CHANGE.

Why should we mourn that changes come,
When 'neath the cold and shrouded snow, The grass and flowers may shelter find,
And in the darkness bud and grow!

Why should we mourn that clouds are formed And o'er our drooping spirits fly?
The law that forms the clouds expands The bow and brings unclouded sky.

Our hopes may fall like leaves away,
And swiftly pass each winged hour;
But leaves ne'er fall until the fruit Is formed within the bursting flower.

Then chance is Angel of the Soul, That keeps all things from swift decay, Through which the crystal here is formed,
And life anew may spring away.

Thus when upon these thoughts I muse, That once awoke my brooding fears, I see how Beauty's matchless soul In all with cheerful robes appears.

I see the worm upon the ground, With golden tints expand its wing;
What then, as more than worm I am, Unto my soul shall changes bring?

MISS LESLIE ON SLANG.

"There is no wit," says the author of the Behavior Book, "in a lady speaking of taking a snore instead of a nap—in calling pantaloons pants, or gentlemen gents—in saying of a man whose dress is getting old, that he looks seedy—and in alluding to an amusing anecdote, or a diverting incident, to say that it is rich. All slang words are detestable from the lips of ladies.
We are always sorry to hear a young lady using such a word as polking when she tells of having been engaged in a certain dance too fashionable not long since; but, happily, now it is fast going out, and almost laughed from the best society.
To her honor, be it remembered, Queen Victoria has prohibited the polka being danced in her presence. How can a genteel girl bring herself to say: 'Last night I was polking with Mr. Bell,' or 'Mr. Cop came and asked me to polk with him.' Its coarse and ill-sounding name is worthy of the dance. We have little tolerance for young ladies, who, having nothing of the right stock to go upon, substitute coarseness and impudence (not to say impudence), and try to excite laughter and attract the attention of gentlemen by talking slang. Where do they get it? How do they pick it up? From low newspapers or vulgar books? Surely not from low companions? We have heard one of these ladies, when her collar chanced to be pinched awry, say that it was put on drunk—also that her bonnet was drunk, meaning crooked on her head. When disconnected, she was flooded When submitting to a thing unwillingly she was brought to the scratch. Sometimes she did things on the sly.

THE DEACON'S RULE.

Twenty-five years ago, or more, a young man, then pastor of a rural church in the State of New York, was driving through the parish village in his buggy, having at his side the senior deacon, a very portly, heavy, good old gentleman, known per excellence as "the Squire." He was a very prudent man, rather timid and careful of his life and limbs, all of which were of signal benefit to the church and the society.
Having ascended a slight elevation in the road the deacon observed, about a hundred yards ahead, stretched on his broadside, right across the narrow wagon track, basking in a mud puddle, a huge, fat, lazy hog, weighing probably more than three hundred pounds.

Look there, elder," said the deacon nervously.
"See that old hog across the road. Turn out."
"I see, sir," said the elder. "I can't turn out."
"But you must, or we shall be turned over."
"Can't do it, sir. I have the right to the road."
"The hog must give way."
"Pony trotted on. They drew nigh the hog."
"I tell you," said the deacon, nervously excited,
"turn out, or we are gone."
"Never fear, sir, the hog must turn out."

By this time they were nearly to a standstill, the elder presuming that if he could arouse the attention of the sleepy beast he would at once rise and clear the track. But no, his hogship just raised his head, gave a slight glance at the buggy, and with a short grunt laid it down in the mud. The end was, the elder had to make a short turn out and make a circuit round, while the hog remained master of the situation. The elder having regained the track and the Squire his composure (the driver rather crestfallen), "Elder," said the deacon, "when I am on the road (and he drove much) I never stop to contend with a hog. I think it is better to turn out."

The deacon ended, and the elder sat for some minutes, silently revolving in his mind the deacon's rule about hogs, and its obvious moral.
And the rule: "Never to stand in the road to contend with a hog," has been one of the most useful rules of his life.

A young fellow in Michigan dreamed that he went to Fremont, Ohio, and married a pretty girl whom he had never seen before, and, acting on his mother's advice, he packed his trunk and started for Ohio. He searched two days in Fremont without seeing the face he had seen in his dream, and then he saw it in the postoffice, told his story, popped the question, received an affirmative answer at once, was married next day, and took his bride back to Michigan. Romantic and speedy.

Select Tale.

THE RESCUE.

