Hr. Grace Notes.

On Thursday evening last Mr. Robert French was stricken with paralysis and was in a critical position for a few days. Mr. French had been in the very best of health up to the time he was so suddenly taken, and the memory of this old gentleman was as vivid as could be imagined. He was 88 years of age, and could still be seen issuing forth daily, apparently a young man, to his labors. He passed away on Saturday, and it is with a deep feeling of regret and heartfelt sympathy for the bereaved ones that the many friends of this popular carpenter will receive the news of his sudden demise. Funeral will take place Tuesday, interment at the Methodist cemetery.

Those who were inclined to look upon the great shortage of potatoes as a joke, now awakened to the alarming fact that that "joke" is every inch a serious menace. For the past few weeks your correspondent has pointed out the shortage more or less, but people merely glanced over it and added that there is plenty of potatoes in the cellars, and the owners are awaiting the big advance in the prices. These people have since found their mistake. It may be a big advance, but it would be well to realize the fact that it is only a few. 'Twas reported last week that a few barrels could be had at Bristol's Hope, for the sum of $16.00 the barrel. Why give them away? The position, as it stands, point to a decrease of 50 per cent. in the growing of potatoes—in other words, "you save what four and other foodstuffs you possibly can," (this from the Government); "but don't bother us about the way or ways you do it." Last fall the people wanted a change—well, they got it, didn't they?

Saturday saw the dying out of the S.E. wind which was closely pursued by the gloomy looking ice-field. The ice could be seen from any high level, stretching practically across the whole bay. Sunday's "down" wind gave it a tip and it appears to have been induced to "shale off." Last year the ice hung around this part of the coast well up in May, and if it tries the same trick this year, it will be well for a few of us to get out and push.

Your correspondent would like to make a correction as regards the note concerning the Handley-Page Aviation ground, which appeared in the Telegram of Saturday last, which should have read, "The work commenced Wednesday," instead of "will commence Wednesday."

The streets of any city or town in Nfld. to-day is crowded with ignorant and helpless little children, because of the lack of interest taken in them by men and women who have been fortunate both in the financial and educational lines. The cause, too, is the lack of necessary means on the part of the parents to educate their children. How many boys in Nfld. to-day, who have not a "word in their jaw" are working at the age of 12, 14 and 16? It is now time that the people and the People's Government should take their common duty, and saw to it that the children who are in the streets with the sole object of killing time and making mischief, are placed in schools where they may learn and become fitted as the future men and women to fill their posts in life. The country will feel the benefit then, if it does not now. C-o-m-p-u-l-s-o-r-y education is what is needed, as well as men acting as men and not as fools.

On Thursday evening last, at 8 p. m., Miss Grace Hayden, youngest daughter of Mr. Timothy Hayden, at the home of her father, was united in marriage to Mr. Arthur Chapman.

of St. John city. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. T. D. O'Neill. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride, and a very enjoyable time was passed by the many guests. The bride was the recipient of many valuable and useful presents. A long and happy married life is wished the happy young couple.

Stewart's motor, the E. L. Stewart, arrived Friday evening with a number of passengers to spend the weekend with friends.

Mr. John Stapleton and Mr. Norris arrived from the city Friday night. Mr. Norris, who was the guest of Mr. Stapleton during his brief stay, returned to St. John's Saturday afternoon.

May snow, what of it? Some say that if, if gathered in June, will cure sore eyes. Well, we had a little snow Friday night and Saturday morning, but it has melted. We ask the Importers' Association why they did not have June 23rd on May 18th this year, for a change.

The property owned by a Mr. Jones of the Southside, Riverhead, was sold by public auction on Friday last, and fell to Mr. William Yetman for $530, he being the highest bidder.

The business men here have decided to commence the summer holidays (one weekly) on May 24, and every Wednesday, excepting June 9, 16, and 30, till September 15. This is a few weeks ahead of last year, but no doubt it will be appreciated by all concerned, and it is hoped that each Wednesday will be one of many sport and pleasure.

Miss Alice O'Leary left here Thursday afternoon last for the United States.

Mr. William M. O'Connor, of the Standard staff, left for the city Monday morning on a brief visit.

Mr. Russel, of Bay Roberts, was in town Sunday with a number of friends in his motor car.

Mr. William French, who left by Thursday afternoon's train for Bay de Verde, returned Saturday evening, because of the death of his father, Mr. Robert French.

Flour is selling here for $18.50 a barrel—$1.40 a stone.

Barquentine Minerva was taken on dock Saturday.

Mr. Robert Snow, son of Robert Snow, arrived Saturday night from Sydney, where he had been employed for some time past.

Mr. Alex. Crocker arrived from Benton Saturday.

Mrs. Alice Van Loos Carrick, of Hanover, N.H., the wife of a Dartmouth professor, has a wonderful collection of antiques in the cottage production, and not on more occasions than necessary in each film. Most well-known film actresses have a treasure. She has a junkman helping her. She delights in showing and keeps all her valentines. One of her treasures is an empire bod. One of the troubles of a film actress is clothed. She is never expected to wear the same frock in two productions, and not on more occasions than necessary in each film. Most well-known film actresses have a treasure. She has a junkman helping her. It was returned, and he immediately sent it back. It was again returned. This time when the young writer sent it back it was accompanied by this note: "Dear Sir: I regret to inform you that in your absence on vacation your office has had been returning masterpieces." The offerings were accepted.

QUEBEC MAN GETS RESULTS FROM DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Mr. H. Dinelle Suffered from a Complication of Kidney Troubles and Tells How Dodd's Kidney Pills Helped Him.

Chenaville, Que., May 21—(Special)—"I suffered for eight years from diabetes, neuralgia of the heart and rheumatism.

"A year ago I commenced to take Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"My health is very much improved."

In these three concise sentences Mr. Hyacinthe Dinelle, a well-known and highly respected resident here, tells why he recommends Dodd's Kidney Pills. Mr. Dinelle is still using Dodd's Kidney Pills. He believes that his troubles are caused by sick kidneys and that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the remedy he needs.

Sick kidneys are the cause of many serious diseases. When the kidneys are not right they fail to do their full work of straining all the impurities, all the seeds of disease, out of the blood. There can be no pure blood if the kidneys are wrong. There can be no good health unless the blood is pure.

Ask your neighbors if Dodd's Kidney Pills are not the sovereign remedy for sick kidneys.

NOTES OF TRAVEL:
And Reminiscences of a Pleasant Tour.

I. C. MORRIS,
CHAPTER VI
NEW YORK.

We saw New York under the garb of summer, and also under the mantle of winter. To our party it was a wonder from first to last, and the more we saw of it, the more we wondered. Here was the largest city in the world, and we for a while found ourselves among its eight millions of people. What a sight, or rather, what sights we met at every turn, and what sounds we heard on every side. Looking above us we saw the tall buildings and towering sky-scrapers, as we gazed we noticed the elevated railways, with their long trains and crowded cars. By us on the side-walk passed to and fro the people in their thousands. Beneath us, under the great city, the scene was seemingly more populous; for the subways daily transfer a quarter of a million people. Vast crowds pass at every street crossing, and yet the best of order prevails. "Keep to the right" is the motto, and the result is regularity and safety. In addition to these means of traffic, there are taxi cabs in thousands, and busses in hundreds, and touring cars in scores, and there also remain a goodly number of well groomed horses and comfortable cabs. We were struck with the livery of the men who drive these horses. These men wear long blue brass-buttoned coats, and their head-dress consists of the old-timed heaver hat. As drivers they look very portly, and impressed us as being more like a lot of Bishops than Herry-men. New York can well feel proud of the class of men who cater to the public in this respect; they are among the ruddiest and healthiest lot of people that we saw in our wanderings.

Perhaps, as interesting a sight as visitor to New York, or to any large city, sees, is that of the throng of pedestrians who pass at the street crossings. At each crossing a faithful policeman stands, and with a sort of magic directs the crowd and relieves the congestion. His whistle calls a halt, or announces that the way is clear. With his right hand he beckons one throng, and with his left he directs another. Hundreds of people watch his signal, and scores of Autos and Taxi Cabs abide his mandate. In his position he has absolute authority, and it is backed up by the public, hence the successful regulating of this great traffic, and the protection of all concerned. A blockade, or a tie up in such a city as New York is almost a calamity. This was seen in January last when a heavy snow-fall paralyzed the traffic of the city, and put the street cars and taxis out of commission. For a time the situation was very serious, but like all such emergencies it had to be met and overcome. But it had its lessons, which if learned, should do some good.

To visit New York in the summer season, and to see its grandeur and wealth, one would almost think it impossible for anything to delay its traffic. To see the city at night, one could scarcely dream of darkness, for its thoroughfares are a blaze of light. But great as is the city, and beautiful as are its sights, and systematic as is its traffic, a snow fall of two or three feet, can make all these pay toll. Not often does this happen, and it is well that it does not, but when it does happen, all our invention and all our skill have to take a back seat, and play second fiddle; and we remember that there is a higher power than man's, and greater influences than he controls. Sometimes we forget this; hence a reminder now and then, may be to our benefit.

At the railway stations of the large cities we were pleased to see the agents of the W.C.T.U., and also the Deaconesses, and the Sisters of Mercy, and sometimes the officials of the Salvation Army. These good women do a splendid work in their different spheres, and their presence signifies protection to the stranger, and perhaps discipline for the wayward. Amid the crowd they seemed to stand out in gentle relief; and though silent and unobtrusive, their presence bespoke the dignity of their work. In garb they differ—nor may they agree in Creed; but in the protection of the young, and in the best ideals of morals, they are one. They may not receive the praise of all men, but their service and sacrifice on behalf of others, is their best reward, and their chief ambition. To others they are giving their all; hence their own reward is great, and their peace lasting; for in losing their life they shall find it end find it, "sixty, and a hundred fold."

House of Assembly.

