TODAY'S EVIDENCE IN ELECTION INQUIRY; F. A. JONES PROTESTS AGAINST THREATS

Says Crown Counsel Tried to Bulldoze Him—Counsel for Defense Accuses Magistrate of Acting As Prosecuting Attorney and Destroying His Competence as a Judge—Several Witnesses Say They Were Paid for Voting.

[From Our Own Reporter.]

Toronto, Oct. 11. — John F. Ellis, of the Barber-Elis Company, Toronto, was the first witness placed in the box when the London election investigation was resumed today. He said that O'Gorman had approached him some time ago and has asked a price on certain supplies for the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. He gave the price, and when the goods were paid for a check for $70 or $80 more than the price quoted was sent to the Barber-Elis Company. O'Gorman came later and asked for the extra money, which he said was his commission. Ellis refused to pay.

Mr. DuVernet attempted by this transaction to show that O'Gorman, through Mr. Robert Reid, of the G. T. P. commission, was securing funds for the Liberal party.

The magistrate said that it looked as though the commission asked by O'Gorman was for his own use, and he was entitled to it. The matter was consequently allowed to drop.

Enoch Fowler, of London, swore he got $10 at the Hyman-Gray election. He did not know who it was paid over the money. He got it from a man on the street. Tom Lewis had told him it would be all right some days before the election. Witness had received $5 from Jerry Collins in the Hyman-Gray election of 1904.

"I always voted Conservative until the bye-election," he said.

Charles House swore he was paid $10 before the election to vote for Hyman. Lewis told him he would tear the $10 bill in two, $10 to keep half, and the witness to keep half, but House objected and the money was handed over. It was Ed Sifton, he thought, who gave the money the day before the election. He had not promised to vote for Hyman. He was told that if he intended to vote for Gray they would swear him, but he voted all the same.

"You voted for Gray?"

"Yes."

"And took the oath that you got no money?"

"Yes."

"Did you not know what you were doing?"

"They never told me."

"Lewis paid you nothing?"

"No, it was Sifton."

Before and After.

Thomas Vanstone was seen by Collins before the election who asked him what way he was going to vote. Witness replied for Hyman if it was convenient. Collins said it would be all right. He then went to the Liberal committee rooms, where a man took his name and asked him to go to the room. He went, and saw Collins and Mulloy there. He was told there was $10 in it if he voted right. Collins was the man who did the talking. Mulloy had told him who would know how he voted. Mulloy handed $10 to Collins, and it was held for witness until after the election. Witness voted for Hyman. When he went to get his cash Collins told him he had not folded his ballot properly. Witness said he would not stand for this, and he was paid $5. He signed a receipt for the money.

"Why did Collins raise the objection regarding the ballot?"

"I guess Collins wanted to beat me out of the $10."

Witness said after he had his first talk with Collins he went downstairs, and complained to Tom Lewis that Jerry was not on the square. Lewis told him Collins was working a bluff game and to go upstairs and get his money.

To Mr. Robinson witness said he had intended voting for Hyman anyway. The money had not influenced his vote.

John A. Norman swore he got $10. Collins, Serviss and another man told him about his vote. They told him there was $10 in it if he voted for Hyman. The money was paid over to witness' father, Robert Norman. The latter also got money for his vote.

John H. Andrews said he was paid $10. Joe Hardy told him Collins wanted to see him. He went and saw Collins and Mulloy. The former asked him how he was going to vote and he was told if he voted right he would get $10. He agreed, and Mulloy took $10 out of his pocket, put it in an envelope and witness wrote his name on it. A man named Donohue held the money, and he was paid two weeks after the election. Serviss asked for him he would be paid $10 if he voted right.

Witness had refused to allow Collins to hold the envelope. James Bone swore he got $10 for his vote. Witness had intended to vote for Gray. Serviss asked him how $10 would do to vote for Hyman. Bone said it would be all right. Collins paid out the money to witness, but for Hyman. Witness did not sign for the $10. There were other men in Lewis' hotel when the money was paid over, but witness only knew Collins.

Oscar Wornton, an employee of Hyman's tannery, was sworn. He had worked for Hyman in the election, but was not a member of any committee.

Mr. DuVernet continued his practice of asking the witnesses what they thought, and Mr. Wilkie raised the point that what a man thinks is not evidence. As usual he was overruled.

Continuing Wornton said he was allowed to work on the election for Hyman and he received his week's pay as usual on Saturday night.

"There was nothing wrong about that," said Magistrate Denison.

Charles White said he was approached by a man named Hardy, he thought, before the election. He was told to go to the committee room, but he was not told what for. There he met Collins and other men. Collins told him he would be paid $10 if he voted right. Witness told Collins he intended to vote right, anyway. Collins put the money in an envelope and handed it to F. A. Jones to hold, if Jones was satisfactory to witness. Nothing was said to Jones as to why he was to hold the money. After the election the money was sent around by a boy.

"Jones was not in the room when Collins put the money in the envelope?"

"No."

"He knew nothing of the transaction with Collins?"

"No."

Mr. Jones was next examined.

He was chairman of ward 2. Mr. J. Pocock was secretary. Witness knew Collins was working on the election. He could not say who was in the room at the time the envelope was placed in his hands. Collins had asked witness to hold it.

The magistrate again took the work of cross-examination out of Mr. DuVernet's hands and questioned the witness closely.

Mr. Robinson objected to the manner in which the court was acting toward the witness.

"I will see justice done here if I have to interrupt every five minutes," said the counsel for the defendants.

Charges Unfair Tactics.

Jones swore he did not know what was in the envelope, but he had an idea what Collins was in the room for.

Witness stated that he objected to the party having anything to do with a youth named Gatecliff. He had told Mr. Reid that Gatecliff would "sneak."

CONTRACTORS GET A $10 REDUCTION

Ald. Armstrong for a Compromise, But Engineer Takes Firm Stand.

The street watering contractors invaded the office of the city engineer this morning, where they were met by Ald. Armstrong, representing No. 3 committee of the council, and Mr. Graydon. The object of the meeting was to consider the protest of the contractors against having $30 deducted from their September account because they were not called out every day with the carts.

The matter was discussed for over a half an hour, but all of the arguments that the contractors could advance did not change the mind of the engineer, who maintained that the reduction was only fair.

Ald. Armstrong, however, talked for some time, and finally succeeded in getting the contractors to agree to accept a $10 reduction.

Mr. Graydon declares that the statements made by some of the contractors were untrue, and that in making a reduction from their checks he was acting perfectly within his rights. He also says that the contractors have not been required to do a day's watering this month, and that despite the result of the meeting today, he will certainly not allow them a full month's pay.

A THANKOFFERING MEETING

Interesting Gathering of Ladies of St. Andrew's Church.

The annual thank-offering meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, held last evening, was well attended, and a thank-offering of $82.75 was taken up.

Mrs. McKay, of Westminster, was to have been present to deliver an account of the annual meeting at Winnipeg, but owing to the death of her brother she could not attend. Miss Fraser, however, gave an account of the meeting, and told of the work being done in the Chinese schools at Birnie, and in British Columbia.

A short musical program was given during which Miss Maggie Wilson and Mrs. Munro rendered very pleasingly several solos.

MICHIGAN HARD HIT

Frost Wipes Out Immense Crops of Fruit and Celery.

Detroit, Oct. 12.—The cold weather, which on the west side of the state registers as low as six degrees above zero, has caused very heavy losses in Michigan. The late fruit and vegetable crops have been destroyed. St. Joseph County, in the "Fruit Belt" has suffered severely by the destruction of late apples, grapes, pears and peaches. It is estimated 70,000 baskets of grapes were destroyed in that one county. The celery growers in the vicinity of Kalamazoo are heavy losers, the frost having caught them unprepared, and destroyed one of the best crops of recent years.

KNOW THE BRIDGE NEEDED REPAIRS

Ald. Armstrong for a Compromise, But Engineer Takes Firm Stand.

The street railway company is today receiving tenders for the repairs which were yesterday ordered by the Provincial Railway Board to be made to the Wellington street bridge.

The work will be done at the earliest possible date, and in the meantime cars will not cross the structure at a speed exceeding four miles an hour.

Mr. King, the manager of the company, does not relish the course taken by the city in the matter.

"I have never heard of a word of complaint from Engineer Graydon about the condition of the bridge," said today, "and I never for a moment thought it unsafe. We knew that the repairs were needed, but we had so much ground work to do that we decided to leave the repairing of the bridge until it was too cold to do other work."

"The first intimation I had that the city had taken cognizance of the condition of the bridge was when I received a letter from the mayor threatening to close it to traffic until it was repaired. If the bridge was so dangerous, why was it not brought to my attention before? Had the city engineer made the complaint to me about the condition of the bridge, the matter would have been remedied without delay."

"The whole thing" came like a bolt to me.

Mr. King gave the assurance that no time would be lost in having the bridge fixed.

While Mr. King states that the company was never notified that the bridge on Wellington street was out of repair, Assistant Engineer Kirkpatrick claims that some time ago a letter was sent to the street railway by the city engineer, calling attention to the fact that their bridges needed attention. Special attention was not drawn to the bridge on Wellington street.

DEAD AT EIGHTY-TWO

Passing of Mrs. Stuart, for Half a Century a Resident of Caradoc.

The death is announced of a much-esteemed resident of Caradoc, Mrs. Stuart, widow of the late Charles Stuart, who passed away after a short illness at the family homestead, Burwell road, on Thursday, at the age of 82 years.

The deceased was born at Morphet, Northumberland, England, and her father, being a Campbell, of Nairn, and her mother a Robson, one of the well-known Stuart Robson family of that county of covenanting descent. She came with her parents to Canada in 1837, the year of the Upper Canada rebellion, settling in the Scotch Block in the county of Haldimand, and a few years later, after her marriage, removed with her husband to the township of Caradoc, where she had resided for 50 years.

Mrs. Stuart was remarkable to the last, both for her physical and her mental activity, taking the liveliest and sprightliest interest in everything of a public character, or in which any of her family or friends were engaged.