In the spring of 1794, while General Wayne, in command of the Northwestern Army, was occupying Fort Greenville, which he had constructed the preceding winter, news was brought to him that a party of Pottawatomies had surprised and destroyed the blockhouse of a small settlement not far distant, and massacred all the inmates except a young female, whom they had taken prisoner, and were then supposed to be conducting to their village. This female, a Miss Egglestone, was the daughter of an officer of some note, who was a friend of Wayne's, and he determined, if in his power, to save her. At that time he had two or three heroic bands of spies, or scouts, attached to his division; and he knew if a rescue could be effected at all, the men to entrust with that important enterprise could be found among them, and then only.

Now it so happened that a small part of those scouts were at that moment in the fort, having come in the night previous with important information, and were preparing to set off again immediately. Sending for one of the most daring of these, Robert McLellan by name, who, though not the regularly appointed leader of the band, sometimes acted in that capacity when his commander was absent, the general briefly informed him of what had taken place, and asked him if he thought there was a hope of Miss Eg-glestone being rescued.

"I can't say as to that, General," replied the scout; "but this I will say—if it can be done, I kin do it."

"How many men do you want?" asked Wayne.

"How big is the party?" inquired the other.

"From the report I should judge there were twenty or thirty of them."

"Then it'll never do for us to have a regular stand-up fight on't, General, unless we has the captain and the others all along; and as they won't be in afore to-morrow, of then, I reckon it's best to operate by sarcumvention; and the two that's here with me—Hickman and Hart—will be just as good for that bar as a dozen more. Only put me where I kin git on their trail, and of the red niggers aren't too far ahead I'll soon fetch a good report of them, ef I don't of the young woman."

"But you must bring a good account of her."

rejoined Wayne, in a positive tone. "It is to save her I send you; for she is the daughter of my friend, and her life and rescue are above price."

"Then we'll save her, General," replied the hardy scout—that is, of the butchering varmint only save her themselves till we kin git to whar she are."

General Wayne gave McLellan some further instructions, and then bade him set out immediately; and returning to his temporary quarters in the Fort, and informing his companions what was required of them, they at once set about preparing for their new adventure; and in less than half an hour the three were treading the intricate mazes of a great dark forest, which they stretched away unbroken for many a long league before them.

With long and rapid strides—McLellan, the fleetest-footed hunter of his time, on the lead—they got over some twenty miles of ground, and reached the ruins of the block-house, where the massacre had taken place, just as the sun was setting. There was light enough to find the broad trail of the retreating Indians; and with no unnecessary delay they set out upon it, and advanced some two or three miles further, when the gathering night compelled them to encamp and postponed further operations till another day.

The night, however, passed off without any disturbance; and at the first streak of day they arose and resumed their journey, and ere the sun set again they had travelled far on the broad trail of their foes in a northerly direction.

It is not our purpose to follow them in detail.
Suffice it to say, that near the close of the second day they reached a point where the trail forked, and it became necessary to make a careful examination, in order to decide which party had taken the prisoner with them. To the best of their judgment the whole number of Indians was not much short of thirty; but they were not equally divided at the point of separation, as was evident from one trail being much larger than the other.
They soon satisfied themselves that the girl had been taken with the smaller party; and this to them was a pleasing discovery, as it gave them more hope of being successful in her rescue.

This decided, they pushed on rapidly till night, and then encamped—proceeding on the following morning as before; and at the close of the third day, just as night was setting in, they came within view of the camp-fire of their foes. Waiting some two or three hours, until they thought the venture perfectly safe, they carefully proceeded to reconnoitre the Indian camp, which was in a small pleasant, but heavily wooded valley, through which flowed a branch of the Wabash. Creeping up cautiously, under cover of some bushes, they beheld six Indians carelessly disposed around the fire, three of them lying down as if asleep, and the others sitting near together, conversing in low tones, occasionally laughing, and evidently totally unsuspecting of danger. A little apart, and bound to a tree, was the poor captive—a young and beautiful female —whose now pale and dejected features bespoke the despair of her heart, and, combined with her disheveled hair and torn and disarranged garments, rendered her an object of pity even to men hardened to almost every scene of suffering and distress.

Having fully ascertained the number and position of their enemies, and the fact that the prisoner whom they had come to rescue was still alive, the scouts drew stealthily back to a safe distance, and held a whispered consultation upon the manner of their future procedure.

"I don't exactly like either of your plans," said McLellan, who had quietly listened to the proposals of the others. "It's our business to get the gal away—that's the General's orders—and the way that we kin do that the best is the best way. Now, instead of trying to steal her guns, one of you jest creep up and cut her cords, and start her off towards us as easy as you kin; but ef that's an alarm, tell her to break for the nearest thicket, and we'll stand between her and harm.
I don't think that'll be any trouble 'bout our coming out all right, for we've fought bigger odds afore to-day, without the vantage of a surprise, and licked 'em too."

