CHAPTER VI.

"Yes," was the reply, "if you won't lecture me about making myself agreeable to Lord Ashcroft. One would think you were his dearest friend, judging from the manner in which you advocate his cause."

"I advocate your marriage with him, Xina. It is true; but we will drop the subject until evening. There comes the Lady Loreana."

He held up the drooping lace curtain as he spoke, welcoming the Lady Loreana with a pleasant smile, as if desirous of gaining her good opinion.

The day passed pleasantly to the various members of the family circle, friendly relations being established between the guests and their hosts, and the Lady Alexina appearing to excellent advantage, Lyle Indor quietly exerting all his tact to exhibit her best qualities.

The day had drawn to its close, and the moon arose, shrouding the wild scene with a strange, weird beauty. It was prominently a night to be spent in the open air, and so thought Ashcroft as he stood without the dwelling gazing with fascinating look upon the sublime picture spread before him.

"What a night to be out upon the sea," his lordship thought, "I should like a view of Egremont and its wall of cliffs from the sea."

The desire was scarcely conceived when he began the descent toward the boat-houses that were upon the beach below.

The boat-houses were locked, but the man in whose charge they were resided in a tiny ornamental cottage under the cliff, a few steps beyond, and Lord Ashcroft proceeded thither. His knock at the door was answered by an old weather-beaten individual who had evidently once been a sailor, and who yet retained the rolling gait peculiar to sailors.

Lord Ashcroft briefly explained to this personage who he was, and that he desired to obtain a view of Egremont from the sea.

"Certainly, my lord," responded the boat-keeper, respectfully. "I will take out a sailing-boat directly."

Taking down his tarpaulin from a peg on the wall, inside the door, he followed his lordship back to the boat-houses, unlocked one of them, and drew out and launched a stout little craft, which was rigged with a couple of sails.

It was a very pretty little pleasure-boat, undecked, and supplied with softly cushioned seats.

Lord Ashcroft took his seat at the farther end of the vessel, the boat-keeper pushed it off and followed, and then steered away from the shore.

"The breeze is right, my lord," said the man, as he put up the sails; "that is if you are not afraid of sea-sickness."

"I am not," responded his lordship, smiling. "I have a yacht of my own. I went to Norway in her last year. I am never sea-sick."

The sailor immediately conceived a great respect for his lordship, and became quite communicative with regard to his own affairs. He informed Lord Ashcroft that he was named Duncan Graham, that he had spent most of his life upon the sea, and that he was born, and expected to die, upon the estate of Egremont.

"There's no place in the world like it, my lord," he said, with a sigh. "Though it 'tain't so pleasant to me as in the days of the last earl—the Lady Alexina's father. We don't have so much boating now as we had then. If it wasn't for Mr. Indor, my lady's nevy, them boats 'ud never touch water, I do believe. My lord won't go on it on account of the curse of Egremont. He's afraid he'll get drowned, though I don't call drowning a violent death by any means. I've heern tell from them 'twas drowned, or nigh to it, that 'twas easy's winkin'. But there no accounting for notions."

Lord Ashcroft smiled at the words and the melancholy tone in which they were uttered.

The sailor was encouraged by this manifestation of interest, and continued:

"One of the lords of Egremont was drowned once, and his fate is a livin' warnin' to his successors. Not't I blame my lord, for when there's a curse on a family, there ain't no getting rid of it. My lady won't go 'bout him, and the Lady Alexina fairly hates the sight of the water—leastways her own maid says so. I know she never even-gets into a boat. So, if 'twasn't for Mr. Indor, there'd be no boatin' and Egremont might as well be set in a mountain away inland. He's a nice gentleman, my lord—so lively, and gay, and pleasant!"

In this manner Old Duncan chatted away, and Lord Ashcroft listened to him, knowing that in doing so he was making the sailor happy.

In the course of half an hour they had gained a sufficient distance, and Lord Ashcroft looked back upon the shore he had quitted.

The appearance of Egremont surpassed his expectations.

The cliffs rose abruptly from the sea like a mountain, with a perpendicular wall upon the water-side, and the mansion rested upon its summit like a crown.

In the moonlight the dwelling presented a fine effect, and being built of dark stone, was so blended with the rock on which it stood as to seem a part of it.

"Let us go nearer, my good man," said Lord Ashcroft. "Perhaps we shall hear some of the music, of which I think I can catch a faint murmur now. Do you hear anything like music?"

"No, my lord," replied the unimaginative sailor, after listening a few minutes. "Your lordship couldn't hear music from the drawing-room at this distance unless in summer, when the doors and windows would be open. Your lordship must have heard ghost-music."

"How? Ghost-music?"

"Yes, my lord. On clear nights the ghost of Egremont often appears at that window to the right of the two boarded ones. A great many of the fishermen have heard her sing old ballads, such as they used to sing a hundred years ago. I have heard her sing often, and I've seen her several times—"

"You have seen her ghostship, then?" asked the incredulous Lord Ashcroft.

"Yes, my lord, often."

"I thought the specter was simply talked of, and scarcely fancied that she was ever visible. How does she look, Duncan? Like a housemaid with a broom?"

"No, my lord. You think I saw some one else, and was scart into thinking it was the ghost; but it was not so. Did you ever see the picture of the Lady Jasmine in the great picture-gallery at Egremont?"

"No, I have not had that pleasure. To-morrow I will, perhaps. Lady Jasmine was the one whose tragic fate brought a curse upon the Egremonts, was she not?"

"I—I don't quite understand your lordship," responded the sailor, pondering upon the, to him, mysterious word "tragic." "The Lady Jasmine was murdered by her husband, if that's what your lordship means. He was jealous of her, and she was as innocent as an angel. She has always appeared since, as if she couldn't find rest in her grave. My grandfather saw her; my father saw her; and I've seen her, too."

"Strange illusion!" murmured his lordship.

"'Twasn't no delusion, my lord, begging your pardon. More than one fisherman's nearly scart to death by seeing her. 'Taint safe to go too near Egremont when she is seen. I've known of three boats being wrecked on these rocks yonder in rough weather, along of listening to her and looking at her."

"I must see or hear the specter before I believe in it," said Lord Ashcroft.

By this time the boat had drawn near to the cliff upon which the mansion was situated.

His lordship's last sentence had scarcely been uttered, when a strain of music, unearthly in its sweetness, floated over the waters.

Lord Ashcroft held his breath in astonishment and delight. It sounded again so sweet and unearthly, like the voice of an angel used to singing in celestial choirs.

The burden was a ballad of olden time of love and despair, and every tone thrilled with feeling, as if they came from the unknown singer's heart.

Old Duncan gave one triumphant glance at his lordship, delighted at the verification of his words, and then sank into silence, not wishing to break in upon Lord Ashcroft's enraptured stillness.

Still the music floated over the waters, and the boat rocked idly upon the gentle waves, and his lordship's soul swelled within him with a sense of intense satisfaction and enjoyment he had never before experienced.

The strange melody awakened within his soul a longing and yearning which he could not define, and which was destined to grow stronger and keener until the day when it should meet with full and complete fulfillment.

The strains died softly away—so softly that Lord Ashcroft hardly distinguished the period when it melted into silence.

He waited a few minutes in vain for the song to recommence, and then drew a long breath of disappointment.

"I think your lordship 'ill see her, if your lordship 'ill watch the window a few minutes," said Old Duncan. "She mostly appears after singing."

At another time Lord Ashcroft would have given an incredulous smile to this remark, but he was still under the spell of the mysterious music, and turned his gaze upon the window indicated by the sailor, half expecting to behold some one.

THE ONE-HAT WOMAN.

Men never can understand why it takes so long to buy things, what it is women do when they go shopping. Here's one explanation!

"I bought a hat time all the afternoon, but I think I got just what I want. My husband laughed at me when he found it took me so long, but I gave him an inkling why. He said he could buy six hats in that time and I said: 'Yes, so could I much more easily than I could buy one.' He said he'd like to know what I meant by that and I told him. You know what I meant, of course. It's this being a one-hat woman that takes the time."

Why It's Hard To Choose. She was right in thinking I knew. I am sure that is something that every woman knows.

Except the few who have never in their lives been one-hat women. For their sakes, and for the sakes of the masculine reader who may have honored me by his presence in this corner, I will explain.

A one-hat woman is a woman whose selection of a hat is greatly complicated by the fact that it is the only hat she expects to buy that season, wherefore she has to choose one that will do for several assorted varieties of occasions.

What That Hat Must Be. The hat must be suitable to wear down town shopping.

It must be dressy enough to wear the day she is toastmistress at the club luncheon.

It must be the hat that will go with her new bengaline dress and yet look all right with her last year's suit.

It must not be too delicate lest it will not wear the season out. It must have style. It must be becoming.

It mustn't cost more than $5, or $10, or $15, or whatever her limit of the money she can afford to spend for that item.

If she could buy half a dozen hats to go with the different dresses in her wardrobe and to wear on different occasions, she would doubtless find it a simple job compared to selecting that one hat that must be all things for all occasions.

True, a man buys one hat with ease but that isn't because he's any smarter. It's because one hat is suitable on a variety of occasions for which the well dressed woman really needs three or four hats.

Not For Next April. Another friend of mine expressed the one-hat woman's frequent state of mind very vividly when she said: "I was planning to buy my winter coat without fur on it and perhaps have a separate fur so that I could wear the coat in the summer, too. But I know that looks dowdy and I just made up my mind I'd have fur. I'm so tired of planning ahead. I'm going to buy this coat to look well now and not try to buy it to wear on a rainy day next April or to the fireworks next Fourth of July."

Which is a state of mind most every woman reaches some day. When she does, the keeper of the family pocket-book will do well to get ready for a lump.

Household Notes. Tomato sauce is nice served with string beans. Serve cranberry frappe with the game course. Serve prune soufflé with a thin vanilla custard. Chopped cooked prunes are delicious in nut bread. Serve lima beans in highly seasoned tomato sauce. When garnishing a roast fowl, keep the carver in mind. Strips of pimento make a nice garnish for asparagus salad.

Forty-Five Years in the Service of the Public—The Evening Telegram.

Vertical text on the right edge of the page, including "THE EVENING TELEGRAM" and other publication details.

Campana's Italian Balm

is a soothing, healing lotion for chapped hands, rough skin, sore lips and all chapping caused by wind or weather.

For over forty-five years it has been one of the most popular Canadian toilet articles.

It is also used as an application for burns and bruises. For those who do housework it is unexcelled to keep the hands soft and white.

If your druggist has not this in stock, you can purchase it from our wholesale agent, Mr. Chas. Jamieson, P.O. Box, 842, St. John's, Nfld.

A regular Canadian priced 15c. sample bottle will be mailed to any address on receipt of 10c.

Three of the Sirdar's Assailants Captured

Britain Requests Postponement of the Army Conference.—B. C. Will Punish Men and Women Drug Traffickers with the Lash.—Admiral Beatty's Resignation Denied.

SIRDAR SERIOUSLY WOUNDED.
CAIRO, Nov. 19. An attempt to assassinate Major-General Sir Lee Stack, Sirdar of the Egyptian Army, by means of a bomb followed up with a fusillade from revolvers just outside the Ministry of War to-day, resulted in the serious wounding of the Sirdar. His aide-de-camp, K. Campbell, the chauffeur of the Sirdar's motor car, and a policeman were also wounded. Only three men involved in the attack were captured.

BRITISH ATTITUDE NOT YET DEFINED.
LONDON, Nov. 19. It was stated in British official circles to-day that the British attitude toward the Geneva protocol on security and disarmament had not yet been defined by the new Baldwin Cabinet. The Government's request that action on the protocol be postponed until after the coming meeting of the League of Nations in Rome was made, it was stated, in order to give the Cabinet time to place the matter before the British Dominions and allow the new Ministers of Great Britain time to investigate the protocol as it will affect Great Britain.

MUST HAVE TIME.
GENEVA, Nov. 19. After a day of inquiry with telephone messages to Paris and London, officials of the League of Nations issued a warning to-night against drawing exaggerated inferences from Great Britain's request for postponement by the Council of the discussion of preparations for the proposed conference for the reduction of armaments. The officials insist that Great Britain merely means what she says in her note to the Secretary of the League, in which the request was made that the Rome meeting of the Council in December eliminate the disarmament questions from the agenda because owing to its recent accession to office the British Government has not had sufficient time to form an opinion on the protocol for the pacific settlement of international disputes. To deduce from this that Britain will scrap the protocol would be stupid, in the opinion of the officials. On the contrary they say information reaching the League is that Britain is likely to approve it, though with restraint, if accorded ample time. It is pointed out that nobody has really thought the disarmament conference would be held next June, because of the necessity of complete preliminary negotiations to insure success. It was learned to-day that no government has yet forwarded suggestions for the disarmament conference agenda, leading lack of time.