Friday, May 21.
The House met at 3 p.m.
Messrs. Targett and Abbott presented petitions.
The Minister of Finance and Customs introduced a bill respecting the issue of certain Debenture Bonds of the Colony.
The following bills were given third reading: "Of Stipendiary Magistrates and Justices of the Peace," "Of Death Duties," and "Registry of Midwives."
The Fire Patrol Bill was put through the Committee stage.
The House then went into Committee on the fish export regulations.
Hon. W. F. Coaker (G.), read the resolutions passed at yesterday's meeting of the Fish Exporters of the Board of Trade. They contained that which he did not intend to accept, but he would alter the first section, making the Advisory Board consist of seven members instead of five—the Minister, Chairman, four to be appointed by the Governor in Council and two others by the fish exporters. All would have to be bona fide fish exporters.
Sir M. P. Cashin (Leader of the Opposition), agreed with the sections dealing with inspection, scientific research, etc., but the part dealing with the marketing and prices would have his opposition. He was not prepared to hand over the running of the country's fish trade to seven men. The Bill would tend to eliminate the small buyer and seller—the man who so often kept up the price. He heartily supported the idea of having agents abroad. Sir Michael also advocated that there be appointed a Select Committee from both Houses to confer with the exporters for the purpose of accomplishing a compromise.

Mr. M. S. Sullivan (G.) wishes to give Mr. Coaker a chance to see what could be done. He believed that some regulations were necessary.
Mr. S. J. Foote (G.), supported the Regulations in toto. He thought that all opposition to them came from Water Street, which would like to see fish down to what it was in '97.
Mr. J. R. MacDonnell (G.), opposed the Regulations last winter and he had seen nothing since to change his views. Said regulations were illegally in force. In agreement with the member's request, the Minister of Marine and Fisheries altered a clause, so that a man shipping less than 100 qts. would not be subjected to a license fee.
Mr. W. J. Walsh (O.), supported the Regulations in their entirety. To determine what his duty was he had only to take up the afternoon papers and read that the merchants were against the Regulations, and on behalf of the common people he would oppose what the merchants said was best for the country. He was convinced that, to find people who had the good of the fishermen at heart, he would have to go elsewhere than Water Street. He agreed with the suggestion of the Leader of the Opposition that a Select Committee be appointed to consider the matter.
Mr. John Cheeseman (G.), was strongly in favor of the Regulations and was prepared to stand by them. At the meeting in the Board of Trade at which the anti-resolutions were passed, there were only 20 out of 70 exporters of fish. HE HAD EVERY CONFIDENCE IN MR. COAKER AND WAS PREPARED TO TAKE HIS ADVICE.
Mr. C. J. Fox (O.), deprecated the attempt to draw a thick line between the fishermen and the merchant. He objected to restraint of trade and objected to the head of the Union Trading Co. being head of the Board also.
NIGHT SESSION.
(Mr. Fox resumed)—He did not believe that it was the intention of the Minister to alienate the sympathy of the exporters.
Hon. W. F. Coaker (G.), touching on the opposition levelled at him because of the dual position he held, Minister and Exporter, said that he considered that unless a practical exporter be in charge the Regulations

ATTENTION!

Do you know that about SEVENTY PER CENT. of the coal used in your house is wasted, and that you can prevent a large proportion of waste? Coal is wasted in two ways. It goes up the chimney in smoke and soot. It is left unburnt in the form of cinders. COALOX prevents the escape of smoke, and by providing an additional supply of oxygen burns up most of the soot and cinders.

Persons who have not used Coalox say that it is all very well in theory but it never works out.

LISTEN! One customer who used COALOX regularly during the past six months had the Sweep in the other day. They knew they were getting more heat from the coal used, but they did not know why until then. There was not any soot in the chimney and the Sweep's fee was easy money for him.

YOU TRY IT and find how it will save YOU money.

would fail. He wanted to eliminate the evil custom of shipping fish on consignment. If fish was standardized and agents were appointed to the markets it would be easy to regulate prices. Then the fishermen would know what it was to receive the proper price for their fish. At any rate, the Regulations should be given a trial. If they failed they could be withdrawn.

The debate was continued by Messrs. Higgins (O.), Bennett (O.), Vinnicombe (O.), and Warren (G.), and the resolutions were passed with the following amendments:
Section 1 was amended to read as follows:
1. There shall be a Codfish Exportation Board (hereinafter called the Board), which shall consist of seven members, namely, the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, who shall be chairman, four members appointed by the Governor in Council, who shall be licensed exporters of codfish, and two members appointed by a majority of the exporters of codfish holding license hereunder. Failure on the part of the said exporters to nominate or appoint any members of the Board shall not prejudice or invalidate any acts or proceedings of the Board.
Section 4, which provides for a license fee, was amended by the addition of the following:
"Provided that the initial fee of fifty dollars shall not be payable by any fisherman exporter who exports codfish in shipments of less than one hundred quintals each. The Board shall have absolute discretion to determine whether or not any applicant is a fisherman exporter."
A new section, to be number 5, was also added. It reads:—
5—"A meeting of all exporters of codfish shall be convened by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries during the first week in September in each year to consider and discuss with the Codfish Regulations Board all matters relating to the exportation of codfish for the ensuing season. Such meeting shall be held at St. John's and two weeks notice shall be given."
The only other business done was the putting of the Profiteering Bill through committee, after which the House adjourned until Tuesday.

Silver Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard P. Holland, 37 Fresh Water Road, celebrate the silver anniversary of their wedding tomorrow, May 23. Twenty-five years ago they were married at King's Cove, Bonavista Bay, by the Rev. T. U. Lynch, Parish Priest, Mr. Holland then being ship's husband with the firm of Ryan and Co. of that place. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Holland join in renewing the good wishes expressed at their nuptials and express the hope that they may live to commemorate their golden jubilee.

A MESSAGE TO WOMEN

Who Are Just Ready to Drop
Vinol Will Enrich the Blood and Create Strength.
Physicians Recommend It and Druggists Guarantee It

Many women act as though they just wonder how they are going to get through this trying season and do their work. They may be overworked, or influenza or a chronic cold or some sickness has left them without strength or ambition, and thin, nervous and demoralized.

If such women only knew what VINOL our non-secret cod liver, iron and hypophosphite tonic will do for them we would not be able to get enough to supply the demand.

In a natural manner it creates a hearty appetite, aids digestion, enriches the blood with thousands of red corpuscles, creates strength, and the system is filled with renewed vigor.

Do not let any druggist sell you a substitute for VINOL, as there is nothing like it, so nothing else will do.

Shabuoth.

Shabuoth, the Feast of Weeks, will be observed in all congregations of the Jewish faith on Sunday, May 23. Orthodox congregations also observe the day following. This festival is one of three agricultural feasts which were observed in the ancient Biblical era. The Feast of Weeks was in Biblical times a farmers' holiday, celebrated at the end of the first seven weeks of harvest. The ceremonial consisted in offerings of the field brought as a thanksgiving token for the new crop that was being harvested. (Deut. xvi:9.)

This feast of the first fruits, like other agricultural festivals, was gradually transformed and invested with symbolic significance. In course of time the Jewish people developed a historical consciousness and linked traditional events with these institutions and festivals that were transmitted from a remoter ancestry. In the case of the Feast of Weeks, the giving of the Decalogue was associated with the feast of the first fruits, and so commemorated until this day.

By this combination a universal significance was attached to the festival in which the ripened fruits of the spirit, instead of the first fruits of the field, were offered in praise and thanksgiving as an offering from the People of the Covenant. All synagogues read the Decalogue on this day and renew their pledge of loyalty to the Covenant of Israel as their fathers did in days of yore.

During the last century the Feast of Weeks was enriched by introducing a confirmation ceremony in connection with its observance. The Confirmation ceremony was sponsored by the leaders of Reform Judaism who made of it a feast of consecration of the Jewish youth, boys and girls, to the ancient covenant of their fathers.

The Confirmation service does not exact from the confirmands any other confession than that of a belief in One God, and in His justice and truth as manifested in history. Confirmation Day in some congregations synchronizes school in which the confirmands have covered an eight-year course comprising Biblical and Jewish History, Jewish Ethics and Literature and an introduction to the Hebrew Language, including a reading knowledge of the Prayer Book in its original language.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

SHOULD I HAVE BEEN ASHAMED?

RUTH CAMERON

It is a well known Anglo-Saxon trait to be very reticent about such things as one's tenderness and about one's religion. In some ways I think this is an excellent trait, and then again I think we carry it too far.

I thought so one day recently, though it may have been only personal pique that made me. You shall judge.

A group of us were sitting over our coffee at a table at the little inn where I had been spending a week. The conversation, which had ranged from shoes and hats to cabbages and kings, turned to the sects which claim you can do all things by faith.

The Way I Feel.

I ventured my idea that this was true in one way. That is, I thought that one could do all things by faith if one could reach the stage of development where one had faith enough, but that most of us were a million miles away from any such millennium. Then I added that it seemed to me that Christ had attained that development, and that he was thereby in touch with a reservoir of power.

A peculiar hush fell over the group—the kind of hush that comes when one has made a break. No one said anything for a minute, then someone made some sort of a reply, carefully avoiding any direct reference to Our Lord, and then someone else gracefully changed the subject with a remark about the weather which was brightly taken up by the rest.

I Had Made A Break.

Plainly I had made a break. I had referred in the middle of a secular conversation (and not on Sunday) to Our Lord. And I had used no circumlocution in speaking of Him but had spoken His name right out. It really wasn't quite the thing. They felt they had to cover up my indiscretion.

I felt inclined to go back to the subject and shock them, and then I concluded that it wasn't exactly relevant to relieve my feelings just that way.

I've often noticed this feeling against any reference to Christ except by a minister or in a religious paper isn't quite good taste, and I think it is one of those refinements of good taste that is absolutely ridiculous.

Many Are Chary of Endearments.

I suppose it's a part of the same feeling that makes people chary of terms of endearment even to those they love. One of the many things I just love about Roosevelt's wonderful letters to his children, was the way he began them—"Blessed Ted" and "Darling Ethel"—and so forth. Surely he was a personified ideal of all the Anglo-Saxon virtues, if there ever was one, and yet he didn't feel that it was bad taste to express his emotions.