Her husband died a year ago. She survived by the following children: Alexander, barrister, of this city; Elizabeth, wife of Henry S. Maus, South Dumfries; Major Duncan, formerly a barrister of this city, now of Johannesburg, registrar of mining rights for the Transvaal, South Africa; John, on the homestead; William, of Calgary, Dominion ranch lands inspector, and Charles, of Calgary, now one of the judges of the supreme court for the Northwest Territories. Mrs. Stuart's eldest daughter died many years ago.

RACES FOR CUPS

Large Entry List for Canadian Club's Holiday Events.

The committee in charge of the Thanksgiving Day races for the Canadian Club met last night and completed arrangements for the events. It looks as though there would be an exceedingly large entry list, especially in the race for school boys. Clubs are reminded that entries must be in by Oct. 15, and should be sent to Dr. Stanley Hunt at the Young Men's Christian Association. The teams will be placed on the track in the order in which the entries are received. The five-mile race will be started sharp at 10 a.m., and the boys' race at 10:10.

ARABS ROUT TURKS

Nomads Having All Best of Clashes With Sultan's Troops.

Constantinople, Oct. 12.—The rebellion against Turkish rule in the Province of Yemen, Arabia shows no sign of subsiding, and whenever a pitched battle is fought the rebellious Arabs seem to be victorious over the unwilling Turkish conscripts sent to subdue them. Severe fighting has occurred in the district of Azir between government troops and the tribe of Benchar, in which the Turks were routed with the loss of 100 men killed and 60 wounded. The casualties of the Arabs are estimated at 300.

CAN PROCEED WITH WORK

G. T. R. Reaches Understanding With Street Railway Re Improvements.

The street railway company and the Grand Trunk have reached an understanding regarding the improvements to be made by the latter to the Wharncliffe bridge, crossing the Springbank line west of the Wharncliffe, and all that now remains to be done before work is started is to have an agreement drawn up and signed by both parties. This can be done in a day or two.

Manager King, of the street railway, stated today that the company will be ready for the Grand Trunk to start the work as soon as it may desire.

The traffic of the street railway is not to be interfered with in any way while the improvements are in progress, and very few of the patrons of the road will be inconvenienced. While the subway is being built at the Wharncliffe road, the South London belt cars will run via the Wortley road and Beaconsfield avenue, instead of via Stanley street, as at present.

TALK OF BIG RINK FOR CITY; SKATING AND CURLING COMBINED

Capitalists Looking Over Ground and May Put Up $30,000 Structure.

London may have a combined skating and curling rink before another winter rolls around.

Two capitalists have been in the city for the past two or three days looking over the ground, and they have come to the conclusion that there is ample room for another rink in London, especially in view of the fact that all of the local rinks are not to be given over to ice skating exclusively in the future.

The idea of the capitalists is to erect a rink much larger than any such place of amusement now in the city, the cost to be between $20,000 and $30,000. The rink is to have a wing on each side, with accommodation for four curling rinks. The main sheet of ice is to be devoted to skating and hockey.

The rink will be centrally located, possibly in the rear of the stores in a business block, as several places suitable for such a purpose are available. Londoners are being asked to subscribe one-half of the capital, and it was stated this morning that no difficulty was anticipated along this line.

The London Curling Club may take hold of the project, as it is now without a home, having had their rink some time ago to a gentleman who is to use it for skating.

Chance's Cubs Lose Again; Could Not Hit Spit Ball

Walsh Struck Out Even Dozen With His Deadly Damp Delivery.

Chicago, Oct. 11. — Chance's champs today looked at some spit-ball pitching as it is shown by star workmen of the league that breeds the masters of the despised, but deadly, damp delivery. As a result, they were the victims of the first-shut-out in the world's series, the Sox making the record stand 2 to 1 in their favor, by a 3-to-0 score.

Big Ed Walsh went on the slab for the American Leaguers, and there was not a minute that he was not master of the situation. His pitching was one of the most impressive exhibitions, the assembled critics agreed, that has been given in recent years. Just four men reached first base on him, and an error on a very easy chance was responsible for one of the cases. He was touched for two hits in his opening inning, and was not threatened by another to the finish of the contest.

Spit Ball Deceived Cubs.

Before the series it was contended that Comiskey's chances rested entirely on the fact that the left-hand and spit-ball pitching of the American League, is superior to the same goods as delivered in the older organization. Atroch had them on his mind on Tuesday. Using White right back was a mistake, and cost any chance in the second game, though the Sox did not have much opportunity against Reulbach. Walsh's spit ball today proved to be the destroyer that had been anticipated. The effort was made to hit it were at times almost painful. Walsh depended mainly on his spit ball, but did not rely on it entirely. With it he mixed a curve ball that had a good break. The game started in sunshine, but soon became gray and cloudy, and after the day darkened the work of Walsh was much more effective than in the opening rounds. As soon as the Cubs found that they could not hit the spit ball, they began stepping on it or bunting. Walsh, however, out-guessed them, mixing his curved ball with the splitter. These tactics stilled the National League on their heads. They gave up bunting after two or three of them had been made to look very bad, and resumed swinging. Exactly four balls were hit to the outfield by them, two of these being fly catches, two of them safe hits.

Walsh's Great Work.

Twelve men were fanned by Walsh, Chance and Steinfield alone escaped. He got at least one man in each inning of the game. Schulte hit him for two bases in the first inning and was struck out the next times up. His spit ball was the third strike usually. No less than four times this third strike got away from Sullivan, who threw out two of the men at first and tagged the other two before they could get away from the plate. In the ninth inning the only ball that got away from Sullivan to count for anything, was thrown by Walsh, advancing Gessler from second to third. Pfeister, the Cubs' young left-hander, worked for the Nationals, and did splendidly outside of one inning. He himself fanned nine men and once retired the side after Donohue had tripled with one gone. His game he really lost himself, by an error of judgment in the eighth, when, with one on and no one out, he tried to get Walsh to bite at bad ones, instead of making the batter bunt. Walsh waited out four and his nerve, as will be shown later, won the game.

Rohe Again a Hero.

George Rohe, the two-headed third-sacker, whom Comiskey has had for over a year without finding a regular job for him, was again the hero of the offensive work. He won the opener by a triple with which he started the fifth inning. Today he won another victory by a three-sacker to the same spot in the sixth inning, with the bases full and two out. If the Sox win the series, Rohe is sure of a lifetime job with Comiskey as Isbell has been holding one for his work in other big races. Perhaps Rohe will replace Issey as the family pet. The big second-sacker is about done. His work today was again uncertain in the field, while he struck out three times, once with the base full and a long fly good for the first run. Without Davis he is of no use. If Davis gets back, the popular move will be to put Rohe at second in Isbell's place. To tell the truth, the Sox, figuring the teams on paper, look like a jest when compared with the Cubs. Evers had it on Isbell when the latter was at his best, and Rohe is at sea when the Cubs bunt. Barring Jones, the Sox outfield does not class with that of the Cubs, especially now, when O'Neill is in right. Hahn was hit on the nose by a pitched ball today. The organ is badly swollen, but not broken. He may be out of the full series. It's up to the pitchers, as already shown. Without Walsh today the Sox would have had a hard time winning.

Sox Strike Out.

Jones in the first and Donohue in the second each got a scratch hit. Each was second batter. Each time the next hitter fanned and both of the men who had singled were then thrown out stealing. In each of the third and fourth innings two Sox were struck out. This brought it up to the fifth. Evers stole a base hit from Rohe by a marvelous stop and throw. This cost a run, as Donohue followed with a triple to right field. Dougherty fouled out and Sullivan fanned. It looked like the lost chance. Tannehill surprised by opening the sixth with a pretty single to left. Walsh was up to sacrifice and showed splendid nerve and judgment by letting Pfeister waste bad ones on him. Had he been forced to bunt he would have been second out, possibly preventing a score that inning. He walked. Then Pfeister filled the bases by hitting Hahn on the nose, in an effort to keep the ball in close where the batter could not bunt successfully. O'Neill went in for Hahn, who was sent away for repairs.

Jones tried hard, but a great catch of his foul by Kling set him down. Isbell took three wide swings and retired. This brought up Rohe. He caught a high fast one square, drove it into left field about a yard or two inside the foul line, and cleared the sacks. He was left at third, but his hit won the game.

Dougherty was safe on Tinker's fumble in the seventh, but could not get around. Rohe walked and stole in the ninth, but died trying to score on Dougherty's grounder to Chance, after Donohue sacrificed him to third. Rohe kept them chasing him until Pat reached third base, but Sullivan flied out.

Where the Cubs Lost a Chance.

The Cubs' one chance was in the first inning. Hoffman singled to center and Sheppard struck out trying to bunt. Walsh's spit ball. Hoffman then attempted to steal and Sullivan got him easily. Schulte followed with a double to left, but Chance's easy bouncer to Isbell stranded him. They never figured after that. Up to the fifth inning the only other Cub to reach first base was Chance, who walked with two out in the fourth inning.

In the ninth Pfeister was due to open, but Gessler, once with Detroit, batted for him. Isbell kicked his grounder and he was safe. He made second when Hoffman grounded to Isbell. Then he went to third on a spit ball that hit the plate and bounded away from Sullivan. He had an excellent view of Sheppard's and Schulte's strike outs with which Walsh wound up his game.

Walsh's strike-outs were Sheppard, second; Tinker, third; Kling, Pfeister; fourth; Schulte; fifth; Evers; sixth; Hoffman; seventh; Schulte; eighth; Tinker; Evers; ninth; Sheppard and Schulte.

A Steady Trade

is most important to every baker. A business in which the receipts and profits vary every week, while the expenses remain the same, is a source of great anxiety to any business man.

No baker can hope for a steady and increasing business unless the quality of his bread is uniformly superior to that of his competitors. He can have no more valuable asset than the reputation that his bread is the "best in town." Any baker can win this reputation for his bread by using only "FIVE ROSES" and "HARVEST QUEEN" FLOUR.

