRATION, HALIFAX.

The People's Forum.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ACADIAN.
DEAR SIR,—As a reader of your paper, I noticed the letter entitled 'Confused,' signed 'Subscriber.' In my mind that was a letter worth reading and I say to 'Subscriber,' Bravo.
The present writer has often had the same idea about prayer for our noble Premier and wondered why his name should not be mentioned. God help him. He is indeed a grand leader and one worthy of the very best thoughts and good wishes of the whole Dominion. Some people in this town know him personally and say one who has seen either him or his pictures can see he is a true, noble gentleman. He certainly has a great burden on his shoulders and we should help him by our prayers. He is the right man in the right place. 'Subscriber' quoted a couple of lines of a poem composed by Capt. John McCrea, of Gaelph, who is with a detachment from McGill University now serving at the front. Poem reads:
In Flanders fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place, and in the sky
The larks still bravely singing, fly,
Scarce heard amidst the guns below.
We are the Dead. Short days ago,
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved, and now we lie
In Flanders fields.
Take up our quarrel with the foe,
To you from falling hands we throw
The torch—be yours to hold it high;
If ye break faith with us who die,
We shall not sleep though poppies grow
In Flanders fields.
One paper, speaking of this beautiful poem, said it was as pure a bit of poetry as ever had been written in the English language. Another said there was more direct appeal in these few lines than in a volume of large dimensions. Still another said this poem should be printed in every school book. But surely all who read it will think there is an appeal from the dead. Many of us have dear ones among the dead at the front, and there is a condition which we must very soon meet, or it will not be long before Canada is unrepresented there.
A READER.

War Prayers.
DEAR SIR,—The humorist who in your last issue mixes up pulpit war prayers, conscription, R. L. Borden, (Su) and prohibition, spicing his mixture with pepper for Quebec, after the usual manner of those patriots who think with their elbows and write with their heels, has at least the grace to entitle his article "Confused."
Out of his confusion I extract an opportunity to quote, with reference to war prayers, the following editorial utterance of the New York "Sun" which, one would think, must command itself to those of your readers who, refusing to wear specialties colored red, have preserved their sanity of mind, at least so far as discountenance introducing into Christian worship any elements of the Mohammedan creed.
This editorial, anti-dates the discovery of a limited liability God, by H. G. Wells or Mr. Britling, and has no bearing on that sort of thing. It reads thus: "There are at present five or six million nations on earth, divided into two camps, fighting each other to the death in a gigantic, ghastly, mad and cruel conflict. It is inconceivable that the Creator, the Omnipotent and Omnipresent, can take sides in this colossal, ungodly combat. The very idea is absurd to the verge of the ridiculous. It is primitive, reactionary, a kind of mental verminiferous appendix that has persisted in the mind of man for countless ages. It is unworthy both of God and man, and belittles the former, as it stultifies the latter.
A broader, grander conception of the Deity makes of Him a being who fights neither on the side of the strongest battalions nor of the weakest, whose purposes belong not to time but to eternity, and whose Kingdom is spiritual, not material. The victorious general who gives thanks to God for a bloody triumph over his fellow men is either a blasphemer without honor or a humorist without reverence."
This editorial dispenses of a current war time anthropomorphic conception of Deity and prayer typified by a bewildered father surrounded by a group of ill bred, disobedient, quarrelsome brats, each of them railing to him for vengeance on one or more of his little brothers and sisters for injurious treatment, and each of them confident of the father's sympathetic ear. Which is absurd, as Euclid says, if not blasphemous as well.
If the editorial sentiment quoted is not to be accepted, we are hopelessly relegated to a second absurdity; to a pantheon of tribal gods, partitioned into a nationalistic order. People sneer at the "good old German God," but the notion of a peculiar patron British God is old, and yet prevalent. It persists in the prayers you hear in church, and in that horrible thing, the war sermon. You will find it in the first stanza of "Rule Britannia," and, alas, in some hymns. It is indelibly stamped upon one of Britain's most famous pictures—to me a highly ludicrous one. I refer to "The Secret of England's Greatness."
Yours truly,
ANTH. HUMBOLDT.