FIRE DURING ZERO WEATHER.
ST. JOHN, N.B., Nov. 19. A telephone message from Bathurst reports the superior school at West Bathurst gutted by fire this morning. There were 100 pupils in the building at the time and all got out in safety. The loss is placed at $10,000 and is covered by insurance. The mercury touched the zero mark at Bathurst this morning for the first time this season.

FRICION OVER WATER SUPPLY.
INDEPENDENCE, Calif., Nov. 19. Friction between two types of passive resistance incident to the seizure south of here of the Los Angeles Viaduct, threatens to plunge this part of California into civil war, County authorities said to-day. Since they diverted Los Angeles' chief source of water supply into Owen's Lake last Sunday, approximately 100 Owen's Valley ranchers have waited quietly and unarmed for a force to oust them. Los Angeles in turn has contented itself with court action. According to the authorities the ranchers are in no mood to give up their fight for settlement of the long feud against the city, which they claim is taking the water needed for irrigation, nor are they in a mood to guard the Ageduct Brook for ninety days while Los Angeles draws on water supplies impounded below the opened Spillway gates.

BEATTY NOT RESIGNING.
LONDON, Nov. 19. The Admiralty to-day stated that rumors of Admiral Beatty's early resignation as First Sea Lord were unfounded.

PORTUGUESE GOVERNMENT RESIGNS.
LISBON, Nov. 19. The government of Premier Gaspar resigned this afternoon, following a rejection by parliament to-day of a motion for a vote of confidence.

COMMANDER OF SPANISH FORCES KILLED.
MADRID, Nov. 19. A report from Morocco states that General Serrano, in command of Spanish forces battling with the Rifian tribesmen, and a Lieutenant Colonel whose name was not given, have been killed.

PREMIER MEETS COMMISSIONERS.
LONDON, Nov. 19. (Canadian Press Cable)—The meeting of the High Commissioners of the Dominions and Premier Stanley Baldwin, yesterday, when Lt.-Col. L. C. Amery, Colonial Secretary, and Austen Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary, were also in attendance, was quite informal gathering held over the teacups. Several matters affecting the Dominions naturally were talked over informally. As previously announced this was the first time a British Premier on entering office extended an invitation to the Dominion High Commissioners to meet him.

WRANGLER EXPEDITION RETURNS.
MOSCOW, Nov. 19. The Soviet expedition, which recently hoisted the Russian flag on Wrangel Island, returned here to-day. With the party was Charles Wells, a member of the Stefansson party, who has taken off the island with thirteen Eskimos. Wells has been assigned quarters in the Government Naval building under the Soviet Commissariat of Foreign Affairs. According to Soviet officials, Wells made a written statement in the presence of a British Consul that he left Wrangel Island of his own accord, and was entirely satisfied with his treatment during the voyage of the "Red October" to Vladivostok. When removed from the island, Wells had in his possession United States and British flags, not Canadian as was first reported. Commenting on the results of the Wrangel expedition Commander Davidoff said "The hoisting of the red flag on Wrangel is of the greatest importance to Soviet Russia."

JUGO SLAVIA MOBILIZES.
SOFIA, Nov. 19. The mobilization of the population along the Jugo Slavic frontier has been ordered in an effort to check armed insurgents of Bulgarian political refugees living in Serbian territory. All males over eighteen years of age have been ordered to respond instantly to the call to arms to repel raids from foreign territory.

BRAZIL REVOLUTIONARIES ACTIVE.
MONTEVIDEO, Nov. 19. A state of siege has been declared in the State of Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil, according to advices received here from the Brazil-Uruguay border. The rebel leader, Honorio Lemos in command of three regiments is advancing upon the town of Santa Anna de Livramento on the Uruguayan border. The dispatch adds the Government forces are said to have suffered a reverse at Dampdrifto.

Generation after Generation have proved its supreme efficacy in relief for the Coughs Colds Bronchitis Asthma etc. of ALL CLIMATES.

It terminates the efforts of Imperialists to seize the Island a base for airplanes flying from United States to Europe. The Island would have made an excellent aerial base because it possesses a natural plateau. Wrangel Island is of the greatest importance to Soviet Russia economically. It is very rich in furs, sea animals and fishes. Its forests are suitable for the establishment of deer breeding. It is not yet known whether it possesses rich minerals as geological specimens gathered by the expedition have not yet been examined scientifically.

WOMAN LEGISLATOR APPROVES OF LASH FOR WOMEN LAW-BREAKERS.
VICTORIA, B.C., Nov. 19. The flogging of women drug traffickers met with the approval of Mrs. Mary Ellen Smith, M.L.A., of Vancouver, who favored a resolution in the Legislature yesterday to authorize the lash for convicted drug traffickers. Asked whether she would have women flogged as well as men, Mrs. Smith said, "we can't make punishment too heavy for men and women too who traffic in narcotic drugs," adding, "I hold no brief for either sex. If a woman breaks the law, she should get the same punishment as the male law breaker." Women traffickers in narcotics can destroy the soul just as a man can, and they should be subjected to the same penalties mentioned in the resolution authorizing the lash if passed.

M. Coty, the head of many great perfume factories in France, experienced great difficulty in making his start toward success. When only a poor chemist he discovered a new mixture of unusual merit, but he peddled the process in vain to all the leading perfume makers.

Turned away from his first chance, he instantly decided upon an unusual plan of action. Just as he was leaving, he dropped on the floor a small unstoppered bottle containing his entire stock of the precious liquid. For a day he received a brief letter from the company. It said:

"We cannot longer refuse to help you. That illustrious perfumier made of this office a veritable paradise. Come and see us."

To this interesting incident M. Coty attributes his success. Those who look beneath the surface, will understand that the dropping of the bottle simply manifested an ability to think clearly, decide positively, and act immediately. In short, M. Coty possessed the qualifications for an executive.

Why not make your home, office or any place you may be working be also a veritable paradise. It's very hard to do this without you are enjoying good Health and Strength, and thousands of people are neglecting themselves every day by not being careful enough over their body. If you require perfect Health and Strength you will find nothing better to restore it than Berkley's Tablets. The proof of this being the very best preparation on the market is that by the end of this year the sale will be over Ten Thousand Bottles.

Relieving His Feeling

Shortly after two o'clock one morning a doctor drove four miles in answer to a telephone call. On his arrival the man who had summoned him said: "Doctor, I'm not in great pain, but somehow I have a feeling that the end is nigh."

The doctor felt his pulse and listened to his heart. "Have you made your will?" he asked at last.

"The man turned pale. "Oh, doctor, it can't be that!" he gasped.

"You had better telephone to a clergyman and wire for your people," continued the doctor.

"Oh, doctor, how long do you give me?" groaned the man.

"Well, there is nothing wrong with you, but I hate to think that I'm the only man you've made a fool of," explained the medical man.

Norris' Novel Transposed to Silver Screen

A photoplay which the Nickel Theatre management announces is out of the beaten track, dealing as it does with youthful faiths and fancies diverted by the grim touch of fate, is offered motion picture fans in "Lucretia Lombard," the screen adaptation of Kathleen Norris' "best seller," which captivated millions of readers by its unique treatment of the triangle.

The cast is headed by Irene Rich and Monte Blue, who are co-starred in this production. Both are remembered for their brilliant performances intelligent understanding and team work in "Brass." Each is gifted with sympathetic insight into the roles they are cast for, and their work in this picture is said to be no exception to their previous achievements.

It is the story of a woman who marries a man older than herself to gratify her mother's vanity and ambitions for a titled daughter. After seven years of loveless and forlorn marriage, death comes and frees Lucretia Lombard. She meets a family group composed of Judge Winship, his wife, his pretty ward, Mimi; his two sons, Fred and Stephen, the latter a district attorney. Mimi loves Stephen, but he merely harbors a secret affection for her. Stephen is irresistibly drawn to Lucretia, and she to him. But he marries Mimi suddenly, when his jealousy feeds on a chance conversation between Lucretia and Fred.

The scenes showing how fate takes the matter into her own hands, arranging, disarranging and finally rearranging matters, are said to be extremely dramatic and strong.

MUTT AND JEFF

JEFF, THIS TOUR OF THE UNITED STATES MAKES ME FEEL LIKE I'M A SHEIK! WHEN I GET BACK HOME I'LL GET WRITERS' CRAMP PENNING LOVE NOTES TO THE GIRLS I'VE MET!

AMN'T IT FUNNY THE WAY THE TALL BLONDES SWARM AROUND ME? I SURE HAD A MIFTY TIME IN BUFFALO!

AND WHEN THAT PLUMP BRUNETTE CALLED ME 'ANGELFACE' I WENT CRAZY AND ASKED HER TO HAVE A PEACH-MELBA FOR DESSERT! SEVENTY FIVE CENTS!

AND THEY WERE ALL SOUVENIR FRIENDS, TOO!

I'LL SAY THEY WERE. I GAVE AWAY MY POCKET KNIFE AND TWO NECKTIES!

THEY CUT OFF ALL THE BUTTONS FROM MY COAT! AND TWO OF THOSE BEAUTIES WOULD HAVE TAKEN THE PROPELLOR OFF OUR PLANE IF I HADN'T BEEN LOOKING! THEY INSISTED ON HAVING A SOUVENIR OF THE PLANE!

JEFF, THE BOAT ACTS QUEER! I CAN'T SEEM TO GUIDE IT! M-M-!??

FOR THE LOVE OF MIKE, MUTT—LOOK!

THOSE TWO GIRLS GOT OUR RUDDER!

THEY ENCOUNTER SOME SOUVENIR COLLECTING FRIENDS IN BUFFALO.

Emma Goldman is Now on Warpath
Against Soviets

NOTORIOUS AGITATOR SEEKING SHELTER IN ENGLAND, MAKES
IMPASSIONED SPEECH—SCORES
U.S.—EX-LABOR MINISTER
REGARDING "BRITISH ASYLUM."

LONDON, Nov. 13.—(Special Star Cable by J. E. Foote, Staff Correspondent).—British labor, especially the extremist wing which is so insistent upon Anglo-Russian friendship, is to-day aghast over the declarations by Emma Goldman, world noted anarchist, regarding the Soviet Government of Russia.

"Red Emma," addressing a meeting composed of many notable extremists in Britain, said in brief: "I have come to England to tell the truth about Russia as I saw it, and because I know it better than most people who are writing about it. I have come to speak for the oppressed masses in Russia who have been silenced under the heavy hand of Bolshevism as never under the rule of the Czars. I feel it my duty to reveal that terrible superstition about freedom in Russia today."

"I went all over Russia and saw thousands upon thousands of men and women and even children in the prison camps of Siberia and all over the country tortured and slowly dying because they dared to uphold an opinion. I have come to England to explode the preposterous superstition that the present Russian Government represents the workers of Russia. It does not."

"The party now in power in Russia has emasculated revolutionary Russia. I have come to tell England of the persecution in Russia of people who will not hitch their wagon to the red star of Bolshevism; and as long as I am permitted to remain in England I shall use my pen and power to emancipate the men and women of Russia from Bolshevism."

This ruthless condemnation of Sovietism by the lifelong archpriestess of anarchy dumfounded her pro-Soviet listeners and is certain to detach thousands of laborites from their present attitude that the Soviet can do no wrong.

LONDON, Nov. 13 — (Associated Press).—Emma Goldman, who was deported from the United States in 1919 as an undesirable alien and now seeks asylum in England, was welcomed by three hundred Britons to their country at a dinner given in her honor last night.

Miss Goldman spent a considerable part of her exile in Russia, and last night she excoriated Russia's Soviet Government. She also declared that if she ever went back to the United States it would be on her own terms. The oppressed masses in Russia, she said, were being silenced as they never were under the Czar and all ideals had been discredited by the ruling forces in that country. Bolshevism she characterized as "an international disease," and she promised to fight hereafter, wherever she might be, for the principles of liberty, which were the most essential things in human life.

The dinner at which she spoke was presided over by Col. Joshua Wedgwood, a member of the Cabinet in the late Labor Government, and tribute was paid to her in speeches by Bertrand Russell, pacifist, who called her "one of the foremost friends of freedom in the world," and Rebecca West, the writer, who praised her courage in "climbing down" after she had been disillusioned in her two year's stay in Russia.

"We are very grateful to America," remarked Miss West, "for the loan of Emma Goldman."

"A cable came to-night," said Miss Goldman, "from the head Immigration Commissioner of the United States which says I have been barred from the United States forever. Forever is a long time and it shows that the authorities in the United States are just as stupid as they were, when I left five years ago."

U.S. Bar.

"I have not made any attempt to return to America, but I have been approached more than once by representatives of the United States Government, as to whether I would like to go back to the United States on certain terms. They don't know Emma Goldman. If I go back to the United States, I will demand that all political deportees have a right to return there. If I ever go back to the United States it will be on my own terms. I think there is going to be a change in the United States, too, some day, just as there will be elsewhere. It may not be in my lifetime—but what difference does it make whether I go back or others. Some day it will be a noble place, where all will work for the good of their fellowmen. There will be real freedom, economic, social and humanitarian freedom, the most valuable thing in the world. What are privileges, if you do not have liberty?"