These flours are made from the very highest-grade wheat obtainable and are superior to ordinary bakers' patents in every way. They will not lose, but make, trade for any baker who uses them, as they make the very sweetest, most wholesome and most nutritious bread. Regular and ever increasing custom can be obtained by any baker who lets his customers know that he uses "FIVE ROSES" and "HARVEST QUEEN" only.

right starch and hot irons save more than seems possible

Hard to believe that even Celluloid Starch, used right, can take so much of the hard work out of ironing day. But it does.... simply because it's a quick starch.... which means a starch that starches stiff and flexible, and yet needs less iron rubbing to bring up the finish.

needn't cook it never sticks

Poor starches cost as much in the first place as Celluloid Starch. And they cost so much more in the last place! Still, you never find out the difference till you test Celluloid Starch by the longer life it lends your starched things. All comes of the way the starch is made.... most starch needs hard ironing to get any finish. 401

Now way for you to know that's so until you try Celluloid Starch. Just one test will show you the right starch that won't destroy clothes and that will save work and worry. Demand it from your dealer.... try it.... use it right. It honestly does all we say it does.... it needs no cooking.... it never will stick. Test it and know.

LONDON, FRIDAY, OCT. 12, 1906.

MR. BORDEN AND THE LAND GRAB.

When the facts of the Pope-Fowler-Lefurgey-Bennett land grab were brought to light, Mr. Borden hastened to notify the press and public that he had no interest in the deal. Mr. Borden's prompt and emphatic disclaimer naturally conveyed the impression that he looked on the transaction as one which would compromise his reputation if his name were connected with it. His denial was an implied reflection also, upon his parliamentary colleagues, upon his party associates, but he cannot be so innocent as to suppose that railway magnates are in the habit of scattering tips and snags and favors over a smiling land.

Mr. Borden complained, in this address, that he had been misrepresented in the Liberal press; but there was some ground, before his denial, for believing that he was implicated in the job of his boon companions. They planned it in the summer of 1902 while traveling with Mr. Borden, and Mr. Lefurgey testified upon oath that "Mr. Borden indicated he would be able to come in with them." There was no definite understanding at the time, but it was agreed that the matter would be settled when the party returned to the east. Later, Mr. Fowler wrote Mr. Lefurgey that he had secured a secret tip as to the projected route of the Canadian Northern, saying that the information was "for Bennett, Borden, and yourself." Mr. Lefurgey said he understood that "Borden had come in." Still later, on Oct. 4, Mr. Fowler wrote to Mr. Lefurgey saying that they had got "the best that was going" from the C. P. R., and asking him to "tell Messrs. Borden and Bennett" about it. In November Mr. Pope telegraphed Mr. Borden concerning a trip to the west, in connection with the deal, but it was then that Mr. Borden gave his first intimation that he would not be a member of this syndicate. It is to Mr. Borden's credit that he decided against the proposition, but he toyed with it for some months, and he encouraged rather than rebuked his companions in what he knew was not an upright business for public men. His defense of them must lower him in public esteem.

A MODEL TOWN.

A Canadian visitor who had the privilege, a week or two since, of visiting the model town of Bournville, near Birmingham, remarks upon the cleanliness and healthfulness of the place. Messrs. Cadbury Bros., the chocolate manufacturers, are shrewd advertisers, but they could not have devised a more striking advertisement than is the model town of which they were the founders, and which they control today. It is only eleven years since the place was founded, and today it shelters a population of over 9,000. It covers an area of over 600 acres, and presents a charming appearance, with its neat workmen's houses, and other villas, no two of which are alike, nestled amid gardens and park lands. The average garden space allowed to each house is 600 square yards, and almost every one of the occupants vies with his neighbor in adding to the orderliness and beauty of the surroundings. The houses are set back at least 20 feet from the street, and on each side of the thoroughfare is a row of trees, reminding the Canadian of our own well-kept towns and cities. To insure healthful surroundings, carefully-planned building regulations are maintained, one being that no cottage is allowed to occupy more than one-fourth of the area of the land on which it stands. Twelve hundred of the four thousand employees of the Cadbury Company live in this model town, which has had a record for health such as is possessed by no ordinary English borough. Its death rate, for example, is only 7.5, whereas in the working class localities of Birmingham the rate is three times as high. These healthful conditions extend to the Cadbury works, for we learn that out of the 4,000 workpeople employed by the company, only seven have died in the last four years, a death rate of less than 2 per cent.

This high standard of living has not been attained altogether by the fact that model cottages have been provided for the workers and model facories in which they may earn their daily bread. The social life of the population is looked well after. Intoxicating liquors are not permitted to be sold within the limits. But recreation grounds are provided for big and little, and every child is within five minutes' walk of a playground. Town swimming baths are open to all, and practically all the men and boys can swim, while in the last few years some 700 girls have learned this art.

The moral of it all for people in older settled communities, whether in Great Britain or on this continent, is that it pays to take good care of the health and sanitary surroundings of the workers. The Messrs. Cadbury claim that though it has cost money to establish this model town for their workpeople and others like-minded, they have been recompensed in having very much better service from healthier and happier employees. They are, in fact, strong advocates of municipal ownership of land, and thorough municipal control over the laying out of streets and lots and building houses, so as to provide that nothing shall be left undone for conserving the public health. It is pointed out that even wide-awake Birmingham has been behind in this regard, as her rulers might have bought for $2,500,000 land that is now worth $50,000,000, and that if they had done so the inhabitants might now be living more free.

Here in London, with a municipal acreage for less than 50,000 people, greater in extent than is allotted to many cities quadruple the size in old-world lands, we do not know what it is to be overcrowded, but we could take a leaf out of the model town of Bournville in the matter of preserving breathing places and playgrounds for the young, and also in providing a system for promptly removing all garbage and kitchen waste by municipal co-operation. This can be done for a comparatively small sum annually, while it will add to the health and comfort of every household. Even Ottawa got ahead of us in this, and is not asking the Government to come to her aid. This should be convincing evidence of the benefits to be derived.

THE TORONTO SLANDER MILL.

Another parody of justice in the London-election inquiry at Toronto is the attempt to link it with the West Elgin bye-election of 1899, and the recital of the fairy tale told by John G. Pritchett after that event. A commission of judges was appointed to take evidence at St. Thomas, and witness after witness refuted Pritchett's allegations. The judges pronounced his story incredible, and Pritchett left the country till the storm blew over. Of course he is obliged to tell the story as he told it seven years ago, or be convicted out of his own mouth. It is now served up to the public as if it were a fresh revelation. It serves the purpose of the prosecution by giving the Tory press more mud to fling at the Liberal party and at Liberals who have been proved, to the satisfaction of judges, innocent of the charges brought against them. This rechauffe of stale slanders shows the farcical nature of the proceedings at Toronto. There is no pretense at regular procedure. The prosecution has been allowed by the attorney-general's department to ride roughshod over law and justice, and violate practice and decency.

THE LESSON OF NORTH RENFREW.

It is worthy of note that in the by-election in North Renfrew the majority polled for Mr. White was not due to a larger vote than was given the late member, but to the failure of very many Liberals to go to the polls. They were prompted, apparently, by a desire to rebuke the two Liberals who insisted on splitting the vote of their party. The fact is that if Messrs. Murray and McKay had composed their differences, and conducted the campaign on public grounds, instead of fighting over petty troubles of their own, the result would have been very different. It is no victory to boast of that Mr. White got a large majority under such circumstances. His vote was less by 327 than that polled by his father at the last general election. He was successful because many hundreds of Liberal voters, knowing that in this bye-election their party as a national force was not in danger, failed to go to the polls because they did not approve of the platform methods pursued by the two men who insisted on running. The lesson is plain and ought to be recognized in every constituency. Victory is an impossibility unless there is unity.

THE IRISHMAN AND THE MULE.

General Phil Sheridan was at one time asked what incident in his life caused him the most amusement. "Well," he said, "I always laugh when I think of the Irishman and the army mule. I was riding down the line one day when I saw an Irishman mounted on a mule which was kicking rather freely. The mule finally got his foot caught in the stirrup, when, in the excitement, Pat remarked: 'Well, begorra, if you're goin' to get on I'll be gettin' off!'"

WHERE THE BOUNDARY IS.

[Toronto Star.]
The international waterways commission haven't made up their minds just where the boundary line of Lake Erie is. For their information we may state that it is to be found anywhere from two to twenty miles south of the American fishing fleet.

NEW RAILROADS.

[The World's Work.]
The aggregate railway mileage under contract for construction or in immediate prospect in the United States and Canada is more than 22,000 miles. The aggregate of cash to be used in this construction and in the great projects of the American trunk line railways is more than $750,000,000. If the entire gold production of the world in the two greatest gold years of history were applied to this construction it would fall far short of meeting it.

In the early part of the year the Railway Age compiled the railway projects at that time under contract or under construction in the United States. This compilation showed an aggregate of more than 13,000 miles, located as follows:

	Miles.
New England States	30
Middle States	398
South Atlantic States	1,462
Gulf and Mississippi Valley States	1,303
Central Northern States	869
Northwestern States	2,321
Southwestern States	3,438
Pacific States	3,187
Total	13,014

In Canada the total mileage projected is the heaviest in the history of that country. Taking the east with the west, four great companies contemplate the construction of more than 9,000 miles of railway.

In addition, there have come to light since this compilation was made American projects that will probably bring the total to well over 25,000 miles of standard gauge railway.

Inevitably, a considerable proportion of this mileage will never be constructed. A great many companies entirely disappear, are bought off, or fall through various causes to complete the tasks they have undertaken. Yet, even with this deduction, it would appear that there are live and legitimate railway projects on the continent today that call for the creation of well over 22,000 miles of track. In the light of this fact, the years 1906 and 1907 are practically certain to go down into history as one of the most striking periods in the railway history of the western world.

PORTRAIT OF A LADY, BY GIBSON.

