Galbraith & Starks, Druggists, Sharon Grove, Ky., write: "We believe Ayer's Hair Vigor to be the best preparation of the kind in the market, and sell more of it than of all others. No drug store is complete without a supply of it."

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor with great benefit and know several other persons, between 40 and 50 years of age, who have experienced similar good results from the use of this preparation. It restores gray hair to its original color, promotes a new growth, gives lustre to the hair, and cleanses the scalp of dandruff."—Bernardo Ochoa, Madrid, Spain.

A. J. Osment, General Merchant, Indian Head, N.W.T.

"Ayer's Hair Vigor is the only preparation I could ever find to remove dandruff, cure itching humors, and prevent loss of hair. I can confidently recommend it."—
J. C. Butler, Spencer, Mass.

"My wife believes that the money spent for Ayer's Hair Vigor was the best investment she ever made, it has given her so much satisfaction."—James A. Adams, St. Augustine, Texas.

cflice without creating a vacancy in the representation was the problem to be solved, and it appears that the vacant probate judgeship was used by the two governments jointly to solve it. But do our present provincial ministers, in the administration as a mere donkeyengine of their chief, propose to run the administration as a mere donkeyengine of the bigger machine at Ottawa, setting the wishes of their supporters at defiance, and still count ou retaining their support?

proved of the principle of the bill he said it did not go far enough.

It being six o'clock the speaker left to the precedent established at the last two redistributions, parliament acting upon a misinterpretation of a statute did not legalize that interpretation. It was a well known principle that you could not be still further extended. He believed in representation by population, but in some instances the geographical question had also to be considered. The representation of interests too, had also to be studied. The various industries to be studied. The various industries of the country also deserve attention. Heather went into figures showing that while one member for Montreal East now represented 92,000 people there while one gentled that with regard to the peace the last two redistributions, parliament acting to the precedent established at the last two redistributions, parliament acting to the precedent the saturate with a statute did not be engendered. He then went into figures showing that while one member for Montreal East now represented 92,000 people there were seven members for the seven counties on the south shore of the St. Lawrence which had a population of 88,000. He said that in a conversation with Mr. VanHorne, the latter told him that it was his opinion that within twenty years, if the city and Canada were true to themselves, the population of Montreal would be one milition of people. He spoke for two hours defending the principles of the bill, which he would support as strongly as he was bleto do.

Mr. Davin supported the bill and in the supported the bill and in the support of the manner in which Mr. Gladstone's redistribution bill was passed, which was inaccurately stated by Mr. Laurier.

The house then divided on the amendment of Mr. Laurier, which was lost by 58 to 110.

It was a straight party vote, with the exception of DesLauriers of St. Maurice, who voted for the amendment. His constituency will be wiped out by the bill.

Mr. McCarthy moved the adjournment of the debate.

The debate was continued by Messrs. Monet, Leduc and O'Brien. The latter declared that Mr. Laurier's amendment meant nothing at all.

Mr. Davies resumed the debate on the Redistribution bill. He regretted that Mr. O'Brien should have declined to support the amendment, which was a very proper one. Parliament could not delegate to judges or anyone else the work of redistribution until such time as it defined the principle on which redistribution should take place. The amendment was therefore drawn on proper lines, and in accordance with proper lines, and in accordance with clause that no interference would be North America Act. The I made with the rights of any one who now duty of the house was plain that it should fix the lines and determine the Mr. Patters n was not should fix the lines and determine the principles and the time when redistribution should come into effect. The application of these principles was to be done by a commission or committee, and finally parliament was to make these legal. After the principle of relistribution was decided the rest of the work was mediaffical. The machinery to govern themselves in parliament was vital to the people of the country. Bad laws might be passed, but as long as the people had the machinery in their own hands they could not complain. He quoted section fifty-one of the B. N. A. act as strictly laying Jown the lines on which redistribution should take place and which was along and historic precedents for pursuing such a codrse. This was shown by the manner in which Mr. Gladstone dealt with the question.

Dr. Landerkin followed.

Mr. Patters n was not aware of any thing in the bill that would do so.

The bill was read a second time.

The house then went into committee on the Dominion Lands act and passed a number of clauses and reported progress.

Sir John Thompson said that he was surprised to notice that nearly the whole discussion so far, was confined to the details of the bill. That was a matter which should be lett to the could not partake in that feature of the discussion. He repeated what he said when the bill was first introduced, that the bill was first introduced, that the bill was framed in accordance with the duty the government owed the house in connection with the taking of the census each decade. The measure was not designed, as had already been pointed out, with a view that there should be a general redistribution by population.

This application of the bill would have given it a very much wider scope, and would have secured greater advantages for the party. These districts were only interfered with where general representatives for increased population was to be provided for. In Montreal and Hochelaga there was a growing population since the last census, and consequently a redistribution in that district was necessary. He agreed with a good deal of what the leader of the opposition said in respect to the representation of cities, and so in that direction the unit was not adhered to there. There was also the additional reason that this should be the case because there were more prompt expression given to political feelings and questions in cities than the rural districts. But the claims of these cities were not to be ignored. He pointed out that there was no prescedent for such an amendment to a bill at its present stage.

"It is a wonder to me that any other than Ayer's Sarsaparilla has a show in the market. If people consulted their own interest, they would never use any other; for it is not only the best, but, on account of its concentrated strength and purity, it is the most economical."—James F. Duffy, Druggist, Washington st., Providence, R.I. Dr. A. L. Almond, Druggist, Liberty, Va., writes: "Leading physicians in this city prescribe."
