Mothers' Advice

The responsibility for a daughter's future largely rests with the mother. The right influence and the information which is of vital interest to the daughter imparted at the proper time has not only saved the life but insured the success of many a beautiful girl. When a girl's thoughts become sluggish with headaches, dizziness, or a disposition to sleep, pains in back or lower limbs and a desire for solitude, her mother should come to her aid and remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, will at this time prepare the system for the coming change and start this trying period in a young girl's life without pain or irregularities. Thousands of women residing in every part of the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtues of this medicine, and what it has done for their daughters.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough for what it has done for my daughter. She was 17 years of age, very sick and pale and she had to stay home from school most of the time. She suffered agonies from backache and dizziness and was without appetite. For 3 months she was under the doctor's care and got no better, always complaining about her back and side aching. I did not know what to do. I read in the papers about your wonderful medicine so I made up my mind to try it. She has taken five bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and doesn't complain any more with her back and side aching. She has gained weight and feels much better. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all mothers of daughters."—Mrs. M. F. FROST, 516 Marcy Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

CHAPTER XXXVI. CONSPIRATORS.

"As you could with a penitence avenger like me," finished Percy Levant. "I understand. And so you succeeded in separating them and—siding her to me? That's quite clear. I've no doubt you managed it very cleverly; I should think forgery and that kind of thing would come easy to you, my dear Churchill."

"Sir! Mr. Levant!" exclaimed Spencer Churchill, pugnaciously, and halting from his chair, as he met the steady gaze of the dark eyes. He subsided again, and waved his hand pitifully.

"My dear Percy, you wrong me. What I did, I did as much in the interest of my dear friend, the Marquis of Stoyte, and the young man himself. It was the marquis who assisted me. I assure you. Packed dear Cecil off to Ireland, and kept him there—kept him there—till I'd got his lady-love away."

The curtain stirred behind the self-satisfied, triumphant plotter; but Percy Levant, unseen by his companion, held up his hand warningly.

"Relly? And the marquis is gratified, no doubt. But, after all, this is not my business. I want to know—"

Spencer Churchill leaned forward and dropped his voice, but not so low a pitch but that the listeners on each side of the room could hear distinctly.

"You want to know whom it is you have married. I'll tell you. Wait—you don't know the Marquis of Stoyte?"

"I've seen him," said Percy. "Speak louder. What are you afraid of, man? We are not two conspirators on the stage!"

"Quite right, my dear Percy. Conspirators! Certainly not! We are two men bound by a common impulse to—relieve—benefit our fellow-creatures, and—ourselves!"

"Exactly," said Percy Levant. "But go on. Remember that you have just congratulated me on my marriage, and that I am anxious to join my bride."

"Yes, yes. Well, then, are you aware, my dear Percy, that my friend the marquis was once married?"

"I know nothing about the Marquis of Stoyte."

"Well, the natural result followed. The marchioness fled. Where—and to whom? Why, to her former lover, Jeffrey Flint. No, my dear Percy, her conduct was blameless. She died within a few hours after reaching him. She died, but she left a child, a girl, behind. That girl Jeffrey Flint adopted and called—can you guess her name?"

"Doris Marlowe!" said Percy Levant, hoarsely, and with white lips—for this was a revelation to him.

Spencer Churchill jolted back in his chair with an unconscious smile of enjoyment.

"Right! Quite right, my dear Percy! Doris Marlowe! That is—ah! ah!—Mrs. Percy Levant!"

The marquis staggered, and clutched at Lord Cecil, and Lady Grace was rushing forward, but Cecil raised his hand, and holding her face in his hands, she sank back.

"So Doris Marlowe is the daughter of the Marquis of Stoyte!" said Percy Levant.

"Just so," assented Spencer Churchill. "And now, my dear Percy, that she is out of the bag, the daughter of the of Stoyte." "That he was married—! He stopped and laughed with unctuous enjoyment. "When I think of it, my dear boy, I'm always tickled by the desire to laugh. You must know that the young lady had three lovers—the marquis, a certain Jeffrey Flint, and—myself!" and he laid his hand upon his heart and bowed.

As he did so, the curtains opened and three figures stood in the opening. They were those of Cecil, Lady Grace, and the trembling, emaciated form of the marquis himself. White, deathly white, the old man stood, clinging to Cecil's arm, his piercing eyes fixed on the smooth, long-haired head of Spencer Churchill, with an expression that baffles all description.

Percy Levant rose, and, under the pretense of filling Spencer Churchill's glass, made a warning gesture to them. Lady Grace seemed about to speak, but the marquis turned upon her with an awful ferocity, which seemed to deprive her of the power to speak or move.

Percy Levant sank back in his seat. "Well!" he said.

Spencer Churchill sipped his brandy and-water.

"Well the case stood thus: the girl was engaged to the fellow Jeffrey. Consequently there was no chance for me. So, my dear Percy, I decided, as most men of common sense would have decided, to—ahem!—assist the marquis. I did so, and, bewildered and fascinated by the offer of a marchioness's coronet, Lucy accepted and married the marquis. The result was—er—rather disastrous. With all respect to my dear friend the marquis, I must say, my dear Percy, that if ever there was a fiend incarnate he was one. I don't wish to be hard upon a fellow-mortal—Heaven forbid!—but if there is anything worse, more cruel and selfish and altogether unscrupulous than a fiend, then that being may yield the palm to the most honourable of the Marquis of Stoyte!"

The marquis, shaking in every limb with fury, clutched Cecil's arm, and with some difficulty restrained him from rushing upon the oily-voiced speaker.

"Well, the natural result followed. The marchioness fled. Where—and to whom? Why, to her former lover, Jeffrey Flint. No, my dear Percy, her conduct was blameless. She died within a few hours after reaching him. She died, but she left a child, a girl, behind. That girl Jeffrey Flint adopted and called—can you guess her name?"

"Doris Marlowe!" said Percy Levant, hoarsely, and with white lips—for this was a revelation to him.

Spencer Churchill jolted back in his chair with an unconscious smile of enjoyment.

"Right! Quite right, my dear Percy! Doris Marlowe! That is—ah! ah!—Mrs. Percy Levant!"

The marquis staggered, and clutched at Lord Cecil, and Lady Grace was rushing forward, but Cecil raised his hand, and holding her face in his hands, she sank back.

"So Doris Marlowe is the daughter of the Marquis of Stoyte!" said Percy Levant.

"Just so," assented Spencer Churchill. "And now, my dear Percy, that she is out of the bag, the daughter of the Marquis of Stoyte—! In other words, Lady Mary Neville! And the money! Well, I think you won't regret your liberal offer when I tell you that her mother's portion amounts to five-and-twenty thousand a year, and which her father has made a will which will leave all he can leave to her."

For Her Sake; The Murder in Furness Wood.

CHAPTER I.

"Sunshine and roses!" cried Diana Cameron. "What more is needed to make one perfectly happy?"

She was answered by a chorus of laughter.

"One is easily made happy at seventeen," observed Lady Colwyn.

"I hope," said Sir Royal, good-humoredly, "that sunshine and roses will always content you;" while Richard Marche looked into the beautiful face of the young girl, and said, slowly:

"You have much to learn, Diana."

"I do not want to learn anything," she replied, with a dauntless air. "I should not care to study philosophy, and be as serenely indifferent to everything as you are, Sir Royal. I should not like to learn to be practical, and analyze every detail as you do, Rich. I prefer my own ignorance."

"What you call ignorance," said Lady Colwyn, "is, at your age, wisdom."

"Wisdom must come from experience," remarked Sir Royal; "and that you cannot hope to gain for the next ten years."

"Much wisdom maketh a man's hair grey," sang Richard Marche.

"Yours will keep its color for some years yet, Rich," retorted Diana; and Richard bowed his thanks for the interference.

It was the afternoon of a fair June day; the air was so warm and fragrant that none of the speakers cared to go indoors. A more striking group would have been difficult to find. The very soul of it, as she was the center of attraction everywhere, was Diana Cameron, daughter and heiress of Peter Cameron of Furness, one of the wealthiest and most successful men of his time. She was a girl with a sweet but somewhat imperious face and a faultless figure. The arched neck, sloping shoulders, and grace of limb, the carriage and noble contour of the head, the classical profile, the line of beauty from the broad low brow to the white throat, recalled the far-famed Diana of the Louvre. Miss Cameron had an uncommon face; it was dainty and refined, exquisite in coloring, with eyes of the deepest, darkest blue, veiled by long dark lashes. Her hair, fine, soft, and fair, broke into rings and rippling waves that defied all control. Her hands, of which she was proud, were beautifully formed, and her shapely arms were white and wax-like. She had perfect taste in dress, and the gowns she wore seemed always of a fashion suitable only to herself. On this evening, as she stood amid her friends, her elegantly fitting dress was simply perfect. She wore no ornaments except a few lilies of the valley. A girl more fresh and charming it would have been almost impossible to find; but the expression of her face, at once gracious, sweet, and proud, nevertheless puzzled those who did not know her. She had the air of one accustomed to command rather than obey; nobility of soul shone from the blue eyes, yet there were suspicious lines about the beautiful mouth indicative of scorn, if aught should call it forth. Diana Cameron, belle of the country, one of the loveliest girls in England, blessed with a sweet sunny temper, endowed with a brilliant intellect, vivid fancy, keen wit, and an artistic soul, was undoubtedly a favorite both of Nature and of Fortune.

"I had a battle royal to-day, Lady Colwyn," she said, with a little musical laugh. "Hughes, our head-gardener, has ideas of his own, as have I, and to-day we came into collision."

"I have often expected that event," observed Richard Marche.

"Which won?" asked Sir Royal, briefly.

