HID ment more than 8 o'clock, and again remout breakfast. Loder covered the distance be-tween Grosvenor aguars and astily-with a haste that only an urgent motive could have driven him to gent motive could have driven him to adopt. His steps were quick and uneven as he traversed the intervening streets; his shoulders lacked their decisive pose, and his pale face was marked with shadows beneath the eyes shadows that bore witness to the sleepless night spent in pacing Chilcote's vast and lonely room. By the curious effect of circumstances the curious effect of circumstances the likeness between the two men had never been more significantly marked than on that morning of April 19, when Loder walked siens the pave-ments crowded with early workers and brisk with insistent news venders already alive to the value of last night's political crisis. The irony of this last element in the day's concerns came to him fully when one newsboy, more energetic than his fellows, thrust a paper in front of him.

"Sensation in the 'ouse, sir! Speech by Mr. Chilcote! Government defeat!"
For a moment Loder stopped and his face reddened. The tide of emotions still ran strong. His hand went in-stinctively to his pocket; then his lips set. He shook his head and walked on.

With the same hard expression about his mouth, he turned into Clifford's inn, passed through his own doorway and mounted the stairs. This time there was no milk can on the threshold of his rooms and the door yielded to his pressure without the need of a key. With a strange sensation of reluctance he walked into the narrow passage and passed, uncertain which room to enter first. As he stood hesitating a voice from the sitting room settled the question,

"Who's there?" it called irritably. "What do you want?"
Without further ceremony the intruder pushed the door open and entered the room. As he did so he drew a quick breath-whether of disappoint ment or relief it was impossible to say. Whether he had hoped for or dreaded

Chilcote was conscious.

As Loder entered he was sitting by the cheerless grate, the ashes of yes-eclay's fire showing charred and lyeary where the sun touched them. dreary where the sun touched them. His back was to the light, and about his shoulders was an old plaid rug. Behind him on the table stood a cup, a teapot and the can of milk; farther off a kettle was set to boll upon a off a kettle was set to boll upon a tiny spirit store.

"I don't know. She . I- We did not hit it off. She's gone—went yes-terday." He shivered and drew the rug about him. "Chilcote"— Loder began sternly,

Then he paused. There was something in the other's look and attitude that arrested him. A change of expression passed over his own face. He turned about, with an abrupt gesture, pulled off his coat and threw it on a chair; then, crossing deliberately to the fre-She is white as a ghost.

Within a few minutes he had a fire Within a few minutes he had a fire crackling where the bed of dead cinders had been, and, having finished the task, he rose slowly from his knees, wheel his hands and crossed to the table. On the small spirit stove the kettle had boiled, and the cover was lifeing and falling with a tinkling sound. Blowing out the flame, Loder picked up the teapot and, with hands that were evidently accustomed to the task, set about making the tes.

What-ever he might attempt in moments of solitude he possessed he voice in pres-ence of this invincible second self. For awhile he struggled—he did not the cup and carried it across the room. "Drink this!" he said laconically. "The fire will be up presently."
Chilcote extended a cold and shaky hand. "You see"— he began. fight, he struggled to resist—then, ing his eyes, he met Loder's. "I what will you do?" he said weakly. But Loder checked him almost say agely. "I do—as well as though I had followed you from Piccadilly last night. You've been hanging about, God knows where, till the small hours of the morn-where, till the small bours of the morning; then you've come back—slunk back, starving for your infernal poison and shivering with cold. You've settled the first part of the business, but the cold has still to be recknowd with. Dothik the tea. I've something to say to you." He mastered his vehemence and, walking to the window, stood looking down into the court. His eyes were blank, his face hard; his ears heard nothing but the faint sound of Chilcote's swallowing, the click of the Chilcote's swallowing, the click of the cup against his teeth.