Miss Goldman began her speech by saying she had come to England seeking one of this country's traditional liberties—the right of asylum.

Dark Outlook.

Bertrand Russell held out little hope that she would receive it. He said that during the regime of the Conservative Government which preceded the Labor Government he had approached the Foreign Office, seeking asylum in England for Miss Goldman, but the Foreign Office "turned her down indignantly."

Miss Goldman asked her audience, in case she was expelled to make themselves heard sufficiently "to rescue the right of asylum from the clutches of the enemy."

Plain Language.

Then she continued: "I have come here to throw some light on Russia. I know the Russian situation better than most people who have written about it. I know the language. I spoke for two years with people, high and low, and I have come out to speak for the oppressed masses of Russia, silenced as they never were under the Czar."

"It is superstition that confuses the revolution with the ruling party of to-day; there are thousands in prisons and concentration camps in Russia, not for opposing the Government, but for opinions sake. To call the present Soviet Government a worker's experiment, is the most preposterous lie ever told. The party in power has emasculated the revolution. It is slowly undermining all that is best in Russia."

"My argument against the Bolsheviks is not that they have been too revolutionary, but that they are not revolutionary enough. The Russian Bolsheviks are the arch counter-revolutionaries of the world."

"For what is, revolutionary that does not hold high ideals. All ideals have been discredited in Russia. The time has come when silence on the Russian situation makes you a party to the crimes which are being committed there. Unless you understand the mistakes of Russia in the past seven years, it is likely there will be repetitions elsewhere."

"One hears remarks that the Communist party is so small in Great Britain. Remember, it does not require many people to destroy things, but it takes a good many people to build things up."

Executive Meeting Nfld. Poultry Association

An executive meeting of the Newfoundland Poultry Association took place in the Royal Bank Building last night, when all arrangements were finalized for the 12th Annual Poultry Show, which will take place in the C.L.B. Armoury next week. The committee decided to offer a Silver Cup to the competitor winning the most points on Pure Bred Nfld. dogs shown at the Exhibition. It was announced at this meeting that Sir John Crosbie had kindly donated a Silver Cup for the competitor gaining the largest number of points on "White Wyandottes." This is the second cup presented by Sir J. C. Crosbie, and the Association is grateful for his continued interest in promoting poultry culture. Three gentlemen from the city have undertaken to judge the exhibit of Nfld. dogs. A feature of the exhibit will be the show of Silver Foxes in the Gymnasium of the Armoury. Dr. Bishop, Veterinary Surgeon, is looking after the care of these animals. On Thursday night next the Association will hold a dinner at 8:30 P.M., when the guests of the evening will be Judge J. P. Landry, Prof. of Poultry Culture of the Canadian Government College, Truro; W. J. Walsh, M.F.A., Minister of Agriculture, and A. J. Bayly, Secretary. Entries for the Poultry Show will remain open until Saturday. Amongst the entries in the dog show to date are: H. McDonald, Beaumont Street, and Frank Turner, Southside. The Silver Cups are now on exhibition in the store window of Messrs. T. J. Duley & Co., Water Street. The annual exhibition opens on the 25th, and promises to be a great success.

Murdered by a Ring

Rings have been associated with many things, both happy and sinister. It was common in Roman times, and not by any means unknown in the Middle Ages, to make a ring the instrument of death. To carry enough poison in a hollow ring to destroy an intended victim was one of the recognized devices of crime.

The signet ring is extremely ancient, being found in Egyptian tombs and among Roman deposits. They were more especially useful when writing was the talent of scribes only, and when the only distinctive mark most men, even kings and nobles, could make was the impression of the signet ring on clay or wax. The signet ring largely lost its usefulness when the adhesive flap of the envelope almost entirely superseded sealing-wax.

The plain gold hoop, which we call a wedding ring, is an imitation of the Roman sign of betrothal. For many years it was customary in this country to inscribe a motto or "posy" within this gold hoop. The following was specimen sentiment: "Our contract was heaven's act." In those, my choice, I do rejoice. "God above, increase our love."

Rings are seldom worn on the thumb to-day, but in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries the thumb was the fashionable "ring-finger."

Forty-Five Years in the Service of the Public—The Evening Telegram.

Supreme Court.

(Before Mr. Justice Kent).

King vs. Leonard Gillespie Reid—Before a Special Jury.

(Yesterday Afternoon).

Yesterday, after recess Mr. Silverlock, the technical expert, resumed the stand for a continuation of his cross-examination. Mr. Emerson suggested that it would be rather late afterwards for the jury to visit the locus, that the cross-examination be concluded after their return. Counsel for Defence consented. The Court agreed and intimated that the jury would not be allowed the assistance of witnesses, or Counsel, and that they were to form their opinions from their own observations. Recess was taken until 4.30 p.m.

After the jury returned to court, Mr. Silverlock again took the witness stand and was re-examined by Mr. Bradley. Asked the size of the tree the car hit, witness said it was about 8 inches in diameter.

Cross-examination by Mr. Emerson resumed, witness said the car must have been going at least 50 miles per hour when it hit the stump. He could not tell the speed it was going when the brakes were applied somewhat further west. Witness was inclined to think that the four wheels were off the ground for the 24 feet distant from the stump and probably the right front wheel was in the air for a distance of 49 feet. Witness could not tell what height the car went in the air to remain off the ground for that distance. As a matter of mechanics he would say she rose high at the stump and then gradually lowered as she approached the part where the wheel marks were again visible. He could not say what happened to the passengers when the car hit the stump. The effect on a car going at 30 miles per hour speed would be that the front raises, then the rear and then passengers get a jerk. It sometimes happens that when going very fast the shock is less than when the car is going moderately. Witness thought that the mark on the right front wheel was evidence of great speed. If there were marks east of the stumps, the witness would say the car was going slower than he had stated.

Re-examined by Mr. Bradley. Witness said he examined the rear end of the stumps on the morning of the occurrence between a quarter past ten and eleven. At a point twenty-five feet east of the stumps he found tracks showing the grass pressed down. (Mr. Howley objects, but witness was allowed to proceed). He was quite sure that the marks were there. Witness could not state definitely what happened to the front right tire when it went in between the stumps. The tire might be forced a little to one side. If it were forced towards the south it would expose the rim to the stump. When a car skids the strain would come on the tires and if she was sheering out at the back the rear tires would get the most strain. Assuming that the car struck the stump and went in the air, she would follow the line in the direction which she was going. The force with which she strikes the ground would be caused by gravity and the momentum forward would not add much to the effect. If the car would plump down there would be a great jar. Witness thought that he was the south side stump that hit the gasoline tank. It struck the other stump a glancing blow. The stumps were brushed in the direction the car was going. They were spalled up and knocked somewhat to one side. Witness thought that the tire would be compressed after striking. In answer to the Court, witness explained the operation of the foot brakes. He thought that the brake was not adjusted when it operated on the one side and not on the other. In reference to the springs he said they had a slight curve up and before the body had hit the brake drums the springs had to take a curve the other way. There were marks of the springs on the body of the car.

Mr. Hunt announced that the crown case concluded.

Mr. Howley stated that the Defence was prepared to begin and asked for an order that the right front wheel of Reid's car and the bumper be brought into Court as evidence. Mr. Howley further asked that the removal be done by a mechanic not connected with the case.

Mr. Hunt suggested that the car be brought down to the Court or else that the jury could be brought to the barn. The Court thought that it would be best to have the car moved to the Court House and issued the order accordingly.

The Court arose at 5.35 p.m. (This Morning's Proceedings).

Court opened at 10 o'clock this morning for the fourth day of the trial. Mr. Silverlock was again put on the stand and examined by Mr. Justice Kent. He said that the car with 8 passengers in it should stop within the space of 45 feet if the brakes were working, and, assuming a car was going at 20 miles an hour, if the wheels were skidding, the car would travel a little faster as the whole braking effect is in line with the road. Witness thought that going at 30 miles the car should go 90 feet, and at 40 miles per hour with service brake on 140 feet. One with the brakes in the condition they are, the car at 40 miles would carry 400 feet and at 50 miles about 700 feet. Witness said that the neutral position of the gear occurred after the car stopped, it could not happen and propel the car.

Mr. Bradley re-examined the witness on some technical points in connection with the mechanism of the Reid car. In the Reid car with the brakes as they were, going at 20 miles per hour, she would go 70 or 80 feet. With both brakes applied she would pull up quicker. If both brakes were efficient, the car would have stopped within 40 feet. The service brake should go to the point of locking the wheels. When the skidding point is reached the braking power is at its utmost limit.

Re-cross-examined by Mr. Howley. Witness said that out of gear and in neutral is the same thing—that is the driving force is disconnected, and in reference to the brakes he said that if one brake operates as much force would be applied as if there were 50 brakes put on. At this point Mr. Emerson opened the case for the defence by addressing the jury. He asked that they sit carefully all the theories put forward before coming to their conclusion. In this connection he stated that there was quite a difference in the accounts given by the witnesses, especially in reference to the bus. There were two classes of witnesses called, and only four of these were able to speak with authority on the speed of the car. One of these said it was impossible to state the speed. The second witness said it took 20 seconds to go three hundred yards. Both Sleator and Mellor said that at no time was the car going at a dangerous speed. The point where King's body was found is a fixed point in the case, and the defence would prove that his body was not thrown forward but was glanced off the car. Mr. Emerson claimed that the Crown had submitted no evidence of speed.

The first witness called was Dr. Keegan of the General Hospital.

Examined by Mr. Howley, witness said he had been over 30 years practicing in St. John's and was for nearly 18 years at the hospital. He is president of the Medical Society which was established about three years. Asked if he could say what was wrong with a person without a physical examination, he said it would be impossible. The dazed and depressed condition of Reid might indicate disease, partial coma, drugs, shock, or some mental condition. He would attribute Reid's condition to shock. He explained that shock is a condition where the function of the body or brain becomes more or less stopped. The heavy eyes and general unconcern of Reid would be correct under the heading of shock. When a body was thrown by a sudden direct blow 30 or 40 feet, and if the part of the body hit was the right thigh, depending on the weight and motion of the car, he thought the body could not be thrown 40 or 50 feet by a direct blow without breaking some of the bones in the part that was struck. In the case of King he judged it was a slanting blow and would knock the body sideways to the opposite side of the point of impact.

Cross-examined by Mr. Hunt—Witness could not agree that a doctor who is on the spot and sees a patient has any advantage on one who has the symptoms described, and in the matter of a dazed look, it was a dazed look and could be nothing more. He did not think that there could be any difference in a dazed look whether caused by drugs, gas or paralysis. One can be more or less dazed and there is no difference of heaviness of eyes but more than mere heaviness may be detected in the optic by a trained man. There are differences as to being unconcerned. He believed that medical men like Doctors Anderson and Parsons from looking at the general condition could give their opinion as to the condition existing.

The witness gave some evidence re the anatomy of the body, and deposed how the thigh bone is one of the best protected, and he did not think that an indirect blow would fracture it. The momentum with which it is hit that matters, and if a body were thrown forty feet the bone should be broken. It would not require a severe blow to break a man's neck, and it is not necessary that the neck or car that struck them should be fast moving if two bodies were found with their necks broken and death had been instantaneous. It is possible for one neck to go back suddenly so that it would be broken. Witness doubted if a body could be thrown 30 feet by a direct blow and not have the thigh broken.