Love and religion are nothing to be afraid of or ashamed of. One does not want to be sentimental. But neither does one need to act as if there were anything shameful in a reverent yet matter-of-fact reference to love or religion.

The New Floor.

"My dear," said her husband in his sweetest and gentlest tones, "have you seen a parcel I brought home the other night, and which I put away in my writing desk?"

"Did it look like flour, and was it in a paper bag?" asked Mrs. Spriggs. "Yes; that's it."

"Does it get hard after it's been wet, and does it stick to everything?" "Yes, yes. Where is it?"

"Oh, Edwin," she said reproachfully, "it's just like you to leave such horrid stuff lying about. Why, it took me more than an hour, with the chisel and hammer, to get the cakes out of the baking tins, and the children didn't seem half to enjoy the pastry I made!"

"Great Scott!" cried her husband. "You don't mean to say you've been making pastry with plaster of Paris, do you?"

But it was even so, and when the doctor presented his bill for attending the children there was trouble in the house of Spriggs.

THE WIDE OUTDOORS.

The rich may pay for orchids rare, but on the apple tree Flings out its blossoms to the world for every eye to see. And all who sigh for loveliness may walk beneath the sky And claim a richer beauty than man's gold can ever buy.

The cherry trees are free for all to stand and look upon, And not some favorite one, The wide outdoors is no man's own, The stranger on the street Can east his eyes on many a rose and claim its fragrance sweet.

Small gardens are shut in by walls, but none can hide the friendly trees from all who travel by. And none can hold the apple boughs and claim them for their own, For all the beauties of the earth belong to God alone.

So let me walk the world just now and wander far and near, Earth's loveliness is mine to see, its music mine to hear, There's not a single apple bough that spills its blooms about. But I can claim the joy of it, and none can shut me out.

Swatting Britain.

(From the Sentinel Toronto).

It is a strange type of bird that would attempt to befool its own nest. It would not be regarded as sane. But there is a type of human beings who gladly accept all the privileges of British citizenship and who regard themselves as superior to other people in many respects, who never lose an opportunity to "swat" Great Britain or the British Empire. It is regrettable to find that type of mind in the ordinary walks of life, but it is lamentable indeed to discover the same type of mind in the House of Commons and Senate of this great British Dominion. Senator Fowler, recently emphasized this when in the course of a reply to Senator Beaubien he said:

"It is to be regretted that there is a certain type of mind in this chamber which cannot make a speech without showing dislike for Great Britain. France had done nobly in the war, but when anybody declared she had done more than England he must hurl such a falsehood back in their teeth. The gentleman who just spoke never missed an opportunity to get a swat at England."

Senator Beaubien, "the gentleman who just spoke," had assailed Britain for not backing up France sufficiently in regard to the Ruhr incident. It is not so long since the French-Canadian leaders were swatting Britain because she did back up France in the Great War. But any excuse will do for that type of mind which evidently regards it as the chief end of life to "swat" everything that is British.

MINT MARCH

Kansas winds are always blowing, and my path of life seems thorny; so I'm packing up and going to the groves of California. There beside the sobbing ocean I shall sit and do my singing, filled with prunes and sweet emotion, while the golden hours are winging. Kansas heat is always hotter than the kind that starts you sweating; Kansas rain is full of water, and each day I get a wetting; so I go to San Diego where the honey bees are buzzin'; there I'll fill myself with sage, and sing anthems by the dozen. There the scenes are most inspiring, and the natives love them dearly, and a man who lives by lying ought to earn ten dollars yearly. By the broad and blue Pacific I'll compose my dippy stanzas, filled with yearnings most terrific for the sun-baked plains of Kansas. Resting on my downy pillows, after hours of fierce endeavor, I will watch the mighty billows rolling as they've rolled forever; oh, I'll watch them in their glory, and remark, "I'd give a penny to get back to old Empory where of brine there isn't any."

Then She Apologised. A mutual friend told me a good story the other day concerning J. M. Barrie. It seems that one day business took him to a certain provincial town, where he was detained overnight. His own play, The Little Minister, was being performed at the local theatre, and Barrie went to see it. At the conclusion of the second act, the manager informed the actress who was playing the principal part that a gentleman wanted to see her. The actress did not catch the name, and thought it was the representative of the local paper desiring an interview.

Then She Apologised.

So when the supposed newspaper man appeared she did not wait for an introduction, but at once gave details of her career in order to get the interview over as quickly as possible.

After she had rattled off a deal of miscellaneous information, she said to the quiet-looking man, "I hope you are enjoying the play?"

"Oh, yes," he answered. "Don't you think it is a pretty play?" asked the actress.

"Quite a pretty play," was the reply.

"Did you see it when it was at the Haymarket?"

"Oh, yes, I saw quite a lot of it. You see, I wrote it."

An Autocratic Policy

Throughout the most of the speeches of the Honorable Minister of Marine and Fisheries, made in the House of Assembly runs the implication without challenge that he is the real leader and head of the Government. That this is so is thoroughly understood by every person, the Prime Minister being merely a figure head, Premier in law but not in fact. The head of the department of Marine and Fisheries does not hesitate to announce his position as the dictator of the policies of the Government, and to threaten what will happen if honorable members withhold their support from any measure introduced by him. As one specimen of Mr. Coaker's declaration of independence, the following utterance made by him in the House of Assembly some weeks ago when debating the Fish Regulations, will be illuminating as it assuredly establishes the position to which he lays claim:

"The position that I occupy in this Government is an important and a strong one. When I (capital, please) propose regulations in connection with our codfishery and the Government is not prepared to accept them, then I will walk out of the Government. I am not going to allow anyone to dictate to me what my duties are, and when I made up my mind to make regulations governing the price of fish, I intended to put them through, so long as I believed that they benefited the people of the country."

Without any circumlocution or equivocation, Mr. Coaker states the position he holds, and which he intends to hold as the Dictator of the Government of Newfoundland. It does not matter to him what others may think, in fact he does not care whether his colleagues have an opinion or not, so long as he believes that he is right he is going ahead and challenges the prerogative of all other members of the House to deny him. Whether or not they agree with him as to the merits or demerits of any legislation he may introduce, they must blindly follow his lead or accept the penalty, that penalty being no less than smashing the Government. He will not allow any one to dictate to him. Therefore he stands Jovian in his power and all the others comprising the Government, must obey him. Rather an anomalous position for the Prime Minister to fill, that of playing second fiddle to his Minister of Fisheries, but the fact has gone forth and he who must-be-obeyed dominates the situation. So important and so strong is his position that he can without question impose the weight of his power upon the Government, under threat that any opposition to his desires will meet with swift retribution. And that is exactly the position of the Government at the moment. It is controlled absolutely by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries and its existence depends upon complete subservience to his wishes.

Another declaration of independence was proclaimed by the Fisheries Minister in the House on Wednesday, during the passage through of the Codfish Export Regulations Bill: "I am not worried," he said, "over what the fish exporters think of the regulations. Their opposition will not in least deter me from carrying them through." Maybe not, for there spoke the real dictator, who does not give a tinker's curse for the opinions of the other fellow, but is determined to ram his own down the throats of everybody else. The exporters, many of whom were in favor of the original regulations, have learned by experience that they were not practicable and their enforcement a detriment rather than an impetus to trade. And these are the men upon whom Mr. Coaker purposes to impose his will. Rightly or wrongly for weal or woe, the Fish Regulations Bill must go through. Opposition will but stiffen Mr. Coaker's determination to place this Act upon the Statute Book, and no matter how drastically it may work to the detriment and strangulation of trade abroad, it must become law. The members of the House of Assembly have received their instructions and those on the Government side dare not express a contrary opinion to the Prussian policy of the real leader. They must toe the line from the Prime Minister downwards or accept the consequences of their contumacy. The spectacle is not assuring, nor can there be any confidence in the future. The exporters cannot be whipped into line, neither can suppliers be dragged into issuing credits on fishery accounts, while obstacles to business are being deliberately cast in their way.

Queen Victoria's Day.

A century has passed on May 24 since Princess Victoria the only child of the Duke of Kent—fourth son of George III.—was born at Kensington Palace, and was destined to be famous in history as Victoria, Queen of England, and Empress of India. This date was christened by her son, King Edward VII., as Empire Day, a day on which the ties of blood and brotherhood between the Mother Country and her widespread Colonies are to be doubly remembered; when hands meet across the sea, and Britons, the wide world over, try to realize the vastness of the great empire which now owns King George as ruler. Empire Day of 1919 will be notable, as showing to us and to the world, after four years strenuous fighting, that our sons from over the seas are as dauntless as their forefathers when they touch the rough edge of battle, for they have proved their valour on many a hard-fought field since Aug. 4, 1914. India, Canada, Australia, South Africa, New Zealand and other overseas possessions have all been greatly expanded under the rule of Queen Victoria. During her reign the British Empire was extended in area to no less than three million square miles of territory, while the population was augmented by two hundred and thirty million souls, of whom two hundred and a half millions were white.

"Time and the ocean, and some fostering star
In high cabal have made us what we are,
Who stretch one hand to Huron's
bearded pines,
And one on Kashmir's snowy shoulder
lay,
And round the streaming of whose valment shines
The Iris of the Australasian spray."

A Friendly Hint.

Two nights ago I was sitting in the reading room of a certain club when I overheard a newly arrived fellow-member asking one of the markers to hang his coat up. "You'll find a convenient hole near where the hanger used to be," said he; "I find that the average hat peg slips through it quite easily. Rags—that's what I'll be dressed in soon," he continued, as he came into the room, where I sat smoking.