"I did," she replied; "but another such victory would cost me dear. I want white hyacinths for the center of the beds on the lawn next spring. He said they were colorless—preferred something more pronounced. He told me that he had lived fifteen years in the service of his Grace the Duke of Colonsay, and no one had ever called his taste in question before."

"It is not often, Queen Diana, that your subjects rebel," said Sir Royal.

"No," she allowed, with a merry little laugh. "I am amazed at the trouble when I hear people speak of the troubles they have in managing a household. I have little or none. Hughes is my most rebellious subject."

"If I were a subject of yours, I should never rebel," exclaimed Sir Royal.

"And, if I were one, I should do nothing but rebel," declared Richard Marche.

"You must tear yourself away from beloved sunshine and roses," Lady Colwyn observed at this point; "the dressmaker will soon ring."

"People ought not to trouble about dinner on such lovely days as this," objected Diana, with a lingering look at the roses.

Sir Royal and Richard laughed. "So think not I," said Richard. "And you, Lady Colwyn?"

"I agree with Diana," she replied. "It is hard to leave the roses. How sweet and beautiful they are this year!"

"I think the rose garden is the prettiest spot at Furness," Sir Royal remarked.

Austria Gambled.

(Philadelphia Public Ledger.) Austria gambled and Austria must pay her losses. The Hohensollern-Hapsburg "trust" made a bid for the biggest prize humanity ever had to lose; but humanity won out. It is idle for the new Austrian government to come into court with the plea that it has changed its allegiance and should no longer be held responsible for the stake which its crowned predecessor hung upon the "table" a little over five years ago. If the "black" had won, the people of Austria to-day would be counting their gains.

MONTREAL, Sept. 16. "I think that there is an impression in this country that Great Britain is staggering under the burden of her tremendous debt, and that she is headed for bankruptcy and is going to the dogs. I want to tell you as one who has some knowledge of industrial conditions and more of finance, that this is not the case. Great Britain is not going to sit down under the difficulties which face her to-day. There never was a time when her people displayed more brain, more nerve, or more enterprise, or were so keenly alive to the necessity of overcoming all obstacles which confront her." In these words Sir Charles Hanson, High Sheriff for Cornwall, member of Parliament for the Bodmin division in the British House and former Lord Mayor of London, roused the enthusiasm of the members of the Board of Trade who assembled to hear an informal address from one of Montreal's former residents, who is to-day her honored guest.

DEMORALIZATION IN EXCHANGE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16. Utter demoralization prevailed in the foreign exchange market to-day on further collapse of French and Italian remittances. Paris checks fell to a fraction over nine francs to the American dollar, and lire were quoted at ten pence seventeen to the dollar, the latter representing a depreciation of virtually fifty per cent. Bills on Germany and Austria also were offered at new discounts and London rate fell to level, not much above its minimum a few weeks ago.

MUST WITHDRAW TROOPS.

PARIS, Sept. 16. The Supreme Council has agreed to send a note to Germany, saying the Peace Conference disregards the German representation that General Von der Goltz and the German troops in the Baltic States are not under German control and holding Germany responsible for a speedy withdrawal of these forces. Marshal Foch attended the Council to-day as adviser on the Baltic situation.

CONSIDERED STRIKE SITUATION.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15. The Finance Committee of the United States Steel Corporation met to-day and remained in conference for about one hour. At the close of the meeting Elbert H. He refused to answer directly, but remarked, "The save of Bolshevism may yet strike us."

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16. Japan has replied to the United States that she does not favor including Mongolia and Manchuria, as suggested by the American Government in a recent note, in the terms of the concertorium which contemplates ad-

ROME, Sept. 16. Japan has taken up here with the Vatican the question of German Catholic Missions in Caroline, Marshall and Marianne Islds. in the Pacific. Capt. Japan has been administering these islands since their capture from Germany early in the war.

ROME, Sept. 16. The Government has prohibited publication of any news concerning military events at Fiume.

BOSTON, Sept. 16. Officers of the Fire Department will not join in a sympathetic strike to aid the policemen. This was announced to-day after a meeting of the directors of the officers' Club, which represents fifteen per cent of the fire-fighting forces of the city. The vote was unanimous.

GUEST OF HONOR.

LONDON, Sept. 16. Viscount Grey of Valladon, recently appointed British Ambassador to the United States, was the guest of honor to-day at a private luncheon given by the American Luncheon Club. The lunch was attended by a very large number of members of the Club.

SCUTTLED SHIPS REFOATED.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16. Acting Secretary of State Phillips to-day received a despatch from London, stating that as a result of the efforts to raise the German vessels scuttled at Scapa Flow, the battleship Baden, the cruisers Frankfort, Emden, and Emden, and fifteen destroyers, have been floated, and three other destroyers probably will be raised.

FALL LOBSTER FISHERY.

CHARLOTTETOWN, Sept. 16. For the first time on the island, a late fall season for lobsters, from August 16 to October 15, is being tried out over a 150 mile section. Fishery inspectors report that the catch for the past month has been double that for the whole of last year.

SEVERE HURRICANE.

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas, Sept. 16. With troops patrolling the main streets and relief trains headed this way from many parts of the State, Corpus Christi to-day began slowly emerging from the wreckage caused by the Gulf Hurricane which struck the city early Sunday, bringing death to an unknown number of people, and doing property damage of millions. More than three thousand persons were made homeless by the storm, and the problem of taking care of them was one officials faced when they began to-day. However, with the coming of relief trains, it was expected that by night most of these made destitute by the storm would be taken care of.

A SATISFACTORY CONFERENCE.

PARIS, Sept. 16. Premier Lloyd George and Clemenceau had a satisfactory conference to-day on the subject of Syria. A temporary arrangement was reached for the regulation of the situation, and was approved by the Supreme Council. It will remain in force until the United States is ready to deal with the whole question of the future status of Turkey. The French have consented to send troops from Alexandretta to Armenia to protect the Armenians from the Turk, but because of the difficulty of travel, it is not known how soon they can arrive.

Newspapers assert that the Premier, who is planning to leave Paris to-day, will insist before his departure upon having such action decided upon.

Wants History of Regiment.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—Is it not time that some effort was made to write the history of Newfoundland's share in the Great War. Other communities are doing so, recording, not alone, what their soldier boys have done, but the records of the whole people's war activities such as Red Cross and loan campaigns, etc.
Personally I would not care for a "dry as dust" history taken directly from the records, but a human interest story of Newfoundland's glorious deeds such as a Philip Gibbs would write, giving little incidents of doings, not recorded but known to us. Therefore I think a work ought to be started, before our boys scatter to the four winds of heaven and while their doings are fresh in their minds.
Sincerely yours,
HARRY P. LEWIS.

Victory Cup Football.

Last evening's football between the C. E. I. and Cadets was the best for the season. A fast and clean game, ending in a draw, resulted. In the first half Fox (C.E.I.) sent in a "twister" which Cadet could not stop. The Cadets worked hard to equalize matters but the forwards failed to find the net. The first half ended C. E. I. 1; Cadets, 0.
The second half opened lively, both teams giving a good exhibition. After about twenty minutes' hard play Cadet sent in a "hot shot" which Noseworthy could not hold. "Time up" sounded without any more scoring. Mr. Fred Brien refereed the game. Following was the line-up:
C. E. I.—Goal, T. Noseworthy; backs, M. Churchill, Thistle; halves, N. Hunt, Dwyer, J. R. Stick; forwards, E. Churchill, Barie, Adams, Fox, R. Stick.
CADETS—Goal, Clare; backs, Fowler, Brown; halves, Christopher, Galloway, Thompson; forwards, Caul, Madigan, Spurrell, Ellis, Duggan.
The Stars and Collegians will be the contestants in this evening's match, and play will commence promptly at 8 o'clock.

When you want Sausages, why get ELLIS'; they're the best.

The Majestic.

Again the Majestic—the house that leads—has an exceptional show for its patrons. This evening, for the first time, Dorothy Dalton will appear on the Majestic screen, starring in the thrilling picture, "Love Me." Dorothy Dalton is noted as being an actress specially able to raise thrills and suspense, and in this picture, which is one that must be seen by every Majestic-goer, she looms up to great advantage. A Bairnsfather cartoon, "Fragments From France," will make the second item. "The Gay Deceiver," a delightful comedy, the third. The fourth and best is a song by Mrs. F. J. King, who has made herself so popular with the patrons of the leading house. The feature "Love Me," is a picture somewhat after the style of "Peg-O'-My Heart," which will be a pass-word for many people. To-night's is a big show.

Mr. Meaney's Denial.

Editor Evening Telegram
Dear Sir,—Commenting editorially on the postal telegraph operators demand for a living wage, and the impending walkout on Friday in the event of no adjustment satisfactory to the telegraphers, the Daily News this morning says, "The Star in this connection threatens a telegraphers strike, and speaks as though inspired to do so. The political motive is self-evident. Regardless of the injury which may be done the trade of the colony, the personal organ of R. A. Squires would incite to a closing of the telegraphic service." For the information of your contemporary, and that of the general public, permit me to say that, so far as I am aware, R. A. Squires never heard of our negotiations with the Government in connection with salaries, had no knowledge whatever of the statement which appeared in the Post Monday morning, and has never been communicated with directly or indirectly by me in reference to the matter. The Star is not inciting the operators to strike. The Governments dogged indifference to our reasonable requests during many months for a living wage is forcing the operators to make a stand for their demands. Necessity, individually and collectively, compelled the operators to take the step they have taken.

ing for them I have exhausted every means to induce the Government to accede to our demands, which are moderate and reasonable, but nothing definite has been done beyond the opening of enquiry by the commission. I have urged the Government's acceptance of a minimum wage which the operators have agreed on as a basis for negotiation for the classification and standardization of postal telegraphers salaries in the city and outposts. With other comments of the News I shall deal more fully to-morrow. Meantime I may say that the operators regret the necessity of a walkout which can be obviated by the Government accepting, as a basis of adjustment of our grievances, the wage schedule submitted. A tie-up of the service will certainly result from the Executive Government's continued refusal to meet our demands.
Yours truly,
J. T. MEANEY.

