The Am. Novel of 1915.

MICHAEL O'HALLORHAN
by Gene Stratton Porter.

This is the story of Mickey the newsboy and his ward-peacher, whom he found with a crippled back and cried for until she was cured. It tells of Mickey's part in the romance of Douglas Bruce and Leslie Winton; and of the kindness of Peter Harding and his wife to peacher, and finally of Mickey's own love story with the wife he found years before.

The book possesses, like all of the author's works, a deep feeling, the nature, the charm of the woods, the flowers and all growing things.

"ECHOES of the Past;

OR, The Recompense of Love!"

CLIVE went down to Raiborough and, as in the case of his father's death, had to make all the necessary arrangements—he could not even communicate with Bertie, the present Lord Raiborough—and he was not able to return to town until ten days had passed. He had wired to Edith to say that he was coming, and she was waiting for him, looking very tall and queenly in her black frock, and Clive noticed a certain change in her face. She was pale and there were dark shadows under her eyes, which were unnaturally brilliant, as if she were feverish, and there was a certain restlessness about her movements which was unusual with her; at times, as they talked, a hectic flush rose to her face and her voice sounded hard and strained. Clive asked anxiously if she were not well; but she answered in the affirmative and with a laugh as strained and hard as her voice.

Of course they spoke of the wedding, and Clive was anxious to fix an early date, but they knew that it would be impossible for him to leave London until some of the affairs of the Raiborough estate were settled, and he left her, without any date having been decided on. Mechanically Clive walked toward the House; but he stopped short at the gates, for he felt that he could not bear the condolence which would be poured upon him, and he went to his rooms, but he did not feel equal to tackling the pile of letters that stood on his table, and, weary as he was, he could not rest; so he went out again and wandered about.

His brother's death, his own approaching marriage, the arrears of business, should have fully occupied his mind to the exclusion of any other subject, but he knew that he was trying to thrust Mina from his brain and heart. In such a condition, he wandered through the streets and presently came to the large and busy one from which led to Benson's Rents. As usual, the curbs were lined with costermongers' barrows at which the people were bargaining and haggling, and the noise and the bustle distracted and soothed him.

But presently, as he was making his way through the crowd, he stopped dead short and the blood rushed to his face. At a fruit-stall stood Tibby. Tibby, not dressed in fine apparel accentuated by an ostrich-feather, as he had seen her at the door of the concert-hall, but Tibby with a basket on her arm and with the peculiar head-gear surmounting her face as in the days before Mina's success.

Consumed by surprise and anxiety, Clive made his way to her side and spoke her name. She turned sharply and, with reddened face, regarded him with a half-guilty, half-defiant air.

"Oh, it's you, is it?" she said. Then she turned to the man at the barrow and went on with her haggling. "Three-pence a pound is too much," she said in a determined voice. "It would be too much if they was quite fresh, and they ain't. Them plums look to me as if you'd had 'em under the bed for a week; an' I shouldn't be surprised if you 'ad. I suppose you take me for a lady of title or a softy."

"No; I'm blessed if I do!" retorted the man. "The chap as took you for a softy would find he 'ad a 'arder nut to crack than his grinders could manage. Thruppence is my price, take 'em or leave 'em."

"Well, throw in a cabbage," said Tibby, "an' I'll take a pound."

"Wot, the whole of a pound!" he exclaimed satirically. "Sure you don't mean the barrow-load?"

"I'm not buyin' sauce, wholesale or retail," retorted Tibby. "If you don't care to serve me, I'll go to the next barrow, which is kept by a man who knows how to be civil, at any rate!"

"'Ere's the pound and 'ere's the cabbage," said the man, jabbing them into a basket; "an' my gratitude to a mussful Providence that I don't often 'ave such customers as you."

With a grin of satisfaction, Tibby paid her threepence and then turned to Clive.

"Oh, you're 'ere still," she said. "Wot do you want?"

"To carry your basket, Tibby," said Clive.

"Not for me," said Tibby. "I'm quite equal to carryin' it. I'm not used to 'avin' gentlemen, specially high parliamentary swells, waitin' on me. Good night, Mr. Harvey."

As she turned to go, Clive laid his hand on her shoulder.

"Are you treating me fairly, Tibby?" he said. "Have you treated me fairly in the past?"

She looked at him sideways. Perhaps his haggard face, his mourning-suit of black serge, appealed to her, for her eyes softened, but she said nothing. They walked side by side towards the Rents.

"You suppressed my telegram, you sent back my letter," said Clive. "That was very wrong, Tibby, and it worked a wrong, a very great one. But for you, Mina—his voice shook—"and I would have been married long ago."

She stopped short and looked at him. "Married!" she echoed. "D'you mean—"

Clive stared at her in amazement, and there was something in the expression of his face which struck her with conviction and something like remorse.

"I—I didn't know that," she faltered. "I thought you was only fooling with Mina, specially when I found out what a swell you were. Married!—but you're going to marry somebody else," she said, with sharp suspicion.

"That is true," he replied, "but—it it too long a story to tell you, Tibby. My lips are sealed. Never mind the or my affairs. I want to know why you are back here in London, as if you are good fortune had come to you. I want to know how Mina is—what has happened to send you back here. And you will tell me, Tibby? Come, you owe me something, you know—let me carry your basket."

She resigned it mechanically, and he took it. She was evidently much distressed and embarrassed, but the old spirit showed itself.

"Wotever I did, I did for the best," she said. "Mina's everything to me, and was I to stand by an' see her made a fool of, an' do nothin'? Wouldn't you have done the same, if you had been in my place? But wot's it matter! You're going to be married. An' that bein' so—" She broke off sharply. "Wot are you mooching about 'ere for? An' wot business of yours is Mina's affairs?"

"If you could read my heart, Tibby," said Clive, "you would have no need to ask. I have lost her forever—thanks to you and Fate. But do you think I don't care what becomes of her? I have heard that she has been ill. I want to see her—if for the last time."

"For the last time," she caught him up sharply. "D'yer mean that? If I've been hard on you, as you say, an' perhaps I have, I'll let you see her just once, for the last time, mind! Then we are quits. I don't mind owning that I've always liked you, an' if I'd thought you meant honest and strite by Mina— You will find her at home. I'll give you a quarter of an hour." She caught his arm as he turned without a word. "You'll be gentle with her? She's been ill."

Clive waited for no more, but walked quickly to the Rents. As he turned under the archway he almost ran against a man, and as he murmured an apology, something about the man struck him as familiar; but he was too agitated, absorbed, to pause, and, finding the door open, he went up the rickety stairs and knocked at the sitting-room door. His heart beat so painfully at the sound of Mina's "Come in" that he had to pause a moment.

She must have recognized his step, for she had started from her chair and was standing, looking toward the door, one hand gripping the chair, the other pressed against her bosom. For a moment there was silence, as he gazed at her and noted the pallor of her face, the profound melancholy in her eyes. Then he went to her and took her hand.

"Mina!" he said, "You have been ill, you are here, back here. I have just seen Tibby; she has told me nothing, but she has let me come to you—for the last time."

"I—I am glad it is the last time," she said.

