SAMUEL GOMPERS WRITES ANOTHER INTERESTING LETTER Visits His Birthplace—Has a Discussion With Socialists—Teaches Young Man Good Manners—His Impressions of Blackpool—At Liverpool and Manchester

(Copyright, 1909, by Samuel Gompers by F. S. Rusdiale) LONDON, July 6.—In mentally reviewing my travels of the ten days just passed, I have the sensation of one who has been looking at moving pictures. After a Sunday and part of Monday in Liverpool, I crossed the Irish Channel and reached Dublin in the afternoon, resorted to Holy Head and visited Chester on Wednesday, spent Thursday and Friday at Blackpool, and Saturday in Manchester, going on to London in the evening of that day. I have met old friends and made new ones, heard many speeches and made a few myself, caught suggestive glimpses of the difference between the English and American labor organizations and methods, and have had before me every sort of evidence of a social situation, atmosphere, and conflict that is an ocean apart from what one meets in America. But in what I have to write today I shall not attempt to go profoundly into social questions; my remarks will rather take the form of moving pictures.

SAMUEL GOMPERS.

Let me set it down as a solemn fact that what is regarded as a well-worn bit of humor which related in connection with an enterprising American journal has become literally true. I met in Liverpool a British "pressman" (reporter). As I descended the gang-plank from the Baltic, and before I could even reach the baggage room for the inspection of the Customs House officials, a very smooth and shy young Englishman had me by the elbow, saying, "Mr. Gompers, I have been directed by my editor to ask you regarding your impressions of England—to know whether the people of the States or of England have made the greater progress." He stuck to me as long as his idea of good breeding permitted, propounding equally original inquiries all the time, and, although he seemed rather unskilled in the art when I asked for time to learn something of the subject upon which he was seeking information. I shall not pretend that I performed any deep social investigation in Liverpool. One might probably take up months in delving into the records and results of the various movements intended to put both upon the bones of Liverpool's poor, whose clothes in their shabby, soiled, and faded drab, and whose faces in their hearts, it was told that drunkards had de-livered, with that improved organization among the workers along the water-front, wages and conditions are not so bad as they were some years ago; that the general scheme of municipal improvement, though costly, has had some good results to the working class in houses, education, and hygiene. It was clear that the streets were well paved and clean; it could be heard on all sides and read in the local press that the deprived classes were voicing their cry against injustice and in favor of the various projects for the social uplift.

rendered superfluous by the transition. Fully 40,000 of Ireland's people leave her shores annually; and the census, as well as the apparent workless worker, told the same tale. Having been treated most cordially—a compliment in which nearly all the company participated by making brief speeches—I was called upon to respond. After my address a general discussion ensued, when a young man, the youngest in the company, with impassioned gestures and noisy words "rebuked" all his hearers. He declared that he was a Socialist, and added, "Only Socialists understand the root evil of the labor problem, or possess an effective remedy." The occasion caused me to be less agreeable in my reply to him than I had been. He declared that he had been with our road-house Socialist friend in Liverpool, and that he took to seriously strive to teach him something of sound thought and good manners, much to the delight of nine-tenths of the assembled guests.

At Blackpool I attended the tenth annual congress of the General Federation of Trade Unions. The duties performed by the American Federation of Labor, as representative of our affiliated trade unions, require in Great Britain three national bodies, made up of association unions—viz., the British Trade Union Congress, with its permanent parliamentary committee, the parliamentary Labor party, and the Central Federation of Trade Unions. The history of these bodies, and the development at the different periods of their respective stated purposes, might make plain their separate existence and administration; but I am not prepared to enter upon the subject too deeply here. The main object of the federation is to give systematic financial backing to its constituent unions during trade disputes. An annual per capita tax is paid into the treasury of each union affiliated; and in case of unemployment due to controversy with employers, a weekly benefit in addition to that of the particular union involved is paid. The Federation was formed in 1888, with 43 societies or unions having 245,000 members, and it has now 131 societies, with a membership of 835,998. The treasury was increased every year until the last, on an average by $500,000 a year. The reserve fund at the beginning of 1908 was over $800,000. The stoppage in the cotton trade last year brought unemployed to 45,000 members; and this with many lesser disputes caused an outlay from the treasury of some thing over $600,000. In all, from March 1, 1908, to March 1, 1909, the Federation dealt with 638 disputes, involving $4,362,000. The treasury now contains $70,000.