SERVICE.

ng Co., Ltd.

Bonne Bay for Government.

Editor Evening Telegram
Dear Sir,—So seldom do we see any reports from this District, in the local papers, I am tempted to send you a few notes.

To begin with, Bonne Bay and neighbourhood were never so prosperous as now. We have had a fairly good fishery, and are hoping that the herring fishery will be as good as the average. If so, with the good prices prevailing, we expect to do fairly.

Our great grievance here is that we are cut off from the rest of the Island. Our mail comes daily to Curling, but we have to depend upon the fortnightly visit of the "Prosper" to get our mail and freight. I am sure if the Government and business people in St. John's realized how much trade is diverted to Halifax on this account, we would long ago have had a steamer plying daily between here and Bay of Islands.

Another grievance we have is that for years successive Grand Juries have been recommending the erection of a Public Building, large enough to contain the Court House, Custom House, Telegraph and Post Offices— one that would be a credit to the District.

At the opening of the Supreme Court on Circuit a couple of weeks ago, the Grand Jury made a strong representation, and pointed out the great need of such a building. We have unofficial advice to the effect that at last our prayer will be granted.

Sir Michael Cashin is not yet very well known in this District, but we believe from all we can hear, that he is a strong man, with a strong Executive behind him. We know the Minister of Justice, Hon. A. B. Morine, is a hustler from the word go, and we expect when our presentment comes to his hands that something will at last be done in the matter. We are sure when Captain Kean comes, and realizes our drawback as regards freight and mails, that he will have that remedied quickly.

We are anxiously waiting to see what the Government will do in this matter, and have great hopes that, at last, this District will get justice.

Yours truly,
WOODY POINT.

Bonne Bay, Sept. 12, 1919.
(The Minister of Justice informs us that, upon the presentation by the Grand Jury having been drawn to his notice, he arranged to send the Inspector of Buildings, or his assistant, to Bonne Bay, to ascertain the needs of the place, to locate a site for a building, and to make other necessary arrangements.—Editor.)

Victory Coins Next.

The suggestion that a new victory coinage shall be introduced in order to celebrate peace, has plenty of precedents to back it. Britain's earliest Naval victory, that of Stuyvesant, won in 1674, was commemorated by King Edward III, by the introduction of an entirely new gold coin, the "noble," bearing a representation of a war galley.

Queen Anne also had a victory coin struck from the silver taken from the Spaniards at Vigo; and Napoleon, after he had overrun all Europe, when at the zenith of his power, introduced an entirely new French coinage in celebration of his successes.

Then, too, there is the precedent of the design of our new vanished sovereignty, with St. George slaying the Dragon. This was first coined in 1818 in the memory of the victory of Waterloo. It was afterwards, however, superseded by the long-familiar shield device, to be eventually resuscitated in 1871.

The St. George and Dragon sovereign, by the way, is merely a rough copy, so far as the design is concerned, of yet another English victory coin, the gold "angel" of Edward IV. This was coined by him in 1465 to celebrate his success over his enemies the Lancastrians. In the Wars of the Roses, and it derived its name from the fact that the figure of the horseman on it was intended to represent St. Michael.

WHY is it when the age child res a certain age falls into whining? what he wants when he doesn't get what he wants. In fact, children not whine when don't get what they want. They not utter that classic of childhood, "can't I?" in a plaintive nasal that gets the most patient nerves on edge, but they get into habit of asking the simplest question in this same peculiar tone.

School Often Cures A Whiner.

The certain age to which I refer in the average child, somewhere between four and a half and five, is when the whine habit begins. It lasts usually until the child is six. Of course, these ages vary in different children, just the time a baby gets his teeth begins to walk vary. They are approximate. One factor in the whining age is, in my opinion, the child's entrance to school. It is a normal child, the discipline rubbing elbows with his comrade pretty sure to knock the whine of him.

I heard a mother say the other day that she wished a whiner was something tangible like adenoids and could be taken to a specialist to come and take it out. He said that a day's work didn't take any more than half an hour with a whining child.

The Whiner May Need a Do

Now there are times when a whiner is really a matter for a physician to attend to—for the child who is in the right condition physically almost sure to whine. And so of adenoids and tonsils. I have cases where it seemed as if the whiner must have removed the adenoids along with them—it disappeared soon after this operation had been performed on his feet.

But I cannot feel that there

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

WHY IS A WHINER?

Why is it that when the average child reaches a certain age he falls into a whining tone whenever he doesn't get what he wants? In fact, some children not only whine when they want, but most of the time. They not only whine when they want, but most of the time. They not only whine when they want, but most of the time. They not only whine when they want, but most of the time.

Some Ways To Nip The Whine Habit In The Bud.

I will grant you that whining is a hard habit to overcome, once it is acquired. But I do think it could be nipped in the bud. Imitate the child's tone so that he may hear how unlovely it is. Refuse to give him anything that he asks for in a whining tone until he has repeated the request in normal tones. If he doesn't make an honest effort to overcome it, punish him now and then by refusing a request because it has been made in a whine.

And lastly, if the child still continues to whine, especially if he has passed the normal whine age, take him to a doctor and see if there is something physical at the bottom of that whine.

VANITY.

I am dyeing, comrades, dyeing, for my whiskers show up gray; the effect is rather trying, so I'd stain them dappled bay. Oh, life's little day is ending, and the evensong is sung, and I spend my time pretending, vainly, too, that I am young. I wear raiment brave and gaudy, and deny I have the gout; but the hinges in my body are as rusty as get out; at the least exertion tiring, I must seek the nearest chair, and my sparkplugs all miss firing every time I'd climb a stair. But I'm evermore pretending that I'm just a three-year-old; all my waking hours I'm spending proving I'm as good as gold. My old eyes are rather rheumy and my teeth are celluloid, but I won't admit I'm gloomy, or that life's an aching void. I chirp on, like Alfred the river, telling folks how good I feel, though I have a musty liver, and rheumatics in my heel. It is vanity, dodgast it, and perhaps that's an offense, and you say I should be restored energy to a tired housewife.

A Strong Mind.

The mind never puts forth greater power over itself than when, in great trials, it yields up calmly its desires, affections, interests to God. There are seasons when to be still demands immeasurably higher strength than to act. Composure is often the highest result of power. Think you it demands no power to calm the stormy elements of passion, to moderate the vehemence of desire, to throw off the load of dejection, to suppress every repining thought, when the dearest hopes are withered, and to turn the wounded spirit from dangerous reveries and wasting grief, to the quiet discharge of ordinary duties? Is there no power put forth, when a man, stripped of his property, of the fruits of a life's labor, quells discontent and gloomy forebodings, and serenely and patiently returns to the task which Providence assigns?—William E. Channing.

OFFER NO EXCUSES.
 Do your best and let it go. Take the failure and the blow, fight to win, but bear the cost. Say you struggled hard and lost; Do not whimper or complain, Do not bitterly explain. Why your battle went astray— You may win some other day.
 What if hard luck hits at you? It shall hit your rival, too! What if all your strength and skill seem to fall you? Just keep still, Shrug your shoulders and keep on. Fighting till all hope is gone! Stick and see the struggle through— Luck may turn and favor you.
 Breaks against you? Now and then That's the common fate of men; Things won't always go your way, Best of plans have gone astray, Best of men have met defeat. Someone failure has to meet, Only petty natures wall When it comes their day to fall.
 Do your best and play the game, Take the loss and bear the blame, Don't recall the tricks of fate, You can lose and still be great; Play the man and not the boy, Do not spoil the victor's joy When defeat is yours to face— Fight to win, but lose with grace.

"Through a Glass, Darkly."

All human vision is thus limited. We cannot see the distant scene, nor clearly the scene near by. We grope for meanings and motives, because the glass through which we look is so clouded. We mistake pitfalls for rosebuds, and discipline for destruction. The glass through which we see darkly changes even the colors of things. We are impatient and fretful, feverish and unsteady because we cannot see clearly. To see clearly will be heaven. That is the consummation which the great apostle promises. We shall see "face to face." We shall neither judge nor be misjudged. We shall see more good than evil. We shall doubt our eyes instead of our brother.
 Now . . . through a glass darkly: Then face to face.—George Clarke Peck.

In Stolen Plumes.

With that cool effrontery so characteristic of the man who dared to misappropriate the title Liberal as a name for his factional party, the leader of the Opposition pursues his tortuous way and unblushingly proclaims himself the successor of the late Liberal chieftain, whose candidates he so viciously hounded in Trinity District in 1909. The stolen plumes of Liberalism will not stand erect on the brow of Hon. R. A. Squires, neither will old-time Liberals stand for the usurpation of the man who desires to be acclaimed as the Liberal leader.

Hon. R. A. Squires professes to-day to have always been a Liberal. Let us enquire, for a few moments, into his past political record and see how near he measures up to his professions. Mr. Squires, in his early days, entered the law office of Lord Morris, to study for the bar. As he progressed in his legal subjects, under the tuition of his legal head, it is only natural to suppose that he, as well imbued some of the political ideas of, as he then was, Sir Edward Morris, ideas which he subsequently put into practice, when a candidate for the People's Party in 1909.