She sank into the chair and he leaned against the mantel-shelf, looking down at her with all his love and all his despair in his eyes. "Yes; I have been ill," she said in a low voice. "I lost my voice. The doctor said I must rest—sometimes I think it will never come back. There was a clause in my agreement which protected the chevalier against the loss of my illness or the loss of my voice. We had saved a little money, not much, and Tibby—you know how careful she is!—she smiled—"

"thought it would be better for us to come back here. We had to wait some weeks until the rooms were vacant." She stopped.

It all seemed so commonplace, so banal, but tragedy is always hedged round by the commonplace, the banal. Here were these two with their love for each other burning like a devouring flame in their hearts, and they could say nothing, speak of nothing relating to the tragedy of their lives, though one of them knew that he had but a few minutes for this last farewell.

And across Clive's mind at that moment there flashed the remembrance of the fact that the girl who sat before him in this poor little lodging-room was not a London waif and stray, but the daughter of one of the wealthiest of peers.

"Mina!" he said, moved by a sudden impulse; "there is something, I must tell you, something you ought to know. It is not right that you should be living here, in something like poverty, while—"

She raised her eyes to his, and he saw that she knew.

"Mr. Quilton has told me," she said. "He has been very kind, kinder than any one would think it possible for him to be. Yes; he has told me. It is a secret between us, and I should not have told you of my knowledge if you had not spoken. It must be a secret still."

"Then you have decided, Mina?" said Clive, gravely.

"Oh, yes, yes, indeed!" she responded earnestly, the color rising to her face, her eyes dewy with tears. "Why should I rob that poor girl of her father? Why should I wound him? They have learned to love each other as father and daughter. To me he would be a stranger, I should be a stranger to him."

"You are a peer's daughter, all the same," said Clive.

"You are thinking of the title, the money?" she said. She shook her head. "They are nothing to me. I should not know what to do with them. No; if God will only give me back my voice—"

Her words failed her and she turned her head away. Clive did not speak for a minute or two. "Fate has been very hard on us, Mina," he said hoarsely. "It has sentenced one of us at least to a living death; there is no appeal, no escape. When I parted from you that morning at Brimfield I saw the folly, the wickedness of this loveless marriage of mine—yes, I must speak plainly, it is due to you. You know that I love you, Mina, and shall love you while life lasts. I had resolved to go to Lady Edith and tell her the whole truth, but almost on my way I discovered that she held the place in the world which belongs to you."

She looked up at him with the tears almost blinding her and held out her hand.

"I know, I know!" she broke in. "You could not—desert her. You would not have deserted me in such a case. Do you think I don't understand? It is hard for me—ah, no, no!" For naturally enough he made to draw her to him. "You must not, Clive, I should never forgive myself if I were to lead you to forget your duty to her. It is only the thought that you must do the right thing that helps me to bear my trouble. And I could not bear it if I saw you, even only now and again. You said when you came in that we were meeting for the last time, and it must be so. I won't ask you to forget me—I know that it would be impossible for me to forget you; but I will try to remember you, as a very good, very great friend. Don't be anxious about me. My voice will come back again, and if it should not, there are other ways of earning a living, and I shall learn to be content if not happy."

Clive turned away, for he could not look on her face and retain command of himself.

"It is good-by?" he said hoarsely, at last.

"It is good-by?" she echoed, holding out both her hands and trying to smile.

He took the trembling hands and bent over her, but he felt that to kiss her would be to outrage her sense of purity, to insult her martyrdom. He looked long into her eyes, then lingeringly dropped her hand and went out.

Tibby was waiting for him in the street. She opened her lips to speak to him, but the agony in his face struck her dumb, and with scarcely a glance at her he passed on. As he emerged from the Rents, a man stepped from an open doorway and looked after him with an evil glitter in his eyes. It was Koshki.

Clive turned away, for he could not look on her face and retain command of himself.

What Bulgaria Said to Britain.

Bulgaria! remember these words which you addressed to Great Britain in October, 1876, and to which you put your hand:—
"If ever the Bulgarians breathe again, if ever they succeed in throwing off the yoke of slavery which has weighed on them for five centuries, if ever they acquire the right to live, not as a nation of slaves, but as a free people governing themselves, the honour of the achievement will be due in the greatest measure to the noble English people."

Quoting this great statement, Mr. Athery-Jones, K.C., says in the Westminster:—"I share your view that the people of Bulgaria can never fight by the side of the Turk against the vindicators of their national existence."

EVERYDAY ETIQUETTE.

"Do you think it shows good taste to use affectionate terms on a postal card?" asked Elsie.
It is most improper. One should not even begin with, "My Dear" and in the signature the initials of the Christian name and the full name should be used," said her sister.

PEACE REPORTS.

LONDON, Nov. 2. Agent reports that Austria-Germany is about to initiate peace negotiations, the Rome correspondent of the Daily News, attributing his information to a trustworthy source, telegrams that the Pope is determined not to support any initiative towards peace, obviously inspired by the Austro-Germans, unless assured that there is a possibility that the Allies are favorable to consideration of the proposal. Switzerland also is determined to abstain from any peace negotiations which are foredoomed to failure.

TORPEDO BOAT SUNK.

LONDON, Nov. 2. The British Admiralty this afternoon announced that the British torpedo boat, No. 96, was sunk at Gibraltar yesterday, after being in collision.

WILL MAKE STATEMENT.

LONDON, Nov. 2. Sir Edward Carson is expected to follow Asquith in an important debate in the Commons to-day, with a speech explanatory of his resignation as Attorney General, and in a large measure critical of the Government's policy. According to the Times, Sir Edward holds very definite views both of the machinery of the Government and on the Balkan situation. It remains to be seen how far Asquith will permit discussions and criticisms to proceed. If the Dardanelles expedition comes up for debate, some important explanations are expected from Churchill.

KING CONFINED TO BED.

"CAN YOU AFFORD TO TAKE CHANCES?"

A little cold may not seem a dangerous thing—you may feel inclined to let it go on hoping that to-morrow it will be better—but can you afford to take chances! Just as the little insignificant acorn grows if let alone, to the mighty giant oak, that cough serious illness may grow to a very big tree. When a cough starts there's no telling where it will end. You know no doubt, of cases right among people you have known where serious complications and fatal illnesses have had their start from a neglected cough or cold.

A cold is more than inconvenient—it is dangerous—so the big thing is to find a reliable remedy—one that will give you quick, satisfactory relief.

There are many treatments that are recommended for a cough or cold but "STAFFORD'S PHORATONE COUGH and COLD CURE" is recommended to be the safest, surest and most satisfactory way to cure a cold, gripe, etc.

Price 25 cts.; Postage 5 cts. extra. Prepared only by DR. P. STAFFORD & SON, St. John's, Nfld. Manufacturers of 3 Specialties: Stafford's Liniment, Stafford's Prescription "A," Stafford's Phoratox Cough & Cold Cure.

CALM IN FRANCE.

PARIS, Nov. 2. Calm now prevails on the Western front. The announcement of the War Office this afternoon says merely that there were no important developments last night.

SERBIANS HOLD THEIR OWN.