For a time that seemed interminable he stood motionless; then, when he judged the tea finished, he turned slowly. Chilcote had drawn closer to the fire. He was obviously braced by the warmth, and the apathy that run about him was to some extent dispel-led. Still moving slowly, Loder went toward him and, relieving him of the empty cup, stood looking down at him "Chilcote," he said very quietly, "Two

After he spoke there was a prolonged suse; then, as if shaken with sudder down ludicrously; his hand caught the back of the chair for support; his un-shaven face looked absurd and repul-sive in its sudden expression of scared inquiry. Loder involuntarily turned away.

"I mean it," he said slowly, "It's over; we've come to the end."
"But why?" Chilcote articulated blankly. "Why? Why?" In his confusion he could think of no better word.
"Bourses I there's to be the word. "Because I throw it up. My side of the bargain's off!" Again Chilcote's lips parted stamme ingly. The apathy caused by physical exhaustion and his recently administerd drug was passing from him; the opelessly shattered condition of mind and body was showing through it like a skeleton through a thin covering of "But why?" he said again. "Why?"

Still Loder avoided the frightened surprise of his eyes. "Because I withdraw," he answered doggedly. Then suddenly Chilcote's tongue was loosened. "Loder," he cried excitedly, "you can't do it! Great heavens, man, you can't do it!" To reassure himself he laughed—a painfully thin echo of his old sarcastic laugh. "If it's a matter of greater opportunity," he began, "of more money.

But Loder turned upon him.

"Be quiet!" he said so menacingly, that the other stopped. Then by an effort he conquered himself. "It's not a matter of money, Chilcote," he said quietly. "It's a matter of necessity." He brought the word out with difficulty.

Chilcote glanced up. "Necessity?" he repeated. "How? Why?"
The reliteration roused Loder. "Behouse last night," he began hurriedly. "Because when you go back you'll find that Sefborough has smashed up over the assassination of Sir William Brice Field at Meshed and that you have made your mark in a big speech, and because"— Abruptly he stopped. The thing he had come to say—the thing he had meant to say-would not be said Either his tongue or his resolution failed him, and for the instant he stood as silent and almost as ill at ease as his companion. Then all at once in spiration came to him, in the sugges-tion of a wellnigh forgotten argument by which he might influence Chilcote and save his own self respect. "It's all over, Chileote," he said more quietly.
"It has run itself out." And in a dozen sentences he sketched the story of Lillian Astrupp, her past relations with himself, her present suspicions. It was not what he had meant to say; it was not what he had come to say, but it Protest from Halifax City Football Club were agreed on of purely local importance, and Westville Town Football Club were agreed on of purely local importance, and I do not think it merits the extraordinary attention that has been devoted to it. There is nothing strange or remarkable about this bill which is not a Government measure in any way. If this Province is to attain the same industrial development which other provinces are achieving, it must require the same cheap manufacturing power which other provinces possess. This it can only secure by the development of its hydro-electric resources on a large scale.

SEATTH, Wall., May 9.—Apt students of got-rich-quick promotion methods British Columbia indians have quitoded upon Ametigan and to tanadian gold-seekers scores of claims that do not-contain even a trace of "color." It developed that the recent "stampede" to the Teelin country of British Columbia was engineered by redmen who cleared many thousands of dollars through their trickery.

John G. Johnsby, one of the discoverers of gold in Norae and an Alaskan multi-millionaire brought news from the North to-day that not a size of gold had been found in the Silver Orese district, all of which was staked by Judiane and sold to white men.

ANTED AT ONCE — An experienced watter a like the promotion of the Silver Orese district, all of which was staked by Judiane and sold to white men.

On the second Sunday in May, just three years ago, "Mothers Day" was celebrated in America for the first time. Now it has become an international anneal festival, become an international annual feetival, and is commemorated in homes, churches, hospitais, prisons—is fact, wherever there are men and women who cherish another's memory, and that is every where. The white caraction has been chosen for the flower symbolic of the day. It is in sympathy with this big, warm, human movement that Connolly, the stationer, presents a white carnation to each library entomer on next Saturday.