After some further discussion the plan of Mc-Lellan was acceded to as the best, and Hart was selected to enter the camp and release the girl—the others to be in readiness to pour in their fire in case of an alarm—which to say the least, would be likely to throw the Indians into confusion, and give our friends so much the advantage —while the girl would be almost certain to escape, and her escape was what they now sought rather than the lives of the savages.

Having thus arranged the matter the three scouts kept perfectly quiet and silent for some two or three hours longer, and then began the execution of their final scheme. The fire, which the Indians had fed while astir, had now gone down to mere embers; but this only the better served McLellan's idea, as it would render Hart less liable to be seen in his approach to the prisoner.

Some quarter of an hour more was spent in arranging everything for perfect action and getting into position, which they finally did in that stealthy and noiseless manner peculiar to men of their profession. Then leaving his two companions where their fire would be sure to be effective, Hart as cautiously and stealthily drew back, and glided round to the captive. He reached her without causing any alarm, but found her fast asleep, sitting on the ground, her back braced against the tree to which she was bound. To wake her, and warn her, and assure her that deliverance was at hand—without causing her to start or cry out, and so arouse her captors—was a delicate task. He began, however, by whispering in her ear, and so continued till she gradually awoke, and heard and comprehended his words, when her rare presence of mind came to his aid, and he was greatly rejoiced and relieved at her whispered reply:

"I understand you—I thank you—God bless you whoever you are! Have no fear! I am a soldier's daughter, and will do whatever you bid me."
"Then jest as soon as I cut your cords," whispered Hart, in reply, "git up and faller me, and don't make a bit o' noise; but ef the Injuns do happen to rouse, don't get too skeered, but run for the nearest thicket, and leave me and my comrades to settle them."

He then cut her bonds, and quietly, but with trembling eagerness, she arose to comply with his directions; but the first step forward, her long-corded and benumbed limbs partially giving way under her, she stumbled upon a dry branch, which snapped beneath her feet.

Instantly one of the Indians nearest the tree started up into a sitting posture, when Hart, feeling himself called upon to act, suddenly presented his rifle at the breast of his foe, and lodged the contents in his body. As he fell back the scout, with a yell of triumph and defiance, bound over him to attack the next, the whole party being now fully aroused and alarmed. Snapping his pistol at the breast of the second, and finding it miss fire, Hart struck out with his tomahawk, but stumbled at the same moment, and missing the warrior in the act of rising, fell heavily against him. The latter staggered, and was really much alarmed and confused; but comprehending, withal, that he had an enemy within his reach, he quickly grappled him, whipped out his knife, and plunged it several times into his body. He was in the very act of doing this, in fact, when a ball from the rifle of McLellan pierced his brain, and he fell dead over the dying form of Hart—Hickman at the same instant shooting down another—for with loud terrifying yells, both had rushed upon the Indians at the same moment with their unfortunate companion.

There were now three unwounded Indians to two whites; and had the former known of their advantage the day might have been their own; but they were surprised, alarmed, and half paralyzed with the thought that they were attacked by overwhelming numbers; and before they had time to recover, the smaller weapons of our heroes had done their work upon two more of them, the sixth one only making his escape with a yell of terror. The skirmish, from first to last, scarcely exceeded a minute; and probably no regular battle in the world ever showed such a proportion of the killed to the number engaged, in so short a time.

It was a dearly won contest to our two surviving friends, and sad and gloomy were their feelings as they lifted their poor comrade from beneath their foe, and listen to the irregular breathings which were soon to cease in death. The girl, who had not fled far, now returned, and joined them in their grief, for she felt that the poor fellow had fallen in her rescue and defence.
An hour later the dying man expired in the arms of McLellan, rousing a little at the last moment, and speaking a few words faintly:

"Good bye, boys," he said, "and remember me wherever you see the red niggers."

"We'll do that, Hart, you may rest assured," replied McLellan, in an unsteady tone; and over his mortal remains those two hardy scouts swore undying revenge against their savage foes.

Drawing the fair girl apart from the bloody scene, and assuring her they were as ready to yield their lives in her defence as the one who had so fallen, they gave her a blanket, and persuaded her to lie down and get what rest she could, that she might be prepared for the long journey homeward, which would commence on the morrow. Then scripping their slain, and making prize of whatever they considered of any value, they sat down by their dead comrade, and passed the night beside him, rehearsing tales of adventures in which he had taken a part, and renewing their oaths of eternal vengeance against the whole Indian race.