[Philadelphia Bulletin.]
"I dined with Charles Dana Gibson at Cines's Restaurant in London, during the season," said a Chicagoan.

"The lofty, spacious dining-room was filled with women in pale gowns, their hair uncovered, and their arms and necks bare, and though these women were fashionable, aristocratic, they were watched with their coffee as they watched the bioscope pictures that went on at one end of the big room, and as they listened to the singing that went on at the other."

"Amid all this feminine smoking we Americans began to discuss and to define the word 'lady.' Was it ladylike to smoke? we asked. Would a lady ever smoke? What was a lady?"

"I think Mr. Gibson's definition of a lady was the best that was given."

"A lady," he said, ignoring the smoke question altogether, "is a woman who always remembers others and never forgets herself."

PERSISTENTLY PICKING.

[New York Tribune.]
Capt. Spencer tells this story of a convict who was asked how he made his living when he was in prison.
"Well, in spring I does a bit o' pea-picking, and in the summer I does a bit o' fruit-picking, and in the autumn I does a bit o' 'op-picking."
"Yes," said the captain, "and what do you do in the winter?"
"Well, mister, I may as well be honest with yer. In the winter I does a bit o' pocket-picking."
Capt. Spencer next asked: "And what happens then?"
The convict replied: "Why, I comes 'ere and does a bit o' oakum-picking."

HALTED BY THE GALE

Navigation on the Upper Lakes Comes To Temporary Standstill.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 11.—Reports from Lakes Erie and Huron are to the effect that the storm of last night, which is still raging in many places, was so severe that it practically put an embargo on navigation after last midnight. But one boat passed up from Lake Erie during the morning, and snow was so thick and the wind so high at Port Huron that no vessels ventured out into Lake Huron between 3 a.m. and 8 a.m. Harbor Beach harbor of refuge, is reported filled with boats today. Heavy snow is reported from Western Michigan, from Marquette in the upper peninsula, and along the Lake Huron shore from Alpena down to Port Huron, where it is five inches deep. Inspector Congor, of the weather bureau, says that the gale will blow itself out today.

PROBING STANDARD OIL

One Company That Does Not Have to Compete With the Octopus.

Findlay, Ohio, Oct. 11.—Evidence was brought out by the testimony in the trial of the Standard Oil Company for conspiracy against trade, showing the ownership of the Manhattan Oil Company, of Ohio, to be in the general Industrial Development Company, Limited, London, Eng.; also that the Manhattan, which buys and ships crude oil, does not compete with the Standard, but does compete with independent companies.

A similar criminal suit to that on trial is pending against the Manhattan and its president testified under the order of the court, which renders him immune from future criminal prosecution. This course was taken at the suggestion of the prosecution upon the appeal of Mr. Cuthbert to the court for protection.

Explaining the nature of business done by the Manhattan, in answer to questions, Mr. Cuthbert said that the Manhattan Company now does exclusively a pipe line business. In doing it it buys oil of the producers, transports it to storage stations and sells it to S. P. Trainer, purchasing agent for the Seep, treasurer of the Buckeye Pipe Line Company.

In what is known as the South Lima field, where the Manhattan and Buckeye lines both buy oil, the price to the producer is five cents less than in the North Lima, where what are regarded as the independent companies make their purchases. Asked to explain why this was, Mr. Cuthbert said: "To protect our pipe lines from the encroachment of competitors."

"Who are your competitors?" asked State Attorney H. Phelps.

"The National Refining Company, of Toledo,"

"Do you pay 5 cents a barrel more for oil in the North Lima field than you receive for it from the Trainer purchasing agency?"

Mr. Cuthbert then admitted that the profits of his company in the North Lima field were very small if any.

BROUWER MURDER CASE

More Damaging Evidence Against Man Accused of Killing His Wife.

Tom's River, N. J., Oct. 11.—That there had been quarrels between Dr. Frank Brouwer and his wife, and that Dr. Brouwer had said that he intended to sue for divorce, was the testimony given today by Miss Elizabeth Hyer, sister of the woman for whose alleged murder the doctor is on trial.

Miss Hyer said that her brother-in-law had told her that incompatibility of temper made it impossible for him and his wife to live happily together, and that he purposed to seek a divorce. According to Miss Hyer, it was said by the doctor more than four years ago. Surrogate Groen testified that the defendant filed an affidavit before him in which it was stated that Mrs. Brouwer's estate was valued at $6,000, and that Dr. Brouwer and his two children were the beneficiaries.

The placing of the surrogate on the stand was regarded as an attempt on the part of the prosecution to establish a motive for the alleged crime.

Dr. Washington, of Newark, was asked to give his opinion as to the cause of Mrs. Brouwer's death, basing the opinion on the testimony thus far adduced at the trial, but the defense objected to the question, and the court sustained the objection.

WILHELM AND BISMARCK

Berlin, Oct. 11.—Emperor William has written the story of his separation from Prince Bismarck which he dictated to his adjutant in the days following the old chancellor's retirement. This fact was mentioned today incidentally, by the semi-official North German Gazette, which was authorized to deny a statement made by the Hamburg Nachrichten that the Emperor once while driving with Bismarck asked him to leave the carriage at the culmination of a controversy over Russian affairs.

CHAPTER XXXIX. Margherita Returns Home.

When at length the vessel stopped before the little marina of Capri, and Keith was gently assisted into the boat which was to row them in, Margherita was too full of an anxiety and care for her invalid husband to dwell for the moment much upon the meeting with her family. She had often during these two years pictured to herself her return, and their mutual joy; but now that anticipation had become reality, she had scarcely time to recognize how fast her heart was beating at sight of the dear, familiar little quay, the white cottages, the great, rocky ramparts overhead, before her whole thoughts and attention were concentrated upon Keith's white face and the evident exhaustion with which he rose and took her arm to cross the vessel.

A MAID'S APRON AND CAP.—6720. There is no sight more pleasing to the chance caller than to be met by a dainty maid, and no garb more attractive than the snowy apron and cap most used among polite society. The apron has a bib and bretelles on the shoulder, which are always becoming. The skirt portion is long and full, and broad ties form a huge bow behind. The cap is a small diamond of material trimmed with tucks and lace. Nainsook or a fine lawn may serve as material. For the medium size 3 1/4 yards of 36-inch goods are needed for the apron and 1 1/4 yards of 18-inch for the cap. 6720—One size.

convalescent two more devoted attendants than he in his friend's mother and his own wife. He complained openly, though laughingly, that he was allowed none of his own way, that he was a mere chattel in the ladies' hands; but he did not attempt to deny that, in his weakness, he found the bondage by no means an unpleasant one. In deference, however, to his strongly expressed wish, he was permitted a couple of hours later to receive a short visit from his wife's father and mother, shaking hands with them without rising from his couch. The padre found a pleasant, sensible man of middle age, scrupulously clean and full of the quiet dignity of manner that distinguished his son Stefano. But the madre was nervous and silent, unable to get over her shyness in his presence.

"Where is my friend Stefano?" asked Keith, and the padre informed him that Stefano had lately shipped upon a foreign voyage—on a vessel going to the Piræus, being anxious to fulfill his long-cherished desire to see something of the world.

It was some time before Keith again entered his wife's relations. Their visits to Margherita, extremely rare, and it seemed as if they purposefully avoided their English connection. Before many days had passed he was able to make his languid way down the few yards of pathway that led to the cliff-side, where he would lie for hours in the pleasant sun, reading or dozing in the pleasant shade of his new umbrella against his wife's knee, her large strong enough to walk along the rock-shadowed road to Anacapri, or to descend to the marina in the cool of the evening, and be rowed out among the many-colored shadows that fringe the cave-rent rocks.

Ere a month was over he was quite well—even Mrs. Spencer, with all her motherly tyranny, was bound to admit it—and was looking at a pretty little long-deserted house, not far from his friends, with a view to a residence for himself and Margherita.

And during all this time Margherita had seen but little of her own people. At first she often went to visit them; whenever she could spare an hour from Keith—and would sit by the madre's side, holding her hand, and telling her of her English life, or of the past two years; but of late her visits had grown less frequent. She could not help perceiving that no affection of manner on her own part could make her mother fully at ease in her presence; that no efforts of her own could place her on the old footing of a perfect sympathy.

She was striving after the impossible. It was not so much the fine texture of her dress, or the stylish trimming of her hat, that repelled the mother-heart; it was the change, the inevitable change for which she was not accountable—the changed worked in herself by a higher education, increased culture, more refined society. This influence it was that lay between her and the simple-hearted fisherwoman as an insuperable barrier.

It was of no use for Margherita to be loving and sympathetic; Lucia Rucchi might still regard her daughter with a sort of awe-struck devotion, but she could never more chatter to her in unrestrained patois regarding the padre's sayings or Raffaella's progress in knitting. It was the law of nature, and as such Margherita presently found herself bound to accept it—not, however, without a secret pang, none the less acute for its secrecy. Her home-coming she realized with pain, could never be the unalloyed satisfaction to herself or to others that she had pictured it. To every happiness in this world is attached some drawback; she had won her husband, but she had lost her family.

To Geronimo she had actually never spoken as yet one word. The young fellow avoided her recognition and eluded her presence with a diligence and pertinacity that betokened some strong inner feeling. Was it anger, or merely nervousness? Margherita was half amused, half sorry that her cousin should so turn the cold shoulder to her. She had not forgotten amid the changes of her new life, how in old days she and Geronimo had been childish playmates together, and how even as a boy the young fisherman had always displayed toward his favorite little cousin a gentleness almost amounting to chivalry—how he had always protected her from rougher companions, had invariably brought his fruit or toys to share with her. She had never been in love with Geronimo—even before the advent of her English lover, the undisguised attachment of the former had annoyed rather than pleased her—but she always preserved for him a kindly affection, which even his threat of murdering Keith had only served to temporarily extinguish.