SERBIAN (Official), Nov. 2. On Oct. 29th on the northwestern front, the enemy attacked in force on the right bank of the Penuza, and with less strength on the right bank of the Morava. In the centre the enemy was thrown back with great losses, after having approached within 500 metres of the Serbian position. On the remainder of the front there was no important change. South of the Morava towards Pirot, fighting is continued, as is also the case to the west of Zajcar.

THIRTEEN PERSONS LOSE THEIR LIVES.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2. Thirteen persons, six men, three women and four children lost their lives in a fire which destroyed a tenement house, 68 North Sixth St., in Brooklyn this morning.

Amusements.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN IN A WELL KNOWN POEM. The mid-week programme at the Nickel Theatre has been arranged to suit all tastes, and no doubt it will attract large audiences. In the first place the world's funniest comedian will be seen in "The Face on the Bar-room Floor." This is a great burlesque on the famous poem, and Charlie Chaplin is seen at his best in it.

This comedy is greatly in demand in America and Canada. "The Tray O' Hearts" will be continued and the thirteenth episode shown. "Countess Veschi's Jewels" is a thrilling two-part social drama which is sure to afford satisfaction to all. The Vitagraph Company presents an all-star Broadway drama in three parts entitled "How Cissy made Good." The heroine is brought face to face with all the players and directors of the Vitagraph Co., and in spite of their pranks she runs the gauntlet and makes good. The entire cast of the Vitagraph players will be seen in this novelty comedy-drama. The Theatre will remain open until 11 o'clock during the fall trade. The Nickel Theatre shows nothing but the best in pictures and to-day's programme is a top-notch. There are eight full reels. Be sure and attend to-day and spend an enjoyable evening.

AT THE CRESCENT.

The Crescent Picture Palace is showing a great Lubin three-reel feature to-day, "The Hermit of Bird Island." It is a sea drama of exceptional power and interest. "Poet and Peasant" is a very fine domestic drama featuring the stars Lottie Brescoe and Arthur Johnson. "The Fable of the Bachelor and the Back Pedal" is one of George Ade's best comedies. Mr. Dan Delmar sings his song in double voice to-day. This is a style of novelty singing that Mr. Delmar specializes in. Don't miss hearing him.

BRITISH THEATRE.

A programme of exceptional merit will be shown at the British to-night consisting of the Tenth Commandment in three subjects by the L.M.P. Universal, and two other good reels. Attention is again drawn to the performance on Thursday and Friday nights, when Mrs. Ayre will be heard in her best style, accompanied by Mr. Christian. We cannot too strongly emphasize the object for which Mrs. Ayre is giving her services, viz. that of contributing to the funds of the

"LOOKED THE PART."

Men must look right and be right to command success. Clear eyes, clear skin and clear brain mean money to the man who possesses them. Dull eyes, sluggish brain and a pimply, blotchy skin are a serious handicap. O'Mara's Hypophosphites will remove pimples and blotches, brighten the eye and increase vital power by giving you pure blood and good circulation. Price $1.00.

We recommend it because we know what it contains.

Following the meetings the Committee met at headquarters and finalized arrangements for the attendance of representatives at the booths to-morrow. To-night a mass meeting will be held at the Casino.

Constantine to Head Greek Army.

Rome, Oct. 26.—The forthcoming visit of the King of Greece to Saloniki, where he will probably assume command of the army, is strongly disapproved by his Cabinet. This has led to a report that a ministerial crisis is imminent, for efforts are now being made to persuade the King to abandon the visit. The Queen is likewise using her influence toward this direction, on the ground that the King's life might be endangered at Saloniki. Constantine, however, is asserting his own will. He decides his place is at the head of the army to defend Greece's territorial integrity, should

A Temperance Crank.

"Yes, I am a crank, and I am proud of it, for if any man has a right to be a 'temperance crank' it is I. I was but a little boy when I learned the cause of my mother's tears. When my father and mother were married, father's family thought that he was marrying 'beneath his social status.' He was rich and mother was poor. But long before father's death mother was the breadwinner of the family. I learned to lie awake those dreadful nights waiting, as I knew mother was sleepless in her own room for father's return. At first it was from the club. At last it was from the saloon. He had been well born, well educated, was a graduate of one of our best colleges, and before he was thirty he had a large law practice and was spoken of for an important judgeship. By the time he was 35 his friends used to shake their heads and shut their lips when others spoke of him. By the time he was forty he was lost. Everybody dropped him. His clients abandoned him, and only his distressed and tearful wife, my mother, stood by him. When he died a few formally condoned with his widow. Why should I not hate the saloon?—Dr. Henry W. Jenkins, in Gulf States Presbyterian.

Premier Asquith's Spirited Speech.

It is gratifying to find Prime Minister Asquith in his place in the House of Commons once more, and particularly to hear from him a plain statement of the situation. He is gifted with cogent and plain speech and with these qualities, his standing and the situation itself call for attention to his weighty utterance. In spite of casualties amounting to 377,000, General French had almost a million men under his command. The story of the Navy was most inspiring as was his review of the grand rally from the Overseas dominions. The dominant note of the speech was the grim determination to carry the war to a successful conclusion. He had full faith in the voluntary response to recruiting, but rather than not win, he would not hesitate to have recourse to compulsion. He told the country plainly that people must be prepared to make far greater financial sacrifices than they had done in the past, and that so long as he had health and strength and the confidence of King and people, he would not lay down the burden placed on him. The speech had the right ring about it. It voiced the grim will, dog determination of the people to win out, and its spirit will strike a chord of like grimness and determination, throughout the length and breadth of the Empire.

Shooting Accident

A message was received in the city to-day stating that Alfred Lane, of Gambo, had his arm blown off yesterday afternoon, presumably by the explosion of a gun. No particulars as to how the accident occurred have yet been received, but the message states that the unfortunate man has been taken to Grand Falls to be attended by Dr. Chamberlain.

Household Notes.

You can clean a white felt hat by mixing a little magnesia to a paste with cold water. The mixture should be brushed on to the hat very evenly and left to dry. Then brush off with a clean stiff brush.
The best method of cleaning colored embroidery at home is to use stale bread. Rub the surface lightly, in order to avoid spoiling the work; use a fresh piece of bread as soon as the other becomes soiled.
Good living is as much a case of careful planning as it is of spending money. Think before you buy, and do not put off planning a meal until almost meal time. Haste in this, as in anything else, means waste.
Instead of melting butter when you want to mix it with sugar, place the butter in a double boiler and allow it to get warm. It will then beat up very easily with the sugar, and will not cause the cake to be heavy.

AN EXTRA HOUR.—Realizing the benefit that Prohibition will mean to the working man, and to business generally, some of our city firms have decided to close their premises for one hour to-morrow, or give their employees extra time at meals to enable them to vote. We trust that every firm will grant this facility.

5:16th Day of the War

TO-DAY'S Messages.

NOON.

CARSON FOR SMALL CABINET.

LONDON, To-day. Sir Edward Carson, who resigned last month as Attorney-General, addressed the Commons yesterday, following the speech of the Premier. He said, in his opinion, the Cabinet, however useful in times of peace, was an organization and machine utterly incapable of carrying on the war under present conditions. It was his preference that the Premier should cut down the Cabinet to five or six men who would take the whole burden and responsibility.

WILL RECOGNIZE CARRANZA.