At daylight the following morning they dug a rave grave with their hatchets and knives, and having shown their final respect to their late companion by interring his remains as well as their circumstances would permit, they set out on their return to the fort, which they eventually reached in safety, and where they delivered their rescued captive into the hands of General Wayne, who not only kindly thanked but liberally rewarded them, and expressed a soldier's regret for their brave companion.

It may interest the reader to know that this same young lady—so providentially preserved at the general massacre of her friends, and so gallantly rescued at the expense of the life of one of these brave heroes of the wilderness—subsequently became the wife of an officer under Wayne, and the mother of one who now holds a distinguished position in the councils of the nation.

CHURCH ETIQUETTE.

FOR GENTLEMEN.—Fancy upon opening the door everybody will look at you, and bear yourselves bravely till you get to your seat. Then pass your hand over your hair to see-if the hair's labor that you spent on it has been in vain: then take a good long stare over the congregation to see who is there. If you chew tobacco, blaze away into the seat behind you if unoccupied, or else let drive at your neighbor's patent leathers. Scratch your name on the back of the front seats, with the likeness of a one-eyed hyppogriff; stare frequently at the pretty looking girl behind you, and if possible send her a note assuring her that she has the prettiest hand or the most exquisite eye of blue this side of paradise. After having exhausted all reasonable amusements, you may shut your eyes, open your mouth, and favour the congregation with an extempore snore. After the service is over, do the agreeable, if possible, to some divinity; thereafter write yourself a briek.

FOR YOUNG LADIES.—Spend four hours in fixing out before starting. For it is every young lady's duty to look pretty, bearing in mind that young ladies were created for the special purpose of being worshipped by gentlemen, and attracting their unqualified admiration. Step daintily and gracefully up the aisle, seat yourself, straighten up, seat yourself again, and repeat six consecutive times. Pull the outer garment a little way over the left shoulder, then back on the right, and after doing this a few times leave it where you found it. Straighten down your collar, then straighten it up; pull out a highly perfumed handkerchief, pass it over your lips, then return it; smooth down both sides of your dress, and thrust the toe of your exquisite foot just a little out, and then, after rising up and sitting down again, you will be prepared for further development. Being properly fixed, you rise up again and sit down, and then, after rising up and down once, it would be well to repeat it. If the gentleman in front sends you a note, hide it under your book, or fan, and read it when your attention to the preaching—that will be for the benefit of sinners. If you have blue eyes turn them upwards once in a while—if black, partly close the lids and look dreamy.

A GOOD JUDGE OF A HORSE.—There is no doubt that Dr. Mason was a good judge. A brother minister intending to purchase a horse, stopped the doctor to ask his opinion. After taking a good look at him, Dr. Mason pointed to the knees of the horse, which were worn, indicating that he was in the habit of stumbling "That," said he, "is a good sign for a minister, but a very bad sign for a minister's horse."

AND
Colchester County Advertiser.
SATURDAY, JUNE 6, 1868.

A LATE, wet season, makes June a hard month for the farmer. Under the most favorable circumstances no month of the year puts his executive abilities more thoroughly to the test. Without well-matured plans, and a knowledge of about how much the labor, both of men and animals, will accomplish, the best farmer will be likely to fall behind hand. The weeds grow so fast in moist, warm weather that the fields must be hoed almost as soon as planted, and the growth of the grass is so rapid, that the necessity for laying down the hoe for the scythe is often a most trying one. It is very rare in our latitude, that June is not on the whole, a prosperous time for the crops. Very dry Junes are of rare occurrence, and a drought at this season is productive of great injury, quite as much so as sharp frosts. Farmers whose spring work has been delayed by the wetness of the ground have in this way the value of thorough draining impressed upon them, much drained land was this Year fit for ploughing in April, while that of precisely the same character not drained, yet not what would be called wet land will not be fit to plow before the last of May, even if the weather be dry the first part of the month.

Read!

Teach your children at as early an age as possible to read the newspaper, and to take an intelligent interest in the news of the day, domestic and foreign. All mankind are one family, and no good man should count anything of human interest alien to himself. There is no medium but the newspaper by which we can keep abreast of the intelligence of the day, and see how God rules the world. History of the most important character is forming under our eyes, and as rational and responsible beings we should "mark, learn, and inwardly digest" it. The taste for reading good newspapers is not sufficiently developed in the present generation; and hence our advice to instill this taste in the minds of the young. Furnish them with papers that will not contaminate their minds—that are not low, coarse and brutal—that are honest and truthful. Read newspapers, but do not by any means confine your reading to literature so ephemeral. Good books cannot be dispensed with by any man who wishes to be well-instructed.