His Liberal sentiments and principles were most pronounced in the campaign of that year when Mr. Squires headed the ticket in Trinity for the People's Party, led by Sir Edward Morris, in OPPOSITION TO THE LIBERAL PARTY UNDER THE LEADERSHIP OF SIR ROBERT BOND. Associated with Mr. Squires at that time were Hon. R. Watson and Mr. E. G. Grant. The Liberal team was made up of Messrs. G. W. Gushue, A. W. Miller and G. W. B. Ayre, and it is a matter of public notoriety that Mr. Squires fought this campaign in a most bitter and malicious spirit. His treatment of Mr. G. W. Gushue was such as to bring upon him the opprobrium of all decent men. Mr. Squires was particularly virulent and bitter in the conduct of his campaign, and many will remember how liberal he was toward his opponents.

That year Mr. Squires headed the poll in Trinity. He was elected by an anti-Liberal vote, as also were his colleagues, and he took his seat in the House of Assembly as the sworn foe of Sir Robert Bond and those of his following who were returned. Yet to-day this same Mr. Squires urges his claim for the support of the people on the ground that he is and always has been a Liberal. Liberalism favors greater freedom in politics, and is inclined to welcome new ideas. Mr. Squires' idea of Liberalism is antagonistic to that school of thought. He does not want to see any party in the field but his own. Witness his frenzied warnings to the prospective Labor and Independent candidates. He, in effect, through his controlled papers, says: "Stand off! If you are not with me you are against me." Therefore he is not a progressive but a reactionary, and one who, given the power, would speedily develop into an autocrat of the first degree.

Going further into the political record of Hon. R. A. Squires as a Liberal—Heaven defend us,—we find that in 1913 he again headed the People's Party ticket in Trinity District in opposition to the Liberal-Union Party, which was led by Sir Robert Bond, but notwithstanding the big vote given him in 1909 he was not sufficiently popular to retain his seat and was literally "snowed under" in an avalanche of ballots cast against him by the disgusted electors of Trinity, being defeated by the lowest Liberal-Union candidate whose majority over Mr. Squires was 914 votes. Immediately following this election and the reorganization of the Government, Mr. Squires again demonstrated his Liberalism by demanding the portfolio of Justice from Sir Edward Morris, and getting it, thus creating the anomaly of a departmental head who held no seat in the People's Chamber, and was therefore not directly responsible to the House of Assembly for the doings of his department.

This then is the political record of the man who has clothed himself in the garb of Liberalism, the garments being stolen from that party, not an old or young member of which had any desire to place Mr. Squires in the position to which he has appointed himself. He arrogates the title of Liberal without authority. In other words he has become a political brigand and has forcibly taken that which does not belong to him, either by inheritance or selection. His party following, such as it is, is made up of Liberals (?) of a similar type to himself, and as a consequence Liberal voters who have remained true to the traditions of their one time powerful party, will not sully the records of the past by casting a ballot in favor of Hon. R. A. Squires or his Liberal (?) Reform Party.

Will Squires Answer?

The Star, yesterday, was guilty of a most ferocious attack on Hon. A. B. Morine, Minister of Justice, in relation to his long ago connection with the Reid Company and especially with the Contract of 1898.

The fact that the Star is the personal organ of Hon. R. A. Squires, and acts upon his instructions in matters such as this, entitles us to ask some pointed questions upon these subjects.

Is it true that Dr. Mosdell, now editor of the Squires organs Star and Post, early in the Spring of 1918, waited upon Mr. Morine in Toronto and showed him a telegram which he (Mosdell) alleged to be from Mr. Squires, urging that Mr. Morine should return to this Colony for the purpose of saving the country from the thralldom of a Lloyd-Coaker Government?

Is it true that throughout 1918 and part of 1919, Mr. Squires continued in close relations with Mr. Morine, re political matters, and that as late as May last, Mr. Squires repeatedly urged Mr. Morine to join with him in organizing an Opposition upon the understanding that either should support the other as leader, if that other were chosen by the party, to which proposition Mr. Morine refused to assent.

papers, says: "Stand off! If you are not with me you are against me." Therefore he is not a progressive but a reactionary, and one who, given the power, would speedily develop into an autocrat of the first degree.

Qualified Queries.

Who said Gratt?
What did the Herald call Editor Mosdell?

Who objects to Independent and Labor candidates?
Those threats? Are they being made for intimidatory purposes?

What candidate for the West End is buying up all the "Gem" cigarettes in the small stores?
Will the beer shop habitues, as stated, vote the straight ticket for the Squires-Campbell candidates?

Wasn't it Arris Mosdell of the Star and Post whom the Advocate styled "the bottler," and whose bottles he was washing now?

If Hon. R. A. Squires, Past Grand Master of the Orange Association, and Past Grand Master of the Royal Black Preceptory is going to be Commander-in-Chief of the James Brigade for Ireland?

Didn't the Hon. R. A. Squires do some "shooting" on his own account at various Grand Lodge Sessions, both in Newfoundland and Canada? (The records are there, brother, and will make interesting reading.)

If you spell Star backwards does it not make the word R A T S? And there you have it.

Will Establish Labor Bureau.

The Government has wisely decided to establish a Labor Bureau in the near future. Probably this will not be a separate department but will be a sub-department of some other, already in existence. In the matter of the settling of labor and capital disputes this will have a far-reaching effect and the congratulation of all goes to the Government on its wise action.

H. C. L. Commission.

Another decision arrived at by the Government will meet with the approval of the country. This is to appoint a Commission to enquire into the high cost of living, such as has been appointed in Canada and the States and other countries of the world.

Government Candidates.

Hon. A. B. Morine, the member for Bonavista, has been particularly lucky in securing for his partner in the forthcoming election Captain William C. Winsor, of Westview. The name of the third will be announced within a few days. Captain Winsor has been in public life before, representing both Bay de Verde and Bonavista districts at different times. He has just returned from Labrador with a bumper ticket. The indications are that the Morine team, in Bonavista, will sweep all before it and return with the laurel of the victorious.

High Cost of Hay.

Considering that the season's crop is much better than that of last year, those who have to buy forage for their cattle are wondering why the price of hay is so high. A quantity on the "Beach" yesterday, was offered at $60 per ton. Some of our dumb animals will likely feel the effects of the H.C.L.

Last Evening's Sunset.

The most beautiful sunset seen in St. John's for many years, if not for all time, was to be seen yesterday evening. The sun went down in a splendour of crimson and scarlet as it disappeared behind the horizon. The sky then turned to the color of amber remaining that color for some time. Not another color was to be seen and the pure amber was the most beautiful and the most striking imaginable. Those who saw last evening's sunset will not forget it for a long time.

Fatal Motor Accident.

Miss Dorothy Barter, 16-year-old daughter of Mr. Jonas Barter, architect, killed by the motor car of Mr. Nath Snow, of Bowring Bros.—Sad occurrence and widespread sympathy—Motor Driver gave himself up.

One more victim has to be added to the long list of fatalities caused by motor cars during the past year or so. This time the victim is a young and likable girl and for the parents of whom there is to-day compassionate sympathy. Miss Dorothy Barter, the sixteen-year-old daughter of Mr. Jonas Barter, the architect, was a bright and successful pupil at the Mercy Convent, than whom there will be none who will miss her more nor extend more sympathy to the bereaved parents.

Yesterday afternoon, shortly after five o'clock, Miss Barter, in company with Miss Rose Foran, daughter of Mr. J. Foran, the City News Reporter staff, started to cross Government Street about opposite Peckham's the butchers. Coming toward them were a horse and wagon and, further back, beyond the wagon, a motor car driven by Mr. Nath Snow, of Bowring Bros. Miss Foran hung back, while Miss Barter hesitated for a second and then continued to cross. Miss Foran attempted to hold her by the arm. At the same time calling frantically for her to stay back. Disregarding the warning, however, the unfortunate young lady was struck in the chest by the motor car and knocked to the side of the road.

Mr. Snow, who had stopped the car within ten feet of where the accident occurred, now ran back to the poor girl, while Miss Foran, becoming hysterical, had to be taken into a nearby house. With the help of some who had at once gathered, the victim was tenderly carried to the house of Captain Goose, where it could be seen instantly that she was badly injured, being then unconscious. Dr. Fraser, arriving on the scene very quickly, pronounced the injuries not serious and stated that Miss Barter was suffering from shock. Near about six o'clock she regained consciousness and was conveyed to her home, 53 Bond Street, in Dr. Fraser's car. There she was examined by Dr. Macpherson, who had arrived, when it was found that the injuries, being of a very serious nature, would prove fatal. The right collar bone had been broken, the chest crushed, and a broken rib had punctured the lung. In addition, the body was covered with cuts and bruises. All that was possible to be done was done, but proving unavailable, the poor little sufferer passed out of her pain shortly after seven. Rev. Dr. Carter having in the meantime administered the last rites of the Roman Catholic Church.

What will undoubtedly be a con-soling thought to the driver of the car was that just before the fatal crash occurred, Miss Barter said that no blame could be laid at his door. He was badly affected, however, and visited the home of the girl's parents, expressing sympathy over the sad accident. After the end came he gave himself up to the police, being admitted to bail in the amount of $20,000 until this morning, when he appeared before the magistrate.

Miss Foran recovered from her bad fright during the evening and had strength enough to visit her husband's home.

The accident has struck into the heart of the community and to-day there is widespread sympathy and sadness.

This Morning's Fire.

At 4.55 this morning a fire alarm from the East End brought the firemen to the house of Rev. D. B. Ashford, 4 Musgrave Terrace, where a fire had broken out. Mr. Ashford, with Mrs. Ashford, have been in Topsail for a couple of weeks, and they left town again yesterday, having been in for the day. Before leaving last night, however, they lighted a fire in the house, and kindled the kettle for a lunch. It is thought that this caused the fire. The damage to the house was considerable, although it was not totally destroyed. Mr. Ashford came into town to-day by motor car.