Leonard Reid (examined by Mr. Howley)—Witness gave his age as 24 years. He has been driving a car for the past ten years. Prior to driving a motor car he drove a motor cycle. He was a despatch rider at Pleasantville when the Mtd. Regiment was training there. After his discharge from the Regiment he remained in Canada until last July. The car he drove on the night of the accident was bought by himself in Montreal. It is a Stutz, 1918 model. He had it overhauled when he purchased it and was told by the mechanic that it had gone about 25,000 miles. Witness used the car motoring on his honeymoon, and since the car was purchased by him he has done about 5,000 miles. On the 15th Sept. the car was in pretty good shape, but it had lost quite a bit of its power and was noisy. The springs are the same as were on the car when it was made, but they had been considerably weakened, and if there was a crowd in the car it would come down and be uncomfortable for those riding. Witness thought the maximum speed was not over 35 miles per hour, except perhaps when going down a steep hill. The brakes were in good condition. The evening of the accident he came down over Prescott Street, using the foot brake, and found it working well. Witness gave an account of a slight accident to the car which happened in August when the mud guard was damaged and the back of the body was dented. Witness said he could identify the dent and point it out to the jury. Witness left the King's Wharf about 7 o'clock to go to Topsail. He stopped on the way for a spare tire and then went on. After leaving McKinlay's garage the car stuck in second gear, but after striking a bump the lever slipped into third and he drove to Topsail in that gear. They arrived at Hollands at 8 o'clock. Before dinner the party had a cocktail. The dinner was prolonged owing to there being only one waiter. Witness said he had a glass of sherry and soup and then a small whisky and soda, a glass of port and a small whisky and soda before he left. The last drink was so noticeably small that Clouston commented on it. The party left Hollands at 11 p.m. Asked to name those in the car, witness broke into tears and complained that he did not feel well. After a moment or so he resumed and told of going first towards Manuels and then turning to come to town. The car again stuck in second gear, and after running about a mile he stopped and got under the car and effected some adjustment. Then the car was put into first gear again but stuck. He ran up Topsail Hill and near the Octagon the car got boiling hot. Witness said he was perfectly sober all the while and was able to attend to his car. It was the running in second gear that caused the water to boil in the radiator. Witness sat in his car as another came along and stopped. Witness asked where he could get water and was directed to some houses. He went to one house, got the water and filled the radiator. He got under the car to again adjust the gear when another car passed. It was Pezignow. The driver stopped and asked if help was wanted. Witness said no, and the car went on. Witness said it would be very hard to say accurately what speed he travelled that night, but he thought that he went down grade at 30 and up grade at 20 miles, and between the two rates on the level. About three or four hundred yards this side of the Octagon he passed a car and continuing on towards Donovan's he saw the tail light of a car. He was in the middle of the road going about 30 miles. He first thought it was a moving car proceeding in the same direction as he was going. He was about the western end of Donovan's white fence when he discovered that the car was not moving. He slowed down then and pulled to the right side and coasted down the incline at about 25 miles. Witness saw the three windows lit up and knew it was the bus. The precaution he had in mind in slowing down was that there might be people walking about or getting in or out of the bus. The night was clear with a moon shining from the direction in which he was driving. Witness did not think that the moonlight affected his seeing. As far as he knew there was no object on the road until he approached the bus. After passing the bus he took his foot off the brake pedal and then put it on the accelerator to increase the speed. He just saw three men in front of his car slowly about 20 feet off. He stood on the foot brake and slammed it down. Two of the men he thought must have jumped. There was not room enough for a car to pass between either of the men of the party. Witness did not see the man jump. He pulled the car to the right to clear the man which appeared at the head of the left midguard. Witness knew he hit the man but did not see him, nor did he know that he

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.
Five men and two women, the entire crew of the three masted schooner Susan B., which sank yesterday off the Virginia Capes, were rescued by the ocean steamship liner City of Atlanta, a radio message to the company's offices said to-day. The survivors were found in an open boat almost unconscious from exposure several hours after their vessel had gone down. According to the message the City of Atlanta sailed from Savannah Tuesday and is due at Boston Friday. Shipping records give the Susan B. home port as Providence, R.I. She left Philadelphia Nov. 9 and was last reported three days ago to have sailed from Norfolk, Va., bound for Stephen, N.B.

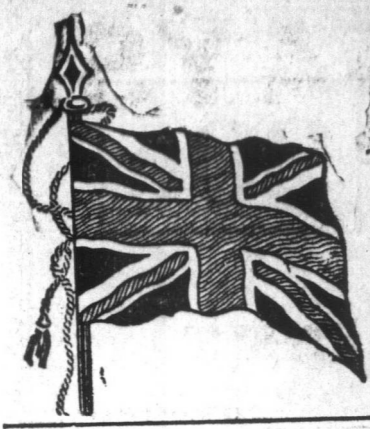

LONDON, Nov. 20.
The attempt in Cairo upon the life of Sir Lee Stack, Sirdar of the Egyptian army has aroused great indignation here and most of the morning newspapers comment very severely, demanding the government take prompt and decisive action.

The Passing of A Great Man

The announcement of the sudden demise of His Eminence Cardinal Logue, will be read everywhere with profound regret. Although he had reached the great age of eighty-four, there was apparently nothing to indicate that the end was near, and his passing came as a shock not only to the people whom he had served faithfully for so many years but to the whole world.

Cardinal Logue was consecrated Bishop of Raphoe in 1879. In 1887 he became Primate of all Ireland, after having been coadjutor to his predecessor for less than a year. Six years later, a Cardinalate, the highest honour in the gift of the Pope, was conferred upon him.

The universal respect which the aged Prelate won by his wise and statesmanlike administration during the trying and anxious days through which Ireland passed, and from which she emerged triumphant largely through his guidance, was ample testimony of the wisdom of the choice for such a high office, and of his right to be regarded as one of the most prominent figures of the day both in Church and State. While Ireland is bereaved by the passing of a friend and counselor, the world is the poorer for the loss of a great man.

The Egyptian Outrage

While the blame for attempts against the lives of officials acting as representatives of another country cannot in most cases be laid at the door of the recognized authorities, such outrages only too often lead to strained relations, and on more than one occasion have provoked a conflict. The dastardly attack on the Sirdar, Sir Lee Stack, is probably the work of a few demoted individuals, but it cannot be overlooked that the unsettled state of affairs in Egypt, and the demands which have been recently made by its rulers have raised a host of difficulties and this latest outrage on Great Britain's representative tends to lead to a serious situation.

The Egyptians during the last few years have been given practically full authority to govern themselves, and encouraged by this generosity, and possibly by what they considered to be weakness on the part of the late Government, they have made demands for full control of the Suez Canal and the Soudan. The former is Britain's high road to her eastern possessions, and the latter was won only after a bitter struggle and by heroism, the history of which is written in letters of gold. To expect people of British blood willingly to part with such a heritage is to expect the impossible, and neither threats nor acts of violence are likely to change their attitude. The Baldwin Government is faced with a difficult problem, but the stability of the present party is the best assurance that it will be tackled promptly and effectively.

Miss Mews Scores a Great Success

The College Hall was filled to its capacity last night when Miss Eleanor Mews, L.T.C.M. scored a great success in her Song Recital. From the moment of her first appearance in Italian costume, until she gracefully acknowledged the last demands for encores, Miss Mews captivated the house by her delightful singing, her faultless expression and interpretation, and by her versatility.

The programme consisted of a selection of Italian, French, Russian, Chinese and English airs and in each part of it the talented artist appeared in a costume which was as appropriate to it as she was to the part. It would be indeed difficult to say in which she scored her greatest success. The old Italian airs were rendered with touching pathos; as a French peasant girl, she was in turn vivacious, piquant or emotional; in the chanty of the Russian riverman, she gave full expression to his misery and depression, and the impassioned appeal in "The Czar's Bride" was faultlessly interpreted.

The Chinese songs perhaps gave Miss Mews the fullest opportunity to display her histrionic talent and at the same time to delight the audience, but the simple English songs which concluded the programme, one of which was Home Sweet Home, had the strongest appeal and won her an ovation.

The introductory preludes were played by Mr. Alex W. Mews, Cellist and Mrs. Alex Mews, Pianist, and the applause which followed each selection was sufficient to indicate how thoroughly they were enjoyed. Mr. H. Gordon Christian accompanied Miss Mews throughout the programme in his usual faultless manner. His Excellency the Governor, under whose distinguished patronage the Recital was held, was present, accompanied by Lady and Miss Allardyce.

Mrs. Mews and Miss Eleanor Mews were both presented with bouquets at the close.

It is to be hoped that before long the music loving public will be permitted to hear this Recital repeated.

S. U. F. Grand Lodge

Yesterday the S. U. F. Grand Lodge met at the usual hour and proceeded to business. Messages of Fraternal Greetings were received from the following:—

R. W. Miffin, Catalina; Ernest Laing, Winterton; Bonavista Lodge; No. 2 D. G. Lodge; Maple Leaf Lodge, Sydney; Caribou Lodge, Catalina; No. 6 Lodge, Heart's Delight.

At last night's session the remaining paragraphs of the constitution were considered and duly passed after which the election of officers took place and resulted as follows:—

Grand Look-Out:—Comp. Walter Rendell, re-elected.
Supreme Grand Master:—Comp. Geo. House, elected.
Deputy Grand Master:—Comp. Geo. Langmead, elected.
Grand Chaplain:—Comp. Rev. A. Tulk, re-elected.
Grand Chief Officer:—Comp. William Murgford, re-elected.
Grand Second Officer:—Comp. William Legge, re-elected.
Grand Quartermaster:—Comp. Wm. Foote, re-elected.
Grand Pursuer:—Comp. Robert Ledrew, elected.
Grand Secretary:—Comp. J. G. Hodder, elected.

Many of the delegates are leaving by to-day's express and among them are our visitors from Nova Scotia. We are delighted to have had them with us and regret their stay has been so short. They contributed very considerably to the various debates during the session and it is the unanimous wish of the Grand Lodge to have them with us at the next session.

One of the delegates C. F. Gardner is by the way a relation of the Founder of the Order, the late Revd. Geo. Gardner and it would appear that the mantle of the uncle has fallen upon his nephew. Being pioneers of the Order in the land of the Maple Leaf, they are naturally very interested in its welfare and extension and we wish them a pleasant return to their homes and every success in their undertaking.

Supreme Court.

REX vs. J. T. MEANEY.

The hearing of the case began this morning at 10 o'clock before His Lordship the Chief Justice.

Mr. H. A. Winter and Mr. S. Foote represented the crown. Mr. C. J. Fox, Messrs. Knight and Knight represented the accused.

The following were selected by the court to act as jurors during the trial:—Jas. S. Power, Wm. Meehan, Chas. Wadden, Thos. Lawlor, J. D. O'Driscoll, Fr. Knight, J. J. Strange, Wm. Fanning, Alan Calk, Wm. Bowman, Frank Fenney, Wm. J. Oakley.

Mr. Winter gave notice that count seven against the prisoner had been withdrawn by the Crown, counts 3, 4 and 7 now being taken out. The charges against the prisoner were then read to the jury as follows:—

That: (1) John T. Meaney on the 15th day of June, 1923 at St. John's in the electoral district of St. John's East, being employed in the public service of His Majesty the King, stole $147,042.76, the property of His Majesty the King, received by the said J. T. Meaney by virtue of his employment.

(2) John T. Meaney on the 15th day of June, 1923, at St. John's in the electoral district of St. John's East being employed in the public service of His Majesty the King stole alcoholic liquors of the value of $147,042.76, the property of the King by the said J. T. Meaney by virtue of his employment.

(3) John T. Meaney on the 15th day of June, 1923, at St. John's in the electoral district of St. John's East, being employed in the public service of His Majesty the King, fraudulently disposed of alcoholic liquors entrusted to the said J. T. Meaney by virtue of his employment for purposes other than the public service.

(4) John T. Meaney on the 15th day of June, 1923, at St. John's in the electoral district of St. John's East being employed in the public service of His Majesty the King, fraudulently applied the sum of $147,042.76 entrusted to the said J. T. Meaney by virtue of his employment for purposes other than the public service.

Mr. Winter opened the case for the crown with an address relative to the charges, which he pointed out, were in three sections. The prisoner, he said, was charged with the larceny of money or liquor, and of fraudulently disposing of goods the property of the King. He outlined the task the jury had before them in giving their attention and warned them that their opinions had to be formed from the evidence produced in court and from no ulterior facts.

Mr. Winter placed the case for the crown in outline before the jury, pointing out that the Liquor Department was short in its accounts to the extent of $147,000 approximately, and that the prisoner also was accused of taking liquors from the department to the extent of over $147,000 and that he was again charged with fraudulently disposing of this liquor.

Mr. Winter explained the meaning of the charges to the jury and emphasized the fact that while the prisoner was charged with larceny, or unlawfully taking money and goods from the office over which he had control that charge could possibly be proved to be embezzlement. Before concluding he defined at length the meaning of the various forms of these offenses.

The first witness called by the crown was Jas. Holden of the Controller's Department.

Jas. Holden, sworn. He was storekeeper at the Department for about three years. He was assistant to the late Mr. Christopher and succeeded him in July, 1921. His work consisted of reducing liquor and of filling express orders. Whiskey, rum, brandy, wine and liquors were kept in bond store next to the department's retail store. Witness when removing liquor from bond always sent a list of the quantities taken out, to Miss Power who was accountant. He merely kept a list in a book of his own in order to be sure to furnish the same to the accountant. (The book placed in evidence.) Witness could not say that the book was complete but was sure the contents were correct.

Counsel for the defence objected to the books kept by Mr. Holden being put in, as they were not books of the department, but merely books used for his own convenience.

Mr. Winter pointed out that though the books contained only casual records made by the witness in checking the liquor handled at the Liquor Department, they were correct as far as they went. He contended that the books should not be included in evidence.