Says Sir John Herschell:—If I was to pray for a taste which would stand me in stead, under every variety of circumstance, and be a source of happiness and cheerfulness to me through life, and a shield against its ills, however things may go amiss, and frown upon me, it would be a taste for reading. I speak of it, of course, only as a worldly advantage, and not in the slightest degree as superseding or derogating from the higher offices, and duties, and stronger panoply of religious principles; but as a taste, an instrument, and a mode of pleasurable gratification. Give a man this taste, and means of gratifying it, and you can hardly fail of making a happy man, unless, indeed, you put in his hands a perverse selection of books. You may place him in contact with the best of society in every period of history; with the wisest and wisest, with the tenderest, and the bravest, and the purest characters who have adorned humanity; you make him a denizen of all nations, a contemporary of all ages. The world has been created for him. It is hardly possible but the character should take a higher and better tone from the constant habit of associating in thought with a class of thinkers, to say the least of it, above the average of humanity. It is morally impossible but that the manners should take a tinge of good breeding and civilization, from having constantly before our eyes the way in which the best informed men have talked and conducted themselves in their intercourse with each other. There is a gentle, but perfectly irresistible coercion in the habit of reading, well-directed, over the whole tenor of a man's character and conduct, which is not the least effectual because it works insensibly, and because it is the last thing he dreams of.

MARINE.—On Tuesday evening last, Wm. Taylor, Esq., Past Deputy Grand Master, and Wm. Williams, Esq., Grand Senior Warden, installed the officers for Truro Lodge, No 15, N. S. R. of F. and A. M. for the ensuing year, viz:—A. C. Page M.D., W.M.; L. J. Crowe, Senior Warden; Wm. Blair, Junior Warden; G. P. Nelson, Secretary; Geo. Campbell, Treasurer; J. K. Blair, Chaplain; James Dickson, Senior Deacon; H. T. Laurence, Junior Deacon; David Nelson and Donald Fraser, Stewards; Daniel Holmes, Tyler. After the business of the meeting had been transacted, the brethren passed from labor to refreshment, and proceeding in a body to the residence of Mr Hugh McCallum, P. Master, sat down to a magnificent banquet prepared for the occasion. After partaking of the "good things of this life" a number of toasts were given and heartily responded to. At an early hour the brethren retired in that truly masonic style which characterizes the Truro masses—harmony and good order. Mrs. McCallum deserves the highest commendations for the handsome and tasty manner in which everything connected with the supper was arranged. It is a fact worthy of notice, and one that should be highly recommended by all good men and masons,—that this banquet was conducted on strictly temperance principles.

On Friday of last week Mr. William McCully, of this town, while out driving on the Halifax road, within a mile and a half of Truro, suddenly came across a huge bear quietly walking by the road side. This is, no doubt, the same bear that made such havoc among the sheep in that vicinity last year.

MOUNT UNIACKE GOLD DIGGINGS.

Tourists in passing through our Province from time to time cannot fail to notice the mushroom growth of our Gold Districts. Settlements once comparatively small, and containing but few inhabitants, have, at the sound of gold, rapidly sprang into large villages. Localities where nothing was heard save the melodious notes of the feathered songsters, and nothing seen but the tall spruce and the stately elm, have, upon the discovery of auriferous quartz, become perfect beehives and settlements of importance. Such was the character of the Mount Uniacke Diggings three years ago. Nothing but a dense forest was to be seen, containing no inhabitants but the wild animals. Since that period, however, a great change has taken place. The sweet notes of the little warblers, and the ring of the woodman's axe, have been succeeded by the harsh and coarse sound of the gold crusher. Hundreds now labor and live where once the wild animals roamed at large. On the 18th of June, 1865, Messrs. Dagiel McLatosh, John Simms, and Charles Simms, discovered auriferous quartz lodes in the forest on the estate of the late Hon. Richard J. Uniacke, about three miles north-east of the Mount Uniacke Station. These three parties erected a log shanty, which still stands as a memorial of the three discoverers of the Mount Uniacke Diggings. In December, 1865, two more houses were erected. The productive-ness of this district, however, was soon noised abroad, and in a short time a large tract of country was occupied under leases and prospecting licenses. The settlement is still increasing, large companies have been formed; many houses built; three crushers are in operation, and two others are in course of erection. Several small stores have been built, a large number of men employed, and the place now assumes quite a business aspect. The miners are chiefly natives of Noel, Pictou, Cape Breton and P. E. Island, with a sprinkling from other localities. The Presbyterian element largely predominates, and they are regularly supplied with preaching from this body. On the Lord's Day you will see a large number of robust looking young men and women assembled in their hall, listening attentively to the lessons of divine truth presented, and conducting themselves with decorum. There are a large number of children in the Diggings, consequently they have of late been formed into a School District, and have succeeded in obtaining the services of an efficient teacher. The Temperance cause also has some zealous advocates among them. A Division has been formed, which is now in good working order, and affords an instructive evening's entertainment to the miners. With commendable zeal (worthy of imitation) they presented a bold and determined front, and succeeded in routing King Alcohol, horse, foot and artillery, and banished him from the Diggings. The great desideratum now is a good road to the Railway Station.