He caught sight of me and exclaimed: "Hello, Skipper! How are you? Cried: A new suit, eh? Where did you get it? Who made it for you? I suppose you had to wait about six months for it."
Well, I was feeling in a complacent mood just then, as the result of a certain transaction that took place on the previous day, and could not resent the way attention was thus drawn to my personal appearance; so I replied, jocularly: "Six months! Someone ought to give you six months for letting your tongue run away with you; sit down and get your breath."
"Sit down! It's all very well to say sit down," said he, who looked well dressed in spite of his remarks; "I shall jolly well have to sit down soon, and stay sitting," he added, "if tailors' bills keep going up. Seriously, though, do you know a tailor who could let me have a suit without forcing me to give him a mortgage on the old homestead and to make my will in his favor?"
"You might try mine," I replied. "I went to him yesterday and got a couple of suits and a few other things for about the same money that I paid for my last suit."
"Yesterday? But he couldn't have made you a suit overnight."
"No, I didn't say he could; he didn't try. You see I just went in and bought what I wanted—yes, Ready-made. I reckon that I saved from $15.00 to $20.00, and that I have a stylish, well-cut and good-fitting suit."
"Well," said he, "if that's the suit, you're dead right. Where's the place? Tell me."
"I'll tell you gladly," I replied, "and if you'll take my advice you'll go down there next week, as they are offering their entire stock of Men's and Boys' Clothing at reduced prices. It's 'The Royal Stores'."
"I might have known," he exclaimed. "Thanks, old man; I'll be down there bright and early Tuesday morning."

A Historic Drawing.

Bowring Bros. Recieve Old Drawing By Newfoundland, Made Eighty-Two Years Ago—Son of Artist Now House of Commons Librarian.
Bowring Bros. yesterday received from the principals of the firm, in New York, a very historic drawing of the harbor of St. John's and surroundings. To-day the drawing was exhibited in their display window and some thousands of people stopped to examine it. The inscription contained on the drawing follows: "This Drawing, taken 16th of March, 1838, during a severe frost, contains a south view of St. John's Harbor, Newfoundland, and together with the vessels of that port bound to the seal fishery preparing to depart by means of ice channels. Dedicated by permission to His Excellency, Capt. Henry Prescott, N.B. Governor and Commander-in-Chief in and over the Island of Newfoundland and its dependencies by his most grateful and obedient humble servant, William Gosse."
The artist, William Gosse, was a native of Carbonear and a member of the firm of Peck, Gosse and Fryer. He later went to England and studied to be an artist. He became famous. His son is at present Librarian of the English House of Commons.

Some St. John's Men Have Received $50.00 Suits for $33.00.

SO CAN YOU if you buy quickly. For a few short days you will be able to get a tip-top suit made of the very best material obtainable for $33.00. But the chance will soon be gone, so you must act promptly.
But the fact that is of greatest value to you is that these suits are being offered at the fixed price of $33.00. This is true anti-profiteering, for the suits are strongly made and well tailored, easily worth $50.00. Every suit has been inspected and passed by Government experts. They can be obtained in all sizes and in a wide variety of colors.
Don't miss the opportunity of a lifetime. You had better make certain of getting one or more at once.

W. P. A. Child Welfare Meeting.

In the Presbyterian Hall last night a large gathering attended a meeting, called by the Executive of the W.P.A. to make known their work for Child Welfare, and the need of Child Protection. His Excellency the Governor presided and was assisted on the platform by Lady Harris, His Lordship Bishop White, Mayor Gosling, Rev. Canon Bolt, Rev. Dr. Jones, Rev. Fr. Renout, Rev. Gordon Dickie, Lady Horwood, Mrs. Squires, Mrs. Gosling, Mrs. Campbell, Brehm and Keegan. In his opening remarks His Excellency referred to the inauguration of the Child Welfare work by Mayor Gosling and the efforts of the W.P.A. who had taken up the movement. Lady Harris in an interesting address dealt with neglect of children, and the Legislature enacted elsewhere for their protection.

Mayor Gosling gave a review of the movement since its inception in July, 1917, covering the work of Miss Hudson, Miss Rogers, Dr. Brehm and the Misses Kendall and paying a high tribute to the latter especially for their services during the "flu" epidemic. He said the death rate of illegitimate children is 350 per thousand, due to sheer neglect. The nurses have to practically fight to keep them in some cases alive, which shows the need of a Protection Society. He hoped the government would appoint an officer to look after mothers and children by visiting them regularly.

His Lordship Bishop White praised the work of the nurses and hoped to see children's hospitals or homes started where they could be cared for as in England. He felt the resolutions to be put to the meeting should be given a wide interpretation and not be confined to babies. A law is needed to prevent cruelty to children of larger growth and the work should be extended beyond the city where many who should be at school are employed at hard work which undermines their physique and must have an injurious effect on coming generations. Children up to 12 or 14 years of age should be looked after. He was in entire accord with the movement and hoped it would receive the support it merits.

Miss Haslam during her short time here had found children died whom scientific care would have kept alive. She referred to the need of a maternity hospital and training of midwives, and also a founding hospital where children could be cared for till adopted. School clinics too would prevent half the evils of after life. Dr. Campbell thought the benefits of the movement would be reflected in the reports of the Registrar General in after years. An enormous number of our potential men and women lose their lives before the age of 1 year through negligence of one kind or another. Through the work of the community nurses the death rate had dropped from 125 per thousand in 1918 to 114 in 1919.

Dr. Keegan believed the cases of cruelty to children largely due to want of knowledge as to proper bringing up which is a difficult matter and must be done scientifically. He was given hope by the reference of a previous speaker to the building of better houses. Some with narrow winding stairs are still occupied as when he first saw them 31 years ago, and he was delighted to hear we are to have new dwellings. "Hope springs eternal in the human breast." It will be great if Mr. Anderson's scheme materializes. Housing is very important. As to cruelty due to neglect he quoted the case of a 10 year old girl having to keep house for 4 men, with the result that she is in hospital suffering from St. Vitus Dance, induced by nervous prostration. Under the welfare movement things of this kind would cease.

Rev. Gordon Dickie regretted the absence of Rev. D. B. Hemmeon, President of the Social Service Council, as he was well acquainted with welfare work. All agree that the child has a right to be well reared, but many homes are not the refuge they are supposed to be. Modern legislation gives the State the power to look after the children. An effort has been made to get protective legislation here and a Magistrate should be appointed to deal with juvenile offenders in proper environment and give them counsel instead of reprimand which may only make them hardened. If the foundation of the present movement is well laid, it will become more satisfying to our demands and be a credit to the people generally. The S. S. Council will support the movement.

Rev. Dr. Jones said Rev. Fr. Renout, Rev. D. B. Hemmeon and himself had approached the Government as to the need of legislation for the betterment of children, on the idea of placing boys and girls in homes or reformatories in Canada, a juvenile court and the prevention of young girls staying on board foreign ships all night. The Government had given assurance of bringing legislation to remedy the evils. The passing of the resolutions would forward the work. His Excellency pointed out that the meeting was a public one and the resolutions would represent the sentiment of the city.

Mrs. Emerson then read the following

RESOLUTIONS:
WHEREAS the Women's Patriotic Association have formally undertaken to devote their services to the scientific care and development of the child life of this city under the title of "Child Welfare";
AND WHEREAS it has been ascertained that there are a number of children in this city who are inadequately and remotely cared for, with fatal results to the infant life of the community;
AND WHEREAS it is understood that the Social Service Council, recognizing that the welfare of young children is a moral obligation resting upon all citizens, as such has, through its Executive, made strong representations to the Government in favor of comprehensive child-welfare legislation;
RESOLVED that the members of the Women's Patriotic Association heartily endorse the representations made to the Government by the Social Service Council and desire to cooperate with that Council in all movements aiming at the protection of child life;

RESOLVED FURTHER that this meeting take steps to form a Society for the Protection of Children, or the Prevention of Cruelty to Children in Newfoundland, the work of such Society to be in close touch with that of the Women's Patriotic Association for Child Welfare.

Mrs. A. Macpherson seconded the resolutions and pointed out the value of woman suffrage in combating the evils referred to. The resolutions were passed unanimously.

A vote of thanks which was tendered by acclamation, was proposed by His Excellency and Lady Harris by Rev. Canon Bolt, who referred particularly to the work of the latter in the cause.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

A Drake Discovery.

It was while rummaging in the archives of the Inquisition in the city of Mexico in 1912, that Mrs. Nuttall, an American lady, discovered a Declaration by Nuno da Silva about how he fell prisoner amongst "English pirates" on his voyage from Oporto to Brazil on May 23, 1579. Reading this almost illegible Spanish script, she was struck by a casual statement on the third page, which said "this Englishman calls himself Franco Drake." She had, indeed, alighted by mere accident on a contemporary account of the voyage of Sir Francis Drake to the Spanish Main, which threw some interesting new light on the famous Admiral's career. It was in 1579 that Drake entered the port of Lima, Peru, where he knew that a fellow-Englishman, John Oxenham, with two shipmates, was living in the prisons of the Inquisition. Drake's idea was to capture a couple of Spanish ships and hold them as a ransom for the lives of the British tars, so he went into the harbour and cut the cables and hawsers of two big galleons, hoping that they would drift out and fall into his clutches. But the wind failed, the scheme was unsuccessful, and Oxenham and one of his comrades were hanged. The new documents seem to reveal that Drake really had the Queen's commission for his voyage, so was not a pirate, as the Spaniards loved to style him. Although he had a chaplain aboard, the great circumnavigator personally read prayers and conducted the services with "the gentlemen on board," round the table. Drake always insisted on his prisoners sharing his table, and he treated them in gentlemanly fashion. The hidalgos reciprocated his courtesy; scarcely one of them, when again free, stooped to expressions of hatred or abuse towards their "pirate" captor. One, a Spanish captain, who was badly wounded in the face by Drake's men ere he laid down his arms was the guest of the Admiral for several days, and in his deposition he refrains from any reference to such a slight matter as his wound. In view of the serious manner in which Drake "singled the King of Spain's beard," and the strong feeling among Spaniards as to the "English heretics," the chivalrous attitude of both sides is noteworthy.

At the City Hall.

The weekly meeting of the Municipal Council was held Thursday night, the Mayor and Councillors Ayre, Morris, Mullaly and Vinnicombe being present. The Minutes of the previous meeting being confirmed, the following matters were disposed of: The Deputy Colonial Secretary acknowledged receipt of Municipal Report and Statements of Revenue and Expenditure for year 1919; also statements of Estimated Revenue and Expenditure for the year 1920. The Deputy Colonial Secretary forwarded a communication respecting Job's Bridge, and stated the Prime Minister would be glad to meet a deputation from the Council in reference to the matter. A communication was received from the Secretary, Public Works Department, asking what the annual charges for water supply would be in the event of the service being extended to the Lunatic Asylum and Sanatorium. Information will be forwarded the Department.

