school of Practical Science. In the discussion at their meeting it was decided that the primary training should begin in public achools. They would urge the desirability of pursuing a mechanical course without being handicapped with unnecessary subjects. They manimously endorsed the proposed scheme of technical training.

Mr. Rose: "What kind of skilled labor, Mr. Pulsan, do you invest?"

Mr. Polson: "As a rule ship-builders,"
The Chairman called on Col. Gzowski, one in machine work was to have practical knowledge, "You may teach a young man as much as you like," urged the Colonel, "and he may be able to make a very beautiful plan of a loomotive for instance; but I should be very sorry to give him the opportunity of working one. He must have the practical knowledge, I never yet refused advice from the humblest mechanic because I knew he had that knowledge.

Sir Daniel Wilson, though not possessing the practical experience of the above geutlemen, on the question. He reminded his hearers of the great facilities for technical instruction which Toronto University even now possesses, or but, said the learned President, what we should do is to back up the Minister now in this School of Science project. Let him carry the weight of your opinion with him to the Legislature, and thus induce them to supply the required funds."

Aff. Leonard of London said he employed 75 skilled laborers, not one of them had received a technical training, but 50 could be improved by such instruction. They needed instruction in mechanical engineering, drafting and a knowledge of mechanics generally.

Mr. Inglis, of Inglis & Hunter, said he had 90 men in his employ. Not one had taken a cou-se in our School of Science. "We have a young man—a draughtsman, who obtained a technical education in the Old Country—no others. There are only three or four who technical education in the Old Country—no others. There are only three or four who could make a draft of an engine or mill machinery. We pay our skilled men $3 a day."

Mr. Edward Gurney said: "Every mechanic I have requires this practical education. In the combination of theoretical knowledge with skill in using tools is very necessary. Out of some 600 hands on my pay roll, I have not four men who are technically educated. It is nonsense to say we do not suff r through this. I have only one man engaged in drawing patterns. It requires technical knowledge to make drafts of these patterns."

K. Kerr, Q.C., on behalf of bank creditors, and Mr. John Bain, Q.C., who assiduously watches the dreary diurnal.

The "A.," "R.," "C." Transactions.

E. S. Cox was the first witness. He told how deposit receipts were issued for promissory notes, the transactions being negotiated through Casnier Allen by witness, on Broker Baxter's behalf. Asked what was done with Baxter's behalf. Asked what was done with these receipts Mr. Cox replied: "Two were handed to Mr. Baxter in my office. The other two I kept for a time, one of them subsequently passing to Mr. Baxter."
Witness then stated the arrangement he had with Mr. Allen in reference to these bills and the fact that at the time of shese transactions, which have so often been published, he (Mr. Cox) had no money to his credit in the Central Bank.

Campbell and Cox Conferred.

After the bank suspended Mr. Campbell came to Toronto and was appointed interim liquidator and then liquidator of the bank. After the suspension of the bank Campbell telephoned for witness, who went to the bank and saw Campbell. Campbell asked him when he was going to cover his account and susgested that he should take down that day $40,000 in legal tender. Witness did not do so. Allen was at the bank at the time. Prior to being appointed liquidator Campbell knew that he (witness) had dealings with Baxter. Witness and Baxter had arranged that the two deposit receipts of July for $10,000 and $8000 respectively were to be negotiated in Montreal. One was cashed at the Ville Marie Bank and the other, through Mr. Campbell, at the Molsons Bank. Campbell was a medium at that time for procuring loans and discounting notes and witness had Campbell, at the Molsons Bank. Campbell was a medium at that time for procuring loans and disconning notes and witness had suggested him to Baxter.

In the coarse of further evidence Mr. Cox stated that he had known Campbell for years and was under him in the Royal Canadian Bank at one time. He was a broker and he (witness) knew nothing about him in connection with the Central Bank. After being appointed liquidator witness had not given Campbell any details regarding his account.

veloped a pretty romance. The other evening a merchant, tired out after a hard day's jaunt part, over a slight difficulty, and the un-thought-of meeting was the means of making happy a home which had been dreary for many a day. At first neither spoke; then a hand was extended and grasped, and as the cab crossed the canal bridge the equilibrium of the vehicle was lost, for both sat together, and they slighted together.