Our revenue is being largely replenished every week from this locality, and it is but just and equitable that a sum of money should be granted in return, that this road may be rendered passable. Pedestrian, whether Unionists or Antis, would, we know, unanimously agree to a vote of thanks to the powers that be if they would only heed the complaints poured into their ears concerning this road.

For the Mirror.

MR. EDITOR:

Will you kindly give space in your valuable journal for the following production from the pen of my talented and highly accomplished daughter, Betsy Jane, who has just returned from attending a term at the Normal School, where in addition to the comprehensive and exhaustive course of study laid down for the students in that institution, she has enjoyed the scarcely less inestimable privilege of the companionship and conversation of the rising literary youth of your lovely village. Hence the glowing language and delightful imagery employed in the following sketch of her native hamlet. I have taken the liberty of appending a few notes to explain the meaning where I thought it might be somewhat obscure to some of your readers who have not enjoyed the same privileges of acquiring a correct taste for the beauties of our expressive language. "As the midday effulgence of that glorious luminary begins to wane, and he is slowly sinking to his home in the west, and the shadows begin to lengthen, I find myself seated on the upright shortened trunk of a once mighty denizen of the primeval forest. I allow my enraptured vision to gloat over the magnificent prospect spread out before me. Immediately around me lie the paternal acres which form the princely domain of my childhood's happy home, reclaimed from the "forest primeval" by the undaunted energy and unshrinking devotion of my noble father, sombre with the darkening tints imparted to the ancient monarchs of the forest by the combined influence of the fires of the ruthless invader and the elemental war waged with such pitiless pertinacity on these elevated "pampas" of the northern zone.

Occupying a high table-land on one of the spurs of the Cobequid Mountains, which here juts to the south of the direct course of these magnificent hills, the whole of the matchless panorama in the distance feasts my delighted eyes. To the right, far up in the blue ether, tower the gigantic forms of the Cobequid range, their hoary summits clad in everlasting snows, flashing and shimmering in the declining rays of the glorious orb of day, while along the base of the whole range, far as eye can reach, on this side of the Bay cluster smiling hamlets, where neat farm-houses are seen peeping from the sheltering embrace of groves and hedges of evergreens and forest trees; while from the head waters of the Bay (whose mountain waves are just discernible in the distance, tumultuously heaving and dashing along, bearing in their embrace, and carrying up the rivers and creeks, a fertilizing deposit more valuable than that left by the far-famed Nile in its periodical inundations) to the base of the mountains stretch vast and almost illimitable plains of inexhaustible fertility and matchless beauty, covered by an endless variety of gorgeous flowers, and as the evening zephyr comes softly stealing up the western slopes of my mountain home it bears along and wafts to my intoxicated senses a delicious perfume, redolent with the incense of flowers, eminently suggestive of 'Araby the Blest.' Turning my eye to the south and westward there suddenly burst upon my enchanted vision the palatial residences and countless spires of that pride and boast of the New Dominion—Truro—about which poets have sung and essayists given rein to their most delightful imagery in portraying its sylvan beauties, looking at this distance like a magnificent diamond in costly and antique setting, fit to shine as a favorite gem in the coronet of a mighty empire. Carried away by the glorious and magnificent prospect thus spread out before my dazzled senses in such illimitable profusion, I instinctively murmur: 'Oh! if there be an Elysium on earth it is this, it is this!' The deepening shades of twilight, hastened by the immense masses of vapor rolling and tumbling onward and upward in inextinguishable confusion from 'Fundy's' troubled waters in the depths below to the cooler regions of the mountain tops, together with the sounds of laborers returning from their daily toil, wara me to seek the shelter of my paternal roof-tree."