The Gas Company stated the repairing of openings on Water Street would receive their immediate attention. The Gas Company also asked that, in view of present conditions, they be exempt from tax on a cargo of gas coal about to arrive. The Council is prepared to recommend to the Government the Company be allowed to import coal free of duty, provided the Company is willing to pay a license fee of $2,500 per annum for the privilege of using the streets of the City. The Manager of the Nfld. Atlantic Fisheries, Ltd., asked that the Council's official, when reading the meter at their works, notify their Engineer, so that he could take the reading also. Request acceded to. Aveling and Porter, Ltd., London, notified Council of shipment of crusher wheels. Bill of A. B. Morine, for professional services, was ordered paid. Applications were received from Ed. Stamp and Allan G. Graham for the position of driver of the steam roller. Bert Hayward asked why he was not given an opportunity to tender for motor trucks. As the Council is looking for a certain class of trucks and as Mr. Hayward is not connected with the makers of same, it was not thought necessary to ask for quotations. Letters were received from W. J. Ellis, Contractor, and Messrs. H. J. Stabb & Co., offering to supply E. W. Pipe. Stephen Power asked that the necessary fencing be done in front of his dwelling, Quidi Vidi Road. This will be attended to as soon as possible. Wm. Costello, Plymouth Road, applied for water and sewerage installation under Small Homes Act. The Plumbing Inspector will inquire into same. M. R. Byrne will be given permission to install a small motor at 264 Theatre Hill, subject to approval of Engineer. A. Lester asked to be allowed to install gasoline tank at garage, Carnell Street. This matter was referred to the Engineer and Inspector General. Jas. Murdock applied, on behalf of Mrs. C. R. Thompson, for estimated cost of opening street on proposed Sudbury lay-out. City Engineer will examine and prepare estimate as soon as possible. J. Murdock also asked that Capt. E. Vallis be allowed to proceed with erection of bungalow, Sudbury Street, and that he be prepared to pay his contribution towards cost of improvements. Decided that water and sewerage be extended on Sudbury Street and the owners of the land notified they will be called upon to pay their proportion of cost of improvements. Jno. T. Egan asked permission to build stable on Cornwall Avenue. This was deferred. The following were given permission to build extension to dwellings: Alex. Grouchey, Allan Squire; J. J. Guigley, Pleasant Street; Alex. Furlong, Bulley Street. Permit to make repairs will be given to John Peddle, Queen Street. Thos. W. Sparkes, LeMarchant Rd., must submit plans and location, before he will be permitted to build garage. A. J. Stacey's request to repair 8 Prince's Street was not granted. The building is in the fire zone, and the Council is not allowed, under the Act, to give permission in this respect. Plans submitted by E. C. and H. W. Bradbury, to build on Pleasant Street were passed, subject to the Engineer. Wm. James will be allowed to erect dwelling, Macklin Place, as per plans submitted, (subject to the approval of the Engineer), provided he builds retaining wall to height required. A. W. O'Reilly will be allowed to build garage, Water Street West, provided same is erected within sixty feet of the street line. Decided the Solicitor proceed with the suit taken against the Street Railway Co. for repairs to road on car route. Councillor Mullaly asked that light, Patrick Street, be placed in better position. Attention will be given same. Application for R. Pasher for increase in amount paid him for overtime, was not granted. Decided order be placed for 3 1/2 ton motor truck. Reports of the City Engineer, Solicitor, etc., for the week were read. Health Officer's report showed six new cases of diphtheria, one scarlet fever and one smallpox. Councillor Mullaly gave notice that at the next regular meeting of the Council, he would introduce a resolution dealing with Motor Car Driving within the city limits. With the passing of pay rolls and

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—In reading Mr. Coaker's speech in to-day's issue of the Daily News, I saw a paragraph in it which attracted my attention, i.e., the more men left the fishery this year the better, because it would make a smaller catch, and a smaller catch means better prices. He welcomed the news that men were leaving the country to get work, for that also reduced the number engaged at the fishery, and instead of deprecating that he welcomed it. The more people who went away, the better for the fishermen who are catching fish. It stands to reason, he said, that 1,300,000 quintals will bring more in proportion as regards price, than if we had a big catch like that of 1919 of 1,600,000. If it is a large catch you can take $2.00 off at once. A small voyage will mean good prices. He advocated scientific research and believed in this regard that not 5 men in the House could look over a wharf and see a fish-boat, and tell whether it would ever come to a grown fish or not—that is not in Mr. Coaker's hands. It is in the hands of a higher power. Thanking you for space, I will use the words of Oliver Goldsmith and say:

"I'll fare the land to hastening ill a prey,
Where wealth accumulates and men decay.
But a bold peasantry their country's pride,
When once destroyed, can never be supplied."
Yours respectfully,
GEORGE J. KEOUGH, O.S.

Talks by Tiberius.

Doctors, St. Pierre and Prohibition.

The air is filled with moans and sighs and groans. Rachel weeping for her children and will not be comforted. She has been weeping and groaning and sighing since January 1st, 1917, when the Prohibition Act came into force in Newfoundland. She will not be comforted. She is not quite a dipsomaniac, a possessor of a thirst and a lunatic thirst; but she has a thirst which is remarkable for the effect which it has upon her, anyway. Her thirst has made her do the most outlandish and outrageous things. It is a thirst for alcoholic liquors. Since she has not been able to get what she wants, she has been getting what she did not want, hoping that by some strange turn of events, she would get what she wanted. To get a taste of her favourite drink, something near akin to pure alcohol, she has bought and drunk large quantities of Vanilla Essences, High Proof Hop Beer, commonly called Moonshine. She has drunk Hair Oil and Perfume; Lavender Water and Bay Rum; Tanlac, and the foreigner's famous beverage, "Pop." She has even put boot-blackening on bread and eaten it. All of which she might get a taste of the real thing. The beasts of the field could do no more; the birds would not do so much; she has made herself lawless, she has openly and shamefully violated law, that she might be comforted. Yet she is not comforted. Why is that the law enforcers, have not sufficient public opinion behind them in their work, to put Rachel where she ought to be, where she would learn a much needed lesson; i.e., where she would learn to control her appetite and respect the law.

Rachel represents the crazy lovers of liquor who have stooped to all depths of shameful lawlessness in order to gratify a low-down craving for a liquor, which has been branded by the highest and sanest of medical and scientific authority, as a poison. There can be no other explanation of the despicable yet clever means which have been adopted by different parties to outlaw or evade, the Prohibition Act. Again I say; carry out the Act, everybody carry out the Act, from the Premier down. Let every doctor honor his profession by strictly observing the Prohibition Act, as he honors any other Act. Let the Controller be a man of strength of character, a law abiding citizen. Let the Department of Finance and Customs be honestly and fearlessly administered. And let the Chief of Police have a free hand and be supported by all lovers of law and order; and the Prohibition Act will prohibit more things. Rachel may weep for her quota of booze, but it is in her own interests that she get none, for she only makes herself bestial when she gets it. Her best friends would keep it from her.

THE DOCTORS.

I want to point out at least two gateways by which men and women get the stuff called booze. The first I shall mention is the Doctor. I do not blame all doctors for the shameful manner in which law has been flouted in this country, but I make the assertion without fear of any successful contradiction, that the great majority of medical men in Newfoundland have been guilty of flagrant violations of the Prohibition Act, and knowingly so, at that. There is always a reason. There is reason in a stone someone has said, and there is reason for the attitude of the medical men. The few who are loyal to the act are men of strong character, men who regard truth and honor above rubies; men who would forfeit life rather than yield one point of their principle; men who are not tempted by offers of the dollar. They are men. The others, never mind. They are educated, but are not wise. They are intellectual, but do not know. They are called men, but act like jelly-fish. They are called Christian, but do not act Christian, for there is no canon of Bible teaching, nor is there any law of morals which would vindicate their action in relation to the violation of the Prohibition Act.

Now I have made a very strong statement, a statement, which if true, places the guilty party in a queer if not a serious position. If the statement is not true then I ought to be made to retract it. The statement, however, is deliberately made and I now want to substantiate it, and give reasons why some doctors, (why most doctors), violate the Prohibition Act and Legislation.

The first reason is—The love of money. "The love of money is the root of all evil," quoth the good book. Perhaps I ought to be a little kindly in my criticisms of any one along the lines suggested in view of the High Cost of Living. But when the doctor accepts a five dollar fee, more or less, for making out a script for liquors for some poor fool who will not be comforted only and except by that means, he may be solving his own problem of living, but he is also making the same problem for the other fellow less easy of solution. Some doctors have grown rich on their trade in scripts; the love of money has robbed them of all sense of fair play.

The second reason is—The love of the stuff itself. Probably if the truth were told, and nothing but the truth, it would have to be said that the desire for booze lies at the root of all the trouble in connection with the Prohibition Act. I have seen cases where the love of alcohol, or rather the craving for it, has defied all consideration of the holiest and sweetest of human nature. I have known of young men who with great glee and pardonable pride have led to the altar the "best girl in the world." On the wedding day they have been very sincere in their vows and promises. The wedding day has been their "doom's day, for to please their guests, the bridegrooms have taken their first glass. The craving has set in. Presto, begone fair bride and promises forsooth. I say again, the craving for the stuff (like the fiends in the lower regions), explains practically all the rest, the rest follow as effect follows cause; consequently, and so on. If the doctors have not the craving for the stuff and some of them have; they take advantage of the craving which others have, and enrich themselves thereby. Are they not equally guilty?

Now as to the statement itself. To substantiate my first, I will make more.

(a) It must be understood that the law only allows alcoholic liquors for medicinal, sacramental or mechanical reasons:

(b) It must be admitted, (prima facie) only sick men or persons need medicine. "They that are well need not a physician." (c) A doctor, of all men, knows when a man is sick, but it is common knowledge that doctors have given scripts for alcoholic liquors in medicinal quantities when they knew that the men were not sick. Can anybody worm out of that inconsistency? Can anyone explain away that knowing breach of a well known law?