Now she would fain have given him her hand and spoken friendly words to him; and she was sorry to see the obstinate resolution with which he avoided her. More than once she had caught sight of his dark face abruptly turned away as she passed, and even as a boy she had never allowed her to meet him. More than once she had had with Teresa—who was beginning to get over her first embarrassment, though still somewhat reserved and wholly respectful toward her old companion—and one day she asked her the cause of Geronimo's behavior.

Teresa blushed crimson, but tossed her black head with a moment's sauciness. "I know not," she replied, shortly. "Who can answer for the foolishness of a young man? Not I! He is shy; he is afraid, perhaps, of the Signor Rucchi—he was rude to him one day, he says. He is without sense, is Geronimo!" Margherita smiled. "He ought to be a little wiser from you, Teresa. I hope he will some day. Meanwhile, you may tell him that he ought to know better than to run away from an old friend like me."

A couple of days later Margherita was walking with her husband down the stony causeway leading from the village to the shore, when, at a turning face to face with another figure, which started on seeing them, but had no time to escape.

"Well, Geronimo," said Margherita, in Italian, holding out her hand, "so you cannot run away from me now. You are the only one of my friends who has never given me a word of welcome since I landed."

Geronimo's face was scarlet, and his eyes cast down, and when Keith too held out his hand with a good-humored smile, his embarrassment was pitiable. "Well, Geronimo," he said, "don't you know me, or haven't you forgiven me yet? Do you swim as well as ever?" But Margherita, distressed by her husband's levity, or touched by her cousin's mortification, interposed quickly.

"Ah, don't mock at him, Keith, mio!" she said, in English; "he is sorry now, poor fellow, for his wickedness."

"Nonsense!" remarked Keith; "I consider that we were fairly quits. Tell him so, Margherita, in the right words. He wanted to drown me, and I very nearly succeeded in drowning him. Ask him when he will take us out on the water again—tonight?"

"I think he would rather not tonight, dear Keith," she whispered; "he is so shy, so ashamed of himself. But it is very good of you to forgive him so kindly."

"Good? Rubbish! Bygones be bygones. When are you going to get married, Geronimo?"

The color deepened in the young man's face.

"I, signor?"

"Yes, you. Don't you see that the prettiest girl in Capri is still to be had for the asking? If you don't someone else will, pretty soon. Teresa is too handsome to wait long for anyone."

There was an abrupt reply, as Geronimo turned away abruptly.

"Poor fellow!" said Keith, with a whimsical pity, "it's rather hard upon him. He is fairly bundled into Teresa's arms. He can't help himself; everyone is against him!"

"Ah, how could he do better, sposo mio? Teresa is a good girl, and she loves him very dearly."

"True, quite true. And yet, my dear Margherita, we men like to have our own way almost as much as you women—and especially in the matter of choosing our own wives."

He laughed as he drew her arm through his, and they walked on; yet a momentary repulsion filled his mind toward the young fisherman who, in the days gone by, had dared to love his wife. Did the fellow really presume to admire her still—to fancy that, for the sake of her, he could not wed another girl, one of his own standing and caliber? Pshaw! It was too monstrous, too absurd! Margherita was so completely his own now, so entirely one with him that it seemed as impossible as it was unpleasant to reflect that, little more than two years ago, she had lived among them, and that their equal—had been loved by them as a companion, a possible sweetheart!

He laughed again to himself, but it was half uncomfortably; and he made no further suggestion that Geronimo should be their oarsman. Indeed, the meeting seemed to have done little or nothing in the way of changing the young fisherman's unseemable mood. He still avoided both as carefully as ever; and his eyes, which had a habit of scowling when they encountered Keith's, seemed to look more coldly than ever on Teresa's beauty.

RAILWAY BRIDGE IN BAD REPAIR

Unsafe for Cars to Pass Over
It at High Speed.

WILL BE IMPROVED AT ONCE

Provincial Railway Board Issues Order
Regarding Wellington Street Structure.

The provincial railway and municipal board, composed of Mr. James Leitch, K. C., Mr. A. B. Ingram, and Mr. H. N. Kittson, came to London yesterday, at the request of the city council, to inquire into the general condition of the street railway system.

The board, however, did not get very far with its investigation. Only one witness was called—Mr. Moyes, an expert of Toronto—who had come to London at the instance of Mayor Judd to make a thorough inspection of the street railway tracks and equipment. In order that the commission might get at the exact state of affairs, Mr. Moyes was only partly through his evidence, when an unexpected adjournment was made. His statements concerning the street railway bridge, which spans the river on Wellington street south, were the cause of it. They were in effect that the structure is not absolutely safe for traffic, nearly 45 per cent of the ties being in a rotten state. When the board heard the condition of the bridge explained they had a conference with City Solicitor Meredith and Mr. C. H. Ivey, who appeared on behalf of the railway company, the outcome being that the commissioners decided to send an expert to London to examine and report on the condition of the bridge. The board also paid a visit to Wellington street bridge, returning at 8 o'clock in the evening, when an order was issued directing the company to continue using the bridge, but only on condition that when cars are crossing it they shall do so at a greatly reduced speed.

It is hardly likely that the board will reassemble in London to hear further evidence.

Track Bad in Several Places.

When Mr. Moyes was called to the stand in the afternoon, he told the commissioners that he had had nineteen years' experience in the construction of electric railways. He first told of the condition of the line in the north end of the city. At the corner of St. James and Richmond streets, where there is considerable special work, the west "Y" was depressed five-sixteenths of an inch, causing cars to make a good deal of noise in passing over it. The east "Y" was also badly worn, while east of Richmond, on St. James street, the alignment of the track was bad. On Wellington street, near Grosvenor, a broken rail was found, only one and an eighth inches of the surface of the rail remaining, whereas it should be two inches. At the intersection of the tracks at the corner of the tracks was found to be imperfect, causing a rocking of the cars.

At the corner of Oxford and Richmond streets, where there is a switch, Mr. Moyes found the special work very much worn, the result being that cars made a great noise in passing it. At one point on Oxford street east, the gauge of the tracks was found to be three-quarters of an inch too wide, and at the corner of Colborne street and other broken rail was discovered. The special work at Oxford and Adelaide streets was in fair condition. The central avenue portion of the belt line was found to have imperfect elevation.

A Dangerous Curve.

Mr. Moyes next told the commissioners that at the curve on Richmond street, near Fullarton, the condition of the tracks was such as to be liable to throw a car off at any time. The intersection at Dundas and Richmond streets was in very fair condition, but south of Dundas street, on Richmond, there were numerous depressions in the tracks and many breaks in the rails. The special work at the corner of Richmond and York streets was not in good repair. In the opinion of the expert the diamond at the crossing of the Grand Trunk was very poorly kept—its condition being such that he did not consider it safe for traffic. The track on Horton street, east of Richmond, to Wellington, was depressed, and one rail just east of Clarence street was found to be split for a distance of

JOHN BEAL SPEAKS

Tells How He Was Cured of a Painful Trouble.

Many people in this city seem to have found Dr. Leonard's Anti-Pill the most wonderful medicine ever introduced here. Mr. Beal's story is very convincing.

"Being troubled very badly with constipation and indigestion for some time I began using Dr. Leonard's Anti-Pill about three months ago.

"My stomach became fearfully upset, the food I ate disagreed with me, causing flatulence, headache, and very often the peculiar sensation of having swallowed something heavy. My face would break out ever so often with a sort of rash or pimples, and I had great trouble getting my bowels to move naturally. In fact, I neglected taking medicine to move the bowels every day, my stomach and head would feel very much worse. I was encouraged to try Dr. Leonard's Anti-Pill through reading how someone has been cured of a case similar to my own, so I first got a trial box and was very much pleased to find that it did not do me any harm, and that it was fitted so much that I sent to the drug store for two large boxes. Before I had used half of one box my stomach and head did not trouble me nearly so much. The pimples or rash disappeared suddenly, and what I ate digested all right, and I seemed to enjoy my meals more than ever. My bowels moved naturally each day and I believe Anti-Pill has cured me of an obstinate case of constipation and indigestion." (Signed).

38 inches. An adjoining rail was also broken. "What effect has this?" asked, Mr. Meredith. "Is there an element of danger?"

"Yes, there is, according to the speed at which the cars cross the broken rail," answered Mr. Moyes.

Wellington Street Bridge.

Mr. Moyes said the tracks on Wellington street, between Horton street and the bridge, over the river, were generally depressed. He next told of the condition of the bridge. The structure, he declared, was not in good shape. The deck of the bridge—that portion which is responsible for the support of the ties—was not satisfactory. The majority of the ties were either rotting or had rotted away. The ends of some had completely rotted away. Of the 186 ties in the structure, Mr. Moyes found 83 absolutely unfit for use. The timbers strapped along the outside of the rails were also rotten.

"How about the danger there?" asked Mr. Meredith.

"You think the bridge reasonably safe?" asked Mr. Leitch.

"No, I do not," answered Mr. Moyes. Mr. Meredith told the commissioners that owing to the state of the bridge it had been arranged that cars should not cross it at more than three miles an hour.

"And if the railway admits the bridge is in that state, it is a wonder it would not discontinue running cars over it," remarked Mr. Ingram, who was in the audience. "It is not so simple as that," said Mr. Ivey, "but if the commission sees fit to make any restrictions in the use of it we would like to know it."

Mr. Leitch again asked Mr. Moyes if it would be safe to use the bridge at a low rate of speed, and in reply Mr. Moyes said that the 83 ties he spoke of were visibly rotten. He had not made any borings in the other ties, but if they were comparatively as bad as the 83, he would say that it is not safe to use the bridge.

Mr. Meredith expressed the opinion that the only way to get anything out of the investigation to benefit the public is to have the engineer of the commission come to London and examine the system, and make a report direct to the board.

The board then adjourned, to inspect the bridge, in company with Mr. Moyes.

The Board's Ruling.