A Serious Market Condition.

The following letter, which explains itself, was received by the editor of the Telegram and kindly given the benefit of the commercial men of the country.

Dear Sir,—We beg to confirm our telegram as per copy enclosed and by same you will see that, unfortunately, our market is still overstocked with Old Codfish in its most part and also New Codfish, as lately entered for Messrs. L. & Couto, five cargoes during two days.

On behalf of all concerned (shippers and buyers) we decided to telegraph you, asking you to advise your friends, shippers and owners to suspend their shipments of codfish to Portugal, because stocks are again accumulating and there are no free markets in Oporto to warehouse the fish, and therefore, it will not be necessary to force the prices in order to effect sale in order to store the coming cargoes of new or still old codfish.

This is a very important matter for all, and we think it advisable that all the shippers would divert for some time their shipments to this side pending their arrival at other markets, saving this way, as much as possible their interests.

We have still on hand 7,000 qts. of old fish and we cannot sell it at any rate, though we have made all our efforts to do so. All the other importers have large quantities, and consequently, we find it good that they stop now the shipments.

We believe that the London agents are already doing this on account of the "Gigantic" which was bound to this market did not enter in Lixoes Harbor for orders as usual, and proceeded to other markets. We had the approval of all the Importers.

The largest quantity consists of Old Codfish, second quality British Codfish and third the old and inferior Norwegian Codfish.

Expecting that you will advise, as requested, the shippers from St. John's and Outports according to our information, we beg to remain,
Dear Sir,
Yours very truly,
E. A. LOPES.

COOPER-KENNEDY.
A very pretty wedding ceremony took place at St. Patrick's Church at 8 o'clock last evening, when Mr. David F. Cooper, of W. H. Bartlett's tonorial parlors, led to the altar Miss Theresa Kennedy, daughter of Mary and the late George Kennedy, Job Street. The nuptial knot was tied by Rev. H. Renouf, P.P., in the presence of many friends of the happy couple. The bride was attended by Mrs. Phillip Cooper, sister-in-law of the groom, while Mr. James Kennedy, ably supported, ably groom as best man. The bride looked very pretty in a handsome costume of white silk and carried a bouquet with veil and orange blossoms. After the ceremony the party drove around Bowring Park. Upon return a reception was held at their future residence, New Gower Street, where the health of the happy pair was duly honored. The Groom's present to the bride was a gold bracelet, to the bridesmaid a locket, and to the best man a gold stick pin. Many very beautiful presents were received which testify to the popularity of the young couple.

God Back of All.

However distasteful a service may be, or however disagreeable the person to whom it must be rendered, God is back of it all, and loved that person well enough to give His Son to die for him. Dr. Guthrie is walking along the streets of Edinburgh when he overtakes a little girl carrying a child much too heavy for her. In a very gentle way Dr. Guthrie said, "My child, the baby is too heavy for you, isn't he?" With a shining face, she made quick response: "No, sir; he's my brother." It makes a difference that one for whom I must toil and wait, whose burden I must bear, was one for whom Jesus died, and thus is bound to me with the cord of divine love.—J. Wilbur Chapman.

British Naval Victories

(Archibald Hurd, in Fortnightly Review.)

There is no parallel to the succession of victories which British sea men have won during this great war. At the Battle of Falkland Island the White Ensign gained the victory of annihilation recorded in British naval annals; in Heligoland and the running fight from Dogger Bank to Borkum Reef, successes were achieved with which Nelson would have been proud to be associated; the Battle of Jutland the enemy overwhelmed by the guns of British naval fleet, and, escaping the mist and gathering darkness with many vessels bloodily shambled never again had the temerity to fight a fleet action. Great results were achieved by British seamen at sea, and when the Armistice was signed the grand fleet was strong in material than when hostilities opened, while its prestige had been established on a pinnacle to which the eyes of the men of the world were turned in admiration. We never may be the inclination of our egotism that during the opening five years we intend to lay down no new ships of war. With the courage that we faced German war preparations, we may well believe the peace preparations, setting example not only to Europe, but the world at large. If the League of Nations requires material port in naval armaments during the period of this naval holiday, we be in a position to make the largest contribution of any of the powers while at the same time exhibit by the standard of our commitments and the absence of new construction, our sincere desire to a recurrence of competitive building. That decision not only voids no pledge as to the future but would carry with it the weight that if the naval holiday is honored by other powers, then country, with its vast resources, the creation of naval armaments will, if it must, take up again heavy burden it has borne for long.

(Archibald Hurd, in Fortnightly Review.)

There is no parallel to the succession of victories which British seamen have won during this great war. At the Battle of Falkland Islands, the White Ensign gained the first victory of annihilation recorded in British naval annals; in Heligoland and the running fight from Dogger Bank to Bornum Ritz, successes were achieved with which Nelson would have been proud to have had his name associated; at the Battle of Jutland the enemy was overwhelmed by the guns of the British naval fleet, and, escaping in the mist and gathering darkness with many vessels bloody shambles, never again had the temerity to risk a fleet action. Great results were achieved by British seamen at slight cost, and when the Armistice was signed the grand fleet was but the material than when hostilities opened, while its prestige had been established on a pinnacle to which the eyes of the men of the world were turned in admiration. Whatever may be the inclination of other powers, we can announce, without equivocation, that during the ensuing five years we intend to lay down no new ships of war. With the same courage that we faced Germany's war preparations, we may well face the peace preparations, setting an example not only to Europe, but to the world at large. If the League of Nations requires material support in naval armaments during the period of this naval holiday, we shall be in a position to make the largest contribution of any of the powers, while at the same time exhibiting, by the standard of our commissions, the absence of new construction, our sincere desire to check a recurrence of competitive ship-building. That decision not only involves no pledge as to the future, but would carry with it the warning that if the naval holiday is ignored by other powers, then this country, with its vast resources for the creation of naval armaments, will, if it must, take up again the heavy burden it has borne for so long.

THREW IT OUT.

MELBOURNE, Aus., Sept. 16. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—The Trades' Hall Council have thrown out the proposal for a one big union.

FOR INDIAN PROTECTION.

SIMLA, India, Sept. 16. (Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—At a meeting of the Viceroy's Council, Sir George Barnes, Minister of Commerce, introduced a Bill imposing an export duty of fifteen per centum on hides and skins, with a rebate of ten per centum on those exported to other parts of the Empire and tanned there. The Bill is intended to protect the promising Indian tanning industry and is the first definite protection measure to be introduced in India, and the first application of the principle of imperial preference. It received a warm welcome from the representative of Commerce and the Indians.

Obituary.

There passed peacefully away at 5 o'clock Sunday morning, Sept. 7th, at her daughter's residence, 13 Holdsworth Street, Agnes, widow of the late Patrick Rice, of Red Head Cove, Bay de Verde, and daughter of the late Catherine and John McCarthy of Harbor Grace. She leaves to mourn three daughters—Sister Josephine of St. Michael's Convent, Belvidere; Mrs. Fowling, Renewals, and Mrs. Ryan of this city; and three sons—Frank, residing in Halifax; Michael, in Red Head Cove, and William of this city; two daughters and one son having predeceased her, Hettie and Mary, and Private John, who paid the supreme sacrifice somewhere in France on July 1st, 1916. She also leaves one sister and one brother and 21 grandchildren, and a large circle of friends. Deceased died fortified by the rites of the Roman Catholic Church. Her remains were laid to rest in Mount Carmel Cemetery. May her soul rest in peace.

Hr. Grace Notes.

Master James Stewart, son of Mr. J. C. Stewart of Bell Island came to town by motor boat yesterday, on a short holiday trip.

Mrs. John Sullivan, Sr. of Lady Pond Road passed away on Sunday, after a short illness. The husband, Mr. John Sullivan, who is over 80 years of age is a well known seaman and has the sympathy of the whole community.

Death has been unusually busy in this neighborhood during the past week. Among those called from this world to the great beyond are, Mrs. Moses Sheppard, an old lady residing on Kitchin's Hill; Mr. Patrick Alcock, another old resident; Miss Mary O'Neil, sister of Mr. Patrick O'Neil, who for years was a trusted employe of the Reid Company around the Railway Station here; Mr. O'Neil himself is also in poor health. Several young children also passed away during the past few days.

Several Waltonians took a final run to the haunts of the fny tribe yesterday, it being the last day of the trouting season for 1919. Poor success has attended the efforts of these sports during the past 10 days or so.

Mr. Wm. Coysh, of St. John's, a returned soldier, after spending a few weeks here with friends left for his home in St. John's by yesterday's train. Since coming here Mr. Coysh has made many friends.

The K. E. Brigade is once again in working order. The Brigade is now under the management of Rev. Mr. Cracknell, Messrs. LeDrew, Murray, Spry and other returned soldiers. We wish the brigade very much success.

Motorists coming this way this summer complain that the roads when nearing our town are not good for car-driving. We think the Government will soon be compelled to levy a tax on motor cars and distribute the amount between the different sections over which they race and tear up the roads. Then we will be able to accommodate them better with good roads. We are sorry for your tires, Mr. Motorist, but we are also sorry for our roads. Can you suggest any other remedy?

During the absence of Rev. F. S. Coffin, the pulpit of St. Andrew's Church is being occupied by Rev. Dr. James.

Capt. James Parmiter, who has been on fishery service at St. Barbe District, during the summer, returned home yesterday.

Tenders are out for a new ferry boat to ply on this harbor. The boat must be capable of seating 60 passengers. She will need to be a fairly large boat, and the expense of running her would be great. It will soon be in order to give the Riverhead and South Side people a car service from Bear's Cove to Feather Point. Two cars on the service would be sufficient and the benefits to the town and South Side would be great. Would the expense be much more than what it will cost to run a boat of the required dimensions to South Side and Riverhead every day? This has been suggested and it is worth considering.