(d) Doctors are supplied with books and literature with which they are supposed to keep in touch with the Controller's Department to which they are also supposed to make a periodical report. A member of the Medical Fraternity told me not long ago that doctors sometimes exceed the number of scripts allowed by law; often exceed the quantity; and never make the report called for by the law.

Some day soon, if necessary, I will come back to the subject of the doctor in relation to the Prohibition Act. I will now pass on to tell a tale about St. Pierre.

A TALE OF ST. PIERRE.

Perhaps I have spelt my word wrongly. It should be "fall" and not "ale." Perhaps it is both. On the French island there is not any Prohibition Law. On the island of Newfoundland, there is. It is not a great distance from the latter to the former place. It commonly occurs that men cover the distance in small boats. That is the "fall."

I want to draw the attention of the Department of Customs and of Justice to the fact that hundreds of gallons of alcoholic liquors have been smuggled into Newfoundland from St. Pierre. A great deal of it, since January 1st, 1917.

If detectives were told off to watch St. Mary's Bay, and points therein; and also to watch Holyrood, and points thereabout; and also many of the automobiles which make day and night runs between the bottom of Conception Bay and St. John's; they would find another wide gateway by which, the liquor crazed, lawless, un-patriotic gents and ladies get their booze. They will also find another reason why the Prohibition Act does not prohibit.

Prohibition Not Popular.

Exodus From the United States—No Life Because of Dry Regulations. A vivid description of America under prohibition was given to a press representative by a gentleman holding an influential position in a prominent New York banking firm, who has just arrived in London from the States.

"There is no life in the restaurants in America now," he said. "All the joyousness and sparkle have departed, and the people sit round the tables for meals as seriously as if they were performing a religious rite. How different from the restaurants in London, where all is gaiety and effervescence, and where the 'joie de vivre' has not been crushed by flat-footed fanaticism!"

"The parrot-cry of the 'Pussyfoot' party has always been that prohibition leads to an increased output in the factories; but if the exodus from the States continues at its present rate the ranks of the workers will soon be seriously depleted."

"It is certain that there is a great amount of grumbling and discontent among the work people which never existed before, and large numbers are leaving America for Canada, Cuba, and Britain."

"There never has been such a demand for passports in the whole history of the country. All the foreign element is leaving New York."

"Deep and universal is the resentment against the present state of the law among all classes of the community. If you want to see an example of the people's eagerness to enjoy an innocent glass of wine or spirits you have only to board an outward-bound liner at New York."

"No alcoholic liquors may be sold at the bars on board until the vessel is three miles out from harbour, but long before that time there may be seen a continuous queue of thirsty passengers extending far up the deck, all patiently awaiting the lifting of the hated embargo."

Home Manufacture of Spirits. "Of course, prohibition led immediately to the manufacture of beer, wine and spirits in the people's own homes on the sly, and the papers published recipes, telling housewives how to concoct drinks, until the authorities stopped it. The demand for brown sugar and raisins was enormous, and whisky, of course, can also be made from potatoes."

Mrs. McDonald of Cape Breton Gives Testimony.

Says Tanlac Proved Its Worth By Restoring Her to Splendid Health.

The remarkable results being obtained by the use of Tanlac is further evidence in the case of Mrs. D. A. McDonald, of Reserve, Cape Breton. While speaking of her experience with the medicine which has been so beneficial to her, Mrs. McDonald said: "If I hadn't been for Tanlac I believe I should have had to give up entirely, on account of being troubled with the worst kind of indigestion. I couldn't eat a thing but what was would form and blast me up so badly that I had to loosen my clothes. The distress caused by this indigestion was specially bad at night and often I had to get up and pace the floor before I could get any relief. I used to have violent headaches that kept me in bed for days at a time and drove me almost frantic with pain. My nerves got so bad that the least little thing upset me and I couldn't bear to have anybody around. I couldn't sleep at night and by mid-day would be completely done up. "I had tried so many medicines without getting any relief, that when a friend advised me to try Tanlac I thought it would be like all the rest. Still, I gave it a trial and I hadn't got through the second bottle before I began to improve, and by the time I had finished the fourth, I was as well as could be. I can now eat anything I want to and am never troubled with gas or indigestion. I am no longer troubled with shortness of breath or palpitation of the heart. Headaches are a thing of the past, and my nerves are as steady as a clock. I sleep as soundly as a child every night and get up in the morning feeling so fresh and strong that my work is no trouble to me at all. Tanlac is certainly wonderful, and after what it has done for me I am glad of the chance to recommend it."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors; by Reg. Sullivan, Pouch Cove; Sound Island Store, Sound Island; Dennis Flynn, Avonale; J. J. O'Brien, Cape Broyle—adv.

he appointed to search houses, in which illicit stills were suspected and to examine any persons under suspicion of carrying spirits out of doors.

"As I had a flask of whisky in my hip pocket, they could actually seize my trousers, as that offensive garment would be the 'carrier' in the eyes of the law."

"If you walk down the street with a jug of ink in your hand a Revenue officer can stop and ask you what it contains."

"On the financial side of the question, the loss to the revenue from the sale of liquor amounts to hundreds of millions of dollars a year. A very large sum is now needed for the salaries of the Revenue officers and for the guarding of liquor in the bonded 'warehouses,' reserved for medical purposes."

"A serious loss of revenue is incurred through the disappearance of the American tourist, who used to spend his money in holiday time in his own country. Now he goes to Canada and the West Indies; Cuba and Havana are specially favourite resorts, and in the later place the authorities spent between ten and fifteen million dollars on casinos, swell hotels, and restaurants, expecting to get it back by the tourists from the States last winter, and they did!"

"Another phase of the Prohibition question is the undoubted fact that since it came into force the use of narcotics has developed enormously."—Dundee Evening Telegraph.

Fancy Lenine Working.

May Day was observed in Soviet Russia as "a day of general work." So general, indeed, was the observance that even "the personnel of the soviets took upon themselves some task." Nicholas Lenine, for instance, devoted himself to assisting some workmen at the Kremlin, and "was seen carrying heavy loads." It all sounds excellent, but it is not quite easy to appreciate the point of view. Why was it necessary for Mr. Lenine to abandon, for the time being, his duties as Premier and carry "heavy loads" in order to comply with the demand for general work?—Christian Science Monitor.

It is estimated that the eyes of an expert pianist absorb 1,500 notes and his fingers execute 2,000 movements every minute. At this rate he ought to strike 1,000,000 notes in a little over eleven hours.

Capt. Marryat Out of Print.

It was indeed a serious state of things which was unfolded to the Library Association in England, recently, by Mr. L. Stanley Jast of the Manchester public libraries. It appears that many famous children's books are actually out of print, and that the libraries are experiencing great difficulty in completing their shelves. Much of Harrison Ainsworth, and the whole of Jules Verne—imagine it!—the sea stories of W. H. G. Kingston, several tales by Captain Marryat and Ballantyne are practically unprocureable save through the second-hand dealer. And so Mr. Jast proposes that the council of the Library Association shall negotiate with publishers for the reprint of these books, guaranteeing such publisher as may undertake the work a large enough sale to the public libraries to pay the expenses and provide the necessary profit. It is certainly a scheme worthy of all consideration, for something must be done about it. Captain Marryat out of print! and Jules Verne! There was a time when judges sat and administered justice in the open street within a couple of stones' throw of where we are now sitting. In some parts of Siam a girl who reaches a certain age without marrying is labelled, and placed in a privileged class under the special care of the King, who binds himself to find a husband for them all. His method is delightfully simple. A prisoner in any one of the Siamese gaols may gain his pardon and release by marrying one of the ineligible class. Whether he is already married is not of great consequence, for in Siam a man is not restricted to one wife.

Japan has its communities of silent female recluses. There is a convent at a place called Yunakawa, about seven miles from Hakodate. A matron of some fifty years presides, and her instructions are implicitly obeyed. The women are all young, ranging from sixteen to twenty-seven, and some of them are described as very beautiful. The building stands in a farm of some 250 acres, but the women do not engage in any agricultural work. They spend most of their time indoors, and they observe a strict rule of silence.

Measurements taken by surgeons of the Japanese army show that the Japanese smallness of stature is due to an almost dwarfed condition of the legs. This is probably due to the fact that from early childhood a really unnatural way of sitting is constantly practised. The adult Japanese is accustomed to sit with his legs bent under him. As soon as the child is old enough to be set upon the floor his legs are bent under him in imitation of the custom of his elders. This, in time, dwarfs the growth of the limbs. Actual deformity is less common among the peasants than among scholars, merchants, and others of sedentary habits.

Hard Thinking Good for Long Life.

Nothing reacts so favourably upon the various functions of the body as strong, vigorous, mental exercise. Nothing else will take the place of clear, forcible thinking. It is a perpetual tonic. Use your brains, and bodily strength will follow. It is well known that great thinkers are longer lived, as a rule, than indifferent thinkers.

A celebrated English physician says that to attain a long life, the brain must always be active when not asleep, and he lays great stress upon the necessity of everybody having a hobby outside of the vocation which gives him a living. This hobby must be one in which he takes real delight, one which will exercise pleasantly and agreeably, without unduly taxing his mental facilities.

Nothing will destroy itself quicker than an idle brain. If there is anybody in this world to be pitied, it is one who obtains his living by doing nothing, no matter how much he may have of himself, no ambition which will exercise his brain or his ingenuity; and call out his resourcefulness or exercise his energies.

Pretty Shrewd.

It seems to be the aim of some people to acquire a reputation for shrewdness, which in many cases is another name for roguery. Such people take a delight in treating their friends as well as enemies, like the wealthy old lady who occupied her leisure in making patchwork quilts, which she regularly donated to the annual church fairs. They were hideous things and, as nobody would buy them, they were apt to be ruffled in ignominious fashion at the close of the fair, much to the chagrin of the old lady. One day, just before the fair time, this old lady sent for her lawyer and had him add a codicil to her will, bequeathing $25 to each and every person who should buy a quilt at the church fair. The lawyer assured her that her injunctions to strict secrecy should be faithfully observed, but it was noticed that a sister of the lawyer bought the silk quilt on the very first day of the fair for six years. When the old lady died the lawyer came smiling forward with six quilts and his sister to claim the sum of $150. But he was tricked in turn, as the old lady had neatly cut the codicil from the will!