Among the men prominent in the federation and well known in the United States are Peter Curran (the Irishman), Allen Gee, Thomas H. Wilkins, James O'Grady, Alexander Wilkie, T. Mulligan, T. P. Richards, Ben. T. Job, John Ward, William Muir, Ben. Cox, James Wignall, James Sexton, "Will" Thomas, Arthur Henderson, "Pat" Jack, William Mosses, W. Arrandale, Tom Ashton, David J. Shackleton, and W. A. Appleton. Eight of these men are members of parliament. The "agenda" or programme of the meeting comprised little more than matters of routine importance. Except for the democratic idea of having every affiliated union satisfying its members by being represented, an auditor and executive committee might perhaps have attended to all the essential business that was done. Some significance, however, lay in the fact that the suspension of there having been not one suspension of work (strike) in the previous year that was caused by the demand of a union. All the disputes originated in offensive tactics and orders by employers with them sitting after dark on the esplanade benches, not to view the ocean, but, in the words of one of the amused observers, "to cuddle and kiss." It would be interesting to get medical testimony in respect to this habit as well as round dancing; for the round dancers turn all one way, very few reversing.

In Manchester I visited the vast warehouses of the Wholesale Co-operative Society. I shall not tire the reader's patience with the long statistical statements necessary to impress on him the truth as to the present status of the society. It is a fourteen-year story. It is a fourteen-year story since I last visited Manchester. I was greatly impressed with the great development of this industrial and commercial concern. I again satisfied myself that the trade unionists in several of the largest industrial regions of Great Britain are staunch supporters of the co-operative movement. In the existence of a Joint Council of Trade Unionists and Co-operatives, peace between the two great economic working class movements is in the co-operative business as impressively represented by the Manchester trustees, no rare geniuses as paragons of success; no "captains of industry," and yet it is one of the greatest business institutions in the world.

One of the statements made to me by an active man in the affairs of Manchester, which greatly impressed me, was to the effect that the school trustees, through the teachers, present to any pupil, boy or girl, a free proposition to take care of it, to nurture it, and that this has a good influence upon the minds and conduct of the children.

On the train from Manchester to London I fell into conversation with a young college man from New Zealand, whose name I have forgotten, but who, after some years' experience as a civil engineer, he was taking a post-graduate course in England. I put him the usual queries as to New Zealand's social experiments. From his brief education in the country, he was easily inferred. They were as follows: "All classes are satisfied with the land policy system, comprising only breaks up of the immense estates, through compensation to the owners, the pauper immigrants and alien races is generally satisfactory. The government railway system, comprising only 2,000 miles, is less economically and efficiently managed than it would be in private hands. I know of one case in which a line of 39 miles had been profitable to a company and satisfactory to the public, but which since taken over by the government, has ceased to pay; and the service, at the same time, is less satisfactory than formerly. The bookkeeping in connection with public enterprises is difficult, as outlays are sometimes charged up to the undertaking, but in the public treasury. As to compulsory arbitration, in trade disputes between employer and employed, it is now unpopular both with the employers and the workers." He cited the now well-known cases of the boot and shoe manufacturers who closed their factories rather than obey the findings ascertained them of the government arbitrators, and the case of the butcher workmen who were fined or went to jail rather than work on terms which they deemed unjust. "Other words, compulsory arbitration in the country without strikes" has ended in showing itself capable of destroying both the business of the employers and the liberty of the wage workers. I necessarily only repeat the summary of the views of this native of New Zealand of English stock for what it may be worth as a sort of sign board to the reservoirs of further information; but it coincides with the results of the recent observations of the thinkers and doers in the industrial field of the United States.

On Sunday I went to Hyde Park not to view the famous "church parade," in which the unwieldy workmen parade about on their way home from service to look one another's fine prayer books; but to hear something of what the open-air orators were saying in this land of free speech. From the snatches of the "road-tram" council of Trade Unionists and Co-operatives, peace between the two great economic working class movements is in the co-operative business as impressively represented by the Manchester trustees, no rare geniuses as paragons of success; no "captains of industry," and yet it is one of the greatest business institutions in the world.

On Sunday morning I visited the house in which I was born, No. 2 Fort Street, Spitalfields, London. I passed through neighborhoods almost every house of which I knew more than half a century ago, when a lad of eight was in my twelfth year when my father took his family to the United States, Chesapeake, Cornhill, Commercial street, Houndsditch, Blagoprog street—these all looked much the same as they did in the long ago.

I made my way to my own old street, and stood before the house in which I was born. I had re-visited the spot fourteen years ago, for the first time since my boyhood; and I was then subject to those peculiar sentiments, both pleasing and depressing with which one is seized when beholding with mature vision what was familiar to the unknowing, eyes of childhood and to the transforming memory of later years.