LONDON, To-day. Foreign Secretary Grey informed the Commons to-day that Britain intends to follow the course already taken by the States, regarding the recognition of the Carranza Government in Mexico. He said the Government was in consultation on the subject with its allies.

ASQUITH'S MASTERLY REVIEW OF SITUATION.

LONDON, To-day. In his address to the Commons yesterday, Asquith stated Sir John French was now in command of nearly one million men. Asquith said the total casualties in France and Flanders amounted to 377,000. He asserted that the Germans had not made a net gain of a foot of ground since April. The Premier accepted his full share of responsibility for the first attack on the Dardanelles which resulted in a failure with the loss of several capital ships. He said these attacks were made after full investigation and consultation with naval experts, and that it was sanctioned by the Government, notwithstanding some doubts in the minds of this Government's principal naval advisers. Reviewing the work of the British submarines in the Turkish campaign, the Premier said that in the Sea of Marmora, they had sunk or damaged two battleships, five gunboats, one torpedo boat, eight transports and 197 supply ships. Asquith said there was a full agreement between Britain and France to maintain the independence of Serbia, and not let her become the prey of Germany, Austria and Bulgaria. The Premier asserted the financial situation of Britain was serious, and that the nation must be prepared to make far greater sacrifice than it had yet done to enable it to sustain the burden imposed by the war. Asquith said he strongly believed the recruiting plan of Earl Derby would succeed, and that conscription would be unnecessary. He continued it is true that many parts of the horizon are overcast. The moment calls for three things: a proper sense of perspective, a limitless stock of patience, and overflowing reservoirs of courage, both active and passive. He referred to the small coterie of professionals which kept our enemies supplied daily with a diet of falsehoods. The Government, he said, had no interest concerning anything, subject to one over-riding consideration, that its disclosures would not assist Britain's enemies. How do we stand to-day? asked the Premier in August last year we were prepared to send abroad six infantry and two cavalry divisions. In the operations described by Field Marshal French, his command is not far short of a million men. To these must be added the troops in the Dardanelles, Egypt and other theatres of war as well as our garrisons and troops in reserve. How has this gigantic force been got together by a power which has never aspired to be a military power? First by the manhood of the United Kingdom. In the last fifteen months we have recruited—Asquith hesitated, then remarked I do not like to give the exact figures of men. The contribution of India was splendid, he continued; Canada contributed 96,000 men and officers; Australia 92,000; New Zealand 25,000; Newfoundland 1,500; Ceylon, Fiji and other parts of the empire have all sent contingents. Turning to the work of the navy in transporting the troops the Premier said two and a half million officers and men have been carried in addition to 32,000 sick and wounded, two and one half million tons of supplies, 50,000 horses and mules. Up to the present, he added, the loss of life on the whole of these gigantic overseas operations has been considerably less than one tenth of one per cent. There never has been anything comparable in history to the service of the navy. There they are men of the grand fleet living unnoted and unadvertised, performing with efficiency and vigilance which cannot be described, but which has cleared the whole of the high seas from one end to the other of German warships and mercantile mariners. Where is the great German fleet upon which so much money was spent? Locked up in the Baltic. It dare not show its face in the waters where it can be attacked. The whole maritime resources of Germany have been reduced to a sporadic and constantly diminishing effects of submarine. The Premier added that the war must be won. Rather than not win, he would have no hesitation about making fresh proposals to the House, involving some sort of legal obligation. Asquith asserted he was as confident as ever that the Allies were going to carry their righteous cause to a triumphant issue. He was not going to shift the burden from his shoulder until satisfied he was unable to bear it. He would not surrender the task so long as he enjoyed health, and the confidence of the King and country. In regard to the western front, Asquith said he had nothing to add to despatches from Field Marshal French, except that since last April, the Germans had not gained a single foot of ground, that indeed is an understatement of the case, he added. Referring to the eastern war theatre, the Premier paid a warm tribute to the fighting qualities of the Russians and expressed confidence in their ability before long to roll back the enemy. Premier Asquith remarked the British object in the east was to preserve the neutrality of the Arabs and safeguard British interest in the Persian Gulf and uphold the authority of the Union Jack in the east. With victorious forces are now within a measurable distance of Bagdad. He continued no operations had been conducted with greater brilliance or with better prospects of final success. Turning to the operations in the Dardanelles, for the launching of which Winston Spencer Churchill, their first Lord of the Admiralty, was attacked so strongly in many quarters, Asquith said from the moment Turkey declared war it was impossible to concentrate attention solely on the western front. The Turks threatened our Russian Ally and Egypt. The advent of Turkey had a great effect on the Balkan States. It was not altogether strategy in a great war like this. You cannot always determine the policy altogether by naval and military positions. Sometimes it is not only expedient but necessary to take risks which mere naval and military considerations would have warned you against. In January we had no military forces available in the east more than to cope with the Turkish attack on Egypt, which was defeated. The question of the naval attack on the Dardanelles was then considered and after a full consultation with the naval expert, including the Admiralty on the spot, notwithstanding some doubts in the mind of Baron Fisher, then First Sea Lord, the Government felt justified in sanctioning the attack. The proposed attack was carefully considered and was approved by the French and enthusiastically received by the Grand Duke. The matter came again before the War Council before a shot was fired and their report was communicated to the Cabinet. It decided first to make an attempt with the navy and the navy alone. I take my full share of responsibility and deprecate attempts to allot responsibility to one Minister or another. Premier Venizelos, of Greece, whose advocacy of intervention in the war on the side of the Entente Allies, led to his resignation, asked France and Britain on Sept. 21 for 150,000 men with the express understanding that Greece would mobilize. The objects of the Dardanelles to influence the Balkan situation and open a way for supplies for the Russians and strike a blow at the heart of the Turkish Empire. The Naval operations were continued systematically for a month until they culminated in an attack on the narrows which resulted in a set back. It was then suggested that by the aid of adequate forces an attack could be driven home with success. General Sir Ian Hamilton was sent out and reported he was in agreement with the suggestion that a joint naval and military attack was necessary. In the whole course of the war I have never sustained keener disappointment than on the failure of these operations. Asquith pointed out that if the efforts of the forces on the Dardanelles had been successful, they would have been immeasurably valuable. They did not succeed, he continued, notwithstanding the magnificent exhibition, never surpassed, of gallantry of our troops. It was probable that the Russians might have sustained a serious setback in the Caucasus, the Turks might have organized a great attack against Egypt, while the expedition to Mesopotamia might have been swept out of existence. It must not be forgotten also that the British at Gallipoli were holding 200,000 Turks and preventing them from doing incalculable mischief in other parts. The present situation in Dardanelles, said the Minister, was receiving most careful and anxious consideration, as part of a large strategic question raised by recent developments. British and French General Staffs had come to a complete agreement. Serbia may rest assured, said the Minister, that her independence is regarded by us as one of essential objects of the Alliance. SIR EDWARD CARSON'S SPEECH. What the House and Country are really anxious about is whether our resources in men and material are being used to the best advantage, whether what have appeared to be grave miscalculations could have been avoided and above all whether the machinery of the Government for carrying on the war is the most adequate and most effective which we can devise. Sir Edward declared that on all these questions the country was groping in the dark. There was the absence of munitions. He referred to that because experience had shown him that the Cabinet, however useful in time of peace was an organization utterly incapable of carrying on the war under present conditions. What was wanted was a smaller number of competent men sitting daily with the best advisers they could get to work out the problems that arose. He did not think that a committee of the Cabinet would answer. If the committee was to be accountable to the Cabinet, and the Cabinet was to take responsibility. Perhaps the gravest instance and most recent of how the Cabinet and Government worked, he said, was to be found in the Balkan situation. On Sept. 2nd, Sir Edward Grey stated that Bulgarian mobilization had resulted in Bulgaria assuming an aggressive attitude on the side of Britain's enemies, and Britain should be prepared to give its friends in the Balkans all the support in its power in a manner most welcome to them. When he learned that this was no longer the policy of the Government, and that there were no plans to this end, he severed his connection with the Cabinet and he decided to resign as he could not support the conclusion reached by the War Council of Cabinet the day before. As regards Greece, I think, he continued, vigorous effort should be made to compel her to fulfil her treaty obligations. It was at her invitation that we sent troops to Saloniki in conjunction with French and we should rendered ridiculous in the eyes of the Powers if we are compelled to withdraw and placed in a position of dishonour towards Serbia. JOHN REDMOND'S SPEECH. John Redmond, Nationalist Leader, declared that the attacks upon the Premier and the persistent pessimism of a portion of the press had no weight in Ireland, and that the proposal which Mr. Asquith had made with reference to the Cabinet was one which in his opinion would for the time at any rate silence the wreckers. OTHER SPEECHES. George Barnes, the Labor member for Glasgow said what was wanted more than anything at the present moment was national unity. Sir Edward Grey rose to correct what he described as a misapprehension that had arisen from Carson's speech. The help Great Britain was prepared henceforth to give those countries would be given without qualifications or conditions. Carson's speech, the Foreign Minister continued, must have conveyed the impression that after the promise was made the Government had lost the opportunity of helping Serbia, that more troops might have been landed at Salonki than had been, or that more might have been on the way than we see. That was not the case.