Wonders Of Wireless.

Receiving Messages From the Unknown.

These strange signals which are being caught at wireless stations on different parts of our planet are a problem to the big scientists themselves. How much more, then, must they puzzle the brains of the ordinary public?

There are hundreds of different wireless stations. Why, then, asks the man in the street, is it that only one station here and there picks up these incomprehensible sounds from the void?

The answer is this—that each sending or receiving instrument can be tuned, like a fiddle or banjo string, to send or receive signals of a certain wave length. A receiver tuned to catch a short wave cannot take a long one, and vice versa.

Now the waves which bring these signals from the unknown are of great length. Consequently the ordinary receiver tuned for taking ordinary messages does not recognise them.

The bigger the station, and the greater the sending distance, the longer—as a rule—is the wave used. Take Clifden in Ireland and Glace Bay in Nova Scotia as an example. It is between these two—a distance of 2,300 miles—that the transatlantic wireless service is carried on.

The wires used for sending or receiving are about 1,000 feet long, and are stretched at a height of about 200 feet. The wave length employed is 20,000 feet—that is, each wave or ripple is nearly four miles long from crest to crest. Fifty thousand of these waves are emitted each second, and the waves rush through the ether across the Atlantic at a speed of 186,300 miles per second, and so take one seventy-fifth part of a second to fly from one side of the Atlantic to the other.

The signals that have been coming in from space—perhaps from Mars—are produced by other waves even longer than those used by the giant stations which span the Atlantic.

BRANDRAM-HENDERSON

The Best Explanation.

British merchants have regained their business since the end of the war in a way that has astonished the world, and many explanations have been offered for this marvelous revival. Some have ascribed it to British statesmanship, others have maintained that it is due to the business ability of British merchants, and again it has been asserted that the Free Trade policy should be given all the credit. The true explanation, however, was probably given by Colonel W. Grant Morgan when in the course of an address in Toronto the other day he said:

"Some people wonder how Britain is regaining its overseas trade. I assure you that one of the most important factors is that men know when they make a contract with a British firm, it will be respected and lived up to the last letter not only of the legal but the moral point of the law. I say to you, members of the Toronto Board of Trade, that if you follow those traditions of the merchants of England, you need never look back, that you will couple with that great tradition which they have established throughout the world, the fact that Canada is a part of the British Empire, and that a contract made within the British Empire is as good as the gold in the Bank of England."

The people who had gone out after that trade while Britain was engaged in the great struggle had repudiated their contracts when the prices of raw materials went up. It is only natural then that business returned to the "men of the covenant" at the end of the war. That principle is respected even by men who do not live up to it themselves. Even men who do not deal honestly with other people expect everybody else to give them a square deal and they always prefer buying from honest people. That honesty is an outstanding characteristic of the British race will not be questioned. Generally speaking, their word is as good as their bond. They attach their names either to business contracts or international agreements with the intention of carrying out all the provisions to the letter. That this principle appeals to the British race was proven in the war. Other nations entered the war either to defend their own territory or their commerce, to extend their borders or to "get square" with somebody. Most of them

How We Go to Sleep.

In beginning to sleep the senses do not unitesly fall into a state of slumber, but drop off one after the other. The sight ceases, in consequence of the rotation of the eyelids, to receive impression first, while all the other senses preserve their sensibility entire. The sense of taste is the next which loses its susceptibility to impressions, and then the sense of smell. The hearing is next in order, and last of all comes the sense of touch. Furthermore, the senses are thought to sleep with different degrees of profoundness. The sense of touch sleeps the most lightly, and is the most easily awakened; the next easiest is the hearing, the next is the sight, and taste and smell awake the last. Another remarkable circumstance deserves notice; certain muscles and parts of the body begin to sleep before others. Sleep commences at the extremities, beginning with the feet and legs and creeping towards the centre of nervous action. The necessity for keeping the feet warm and perfectly still, as a preliminary of sleep, is well known.

Miss Joan Vivian Rees, who broke quite new ground in her racy presentation of the part of the Cockney artist's model in a recent play, "Just Like Judy," joined the other day in a heated argument in one of the dressing-rooms, the subject under discussion being whether men or women were the biggest "swankers."

"I think it's six of one and half a dozen of the other," said Miss Rees decidedly; and to prove her contention, she went on to relate how, last summer, at the seaside a couple paired off for the time being.

"Each tried to impress the other. He told her of his yacht at Cowes, of his seat in the shires. She prattled of her Rolls-Royce car, and of her villa at Cannes."

"Then, finally, their fortnight being up, they parted."

"Two days later they met again. He was lurching in the city; she it was who handed him his bun and milk and a six-penny pay-ticket."

"You left your yacht outside, I suppose, Mr.—or—?" she remarked, frigidly.

"Moored alongside a Rolls-Royce car—your car, I presume, Miss—?" he replied.

Robert Burns, the Ardent Lover.

(THORNTON HALL in John o' London's Weekly.)

From the day when Robert Burns vowed in one of his earliest rhymes that he loved his "handsome Nell," to the last year of his life, love and poetry were, he confesses, "at times, his only and his highest enjoyments." In love he was ever a child of nature, giving free rein to his natural impulses, losing his heart at first sight of a bonny face and recapturing it when his brief passion cooled again—only to lose it again and again in a similar brief-lived rapture. He was only in his "fifteenth autumn" when a "bonnie, sweet, some lass," his partner in the harvest field, first initiated him in that delicious passion, which, he says, "I hold to be the first of human joys." The tones of her voice made his heart-strings "thrill like an Aeolian harp"; and his pulse "beat a furious rattle" when he fingered her little hand to pick out the cruel nettle-stings and thistles.

"Sweet Highland Mary."

And from that day we find him pouring out his fickle heart to one bonnie lassie after another—to Mary Morison, to the nameless beauties who lived on Cessnock bank, and "Behind yon hills where Stinckar flows," to the "six proper young belles who dwell in Mauchline," and so on, through the long list of his fugitive, if ardent, adventures in love.

To Mary Campbell, alone of them all, he seems to have given his heart in full, pure, and lasting surrender—the "sweet Highland Mary" who was snatched so cruelly and tragically from his arms by death after that beautiful meeting in which Bible in hand, they mutually pledged undying love. How deep this love was and how profound his grief is shown by that sublime and pathetic lament, his poem, "To Mary in Heaven," written

His Death Expected

New Brunswick Man Saved

Mr. Isidore Thomas, of Tilley's Road, Gloucester County, N.B., while expecting death, availed himself of help that was offered at random. Here is part of a letter he wrote to us:—
"I beg you to publish my letter, so that people may know what Gin Pills did for me. My case was very serious. I was so sick everybody expected my death any day. Finally, on advice from friends, I tried Gin Pills, and in a short time was well again, and soon had gained 20 pounds."

Kidney and bladder troubles, very often, work in secret ways. A bad condition may exist, with only a headache to indicate it. That is why the slightest pains in back or sides should be investigated. These pains, along with sciatic neuralgia, rheumatism, dizziness, constipation, lumbago, humbago, highly-colored urine, headache, floating specks before the eyes, gravel, indicate kidney trouble. A course of Gin Pills, taken at once, will give relief, and prevent the progress of the disease, enabling the organs to right themselves and restore good health. Gin Pills are the sure, safe, quick remedy. Get a box from your druggist or dealer—50c. Money refunded if no relief found. Send for free sample.

on the anniversary of the day on which he heard of his loss:—
O Mary, dear departed shade,
Where is thy place of blissful rest?
"Bonny Jean."

But though his dead love was shrined for ever, sacred and unapproachable, in Burns's heart, the hot blood still raced through his veins and impetuously demanded an outlet. He seemed to be as powerless as ever to resist the lure of a pretty face and a tempting waist. There were lassies in plenty, in Mauchline alone, whose sweetest smiles were reserved for the handsome young farmer with the magnetic eyes which none of them could, or cared, to resist. But the most alluring of them all had to give place to the seductions of Bonny Jean Armour.

"Bonny Jean" indeed, seems to have had little difficulty in catching Bobbie's too susceptible heart in her toils, and setting his pulses beating to a dangerous tune; for within a few months of their first ramble together, we are told, she found herself "as ladies wish to be that love their lords." The hot-blooded farmer had this time loved "not wisely but too well"; though, to his credit, let it be said that, to quote his brother Gilbert, "hitherto his numerous connections had been governed by the strictest rules of virtue and modesty."

But, although such lapses were lightly regarded among the lower classes of Scotland in those days, so long as timely marriages averted the worst consequences of the indiscretion, Burns was not to escape thus easily. Jean's father, a highly-respected master-mason, proud of his daughter and of his unblemished family honour, was furious at this outrage—the more that the man responsible for it was a "beggarly farmer," his social inferior; a man, moreover, notorious for his loose living. He was blind to Jean's tears, deaf to her entreaties for forgiveness.

As for Burns, when he learned Jean's condition, the news "staggered him like a blow." He was desperate, and in his despair decided to leave the country. To his friend, James Smith, of Mauchline, he wrote: "Against two things I am fixed as fate—staying at home and owning her conjugally. The first, by Heaven, I will not do! The last, by hell, I will never do. If you see Jean, tell her I will meet her, so help me God in my hour of need."

An "Irregular" Marriage.

What happened at the meeting that followed between the two lovers we do not know. We only know that, before they separated, Burns had handed to Jean a written acknowledgment of marriage, which, when produced by a person in Miss Armour's condition is, according to the Scots law, "to be accepted as legal evidence of an irregular marriage; it being understood that the marriage was to be formally avowed as soon as the consequences of their indiscretion could no longer be concealed from the family."

So far, however, from appeasing the master-mason, this acknowledgment insult added to injury—fanned his anger into still more furious flame; and he insisted on his daughter destroying the document, the one shield that could cover her shame.