SCANDALOUS.—On Tuesday night last some miscreants at the dead hour of the night attempted to tear down the fence around the common; but either finding it too hard work, or warned of approaching danger, abandoned the attempt, after destroying eight or ten panels. Even those most opposed to the fence denounce the act as disgraceful.

A "leap year party" was given at Fortress Monroe the other week, to which each lady was privileged to invite two gentlemen. The ladies were particular in the arrangement of the gentlemen's dressing room, and provided full length mirrors, combs, brushes, hair-pins, pearl powder, perfume, rouge, and other articles presumed to be necessary to a gentleman's toilet. The ladies escorted the gentlemen to the ball and saw them safely home after the party.

Of all strong drinks, absinthe is the least palatable at first, the most subtle in its immediate effect, the most fascinating in its continued influence, the most absolute in the bondage it enforces, and the most fearful in its results. Yet with the common knowledge of all this before them, the people of France are finding in absinthe their deadliest foe, because most courted friend. The ravages of that cordial are increasing every year, and are seen in the growing lists of idiocy, lunacy, furious madness and suicide. In Paris they have been so infatuated with this poison that they form clubs, whose members are pledged to intoxicate themselves with nothing else—some, even, to drink no other liquid. The Government is said to have the matter in serious consideration.

The Railway Bridge at Windsor is to contain nine spans, five of which are 160 feet in length, the other four 64 feet; 1100 feet of girders will be required in its construction, and we are informed by competent judges that when completed it will rank in every respect next to the Victoria Bridge of Montreal, and will far surpass every other structure of the kind in British America. There are about 100 men employed on it at present.—Wesleyan.

SCARING THE CANADIAN.—Buffalo, May 27.—Last night a number of wars and canalmen, taking advantage of the scare in Canada over the rumored invasion of the Dominion during the great Fenian fair in this city, assembled on the river bank opposite to Fort Erie, Canada, and by marching, countermarching, and other evolutions, produced the most intense excitement among the Canadians. The Fenian fair is a great success. It is drawing large numbers of people from the surrounding country, and giving rise to many idle rumors.—Telegram to Boston Journal.

Thatcher, the New York weather prophet, says June will have more pleasant days than May—a safe prediction, for it could not well have been less—but that the three summer months will be showery. He promises three pleasant autumn months.

The St. John Globe says of the region round about St. John, "The rain, it raineth every day." Haligonians may console themselves that they are not alone in the endurance of rainy weather. The cities of St. John are enduring also. Nature treats both cities with equal justice, and shows no favour, except that in the case of Halifax we may alter the quotation and say, "the rain it raineth three or four times every day."

There is an individual in Detroit who proposes to sail over the Falls of Niagara in an Indian rubber life-boat. The shape of the boat, and the peculiar mode of its construction so as to make the operation a safe one, are fully described. Thirty thousand dollars is the price at which a man risks his life in this foolhardy experiment that can result in no good even if successful. If there is any law against suicide on either side of the Niagara, surely this is a case that ought to be looked after.

We feel it a duty to compliment the ladies a little on the new style of walking dresses. It is a great improvement upon the street sweeping trails and tilting hoops. When fashion does a sensible thing it certainly ought to have the credit of it. The spring style of dress is short, with very moderate expansion, and what is better, the waist is where it ought to be—where the waist of the wearer is. Now if fashion will give the ladies a reasonable bonnet they will be quite irresistible.

METHOD OF ASCERTAINING THE STATE OF THE LUNGS.—Persons desirous of ascertaining the true state of their lungs are directed to draw in as much breath as they conveniently can. They are then to count, as far as they are able, in a slow and audible voice, without drawing in more breath. The number of seconds they can continue counting must be carefully observed; in a consumptive the time does not exceed ten, and is frequently less than six seconds; in pleurisy and pneumonia it ranges from nine to four seconds. When the lungs are in a sound condition, the time will range as high as from twenty to thirty-five seconds.

SIENS.—When you see a young man and woman walking and leaning against each other like a pair of badly matched oxen it is a pretty good sign that they are bent on consolidation.