THE SICK KING PINS V. C. ON SOLDIER'S BREST.

LONDON, To-day. While King George was on the ambulance train yesterday being conveyed from an unnamed town in France to the coast, it developed to him directed that Lance-Sergeant Brooks, Coldstream Guards, who had just been awarded a Victoria Cross be brought to the Royal car. There despite weakness due to his recent accident, the King pinned the medal on the soldier's tunic and did so while lying prone. He was so weak that he found it difficult to put the pin through the khaki, while his face flushed with pride. Sergeant Brooks knelt by the King's bedside until the medal had been affixed. The King's journey across the Channel was exceedingly rough, but His Majesty bore it well. On arrival at Victoria Station he had to be carried on a stretcher, waiting in an automobile which took him to Buckingham Palace.

Ladies' Costumes
Fall---1915---Styles.

Was there ever a more fickle lady than Dame Fashion? She is always making changes, and this season has surely surpassed herself.

There is a more decided change in this Fall's styles than has been known for many seasons. While materials are similar, Serges, Gabardines, Tweeds, Cord, etc., the designs are absolutely unlike any of their predecessors. Coats are of many styles, chiefly a la militaire, with high collars, snug-fitting sleeves, and the entire coat in some instances is beautifully braided. Skirts are much fuller, both pleated and gored, and are worn very short.

As descriptions are quite impossible, we can only say that we carry the largest and smartest line of Ladies' Costumes in the city.

Passing Along Christmas Presents.

By RUTH CAMERON.

Do you believe in passing last year's Christmas presents along? A letter friend is very anxious that I should answer that question. As usual, I must begin by saying, That depends. What do the Christmas presents which you are considering passing along represent?

Is It A Gift Of Love Or Obligation? Do they stand for an actual eagerness to give, for love and thought, and an effort to choose something that will particularly please or help you? Or do they represent merely the conventional performance of what was once a spontaneous act of friendship but has long ago congealed into a rather irksome obligation? Of course no one with a sense of gratitude would give away gifts of the first class. As for the second kind of gift, well, at the risk of shocking some of my reader friends, I must say I do not see anything so terrible in passing that along.

Little More Than Christmas Cards.

Few of the people who would be shocked at this idea would think it anything out of the way to pass along a Christmas card. Yet what are such gifts but a greeting slightly more expensive and pretentious than a Christmas card? Some of them have utility, others are "just Christmas gifts." What harm in thanking the donor, putting them away among your pretties and passing them along the next year, when you will doubtless experience a deeper thrill of gratitude at being relieved of so much shopping than you did when you first received the gift? Of course some people might think an even better way would be to discontinue a gift exchange that had become a burdensome formality, but then some people have such queer ideas.

Must One Display An Inharmonious Gift?

And now, while I am on the subject of Christmas giving let me slip in a word on another aspect of this matter. And that is on the noblesse oblige which constrains a recipient to use or display about his home or his person a gift which is not at all in accord with his taste. If one person knows another well enough to give a gift of household furnishings or personal finery, he also knows him well enough to know his taste in such matters. Therefore to give something contrary to that taste is to show a lack of thought or a lack of desire to please. And why should a gift given in that spirit impose a heavy obligation on its recipient?

For instance if your living room is in brown and someone who has been in that room again and again gives you a purple sofa pillow for your couch, are you to be blamed if you refuse to display it there? It does not seem to me that you are.

It is all very well to argue that there is a noblesse oblige of gratitude, but I think there is also a noblesse oblige of giving and he who outrages it cannot complain if he does not arouse the noblesse oblige of gratitude.

The Gentle Autumn.

By GEORGE FITCH

Author of "At Good Old Sivas"

The gentle autumn takes place between the sunstroke and the chill-blain, and lasts until just before the coal man buys his new automobile. It is that period of the year when the mercury goes steadily down hill and prepares to crawl into its bulb and hibernate.

The gentle autumn would be a great relief from summer, if it were not for autumn itself. Mankind is too busy working in the autumn to enjoy it properly. Autumn is the time of the year when the last winter's overcoat must be dug out of the attic, and the vines and flowers must be put to bed, and the modest geraniums must be rooted up and lugged down cellar. The furnace also begins to obtrude during the autumn. It is not as voracious as it is later on, but it must be nourished on kindling and coal almost every morning, and as the worried householder realizes that he now has another month to feed, he sometimes wishes that autumn had never been invented.

Autumn is very beautiful in spots, but poets do not sing about it as much as they do about spring. This is because about September most poets stop writing and begin to hunt real jobs. The universal opinion of those who do not write is that autumn is a sad and melancholy time when nature's beauties slowly die and heaven weeps large cold tears over the last baseball games.

This is quite largely true. The death of the leaves is a particularly distressing thing, and will continue to be until Mr. Burbank invents a brand of leaf which will not die on the lawn or in the eave spouts.

Autumn is the time of the year when we make the saddening discovery that large families of moths have been guarding against race suicide in our last winter's clothes. Housecleaning also rages in the autumn, and great numbers of political boomlets fall into the long sleep that has no waking. Nothing is sadder than to see a plucky little bloomlet, which has struggled all summer in an adverse climate, only to die under a snowdrift in the shank of the autumn—except to see the candidate who has hoped to sit at ease under its shade, but who is now hunting for a job which he does not want and hopes he will not find, but which he has to have.