ARCH SOLD.—The arch erected in honor of H. R. the Prince of Wales, near the Beach was purchased by Mr. Ed. Hanlon. It will be dismantled immediately.

The Apple

(By GEORGE R. SIMS in "Wine Pie.")

After his sensational defence Mary Smith—the good-looking young cook who was charged with attempting to kill her mistress by putting son in some apple dumplings—Gilbert Redgrave never looked back.

When the jury brought in a verdict of "Not Guilty" against Mary, there were many people in court who were convinced that the verdict was largely due to the skill and eloquence of the prisoner's advocate.

And Gilbert Redgrave thought so, too.

Two years after, the young barrister, having a fine practice at the criminal bar, married and was very busy.

A year after his marriage he was away for two or three weeks.

The first evening he was at home he congratulated his wife on the excellence of the dinner that had been prepared for them.

"You must have found a new cook," he said.

"Yes, dear," replied Mrs. Redgrave. "I have, and she's a perfect treasure."

Her husband, who was a connoisseur in cooking, agreed. "Going out early one morning he found her constitutional, he met the new cook in the hall, and she smiled at him with a smile of recognition. Mr. Redgrave made a gallant attempt to turn the smile, but the effort was unsuccessful.

The new cook was the young woman who had been found innocent of attempting to kill her mistress by putting poison in some apple dumplings.

Gilbert Redgrave determined to think the matter over quietly before saying anything to his wife, as he did not wish to alarm her.

If he discharged the cook, who according to his wife was a perfect treasure, he would have to give her a satisfactory reference. How could he conscientiously recommend to an innocent family circle a woman who might, when she was offended, retaliate by putting poison in the family food?

The evidence against Mary, when she was tried for the attempt, was that her mistress had one morning severely reprimanded her.

That day, at the midday meal, the mistress discovered a curious taste in her apple dumpling, and fortunately did not swallow the portion she put in her mouth. The dumpling was analysed, and found to contain poison.

But Gilbert Redgrave had succeeded.

The Apple Dumplings.

(By GEORGE R. SIMS in "Winter's Ple.")

After his sensational defence of Mary Smith—the good-looking young cook who was charged with attempting to kill her mistress by putting poison in some apple dumplings—Gilbert Redgrave never looked back.

When the jury brought in a verdict of "Not Guilty" against Mary, there were many people in court who were convinced that the verdict was largely due to the skill and eloquence of the prisoner's advocate.

Two years after, the young barrister, having a fine practice at the criminal bar, married and was very happy.

A year after his marriage he was away for two or three weeks. The first evening he was at home he congratulated his wife on the excellence of the dinner that had been prepared for them.

"You must have found a new cook," he said.

"Yes, dear," replied Mrs. Redgrave. "I have, and she's a perfect treasure." Her husband, who was a connoisseur in cookery, agreed.

Going out early one morning for a constitutional, he met the new cook in the hall, and she smiled at him. It was a smile of recognition. Mr. Redgrave made a gallant attempt to return the smile, but the effort was not successful.

The new cook was the young woman who had been found innocent of attempting to kill her mistress by putting poison in some apple dumplings. Gilbert Redgrave determined to think the matter over quietly before saying anything to his wife, as he did not wish to alarm her.

If he discharged the cook, who according to his wife was a perfect treasure, he would have to give her a satisfactory reference. How could he conscientiously recommend to some innocent family circle a woman who might, when she was offended, retaliate by putting poison in the family food?

The evidence against Mary, when she was tried for the attempt, was that her mistress had one morning severely reprimanded her.

That day, at the midday meal, the mistress discovered a curious taste in her apple dumpling, and fortunately did not swallow the portion she had put in her mouth. The dumpling was analysed, and found to contain poison.

But Gilbert Redgrave had succeeded in showing that no first-class evidence had been tendered that would warrant a jury in saying that the cook put it there. There were three other servants in the establishment. There was found in the dumplings a small amount of the poison that had been kept in the house for killing rats, and it was perfectly possible that there had been an accident.

The jury accepted that view, but now that he found the cook on his own premises and preparing his wife's food and his own, the young barrister was more inclined than ever to take the view that Mary Smith had had a lucky escape.

How could he dismiss such a woman and recommend her to anyone else? But if he discharged her and refused to give her a character, he would be keeping her out of a situation and she could bring an action against him.

That was why he determined to say nothing to his wife until he had arrived at a well-thought-out decision.

That evening at dinner, just as the game course had been removed, Mrs. Redgrave said, "Oh, Gilbert, I had a little tiff with cook this morning, and I spoke rather sharply to her. But as you like her cooking so much, I think perhaps to-morrow I had better tell her that I forgive her."

The next moment the parlourmaid entered the room with the sweets. Gilbert glanced at them and gasped. They were apple dumplings.

It was a moment of swift decision. "Don't hand the dumplings," he almost shouted to the maid. "Put them on the table and go up to my wardrobe and feel in my pockets till you find a telegram, and then bring it to me."

The moment the maid had left them, Gilbert seized the dumplings, and then them up in his handkerchief, and deposited them under the table.

"What are you doing?" exclaimed his wife.

"Hush! Not a word before the girl. The new cook is a woman I defended and saved when she was charged with putting poison into apple dumplings because her mistress had reprimanded her."

"What!" exclaimed Mrs. Redgrave. "Oh, Gilbert, we must get rid of her at once. We shall all be poisoned in our beds—I mean in our chairs."

"Quite so. But you mustn't send her away. You must see her this evening and apologize to her. Raise her wages; say that we will do everything to make her happy. Then perhaps we shall be able to eat in safety until we have proof of her guilt."

"Hush!"

Gilbert held up a warning finger. The maid had found an old telegram in one of her master's pockets, and brought it to him; but as she came towards the table she cast an astonished glance at the dish that had held the dumplings, and at the plates which showed no signs of having been used.

The skilled advocate instantly detected the thoughts that were passing through the mind of the parlourmaid.

"It's all right," he said. "Your mistress and I adore apple dumplings. We always eat them with our fingers. It's the only way to get the full flavour."

That evening Mrs. Redgrave saw the cook and apologized for her hasty words, promised her a rise, and gave her a dress that she had only worn twice and a hat that she had only worn once.

"I'm so glad you liked those apple dumplings, ma'am," said the cook, gratefully. "Apple dumplings are a speciality of mine."

"Yes," replied her mistress, with a ghastly attempt at a smile. "But don't make us any more just yet. You see, Mr. Redgrave likes them so much that he may be tempted to eat more than is good for him."

"Oh, ma'am," replied the cook, "you needn't be afraid. There was very little of anything that will hurt you" increased his alibi.

Mrs. Redgrave reported cook's reassuring remark to her husband, but the "very little of anything that will hurt you" increased his alibi.

"Great Scott!" he exclaimed, "she was going to do it by degrees this time in order to escape detection! Thank goodness you apologized to her. Tell her she can have the use of the drawing-room twice a week to entertain her friends. We must make it worth her while to spare our lives till we have a good and sufficient reason for dismissing her and refusing to give her a character. I may find in these dumplings, I know the Home Office expert personally, I shall take the dumplings to his private address in the morning and ask him to analyse them."

At half-past nine the next morning Gilbert Redgrave walked out of his house with a cardboard box under his arm. The cardboard box contained the dumplings.

At the end of the road he hailed a passing taxi, gave the man an address in Harley Street, and told him to drive to it.

In Harley Street, Gilbert Redgrave alighted, and handed the man his fare. The man drove away and the barrister was shown into the consulting room of the Home Office expert.

Then in one swift moment he realized what had happened. He had left the cardboard box with the probably poisoned apple dumplings in the taxi!

With a cry of horror he flung up his hands and rushed out into the street. If the dumplings were poisoned, the possible consequences were being driven about London, and the dumplings might at any moment be consumed by some innocent discoverer of the delectable delicacy.

For a moment the young barrister's brain was in a whirl. But suddenly he saw a chance.

He had not taken the number of the taxi, but he remembered that it was a B. & G., and that the driver was a middle-aged man with side whiskers. He remembered the whiskers on account of their rarity in London.

Without a moment's delay he made his way to the B. & G. garage and saw the superintendent. The superintendent knew the driver with the side whiskers. His face trimmings were so uncommon that he was known by the name of "Whiskers."

"Whiskers" is one of the early men at the stations," said the superintendent. "So he goes off about two. I'll give you his address, and you'll probably find him at home about that time."

Gilbert Redgrave reached the taxi driver's home shortly after two. He was too late. The driver, his wife, and two children, had just finished the apple dumplings.

"My good man," gasped the alarmed advocate, "I have reason to believe that those dumplings may have been poisoned! You must all go at once to the nearest doctor and ask him to use the stomach pump! Here is the money."

He flung two sovereigns on the table, and fled without giving his address. The man might be interviewed by the halfpenny evening papers, and the well-known criminal barrister did not wish his name to be mixed up with the affair.

Then, hot, excited, and weary, he made his way home.

Just as he reached his house he saw the cook coming up the area steps. She bounded towards him.

"Oh, sir," she cried, "I'm so happy. My former mistress, the one I was accused of poisoning when you so nobly defended me, has written to me to say that the poison was put into the apple dumplings, after I had made them, by the boy who cleaned the boots. He is now a sailor, and has written from foreign parts to the mistress to say how sorry he is, and will she forgive him, and ask me to forgive him too. I'm going to see her now. Mrs. Redgrave has given me the afternoon off."

And there and then, carried away by the sudden relief to his feelings, Mr. Gilbert Redgrave, the well-known passed through a silken mesh

IMAGINE a spider's web which only the shining dew makes clear—then imagine a silkworm's thread as fine.