In the evening, when the commission resumed, the chairman stated that the board had visited the bridge, and had made tests by boring in several of the ties which were not visibly rotten. After consultation they had concluded to make an order permitting the company to use the bridge, the cars to cross it at a speed not exceeding four miles an hour, slackening their speed when they came within 50 feet of the structure, and especially at the south end, where there is a curve and an open space to the river. This impressed the board as being a dangerous spot, where the employees of the company should be careful.

The board ordered the company to repair the bridge at once, by taking out the rotten wooden ties, and replacing them with sound timbers, and also jacking up the stringers. The use of planks about four feet long and two or three inches thick, would give a perfectly good bearing. These repairs would not cost more than $50 or $60, and they would make the bridge reasonably safe for some time.

The board recommended further that the entire deck of the bridge be overhauled. The construction of the bridge appeared to the commissioners to be pretty cheap, and if the company saw its way to replace the present stringers with steel, it would make a good permanent structure.

The board further suggested that when the permanent repairs to the bridge are made, two metal guard-rails be placed in the center of the track to prevent a car going over the edge of the bridge in the event of it becoming deranged.

Mr. Ivey assured the commissioners that the repairs to the bridge would be undertaken without any delay whatever.

As for the visit of the engineer to London to report to the commission on the state of the road, Mr. Leitch said it would not likely be made until after the 15th of this month, as the engineer desired to attend the convention at Columbus, where he would see the latest improvements in the road, and would then be in a position to advise the board as to the very best fender to have installed on the street railway, if it was found that those in use were unsatisfactory.

Mayor Would Close Bridge.

The condition of the bridge was first brought to the attention of Mayor Judd by Mr. Moyes at noon yesterday, and his worship immediately got busy with his pen and ink, and wrote the following letter to Manager King, of the street railway:

"I have just been informed by Mr. Moyes, who was brought here by the city for the purpose of examining the fenders, plant, roadbed, overhead equipment, and the general condition of your railway in this city, for the purpose of giving evidence before the railway commission, that the condition of the Wellington street bridge, over which your cars run, is imminently dangerous to the lives of the citizens who use the Wellington street cars, and so much so that it is impressed upon me that it is my duty to prevent the operation of the cars over the said bridge, pending the report and action of the railway commission.

"I therefore must ask you to immediately cease operating cars over this bridge until it is put in such condition as not to endanger the lives of the citizens, and if you will not cease to operate the cars over the bridge, I beg to notify you that I shall take such means to prevent the said operation as I may be advised."

The letter was immediately delivered to Mr. King, and it brought him to the city hall in a hurry. He had a conference with the mayor, and the result was that the latter consented to the bridge being used only on the condition that the company should place a man on duty at the approaches, and have cars come to a full stop before going on the structure, and only to cross the bridge at the rate of three miles an hour.

ANGLICANS WILL CONSULT OTHERS

To Confer With the Presbyterians and Methodists

IN REGARD TO INDIAN SCHOOLS

The Mission Board Regrets Primate's Death—Apportionments Adopted.

The general mission board of the Anglican Church in Canada concluded its semi-annual session at Cronyn Hall last evening, adjourning to meet in Hamilton in April next.

During the lunch hour at noon, addresses were made by three missionaries on furlough, being really an occasion to them of greeting and reception.

Rev. J. MacQueen Baldwin, who has represented the church for fourteen years in Japan, spoke of the indications within two years, but still Christianity had to be impressed on hearts there by individual work. Conversion en masse could not be expected of so philosophic a people.

Rev. Mr. Whitaker, just returned from Herschel Island, in the shadow of the North Pole, could not report actual conversions there, but through his services, for five years, day schools for the young, and night schools for the grown-up there was a better order of life and conduct among the Esquimaux.

At Fort Macpherson, among the Indians, the work had reached fruition, till they now were givers to the church, $80 last year, $109 this year—very good for roaming tribes living from hand to mouth.

Rev. E. T. Peck, of Cumberland Sound (where mails penetrate once a year, and whose isolation is so great that not a fourth of his time could he spend with his wife), is the hero of the church made of forty seal skins, as the only building at his station was a shack of two small rooms. But a hungry pack of dogs raided his church, tore it to pieces and ate the seal skins.

At the afternoon session a committee, headed by the Archbishop of Rupert's Land, presented a resolution expressing in a touching way the loss of the church through the death of Archbishop Bond, with an affectionate expression of regard for his personality. The Bishops of Toronto, Quebec, Ontario and London, the Deans of Quebec and Ontario, and Mr. R. Campbell were appointed a delegation from the board and church at large to the funeral.

The debate upon the apportionment report was upon the policy, whether the subdivision into fourteen dioceses in the great west and north had been wise in the abstract—whether the money of some of the Episcopal endowments was not needed in the rapidly-growing dioceses of the railway provinces. Several of the bishops felt embarrassed because enough money was not being voted for actual obligations, not to speak of needs, but on motion of the Bishop of Qu'Appelle, the report was adopted in its entirety, with an acknowledgment of the earnest work by the committee, with a desire for the best administration. Hereafter Sunday school offerings for Indian schools will not be credited on the apportionment. Therefore the children will hereafter give for direct missionary work, which may be spiritual Indian work.

Will Confer with Other Bodies.

The special Indian school committee was reappointed and instructed to formulate a policy, confer with the Presbyterians and Methodists, interview the Government, and report to the board.

The foreign mission report recommended a change of policy in the provinces of Japan, committed exclusively to the Canadian church were inadequately manned, while efforts were being spread in single stations in a number of distant lands. The practice, by bays, was to send the missionary to the land he favored. The new plan proposed was to give the board the privilege of making the preference of field. It did not mean cutting off any existing station, but of permissive selection. The report was not adopted, since it was feared it would diminish interest in foreign work and possibly affect the unity of mission societies. The discussion was general, but it was formally deferred for further information as to old agreements.

Important Recommendations.

In the evening, the report was submitted upon Rev. J. Cooper Robinson's scheme to organize a separate missionary department for forward work among young people. It declared that its duties were already so engrossing that the board could not undertake the task. But a conference with the general synod's Sunday school committee was recommended; also the extension of the Anglican Young People's Societies; that diocesan synods be memorialized to extend Sunday school organization and increase the mission spirit among the young; that these schools be supported by congregations; that all givings may be reserved for missions; that a bureau of literature and intelligence be organized; that a field secretary be secured; that lesson helps be encouraged.—Adopted.

All Saints' Church Woman's Auxiliary, of Winnipeg, having offered to educate a Japanese student at Trinity College, Toronto, a committee asked for advice in Japan, from heads of English and United States work and others. The gist of much correspondence was that the proposed education was either advantageous or dangerous, according to the individual character of the student; that residence is apt to unfit candidates for life and influence in Japan, and the greater work and educational effort is apt to tempt them from church work. The committee left the question for decision in individual cases, and recommended that the offer from Winnipeg be accepted, the board

After the disgraceful scenes in Cornwall last Saturday, the N. L. U. folks cannot be too careful. Lacrosse has made great headway this season, simply because it has been clean and fast. So long as it stays that way Canadians will not only be proud of it, but swear by it. But if rowdiness is allowed to creep in, it will soon be placed in a class with football.—Toronto Telegram.

The team to represent the Forest City Football Club in Saturday's game against Woodstock College will include: Back—Spry.

All the above players are urgently requested to be at Tecumseh Park at 2:30 sharp, and to provide themselves with the club stockings, black and white.

The boys had a splendid practice last night, Capt. Hague drilling them in signals for a couple of hours. The team will have to hustle to beat the fast Woodstock College boys, but they feel confident of accomplishing the trick.

A good crowd of supporters should turn out and root and lend encouragement to the boys.

ST. THOMAS MAY HAVE AN INTERMEDIATE TEAM

St. Thomas, Oct. 11.—A meeting of hockey enthusiasts was held last night, when prospects for the coming season were discussed. Those present seemed to be of the unanimous opinion that the city should be represented in the Ontario Hockey Association's intermediate series, and that the team should be composed of strictly local players, it being felt that there were enough good players in the city to make a showing. With this end in view, a committee, consisting of Fred A. McCully, C. W. Hodgins, and Jack Sinclair, was appointed to confer with the management of the rink to ascertain if suitable arrangements can be made.

There is also a probability of the city league being reorganized.

This Clothing Business Is Nearly 54 Years Old

—and in that space of time it has grown from an unimportant position to that of Premiership. This growth is attributable to but one thing, viz: a spirit of aggressiveness. We realized when we started in business how comparatively few establishments did things exceedingly well. Doing things well consists very largely in "just doing them"—in becoming absorbed, interested, concentrated—and concentration is nothing more than elimination.

To eliminate that which does not operate to the success and advantage of a house is the thing that counts. And we set about to concentrate and eliminate.

Ready-made clothing, as it was called when we started in business, was coarse, crude, shapeless, styleless, a sorry substitute for the custom-made garments as compared with the perfection of modern ready-for-service attire.

Cheapness and cheapness alone was the quality that commended it to the economical.

The standard of clothes-quality was advanced by us, and has improved season after season, year after year, until today Grafton & Co.'s Clothing is as perfect as it is possible for expert craftsmen to create. A full realization of the clothing betterment we produced brought about large patronage in both men's and boy's clothing. Considerable prestige and marked popularity every season found the marked clientage growing and the business expanding, until by force of this prosperous condition we were compelled to extend our business. Today we are recognized as the leading Clothing and Outfitting establishment in Seven of our Canadian Cities.

Each department is a store in itself, manned and operated with executive ability.

If we had to take down and pick to pieces our business system, founded on fixed principles, we would put it together again as quickly as possible on exactly the same plan upon which it has been operated long enough for the people to know what they have to depend on.

VARSITY FIELD DAY

Fixed for Oct. 26 on the Huron College Campus.

The Western University Athletic Association met last evening at Huron College and elected the following officers for the coming year:

Honorary President—Prof. Wallace. President—Mr. David Arnott. Secretary—H. Shore.