Witness could not say the amount of liquor received between July 1st, 1921, to July 1st, 1923. He had nothing to do with the stocks of liquor beyond that he checked each quantity as it came out of bond, by entering the amount in the books. The total amount taken out could be ascertained by adding the books were correct as far as they went. Witness kept books except when on a vacation, when V. Power kept them. All liquor but rum came in bottles, and all except rum went out as it came in. Rum was diluted in the proportions of 28 gals. of water to 50 gals. of rum. In some cases less water was used. The mixture was then bottled and sold. Witness had nothing to do with the selling of the liquor. Witness also had the handling of liquor to be sent by rail to the outports. He filled orders entered by Mr. Grant in the Order Book. Witness was employed in filling orders of more than five bottles. He had no work in connection with the script system. Some of the orders filled for the outports went as high as hundreds of bottles. Witness could not say whether they went to individuals or Drug Stores.

Cross-examined by Mr. Fox, witness explained that when checking the liquor taken from bond, he sometimes sent his slip to Miss Power in the office first or on other occasions he entered the amount in his books or even left it until the next day to enter. All the entries in the books were not made by him.

Re-examined by Mr. Winter, witness said stock taking was never done by him nor was there any stock taking during the time referred to. Witness said large quantities of liquor went out by him were packed in boxes and barrels, and sent frequently to different parts of the Island.

Vincent Power, sworn. He was employed as assistant storekeeper at the Controller's, and has been employed there for five years. He worked with both Messrs. Christopher and Holden. He handled liquor in the bond store, but only kept records when Holden was away. Holden kept check on the quantities of liquor taken from bond in a book. He did that work when Holden was absent. Witness could not say that the books were kept correct, but his work in them was correct.

Witness also assisted at diluting the rum. Generally this was done in the proportions of 28 gals. of water to 50 gals. of rum. The liquor was then bottled and sent out for sale. The quantity of liquor was entered in the book in gallons or fluid measure. Witness also made up parcels of liquor, only in small quantity, such as from one to four or five bottles.

Cross-examined by Mr. Fox, witness was asked to identify entries made by him in Holden's books. He did so. He recognized only his own and Mr. Holden's handwriting. Witness did not know what quantity of rum came in each purchase.

Wm. Grant, sworn. Was foreman at the Controller's for nearly eight years. He served under the Controllership of Mr. Meaney. He had no special duties at the department. He had charge of the other employees, and superintended the sales department. He was occupied with whatever work that had to be done. He filled doctor's prescriptions. When a man bought a bottle the money was put in the cash register, and the script put through the sheets, and in the evening Miss Power took charge of the cash. Check was kept by the register and the sheets. They always corresponded, and the cash was always kept straight. As far as witness knew Miss Power took the money and deposited it at the Bank of Montreal. Prices were fixed by the Accountant and handed to the witness. No records were kept of prices by him. The office might have done so. Witness gave prices from 1921 to 1923 as $3.00, $3.50 and $4.00 for whiskey.

Rum was always $1.50 and $2.00 a bottle. Two grades of rum were kept. One was twenty per cent. under proof and the other at proof. The $2.00 rum was strong and used for manufacturing purposes. $1.50 rum was 20 per cent. under proof. Liquor was also sent out on orders from Mr. Meaney. An order was necessary, and when filled the order was returned to Mr. Meaney. No records were kept of these orders. Liquor was worth up to $300.00 worth. Liquor brought by order was sometimes paid for, and sometimes the money for the liquor was not paid to him. Money received in this manner was handed direct to Mr. Meaney, and no records were around the store regularly. There never was any stock taking, or any check kept on loss. Frequently cases received at the Department were found to have been opened somewhere en route and in many cases, bottles were missing or found to contain water. This loss was considerable but witness could not say it amounted to $10,000 per year. Witness was of the opinion there could be no leakage of liquor got by sale of liquor over the counter. There were three checks kept in the case of each sale.

Cross-examined by Mr. Fox, Witness said prices quoted always varied from time to time. There was no stock taking during Mr. Devereaux's time, or since. Regarding the loss of whiskey from cases, witness said he saw one case with only one bottle in it, and in regard to rum he often saw puncheons only half full when received, and frequently with several gallons short. Liquor was taken from bond into the Department. Witness never knew of any liquor going out from the Bond Store direct. Liquor was also kept upstairs near the offices.

tents. Witness knew of whiskey being taken from that room by pillferers. A price list of liquor was put in evidence quoting the various brands at figures which the witness said was correct. Prices always remained uniform during the period mentioned before. The prices of the different brands varied. F. Berban, sworn and examined by Mr. Winter said he was at present an accountant and deputy to the present Controller. He began work July 3rd, 1923. Mr. Meaney was there then and shortly after he handed over the keys. Witness was put in the office by the Minister of Finance as Acting Controller. That continued until August when Captain Bonis took over the controllership. Liquor was, at that time, sold against scripts over the counter. Miss Power kept the cash until she left. Witness then took charge of the cash. Scripts when received, were put through the cash register, and then passed to a clerk who registered the amount paid and the names on sheets. This system was changed later, but there was no alteration made until after Miss Power left. These accounts made from the scripts onto sheets were kept in a binder in the office. Some days, there were as many as 12 sheets used. Cash was deposited and amounts entered in the cash book.

The court took recess until 2.30 p.m.

HENNEBURY-MAYO.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Thomas' Church on Saturday last, when Miss Olive M. Hennebury was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. John Mayo, of this city. Rev. J. B. Elliott officiated. The nuptial knot was tied in the presence of relatives and friends of the contracting parties. The bride wore a gown of white silk and carried a wreath of orange blossoms, and entered the church leaning on the arm of her uncle, Mr. Robert Horwood. She was attended by her sister Miss Susan Hennebury, while the groom was ably supported by his brother Robert. After the ceremony the happy couple motored to the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hennebury, where a reception was held. The bride was the recipient of many useful and valuable presents. The Telegram joins in extending to Mr. and Mrs. Mayo many years of wedded bliss.

Monte Blanco Sails

The Italian steamer Monte Blanco which arrived in port about three weeks ago in a disabled condition had her repairs completed at the Dry Dock this morning, and sailed for North Sydney at 1 p.m. Before the ship sailed the four German stokers and a Spaniard were brought up from the Penitentiary and placed in irons on board. The above men it will be remembered assaulted the 2nd officer and Chief Engineer about a week ago.

ARRIVED AT LAST

by Montreal boat, a shipment consisting of nearly two thousand bottles of

Bricks Tasteless

Have same quantity following next week, and double the quantity the week after, making a total of over

7,000 Bottles

which will be here before the end of November.

BRICK'S TASTELESS is evidently come to stay, it is not one of those "come to-day and gone to-morrow" Patent Medicines. It is a good reliable tonic that does its work every time and people who have taken it always take it again when they need a good TONIC and BUILDER.

Dr. F. Stafford & Son

(Sole Agents for Newfoundland).

NOTE TO DEALERS—Owing to the manufacturers of Brick's Tasteless having some difficulty in getting their supply of empty bottles in time, they were unable to make shipment to us till this week. The shipment just in will hardly be sufficient to fill all the orders we have on hand complete, but the greater portion of each order will be sent out in a day or two and the balance when other shipments arrive next week.

Henry Ford Dooms
Our Great Cities

That the modern city is doomed is the rather startling statement of Henry Ford, head of one of the biggest individual enterprises in the United States. According to Drew Pearson, writing in Automotive Industries (New York), Mr. Ford declares that in America of the future there will be no mammoth collections of skyscrapers and teeming tenements in which millions of people are cooped within a few square miles of territory. Instead, the country will be traversed by chains of small towns clustering around individual factories and inhabited by people who will divide their time between factory and farm. The picture of the America of to-morrow which Henry Ford paints, says Mr. Pearson, is a particularly rosy one. In his opinion, the passing of the big city will mean less crime, less poverty, less wealth, less unrest, and less of that fierce, nervous strain under which myriads of our city dwellers live to-day.

Something like this, agrees the Philadelphia Record, will have to be brought about in order to correct the growing monstrosity of our big cities. There are some 400 of these in the world whose population exceed 100,000, says the Washington Post. In Mr. Ford's opinion:

"The overhead expense of living in such places is becoming unbearable. The cost of maintaining interest on debts, of keeping up water supply, sewerage and sanitary systems, the cost of traffic control and of policing great masses of people is so great as to offset the benefits of the city. The cities are getting top-heavy and are about doomed.

"Industry in the future is going to be organized on a big scale—something along the lines of the vertical trust. Competition, however, will force big industry to move its various parts to the country where labor is staid and overhead costs low.

"At the same time, it is nonsense to say that because the cities are overcrowded everybody ought to move to the farm. There must be a balance between the two. The farm has its dull season, when the farmer can come into the factory, and the factory has its dull season when the workmen can get out on the land to help produce food.

"As Mr. Ford has already taken steps to back up his ideas with practice, they take on a practical aspect," believes the New York Sun. As the Grand Rapids Herald sees the present situation:

"There is no questioning any of the liabilities which Mr. Ford charges up against the city's account. And there are more, too. Modern civilization is outgrowing cities. For twenty years we have had a steady increasing movement of rural residents to the cities. The time is coming, and that soon, when this movement will be turned about."

On the other hand, maintains the Chicago Journal of Commerce, "there will be no immediate alarm in the great cities of the country because Henry Ford has declared that the cost of cities has become so great that they are about to meet the fate of all human enterprises which get top-heavy. Cities come and stay. The Ford plan simply means more cities."

Besides, notes the Boston Post: "Mr. Ford seems to think that the farms can be so near the factories that the men who work in the former can also work in the latter 'off time.' But when have the farmers any off time? For the most part they are at more or less hard labor every hour of the day, beginning at four in the morning and ending at seven at night. It is only in the winter, if even then, that they can give any time to manufactures. The two kinds of labor are totally incongruous. To succeed at one must mean to neglect the other."

"Mr. Ford may be right regarding the industrial side of the question," admits the Jersey City Journal, "but the urban population has shown no marked inclination to move en masse out into the suburbs. As a matter of fact, the cities are more than holding their own in the matter of population."

It would be far better, thinks the New York Tribune, so far as New York is concerned, if half the great manufacturing establishments in the metropolis could be moved from ten to fifty miles out of the city, "but in the present state of society the plan is impossible." One reason for this, explains the Brooklyn Times, is that

"Eczema first began within itching on my face. Little red pimples formed that itched very badly causing me to scratch. The scratching made the pimples large and red, and some nights they burned and kept me awake for a while.

"My mother recommended Cuticura Soap and Ointment so I sent for a free sample which helped me. I purchased another cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment and in a month I was completely healed." (Signed) Miss Edith H. Kelley, Rt. 1, Unity, Me., July 12, 1923.

"The automobile gives the city dweller the opportunity of enjoying the delights of the country and at the same time utilizing the conveniences and advantages of the city."

That the traffic question, at least, of our large cities can be solved is the belief of Harvey Wiley Corbett, architect. Writing in The American City (New York) this authority suggests different street levels for pedestrians, automobiles, and street cars and railway trams, with the latter underground. In his opinion, the outlook is not as dark as Mr. Ford would have us believe.

Making Motoring Safe

All sorts of warnings are being used to make people more careful of the dangers of modern motor traffic. The most novel is that at Sideup, in Kent, where the land lighthouse, flashing every second and visible two hundred yards away, warns night motorists of a dangerous corner. The lamp, an ingenious invention, burns for a year without attention and at a cost of only thirty shillings, the light being compressed acetylene gas.

Mirrors are often seen at bad curves, but after more than ten years' use their value is being questioned, and to-day the experiment is being tried of painting broad white stripes on the surface, to mark the middle of the road at corners. These stripes prevent the dangerous practice of overtaking at bends.

In Paris the road authorities have been driven to build street signal boxes, a sort of glass cabin in which the police controller sits and turns discs painted white on one side and red on the other. An electric bell is rung to announce the turning of the discs.

Use safety pins to hang up dish holders. They can be removed when the holders are washed.

Decline of Clubdom

"The West End of London is at present the prey of a horde of excavators, and lovers of our classic thoroughfares watch with bitterness their cherished roadways being butchered to make a city surveyor's holiday. But this is nothing compared with the rapid, violent revolution which I am told is depopulating Pall Mall and turning St. James's Street into a desert," writes A. P. Garland, in the Sphere.

"What I am referring to is the report from our expert pessimists that our great social clubs have lost their vogue, members are drifting away in batches daily, and in the not distant future the classic halls of White's and the Devonshire will be the home of the jackal and the wolf—in other words, given over to flat-builders.

"True, club committees and secretaries are doing their best to stave off the fatal day. Some have suspended the entrance fee; others are allowing pipes to be smoked after dinner; more offer free telephone service, whereby making a bet on the two-thirty race may be brought within the means of the most indigent. It has even been said, though I cannot vouch for the truth of the statement, that in one tremendously patriotic institution the number of quarterings—or is it quarters?—that a candidate for membership must possess has been ruthlessly reduced from fourteen to a meagre five.

"Nevertheless the membership dwindles in even the most renowned clubs. The luncheon rooms wear a deserted air. Tureenfuls of mulligatawny are carried forward from day to day for lack of consumers. Often and often the attendants outnumber the members present. Favourite armchairs are three a penny. And every morning the local milkman, as he deposits his cans on the step, murmurs, 'Ish-bod'—or whatever in the milkman profession is the equivalent of that pregnant phrase.