Somehow, the blunt and hard facts, in the light of comparisons, seemed distasteful. The great things to the boy are every day matter to the man. Yet this was the scene of the struggles of my father and the loving care of my mother. Home was once there. We were happy, that big family of ours, in our childhood, hard-working though we were. Kindly people now live in the house. Its "bread-winners" have "gone to Chicago," the rest hoping to follow soon.

Perhaps one reason for the absence of the fulness of that tender and somewhat mournful sentiment that comes to me in contemplation of his birth place lay in the fact that with me were my wife and daughter, and also my very excellent cousin, the favorite theatrical comedian, in our own country as well as here, Sam Collins. Sam has the happy habit of seeing all life as a joyous mood. He was born in the same house in Fort Street; and his sole idea, on now seeing it again, was to bring us others present to laugh and make merry with him. Well, why not? Turn down the leaf in the book that is a natural craving and relief for food. When this is lacking you may know that you need a dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. They strengthen the digestive organs, improve the appetite and regulate the bowels.

Mr. Robinson further stated that the company was desirous of continuing to pay a 5 per cent. annual dividend, and to protect their stockholders, making the investment a sure and profitable one, which it is not at the present time.

INCREASE TO START OCT. 1. Reasons for 'Phone Co's Boosting Rates LOSING MONEY Rates When Increased Will Be Lower Than Majority

THE NEW BRUNSWICK TELEPHONE COMPANY has recently been considering the advisability of increasing the telephone rates in the city, and it was rumored that increased rates would take effect on August 1st. H. P. Robinson, the general manager of the company, stated last evening that it had been finally decided to increase the rates as follows, which increased rates will take effect on Oct. 1st: The business rate, special wire, will be increased from $40 per year to $45. The business rate, two party line, will be increased from $25 to $30. The two-party line, residence rates, will be increased from $20 to $25. The four-party line will jump from $18 to $23. An eight party line for residences will be instituted and the rate will be $18. This will make the lowest rate the same as ever, giving those desirous of having a telephone at their residence at the minimum expense; an eight party line for the same price, as they are now paying for a four-party line. Asked as to the cause of the increase Mr. Robinson said that there were two chief reasons. The first was because the financial statement had shown that the company was not making money, but losing money, as they were not allowing for depreciation, an amount within $40,000 of the actual depreciation of the service. The other reason, said Mr. Robinson, was because the rates when increased will be lower than the majority of rates of other companies in Nova Scotia and the New England States. Mr. Robinson further stated that the company was desirous of continuing to pay a 5 per cent. annual dividend, and to protect their stockholders, making the investment a sure and profitable one, which it is not at the present time.

Time was when it was necessary to explain what we meant by it when the political conception which the Communitists exist to realize was strange to most people and very imperfectly understood even by the limited number who had some sympathy with it.

CHURCH BROTHERS' PROTEST SUSTAINED

Chisook and Wabeno Will Now Race for Second Place in Series.

At a special meeting last evening, the sailing committee of the Westfield Outing Association sustained the protest entered by Church Bros. of the Chisook against the Wabeno in the race on Saturday afternoon. The committee found that the Wabeno had broken rule No. 8 of the sailing regulations, which reads as follows: "Windward boat must not pass to leeward to prevent a boat passing her at leeward."

After deliberating on the race, the committee awarded the Woodman's Point trophy to the Mona, owned by John Fordham. The latter has captured a first, second and third in the race.

The decision of the committee in the matter makes a tie between the Chisook and Wabeno for second position. The crafts will race for the second honors on Wednesday next.

WEATHER CONDITIONS DISCOURAGE HORSEMEN

Definite Announcement Will Be Made at Noon Whether Races Will Be Held.

The weather conditions are causing some annoyance to the turf enthusiasts, as the holding of the 215-class races this afternoon is an uncertainty. A drizzly rain started early in the morning and the horsemen were kept guessing if the meet would take place. President Fleming and Secretary John Ross were in consultation with the owners of the animals this morning and if the outlook is at all bright the meet will take place. Definite announcement will be made about noon.

There are two first class events on the card for today's racing. The 215 class and the 224 trot provide a large field of starters from the Maritime Province and the States. The American horses captured the four events on Thursday and Friday, but their colors may be lowered at the track today. In the 224 trot Crescent is the favorite, while 212 Galo leads the betting in the 215 class.

COATS GETTING INTO CONDITION AGAIN

Billy Coates, the local single sculler, started last evening to get into form again. During last summer Coates did not appear in any events, as he was suffering from stomach trouble. He is now feeling fit again, however, and is beginning training over a course which he has selected on the river near Randolph, where he has rounded into condition. Coates will go after Hilton Bolger first of all, or at least that is the plan at present.