COMPANY, LIMITED

"Fashion's command to lovers of style."

The "Queen Coat Foundation" is just what the name implies.

It is a Coat Foundation made from a combination of It is a Coat Foundation made from a combination of superior quality tailor's imported linen canvas, French haircloth, and white felt. Cut assembled and made into a complete FOUNDATION for a woman's Coat, including a bias-cut collar and a semi-attached, adjustable shoulder pad. This makes it a simple matter for the home dressmaker, or your tailor, to make up a perfectly stylish, well fifting company.

In it, only the best materials are used; the linen canvas and haircloth are subjected to a special process of cold water shrinking; a method that is GUARANTEED to keep and maintain the shape of the cost under all conditions.

We can supply the "Queen" in 3 styles.

Sizes: 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Suitable for long and short Coats. The "QUEEN" emphasizes the good points of your figure and forgets the others. It helps a good figure, and makes a poor figure good by filling out the hollows under the arm, stiffens and pads the front of the coat well down over the bust, and gives that tailored appearance which is all the vogue of present dress.

THE BOARD OF CONTROL.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—The public health service observations so far as to the condition of the patients incoulated by Dr. Friedmann with his tuberculosis vaccine, do not justify that confidence in the remedy which has been inspired by widespread publicity in the opinion of the surgeons who have conducted the governments threatigation.

This direct authentic and official conclusion from the tests was announced, here to-day before the National Association for the study and prevention of tuberculosis, by Dr. John F. Anderson, Director of the Government Hygiene Laboratory, and Dr. A. M. Stimson, another public health surgeon, who were detailed to observe the progress of the Friedmann patients at Mount Hoaditai in New York.

"We believe that at the present time," says the report, "we are not as yet in a position to express an opinion based on the present conditions under observation." "We must not bee sight of the possible therapentic value of the At to-day's meeting a number of matters were attended to. The Board of Control held its third session at the noon hour to-day, and owing to a large number of citizens being present to a large number of citizens being present it was decided to hold the meeting in the City Council Chamber, there not being a sufficient number of seats in the committee room, in which the meetings heretofore have been held. Again the Board was late in assembling, nothwithstanding the agreement made at the first meeting to "get together" sharp at 12 o'clock.

An audience which crowded the floors and galleries of St. Paui's Hall last night saw the three-act comedy "Our Regiment" put on in a way which completely captured them all, and won from everyone expressions of highest praise for the capable amateurs, and especially of Mrs. Oyril Clarke, the talented young lady under whose direction the play was presented. In the production of the operate, "Pauline" last year we congratulated her most heartly, and we do so again upon the success of last night in the exceedingly more difficult and ambitious undertaking which she so splendidly and skillfully handled. It was the opinion of many present last night that "Our Regiment," as put on by the St. Faui's players, was the best thing of its kind ever seen in the city outside of the Academy liself.

The first time a man speaks in public he probably suffers more agony in a shorter space of time than at any other part of his career, says. The Manchester Weekly Times. A certain young gentleman—t would be unkind to give his name—felt the truth of this very keenly the other day, when he found himself facing an audience of free and independent electors. He had prepared a very fervid oration in support of his father's candidature for the local municipal council, but for the first few moments he could do nothing but gasp. Then, in response to an encouraging cheer, he began to speak.

"Mr.—Mr. Chiarman," he stammered, "when I—when I left home this morning only two people on this earth—my father and myself—knew what I was going to say, but now—well, now, only father knows."