"The rivalry between the two historic parties is a tepid milk-and-water affair. Hence the political club has largely lost his raison d'etre.

"For the decay in social clubs, however, many causes are alleged. The principal one being that in these hard times there isn't enough money about to support these imposing institutions. Frankly, that is absurd. When innumerable men are willing to pay from five to twenty guineas for the pleasure of watching two vast, fleshy, alleged boxers lean against one another and clinch for a few minutes, there can be no genuine shortage of money.

"The real explanation is—women have killed the social club—with deliberate malice."

Made Risky Trip

TO MAP GREENLAND.

Dr. Lauge Koch, who has returned from a map-making expedition which took him 3,600 miles over ice of the most dangerous sort, has resulted in a survey of unmapped parts of the coast of Greenland, was a member of Knut Rasmussen's second expedition which filled the gaps in the map of the east coast as far as the De Long Fjord. Dr. Koch set out to carry the survey clear up to Cape Bridgeman, in the remotest part of Peary Land. His expedition started out March, 1921, with 19 sledges, 200 dogs, a few tried and tested Eskimos, and Dr. Koch himself, the only European. The mapping was finished on the latitude of 83 degrees 5 minutes. It was the most northerly point ever reached by the Danish flag.

Dr. Koch brought back 4,000 geological specimens, including animal fossils dating from very early periods, and both European and Western-American forms.

Many Syllable Words

"It is a curious thing that all the words employed on the Socialist platform are words of four and five and six syllables which no one can define," says Mr. Baldwin. "I do not know myself what the word 'internationalism' means. All I do know is that when I hear it employed it is a bad thing for this country."

"I think it is intolerable insolence," Mr. Baldwin said, "to look to Russia for a gospel suitable for the most progressive people, when we were fighting for our rights eight centuries ago and the Russians were only given the freedom within the lifetime of many men now living. Our duty is to lead the world and not to follow anyone. (Loud Cheers.) Do I see anything that will help us in the manifesto that has been just issued by the leaders of the trade unions? They speak about constitutional rebellion. Those two words together make nonsense. You can no more speak of constitutional rebellion than you can speak of a chilly hell!" (Loud laughter and cheers.)

THE SYMPATHETIC GOLFER.

When golf with you I go to play
And diabolical driving is my fate,
To comfort me, please do not say:
"Well, anyhow that one was straight!"

When I have missed a three-foot putt
To soothe the anguish that is mine
Please do not say: "You lost it, but
You surely had it on the line."

When I had taken nine or ten
To make a hole that calls for five,
Please do not say to cheer me then:
"Well, anyhow you made a drive."

When I go skipping through a p't
By luck at last to reach the green,
Please do not solemnly admit
That shot the best you've ever seen.

When I am playing badly, please
Let me in shame and sorrow blush,
And do not seek my rage to ease
By any sympathetic gush.

It's bad enough bad golf to play
And keep your temper sweet and cool,
Without being tortured all the way
By such a sympathetic fool.

From the Gallows to Parliament

EXTRAORDINARY CAREERS OF FORMER M.P.'S.

Though the members returned to Parliament at the General Election will doubtless include some remarkable men, none will be more extraordinary than numerous representatives of the people who have already sat in the House of Commons.

We have had blind M.P.'s, the most distinguished of whom was Mr. Fawcett, Postmaster-General in Gladstone's second Administration. There have been armless members, and at least two who were legless as well, one being Mr. Arthur Kavanagh, who had to be carried into the House on the back of an attendant. Men of color, including pure-blooded negroes, have also represented English constituencies and again and again convicts and ex-convicts have been sent to Westminster.

Saved An Empress's Life.

One of the men intended by the electors to go from Prison to Parliament, was Mr. John Mitchell. He founded in 1848 the "United Irishman," and for certain articles which appeared he was tried for "treason-felony," and sentenced to fourteen years' transportation. Escaping from Van Diemen's Land in 1864, he took refuge in the United States, whence he returned to Ireland. Shortly afterwards he was elected deputy for Tipperary, and, on being declared ineligible, re-elected. He died, however, the same month.

In 1882, when Mr. Michael Davitt was actually the elect of Math, he was sent back to prison for infringing the conditions of his ticket of leave. The famous agitator was later a familiar figure at Westminster.

Of M.P.'s who, though doomed to death, lived to sit among the nation's law-makers, Mr. James O'Kelly was a picturesque and remarkable representative. Innumerable were his adventures before he came to Westminster. He fought for the French against the Prussians, saved the life of the Empress of Brazil, was lost for a year in the Sudan, and had scores of close calls in Canada, Mexico and Algeria.

But his most remarkable experience was when, as a young man, he represented a Cuban paper. Arrested as a spy when that country was in the throes of civil war, he was condemned to death and led out to execution. Just as the rifles of the firing party were about to be levelled at him, the United States Consul dashed up and saved him. Many years afterwards he was returned for Roscommon.

Little less strange were the vicissitudes of Mr. J. F. K. D'Blain. For complicity in a Fenian rising, he was sentenced to be hanged, drawn, and quartered, but, in consideration of the gallantry he displayed during a fire, when, at great risk to himself, he rescued some women and children, his sentence was commuted to penal servitude for life, and after his liberation he was returned to Parliament.

Mr. A. Lynch was another member who, though condemned to death by the law, was subsequently honored by an electorate. In 1903 he was prosecuted for high treason because he had fought on the side of the Boers in the South African War. The sentence on him—that he be hanged—was subsequently commuted to penal servitude for life; but he was released on license in 1904, received a "free pardon" in 1907, and sat for a constituency in the House of Commons.

£ 10,000 MOSQUE FOR LONDON.

His Holiness the Khalifat-ul-Mash had the foundation-stone of a mosque in the garden of 83, Melrose Road, Southfields, Wandsworth, recently. Among those present were the Japanese Ambassador, the German Charge d'Affaires, the Estonian and Albanian Ministers, the Serbian Consul, and the Mayor of Wandsworth. The Turkish Government was represented. It is intended to erect a building having all the usual characteristics and accompaniments of a Moslem mosque at a cost of about £10,000, for which funds are in hand. At present, however, only the Mihrab, or praying place, is to be built.

A Woman's Brain in Agricultural Problems

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 10.—(Canadian Press)—A woman's brain is behind the research carried out by the Oxford University's Institute of Agricultural Engineering into the problem of how to make the farmer independent of weather conditions in harvesting his crops. The wife of Capt. B. J. Owen, the director of the Institute, suggested the hairdresser's use of hot air for hair-drying as a guide in solving the problem. Captain Owen tried the idea with very satisfactory results. Haystacks dried with hot air in ten hours at a cost much less than that of drying in a field by ordinary means. The principle of the process, which was demonstrated to farmers and representatives of the Ministry of Agriculture, at the University Farm, Sandford, near Oxford,

PAINS ACROSS THE BACK

Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

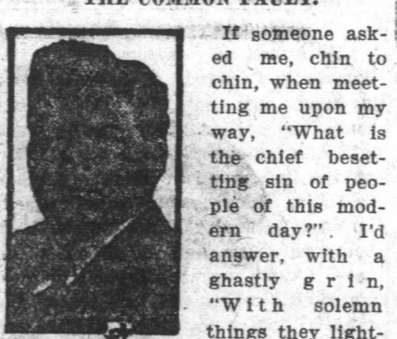

Mitchell, Ontario.—"I have taken your medicine for a number of years. I do not take it steady all the time, but I am never without it. I always keep it in the house. I took it first for pains in the abdomen and bearing-down pains, headaches and pains across the back. I have my knees to look after and many a day I could not get up at all. I saw the advertisement in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and Mrs. John Miller told me about it, too. Every time I take it, it makes me feel better and I always recommend it to my friends. I am willing to answer letters from women asking about this medicine and you may use this letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. F. J. WASSMANN, Mitchell, Ontario.

The merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is told by women to each other. Many women know by experience what this medicine will do and they are anxious for other to know. Such testimony should cause any woman suffering from the troubles so common to her sex to give this well-known medicine a fair trial. Do you know that in a recent canvass among women users of the Vegetable Compound over 220,000 replies were received. To the question, "Have you received benefit by taking this medicine?" 88 per cent. replied "Yes." This means 88 out of every 100 women are in better health because they have given this medicine a fair trial.

THE COMMON FAULT.

WALT MASON

If someone asked me, chin to chin, when meeting me upon my way, "What is the chief besetting sin of people of this modern day?" I'd answer, with a ghastly grin, "With solemn things they lightly play. Man's words no longer worth a cent, his promise fades like April snow; in truth he makes a daily dent, and sheds a smile that this is so; I'm waiting now to meet a gent who should have met me hours ago. The man who strictly keeps his word is viewed with wonder and amazement; he's thought a rather queer old bird, a relic of pre-glacial days; such crankiness is most absurd, observe the light, forgetful jays." And if I speak in bitter tones, it is because all men are late; it seems no one a conscience owns, or tries to keep a promise straight; I had a rendezvous with Jones at six o'clock, and now it's eight. The workman says he will appear at eight o'clock to fix my pump; the teamster says he will be here to haul my lead cats to the dump; the bottler will deliver beer as fast as his old nags can hump. And no one ever keeps his word; a promise is a trifle small; to keep engagements is absurd, there is no sense in that, at all; with difficulty I'm derailed from springing lectures in a hall. Alas, it's little use to scold, or melancholy changes ring, for delegates who do not hold a promise as a sacred thing, cannot be moved by language bold to make their pledges stick and cling.

Topsy-Turvy Sammy

A BOY WHO SEES THINGS WRONG WAY ROUND.

You have often looked into a mirror and noticed how everything seems to be the wrong way round. Things which are really coming towards you seem to be moving away, and things which are coming from the left look as though they are coming from the right.

How would you like it if you always saw things like this—if the whole world to you was a world in a looking-glass? This is the unfortunate position of Sammy Tiana, an American boy. He sees everything the wrong way round, which makes life very difficult for him. When we look at anything, the light carries its image through the lens of the eye along the optic nerve to the brain. The image passes along the nerve upside down and is righted by what is called the vision centre of the brain. In Sammy's case the image is turned the right way up, but, for some reason, the wrong way round. This rare disease is called mirror vision. An Incurable Disease. There are some strange results. Sammy writes backwards, just like the writing you see on blotting paper. If a person hands him something with his right hand, Sammy tries to take it from his left. He has to be very careful in crossing the road when he is out, because a car which seems to him to be going away is really coming towards him. As he sees all writing backwards, reading is a difficult and slow task. The doctors who have studied the case say that they cannot cure Sammy because the defect is not in his eyes but in the part of the brain which receives the image of what he sees. Sammy's hearing is much better than that of most people, and he has learned in some cases almost to see with his ears.

"Tiger of France"

Once Challenged David Lloyd George to Finish Duel, Says Famous London Journalist.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—Georges Clemenceau, former Premier of France, challenged David Lloyd George to a duel with either pistols or swords during the Versailles peace conference, according to a book published by Wickham Steed, former editor of the London Times.

Clemenceau flatly accused Lloyd George of repeated inaccuracies in his statements. Lloyd George rose and seized Clemenceau by the collar, demanding an apology, Steed declares.

"Woodrow Wilson separated the two statesmen. Then Clemenceau offered Lloyd George satisfaction either with swords or pistols—as soon as Lloyd George had resided in France long enough to acquire a domicile there."

Steed's book, which he has named "Through Thirty Years," is full of reminiscences of "inside stuff" with which the famous editor has come in contact in the last three decades. Clemenceau refused to apologize at the time, according to Steed.

On another occasion, which Steed describes in his book, the editor suggested to Clemenceau that he talk to President Wilson in order to learn exactly what Wilson expected the peace conference to accomplish.

"Talk to Wilson!" Clemenceau exclaimed. "How can I talk to a fellow who thinks himself the first man for two thousand years who has known anything about peace on earth?"

"Wilson imagines he is the second Messiah. He believes he has been sent to give peace to the world, and that his preconceived notions are the only notions worth having. I have done everything to gratify him. I received him at the foot of the staircase as though he were the King of England, but still he is unsatisfied."

"The Tiger" added that talk was futile, as they would never be able to reach an understanding.

The Expansion of Chemistry

Chemistry is entering upon an era of world-wide expansion in education and industry, according to reports from many countries submitted to the American Chemical Society and made public at the close of the society's recent meeting at Cornell University. Huge investments in instruction and research are predicted, according to a report printed in the New York Times, and from the scientific awakening, results of transcendent importance to the human race, it is asserted, will be achieved. Unity of purpose among men and women of science of all lands, it is declared, will prove a powerful factor in promoting international concord and minimizing war. We read:

"Following action taken by its council, through the Committee of Chemical Education, will immediately begin to carry out plans for the organization of the chemistry departments of all the schools and colleges of the United States; State associations are to be formed, the work centering around the society's sixty-nine sections.