Treasurer—Albert Gerrard. Executive Committee—Messrs. Harcourt, Downing, Cox, and Grant. Patrons—Hon. C. S. Hyman, Hon. Adam Beck, Mayor Judd, Sir John Carling, T. H. Smallman and Bishop Williams.

The annual field day was set for Oct. 26 on the college campus. There appeared to be a lamentable lack of enthusiasm in regard to forming a hockey team. There is plenty of material for a good seven at the college.

TODAY'S EVIDENCE IN ELECTION CASE

Mr. Reid said they would swear him at the polls.

Mr. DuVernet was placing words in the witness' mouth, and Mr. Wilkie objected.

"The crown is asking leading questions of witness who come here with the rope around their necks," he said. "Mr. DuVernet has taken the trouble to announce in the papers that witnesses who do not tell stories in accordance with what the crown thinks will be prosecuted. This is most unfair. The crown counsel is trying the witness."

"I rule the witness is a hostile witness, and is trying to conceal the truth," the magistrate said.

"You are destroying your competence as a judge by acting as prosecuting counsel," Mr. Wilkie said. "Your attitude is creating a bad impression. Your cross examination of two crown witnesses does not look good."

"I don't care what other people think," the magistrate replied. "I will ask questions any time I like to clear my mind."

"You put the witness between two fires, Mr. DuVernet and yourself," Mr. Robinson said.

"Mr. Jones had been ordered from the room by the crown while the argument was going on, and he was now recalled."

Jones said when he spoke to Mr. Reid he was not aware that Gatecliff had been promised money. He swore that he did not tell Mr. Reid that Gatecliff had got $5.

"Did you state that Collins and Mulloy had spoiled the good work by giving money to Gatecliff?"

"No."

Gatecliff, it was said, was looking for $5 for his vote, and Jones objected to having anything to do with him. He told Collins to have nothing to do with him as he had heard Gatecliff was trying to trap the Liberals.

"Did Mr. Reid tell you Collins knew his business?"

"No."

"What made you uneasy?" asked the magistrate.

"Well," the witness replied, "it is a common fact that in every community there are a number of voters who are looking for money, and Gatecliff, I believe, is one of those."

"Did you know what Collins was there for?"

Threatened by DuVernet.

"No. You threatened me if I did not tell the kind of story you want," Mr. Jones said to Mr. DuVernet. "You said you would indict me for perjury when you tried to get a statement from me in the next room. You want the story as you see it or else you accuse a man of lying. Why should this be?"

Mr. DuVernet protested that he merely told the witness to tell the truth or he would be prosecuted for perjury.

"Oh! Oh!" came from Mr. Wilkie. "I was not so far wrong a while ago. This threatening business has been going on all the time."

The witness protests.

"Both he and the magistrate accuse me of perjury if I am not able to swear to all they ask me," Mr. Jones emphatically declared.

Continuing his examination, Jones said that Mr. Spence had been paid $3 for acting as scrutineer. He had also paid $45 in of legitimate expenses in the election. Witness said that though Mr. Spence had acted for many years as returning officer for the subdivision, he was not aware he was appointed for life. Witness was not aware that Collins was substituted for Spence because the latter had refused to do any crooked work.

Personally, Mr. Jones said, he was in favor of Spence as deputy. He had had nothing to do with the appointing of Collins. Collins was likely appointed on the recommendation of the returning officer.

The magistrate thought it was queer that the party in power should have had the appointing of the deputies, but Mr. Robinson pointed out that when the Tories were in power they took Tories, and the examination was once again resumed.

Mr. Spence had not told Mr. Jones that he (Spence) would not do any crooked work. He had merely told Spence that the committee had substituted Collins, and Spence, who was made scrutineer, appeared satisfied.

The money for legitimate expenses was paid over to Jones at the Liberal headquarters. He had sent his bill to a man named Brown, the secretary.

"I see an entry here for $100 for boys," said Mr. DuVernet, reading from a book.

"Excuse me, that is a dollar," commented Mr. Jones. (Laughter.)

"I see $2 here for a man named Archer."

"Yes, he was the constable, and the municipality pays him."

Mr. Jones said that he had not appointed constable by the committee, a man named Emigh had been appointed. Jones then explained that the money had been paid to Archer to smooth him over, as he had not been paid for acting as constable in a previous election.

"Did you see Mr. Reid about money?"

"I told him what my legitimate expenses were after the election."

"Never asked for any?"

"No. I told him I had a bill to put in."

"Did you get any other money directly or indirectly from Mr. Reid?"

"No."

"Why did you speak to Mr. Reid?"

"Because he is the recognized head of the party."

Tells of Getting Route Information of the Canadian Northern Railroad.

Toronto, Oct. 12.—Hon. George W. Fowler, M. P., appeared before the insurance commission this morning. He was questioned as to his delay in obeying the summons to appear before the commission. The commissioners stated they would make no order of commitment at present. Mr. Fowler told of being in the Northwest in 1902, and upon returning obtained information of the route of the proposed Canadian Northern Railway from Messrs. Mackenzie and Mann. Afterwards the syndicate had an interview with Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the C. P. R., in which they obtained these lands for $50 an acre. They did not inform the C. P. R. officials at that time that they knew of the C. N. R. route.

Mr. Fowler objected vigorously to the probing of what he termed his private business.

Thursday afternoon's evidence in the London election case at Toronto will be found on pages three and nine.

ANOTHER RELAY FOOTRACE

Township Contest To Be Settled in Victoria Park, Oct. 27.

The one-mile relay foot race, open to teams from the townships of London, Lobo, Delaware and Westminster, the final heat of which was run off at Lambeth last Tuesday, is to be run over again here on the 27th of this month, at Victoria Park, on account of the numerous protests against the fouls committed during the Delaware and Lambeth races.

Delaware, London and Westminster will be the competing teams. Lobo having been declared out of the race entirely on account of having finished last at Lambeth and having claimed no fouls in any of the heats which have been run.

The judges gave the Delaware and Westminster teams the privilege of running the race over their own tracks to try and beat London's time, but they elected to run the whole thing over again. Had the teams chosen the former alternative, Delaware would have had to run the mile in 4 minutes 13 seconds to have beaten London. The conditions of the race will call upon the teams to run 500 yards each, and for the captains to run 260 yards.

Owing to the great race put up by Capt. Robson in the Lambeth race, when he made the 260 yards in 35 seconds over a wet, muddy track, and also to the speedy running of the other members of the team, London Township leads by 3 seconds. The time at present stands:

London (three heats) 12:22
Westminster (three heats) 12:25 1/2
Delaware (two heats) 8:21

FOWLER ARRIVES; IN BOX TODAY

conceive of such a circumstance, he said.

Mr. Shepley also read Mr. Pope's testimony as to retaining 7,000 "for purposes of the syndicate."

The witness said that there had been a shortage notice, and the syndicate had been forced to give up lands to the amount.

"No," said Mr. Shepley, "what you got was half of a parcel of culled lands."

May Prosecute Someone.

The witness confessed he would be surprised if this should be true.

"In that case I may get after somebody," he said.

Then he asked: "Does it say whether it was better land which they held back?"

"What do you suppose they would naturally hold back?" asked Mr. Shepley, and the court laughed. "However," continued the crown counsel, "Mr. Fowler has said that you know I have been trying in vain to get the original C. P. R. option."

He read from Mr. Pope's testimony as to the land handed over being "not equal to the other, and therefore discarded."

"If that is his statement, we ought to have those 7,000 acres," commented the witness gleefully, when Mr. Shepley read Mr. Fowler's own evidence in the Lefurgey suit.

At the afternoon session, Mr. Wilson explained the transactions in connection with the purchase of the Pope Fowler option, and said he was willing to abide by the decision of Mr. Elliott G. Stevenson as to the desirability of returning to the Union Trust Company the 337 1-2 shares bonus stock in the Great West Land Company, which had been surrendered.

It transpired that in the reorganization of the Union Trust Company, in which Mr. Wilson was acting for the I. O. F., he had acquired a one-half interest on a block of stock held by Mr. E. A. DuVernet, upon which he had paid nothing, and which he had offered Mr. DuVernet at an advance of $2,500 for sale to that gentleman's English friends. The offer has not been accepted.

Mr. Wilson stated that he had accepted the position of president or president in the reorganized company at a salary of $5,000 a year, and that Mr. DuVernet had supplemented the proposed salary by a cash payment of $2,500.

He had previous to that payment indorsed a check drawn to his order for $5,000, but knew nothing about the disposition of the money by Mr. DuVernet.

HOTELS MUST PROTECT

Fire Life-Saving Appliances Must Be Adequate Says Inspector.

Toronto, Oct. 11.—Owing to the finding of the coroner's jury in connection with the fire at the Gilmour Hotel, in Ottawa, in which the fire appliances of the hotel are said to have been at fault, Mr. Eudo Saunders, chief officer of the license department, has asked for a special report from the Ottawa inspector, and asking about the fire appliances in all the other hotels of the city.

"Some time ago," said Mr. Saunders, "circulars were sent out pointing out to hotelkeepers the necessity of proper appliances, and beyond this a copy of the act which contains a reprint of the statutes setting forth what they must have and what they must do to protect people against fire and accident. These may be sent out again, and the department will see that the law is lived up to."

BIKING ON COUNTY WALKS
County Constables Not Responsible for the Alleged Offense.

High Constable Hughes takes exception to a recent statement by the Free Press to the effect that the county constabulary were to be held accountable for the alleged riding of bicycles on the sidewalks in front of the Assylum grounds.

"In the first place there is nothing in the county bylaws in regard to the matter," said the high constable this morning, "and in the second place, if there were anything covering the matter in the bylaws, the constables could not be expected to go out to the asylum grounds and wait for a possible offender to come along."
"The county constables are not working on salary but are dependent on fees for making an arrest. Up to date there have been no complaints registered at the courthouse in regard to this matter."

FURS
From a Practical Furrier
BELTZ
SENT FOR TRIAL
Three Young Men Must Answer a Serious Charge.