A Baronet Brought up in a Work House. Sir Morville W. N. Wraxell, sixth harones of that name, has made temperance advocating his profession. He announces that he has his profession. He announces that he has assumed the past of Secretary to the Tower Hamlets Temperanes Mission, and will be glad to go to any part of the country lecturing, and, of course, collecting. Sir Morville, though an aristocrat, is not what you might call an out-and-out one. He was educated as a workhouse school in Brighton, served as a pawnbroker's assistant for some time, and then joined the army. Sir Morville declares that he has been driven to preach temperance by observing the effects of drink in his own family, he and his collection of brothers having been educated at a workhouse and his grandfather having died in a orotor's naving osen equasers as a worknown and his grandfather having died in a lunatic asylum after having lived in the same workhouse for a long time.

There will be a meeting this evening of the Toronto branch of the Imperial Federation Leaguein a room in the association building at the corner of Yonge and Mcdill-freets, at which Mr. Dalton McGarthy will speak and papers of general interest will be read, and to which a large number of citizens have been invited to attend.

yesterday and it is worth that to-day. There is considerable business being done and the feeling is hopeful. Barley is, at least, worth as much to-day as on Monday, when a sale of 10, 900 bushels was made at 65c; at the same time there were those on 'change to-day who were willing to pay 66c. The sale of 10,000 bushels No. 1, January delivery, on 'change to-day at $44 was regarded suspiciously as an attempt to bear the market, in which buyer and seller understood each other, by some; by a few, as yearded suspiciously as the same time the market, in which buyer and seller understood each other, by some; by a few, as WEDNESDAY EVENING, Dec. 19. bear the market, in which buyer and seller understood each other, by some; by a few, as an attempt to bear in which the bear got nipped. Only the seller, Mr. C. H. McLaughlin, apparently cared to assort that the grade was worth no more: one grain man offered the buyer $200 on his bargain and requests for more offers at the same figure were numerous. The deal was the only stir on change and whether Mr. McLaughlin's views of the January market, when he says it will be a question how to get rid of barley at any price, are correct will be seen.

Pork is exciting interest not only among pork packers but in the grain and stock exchanges, where there are dabblers in it. The Chicago market has been beared down to $13.33 for May option, a price out of proportion with the $7 paid for hogs here, and the packers here, who are laying in their stocks, are spending much time at the takers each day, hoping that the decline will continue until the market here is broken. Canadian packers have an association, but according to the members it is far from a combine. Deters fight for trade like Kikenny cats and the competition has withstood a break in prices.

It is a punely exgetable compound, and acts promptly and unigically in subduing all coupls, celds, bronchitis, inflammation of the lungs, etc. It is so palatable that a child will not refuse it, and it is put at a price that will not exclude the poor from its benefits.

to Eastern Canada and Europe, in wheat and flour, about 10,500,000 bushels. He further Brilliant! Durable!

Economical! wheat and flour held through Canada were probably over an average, as the wheat crops of Ontario in 1885 and 1886 had been full average crops, and the prices of wheat in summer of 1887 were so low that there was no inducement to sell freely. The net exports of wheat and flour from the Dominion during the fiscal year 1887-8; were only equal to 3,286,100 bushels. Mr. Magee says that 10,500,000 bushels were shipped through eastern provinces for home consumption or export to Europe. This shows that the wheat crop of 1887 in the older provinces was 7,213,291 bushels short of their own requirements for seed and bread. In fact, the deficiency was very much larger, because while the reserves at harvest of 1887 were larger than usus, they had been reduced at harvest of 1888 to the smallest quantity ever held. wheat and flour held through Canada were Diamond Dyes excel all others in Strength, Purity and Fastness. None other are just as good. Beware of imitations, because they are made of cheap and inferior materials, and give poor, weak, crocky colors.