"The Chairman of the committee, Prof. Neil E. Gordon of the University of Maryland, announced that teacher organizations have been authorized in thirteen states. Other regional bodies approved are the Chemistry Teachers' Association of New York City, the New England Association of Chemistry Teachers and the Northwest Chemistry Teachers' Association.

"Radical reforms in teaching methods and closer correlation of high-school and college courses are among the objects sought.

"In behalf of British chemists, Principal D. J. C. Irvine of St. Andrew's University, Scotland, issued a statement praising the achievements of the American chemists. He has learned in the last twenty years to regard with growing appreciation the ever-increasing quality of American research and the extraordinary vitality of American schools of chemistry.

"This opinion, gained originally through study of the American journals, has been strengthened enormously as a result of visits paid in the last two years in the universities of Eastern States, and of meeting personally the American chemists who attended the conventions of the American Chemical Society at New Haven and Ithaca.

"I have not touched on the position of technical chemistry in America," he said, "as my experience confines me to the academic aspects of the subject. But there is no doubt that a subject which is developing on a sure foundation and is being enlarged so enthusiastically must find its applications in manufacturing work of ever-increasing value. This is shown indirectly by the attitude of manufacturers who wisely develop their research laboratories as part of their business organization, showing a praiseworthy tendency to maintain their own research laboratories without leaning on the State."

Ocean Romance

How Fortune Came to Three Subalterns—Princely Gratitude of a Lonely Old Man.

(News of the World' Special)

Life is full of romance and drama. Comedy and tragedy often walk hand in hand, and surprise lurks just round the corner. Here is the plain tale of a romance which commenced on the ocean and is being continued in India. Three young subalterns of an Indian cavalry regiment had been home on leave, and, as is often the case, having spent all their money, were glad when the time came for them to return to the Shiny East and their regimental duties. On board the good ship was an elderly gentleman, who was found by the subalterns bemoaning his fate because he was unable to indulge in his one hobby—bridge. A good player, the subalterns pointed out, ought not to have any difficulty in getting a game, but they discovered that the experts on board the ship would not admit the old gentleman to the charmed circle of bridge parties because he was such a contumacious bore. The three subalterns, finding time hanging heavily on their hands, explained to the old chap that though they were not good players yet they did not mind making up a table so that he could have a game. So it was arranged, and the four played bridge every day until the ship reached India. The old man often expressed his gratitude to the young soldiers, and left them on the landing stage with renewed and hearty thanks. A few weeks later the old man died, and to their great astonishment, the three subalterns received letters from a lawyer informing them that in gratitude for their kindness to a lonely old man, the isolated bridge player had left them the whole of his fortune, which brings in £20,000 a year, to be divided equally between them. The old man, however, tucked a condition on to the gift, which was to the effect that if any one of the beneficiaries married, or became engaged to be married, his share would be divided between the other two, whilst if a second one contemplated matrimony, the whole fortune would go to the third. It so happened that already one of the trio had become engaged, but the other two, like good sportsmen, agreed that if it could be legally done, the lover should have his share. And so it has been arranged, the engaged man receiving his third of the £20,000 a year as an allowance from the other two. Truth is often stranger than fiction. Stranger still is the exquisite politeness which young officers in the Indian cavalry are now showing to lonely old men.

nov18.31.tu.th

The Yeomen of the Guard

Overseas visitors this year seized their opportunity of getting acquainted with the gallant Yeomen of the Guard, that picturesque survival of fifteenth-century England. Organized by Henry VII. as a personal body-guard, for service in the field, on his Coronation Day, October 30th, 1485, this famous corps has served every sovereign since that time in a similar capacity. Just over sixty years ago the whole corps was reorganized, the system of commissions by purchase was abolished, and a rule was introduced that future vacancies to be filled by Army officers of long service and good records.

The appointment to the Captaincy (which can only be held by a peer) is political, a change being made whenever a new party succeeds to office. The other appointments are permanent. The junior officers, known as "exons" or "exempt," must have held the rank of captain in the Army. Next above them come the ensign and the "clerk of the cheque," while the second-in-command has the rank of lieutenant. To fill the "other ranks," only old soldiers not below the rank of sergeant are accepted.

To the Yeoman Warders of the Tower is assigned the special duty of guarding the Tower of London. There are forty of these, appointed by the Constable of the Tower, and recruited from retired non-commissioned officers. These Wardens trace their history back some four hundred years farther than the Yeomen of the Guard, and it was due to the Duke of Somerset, in Henry VIII's reign, that they became supernumerary to them.

The ceremony of closing the Tower gates at night is highly interesting. A few minutes before the clock strikes eleven (twelve on Tuesdays and Fridays), the Head Warden, or Yeoman Porter, appears at the Main Guard and applies for the "Escort of the Keys." This escort consists of a party of six privates, commanded by a sergeant, who accompany the porter to the outer gate and help him to close it. Having locked both the gate and the wicket, the Yeoman Porter returns with the keys and the escort.

As he passes the sentries, on his way to the Main Guard, each of them challenges, and in reply to "Who goes there?" receives the answer, "The Keys." The sentry rejoins, "What Keys?" and the reply is, "The King's Keys."

The escort now passes on until it reaches the Main Guard, which turns out. Again the same questions about the keys, with the same answers, following which the officer opens the ranks and "presents arms" to the King's Keys. These are then carried by the Yeoman Porter to the Governor's House and placed in his office.

FIRST AND PARAMOUNT, ABSOLUTE SECURITY TO POLICYHOLDERS

"I'll talk the matter over with my wife," you say.

Don't! You promised at the altar to protect her. Is it fair to ask her now: "Shall I fulfil my vow"? A wife may object to life assurance—a widow never does.

The responsibility of protecting your wife and little ones is yours—and yours alone. Don't shirk it. You'll never miss the small yearly saving necessary to maintain an Imperial Life policy.

"The Creation of an Estate" is an interesting booklet which explains the advantages of life assurance as a provision for dependents. Write to-day for a free copy. Address:

Forty-Five Years in the Service of

Enjoyable "At Home"

At the Star Club rooms last night, the members of the Ladies' Auxiliary and their male friends, were the guests at an "At Home," tendered by the Society, as a mark of appreciation to the ladies for the excellent work they have done during the past year. The catering, which was supplied by the Stirling Restaurant, was an excellent one, and was done full justice to by all. The toast list was as follows:

THE KING—Prof. the Chairman; resp. "God Save The King."
ARCHBISHOP & CLERGY—Prof. F. Kenny; resp. Rev. T. J. Flynn, B.A.
STAR OF THE SEA LADIES' ASSOCIATION—Prof. J. T. Martin; Resp. J. Murphy.
THE CHAIRMAN—Prof. W. F. Linegar, M.H.A.; resp. P. J. Cashin, M.H.A.

The speeches were of a high order and paid tribute to the good work of the Ladies' Association during the past year. During the evening songs were rendered by Messrs. "Sandy" Lawrence, W. J. Wallace and Leo Dillon, and a recitation by P. Halley. The C.C.C. Band was in attendance and rendered pleasing selections which added greatly to the general enjoyment. Dancing then followed to the music of the C.C.C. Orchestra, and did not conclude until an early hour this morning.

The Ladies' Association will hold their annual meeting to-night, when the election of officers will take place and a programme outlined for the winter season.

Tom Mix at the Majestic To-Day

ARTISTS ON THE S. S. SILVIA.

"North of Hudson Bay," a big Tom Mix special feature will be shown at the Majestic Theatre to-night. The following is the cast:

Michael Dane TOM MIX
Estelle Macdonald Kathleen Key
Peter Dane Eugene Palette
Cameron Macdonald Will Walling
Angus Mackenzie Frank Campeau
Jeffrey Clough Frank Leigh
Armond Lenoir Fred Kohler

An abundance of excitement is offered where Tom Mix shoots through "North of Hudson Bay," a William Fox production, like a meteor. The first thing which strikes one's attention about this production is the total absence of dragged in "thrills." This we think, is the reason that the excitement offered is doubly effective. The picture concerns the adventures of Michael Dane, played by the passions of more worldly men. He runs from one misfortune to another, from the murder of his brother, his conviction for aiding the murderer unknowingly, to the hardships he endures on the Journey of Death.

At no portion of this film does the action slow up—it's what is known as a speed picture—but it's a speed picture plus sense. In matters of speed an daring this production sees Tom Mix surpass all his former efforts.

From every point of view this is an unusual film. Tom Mix is surrounded by a cast of great ability. Kathleen Key, Eugene Palette, Will Walling, Frank Campeau, Fred Kohler and Frank Leigh interpret the principal characters.

Another big attraction in the appearance of the vocalists Emmett O'Mara, a celebrated Irish Baritone and his talented wife, Jeane Palowa who will arrive by S. S. Silvia which is due this evening from New York. They will make their debut to St. John's admirers to-night. In view of these big attractions the admission of 30 cents is charged.

Wesley Church
Sale of Work

The annual sale of work of Wesley Church, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid, was opened in the Lecture Room of the Church yesterday afternoon. Inspector General Hutchings in a brief speech declared the sale opened at 5.30 p.m. in the presence of a large gathering. The various stalls, which looked very pretty, were well stocked with plain and fancy work, fabrics, etc., while a Christmas Tree, overlaid with toys, had been provided for the children. During the afternoon the ladies were kept busy attending to the wants of its many patrons and a pretty brisk business was conducted. At 6 p.m. meat teas were served by the Ladies' Aid, and were well patronized. The sale will be continued at 4 o'clock this afternoon, and will conclude with a concert at night.

Last Night's Sociable

AT CANON WOOD HALL.
A very enjoyable sociable was held in Canon Wood Hall last night, under the auspices of St. Margaret's Guild. The affair took the form of a tea and concert. The hall was filled to capacity and all present had a very pleasant evening. Amongst those who contributed numbers were, Misses Langmead, Murray; Messrs. Donnelly, Horsley, P. H. Cowan and D. Neal. During the interval ice cream and candy were served, and at the conclusion of the musical programme the ladies of the Guild served delicious teas.

Delicious hard sauce can be made with vegetable fat. Don't forget to add a pinch of salt.

Household Notes.

If melted paraffin is poured over the top of paint, it will not harden. Add a little lemon juice to the pastry for your deep-dish chicken pie. Colored cotton goods will fade badly if allowed to freeze on the line. For novel waste baskets, cover deep pasteboard boxes with cretonne. Add a little salt to goose grease and use as a butter substitute in cake. Small, crisply browned sausages make a delightful garnish for roast fowl. Steel wool will remove the alkali that adheres to the inside of the tea kettle. Remember to fill pudding molds only three-quarters full to allow for rising. Serve fried ham with very thick cream gravy and tiny, fluffy soda biscuits. Pork chops are delicious baked with apples, and garnished with parsley. Before baking apples, top them with marshmallows or grains of tapioca. Individual mince pies are delicious served hot, and topped with caramel ice cream. If canned fruit is firm and is thoroughly drained, it can be candied quite nicely. Season mashed turnips with a little sugar, butter, salt, black pepper, and paprika.

Harbor Grace Notes

The body of the late Mr. H. J. Watts, who entered into rest at his home, St. John's on the 9th inst. was brought here by Tuesday morning's train. The funeral took place from the station, on the arrival of the train, and was largely attended. Interment was made in the family plot in the Methodist Cemetery, Rev. W. Harris, conducting the last sad rites. He leaves to mourn, a wife, one daughter, Mary, and one son, John, of this town, and a large circle of friends. We extend our sincere sympathy to the bereaved.

The annual Missionary Meeting of Christ Church was held on Tuesday night last at Christ Church. Rev. E. M. Bishop, Rector of St. Matthew's Church, Bay Roberts, was the speaker for the evening, and delivered an inspiring address, taking as his Text, Rom. 1, 16.—"I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." He dealt with the Missionary work of the church in Japan, China, India, Africa, and New Zealand, and at the close of his eloquent address, impressed upon his hearers the need of the prayers of the people on behalf of Missionary work.

Dr. H. Rendell, of St. John's, was here last week in connection with his motor yacht "Madelaine" which will likely go on Dock for the winter months.

Mr. J. Driscoll, manager of the Harbor Grace Clothing Company, who was on a business visit to Corner Brook and other points in that vicinity, returned to town again yesterday.

The funeral of the Late Capt. George Hayes, whose death occurred at his home here on Saturday, took place yesterday, Monday, morning to the Cathedral, and interment was made in the R. C. Cemetery. We extend our condolence to the bereaved.

Mr. R. L. Stevenson, who had been at Grady the past summer, as Wireless Operator, came up by the Meigs recently, and came here from St. John's on Tuesday last.

Rev. G. L. Mercer, accompanied by Mrs. Mercer, paid a short visit to town during last week, and left here for Bay Roberts on Friday.

Messrs. L. T. Chafe and F. McRae, went out by Monday morning's train, on a visit to the city.