To the young orator it may be a source of consolation to know that not one but many of our most eminent The first time a man speaks in pub-

To the young orator it may be a source of consolation to know that not one but many of our most eminent speakers have cut most hudicrous figures with their maiden efforts. One of the most notable collapses was that of Lord Guildford, whose debut as a speaker in the House of Commons was such a painful experience that he decided never to repeat it. "I managed to speak two or three sentences," he afterwards confessed, "when a mist began to rise before my eyes. I then lost my recollection, and could see nothing but the speaker's wig, which swelled and swelled and swelled until it covered the whole House. I then sank back on my seat, and never attempted to speak again." Then, again, it is really remarkable how few public men, and even men accustomed to the platform, are capable of making an extempore speech without "putting their foot in it." Many of these worthy individuals whom we find occupying the chair at public meetings seem to possess the

was the presiding genus at a poor, attended meeting when a well-known bishop was the speaker. Wishing to apologize to his lordship for the meagre audience, he said: "A worse speaker would have done, but, though we tried, a worse could not be found." "The speaker," said another chairman, "is one who is always with us, and we wish that he would come oftener." Another is reported to have said, "All know the lecturer and none doubts his incapacity." A third said, "I need not assure you of the capacity of the speaker to lecture on 'Fools'—you have heard him too often." A famous missionary from India had the following left-handed compliment paid him at Dublin not so long "ago: "He comes," said the president, "from that land where, as the hymn says, 'every prospect pleases, and only

At a meeting in London the absence of Lady Henry Somerset through illness was apologized for in the following words: "Dear Lady Henry has been overworked, and we must, of course, be careful not to kill the goose that lays the golden eggs." It was a lady speaker who not so long ago gave it as her opinion that slum children were brought into the world with no more knowledge of home comforts than the children of negroes in Africa," while at a gathering in Glasgow, some years ago, a Socialist said there were "hundreds of children about our streets crying out with their feet."

reminiscence of thi-sterred American Expedition.

An unique literary manuscript book has just recently come into the possession of the curator and authorities of the Chatsau de Ramezay Museum. Mr. Thomas O'Leary, assistant librarian, acquired this most interesting historical item, and later on all Canadians will have an opportunity of peruaing the expense book of the commissary under Benedict Arnold when he was in command in Quebec, after the death of Montgomery. The book is a pocket memorandum, measuring three and one-half, by four and one-half inches.

The entries commence on the 8th of February, 1776, and end May 17th, 1776. They go to show that large sums of money were disbursed for the purchase of beef and other supplies, and that, to give the invader his due, he paid his way, to this extent at least, and did not live at the expense of the inhabitants, as it may possibly have been assumed.

This Hitlle book is in excellent condition, when it is remembered that it was with difficulty that the American soldiers at Quebec brought even their bodies back. The wonderful is the fact, that the book should have survived the perils and dangers of that unfortunate expedition. But more wonderful is the fact, that the book should have found its way back to the very locality at Quebec where it had been in 1775 and then to the Chatsau de Ramezay, the headquarters of the Gontinental Army in 1775-76. The following are some of the items in the "Expense Book of John Halsted, commissary under Benedict Arnold, before Quebeu, 176":

Whistling For a Living. Whistling For a Living.

A novel industry has been brought to light by the news that a man who is taking 450 British song birds to British Columbia is an expert bird whistler. It appears that it is no uncommon thing for a man who keeps a bird fancier's shop to be able to whistle a distinct series of bird notes. At the beginning of each series, says The Daily Citizen, describing the work of the professional bird-whistler, the different feathered tribes whose cages completely covered the walls took up the lay, piping as if their little hearts would break for joy. When the linnets ceased the canaries, hearing the notes of the man-whistler, broke into notes of the man-winster, broke the full-throated song. Then when the ex-pert started to whistle skylark notes the imprisoned songsters of the heav-ens forgot their captivity and gave the sun, peeping shyly in between the closed blinds, a melodious welcome.

It appears that when a bird is caught and put into a cage it is very apt to sulk and become miserable. This is where the bird-whistler comes in useful. He imitates the tones of whatever kind of bird this one happens to be, and the little prisoner, thinking it has company, forgets all his troubles and breaks into a song of iov. joy. teach one bird another bird's song.