Autumn is the advance agent of winter, and frequently gets behind the show. It is full of days which are too cold for comfort, but not cold enough to permit the burning of $6 coal with anything like pleasure. The American autumn is like the English summer—only comfortable in spots. But the English summer is the only English season which is comfortable at all. This explains why the United States has gained 95,000,000 people from England and vicinity in the last 100 years.

Wounded Reservist Recovers.

The following is a copy of a letter that has been received from the Royal Naval Medical Information Bureau, Malta Branch, viz.:

R. N. Hospital, Malta, 30th Sept., '15.

Dear Sir:—George Thompson, R.N.R., H.M.S. "Grafton," was admitted to this hospital on 17th August suffering from shell wounds in the head. He made a good recovery and was discharged cured on 9th September.

A letter was sent to his wife giving news of his admission and the nature and condition of his wounds. This is done, in the case of every wounded man brought to this hospital, by the R. N. Friendly Union of Sailors' Wives.

Yours faithfully,
(Signed),
MAUD LAURNECE SMITH,
Hon. Secretary.

Reversist George Thompson resides at Coley's Point, Bay Roberts. He took passage to England in the S. S. Carthaginian, on November 14th, 1914.

Cruelty to Animals.

Editor Evening Telegram: Dear Sir:—If persons who seek, by anonymous contributions to the Press, to aid the cause for which the Society for Protection of Animals is working, would pursue a more practical course and lodge their complaints, suggestions, or recommendations with one of the Society's Directors or its Inspector, more beneficial results would follow, and the danger of misrepresentation would be more easily avoided. In yesterday's issue a letter headed: "Cruelty to Animals" calls attention to the alleged ill-treatment that is being accorded sheep in the city. Your correspondent "Kind-

How They Relieve

Hardfield, N. B. "It affords me great pleasure to convey not only to you but to all sufferers from Backache and Rheumatism, the great relief I have obtained from the use of Gin Pills. I feel thankful to you. I recommend Gin Pills to everyone suffering as I did."

ness" misstates the facts. There is not a vestige of truth in his statement that after a sale in any of the city markets "the purchaser of the animals seizes them, ties their legs together, and leaves them struggling in misery for three or four hours, in fact thrown on top of each other like so many logs of wood, half starved and famished for a drop of water"; and his description of the manner in which the sheep are removed by the owners is equally inconsistent with the true facts. The Society's Inspector attends all the city cattle sales; sees that the animals are properly herded; supervises their being fed and watered; and arranges after the sale for their immediate removal by their purchasers, and every precaution being taken to ensure their proper protection. Since the incorporation of the present Society, its Inspector has been present on every occasion when cattle have been landed from trains and steamers and no effort is spared to see that the most humane methods are adopted and the dangers attendant upon the unloading reduced to a minimum. I may say that negotiations are now pending for the erection of sheep pens in the city markets.

The reports of the Society make it plain beyond all doubt that the Society for Protection of Animals has amply justified its existence, but there remains much more for it to do and the effective accomplishment of its future work depends largely upon co-operation of the public. Its minimum membership fee is so small that there is no reason why every eligible person in the island should not be a member. Its high-principled objects entitle it to a foremost place in the estimation of our people, and the economic value of its teachings should demand public recognition. Whole-hearted concerted action by the citizens and the Society would so strengthen in its hands that existing evils, if there are, would soon be eradicated and the consummation of our desires speedily attained.

Yours truly,
CYRIL JAMES FOX,

Acid Stomachs Are Dangerous.

A famous physician said in the course of a recent lecture that nearly all intestinal troubles, as well as many diseases of the vital organs, were directly traceable to a deranged condition of the stomach which in turn was due nine times out of ten to excessive acidity, commonly termed sour stomach or heartburn, which not only irritated and inflamed the delicate lining of the stomach, but also set up gastritis and stomach ulcers. Remarkable results have been obtained by the use of ordinary bisaturated magnesia, which, by neutralizing the acidity of the food, removes the source of the trouble. It is foolish to treat the stomach itself, neutralize the acid and the stomach troubles will disappear. Irritating medicines and medicinal treatments are useless, so long as the contents of the stomach remain acid; remove the acidity, and there will be no need for medicine—the inflamed lining of the stomach will then heal itself. Sufferers from acidity, sour stomach or heartburn should get a small bottle of bisaturated magnesia from their druggist, and take a spoonful in a quarter of a glass of water after meals, repeating in fifteen minutes, if necessary.

A good hot sauce for a cold pudding is made by cooking to a custard the yolks of three eggs, beaten light; one cupful of sugar, two cupfuls of sweet milk, one tablespoonful of cornstarch and one of butter. Flavor with orange or vanilla.

To make savory potato puffs, mix mashed potatoes with two eggs, a little milk, a spoonful of chopped parsley and a tablespoonful of chopped onion (boiled); salt and pepper to taste. Drop tablespoonfuls of the mixture into boiling lard and fry until brown.

Wedding Bells.

SCÉVOUR—LAHEY.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Patrick's Church at 8.30 last evening, the contracting parties being Mr. Walter Scéviour, of the Reid Nfld. Co., and Miss Sté Lahey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lahey, of the Cabot Hotel, Water Street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Fr. Pippy in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends. The bride was becomingly attired in blue satin and was attended by his sister, Miss Monica Lahey, while Mr. Ed- ward Lahey, brother of the bride, supported the groom. After the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents where a large number of guests had assembled. After the usual honours had been done the happy young couple, Mr. and Mrs. Scéviour drove to their future residence, 9 Barkley's Square. The bride was the recipient of many valuable and useful presents. The Telegram extends congratulations to them many happy years of wedded life.

In Lady's Boudoir!

Your Neck Tells Your Age.

There is nothing about a woman's appearance that tells her age so surely as her neck, and when it is beautiful it is one of her most seductive charms. Why is it that so many women who take the greatest care of their complexions and their appearance generally, will not look beneath the chin for faults to correct?

If your neck is scrawny cocoa butter is efficacious in filling out the hollows. Rub it all off with a clean cloth when you have finished the massage and apply a little pure powder to keep from soiling the neckbands of your waists. In drying and rubbing the neck always rub from the top down. If your neck is brown or discolored there are a number of good remedies that may be used to bleach it. There is nothing better, however, than lemon juice and water. One woman I know who has a lovely neck, always keeps a half lemon on her washstand. Just before she dries her neck every morning, she merely rubs a little lemon juice on it.

Tight collars are responsible for many unsightly necks. When you consider how close the connection is between the brain and the rest of the body, it surely does not seem a wise policy to place any restriction about the neck which might interfere with the circulation of the blood to the brain, or tend to check proper breathing. It is so delightful to feel that the neck is free and to feel the fresh air upon it.

Gas the Beneficent Spirit.

The nightly hot bath is the children's joy, and a pleasure to their nurse also, provided that its preliminaries do not involve wordy warfare with an indignant cook who requires the kitchen fire for her own purposes. All such trouble is obviated by the installation of a gas water-heater, which solves the hot water problem once for all. It is as great a boon to the master of the house who wants to shave in a hurry as to the hockey-playing daughter who comes in tired and muddy, or to the nurse whose baby charge shows signs of a threatened chill. Such symptoms often yield before the simple remedies of an immediate hot bath and a night passed in a room well warmed and at the same time ventilated by a gas fire. Where gas is the family friend, there health, peace and contentment should reign supreme.