Miss M. B. Mosdell, of Bay Roberts, arrived by last night's train, on a short visit to friends here.

Miss Linnie LeDrew, Stenographer at the Dominion Iron & Steel Co's. Office, Bell Island, arrived by the Pawnee on Saturday evening, and spent the week-end here, the guest of Miss M. I. Simmons.

Mr. Learning, of Messrs. Job Bros. & Co., Ltd., St. John's was in town today in the interests of his firm.

S. S. Mary, Capt. Bourne, arrived in port from Bell Island on Friday morning, and took on board a quantity of produce and left again after a short stay here.

Mr. Michael Thomey, who has been on duty for H.M. Customs, on the Labrador Coast, during the summer months, returned home by last night's train.

Mr. L. H. Simmons, of Spruce Brook, was in town last week, on a short visit to relatives and friends, and left again by Saturday afternoon's train for Bay Roberts, to join his wife, who was visiting friends there.

Enjoyable Lecture and Sociable at St. Michael's

The lecture given by Mr. Llewellyn Colley on "New York and other American and Canadian Cities" at the Lecture Room of St. Michael's Church last evening was thoroughly enjoyed by the large number present. The lecture, which was illustrated by lantern slides, was preceded by a short musical programme in which G. B. Lloyd and Misses M. Brown and M. Vavasour took part. At the close the ladies of the Parish served teas in that capable manner for which they are so well known. The affair was a great success, and the proceeds, which amounted to a good sum, will be devoted towards the repairs of the Church.

Early Discoveries

The following story of the discovery of America in the eleventh century by Leif Ericsson, the Norseman, will be read with interest, because it is probably part of our own earlier history, and because of the recent attempt made by the three plucky adventurers, William Washburn, Nutter and Arthur Hilderbrand, writers, and Eric Todahl, a painter, to sail over the same course in a small yacht. Unfortunately all trace of them has been lost and the search undertaken by the U. S. Cruiser Trenton has been abandoned.

The narrative is written by H. Rolf Wisby for the New York Tribune and is as follows:—

THE NORSEMAN DISCOVERED AMERICA IN THE YEAR 1000 A.D.

The annual festival under the auspices of the American-Scandinavian Foundation and the Norwegian National League of New York should go a long way to teach the average American that the Norse Vikings, under the chieftainship of Leif (pronounced Lief) Ericsson, are the true historic discoverers of the American continent on September 29, A. D. 1000 almost five centuries before Columbus reached the West Indies.

The ultimate object of these annual Leif Ericsson festivals, which were fathered and sponsored by the American-Scandinavian Foundation and its several chapters, is to establish a national Leif Ericsson Day, to be legally observed by the American people as a holiday in commemoration of the discovery. The Scandinavians are not at all disposed to belittle the enormously important voyages of Columbus, who never made the high-sounding claims of continental discovery which were made for him, and in his name, after his death by the Church and crown of Spain as a matter of state policy. The Scandinavians here and at home are merely interested in correcting a ruthless error as far as I can gather. The landing of Leif Ericsson on the American continent is only an incident in their history at a period when the Vikings were making tremendous voyages of discovery and conquest, braving the open oceans at a time when other races crept timidly along the shore line. To the American people, on the other hand, what figures as an incident in Scandinavian annals, in this case, becomes a matter of paramount importance when we consider that the facts supporting this incident are the very roots and beginning of historic America.

In our vast archives of pre-Columbian literature the voyages of the Norsemen, initiated by the landing of Leif Ericsson, is the one outstanding achievement of documentary historic caliber that the scholars of the entire civilized world has not been able to twist into a question-mark. The more the scholars dig and delve the clearer stands forth the truth as it rises from the ancient parchments and the mouldy finds.

The average man is at sea in the matter, however. He has a hazy recollection of having read something or other about "Norsemen" in his school days, and then, again, he may not have read even that little, for some school-readers omit the landfall entirely and for rather transparent reasons! The disputes of the scholar—assuming that he was listening—have only tended to confuse him.

Put into a thimble, what are the facts, what is history and what is not?

How did it happen that Leif Ericsson made the landfall and not some more renowned explorer of his day?

Let me tell you. Leif was the son of a mighty chief, Eric Thorvaldson, a Norseman, better known as Eric the Red. He had to flee Norway for Iceland, which was already then a free Commonwealth, peopled mainly by fighting Norwegian Vikings, who did not like the idea of being ruled by the kings of Norway. Eric waxed redder and redder with the slayings and duels until Iceland ceased to be a safe shelter for him. He rigged up his dragon vessel and set out with his companions, one Herjulf Bardarson, to discover a new land of his own where he could stay red and die red. He found a tremendous land of snow and ice under the Northern Lights, and craftily named it Greenland, hoping by this ruse to draw emigrants. Gradually Eric the Red became the lord-chief of a clan of outlawed Norsemen, the Greenland Vikings of history. From Herjulf's son, Bjarn Herjulfsson, Leif learned about a great land still farther west than Greenland. Bjarn and his men had seen it on one of their voyages, but they had failed to make landfall. This exploit stuck in the craw of Leif Ericsson. Later on, when he came to the Court of Olaf Trygvasson, who was then King of Norway, he acquired a dragon ship and a crew of some thirty odd Vikings. He let go his moorings from a small "vik" or inlet near Bergen in Norway and hoisted his broadsail for the long voyage.

His craft was about the size of the Gokstad dragon of archaeological fame, or 77 feet keel and 16 feet beam. It was an open boat, an expanded model of a rowboat, with no fire aboard, and hence no cooked rations, and there was no shelter for the crew except inside their sleeping bags of oiled seal hide. The running gear of the rigging was made out of walrus hide, and the sail was probably woven out of wool.

Mind you! There was neither compass nor chart in those frigid days. Even the astrolabe had not been invented. There were no pilot charts, either, nor any form of marine intelligence or instrument that Leif and his "roughnecks" could draw on in battling their course across an unknown, angry ocean. There were miles of milling fogbanks, however, and icebergs lurking in the thick of this menace. There were rafts of driftwood timber, also, floating under the lash of the storm. A collision with a single stick might sink the dragon. There were starvation and scurvy staring every man in the face if the "salt horse" provisions and the water cask should give out before landfall could be made.

These are the inboard facts of that famous voyage. Summarize them and you will have a fair idea of what the voyage really meant. If undertaken to-day, under the same conditions, and despite the fact that we know the distance and direction that must be travelled to reach the American shore, no marine insurance would be obtainable, and, I venture to say, no captain and crew, either.

Leif Ericsson and his men had one guide at night, the pole star, and one guide at day, the sun, both of them world-famous for instability.

The first land Leif saw was a barren, rocky waste of large, flat stones. He named it Helluland, from "hella," a flat stone. Whether this was Labrador or Newfoundland certain scholars cannot agree, but that it was the continent of America they all agree. The next land he found was covered with dense forests extending down to the beaches, which were flat and shining with white sand as far as eye could reach. Leif named it Markland, from "markr," a forest. We call it Nova Scotia. The third landfall was made after they had "sailed out on the open sea with a northwesterly wind and were on the sea two days. They went ashore on an island to the north of the land. Returning to their ship, they sailed into the sound between the island and the coast. They made up their mind to remain there for the winter, and they built them large booths. In the spring they made ready and sailed away, and Leif gave the land a name in memory of its product and called it Vinland."

In this highly compressed saga except we have the main outlines of Leif's cruise southward down the American seaboard, past Cape Cod, which he named Kjalarness, or Nose-of-the-Keel, passing the north shore of Martha's Vineyard into Vineyard Sound, and thence, finally, to his winter moorings at a spot somewhere in New England. The exact spot is not known any more than we can point to the exact spot where Columbus landed in the Antilles. Personally I have always been inclined to think that the Norse men's winter quarters in Vinland, or Land-of-Wine, might easily have been much further south than scholars have been disposed to seek, for the sagas are explicit in quoting the fact that the Norsemen spent the winter of 999-1000 A.D. in a region "where no snow fell and they found wheat and grapes growing wild."

These are the facts stripped to the bone. How can we be certain that the facts are historically valid? Because they are vouched for by three of the best authenticated sagas on record, namely, the Islendingabok, the Landnamabok and the Flateyrbok. Are these sagas true? There are sagas that are chiefly romance and legend woven around a core of truth, but the earlier sagas of Icelandic scholars, to which this group belongs, are not only reliable and veracious, but modern research has discovered that few histories of ancient times can compare with them in this respect.

Whether did Leif Ericsson sail after leaving Vinland? He did not go back to Norway, because he was afraid that King Olaf might take the new land away from him. Leif laid his course to Brattahlid, his father's seat in Greenland, and showed the wampum he had traded with the Indians for red cloth, and his samples of "masur," or hardwood timber. Leif had two brothers—Thorstein and Thorwald. The latter made up his mind also to explore Vinland. He fitted out a ship, and after spending nearly six weeks on the stormy ocean found himself under the shores of—Iceland. He had sailed in a circle! Some years later, in 1006-7 A.D., a great scholar and chieftain Thorfinn Karlsefni by name, who had married Gudrid, the widow of Thorstein, fitted out a big expedition of three vessels, with a crew of 160 men. Karlsefni not only did make landfall on the American shore, but he spent nearly three years here in almost continuous exploration and skirmishing with the "al-raelsn-gr," or Indians. Gudrid bore him a boy here, who was named Snorri, the first white child born in America!

Summarizing all the authentic accounts of these various Vinland explorations, we arrive at a point of comparison where there is no room for doubting that they are genuinely true and historically valid. Modern scientific research has checked up every step and turn in these voyages. The topography of the American mainland, where the landings are assumed to have been made, has been carefully scrutinized to find the exact spot where the Norsemen wintered, a spot which they named Hop. Certain scholars who have made a study of the Canadian shore lines insist that the saga accounts apply to Newfoundland and Labrador exclusively, and that Hop was on the southeastern shore of the St. Lawrence River, not far from Quebec. Certain other scholars can prove that Norsemen made landfall in Newfoundland and Nova Scotia only; that Hop was in a cove at the southeastern horn of the latter island, on the seaward side of the Bay of Fundy. We have at least one professor who stands up for the theory that Hop was on Bedlow's Island, where the Statue of Liberty now stands in New York Harbor!

How is it possible, you may wonder, that there can be so many different interpretations of the same identical facts, assuming that the facts are facts? If the Norsemen had had charts and sextants and compasses with them they would undoubtedly have left a set of records that would put our scientific mind at ease in the matter, but they had nothing of the sort. They expressed themselves in seagoing terms that were plain and final to the understanding of their people. Further than that they could not go. Columbus had charts and compasses and instruments, but his exact landing place is still a matter of dispute!

Another point that seems to worry a lot of investigators is the total absence of Norse memorials in this country. In their eagerness to discover something they have dragged in such utterly worthless "evidence" as the Norumbega tower in Newport and the Dwiggins Stone at Taunton, Mass., to mention a few. It would, indeed, be strange if any memorials set up by the Norsemen on these shores were left for us to gaze upon to-day. The Norsemen were busy people and constantly on the go during their sojourns here. When they were not exploring the wilderness they were chasing Indians or being chased by them. They had neither the leisure nor the means at hand for erecting memorials of enduring calibre. The booths they built for winter quarters were made of logs, and the crosses they put up over their slain comrades were also made of wood. At Garnet Point, near Plymouth, Mass., two crosses were planted in view of the sea.

Leif Ericsson was twenty-nine years old in 1000 A.D., when he discovered America. After his return to Greenland the Vikings of his father's clan named him Leif Hinn Heppni, or Leif the Lucky. This "honor name" referred not only to the Vinland landfall, but also to an incident that showed him to be not only a man of iron but a man with the heart in the right place. On the return voyage from America Leif scried a shipwrecked crew clinging to a small rock in the open sea. Although his rations were almost exhausted and Greenland had not been sighted as yet, he rescued the shipwrecked and brought them ashore. There was a young woman among them with long golden hair. Her name was Gudrid, and she it was who married Thorstein, the brother of Leif, and after his death became the wife of Karlsefni and as such the first white mother to give birth to a child in America.

Leif Ericsson took over Brattahlid after his father's death in 1012 and stayed there among the Greenland Vikings hunting walrus, whale and polar bear till the end of his days.

Half the Quantity of St. Charles Milk will Do!

When the recipe calls for a cup of milk use half a cup of Borden's St. Charles Milk and half a cup of water.

St. Charles is pure, country milk exactly the same as you get in a bottle except that most of the natural water content has been evaporated, leaving the rich, creamy part of the milk. Really, you can use it as cream just as it comes from the can. When you want ordinary milk add slightly more than an equal quantity of water.

Besides its economy the wonderful convenience of St. Charles Milk will appeal to you. Four convenient sizes, providing just the quantity you desire from day to day. Also keep a few tins in reserve in the pantry. Unopened, it keeps indefinitely.