Imagine a mesh formed by thousands of such gossamer-like threads contained within a single square inch. Conceive this weave to be so fine, so fine that only dust of flower-bloom, or powder as microscopic, could sift through it.

Through so incredibly minute a filter Colgate's Talc is passed. By what other means could come its delicate, breath-like quality—its airiness lighter than thistle-down, lighter than gossamer?

To the tender, sun-sensitive or wind-whipped skin what can be more gratefully cooling, what be gentler or more fragrant than Colgate's Talc?

What talc, while adding its charm to the complexion, merges with it as does Colgate's Talc?
So fine, so very fine it is,
And perfumed to your liking.

Messrs. Vickers, Limited, say they are willing to present to the nation the Vickers-Vimy-Rolls aeroplane in which Captain Sir John Alcock and

The Public Is Now Told All About Tanlac

Leading Authorities Quoted And Show Conclusively Just What This Medicine Really Is.

In a recent issue of this paper an announcement was made that Tanlac now has the largest sale of any medicine of its kind in the world, and that more than twelve million bottles had been sold during the past four years.

These are unusual figures, and the question naturally arises in the mind of the reader why this phenomenal success and why has this preparation so far outstripped all other medicines of its kind. It is only natural therefore that the manufacturers should offer some explanation to satisfy public interest.

In the first place, Tanlac is manufactured in one of the largest and most modernly equipped laboratories in this country. Its formula is purely ethical and complies with all national and state pure food and drug laws. Altogether there are ten ingredients in Tanlac, each of which is of recognized therapeutic value.

Many of these ingredients have been individually known and used since civilization first began, and some of them have been used and prescribed by leading physicians everywhere, but until they were brought together in proper proportion and association as in the Tanlac formula, humanity had not heretofore realized their full value and effect.

In referring to one of the more important ingredients of Tanlac, the Encyclopedia Britannica says: "It has long been the source of the most valuable tonic medicines that have ever been discovered." In referring to others of the general tonic drugs contained in Tanlac the 13th Edition of Potter's Therapeutics, a standard medical text book, states that—"they impart general tone and strength to the entire system, including all organs and tissues."

This same well known authority describing the physiological action of still another of the ingredients of Tanlac which is of value in treating what is commonly known as a "run-down condition" uses the following expression: "It is highly esteemed in loss of appetite during convalescence from acute diseases."

There are certain other elements in Tanlac which because of their influence upon the appetite, digestion, assimilation and elimination improve the nutrition and vital activity of all the tissues and organs of the body, and produce that state of general tonic which is called health.

In discussing another ingredient the Encyclopedia Britannica says: "It is one of the most efficient of that class of substances which act upon the stomach so as to invigorate digestion and thereby increase the general nutrition. It is used in dyspepsia, chlorosis, anemia and various other diseases in which the tone of the stomach and alimentary canal is deficient." Concerning still another ingredient this same standard authority says: "It causes dilatation of the gastric blood vessels, increases secretion of the gastric juice, and causes greater activity in the movements of the muscular layers in the walls of the stomach. It also tends to lessen the sensibility of the stomach, and so may relieve gastric pain."

The United States Dispensatory makes the following comment regarding another ingredient: "It may be used in all cases of pure debility of the digestive organs or where a general tonic impression is required. Dyspepsia, a tonic gout hysteria, and intermittent fever are among many affections in which it has proven useful."

There are certain other ingredients described in the Dispensatory and in other standard medical text books as having a beneficial action upon the organs of secretion, whose proper functioning results in the purification of the blood streams passing through them. In this manner objectionable and poisonous ingredients of the blood are removed, and the entire system is invigorated and vitalized.

Tanlac was designed primarily for the correction of disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels. At the same time, however, it is a powerful reconstructive tonic and body builder, for it naturally follows that any medicine that brings about proper assimilation of the food and the thorough elimination of the waste products must therefore have a strengthening and most beneficial effect upon the entire system.

Although Tanlac's claims for supremacy are abundantly supported by the world's leading authorities, it is the people themselves who have really made Tanlac what it is. Millions upon millions have used it, and have told other millions what it has done for them. That is why Tanlac has become the real sensation of the drug trade in this country, and that is also why it is the most widely talked-of medicine in the world today.

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac Representative.

LITTLE GIRL!

Little girl, you look so small! Don't you wear no clothes at all? Don't you wear no shimmy-shirt, Don't you wear no petty-skirt? Just your corsets and your hose—Are these all your underclothes?

Little girl, you look so slight When I see you in the light, With your skirts cut rather high Won't you catch a cold and die? Ain't you 'traid to show your calf? It must make some fellers laugh.

Little girl, what is the cause Why your clothes is made of gauze? Don't you wear no undervest When you go out fully dressed? Do you like those peek-a-boo's? Not to wear no underclothes? 'Steard of normal underclothes?

Little girl, your 'spenders show When the sun's for you, I can see your tinted flesh Through your little gown of mesh, Is it modest, do you suppose? Not to wear no underclothes?

Two Hibernian workmen were verbally settling affairs of state in a refreshment room of a hotel and one remarked: "After all is said and done the great masses of the payroll must constitute the bulk of the population." The other disputant, deliberating for a brief moment over this oracular statement that sounded so truthful, replied: "There for you, unless they are overwhelmed by the vast numbers of the privileged few."

"In recognition of his heroic service, I suppose?" "No, sah, I reckon he got dat job in recognition o' his having lost one o' his hands."

Washington, Sept. 10.—Away back in 1882, when Timothy O. Howe, of Wisconsin was Postmaster General in the Cabinet of President Chester A. Arthur, a letter was mailed from the Ebbitt House here to Col. Charles E. Sherman, a guest at the Metropolitan Hotel, seven blocks away.

The letter bore the admonition, "Postmaster will please return to above address if not called for in ten days." But the letter, mailed on April 27, 1882, apparently was not called for in ten days or even in more than thirty-seven years, for it was returned to the Ebbitt House to-day. And it was returned in the Administration of Postmaster General Burleson.

While the letter was going the seven blocks and returning there have been sixteen Postmaster Generals. The letter came back to the Ebbitt with the regular return mail and bore only two postmarks, that of April 27, 1882, and Sept. 7, 1919. The hotel management is attempting to locate Col. Sherman, to whom the letter was addressed.

The Yarn of the Blue Star Line.

When I was a lad and went to sea in seventy-seven or six maybe, There was ten tall ships on Merseyside.

Did sail or berth with every tide; There was "Hills" and "Halls" and "Dales" and "Bens," "Counties" and "Cities" and "Locks" and "Glens."

And none was there so fast and fine As them that sailed in the Blue Star Line.

They had tough-nut skippers as hard as nails To crack 'em along in the Cape Horn gale.

And hard-case shellbacks thirty-two There used to be in a Blue Star crew To man the captain and raise the shout

At tugs and sheets when she went about, And brass-bound reefers eight or nine In them tall ships o' the Blue Star Line.

But Lord! the names them good ships had—had—

Enough to drive a plain man mad! The way them names was spelled or said

'Ud crack your jaw like Liverpool 'dressed'—

There was "Parthen-ope" and "Thucydides,"

And a whole lot more and worse besides, And "Melpo-mene" and "Euphrosyne" Was sort o' names in the Blue Star Line.

But the steam came up and the sail was down,

And them tall ships of high renown Was scrapped or wrecked or sold away

To 'tween the Dutch or the Dagoes, day by day.

They went the way o' the songs we sung,

And the girls we kissed when we all were young,

And most o' the chaps as used to sign Along with me in the Blue Star Line.

The "Parthen-ope" she met her fate, Run down in a fog off the Golden Gate;

And the "Thucydides" kept knocking around 'Tween the Cape and Cardiff and Puget Sound

'Till a fire in her main hold burned her down

To the water's edge at Simonstown; And none was left but the "Euphrosyne."

The blooming last o' the Blue Star Line.

There isn't a cargo great or small But that old hooker's carried 'em all.

For whether it's rubber or whether it's bread,

Coal or copper or salt or spice, Teak or whale-oil or bone manure,

Smelly guano or copper ore, Gulf ports cotton or B.C. pine—

All's one to the last o' the Blue Star Line.

There isn't a tugboat far or near But's took her to sea with a parting cheer,

Or picked her up off o' Lizard Head With the nine months' rust in her hawse pipes red;

There isn't a pilot near or far From Gravesend Reach to Astoria Bar

On Hudson or Hooghly, or Thames or Tyne, But knows the last o' the Blue Star Line.

She's been up and down and here and there,

But there ain't no time for to tell you where;

She's been sunk and raised and drove ashore,

A wreck and a hulk and a prize o' war, But she's gone at the last, as I've heard tell,

In the Channel chops as she knoved so well,

Off St. Angles Light, where a drifting mine Done in the last o' the Blue Star Line.

And it's good to know as she took her bones,

When it came to the end, to Davy Jones

With the old Red Duster flying the same

As it did in the days when she earned her fame—

When ten tall ships on Merseyside Did sail or berth with every tide,

And none o' them all so fast and fine As them tall ships o' the Blue Star Line.

OR THE TALE OF A WAITRESS.

This girl doesn't pretend to be fine statesmanship class. But she showed a telephone manager a thing or two in simple justice.

She had had occasion to do some long distance telephoning from Stillwater, where she is a waitress in a restaurant, relates the Sioux Falls Press. She did not get the party with whom she wished to talk. Nevertheless she had to pay for the message under the Burleson station-to-station, person-to-person system.

