"Which of the two tours accomplished by the Prince of Wales was the best from your point of view."
On many occasions since my return to England, this question has been asked me, and always in reply I have said, "My point of view is that of a Press Photographer, and speaking as such I have no hesitation in saying that the three months tour in Canada was decidedly the best."
My answer has evoked no small amount of surprise, and has invariably resulted in another query being put—"Why?"
To that query I have replied, "Because in Canada I had excellent facilities for doing the work I went to accomplish. Thanks to those facilities I obtained far better pictures than I was able to obtain on the last tour with the Prince of Wales."

During the voyage I dreamed fond dreams of happier times in Australia, and anticipated the good time I would have ticipated the good time I would have to working in a well-equipped dark room on board the Royal Train. But alas! my dreams were rudely shattered, for on the Royal Special there was no provision for a Press Photographer, nor was it possible to "rig up" a dark room, since the journey through Australia was accomplished by trains over varying railway gauges. Each State in the Commonwealth appeared to me to have adopted a different gauge so that the rolling stock of one system was useless over another system's track. I quickly gave up all hope of being able to develop and print my own negatives during the journey and entrusted the work to others when I could find people who were ready (By Ernest Brooks, the King's Photographer).

Comparisons are, I know odious, and if in the following brief statement of facts I draw comparisons between events which happened in Canada on the last tour, I trust that my friends who so nobly assisted me in Australia and New Zealand will not take offence. Far from it. I believe that those responsible for the arrangements in Australia and New Zealand were as anxious to help in the work of obtaining permanent records in picture form of the incidents of the tour as were those whom I met in Canada. What I say is that largely owing to lack of experience, many details which by the "outsider" were regarded as purely minor details were overlooked, and owing to a variety of circumstances, I found myself working under very considerable handicap. As a Press Photographer it is my aim to produce the best possible results, to give to the public and to hand down to future to the bast possible results, to give to the public and to hand down to future to state the work to there were endless when I heard a variety of circumstances, I found myself working under very considerable handicap. IMPROVING THE BEE

(Experimental Farms Note)

Nearly every domesticated animal and cultivated plant has been improved by selective breeding. With bees, however, not much progress has yet been made because of the great difficulty in isolating them. They mate in the air at some distance from the hive and it is known that the drone bee will fly for miles in search of the queen bee.

Canada contains varieties of solitary bees whose tireless industry make the honey bee appear dilatory in comparison. Besides we know that great improvements await the bee breeder because some colonies store much more honey and are less inbee-keeder would give much to have getting an over dose which would Attempts were then made to mate the queens late in the day when the undesirable drones had ceased flying and also late in the season when these drones had died. The results gave valuable information but they did not solve this problem.

Duck Island coveronly about two square miles and no pees exist upon it. The Duck Isand experiments were continued in 1920 and have proven successful, twenty-seven Italian queens of selected parentage having been nated by the drones that were brought with them. By continuing the work it is hoped to develop a strain of Italian bees that will be heavy honey producers and disinclined to swarm. Meanwhile, plans are advanced to listribute to Canadian bee-keepers limited number of daughters of the best of the queens mated on Duck Island and a system has been worked out by which a bee-keeper wll be able to mate a proportion of the queens he gets with drones of the same strain.