PERSONAL

Lee and their two daughters, Misses Victoria and Marguerite, returned to their home, 45 Carmichael St. Friday, after a very delightful visit at the summer home of Mrs. Lee's brother, R. S. McNeill, last manufacturer of Brooklyn, N. Y., at West Palm Beach, Mass. On July 8th Mr. and Mrs. Lee celebrated the 30th anniversary of their marriage.

AUTOISTS PROTEST AGAINST BAD ROADS

Wretched Condition of Provincial Highways

Few Sections Report Good Roads But Some are Working Vigorously for Prizes to be Awarded on Aug. 15th.

Local and visiting automobilists are by no means satisfied with the condition of the roads for driving their machines. Cases of the use of a serious character during the past week have been reported. While in a few instances the work of improving the roads has been started, it is not being carried out in a manner at all pleasing to owners of the big cars. In other districts, however, encouraged by the awards of the Automobile Association, the farmers are displaying a keen interest in the condition of the roads and are doing everything in their power to make them fit for driving.

Unless definite action is taken immediately in regard to the thoroughfares, a strong protest will doubtless be forthcoming from a number of leading automobile owners. A regrettable feature of the amount of work that is being done is the fact that the roads are simply thrown in a heap in the middle of the road, which is contrary to any system of road building. The automobilists find a number of passes which they are not prepared to negotiate.

In St. John County for automobile driving, the roads to Loch Lomond is in a poor condition. Ditches in the road are innumerable and unless wholly familiar with the situation, the automobilists are not inclined to run at any speed in the evening.

The Marsh road, formerly in excellent condition, has been allowed to fall into disrepair and near Brookville, the chauffeur again encounters difficulty.

The Red Head road could stand a vast improvement. In South Bay and Spruce Lake districts the roads are reported in good condition.

August 15 has been named as the date for the awarding of the cash prizes to the farmers for the greatest improvement in the roads in their district. Practically all the chief roads between St. John and outside centres are named in the posters. One hundred dollars is the first prize with fifty and twenty-five dollars as second and third prizes respectively.

I. R. C.'S NEW FIRE ALARM SYSTEM IS COMPLETE

Will be Taken Over by Railway at First of the Week After Inspection by Of Iola's and Chief Karr.

The Gamewell auxiliary fire alarm system, which is being installed on the Intercolonial Railway Company's property, is now complete, and on Monday or Tuesday J. I. C. officials are expected from Moncton to take over the system from the Yarmouth Electric Co., who have installed the alarms.

The system is the most up to date auxiliary fire alarm on the market and the only one of its kind in the province. There is a similar one in Halifax but on a much smaller scale.

Fifty-three auxiliary boxes with five miles of wiring are distributed throughout the following buildings: Freight shed, Long wharf, 4 boxes inside, 6 outside; Pier shed, 2 inside, 1 outside; elevator and conveyor, 1 in the engine room, 1 outside the engine room, 1 on ground floor, 1 on each of the three upper floors; 8 in the different conveyors; shed No. 8, 2 inside, 1 outside; locomotive shed, 5 inside, 4 outside; Pond St. four shed, 3 inside; bonded warehouse, 2 inside; station and train shed, 1 in main hall, 1 at train shed entrance, 4 inside, 3 outside, 1 in dwelling apartments and 1 in the furnace room. These various boxes send the alarm to the main box number 153, which conveys it to the city fire alarm circuit.

Box 153 is attached to one of the uprights supporting the conveyor over the shed, and is much smaller than other alarm boxes. It is opened by pulling down a lever, which also rings a gong that can be heard 500 feet away, giving immediate alarm if any one tampers with the box.

It is probable that Chief Karr will accompany the I. R. C. officials on their inspection as his approval is necessary before this system can become a part of the city circuit.

The action of the I. R. C. in installing this fire protection commends itself to all and the railway management have shown their usual careful discrimination in selecting the most up to date system procurable.

A ST. JOHN GIRL'S SUGGEST

In March last, Miss Elizabeth M. McKechnie, of 27 City Road, St. John, graduated from the Hartford Hospital of Hartford, Conn. Miss McKechnie's standing in her studies was unusually high, and as a result she was asked by the State Board to take the examination for registration of nurses. This Miss McKechnie did, and she has just received word of her success. The secretary, Miss H. L. Abbott, has written to the effect that her average was eighty-nine per cent. in the examinations, which is considered very creditable indeed.

Miss McKechnie, who is now in St. John on a visit to her friends, will probably return to Hartford in a few weeks, to re-join the hospital staff.

About noon yesterday a horse owned by Parks Hroo, of the North End, fell off the Francis Keer Coal Company wharf at the foot of Charlotte street, and was killed.