The charge of assault, occasioning actual bodily harm, preferred against Fred and George Webster, of Dorchester, and a young man named Prudham, of Niles town, by Bradley Buchanan, of Ingersoll, was heard by Squire Taylor at the courthouse yesterday afternoon. The alleged offense was committed at Dorchester Station on the day of the Donnybrook Fair, and as a result of the beating he received Buchanan has his head in bandages. The evidence of a number of witnesses was taken, and the accused were committed for trial by a judge or jury, as they may see fit to elect.

According to the statement of the witnesses, Buchanan had some words and a scuffle with a brother of the Websters, and later was met in front of the Drake Hotel by the Websters and Prudham. The trouble was renewed, and in the fight that followed one of the Websters got Buchanan on the ground. It was at this stage that Prudham is alleged to have deliberately walked up and threw a stone at Buchanan, striking him on the head and inflicting a wound about two inches in length, which rendered him unconscious. The witnesses could not swear positively that Prudham had a stone, owing to the darkness that prevailed, but they said they saw him swing his arm as if to throw, and the next moment Buchanan was unconscious and blood was flowing freely from the wound in his head. It was also alleged that while he held Buchanan on the ground one of the Websters chewed his finger.

MERCHANT TAILORS ARE ALARMED

AT THE PROGRESS MADE BY SEMI-READY TAILORING.

The Company Have Now 69 Semi-ready Wardrobes in Canada, Where There Were But Three Eight Years Ago.

Referring to the progress made by the new art of men's tailoring a New York journal recently prophesied that in a few years the old-time journeyman tailor would be as scarce as a brevier compositor in a daily newspaper office. Semi-ready tailoring has made such strides in recent years that the tailoring journals are advising organization and action on the part of merchant tailors to combat the new idea. In bold type the National Fashion Bulletin recently issued "Confidential Circular No. 1" to the custom tailors, and quoted a prominent speaker at the merchant tailors' banquet, who said: "Unless we combat the Semi-ready houses our profession will in a few years be in the same condition as the custom shoe trade is now. A few will pay high prices for custom-made. The rest will wear Semi-ready."
The strides made by the Semi-ready tailoring in Canada have been remarkable. In Toronto recently two new Semi-ready Wardrobes were opened, Ed. Mack, one of the prominent merchant tailors, having secured the agency. In Montreal three new Semi-ready agencies were opened. A. M. Campbell, a manager of the Merchants Bank, joined forces with R. C. McLean, a merchant tailor. The third was opened by F. X. Bourdas, a merchant tailor, who had been in business for 19 years.

From three wardrobes in 1898, the Semi-ready Company announce in their new booklet, just published, entitled "Manners and Modes for Men," that there are 69 Semi-ready Wardrobes in Canada.
The Winnipeg house of the Semi-ready company is to be in charge of William T. Peace, who for fifteen years conducted the most prosperous and high-class custom tailoring business in that city.
In every town and city the Semi-ready Company seem to have no difficulty in getting the best agencies.

While a merchant tailoring experience is not absolutely essential, the system upon which Semi-ready tailoring is based appeals more quickly to a man of practical experience. A practical tailor grasps the idea at once.
McLean Bros. have the only Semi-ready tailoring agency in London at 146 Dundas street.

STREET BLOCKED, MAYOR PROTESTS
Cars Held at the Richmond Street Crossing of Grand Trunk for Half Hour.

In his official capacity Mayor Judd yesterday attempted to equal the record of City Engineer Graydon as a letter writer.
But he failed miserably. All he managed to dictate was a brace of them—one to the street railway about the Wellington street bridge, and the other to the Grand Trunk about the blocking of the cars at the Richmond street crossing. Here is what the mayor had to say, the letter being addressed to Assistant Superintendent Gillen: "Last evening I boarded a Ridout street south car at the corner of Dundas and Richmond streets at 10:08, arriving at the Grand Trunk Railway crossing at 10:04. At that time an oil train was blocking the crossing and I am informed it had been blocking it for some minutes. It remained in that position until 10:35, when the blockade of the street was opened and the street cars allowed to pass. There were twelve cars blocked south of the crossing on Richmond and Horton streets, and six cars blocked north of the track on Richmond street. So far as I could see there was no cause or justification for the train being allowed to remain for half an hour blocking the street, and I desire to ask whether you were aware of the train remaining in that position. I also desire to know whether any reasonable excuse can be offered for such a condition of affairs, because I feel it my duty to take such steps, as I may be advised, to see that such a condition of affairs should not occur again and to proceed in the proper way against those who are responsible for the blocking of the street last night, if no reasonable excuse can be offered."

COMPLAINTS MADE AS TO ROADWAYS
No. 2 Committee Deals With a Few—Entrance to Bennett's Theater Discussed.

A meeting of No. 2 committee was held last evening, at which Chairman Gerry, Ald. Saunders, City Engineer Graydon and Secretary Bell were present.

Mr. Wm. David appeared and made a complaint about the condition of the roadway in front of his residence on Ridout street. He said that it was in such a condition that he had to have goods carried into his house, because a horse and wagon could not be taken over the road. He suggested that a box drain be put in to carry away the water running down the street, and promised that he would keep the road in repair after it was once fixed.
Mr. H. G. Stein, of the Hamilton road, complained that by the building of a cement sidewalk in front of his place his property had been damaged. The matter was referred to the city solicitor, as the board considered that the property had been rather improved than damaged.

Mr. C. H. Boulton wrote to the board requesting that he be allowed to tap the sewer between Waterloo and Colborne streets, on Central avenue. The matter was brought up at the last meeting and was referred to the city engineer, so that he could report back to the board. The engineer reported that Mr. Boulton's property, into which he wished to have a branch of the sewer run, consisted of a laneway, on which he had several houses, for which he was not paying frontage tax. The engineer recommended that before Mr. Boulton be allowed to connect his houses with the sewer, he be made to pay frontage tax on each of them. The report of the engineer was adopted.

A petition was read requesting that the sidewalk on Wellington street, between Horton and Simcoe streets, on the west side, be moved out the same distance as the one on the east side—40 feet from the houses. The engineer stated that it would be impossible to have the sidewalk moved out as far as requested. The petition was filed for future reference.
Ald. Saunders referred to a sidewalk on Clark street, which, he said, the people all along the street wished to have taken up, and some cinders put down. The engineer said the walk at this place was in too good condition to be destroyed. The matter was left to the engineer to take such action as he thought necessary.
The canopy in front of Bennett's Vaudeville Theater was the subject of some discussion. The brackets which support this canopy are within five feet of the sidewalk, and the law requires them to be seven feet from the walk. The engineer was instructed to speak to Mr. Bennett about the matter.

AT THE GRAND
Lindley Co. Makes Hit With Strong Play—Tonight's Offering.

A large audience greeted the opening performance of the Harry Lindley Stock Company at the Grand last night and it is safe to say without an exception came away highly pleased. The play presented was that stirring drama, "A Woman's Love," a story of the breezy, adventurous west, in which the pathetic and humorous are most happily blended. Little Miss Lindley, who is certain to make a hit with local theatergoers, plays the heroine, and comes out with high honors. Considering she is still in her teens, Miss Lindley's acting is remarkable. Harry Lindley gave a strong impression of a lovable character, and the balance of the company were quite up to the standard of the principals.
High-class specialty turns between acts made a big hit, Miss Lindley's singing especially being very effective. The evening, "In the Adirondacks," a New York success, will be put on.

SPELLER—WATSON
Wedding in Guelph at the Home of a Former London Pastor.

A very interesting event took place on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Rev. H. C. and Mrs. Speller, Woolwich street, Guelph, when their eldest daughter, Ethel Bellina, was united in marriage to Arthur Clinton Watson, of Dayton, Ohio, and son of Mr. A. J. Watson, of this city.

Precisely at 2:30 p.m. the bride appeared, leaning on the arm of her father, and took her place by the side of the groom, and the simple but beautiful ceremony was performed by the Rev. H. C. Speller, father of the bride, assisted by Rev. L. H. Thomas, of the First Baptist Church, and an uncle of the bride, Rev. D. Daack, of Strathroy. Miss Mayme Booth, of Sarnia, played during the bridal procession Mendelssohn's Wedding March. The bride was charming in an emerald gown of cream wool tulle, trimmed with embroidered chiffon, with touches of Nile green velvet. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley, and wore a pearl and amethyst pin, the gift of the groom.

Miss Velma Hayes, cousin of the groom, was bridesmaid. She wore pale green poplin de sole, with cream lace, and carried a fan, the gift of the bride.
Miss Velma Speller, sister of the bride, as maid of honor, wore a becoming gown of pale pink French batiste, with Valenciennes lace.
Mr. J. A. McDonald, B. A., of Peterborough (now of Toronto Medical School), was best man.
The decorations of the bride's home were very beautiful, consisting of a bank of lilies, ferns, potted plants, autumn leaves and trailing vines, smilax, pink and white carnations, while a superb bouquet of white chrysanthemums (the gift of a friend) graced the tables. Guests were invited from England, Atlanta (Ga.), Dayton (Ohio), Chicago, London, Woodstock, Peterborough, Sarnia, Muskoka, and from the officers and young people of Trinity Baptist Church, Guelph, and were present to the number of about forty.

After the ceremony and the hearty congratulations of friends, a dainty luncheon was served, aided by the excellent ushering of Messrs. Newman Speller (brother of the bride), Cyril Hayes (cousin of the groom), H. Ziemann and A. Rundle, of Guelph.

The gifts of the groom to the bride, bridesmaid and maid of honor were pearl pins, and to Mr. J. A. McDonald (his best man), a scarf pin set with pearls.
The bride received many beautiful gifts—cut glass, silverware, handpainted china, a superb tea set, and some works of art were among the numerous presents, which bore testimony to the esteem in which the young couple are held.
The bride's going-away costume was of green broadcloth, trimmed with millinery braid, with hat to match. The happy couple left by the 5:55 G. T. R. train for their future home in Dayton, Ohio, followed by the love and good wishes of their many friends.