Abysmal Despair.

Then followed for Burns, the bitterest period of his life—a time of abysmal despair, of threatened insanity; of frantic efforts to find a way of escape from his cruel dilemma.

From "misfortune's bitter blast" he was about to fly to Jamaica, when the publication of his first book of poems and its rapturous reception called a halt on his way to Greenock and embarkation. The tide of fortune had at last turned for him.

He soon found himself a literary and social lion, with money pouring in from a second edition of his poems.

And the day quickly came when he was able to make an "honest woman" and a loving, and loyal wife of the girl his passion had betrayed; and to inaugurate on his new Elliesland farm the happiest period of his life, with a "wife o' mine ane," to whom he was soon addressing the impassioned lines:—
Oh, were I on Parnassus hill,
Or had of Helicon my fill,
That I might catch poetic skill
To sing how dear I love thee!

I want another bottle of "Brick's Tasteless", it is the best preparation I have ever taken to give me an appetite.—apr28,4t

A Piano 200 Years Old.

The oldest piano in existence was made by Cristofori in the year 1720, and is still in good condition. But its sound is more like that of a harp than a piano, for its wires, instead of being struck by hammers, are plucked by points of quill or of hard leather.

The piano only became popular towards the end of the eighteenth century. Its first public appearance was at Convent Garden Theatre in 1867, when Miss Brichler sang to the accompaniment of "a new instrument called pianoforte."

which a greater variety of fine timber must be seasoned more carefully. The varieties include Canadian spruce, American oak and whitewood, Honduras mahogany and best English beech. Sounding boards are made of Swiss pine, the "Abies Excelsa," which is nothing but the Christmas tree with which we are all so familiar. All this timber has to be seasoned in a special heating chamber where it is subjected for days together to a powerful draught of dry air. Before completion, a grand piano passes through no fewer than eighty hands, and more than 10,700 different pieces of wood, metal, cloth, felt and the like enter into the construction.

Puzzling.

The high price of sugar in the United States is "puzzling," according to a prominent sugar refiner recently returned from Europe. Precisely; but why let it remain a puzzle?—It (It is more puzzling in Newfoundland, where we expect we shall have to pay through the nose for tea sweetening ere long. Food Control Board and Consumer's League to the contrary, notwithstanding. Prospects of lower prices are none too promising.)

Chinese Progenitors of Mexican Race.

The problem which has perplexed historians and archaeologists for centuries, as to the true origin of the Mexican nation, may be solved by the recent discovery of hieroglyphics on the foundation stones of the pyramids of San Juan Teotihuacan, twenty-seven miles northeast of Mexico City. These strange carvings are said by some authorities to be Chinese, thus tending to bear out the old tradition that in the dim past wandering tribes from China crossed to a new continent, settled within the present boundaries of Mexico, and became the progenitors of the race which now dominates this Mexican republic. So interesting are the recent discoveries that the Bureau of Anthropology in Mexico City has been instructed to conduct a vigorous research, and in this connection Feng Tsiang Kuang, Charge d'Affaires of the Chinese Legation in Mexico, visited the pyramids and stated that the hieroglyphics were similar in many respects to certain symbols now in use by the Chinese.

He declared the words "Sun," "City" and "Eye" were clearly depicted. Mexican anthropologists who have interested themselves in the discovery have declined to pass final judgment until further excavations are made and more evidence obtained.

Colossal Monuments.

The pyramids of San Juan Teotihuacan as well as those in Cholula, in the State of Puebla, are among the oldest marks of primitive habitation to be found in the republic. They stand as colossal monuments to people whose history was as obscure to the conquering Spaniards in the sixteenth century as to present day historians.

Because of their general construction some authorities believe they are the handiwork of the Egyptians, who in some mysterious manner crossed the seas, and denoted their place of permanent habitation with these stone and cement structures, which are even larger than the more famous pyramids of Egypt.

The little village of San Juan Teotihuacan, which in the Aztec language meant "City of the Gods," was in the early days of Aztec history the scene of extraordinary religious ceremonies. The two pyramids, one dedicated to the sun, the other to the moon, are known to have been the tombs in which hundreds of tribal dignitaries were buried, and excavators have exhumed wrought stone containing human bones, obsidian knives, terra cotta heads with broad faces and flat noses, fragments of rare pottery and great numbers of arrowheads.

One of the most recent and most valuable discoveries was an adobe mask of some past monarch, with the brow covered with the diadem known to early Mexican history.

The pyramid to the sun measures 761 by 721 feet at the base and is 216 feet high; the one to the moon is 511 by 426 feet at the base and is 151 feet high. They both contain numerous chambers and their several stories are complete temples in themselves, but connected by winding stairs.

A charming bodice for the evening gown is silver metal cloth veiled with black chiffon.

The Coming Woman.

(From the Odd Volume.)

It is a mistake to talk of the Women's Movement, either as if there were only one of her in it or none of her living outside it. The obvious fact is that there are a good many of her in it, and out of it, and that all the angels are not on one side; there is a fair proportion of them on both. But there is, perhaps, room to doubt whether the movement is going to make the world a happier or a less ideal place than it is. Man is, of course, a shocking bad character; the women say so themselves; our old philosophers have always said so; even the Bible says so. Nothing could make him much worse than he is, but by going to work in the right way, it should be possible to reform him a little, and many of us oppose the movement because we honestly think it the wrong way, and are afraid that if it succeeds, and woman achieve her ambition, and comes to take an equal share with man in the stupor and squalid struggle of everyday business, she must lose touch of her femininity, her womanliness, and that the effect of this on his already selfish and hard enough character will be disastrous. Many of us, on the other hand, support the movement because we are honestly convinced that it will produce not only a new woman but a better one, and that as she climbs to a higher level man will, as usual, pursue her, and so had himself a little nearer heaven before he knows where he is going.

Fate of Jewels.

Never perhaps in the history of the world have there been so many gems "loose" as there are in the present day. The treasures of the Serbian kings, the royal treasures of Russia, the jewels of private individuals whose homes were invaded—are to-day in the hands of unknown persons in various part of the world. Few of the precious jewels of the European monarchs have appeared on the market.

Already the police of foreign countries are troubled with reports of frauds connected with these jewels. The impostor who professes to have a part of the "loose" loot is already offering to sell the treasures at a "ridiculously low price" if the purchaser will advance a certain sum "as evidence of good faith." And the police of foreign countries are surprised at the number of people who are caught in the little fraudulent game (says the Kansas City "Star.")

The same fraud was practised when treasures were reported lost in the French Revolution, in the Peninsular War, and in the Franco-Prussian War of 1871.

While the political pot boils in Russia with such intensity that an outsider takes his life in his own hands to enter the country, treasure seekers or their agents are already browsing around seeking the precious things that may come cheap among the sackers of the royal treasure houses. Whispers have spread of the stealthy passing of the wondrous gems concealed in fifty rags in the vile drinking dens of the criminal quarters of Petrograd. The agents of jewel seekers who have ventured into these criminal haunts for jewels stolen from the treasure houses of Russia are many. Decrees of death against the thieves have failed to restore the treasures.

The contents of the Kremlin, the greatest Russian royal treasure house, were alone estimated to be worth more than one hundred million dollars. In it were the thrones of the past emperors, the royal crowns, the collection of hundreds of years of Russia's barbaric splendor.

In the Winter Palace, the Petrograd residence of the court, were the crowns of the Czar and the Czarina, and the renowned room full of diamond, emerald and ruby ornaments. The royal residence outside of Petrograd, Tsarkoe Selo, with its famous lapis lazuli room of which the floor was of ebony inlaid with mother-of-pearl was a third treasure house despoiled by the pillagers.

And the Serbian monarch's jewels—treasures that no common eyes had even looked upon—were looted as the invaders beat back the Serbian army late in 1916. In a secret vault within the grim walls of the ancient monastery of Vesoki Dechant, far up in a mountain gorge, the jewels had remained hidden as they accumulated through the ages. The monastery had been guarded by a superstitious reverence where the holy dead would take vengeance against any one daring to raise predatory hand against it.

The royal jewels of Germany—their owners better able to take precautionary measures against their loss—have been secretly conveyed to places of security in Holland and Switzerland, and the jewels of the Hapsburgs are understood to have been preserved and in the hands of the government that has superseded the old regime.

The Belgian and French governments have received claims amounting to millions of pounds from private persons, pleading the loss of jewels during the German invasion and seeking compensation from the enemy, into whose hands they are supposed to have fallen. A huge amount of jewelry was buried in secret hiding places, many of which, it appears, have been rifled.

His Own Grandfather.

No doubt some of our readers like to study relationship puzzles. Here is an interesting one. It is seldom that a man claims to be his own grandfather, but that is the position of an Italian sailor, who, some years ago, married a widow with one child, a girl. His father fell in love with this girl, and married her. Consequently, his own father became his son-in-law, and his step-daughter his mother. In a short time his wife gave birth to a son, who, naturally, was his father's step-brother, and, at the same time, his own uncle, since he was his step-mother's brother. In due time his father's wife also gave birth to a boy, who was his brother and also his grandson, as he was the son of his daughter. His own wife was now his grandmother, as she was the mother of his mother. Thus he was at one and the same time his wife's husband and grandson. Now as the husband of a person's grandmother is naturally that person's grandfather, he is forced to the conclusion that he is his own grandfather.

The Most Beautiful Car in America
A New Development in Light Sixes
 Before we began experimental work on our new six-cylinder motor three years ago, we made a very thorough investigation of the light six field.
 We found out just what qualities car owners desired in the power plants of their motor cars and then we designed an engine to meet these requirements.
 The wisdom of our method is attested by the unanimous approval given our five-passenger "Glenbrook" model. With its first appearance, it immediately won the enthusiastic support of motorists.
 And, by its dependable and economical performance, it has so clearly demonstrated its high character as an investment value that our production schedule is already proving unequal to the demand.
 The "Glenbrook" is a truly remarkable development in five-passenger cars. Won't you arrange for a demonstration while our dealer is in position to meet your requirements as to delivery?