A day or two later the manager of the telephone company at Stillwater, to whom she had protested in vain for charging her merely for "the report" that the party she wished to talk to was not available for conversation, was waited on by this waitress. Among other things he ordered a piece of cherry pie. He was advised that the larder was innocent of cherry pie at that time. As he came up to the cashier he noted on his check that the pie was charged to him just the same.

He protested somewhat violently—just how violently one may imagine by picturing himself in his place. But the waitress was there, with the quick reply that the charge was for "the report" that there was no cherry pie to be had.

This pie story ought to travel the length and breadth of the land. The charge the waitress made was exactly as legitimate as the charge she had been compelled to pay.

But he was most enthusiastic. Talking about the weather, he never saw anything like, was perfect during his stay, although it was a standard joke while he flers were there.

THE REGATTA.

He saw the Regatta, and you should hear him talk about Quill Yacht and its surroundings. He believes that there is not a more beautiful spot of water in the world, so congenially suited for aquatic sports. They told him Sir Edgar Bowring attended beautifying it like Bowring park, and then he assures me, and he others, that there will be nothing in the United States to approach it grandeur or beauty.

You should hear him about the rowing. He did not mind the fishermen being a splendid stroke, it was only what he expected, but when he saw shop and office hands and ordinary workmen rowed like professional rowers, he wondered why the world didn't send sample crews over the water to teach the professional oarsmen how to row. The boats, the crews, the lake and its surroundings, completely astounded him, and he says there is nothing in the world to compare with it.

The people welcomed him as one of their own, and what struck him as very uncommon, was the absence of policeman and uniformed officers to protect him. There may have been plain clothes men about he did not see them to identify them, and he thinks that from the warm-hearted reception he got, that the Prince was as safe amongst that concourse of people as he was aboard his ship. Woe be unto the one who was rash enough to raise his voice or hand in any way to mar his reception. He believes that such an one would have been trampled to death in Newfoundland.

THE ARCHES.
You should hear him talk about the arches, he has photos of them all and intends to reproduce them in a magazine article later. The veteran's arch was unique. It was characteristic of the various services the Newfoundlanders performed in the war, and the captured German guns gave it the last touch in realism. He speaks in superlatives about all the arches, the evergreen ones that must be peculiar to the island, and especially the one near the landing place, that was built of some kind of plaster. He saw them all illuminated in the night, and he is frank in saying that for artistic beauty, they could not be excelled in the whole United States, even in New York City. The white one when illuminated in the night was like a fairy vision of chalcidony or some other semi-precious mineral such as they built palaces in the times of the Arabian Nights. It would have done credit to the artistic genius of decorators in Paris or Rome. This is big talk for H., but he has travelled half over the earth and is really serious in what he says. The arches—especially this fairy lace-like one—were a credit to the people who planned and built them, as well as they were fit for a King's reception.

A REAL DEMOCRACY.
After seeing the Prince mix around with the crowd on the race-course, he was not surprised to meet the Prime Minister of the Dominion, the Speaker of the Assembly, and other notabilities, who proved to be first-rate mixers. But what struck him most of all was after the regrettable accident at the Races, seeing the Prime Min-

He stayed in the rain till he spoiled a suit of clothes watching the Prime Minister handling a bullock, with the skill of a born fisherman. He says that the man must have a heart of gold, and must be idolized by his intimates. He was equally loud in his praise of Sir John Croesbie and Mr. Hayward, who held on till they got wet through, performing this act of mercy.

He thought it was a sight that could not be duplicated anywhere else in the whole world.
He had the gratification of chipping in a little to the fund started by "Pall" Moore and "Billie" Higgins and thinks that the starting of this fund so promptly and spontaneously must be characteristic of the people of the Island. He can't conceive any warm-hearted or more hospitable people anywhere else in the world.

A PROSPEROUS LITTLE COUNTRY.
He is not surprised that in the Great World War the Newfoundland boys proved themselves "Better than the Best," as they could do no less, considering the stock they sprang from. He made me home-sick with his talk and he intends going to Newfoundland early next year, and taking the family for a long holiday, and I am going with him, and I will be surprised if I find things half as rosy as our friend paints them. He said he never saw a more prosperous looking, or a better natured and well-behaved crowd as he saw on the Race course, and several with whom he conversed, informed him that the Dominion was never in a better condition financially than it is at present. In fact he saw that the old Colony had taken a great start upward and onward, and that the common people are enjoying a period of plenty, and that the comforts and luxuries are not confined to a special few like they used to be in old times.

I write you at this length, because I am so glad to hear of the prosperity of my dear old island home, and also because our friend who travels with his eyes open, and who doesn't often enthuse, speaks so warmly of his visit. We have been so accustomed to starvation stories from Newfoundland, that it was a pleasure to hear him talk of its present prosperity, and when his illustrated article comes out I will send you a copy so that you may have it republished in the Evening Telegram—a paper that I get and read regularly.

Foreign Press Opinions.

WEALTHY INDEED.—Those South Africans must be a wealthy and care-free people if they can afford to throw eggs around the way they are reported to have done.—Buffalo Commercial.

THE SEATTLE WONDER.—When Mayor Ole Hanson, of Seattle, resigned "to go fishing" there was natural interest in what he was to fish for, and a Washington correspondent hears that it is the presidency of the United States. That takes pretty good bait.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

IS HE RIGHT!—The Prince of Wales has an idea that he will see the day when the Canadian parliament will have as wide an influence as the imperial parliament. His vision is clear and his reasoning good. Canada should have a population as large as Britain before the Prince of Wales is forty years older than he is to-day.—Calgary Albertan.

STRAIGHT TO THE POINT.—President Wilson is making a strong appeal to the American people in his great pilgrimage. His description of the treaty as a human instrument that will right the wrongs of Europe is brief and to the point and summarizes in a sentence the strong features which it possesses.—Calgary Albertan.

THE PEACE FACTS.—The Associated Powers, although compelled to compromise on many points, have sought to establish national grounds, and it is hoped that a few years of peace in the world will bring such contentment that old animosities will die out and new and harmonious relations be firmly established among the nations of the new Europe.—St. John Globe.

SMALL COMFORT.—"What price decreases?" reads a headline. Then we are jolted back to normal again by reading further that the decrease was one or two cents a pound.—Buffalo Commercial.

THE CORRECT FASHIONS IN FALL AND WINTER COATS NOW BEING SHOWN

A SHOWING THAT WILL IMPRESS YOU WITH ITS MANY DISTINCTIVE MODES.

Simple perfection in line and making seems to be the style standard to which the new Coats conform. You will be delighted with the richness of the materials as well as the gracefulness of the styling, both of which tend to make the new Fall and Winter Coats alike becoming to practically every type of personality.

The new Coats are full and loose with large pockets and checkered collars, indicating a richness to the new Coats which will please the woman who seeks for a regal elegance in her attire.

PRICES RANGE FROM $16.00 TO $40.00.

MILLEY'S

55 CENTS IN ST. JOHN'S.—Chicago would not stand for the fifteen cent shine and went on strike. Shines are now ten cents. Ought that not to encourage us to strike against the 50-cent hair cut?—Buffalo Express.

CONSTRUCTION AND DESTRUCTION.—Finland, which suffered equally with Russia in the war, is now about the quietest country in Europe. This is because the Finns have sense enough to devote themselves to construction rather than destruction. "A little child shall lead them."—Dallas News.

THE HIGHEST HONOR.—In retiring as a member of the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party, Victor Berger says: "I have been a member of the committee ever since the party was organized, and all I ever got out of it was a twenty-year prison sentence." That is about the highest honor the Socialist Party could confer upon him.—New York World.

THE DRUG EVIL.—The extent of the drug evil may be imagined in view of the arrest in New York of eight men, and the seizure of $100,000 worth of habit-forming drugs. The gang are alleged to be directors of a country-wide system of distribution, and that the business is profitable is indicated by the attempt to bribe an express office clerk with $500. The drug victims are many, and the purveyors are striving to increase their number.—Montreal Gazette.

SMOKERS WILL LIKE THIS.—There is reason to believe that in the sale of matches an unjust and unreasonable profit is exacted by manufacturers, jobbers and retailers. There is a federal tax of five cents a box on all matches, and this tax is paid at the factory by the manufacturers. In selling to the jobber, the production and the tax and adds a percentage of profit. The jobber, in distributing the goods, adds a percentage for profit. The retailer does likewise. Therefore the consumer pays a profit of 35-41 per cent on the tax as well as on the matches. Is this fair or even justifiable?—Toronto Times.

From a recent Magazine we have copied the following. We only need to add. Papers to suit all requirements can be had at our Store.

1. Thou shalt heed the call of Plain quiet wall papers and white woodwork wherever such is possible.
2. Thou shalt lighten dark rooms by the use of light-hued, yellow-tinted wall paper, that suggests the blessed sunshine.
3. Thou shalt see that thy walls and thine own personality are not too forward, but modestly retiring.
4. Thou shalt use no large-patterned wall papers against which to hang thy pictures. The one will kill the other.
5. Thou shalt have no centerpiece or cornerpieces upon thy ceiling, but only a very nearly plain expanse of light color.
6. Thou shalt have thy fill of bright tints, and delicate designs for bedrooms and boudoirs, but for drawing-rooms, dining-rooms, libraries and halls, thou shalt be compelled to use less frivolous papers.
7. Thou shalt, when the ceiling is not too high, run the paper of the side wall up to the ceiling, putting the border just below the angle.
8. Thou shalt not panel the walls of a small room, except it be above a mantelpiece, a sideboard or a bookcase, where a bit of tapestry, a mirror or a picture may be held in place by strips of moulding.
9. Thou shalt use attention-compelling cut out borders, or conventionally designed strips for divisions between walls and ceiling.
10. Thou shalt remember at all times that thy wall paper is but a background against which to show thy pictures, thy furniture, and thy friends.