"McALPINE'S NOVA SCOTIA DIRECTORY" 1868-69.—Mr McAlpine is now in Halifax preparing for the next issue of the above work. The directory will appear about October next, and will, we understand, be much larger and on a more extensive scale than any former edition. Besides all the information already given in the book, it will also comprise a complete Business Directory of Toronto, Montreal and Quebec, St. John, New Brunswick, St. Johns, Newfoundland, and Charlottetown and Summerside, Prince Edward Island. It will also contain a great deal of valuable statistical, historical and geographical information in reference to Nova Scotia and other Provinces which we have named. As a work of reference, we believe it will be useful to business men generally, and as its circulation will under the circumstances, be nearly double what it has hitherto been, will render it positively one of the very best advertising mediums in the Dominion. Orders for advertisements have already been taken from most of the merchants, manufacturers, professional men and mechanics in the towns of Truro, Pictou, New Glasgow, Windsor, Bridgetown, Annapolis, Digby, and the smaller villages of the Province.

Valuable Family Medicine.

VEGETABLE PANACEA.

This valuable preparation has already been extensively circulated, and wherever it has been used it has met with entire approbation, and is now installed as the Family Medicine. None should be without it, for so sure and speedy a relief as it affords in all cases of violent pains, rheumatism, colic, coughs and colds, cannot elsewhere be found. Especially as a cure for rheumatism it has proved, when faithfully applied, infallible. Being purely vegetable, no deleterious effects need be feared. Try it, for a single bottle will do more to establish its character than a hundred testimonials; but if any doubt its value, certificates from many prominent citizens of St. John and other towns may be seen in the manufacturer's possession, who will gladly exhibit them. Retail price 25 cents per bottle. For sale by E. M. Pendleton, General Agent and Manufacturer for the Provinces, Portland, St. John, N. B., by Druggists generally, and at village stores. H. E. MRS. WINSLOW,

An experienced Nurse and Female Physician presents to the attention of mothers, her

Soothing Syrup,

FOR CHILDREN TEETHING,

which greatly facilitates the process of teething, by softening the gums, reducing all inflammation—will allay ALL PAIN and spasmodic action, and is

Sure to Regulate the Bowels

Depend upon it mothers, it will give rest to yourselves, and

Relief and Health to your Infants

We have put up and sold this article for over 30 years and can say in confidence and truth of it, what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—NEVER HAS IT FAILED IN A SINGLE INSTANCE TO PERFECTLY CURE, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak in terms of highest commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "what we do know," after 30 years experience, and pledge our reputation for the fulfillment of what we here declare. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

This valuable preparation is the prescription of one of the most EXPERIENCED and SKILLFUL NURSES in New England, and has been used with never failing success in

THOUSANDS OF CASES.

It not only eases the child from pain but invigorates the stomach and bowels, corrects acidity, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. It will almost instantly relieve Gripping in the Bowels, and Wind Colic, and overcome convulsions, which, if not speedily remedied, end in death. We believe it is the best and surest remedy in the world in all cases of Dysentery and Diarrhoea in children, whether it arises from teething or from any other cause. We would say to every mother who has a child suffering from any of the foregoing complaints—do not let your prejudices nor the prejudices of others stand between your suffering child and the relief that will be sure—yes, absolutely sure—to follow the use of this medicine, if timely used. Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, on the outside wrapper.

Sold by Druggists throughout the world. Principal office, No. 48 Dey-street, N. S. Price only 25 cents per bottle. sept 15

PIANOS! PIANOS!

M. E. C. SAFFERY, professor of Music, offers his services professionally, in the purchase and selection of new and second-hand instruments. There is so great a difference even in New Pianos, in point of tone and touch, that parties would be consulting their own interest in availing themselves of his professional experience remembering, that without due discrimination and judgment, you often pay more for a worthless instrument than a superior one would amount to verifying the old adage, "That you have paid too dear for your whistle;" therefore the fee of $4.00 is absolutely money saved.

PILLS.

INDIGESTION, COSTIVENESS, Billiousness, Dimness of Sight, JAUNDICE, FLATULENCY.

THESE PILLS are purely a vegetable compound carefully selected by medical skill and experience. Although mild in their operation, yet they will be found to be a most efficacious remedy for Indigestion, whether arising from indolence, sedentary occupation, or long continued residence in a confined or unwholesome atmosphere. Also for those innumerable diseases consequent on repeated indulgence in voluptuous living, excessive use of malt and spirituous liquors, likewise inattention and total neglect of an occasional required dose of medicine; to persons afflicted from any of these causes, the Pills are a speedy and certain cure. The action of these Pills will also not only purify, but completely correct, that unpleasant and feverish taste of the stomach, producing frequent eructations of sour, and acrid air, spasms, heartburn, &c.—subduing inflammation, correcting the morbid secretion of a too active or torpid state of the liver, they remove every unhealthy accumulation till the blood is purified, the whole system renovated, and all the functions act according to nature.