Ballot Paper.

The ballot papers for the purpose of the voting under this Act shall be in the following form:

Are you in favour of prohibiting the importation, manufacture and sale of spirits, wine, ale, beer, cider and all other alcoholic liquors for use as beverages?

YES _____
NO _____

Directions for the Guidance of Electors in Voting.

EACH Elector, on entering the room where the Poll is to be held shall declare his name, surname and addition.

After so doing he shall receive a Ballot Paper in the above form. Each Elector, if required by the Deputy Returning Officer, the Poll Clerk or one of the agents shall, before receiving his Ballot Paper, take an oath of qualification.

After receiving his Ballot Paper, the Voter shall go into one of the compartments and with a pencil there provided, place a cross to indicate his vote on the question at issue. An affirmative vote on the question submitted shall be made by placing a cross (thus X) in the space after the word 'Yes' and a negative vote by placing a similar cross in the space after the word 'No'.

The voter will then fold the Ballot Paper, so as to show a portion of the back only, with the initials of the Deputy Returning Officer and shall hand it folded up to the Deputy Returning Officer, and, without unfolding it, ascertain that it is the Ballot Paper which he furnished to the elector, and then immediately place it in the Ballot Box. The voter shall forthwith leave the Polling Station.

If a voter inadvertently spoils a Ballot Paper he may return it to the Deputy Returning Officer, who shall give him another.

If a voter places any mark on the Ballot Paper by which he can afterwards be identified, his vote will be void and will not be counted.

If a voter takes a Ballot or Ballot Paper out of the Polling Station, or fraudulently puts any other into the Ballot Box than the Paper given him by the Deputy Returning Officer, he will be subject to be punished by a fine of Five Hundred Dollars, or by is indispensable to the traveller crossing the African deserts, so also is SUNLIGHT SOAP indispensable to a careful housewife. A Camel can go for several days without drinking, but a good housewife cannot afford to let a single day pass without putting SUNLIGHT SOAP to some use. The first duty of every housewife is to economise; the duty of SUNLIGHT SOAP is to help the housewife to economise. The daily use of SUNLIGHT SOAP is practical economy. It does the most washing in the shortest time, with least labour, and with no discomfort. Use a piece in your next wash, and you will be convinced as to its value.

Christ and Prohibition.

Reply to Mr. Blackall.

Mr. Blackall speaks undoubted truth when he says that "that happy state which Christ surely foresaw could be accomplished only by the free submission of the will of man to His Divine Will." And Christ's ideals of that Kingdom of God, as shown by His example and in His words which have come down through the ages, had been faithfully followed we should not now, after nearly two thousand years, have to use the means of Prohibition to stamp out the liquor traffic. Like many other evils of the world which have insidiously crept in and nestled under the protection of our civilization and even of our Churches, this particular serpent has eventually antagonized men's interests so, that they feel that nothing else is able to effectually curb its influence as its extermination.

I think Mr. Blackall is very much astray in saying that this method is not Christ-like. I think we see that Christ prohibits evil desires as well as wrong acts. It is one of the most remarkable features of His moral teaching that He does not command us to regulate or control our unlawful desires, but pronounces it unlawful to have such desires at all. In the Sermon on the Mount Christ quotes several prohibitions from the Mosaic law, and proceeds to declare the desire from which each prohibited act springs is equally culpable with the act itself.

Now while Prohibition will on the face of it coerce some who enjoy their liquor now to give it up, yet the benefit of Prohibition will come with increasing force to the next generations and enable them to grow up without this hindrance of liquor which now stifles the natural desires of the human heart for a pure life.

Christ commands us to remove such hindrances, and this sin against the body to which intemperance so often leads, brings on many sins of mind otherwise not thought of. A boy brought up in a home where liquor never enters never has any temptation to overcome in after life, so the boys now will grow up under Prohibition, with minds open to that enthusiasm of Humanity which Christ taught most of all. Those who appear to be the most devoted Christians are somewhat jealous of what they may consider this worldly machinery. But the law of the spirit of Christ is that Enthusiasm of Humanity which He declared to be the source from which all right action flows. And if the progress of science and civilization has put into our hands the means of benefiting our kind and we have the means of averting countless misfortunes, and raising to the right emblems, and raising the right emblems of contrivance, the general standard of happiness we are commanded by the spirit of humanity to use them. If Mr. Blackall abhors Prohibition, he must then abhor the law which prohibits the coming into the Colony of obscene pictures and literature. Must he also not abhor the system of government the world over, which makes laws by reason of majorities and thus forces minorities to obey them.

To return to the former point, a man who has no desire to sin is greater than a man who has a desire and resists the temptation, and this law is plainly laid down by Christ in the Sermon on the Mount.

THEOBALD.

Mother! Don't Take Chances If Child's Tongue Is Coated

If cross, feverish, sick, bilious, clean little liver and bowels.

A laxative to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, Mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftentimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

Mary Appeals to Men.

Manly Men and Women All Are Asked to Help in the Prohibition Cause.

Dear Sir,—Would you allow me to have a few words with the men before the day arrives for them to go to the poll and record their votes for or against Prohibition. There is an enemy in our Island Home. It is not the German Emperor, if it were, I feel sure there is not a man worthy of the name who would not vote "Yes" to have him driven forever from our Island. The enemy I speak of is King Alcohol—or in plainer language Rum, and the open saloon in St. John's. This enemy has had his headquarters in St. John's, but he distributes his products to all the outposts by express, and it is impossible to say what amount of misery, crime and even death may be corked up in one of these bottles or jars. Think of all the crimes that have been committed through indulgence in strong drink. See the suffering and want in the homes where fathers and sons are in the habit of partaking of this evil.

But men, I am speaking now to manly men, men with a heart of pity beating within them for the wife and children of the man given to drink. The dread of pay day, and the thought of the man who pledged himself at the altar on that happy day when the solemn words were read that made them one; men I say who promised to love and protect until death do them part. In some men one glass of this fiery poison, makes demons of them, and the thought of such sends a feeling of terror into the very hearts of their wives and little children. Men, I say, on Thursday next, November 4th, a sacred ballot will be placed in your hand if you visit the poll booth. God will watch you mark that Ballot, then mark it in the interest of the wives and children, and of the men themselves who are victims of strong drink. I hear some person say I can do without drink, then what business is it of mine if others do drink, and I my brother's keeper. Yes, men, you surely are your brother's keepers as much as our brave boys who are now in the firing line fighting the Empire's battles against the German foe. We cannot all go to the front and face the enemy there, but a sword will be placed in your hands on Thursday next in the shape of a ballot, and you will be asked to kill the enemy or ruin many of our own young men, aye and young women as well, who run the risk of marrying a man who will indulge in strong drink to the disadvantage and misery of himself, his wife and little ones. Yes, men, use that ballot-sword for the benefit of our manhood. Put the X after the YES. Wives use your influence with your husband, if he is indifferent, and says: "Well, I never drink, why should I bother?" Talk to him of the little children who would be as happy as your own but for the rum shops; and you wives whose husbands are moderate drinkers, explain to them that we are our brother's keepers, and that our opportunity is now at hand to help fallen humanity, by striking a deadly blow with the sword-ballet held out to us on Thursday next.

Before closing I would like to remind all voters that it is not a majority vote we want, were it so it would not be quite so disastrous if some failed to record their votes on each side. But remember this is a one-sided issue. If you fail to reach the booth in time to mark your ballot for Prohibition then your neglect, delay, or indifference will certainly count against it. There is work for all to fight this enemy of mankind and drive him from our midst as our brave soldiers are now endeavouring to drive the German, a far less dangerous foe, out of France.

Thanking you for publishing this and wishing the Prohibition cause much success.

I am, yours sincerely,

MARY.

Anniversaries of Local Historical Events.

On November 3rd, 1872, Edward Colbert, shipwright, was found drowned at Stewart's wharf.

On the same date in 1850 Free St. Andrew's Church was opened on Duckworth Street.

It is 39 years ago to-day since the Phoenix Hall at the foot of Long's Hill was burnt.

This day 27 years ago the newspaper "Register" was registered in St. John's, Keit and Bishop, proprietors.

THE PUMPKIN.

The pumpkin lies yellow, beneath the old skies, it's luscious and mellow, and ready for pies. So tenderly bear it away from the vine, and slice it, pare it and mash it up fine; oh, put in the spices, crush it with crust, and then in three trices we'll eat till we bust! My appetite's baky and dull as can be, most viands look rocky, forbidding, to me. Away from the fritters I turn with a sigh, the coffee's like bitters, and stale is mince pie; the spud and the radish can tempt me no more; they make me feel sardish, the doughnut's a bore. I'm tired of the puddin', I'm sick of the cheese, of things that taste wooden, of parsnips and peas. They give katejammer, they weary the eyes; but loudly I clamor for pumpkin pies! The pies that are golden, well seasoned, yet mild, from formulas olden, by housewives compiled! The gods on Olympus are uttering cries: "Oh, mortals, don't skimp us, but send us those pies! Our grub makes us bony, we're in a blue funk; ambrosia is phony, and nectar in pun!"

Your Boys and Girls

Just now mothers all over the land have the school lunch box problem to solve each day. The child naturally craves sweets and they should be given in moderate amounts, as they are necessary to furnish fuel. Sweets should be given at the close of the meal so that they may not clog the taste for the substantial things. Eggs cooked hard and well seasoned make a most satisfactory sandwich filling. The sandwich is an important factor and should have first place in the lunch box. Bottles now may be bought at a small price which will hold a hot drink of soup, cocoa and milk, these being the drinks best for a child. A handful of nuts and raisins or a few figs or dates, will add to the enjoyment of a lunch as well as to its nutritive value.

Hon. John Harvey Replies to Mr. Blackall

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—I am surprised that no one has replied to Mr. Blackall in the Telegram. I would personally prefer not to do so, partly because I have found myself almost invariably in the fullest accord upon most subjects with him. But I do not think his letter should pass without some comment being made in the columns where it first appeared.

This letter, Mr. Editor, is not an argument directed towards Mr. Blackall, himself. His has been a frank and sincere profession of Faith, and as such I look upon it as entirely excluded from ordinary considerations of expediency incidental to the formation of ordinary secular judgments upon everyday matters. That profession must as such receive our fullest respect. But those of us who feel that this question is a plain, practical, social question to be decided, not by an Act of Faith but by ordinary human reason, find ourselves utterly unable to subscribe to Mr. Blackall's conclusions. To me, at any rate, the logical application of Mr. Blackall's principle, questions the justification of all laws in restraint of individual inclinations, (especially if these inclinations are inherently bad) and would reverse many laws now on the Statute Book, covering a very extensive range of activities notwithstanding that they seem to be working to the general good.

Is it wrong that many of the Ten Commandments (which are themselves prohibitive for the most part) should have been enacted into Civil Law? Should laws for prohibiting the supply of liquor to "Native Races" be condemned? I think so,—on Mr. Blackall's principle.

Is it inherently wrong to have a law on the Statute Book forbidding the carrying of a gun on Sunday? Ought the churches to object to that law, or to the law against killing seals on Sunday? I am not arguing for or against these laws, but is their existence in conformity with or justifiable upon the principle laid down? And as regards the principle of compulsion, Mr. Blackall, if I mistake not, is a supporter of compulsory education for St. John's.

Where, exactly and logically, is the difference in principle between being prepared as Mr. Blackall says he is "to regulate the traffic and 'move in reason temptation,'" and total Prohibition? I take it that Mr. Blackall meant by his words that he approves of regulating the traffic by law. This legal regulation means definitely prohibition as regards certain things, e.g. as to hours. Are the present legal restrictions upon the Trade approved? Now I can quite see how a man may with perfect reason approve regulation, and entirely oppose Prohibition, but I cannot see how he can do so reasonably if he adopts the principle enunciated by Mr. Blackall.

I think that in this question of Prohibition a confusion of thought frequently arises between the acts of the individual and those of the Community.

If the majority sanely resolves upon a certain course which affects individuals, it is not as a general rule fair to regard it as unjustifiable coercion. While it may coerce the individual it is the expression of free will on the part of the Community.

If I want to go down town when I am suffering from smallpox, the Community's prohibition can hardly be deemed unjustifiable coercion, however much I may personally object to it in the present case. Prohibition can only be carried by the moderate drinkers themselves who form the majority. If as a class they want it where is the coercion? If it is wrong in principle to coerce the individual drinker by Prohibition, is it right that the Community should be prohibited from exercising its free will?

Is it right in principle that the Community shall be debarred from working hand in hand with the churches in their great work of moral reform? I submit that in so working the Community would not be trespassing upon the sphere of the churches which Mr. Blackall seems to fear so much. It is not pretended that ameliorative legislation can make people moral, but they most certainly do prepare and provide more suitable conditions for the higher work which is the sphere of the churches. Can religious principles be fairly invoked, as Mr. Blackall has invoked them, to turn away such help?

I am,

Yours, etc.,

JOHN HARVEY.

Aching Back Gets Relief Quick!

One Rub with "Nerviline" Cures

Every Bit of Stiffness and Soreness Goes When "Nerviline" Is Used.

Pain in back or side is awful hard to reach. Deep in the tissue is a congested or strained muscle. It is a long way for a liniment to go. Liniments you have used have not reached it and the pain bothers you, whether moving or lying down.

What a pity you haven't tried Nerviline! Penetrating, you ask? Yes, and powerful, too. Nerviline strikes in far deeper than any application you have ever used. You might pay a dollar, ten dollars, a hundred, for that matter, but you could not equal Nerviline, either in strength, quickness of action, or permanency of relief.

If you think this too much to say for Nerviline, try it, and be convinced.

If you receive from Nerviline even a little less relief from pain than this advertisement induces you to expect, you can get your money back.

The only pain remedy in the world sold under a guarantee is Nerviline—surely it is safe to try it.

Nerviline is sold by druggists everywhere 25 cents or 50 cents a bottle.
